Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.101

§ 120.101 Statutes Forbidding Indemnification Do Not Preclude Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

STATUTES PROHIBITING CONTRACTS THAT INDEMNIFY FOR "LOSS" OR "RESPONSIBILITY" RESULTING FROM WILLFUL WRONGDOING DO NOT PRECLUDE INSURER'S DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED IN THE THIRD-PARTY ACTION.

A. Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply. Civil Code Section 1668 and Insurance Code Section 533 forbid only contracts that indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing; a policy providing for legal defense of an action charging such conduct does not call for indemnification of the insured if the third party prevails and, hence, is not prohibited by those sections (Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 277-278, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168).

B. Duty to Defend Does Not Conflict Policy of Statutes. The public policy established by Civil Code Section 1668 and Insurance Code Section 533 is to prevent insurance coverage from encouraging willful torts, and a contract to defend an insured on a mere accusation of a willful tort does not encourage such willful conduct (Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 277, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that statutes prohibiting contracts that indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing do not preclude insurer's duty to defend insured in the third-party action.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific provisions in the policy showing that it provides for legal defense against an action charging conduct and does not call for indemnification of the insured if the third party prevailed;

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend the insured in the underlying third party action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply

The facts and procedural background of Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 are discussed in § 120.50[3][a]. The insurer argued that the policy could not be read to require it to defend an action seeking damages for an intentional wrong because such an obligation would violate the public policy set forth in Ins. Code § 533 and Civ. Code § 1668 (65 Cal. 2d 263, 277) . The Supreme Court rejected the contention on two grounds: (1) the statutes forbid only contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing, and the policy before it provided for legal defense against an action charging such conduct and did not call for indemnification of the insured if the third party prevailed; and (2) the public policy established by the statutes is to prevent insurance coverage from encouraging willful torts, and a contract to defend an insured on a mere accusation of a willful tort does not encourage such willful conduct (65 Cal. 2d 263, 277-278) . The Court further rejected the insurer's argument that the duty to defend dissolves when the insured suffers a judgment against him or her in the third-party action, since to sanction such a construction would defeat the very purpose or object of the insurance (65 Cal. 2d 263, 278) .

[b] Duty to Defend Does Not Conflict Policy of Statutes

Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 is discussed in § 120.101[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsCriminal ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.102

§ 120.102 Liability of Insured Was Vicarious Only

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE WILLFUL ACT SUED ON IN THE THIRD-PARTY ACTION WAS COMMITTED BY A PERSON OTHER THAN INSURED, THUS THE LIABILITY OF INSURED IN THE THIRD-PARTY ACTION IS VICARIOUS ONLY.

Ins. Code § 533* Does Not Apply to Vicarious Liability. The provisions of Section 533 of the Insurance Code, providing that an insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured, does not apply where the insured's liability is vicariously imposed for the willful wrong of another (Arenson v. National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 81, 84, 286 P.2d 816).

[These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by statutesforbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing. See, e.g., § 120.101.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the alleged willful wrong was committed by another person and the insured's liability for that wrong is vicarious only.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

These points and authorities should be combined with additional points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by Civ. Code § 1668 and Ins. Code § 533 (forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing) [See, e.g., § 120.101].

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the willful act sued on in the third-party action was committed by a person other than insured, andtherefore, the liability of insured in the third-party action is vicarious only.

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ins. Code § 533 Does Not Apply to Vicarious Liability

Arenson v. National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 81, 286 P.2d 816 , was an action by the holder of a personal liability insurance policy issued by defendant company for a determination of the insurer's liability under the policy. The policy was issued to plaintiff as the named insured and stated that the unqualified word "insured" included the named insured and, if residents of his household, his spouse, the relatives of either, and any other person under the age of 21 in the care of the insured. Under the policy, defendant agreed to pay all sums which the insured should become obligated to pay because of liability imposed on him by law, including damages for injury to property, and to defend any suit brought against him in which such injury was alleged. Excluded from coverage was injury or destruction "caused intentionally by or at the direction of the insured." Plaintiff's minor son started a fire which injured school property, and the school district obtained a judgment against plaintiff for the amount of the damage. The insurance company refused to defend the suit or to pay the amount of the judgment, claiming that the injury was caused intentionally by an insured and therefore came within the exclusion provision.The insurer contended that the quoted phrase referred to a class composed of all those covered by the policy so that none of them could recover where an injury was caused intentionally by any member of the class. Plaintiff contended that the exclusion did not preclude an insured who did not participate in an intentional injury from being indemnified against liability for an injury intentionally committed by another insured (45 Cal. 2d 81, 83) .

Judgment was entered for defendant, and plaintiff appealed. In reversing the judgment, the Supreme Court concluded that the policy protected the named insured against liability for intentional injury committed by another insured (45 Cal. 2d 81, 83) . The Court based its conclusion on: (1) the rule that the understanding of an ordinary erson is the standard used in construing an insurance contract, and any ambiguity in language must be resolved against the insurer; (2) the rule that exceptions and exclusions are construed strictly against the insurer and liberally in favor of the insured; and (3) the holding of cases from other jurisdictions involving a similar exclusion that such an exclusion is reasonably understood as designed to prevent indemnifying one against loss from his or her own wrongful acts and could not be construed to exclude coverage for the willful acts of another in the absence of a clear expression showing such intent (45 Cal. 2d 81, 83-84) .

The Court pointed out that Ins. Code § 533, which provides that an insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured and which codifies the general rule that an insurance policy indemnifying the insured against liability due to his or her own willful wrong is void as against public policy, has no application to a situation where the insured is not personally at fault (45 Cal. 2d 81, 84) . The Court held that plaintiff was entitled to recover the principal amount of the judgment against him with interest, together with court costs and attorneys' fees properly incurred by him in defense of the school district's claim (45 Cal. 2d 81, 84) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ins. Code § 533 Does Not Apply to Vicarious Liability

In American States Ins. Co. v. Borbor (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 888 , insureds were named in a liability policy in their individual capacities, doing business as a named nursery school, which was actually a partnership. One insured was convicted of Penal Code § 288 (lewd acts on children) for molestations on the children enrolled at the school. In a declaratory relief action filed by the insurer to determine its rights and duties regarding a third-party action brought by the children, a federal district court held that Ins. Code § 533 barred coverage for both insureds. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed with regard to the insured who committed theacts, but reversed with regard to the co-insured, who, according to the conclusions of the trial court, was either innocent or negligent. The court of appeal held that Ins. Code § 533 does not preclude insurance coverage for a negligent insured; moreover, it expressly provides that an insurer is not exonerated by the negligence of the insured. A partner's liability for the other's acts may be distinguished from that partner's ability to insure against that liability (826 F.2d 888 892-895) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.103

§ 120.103 Local Public Entity Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED [AND ITS EMPLOYEE] BECAUSE THE PUBLIC ENTITY HAS INSURED ITSELF [AND ITS EMPLOYEE] AGAINST THE EXPENSE OF DEFENDING A CLAIM AGAINST IT [OR ITS EMPLOYEE][, INCLUDING A CLAIM FOR PUNITIVE DAMAGES AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEE] IF THE LIABILITY AROSE FROM CONDUCT IN THE SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT.

A. Local Public Entity Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action. A local public entity may insure, contract, or provide against the expense of defending a claim against the local public entity or its employee, whether or not liability exists on such claim, including a claim for damages under Civil Code Section 3294 or otherwise for the sake of example or by way of punishment, when such liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of the employment, and an insurance contract for such purpose is valid and binding notwithstanding Civil Code Section 1668, Insurance Code Section 533, or any other provision of law (Gov. Code § 990(c) (not applicable to workers' compensation); see also Gov. Code § 996).

B. Public Entity May Insure Against Intentional Tort. The intent of Government Code Section 990 is that a public entity's authority to insure be as broad as its potential liability, whether that liability arises from a negligent or an intentional tort (see 4 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1201, 1206 (1963); see also 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1051, 1056 (1971)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that:

(1) A local public entity is authorized by statute to insure itself against any tort liability and its employee against liability for injury resulting from an act or omission within the scope of employment, and to insure against expenses incurred in defending a third-party action against it or its employee, including a claim for punitive damages.

(2) The liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of employment.

(3) Civ. Code § 1668, Ins. Code § 533, or any other provision of law do not preclude such coverage.

Additional paragraphs should be included if it is necessary to establish that plaintiff is a local public entity within the meaning of Gov. Code § 990 [see Gov. Code §§ 989, 11000].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific provisions of the insurance policy which establish that the local public entity and its employee are insured against the tort liability alleged in the underlying third party action, including expenses incurred in defending the action against itself or its employee.

- Refer to facts that establish that the liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of employment.

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend the insured public entity and/or its employee.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Local Public Entity Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

Gov. Code § 996, relating to defense of public employees, provides that a public entity may provide for a defense by its own attorney or by employing other counsel for this purpose or by purchasing insurance which requires that the insurer provide the defense, that all of the expenses of providing a defense are proper charges against a public entity, and that a public entity has no right to recover such expenses from the employee or former employee defended.

[b] Public Entity May Insure Against Intentional Tort

The California Law Revision Commission drafted, among other code provisions relating to insurance, Gov. Code § 990 , which was enacted in1963 [Stats. 1963, ch 1682]. As originally enacted, Gov. Code § 990 provided as follows:

"Except for a liability which may be insured against pursuant to Division 4 (commencing with Section 3201) of the Labor Code, a local public entity may:

> "(a) Insure itself against all or any part of any liability for any injury.
>
> "(b) Insure any employee of the local public entity against all or any part of his liability for injury resulting from an act or omission in the scope of his employment.
>
> "(c) Insure against the expense of defending a claim against the local public entity or its employee, whether or not liability exists on such claim."

The commission explained that the purpose of the legislation was to achieve certain specified objectives, including the following:

> (1) All types of public entities should be expressly authorized to insure themselves against liability. All public entities may have this authority now, but an express statutory provision is desirable to make clear that a public entity's authority to insure is as broad as its potential liability.
>
> (2) All types of public entities should be expressly authorized to purchase insurance to cover the personal liability of their officers, agents, and employees for all types of torts committed in the scope of their public employment. All public entities now have authority to insure public personnel against liability for negligent acts and omissions and for false arrest and false imprisonment. Authority to provide public personnel with insurance protection against their liability for other intentional torts, however, is presently enjoyed only by school districts and a few other public entities. Giving all public entities authority to

provide their officers, agents, and employees with adequate insurance coverage will enable a public entity, if it so chooses, to encourage its personnel to perform their duties diligently without fear of liability. Moreover, the distinction between an intentional tort and a negligent one is not always clear; it sometimes depends on how the plaintiff phrases his complaint. Coverage of all tort liability would provide protection without regard to how the complaint is phrased.

(3) Not only should public entities be authorized to insure against any liability, but they also should be authorized to insure against the expense of defending claims, whether or not liability exists on such claims. In a footnote, the commission noted that this would codify the holding in Burns v. American Cas. Co. (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 198, 273 P.2d 605 , that a county board of supervisors had authorityto purchase insurance to cover all risks for which the county and its employees might be liable and also to purchase protection against the expense of litigation on claims against the county where it was protected by sovereign immunity [4 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1201, 1206 (1963)].

The commission also drafted the 1971 amendment to Gov. Code § 990(a) [Stats. 1971, ch 140] to delete "for any injury" and to add "tort or inverse condemnation" so that the subdivision now reads: "(a) Insure itself against all or any part of any tort or inverse condemnation liability." In recommending this amendment, the commission explained that "[t]his effectuates the original intent of Section 990 that 'a public entity's authority to insure is as broad as its potential liability' " [10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1051, 1056 (1971)].

The 1967 amendment to Gov. Code § 990 changed the period at the end of Gov. Code § 990(c) to a comma and added, "including a claim for damages under Section 3294 of the Civil Code or otherwise for the sake of example or by way of punishment, where such liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of his employment, and an insurance contract for such purpose is valid and binding notwithstanding Section 1668 of the Civil Code, Section 533 of the Insurance Code, or any other provision of law" [Stats. 1967, ch 298]. This amendment does not, however, authorize a public entity to insure its officers or employees against a punitive damages award [see Gov. Code § 990, last paragraph; 59 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 204, 210 (1976)] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLocal GovernmentsClaims By & AgainstInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewTortsPublic Entity LiabilityLiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.104

§ 120.104 State Agency Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED [AND ITS EMPLOYEE] BECAUSE THE STATE AGENCY HAS INSURED ITSELF [AND ITS EMPLOYEE] AGAINST THE EXPENSE OF DEFENDING A CLAIM AGAINST IT [OR ITS EMPLOYEE].

A. State Agency Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action. Any state agency may insure against the expense of defending a claim against the state agency or its employee, whether or not liability exists on such claim (Gov. Code § 11007.4(b)(3) (section not applicable to workers' compensation)).

B. Agency May Insure Against Intentional Tort. The intent of Government Code Section 11007.4 is that a public entity's authority to insure be as broad as its potential liability, whether that liability arises from a negligent or an intentional tort (see 4 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1201, 1206 (1963); see also 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1051, 1057 (1971)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that:

(1) A state agency is authorized by statute to insure itself against any tort liability and its employee against liability for injury resulting from an act or omission within the scope of employment, and to insure against expenses incurred in defending a third-party action against it or its employee.

(2) The liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of employment.

Additional paragraphs should be included if there is any doubt about whether the public officer or entity is a state agency [see Gov. Code §§ 11000, 11007.4], or if the state agency is a state officer who was sued in the third-party action for an act omitted or committed within the scope of his or her employment [see Gov. Code § 11007.4(a)(2)].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities should be combined with additional points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by Civ. Code § 1668 and Ins. Code § 533 (forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing) [See, e.g., § 120.101].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific provisions of the insurance policy establishing that the state agency and its employee are insured against the tort liability alleged in the underlying third party action, including expenses incurred in defending the action against itself or its employee.

- Refer to facts that establish that the liability arose from an act or omission in the scope of employment.

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend the insured state agency and/or its employee.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] State Agency Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

The California Law Revision Commission drafted, among other code provisions relating to insurance, Gov. Code § 11007.4, which was enacted in 1963 [Stats. 1963, ch. 1682].

The commission explained that the purpose of the legislation was to achieve certain specified objectives, including the following:

> (1) All types of public entities should be expressly authorized to insure themselves against liability. All public entities may have this authority now, but an express statutory provision is desirable to make clear that a public entity's authority to insure is as broad as its potential liability.
>
> (2) All types of public entities should be expressly authorized to purchase insurance to cover the personal liability of their officers, agents, and employees for all types of torts committed in the scope of their public employment. All public entities now have authority to insure public personnel against liability for negligent acts and omissions and for false arrest and false imprisonment. But authority to provide public personnel with insurance protection against their liability for other intentional torts is presently enjoyed only by school districts and a few other public entities. Giving all public entities authority to provide their officers, agents, and employees with adequate insurance coverage will enable a public entity, if it so chooses, to encourage its personnel to perform their duties diligently without fear of liability. Moreover, the distinction between an intentional tort and a negligent one is not always clear; it sometimes depends on how the plaintiff phrases his complaint. Coverage of all tort liability would provide protection without regard to how the complaint is phrased.
>
> (3) Not only should public entities be authorized to insure against any liability, but they also should be authorized to insure against the expense of defending claims, whether or not liability exists on such claims [4 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1201, 1206 (1963)].

[b] Agency May Insure Against Intentional Tort

The commission also drafted the 1971 amendment to Gov. Code § 11007.4 [Stats. 1971, ch 140], substituting "tort or inverse condemnation liability" for "liability for any injury" in Ins. Code § 11007.4(b)(1). The commission, in recommending this amendment, explained that "[t]his effectuates the original intent of Section 11007.4 that 'a public entity'sauthority to insure is as broad as its potential liability' " [10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports, Recommendations, and Studies 1051, 1057 (1971)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability

InsuranceObligationsDefenseTortsPublic Entity LiabilityLiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.105

§ 120.105 Insurer Failed to Meet its Burden of Proving Willful Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE INSURER HAS FAILED TO MEET ITS BURDEN OF PROVING THAT THE INSURED'S ACT WAS WILLFUL WITHIN THE MEANING OF INSURANCE CODE SECTION 533.

Insurer Failed to Meet its Burden of Proving Willful Conduct. The burden of proving that the insured's act was willful within the meaning of Section 533 of the Insurance Code, thereby exonerating the insurer from liability under the policy, is on the insurer (Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 880, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098).

[These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by statutes forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing. See, e.g., § 120.101.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that insurer failed to meet its burden of proving willful conduct.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modifythe form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

These points and authorities should be combined with additional points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by Civ. Code § 1668 and Ins. Code § 533 (forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing) [See, e.g., § 120.101].

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should point out that the insurer has failed to meet its burden of proving willful conduct.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Meet its Burden of Proving Willful Conduct

In Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 , the Court held that the provisions of Ins. Code § 533 were the equivalent of an exclusionary or exculpatory clause in the policy, and that the insurer has the burden of showing that the insured's act is willful (22 Cal. 3d 865, 880) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional Acts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.106

§ 120.106 Insurer Has Failed to Establish Preconceived Design to Inflict Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE INSURER HAS FAILED TO ESTABLISH A PRECONCEIVED DESIGN TO INFLICT INJURY.

Insurer Has Failed to Establish Preconceived Design to Inflict Injury. If the insured's mental capacity to commit an intentional act is at issue, coverage is not excluded under Section 533 of the Insurance Code unless the act is done with a preconceived design to inflict injury (Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 886-887, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of this form is that the insurer has failed to establish a preconceived design to inflict injury.

The rule stated in this form does not apply when the issue is whether the insured intended to commit the harm (as opposed to the act) and the harm is "inherent in the act itself." Under the latter circumstances, the insurer is not required to show any "preconceived design to inflict injury" [J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1025, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 ; see §§ 120.93[3][a], 120.106[3][a]]. Thus, for example, as in J. C. Penney, an insured charged with sexual molestation cannot circumvent Ins. Code § 533 by claiming that he or she intended to commit the molestation, but not to inflict harm on the victim.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should point out the absence of evidence of a preconceived design to inflict injury.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Failed to Establish Preconceived Design to Inflict Injury

Jacobs v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1258, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 , arose from an incident in which an insured killed a minor child and then subsequently committed suicide. The victim's family filed suit under the insured's homeowners policy. The trial court granted FIE's summary judgment motion on the basis the shooting was wilful and therefore excluded. Plaintiff attempted to argue that an "irresistible impulse" would negate a "wilful act" and therefore a triable issue of fact as to the insured's mental state existed and summary judgment was improper. The court concluded that volitional incapacity or "irresistible impulse" does not negate a "wilful act" if the insured retains cognitive capacity (36 Cal. App. 4th 1258, 1287) .

Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 , arose from the insured's killing of his employer following an employment dispute. The incident resulted in a second-degree murder conviction against the insured. The victim's widow and son brought a wrongful death action against the insured, and then sought to recover the amount of that judgment from the insurer. The insurer asserted that the killing was a willful act, and therefore excluded from coverage by law, citing Ins. Code § 533 (insurer not liable for loss caused by insured's willful act). The trial court instructed the jury that a finding that the insured had the mental capacity to intent to shoot and harm the victim, and the mental capacity to govern his own conduct, would result in a determination of willful conduct. Following a jury verdict that the act was not willful, the trial court entered judgment against the insurer, but subsequently granted a defense motion for a new trial limited to the issue of whether the death was caused by a willful act. Plaintiffs appealed from the order granting the motion, and defendant filed a protective cross-appeal.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the new-trial order and the portion of the judgment not affected by that order. The Court rejected the insurer's contention that the jury instruction regarding willfulness constituted prejudicial error in that it required the jury to find the existence of the specific intent to kill in order to find willfulness. The Court noted that the insurer's arguments ignore the specific language of the instruction,which is stated in terms of intent to "shoot and harm," not in terms of intent to kill. The Court stated that even an act that is "intentional" or "willful" within the meaning of traditional tort principles will not exonerate the insurer from liability under Ins. Code § 533 unless it is done with a "preconceived design to inflict injury." The Court held that the instruction in question simply applied this principle to a situation in which the actor's capacity to harbor the requisite "design" was placed in issue through evidence bearing on his mental state (22 Cal. 3d 865, 887) .

The Supreme Court in J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , later clarified its holding in Clemmer in connection with a case involving noncoverage of acts of child sexual molestation. In J. C. Penney, the Court emphasized that the inquiry in Clemmer was limited to the unresolved "mental capacity" of the insured, that is, whether he was legally sane when he committed the killing. In the context of child molestation, Clemmer does not require any showing that the molester subjectively intended to harm the child. The Court in J. C. Penney concluded that the act of child molestation is inherently harmful, and that the issue of whether or not the molester subjectively intended to cause harm therefore was irrelevant. As discussed in § 120.106[2], subsequent decisions by other courts have extended the rationale applied in J. C. Penney to other contexts besides child molestation. Thus, before using this form to support the proposition that Ins. Code § 533 requires a showing of a "preconceived design to inflict injury," counsel should make certain that the insured's underlying conduct is not of a type that has been held "inherently wrongful" under the line of cases construing J. C. Penney. However, some cases decided after J. C. Penney have still fallen back on the requirement of a "preconceived design to inflict injury" when the insured's underlying conduct is not "inherently wrongful" (see, e.g., Zurich Ins. Co. (U.S. Branch) v. Killer Music Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 674 , discussed in § 120.107[3][a]).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnificationInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.107

§ 120.107 Insured's Conduct Is Not Inherently Wrongful and Insurer Has Failed to Show Intent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO INDEMNIFY AND/OR DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE INSURED'S CONDUCT IS NOT INHERENTLY WRONGFUL AND INSURER HAS FAILED TO SHOW INTENT.

Insured's Conduct Is Not Inherently Wrongful and Insurer Has Failed to Show Intent. When the liability of an insured is predicated on conduct that is not inherently wrongful and that can be either intentional or unintentional, the insured's conduct cannot be characterized as "willful" as a matter of law. Under these circumstances, evidence that the insured intended to commit a wrongful act is required before the insured's conduct will constitute a "willful act" under Insurance Code Section 533 (Zurich Ins. Co. (U.S. Branch) v. Killer Music, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 674, 678-679 ; Save Mart Supermarkets v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (N. D. Ca. 1994) 843 F. Supp. 597, 606-607 ; see J. C. Penney Casualty Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1026-1027, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that a showing of intent is required when the insured's conduct is not inherently wrongful, and the insurer has failed to make that showing.

In the leading case of J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , the California Supreme Court held that coverage for child molestation is automatically precluded as a matter of law because child molestation is "always intentional, ... always wrongful, and ... always harmful" [J. C. Penney Cas. Ins.

Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1025, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689] . Subsequent decisions have applied that reasoning to a variety of other contexts outside the sexual molestation context [see § 120.70]. However, the Court recognized that motive can be relevant to the issue of the wrongfulness of an act, as when an insured intentionally shoots another person but does so in justifiable self-defense [J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1026-1027, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689] .

In addition, at least two cases, both federal, have held that when liability can be imposed based on conduct that can be either intentional or unintentional and that is not inherently harmful, summary judgment for the insurer would be inappropriate [Zurich Ins. Co. (U.S. Branch) v. Killer Music, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 674, 678-679 ; Save Mart Supermarkets v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (N.D. Ca. 1994) 843 F. Supp. 597, 606-607] .

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the insured's conduct is not inherently wrongful.
- Refer to a lack of proof that the conduct by the insured was intentional.
- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Conduct Is Not Inherently Wrongful and Insurer Has Failed to Show Intent

In Zurich Ins. Co. (U.S. Branch) v. Killer Music Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 674 , the insured was sued for copyright infringement, unfair competition, and related torts in connection with a sale of song rights. The insurer refused to defend, claiming noncoverage. The action subsequently was settled, and the insured sought reimbursement from the insurer for the amount of the settlement plus defense costs. The insurer responded by filing a declaratory relief action on the coverage and defense issues. The district court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment after finding that there was no potential for coverage under the "advertising injury" coverage of the insured's policy, and therefore no duty to defend.

The Ninth Circuit reversed, however, ruling that there was at least a potential for liability under the policy and that the insurer therefore was required to defend. In reaching this result, the court rejected the insurer's contention that liability for copyright infringement was barred by Ins. Code § 533. Relying on cases requiring that there be a "preconceived design to inflict injury," the court found that a fact question existed as to whether or not the insured had intended to engage in unauthorized use of the work at issue. Although the court did not cite J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , discussed in § 120.93[3][a], it did refer to cases that followed the J. C. Penney rule in finding wilfulness as a matter of law when the harm was inherent in the act itself. However, the court held that copyright infringement is not harmful per se because it can be innocent as well as intentional, and that coverage for innocent infringement is not barred by Ins. Code § 533 (998 F.2d 674, 678-679) .

In Save Mart Supermarkets v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London (N.D. Cal. 1994) 843 F. Supp. 597 , an insured faced with a discrimination suit tendered defense to its insurer. The insurer denied coverage, contending that discrimination is willful and therefore barred from coverage under Ins. Code § 533. The insured then instituted an action to determine coverage,and the insurer moved for summary judgment. The district court denied the motion. The court held that under federal antidiscrimination law, a discrimination case can be stated not only through intentional discrimination, but also by "disparate impact." Disparate impact may be unintentional, so a triable issue of fact existed as to whether coverage was barred under Ins. Code § 533 (843 F. Supp. 597, 606-607) .

J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , is discussed in § 120.93[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.108

§ 120.108 Insured Acted in Self-Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO INDEMNIFY AND/OR DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE INSURED ACTED IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Insured Acted in Self-Defense. "Wilful act" as used in Insurance Code Section 533 implies an element of wrongfulness or misconduct. An insured who intentionally injures another while acting in self-defense does not act wrongfully for purposes of Insurance Code Section 533 (Walters v. American Ins. Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 776, 783, 8 Cal. Rptr. 665 ; see J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1025-1027, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that insured acted in self-defense.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defendor indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

These points and authorities should be combined with additional points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by Civ. Code § 1668 and Ins. Code § 533 (forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing) [see, e.g., § 120.101].

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show the defense of self-defense applies to the conduct of the insured, and
- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Acted in Self-Defense

The facts of J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , are discussed in § 120.93[3][a]. While rejecting the relevance of motive to acts that are inherently wrongful, the Court confirmed that motive can be relevant in determining whether an act is wrongful or not. In discussing this issue, the Court specifically used self-defense as an example. The Court stated that if a court found that an insured acted justifiably in self-defense, it necessarily follows that the insured did not act wrongfully (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1026) .

In Walters v. American Ins. Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 776, 8 Cal. Rptr. 665 , a third party sued the insured for assault. The insured contended that he had acted in self defense, but the insurer denied coverage on the grounds that the damages suffered by the plaintiff were the result of an intentionally inflicted injury. Faced with the prospect of undertaking his own defense, and concerned about preserving his credit standing, the insured settled with the third party and then instituted an action to obtain reimbursement from the insurer. After trial, the court found in favor of the insurer, and the insured appealed. The court of appeal reversed. It rejected the insurer's contention that the insured's motive was irrelevant. Rather, it stated that Ins. Code § 533 connotes some element of wrongfulness or misconduct; something more blameworthy than the sort of misconduct involved in ordinary negligence. Acts committed in self-defense are not unlawful, and even if the insured intended the act, he acted by chance and without a preconceived design to inflict injury, "just as though he were acting intentionally, although negligently, and injured someone" (185 Cal. App. 2d 776, 783) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.109

§ 120.109 Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE INSURED'S ALLEGED CONDUCT WAS POTENTIALLY WITHIN THE POLICY COVERAGE, AND ANY AL LEGED MISCONDUCT WAS NOT ESSENTIALLY A PART OF A PROVEN SEXUAL MOLESTATION, BUT WAS INDEPENDENT OF IT.

Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation. If the parties dispute whether the insured's alleged misconduct was essentially a part of a proven sexual molestation, or instead was independent of it and so potentially within the policy coverage, and if the evidence pertaining to the alleged misconduct does not permit the court to eliminate either of these views, the duty to defend is then established, absent additional evidence bearing on the issue (Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that any alleged misconduct on the part of the insured was independent of any proven sexual molestation.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

The pivotal issue in cases seeking coverage or defense in cases involving sexual misconduct by an insured is likely to be whether or not related nonsexual conduct forming the basis for negligence and other claims is "inseparably intertwined" with the sexual conduct. If the nonsexual and sexual conduct are found to be "inseparably intertwined," no coverage or defense obligation will exist [see Jane D. v. Ordinary Mut. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 653, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 (discussed in §§ 120.70[4][a] and 120.109[4][a]); see also Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 (discussed in § 120.109[3][a]]. On the other hand, if the sexual and nonsexual conduct are not "inseparably intertwined," coverage (or at least adefense obligation) may be found [see Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] .

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show the alleged misconduct on which the underlying action was based was independent of any proven sexual molestation, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

In Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 , a junior high school teacher pleaded nolo contendere to one count of violating Penal Code § 288. The minor student involved, and her parents, sued the teacher, alleging sexual molestation and other harassing conduct. The teacher tendered the defense of the action to the insurer under an educator's liability policy. The insurer accepted the tender under a reservation of rights to disclaim coverage or the obligation to defend and then filed a declaratory relief action, arguing that the teacher's conduct was intentional within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533 and therefore was not covered and gave rise to no duty to defend. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment on that ground, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that the conviction for sexual molestation did not excuse the insurer from providing a defense in the action. The Court found that allegations in the complaint that the teacher had engaged in "negligent, careless, reckless and wanton ... sexual and nonsexual misconduct" raised the possibility that the teacher would be held liable for damages within the coverage of the policy stemming from the teacher's negligent nonsexual conduct in his public relationship with the student. The evidence before the trial court on the summary judgment motion did not permit the court to eliminate the possibility that all of the conduct was part of the sexual molestation, as opposed to being independent of the molestation and so potentially within the policy coverage, so the Court concluded that factual issues existed that precluded summary judgment in the insurer's favor; in fact, the Court held, the duty to defend is established in such a case, absent additional evidence bearing on the issue (4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

In Jane D. v. Ordinary Mut. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 , the court applied the analysis used in Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 (discussed in § 120.109[3][a]) and concluded that the facts, unlike those in Horace Mann, indicated that allegations of nonsexual conduct--obtaining information about plaintiff during counseling, and misusing this information and counseling techniques to create transference and controland induce plaintiff's behavior--were "inseparably intertwined" with the sexual misconduct. Thus, the court concluded that there was no coverage under the policy (32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 652-653) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsCriminal Acts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.110

§ 120.110 Unauthorized and Nonratified Act of Insured's Agent Does Not Preclude Recovery Under Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE LOSS RESULTED FROM AN ACT OF INSURED'S AGENT OUTSIDE THE SCOPE OF THE AGENT'S AUTHORITY, AND THE ACT WAS NEITHER AUTHORIZED NOR RATIFIED BY INSURED.

Unauthorized and Nonratified Act of Insured's Agent Does Not Preclude Recovery Under Policy. Insurance Code Section 533 does not foreclose recovery by an insured under a policy for a loss or liability caused by the tortious act of the insured's agent, if the act was neither authorized nor ratified by the insured (Nuffer v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 354-356, 45 Cal. Rptr. 918).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the loss resulted from an act of insured's agent outside the scope of the agent's authority, and the act was neither authorized nor ratified by insured.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modifythe form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the loss resulted from an act of insured's agent outside the scope of the agent's authority, and the act was neither authorized nor ratified by insured, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unauthorized and Nonratified Act of Insured's Agent Does Not Preclude Recovery Under Policy

In Nuffer v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 45 Cal. Rptr. 918 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff insured, the court rejected the argument that an insured may not recover under a fire insurance policy for a loss caused by the arson of the insured's agent appointed under a general power of attorney. The court pointed out that:

(1) The provisions of Ins. Code § 533 are a codification of the general rule that an insurance policy indemnifying the insured against liability due to his or her own willful wrong is void as against public policy (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 354) .

(2) The courts of all states but one which have considered the issue have held that recovery on a fire insurance policy is not defeated by the fact that the loss resulted from the intentional burning of the insured property by the insured's agent, unless the insured personally participated in the arson or ratified it, or the agent would benefit substantially from recovery on the policy (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 354) .

(3) The basis for this holding is that a general power of attorney does not confer on an agent authority to commit arson (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) .

(4) The liability of a third person contracting with a principal is affected by the conduct of the agent in relation to the contract subsequent to its making, absent elements of estoppel or ratification, only if such conduct is authorized (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) .

(5) While an agent by statute in California has authority to do everything necessary or proper and usual in the ordinary course of business for effecting the purpose of the agency [Civ. Code § 2319(1)], the commission of arson may not be classified as a thing necessary or proper and usual to effect such purposes (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) .

(6) The authority to do a criminal act will not be presumed (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) , and

(7) This concept conforms to the settled rule of law that a principal is not liable criminally for a criminal act of his agent unless he authorized, consented to, advised, aided, or encouraged the specific act (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) .

The court distinguished the rules governing a determination of the scope of an agent's authority for the purpose of ascertaining the responsibility of the principal on account of wrongs committed by the agent in the transaction of the business of the agency on the ground that the presentcase did not concern the responsibility of the principal to a third person for a loss occasioned by an agent's wrongs but, rather, the responsibility of a third person under a contract of indemnity to the principal for a loss sustained as a result of the agent's act (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355-356) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsAuthority to ActGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.111

§ 120.111 Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Is Ambiguous and Therefore Inapplicable to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE POLICY EXCLUSION FOR AN "ILLEGAL ACT" IS AMBIGUOUS AND THEREFORE INAPPLICABLE TO THE UNINTENTIONAL CONDUCT OF THE INSURED.

Ambiguous Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Does Not Apply to Insured's Unintentional Conduct. An insurance policy that excludes coverage for an "illegal act," but leaves the term undefined or defined ambiguously, may be construed to require the defense and indemnity of an underlying action based on the unintentional conduct of the insured (see Safeco v. Robert S. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 758, 763-767, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844, 28 P.3d 889).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer's reliance on an exclusion for an "illegal act" is unfounded because the exclusion is ambiguous and should therefore be construed to allow coverage. This issue generally arises in the context of the liability portion of a homeowners policy.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insured who is the plaintiff in an action against the liability insurer for damages for the insurer's wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify the plaintiff in a third-party action. They may be submitted in opposition to a motion by an insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, if the insurer contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the policy excludes coverage for an "illegal act," and that the insured committed an illegal act. For use in this context, counsel should modifythe form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that an insurer has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.90.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.100[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the policy language and argue that the term "illegal act" is ambiguous. This argument may be made, for example, if the term is not defined in the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.), and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, if the evidentiary facts support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication, and discussion and general forms for completing a memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgment .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguous Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Does Not Apply to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

In Safeco v. Robert S. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 758, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844, 28 P.3d 889 , the insured's minor son accidentally shot and killed hisfriend. The boy was charged in juvenile court with a petition alleging the commission of involuntary manslaughter in violation of Penal Code § 192(b). The petition was sustained, and the boy was made a ward of the court and placed on probation. The friend's parents brought a wrongful death suit against the insured, who tendered defense to the insurer that had issued the insured's homeowners policy. The insurer undertook defense under a reservation of rights and then brought a declaratory relief action against the insured and third parties to determine whether it had a duty to defend or indemnify its insured. The insurer asserted that it had no duty to defend or indemnify the insured because the policy in question excluded coverage for an "illegal act." Both the insurer and the insured moved for summary judgment. The trial court granted summary judgment to the insured on the ground that the "illegal act" exclusion could reasonably be interpreted to exclude coverage only for an intentional illegal act, and that the conduct of the insured's son was unintentional. The court of appeal reversed, and the California Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court reversed the decision of the court of appeal, holding that because the homeowners policy in question expressly covered accidental bodily injury, but excluded coverage for bodily injury arising out of an "illegal act" without defining that term, the insurer was obligated to defend and indemnify the insureds. Because the term "illegal act," left undefined, is subject to many definitions, some of which would cover the shooting incident, and some of which would exclude it, the Court ruled that the policy must be construed against the insurer to allow coverage. The Court noted that the insurer could have inserted an exclusion for "criminal acts" instead of "illegal acts," which would have allowed the Court to accept the insurer's definition of the term as a violation of criminal law, as opposed to a violation of any act prohibited by civil or criminal law (26 Cal. 4th 758, 763-767) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ambiguous Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Does Not Apply to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

In Kerns v. CSE Ins. Group (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 368, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 , the insured's minor daughter broke into a house and stabbed the occupant, ultimately pleading "no contest" to criminal charges for attempted second-degree murder. A mental examination revealed that she was delusional and possibly psychotic. The daughter's victim brought suit against the insured for assault and battery, negligence, and negligent supervision, and the insurer that had issued the insured's homeowners policy refused to defend or indemnify the insured in the suit for based on exclusions in the policy for "illegal acts" and willful acts under Ins. Code § 533. A judgment was entered according to a settlement in which theplaintiff agreed not to execute the judgment against the insured in exchange for an assignment of rights against the insurer. In the resultant declaratory relief action brought by the plaintiff against the insurer, the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer. The court of appeal reversed (on grounds of lack of jurisdiction), remanding the case for further determination of triable disputed issues of material fact. The court of appeal held that the "illegal acts" exclusion (essentially the same as that in Safeco v. Robert S. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 758, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844, 28 P.3d 889 , discussed in § 120.111[3][a]) was unenforceable under the controlling principles for the construction and interpretation of insurance contracts (106 Cal. App. 4th 368, 394-395) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsCriminal ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.112-120.114

[Reserved]

§§ 120.112[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
4. Exclusions for Punitive Damages Awards

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.115

§ 120.115 Insurer Has No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages Portion of Third-Party Judgment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO INDEMNIFY INSURED FOR THE PUNITIVE DAMAGES PORTION OF THE THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT.

No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages. The public policy of this state prohibits insurance covering punitive damages awarded against an insured (City Prods. Corp. v. Globe Indem. Co. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 31, 42, 151 Cal. Rptr. 494).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer has paid the entire judgment entered against the insured in the third-party action, except that portion awarded as exemplary or punitive damages, and that indemnification for punitive damages is prohibited by law.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the insured is seeking coverage for a punitive damages portion of a third-party judgment against the insured, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claim that punitive damages award.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages

City Prods. Corp. v. Globe Indem. Co. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 31, 151 Cal. Rptr. 494 , was an action by plaintiff insured to recover from the insurer the amount of a punitive damages award against plaintiff in a prior third-party action. In the prior action, plaintiff had been sued for malicious prosecution and judgment was entered against it for $2,725 compensatory damages and $30,000 punitive damages. The punitive damages award was reduced to $10,000 on appeal. The insurer paid the compensatory damages award, but refused to pay the punitive damages. Plaintiff paid the punitive damages award and then brought this suit. The insurance policy issued by defendant expressly covered "all sums which the insuredshall become legally obligated to pay as damages because of injury sustained by any person or organization and arising out of one or more of the following offenses: Group A--false arrest, detention or imprisonment, or malicious prosecution." Defendant's demurrer to the complaint was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. Holding that plaintiff had been assessed punitive damages on account of its own willful tort, and an element of that tort being "malice in fact," and quoting from Maxon v. Security Ins. Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 603, 615-616, 29 Cal. Rptr. 586 , the court of appeal held that "malice" constituted a willful act within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533 and hence indemnification by the insurer was precluded by the provisions of that section (88 Cal. App. 3d 31, 36-37) . The court explained that there is a sharp split of authority nationwide as to whether insurance may validly cover liability for punitive damages and that, while the issue had never before been squarely addressed in any California appellate decision, the policy of this state wit respect to punitive damages, which, unlike other jurisdictions, can be awarded only where fraud, oppression, or malice are shown, would be frustrated by permitting the party against whom they are awarded to pass on the liability to an insurance carrier (88 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 41-42) .

The court stated that the objective is to impose punitive damages in an amount that will appropriately punish the defendant in view of the actual damages sustained, the magnitude and flagrancy of the offense, the importance of the policy violated, and the wealth of the defendant, and that consideration of this latter element would be pointless if such damages could be covered by insurance. The court concluded, therefore, that the public policy of this state prohibits insurance covering the punitive damages levied against plaintiff (88 Cal. App. 3d 31, 42) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages

In Stonewall Surplus Lines Ins. Co. v. Johnson Controls, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 , a jury awarded $6.5 million in punitive damages against a Wisconsin corporation in an action for personal injuries resulting from an exploding car battery. The corporation's excess liability insurers brought an action seeking a declaration that they were not required to indemnify the corporation for the punitive damages award. There was no choice of law provision in the insurance policies. The corporation argued that its rights under the policies were governed by the laws of Wisconsin, which unlike the laws of California do not prohibit indemnification by an insurer for punitive damages (14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 642) . Thetrial court granted the insurers' motion for summary adjudication on the ground California law was controlling. The court of appeal affirmed. It found there was a true conflict between the laws of California and Wisconsin (14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 642-645) . It noted that when a casualty insurance contract is in dispute, the location of the insured risk is of particular importance in determining the applicable law. The court adopted the approach set forth in Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws, § 193, Comment f: when a multiple risk policy insures against risks in several states, the transaction should be viewed as if it involved separate policies insuring an individual risk, and the court should apply the law of the state of the particular risk involved (14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 647) .

The record showed that the defendant was a large corporation with worldwide operations and that the defendant and its insurers had considered the complexity of the corporation's activities at the time the policies were issued. Under these circumstances, the corporation and its insurers would reasonably expect not only that the corporation's liability to a third party might be governed by the law of a state with significant interests at stake, but also that the corporation's right to indemnity would be governed by that state's laws. The court concluded that in this case, the corporation did not obtain a single policy that would be governed by the law of one state, but rather obtained separate policies that insured separate risks located in states where the corporation does business (14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 648) . It then found that, as the corporation would reasonably expect California law to apply to batteries it manufactured and sold in that state, application of California law would not seriously impair Wisconsin's interest in protecting the reasonable expectations of its insured. However, failure to apply California law would severely impair California's interest in deterring tortfeasors by compelling payment of punitive damages directly from a defendant rather than from its insurers (14 Cal. App. 4th 637, 648-649) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnificationInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPunitive Damages Exclusions

82 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
4. Exclusions for Punitive Damages Awards

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.116-120.119

[Reserved]

§§ 120.116[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
5. Tolling of Limitations Period Based on Coverage Denial

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.120

§ 120.120 Limitations Period Under Homeowner's Policy Tolled From Notification to Denial

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S ACTION IS TIMELY BECAUSE INSURED'S CLAIM WAS BASED ON A FIRST-PARTY PROGRESSIVE PROPERTY LOSS UNDER A HOMEOWNER'S POLICY, HIS/HER ACTION WAS FILED WITHIN ONE YEAR OF THE INCEPTION OF THE LOSS, AND THE LIMITATIONS PERIOD WAS TOLLED FROM THE TIME INSURED GAVE NOTICE OF THE DAMAGE TO THE INSURER UNTIL FORMAL WRITTEN DENIAL OF THE CLAIM.

A. Inception of Loss Is Based on Occurrence of Appreciable Damage. In a case involving a first-party progressive property-loss claim under a homeowner's policy, the one-year suit provision of Insurance Code Section 2071 begins to run from the date of "inception of the loss," defined as that point in time when appreciable damage occurs and is or should be known to the insured, such that a reasonable insured would be aware that the notification duty under the policy has been triggered (Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 686-687, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230).

B. Limitations Period Was Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer. The one-year suit provision of Insurance Code Section 2071 is tolled from the time an insured gives notice of the damage to the insurer, pursuant to applicable policy notice provisions, until formal written denial of the claim (Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 679, 693, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insured's claim is untimely.

The basis of these points and authorities is that the limitations period was tolled from the time theinsured gave the insurer notice of the damage until the time the insurer denied the claim, and that the limitations period had therefore not run when insured filed the action.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by the insured in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured under a homeowner's policy, regarding a first-party progressive property-loss claim, when the motion for summary judgment is based on the one-year suit provision under Ins. Code § 2071 [see Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 679, 693, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230] . For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the insured's claims false within the triggering requirements of Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 686-687, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 [see § 120.120[3][a]]; and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inception of Loss Is Based on Occurrence of Appreciable Damage

In Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 , insureds under an all-risk homeowner's policy brought an action against the insurer based on denial of a claim arising from damage to the foundation of the insured structure. Plaintiffs obtained successive insurance policies through their insurance broker, providing all-risk coverage of their apartment house, which was built in 1970 and 1971. In November 1985, while replacing carpet in one of the units, plaintiffs noticed a foundation crack. In December 1985 they contacted their brokers, who immediately notified the insurers that had issued policies during plaintiff's ownership of the property. Defendant insurer, whose policy insured the risk from October 1977 through October 1980, investigated the claim, ultimately concluding in 1987 that the loss was excluded under the policy (under the earth-movement exclusion) in that it was caused by soil expansion. In August 1987, shortly before receiving formal written notice of the claim denial, plaintiffs brought action against defendant insurer and other insurers, alleging theories of breach of contract, bad faith, breach of fiduciary duties, and negligence.

Defendant insurer sought summary judgment (and, alternatively, summary adjudication regarding several issues), contending there was no evidence of loss suffered during its policy period. Defendant observed that carpeting had been installed in 1982, covering the area later damaged, andasserted that at the time of installation (nearly two years after its coverage ended), plaintiffs observed no damage. Defendant also claimed that the action was barred by the standard one-year suit provision contained in its policy, pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071. That statute provides, as part of the California Standard Form Fire Insurance Policy, that no suit or action on the policy is sustainable unless all the policy requirements are met, and the suit is commenced within 1 months after inception of the loss. The trial court denied summary judgment, holding that triable issues existed regarding application of the earth-movement exclusion, whether the damage occurred during the policy period, and when the foundation crack first appeared. Defendant sought a writ of mandate, arguing only that the action was time-barred under Ins. Code § 2071; the court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order, and to grant summary judgment. Defendant and the insureds, as real parties in interest, sought review.

The California Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case, holding that the one-year suit provision of Ins. Code § 2071 runs from the date of "inception of the loss," as defined by the Court, but is tolled from the time the insured notifies the insurer of the damage, until formal written denial of the claim (51 Cal. 3d 674, 693) . The Court discussed the definition of "inception of the loss" for purposes of triggering Ins. Code § 2071 when the loss occurs before the discovery of damage. Although some courts have strictly construed inception of the loss to mean the occurrence of the physical event causing the loss, California courts have more leniently interpreted the provision in property-loss cases not involving fire. Several first-party cases followed a delayed-discovery rule that holds an insured responsible for initiating a claim based on the date on which the insured could reasonably have concluded that the insured property suffered a loss. Under that rule, inception of the loss means that point in time at which appreciable damage occurs so that a reasonable insured would be on notice of a potentially insured loss (51 Cal. 3d 674, 684-685) .

The Court agreed that inception of the loss should be determined by reference to reasonable discovery of the loss, and not necessarily turn on the occurrence of the physical event causing the loss. Accordingly, the Court held that the insured's suit on the policy is timely if it is filed within one year after "inception of the loss," defined as that point in time when appreciable damage occurs and is or should be known to the insured, such that a reasonable insured would be aware that the notification duty under the policy has been triggered (51 Cal. 3d 674, 686-687) . To take advantage of the benefits of a delayed-discovery rule, however, the insured is required to be diligent when confronted with the discovered facts. The Court held that determination of when appreciable damage occurs within the meaning of the definition is a factual matter, and the inured's unreasonablenessin delaying notification of the loss until a particular time may be raised as a separate affirmative defense by an insurer in response to a complaint by the insured to recover policy benefits. The Court noted that a factual question remained with regard to the properly calculated accrual date under the delayed-discovery principles, and directed that the plaintiffs be allowed to amend the complaint to allege facts showing that the timing of discovery of the loss was reasonable (51 Cal. 3d 674, 687) .

However, even under the delayed-discovery rule, the one-year suit provision would, unless otherwise inapplicable or excused, bar plaintiffs from pursuing the action. The Court noted that a strict interpretation of the limitations period under Ins. Code § 2071 results in the seemingly anomalous conclusion that an insured must file a lawsuit before the insurer has completed its investigation and denied the claim (51 Cal. 3d 674, 687). Some jurisdictions have rejected the strict-interpretation approach, applying instead the doctrine of equitable tolling of the limitations period until formal denial of the claim. The Court noted with approval one such court's reasoning that "the period during which an insured's right to bring suit is postponed is for the benefit of the company so that it can pursue its statutory and contractual rights. Accordingly, it ought not to be charged against the insured's time to bring suit" (51 Cal. 3d 674, 688). The Court also discussed conflicting California decisions on this issue, which variously applied such doctrines as waiver, estoppel, and equitable tolling in extending the limitations period (51 Cal. 3d 674, 689-690). The Court concluded that the legislature intended to provide insureds with a full year (excluding the tolling period) in which to commence suit, because the limitations period under Ins. Code § 2071 is considerably shorter than the usual four years applicable to ordinary contracts (under Code Civ. Proc. § 337) and ten years for an action against developers for property damage caused by latent defects (51 Cal. 3d 674, 691) .

The Court rejected plaintiff's contention that suspension of the one-year suit provision during the insurer's investigation of the claim will frustrate the provision's primary purpose of preventing the revival of stale claims, noting that the purpose of a shortened limitations period is to obtain the advantage of an early trial and access to evidence, not to achieve a technical forfeiture of the insured's rights (51 Cal. 3d 674, 691) . Moreover, the principle of equitable tolling provides the following advantages: (1) allows the claims process to function effectively, instead of requiring the insured to file suit before the claim has been investigated and determined; (2) protects the reasonable expectations of the insured by requiring the insurer to investigate the claim without later invoking a technical rule that may result in forfeiture of policy benefits; and (3) encourages settlements and discourages unnecessary bad-faith suits that are often the only recourse for indemnity if the insurer denies coverage after the limitationsperiod has expired. Equitable tolling is also consistent with the policies underlying the claim and limitations periods, e.g., the insurer is entitled to receive prompt notice of a claim and the insured is penalized for waiting too long after discovery to make a claim). Further, the Court described the anomaly in the instant case. Plaintiffs notified defendant in December 1985, one month after discovery of the loss. Under the policy, plaintiffs had 60 days to file a proof of loss, after which defendant had 60 days to determine liability. During this time, any suit filed on the policy would have been premature. Negotiations continued until January 1987, when defendant indicated that the loss was excluded. At that point, plaintiffs sought counsel. Defendant did not deny the claim unequivocally until September 1987 (51 Cal. 3d 674, 692) . Thus, if the one-year suit provision were literally applied, plaintiff's suit would have been untimely before the insurer had denied coverage (51 Cal. 3d 674, 692-693) .

Therefore, the Court concluded, the one-year suit provision of Ins. Code § 2071 runs from the date of "inception of the loss," as defined, but is tolled from the time an insured gives notice of the damage to the insurer, pursuant to applicable policy notice provisions, until coverage is formally denied in writing (51 Cal. 3d 674, 678, 693) . The court emphasized that its holding is limited in application to the first-party progressive property-loss cases in the context of a homeowner's insurance policy (51 Cal. 3d 674, 679). The Court remanded the case, allowing plaintiffs to amend their complaint, and for determinations in accordance with its holdings (51 Cal. 3d 674, 700).

[b] Limitations Period Was Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 , is discussed in § 120.120[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inception of Loss Is Based on Occurrence of Appreciable Damage

In Larkspur Isle Condominium Owners' Assn. v. Farmers Ins. Group (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 106, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 3 , a condominium owner's association sued its property insurer for failure to pay the cost of abating asbestos ceiling materials damaged by rainwater leakage. The project had an extensive history of water damage problems, and the association had sued the developers over the problems in May 1985. In August 1985, defendant insurer issued the association a one-year property insurance policy. Although the association was familiar with the water damage problem, it allegedly first became aware of the presence of asbestos-containing materials in 1986 or 1987 when reports recommended removalof those materials from damaged ceilings. The association claimed recovery only for the cost of abating the asbestos-containing ceiling materials damaged by rainwater leakage, not for other water damage. The insurer denied the claim. A jury awarded the association damages, and the insurer appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Discussing the "manifestation rule," the court ruled that the water damage had manifested itself prior to the issuance of the insurer's policy, making it a "loss in progress" at the time the policy was issued. Under Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 , insurers who issue policies after "initial manifestation" of the loss bear no responsibility for claims "relating to" that loss. The court rejected the association's attempt to characterize the asbestos damage as a separate and distinct loss, noting that water damage to one particular element, such as the asbestos-containing material, may not be separated out as a distinct loss when it proceeds from the same progressive destruction as the other water damage. A contrary result, the court stated, would defeat the purposes of certainty, reliability, and efficiency underlying the manifestation rule (31 Cal. App. 4th 106, 111) .

[b] Limitations Period Was Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

In Aliberti v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 138, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 , the insured sued its insurer over alleged inadequate policy coverage on the insured's building, which was destroyed by fire. The trial court found for the insurer, based on the untimely filing of the suit. The court of appeal reversed because the insurer had never formally denied the claim in writing, and therefore the limitations period was tolled and the suit timely filed. Although this case did not involve progressive damage, as did Prudential-LMI, it did involve the contractual limitations period of a fire policy and the construction of Ins. Code § 2071. The insured had notified the insurer of the loss on the day after the fire. Protracted disagreements between the insured and the insurer, regarding whether the insurer owed the replacement value or simple policy limits, led to the filing of suit by the insured beyond the one-year period following the fire. Although the insurer had paid the policy limits, the insurer had never formally denied the total requested claim in writing. The court stated that the Prudential court "meant what it said when it held that the one-year statute was tolled to the time the insurer formally denies the claim in writing" (74 Cal. App. 4th 138, 146-149) .

In San Jose Crane & Rigging, Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1314, 278 Cal. Rptr. 301 , summary judgment was entered in favor of the insured in an action brought against the insurer under a commercialall-risk policy. Analyzing the case in light of Prudential-LMI Com. Insurance v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674 , the court of appeal reversed, essentially on the ground that the determination of when appreciable damage occurs, which would trigger the running of the 12-month limitation period, is an issue of fact (227 Cal. App. 3d 1314, 1316). The court also held that the equitable-tolling rule under Prudential applies to commercial all-risk policies as well as to homeowner's all-risk policies, and that the rule applies retroactively (227 Cal. App. 3d 1314, 1319-1321) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsNotice to InsurersGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
5. Tolling of Limitations Period Based on Coverage Denial

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.121

§ 120.121 Manifestation Rule Applies When Loss Occurs Over Multiple Policy Periods

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S CLAIM IS TIMELY EVEN THOUGH THE LOSS OCCURRED OVER SEVERAL POLICY PERIODS WAS NOT DISCOVERED UNTIL SEVERAL YEARS AFTER IT COMMENCED, BECAUSE INSURER'S POLICY WAS IN FORCE WHEN THE DAMAGE BECAME APPRECIABLE.

Manifestation Rule Applies When Loss Occurs Over Multiple Policy Periods. In first-party progressive property-loss cases, when the loss occurs over several policy periods and is not discovered until several years after it commences, the manifestation rule applies, which fixes liability on the insurer whose policy was in force when the damage became appreciable, or manifest (Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 694, 699, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer is not exonerated from liability even though the loss occurred over several policy periods was not discovered until several years after it commenced, because the insurer's policy was in force when the damage became appreciable.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by the insured in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured under a homeowner's policy, regarding a first-party progressive property-loss claim, when the motion for summary judgment is based on the one-year suit provision under Ins. Code § 2071 [see Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v.

Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 679, 693, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230] . For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.120[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should show that in first-party progressive property-loss cases, when the loss occurs over several policy periods and is not discovered until several years after it commences, the manifestation rule applies, which fixes liability on the insurer whose policy was in force when the damage became appreciable, or manifest.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Manifestation Rule Applies When Loss Occurs Over Multiple Policy Periods

The facts and procedural background of Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 , are discussed in § 120.120[3][a]. The California Supreme Court held that for purposes of a first-party progressive property-loss claim, the inception of the loss, triggering the limitations period under Ins. Code § 2071, occurs when appreciable damage occurs sufficient to alert a reasonable insured that the notification duty under the policy has been triggered (51 Cal. 3d 674, 686-687) , and that the limitations period is tolled from the time the insured notifies the insurer of the damage, until the formal written denial of the claim (51 Cal. 3d 674, 693) . The Court also held that in first-party progressive property-loss cases, when the loss occurs over multiple policy periods and is not discovered until several years after it commences, the manifestation rule applies (51 Cal. 3d 674, 699) .

Defendant insurer argued that even assuming the applicable one-year suit provision does not bar suit, it should not be responsible for any covered loss, because its policy ended five years before plaintiff's discovery of the loss. Defendant asserted application of the manifestation rule, claiming that liability for first-party property losses rests solely on the insurer whose policy was in force at the time the progressive damage became appreciable or manifest (51 Cal. 3d 674, 694) . The court of appeal, in dictum, had indicated that the loss should be allocated among all insurers that insured the risk during the time of development of the injury, on the basis of the "continuous exposure theory."

In determining whether the manifestation rule or the continuous-exposure theory should apply, the Court noted that an important distinction exists between first-party property damage cases and third-party liability cases (51 Cal. 3d 674, 694) . The continuous-exposure theory has been applied to third-party liability cases in which bodily injury was immediate, cumulative, and exacerbated by repeated exposure, for example, when bodily injury was caused by exposure to asbestos (51 Cal. 3d 674, 696-698) . The Court noted, however, that property damage cases, even those involving continuous damage, are distinguishable from those cases, and that application of the manifestation rule in the first-party context promotes certainty in the insurance industry and allows insurers to gauge premiums with greater accuracy, presumably reducing costs for consumers (51 Cal. 3d 674, 698-699) .

The Court concluded that in first-party progressive property-loss cases, when the loss occurs over multiple policy periods and is not discovered until several years after it commences, the manifestation rule applies. Before the manifestation of damage, the loss is still a contingency under the policy and the insured has not suffered a compensable loss. Once the loss is manifested, however, the risk is no longer contingent. The Court further held that the definition of "manifestation of the loss," is the same as that for "inception of the loss," that is, that point in time when appreciable damage occurs and is or should be known to the insured, such thata reasonable insured would be aware that the notification duty under the policy has been triggered. The Court noted that in many cases, this date will be an issue of fact. When, however, the evidence supports only one conclusion, summary judgment may be appropriate (51 Cal. 3d 674, 699) . The Court emphasized that its holding is limited in application to the first-party progressive property-loss cases in the context of a homeowner's insurance policy (51 Cal. 3d 674, 679, 694). The Court remanded the case, noting that plaintiffs joined other insurers in the litigation and declining, in the absence of conclusive evidence, to speculate concerning the date manifestation of the loss occurred (51 Cal. 3d 674, 700) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageTriggersExposure TriggersInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageTriggersManifestation TriggersInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageTriggersMultiple TriggersInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
5. Tolling of Limitations Period Based on Coverage Denial

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.122

§ 120.122 Under Title Insurance Policy, Limitations Tolled From Notification to Denial

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS LIABLE TO INSURED BECAUSE THE LIMITATIONS PERIOD WAS TOLLED FROM THE TIME INSURED NOTIFIED INSURER OF THE DAMAGE UNTIL COVERAGE WAS DENIED.

A. Time for Bringing Action on Title Insurance Policy. An action based on a policy of title insurance accrues upon discovery of the loss or damage suffered by the aggrieved party thereunder and must be brought within two years of discovery (Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)).

B. Limitations Period Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer. The statute of limitations period on a title insurance policy is equitably tolled while the insurer determines whether to honor or reject a timely filed insurance claim under that policy (Forman v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1000, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer breached no duty toward its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the limitations period was tolled from the time the plaintiff insured gavedefendant insurer notice of the damage until the time insurer denied the claim, and that the limitations period therefore had not run when the insured filed the action.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by a plaintiff insured in opposition to a defendant title insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured under a title insurance policy, when the motion for summary judgment is based on expiration of the two-year statute of limitations under Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) [see Forman v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1000, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790] . For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.120[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel would identify the following dates:

- When the insured gave insured notice of the damage.
- When the insurer denied the claim.
- When the insured filed its action against the insurer.

Counsel would argue that, consequently the limitations period therefore had not run when the insured filed the action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitations Period Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

In Forman v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 , the court of appeal held that the two-year statute of limitations period to bring an action on a title insurance policy under Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) is equitably tolled while the insurer determines whether to honor or reject a timely filed insurance claim under that policy (32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1000) . In Forman, the plaintiff discovered in 1989 that the 1987 title report on his property, prepared by the defendant, omitted a blanket easement recorded in 1930. The plaintiff filed a timely claim under the title insurance policy in 1989. The defendant denied the claim in 1990, after a 16-month investigation. The plaintiff filed a complaint for breach of title contract against defendant in 1991. The defendant asserted as an affirmative defense that the two-year statute of limitations provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) had expired before the plaintiff filed the complaint.

The court, applying the holding and rationale of Prudential-LMI Com. Insurance v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674 , stated that the complaint was timely filed because the statute of limitations was equitably tolled during the 16-month investigation by defendant and until the claim was denied (32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1001). The court explained that this tolling minimizes unnecessary lawsuits, protects the reasonable expectations of the insured, and discourages unnecessary bad faith actions (32 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1004) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTollingInsurance LawClaims & ContractsNotice to InsurersGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceTitle Insurance

86 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
5. Tolling of Limitations Period Based on Coverage Denial

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.123-120.129

[Reserved]

§§ 120.123[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
6. Progressive Damage Rule

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.130

§ 120.130 Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Under Continuous Injury Trigger of Coverage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND/INDEMNIFY THE INSURED-INSURED IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION[S] BECAUSE THE CLAIMS IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION[S] AGAINST INSURED INVOLVE ALLEGATIONS OF CONTINUOUS OR PROGRESSIVE _____ [PROPERTY DAMAGE and/or BODILY INJURY] THAT OCCURRED WHILE INSURED WAS COVERED BY INSURER'S _____ [POLICY or POLICIES].

Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Under Continuous Injury Trigger of Coverage. With respect to third-party claims under a general liability policy, property damage and/or bodily injury that is continuous or progressively deteriorating throughout several policy periods is potentially covered by all policies in effect during those periods (Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 689, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that third-party claims for bodily injury and/or property damage that is continuous and progressive and occurs throughout several policy periods are potentially covered by all policies in effect during those periods. This rule is known as the "continuous injury" trigger of coverage, and has been adopted by the California Supreme Court for third-party claims under general liability policies in California [Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 689, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878] .

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insuredin opposition to a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

These points and authorities may be used in appropriate cases when an insurer attempts to assert that its policy does not cover continuous or progressive damage occurring during its policy period, or asserts the "manifestation theory" applicable to first-party claims involving continuous or progressive damage, under which the insurer whose policy is in effect at the time the damage first becomes manifested is solely liable for the damage [see Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230] . This form should be used only when the action involves an underlying claim under a third-party general liability policy.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the loss is governed by the continuous injury trigger of coverage, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Under Continuous Injury Trigger of Coverage

In Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878 , a chemical company that had manufactured the pesticide DDT from 1947 until 1982 was sued in various underlying actions. These actions included, among others, suits alleging that defendant shipped chemicals to another company prior to 1965 for use in formulating other chemical products, that the formulator's disposal of chemical waste byproducts contributed to contamination of property owned by the second company, and that this property was subsequently sold, without disclosure of the contamination, to a purchaser who discovered the contamination no later than August 1982. Defendant, one of seven insurers that issued policies covering plaintiff during the years when the acts in question occurred, had issued four CGL policies to plaintiff, covering the years from October 1982 to March 1986. The manufacturer sued its carriers in a declaratory relief action, seeking a declaration that the insurers were required to defend it in all the pending actions. All the insurers except defendant thereafter agreed to defend under a reservation of rights. Defendant refused to defend and sought summary judgment in the declaratory relief action, arguing that it had no duty to defend or indemnity plaintiff in any of the underlying actions. With respect to the actions noted above, defendant claimed that the circumstances thattriggered coverage, within the meaning of coverage clauses and definitions in its policies, did not occur during the policy periods.

The trial court granted defendant summary judgment, ruling that with respect to the actions noted above, coverage is triggered when the damage is first discovered, and since that discovery occurred before the inception of the policy, there was no coverage. This rule applied by the trial court is generally referred to as the "manifestation rule." The court of appeal reversed, rejecting the "manifestation rule" on the grounds that continuing damage occurred throughout defendant's policy period. The California Supreme Court granted review.

In analyzing the "trigger of coverage" issue, the Court emphasized the distinction between first-party and third-party insurance policies. Although the court had previously adopted the "manifestation rule" for first-party policies [see Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230] , it determined that the policy language and the expectation of the parties did not support adoption of that rule for third-party liability policies. First, case law and the drafting history of the standard CGL policy language confirmed that coverage was triggered by the occurrence of bodily injury or property damage during the policy periods as the result of an accident or the "continuous or repeated exposure to conditions" (10 Cal. 4th 645, 673) .

Moreover, practical and policy considerations support adoption of the "continuous injury" approach, under which bodily injury and property damage that are continuous or progressively deteriorating throughout successive policy periods are covered by all policies in effect during those periods (10 Cal. 4th 645, 675, 689) . Accordingly, the Court rejected the "manifestation rule" in favor of the "continuous injury" approach in third-party policies (10 Cal. 4th 645, 689) . The decision of the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's grant of summary judgment, was affirmed (10 Cal. 4th 645, 694) .

The Montrose case also involved important issues relating to the "loss in progress" rule of Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageTriggersContinuous TriggersInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

88 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
6. Progressive Damage Rule

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.131-120.139

[Reserved]

§§ 120.131[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
7. Loss in Progress Rule Inapplicable

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.140

§ 120.140 Loss In Progress Rule Does Not Apply When Insured Had No Legal Obligation to Third Party at Inception of Policy Period

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND/INDEMNIFY INSURED, NOTWITHSTANDING THE "LOSS IN PROGRESS RULE" BECAUSE AT THE INCEPTION OF THE POLICY PERIOD, IT HAD NOT BEEN ESTABLISHED THAT INSURED HAD A LEGAL OBLIGATION TO PAY DAMAGES TO _____ [name of third party] IN CONNECTION WITH THE UNDERLYING CLAIM.

Risk Is Insurable Because Insured Had No Legal Obligation to Third Party at Inception of Policy Period. The "loss in progress" rule of Insurance Code Sections 22 and 250 will not defeat coverage for a claimed loss when it had yet to be established, at the time the insurer entered into the contract of insurance with the policyholder, that the insured had a legal obligation to pay damages to a third party in connection with the loss. As long as there remains uncertainty about damage or injury that may occur during the policy period and the imposition of liability upon the insured, and no legal obligation to pay third party claims has been established, there is a potentially insurable risk within the meaning of Insurance Code Sections 22 and 250 (Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 693, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that at the time the insurer and insured entered into the insurance contract, it had yet to be established that the insured had a legal obligation to pay damages to a third party in connection with the loss, even if the parties were aware at that time of the possibility that such liability would be found [see Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 693, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878] .

The "loss in progress" rule may be raised by the insurer when some evidence of a potential loss existed at the time the insurer and insured entered into the insurance contract. Under these circumstances, an insurer may sometimes assert that the loss was known at the inception of the insurance contract, and that therefore it was a "loss in progress" and not a contingent event for purposes of Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insured in opposition to a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts demonstrating that the insured's legal obligation to pay damages to the third party had not been established at the time the parties entered into the insurance contract.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Risk Is Insurable Because Insured Had No Legal Obligation to Third Party at Inception of Policy Period

The facts and procedural background of Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co. (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 645, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324, 913 P.2d 878 , are discussed in § 120.130[3][a]. Some of the claims at issue included (1) government actions seeking damages and cleanup under CERCLA at a hazardous waste disposal site that operated between 1956 and 1972 and where defendant deposited waste between 1968 and 1972; and (2) private actions for bodily injury and property damage from the same waste disposal site between 1956 and the time suit was filed, as well as wrongful deaths occurring between 1982 and 1986. The insurer claimed that the contamination alleged in those actions was an uninsurable loss in progress prior to the effective date of the first policy issued by defendant in 1982. The trial court held that coverage was barred under the "loss in progress" rule of Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250, but the court of appeal reversed.

In analyzing the "loss in progress" rule, the California Supreme Court noted that all that is required to establish an insurable risk is that there be some contingency. Even when subsequent damage might be deemed inevitable, that inevitability does not alter the fact that at the time the contract was entered into, the event was only a contingency or risk that might or might not occur within the term of the policy. Applying these principles to the facts, the Court concluded that although an action under CERCLA might have been an inevitability at the time defendant issued its first policy, plaintiff's liability in such an action was not a certainty; thus, there was still a contingency. Moreover, with respect to coverage for bodily injuries and damages that might occur during the policy periods, the existence of any such prospective injuries was clearly unknown and contingent (10 Cal. 4th 645, 690-691) . The Court also observed that loss in progress issues generally present questions of fact that cannot be resolved on a motion for summary judgment (10 Cal. 4th 645, 691) .

The Court concluded that in the context of continuous or progressively deteriorating property damage or bodily injury insurable under a third party CGL policy, as long as there remains uncertainty about damage orinjury that may occur during the policy period and the imposition of liability on the insured, and no legal obligation to pay third party claims has been established, there is a potentially insurable risk within the meaning of Ins. Code §§ 22 and 250. "Stated differently, the loss-in-progress rule will not defeat coverage for a claimed loss where it had yet to be established, at the time the insurer entered into the contract of insurance with the policyholder, that the insured had a legal obligation to pay damages to a third party in connection with a loss" (10 Cal. 4th 645, 693) . Thus, the loss in progress rule did not bar coverage for the claims against plaintiff.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnificationInsurance LawClaims & ContractsKnown Loss DoctrineInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageDamages

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
7. Loss in Progress Rule Inapplicable

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.141-120.149

[Reserved]

§§ 120.141[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
8. Damages as Including Environmental Cleanup

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.150

§ 120.150 Comprehensive General Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Because "Damages" Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND/INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE "DAMAGES" UNDER THE POLICY INCLUDES ENVIRONMENTAL CLEANUP COSTS.

A. "Damages" Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs in Absence of Narrower Policy Definition. In the absence of a specific policy definition to the contrary, "damages" that the insured is legally obligated to pay because of property damage, within the meaning of a comprehensive general liability policy, includes the insured's expenses in providing environmental cleanup pursuant to a court order adverse to the insured in a third-party action arising from the insured's violation of environmental-protection laws (AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 843, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253).

[Optional] B. "Damages" Includes Reimbursement of Government Response Costs. "Damages" under a comprehensive general liability policy that does not provide a definition to the contrary, includes reimbursement of government response costs in a third-party action brought by the government against the insured arising from the insured's violation of environmental-protection laws (AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 833, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer's obligation to indemnify the insured for "damages" that theinsured is legally obligated to pay because of property damage, includes the expenses of environmental cleanup, within the meaning of the policy.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insured in opposition to a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should show that the nature of the remedies sought in the underlying suit constitutes damages, that is, compensation in money, recovered for loss or detriment suffered through another's acts, within the meaning of the policy, because of policy ambiguity and the reasonable expectation of the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Damages" Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs in Absence of Narrower Policy Definition

In AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253 , the insured under several comprehensive general liability (CGL) policies brought a declaratory relief action against its several insurers to determine the insurers' duties of indemnification regarding environmental cleanup expenses pursuant to third-party actions brought by governmental agencies. Plaintiff company held over 60 primary and excess CGL policies issued by several insurers. The policies contained several common elements. They provided coverage for sums that the insured was "legally obligated" or "obligated ... by law" to pay, and required that the sums paid be the result of insured's liability for "property damage." Two policies limited coverage to sums paid as or for "damages." None of these terms was defined in any of the policies. The only relevant definition contained in any of the policies was of "ultimate net loss," which included both "damages" and "expenses."

The United States and local administrative agencies filed suits against the insured, seeking relief for alleged violations of various environmental-protection laws (e.g., the Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation Liability Act (CERCLA) (42 U.S.C.S. § 9601 et seq.), arising from the insured's contamination of numerous hazardous-waste disposal sites and adjacent property and water sources. Plaintiffs in the third-party suit sought injunctions compelling the insured to terminate disposal of further hazardous waste and to remove contaminants already present in and around the disposal sites, and reimbursement of their costs of investigating, monitoring, and initiating cleanup of the waste. The insured filed a declaratory relief action against the insurers, seeking a declaration that the policies cover costs it may become obligated to pay as a result of the injunctive relief and reimbursement ordered in the third-party suits.

Defendants sought summary adjudication that as a matter of law, the CGL policies do not cover costs of abating and cleaning up hazardous wastes and reimbursing governmental agencies for their cleanup efforts. The trial court denied the motion, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed, issuing a preemptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order, and to grant the motion for summary adjudication. Plaintiffs sought review.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that the CGL policy language is ambiguous as applied to remedial and mitigative costs incurred pursuant to injunction under CERCLA and similar statutes, and therefore must be construed in favor of coverage to satisfy the reasonable expectations of the insured (51 Cal. 3d 807, 841) . The Court noted that variousstatutory and dictionary definitions of "damages" all include the elements of "compensation" in "money," "recovered" by a party for "loss" or "detriment" that the insured has suffered through the acts of another (51 Cal. 3d 807, 826) . For insurance purposes, courts have applied various definitions, which the Supreme Court found to be either overly broad or too narrow in the context of the coverage provision in the instant case, noting that, to the extent that policy language is ambiguous in light of relief under environmental statutes, it must protect the objectively reasonable expectations of the insured (51 Cal. 3d 807, 827-828) .

The Court noted that in numerous CERCLA suits seeking recovery from responsible parties, courts have routinely referred to reimbursement of response costs as "damages," regardless of the nature of the cleanup performed or property interest possessed by the plaintiff. The agencies' expenditure of federal funds to investigate and initiate cleanup of hazardous waste constitutes "loss" or "detriment"; furthermore, reimbursement by responsible parties is monetary "compensation" for the loss (51 Cal. 3d 807, 828) .

The Court rejected defendants' argument that reimbursement of response costs does not constitute "damages" in that (1) the statute distinguishes response costs from damages; (2) they are a cost of "doing business"; and (3) they constitute restitution, which is mutually exclusive from damages. Taking these arguments in turn, the Court concluded (1) that the statute does not foreclose response costs from being characterized as "damages" in a generic sense under CGL policies, and that policies must be interpreted according to state law; (2) that the third-party suits concern reimbursement for remedial and mitigative, rather than prophylactic, purposes, and therefore regard an insurable interest, rather than an uninsurable cost of doing business; and (3) that the label of "restitution" does not preclude characterization of amounts of money awarded to compensate a plaintiff for out-of-pocket expenses as "damages" (51 Cal. 3d 807, 830-837) . The Court concluded that reimbursement of environmental response costs constitutes "damages" under the terms of the CGL policies at issue (51 Cal. 3d 807, 837) .

The Court then discussed the issue of whether "damages" includes the cost of compliance with injunctions, noting initially the costs of injunctive relief, whether incurred for prophylactic, mitigative, or remedial purposes, do not readily satisfy the statutory or dictionary definition of damages. Because those costs are paid to employees or independent contractors rather than aggrieved parties, they do not directly compensate the aggrieved persons for loss or detriment, although, in economic terms it makes little difference whether the insured performs the cleanup, or reimburses the governmental agency for the same activity. The Court noted that it is unlikely that the parties to CGL policies intended to cover reimbursement of response costs but not the costs of injunctive relief, at least when theinjunctive relief costs are incurred for exactly the same purposes. In this respect the third-party actions are distinguishable from ordinary tort actions, in which injunctive relief is generally available only if legal remedies (e.g., monetary compensation) are inadequate (51 Cal. 3d 807, 838) .

The Court noted that the mere fact that the agencies seek an injunction in an environmental-protection action does not indicate an absence of cognizable property damage or personal injury. In its remedial aspects, the injunction results in exactly the type of expenditures involved in reimbursement of response costs, whether or not the agencies have an adequate remedy in the form of reimbursement. Consequently, the Court held, it would exalt form over substance to interpret CGL policies to cover one remedy but not the other. Given the practical similarity of remedies available under the environmental statutes at issue, the Court found that a reasonable insured would expect both remedies to fall within coverage as "damages" (51 Cal. 3d 807, 840) .

The Court concluded that the CGL policy language is ambiguous as applied to remedial and mitigative costs incurred pursuant to injunction under CERCLA and similar statutes, and therefore must be construed in favor of coverage to satisfy the reasonable expectations of the insured. The Court noted that some costs required under environmental injunctions are prophylactic in nature (e.g., altering dumping practices to prevent recurrences of leakage). These costs are not incurred "because of property damage," and therefore are not covered by CGL policies. Nevertheless, environmental injunctions requiring remedial and mitigative action result in costs that constitute "damages" under CGL policies (51 Cal. 3d 807, 841) . Because an insured would reasonably expect equal coverage of the costs of equivalent or alternative remedies, the costs of injunctive relief under the statutes in question are "damages." The Court rejected the argument that government claims for injunctive relief and reimbursement of costs incurred in cleaning up disposal sites and water surrounding them are not covered, because they do not allege "property damage," holding that this view either misperceives the basic character of remedies available under environmental statutes or applies an unduly narrow definition of "property damage." The Court held that contamination constitutes property damage within the meaning of the CGL policies in question, and that reimbursement of response costs and the costs of injunctive relief under CERCLA (and related statutes) are incurred because of property damage. The mere fact that the governments may seek reimbursement of response costs and injunctive relief without themselves having suffered any tangible harm to a proprietary interest does not exclude the recovery of cleanup costs from coverage under the "damages" provision of CGL policies. For similar reasons, the recovery is "because of" property damage (51 Cal. 3d 807, 842) . It is immaterial whether motivations other than protection of property (e.g., protection of the health of persons living near hazardous waste sites) also contribute to the agencies' pursuit of statutory relief (51 Cal. 3d 807, 842-843) . By contrast, prophylactic costs are not incurred "because of property damage." Until the damage has occurred, there can be no coverage under the policies (51 Cal. 3d 807, 843) .

Accordingly, the Court reversed the decision of the court of appeal, and vacated its order issuing a writ of mandate, directing the court of appeal to remand the case for further proceedings consistent with its opinion (51 Cal. 3d 807, 843-844) .

NOTE:

This case refers to relief ordered by a court of law. It does not conclude that cleanup costs ordered by a state agency prior to the filing of any civil suit are "damages." A coercive administrative action such as an order by the California EPA or CERCLA does not initiate a "suit" within the meaning of CGL policies that do not define the term. Rather, a "suit" is a court proceeding initiated by the filing of a complaint [Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265 ; see § 120.41[3][a]].

[b] "Damages" Includes Reimbursement of Government Response Costs

AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253 , is discussed in §

120.150[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Damages" Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs in Absence of Narrower Policy Definition

The facts and procedural background of Montrose Chemical Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 287 , are discussed in § 120.54[3][a]. The insurers offered evidence extrinsic to the complaint which, they argued, defeated coverage under the policies. The insurers contended that evidence that the toxic discharges occurred over a lengthy period of time showed that the damage was expected and intended by the insured, and evidence that the insured's regular business practices involved the disposal of toxic wastes eliminated the possibility that the property damage resulted from non-accidental causes.

In affirming an order by the court of appeal requiring the trial court to set aside and reconsider its order denying the insured's motion for summary adjudication on the issue of the duty to defend, the Supreme Court held that the extrinsic evidence offered by the insurers simply created a dispute as to whether the insured's actions were intentional and therefore not an "occurrence" under the liability policies, and did not defeat the potential for coverage (6 Cal. 4th 287, 299-300) . An insurer may useextrinsic evidence to defeat the duty to defend, but the evidence must be undisputed and negate the duty to defend as a matter of law (6 Cal. 4th 287, 296-299) .

The Court further held that although the allegations in the underlying CERCLA complaint were neutral as to coverage, by alleging that the insured caused environmental contamination, the complaint sufficiently raised the possibility that the insured could be liable for property damage covered by the policy (6 Cal. 4th 287, 304-305) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsConstruction Against InsurersInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageDamagesInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageEnvironmental ClaimsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
8. Damages as Including Environmental Cleanup

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.151-120.159

[Reserved]

§§ 120.151[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
9. Coverage of Nonvacant Land

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.160

§ 120.160 Improved Property Is Nonvacant Land for Purposes of Coverage Under Homeowner's Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE UNDER THE HOMEOWNER'S POLICY IS LIMITED TO VACANT LAND, AND _____ INSURED'S [BENEFICIAL USE and/or IMPROVEMENT] OF THE LAND RENDERED IT NONVACANT.

Beneficial Use or Improvement of Property Rendered Property Nonvacant. The beneficial use or improvement of untenanted property renders it nonvacant for purposes of a homeowner's policy that extends coverage to insured premises described as "vacant land" owned by or rented to the insured (Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that property owned by an insured who is covered under a homeowner's policy that includes "vacant land" is not considered vacant land if the property is subject to the beneficial use of the insured, or if the owner has improved the land.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the substantive issue is raised, for example, in a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication of issues in a declaratory relief action, or in an appellate brief.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, counsel should describe the insured's beneficial use of or improvements to the land, specifying any artificial structures or roads thereon, and specifying the frequency of their use and maintenance. If appropriate, counsel should also specify that the insured's beneficial use or the improvements made to the property were instrumental in causing the damage that is the subject of underlying claims by the insured or by third parties [see, e.g., Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343] .

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficial Use or Improvement of Property Rendered Property Nonvacant

In Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343 , one of the plaintiffs, the owner of a large parcel of land, constructed an earth and clay dam on that property to impound a reservoir, and built roads for access to the dam for its construction and maintenance. His original reason for the dam was to irrigate a grove of trees for future income purposes for use by a proposed nonprofit organization on the premises, but he subsequently abandoned the plans for the grove. He obtained a comprehensive insurance policy from coplaintiff for his personal liability for bodily injury or property damage occurring on that property. That policy contained an "other insurance" clause requiring duplicative insurance to prorate liability. The insured also obtained a homeowner's insurance policy from defendant on his residence, located elsewhere.

The homeowner's policy covered, in pertinent part, "vacant land, other than farm land," owned by or rented to the insured. The dam began leaking and subsequently burst, causing property damage to neighboring landowners, who filed claims against plaintiffs and ultimately brought suit against them. Plaintiffs then filed an action for declaratory relief against defendant to determine its liability in the underlying action. The trial court found that the property was vacant land, and ruled that defendant was liable on an equal basis with plaintiff insurer for compensatory damages as well as continuing appeal expenses in the underlying action. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that beneficial use or improvement of untenanted property renders it nonvacant, particularly if the use has accompanied the introduction of artificial structures (191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293) . The court noted that the issue was one of first impression in California (191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 290-291). Persuasive authority from other jurisdictions indicated that vacant land means land that is both unoccupied and unused (191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 292) . With regard to the principles discussed, the insured's (191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 291-293) property was clearly not vacant. The insured built the dam in order to improve the property materially, despite the fact that he abandoned his original purpose for the dam, and despite the nonprofit nature of the proposed facilityon the property. Moreover, it was the construction and maintenance of the property's most significant improvement that proximately caused the damage, i.e., the dam and the reservoir (191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageReal PropertyGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
9. Coverage of Nonvacant Land

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.161

§ 120.161 Artificial Structures on Untenanted Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE UNDER THE HOMEOWNER'S POLICY IS LIMITED TO VACANT LAND, AND THE PRESENCE OF ARTIFICIAL STRUCTURES ON THE LAND RENDERS IT NONVACANT.

Artificial Structures Render Untenanted Property Nonvacant. Untenanted property that contains artificial structures is nonvacant land (Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that property owned by an insured who is covered under a homeowner's policy that includes "vacant land" is not considered vacant land if the property contains artificial structures.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the substantiveissue is raised, for example, in a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication of issues in a declaratory relief action, or in an appellate brief.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, counsel should refer to evidence of artificial structures on the land.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Artificial Structures Render Untenanted Property Nonvacant

Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343 , is discussed in § 120.160[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawProperty InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageReal PropertyGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
9. Coverage of Nonvacant Land

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.162

§ 120.162 Improvement Caused Damage That Is Subject of Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE UNDER THE HOMEOWNER'S POLICY IS LIMITED TO VACANT LAND, THE PROPERTY MAY NOT BE CONSIDERED VACANT LAND SINCE AN IMPROVEMENT ON THE PROPERTY CAUSED THE DAMAGES.

Improvement Caused Damage That Is Subject of Claim. Property that contains an improvement that caused damage that is the subject of an insured's claim is not "vacant land" covered under a homeowner's policy (Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that property owned by an insured who is covered under a homeowner's policy that contains an improvement that caused damage which is the subject of an insured's claim is not "vacant land" covered under a homeowner's policy.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment, in an action based on a refusal to defend and/or indemnify. For use in this context, counsel shouldmodify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the substantive issue is raised, for example, in a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication of issues in a declaratory relief action, or in an appellate brief.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.100 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, counsel should describe the way in which the improvements made to the property were instrumental in causing the damage that is the subject of underlying claims by the insured or by third parties [see, e.g., Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343] .

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Improvement Caused Damage That Is Subject of Claim

Bianchi v. Westfield Ins. Co. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 287, 236 Cal. Rptr. 343 , is discussed in § 120.160[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageReal PropertyGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
9. Coverage of Nonvacant Land

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.163-120.164

[Reserved]

§§ 120.163[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
10. Estoppel to Raise Contractual Limitations Defense

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.165

§ 120.165 Insurer Estopped From Raising Limitations Period Defense for Failure to Notify Insured of Relevant Policy Terms

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURER IS ESTOPPED FROM RAISING THE DEFENSE OF THE ELAPSING OF THE CONTRACTUAL LIMITATIONS PERIOD BECAUSE IT FAILED TO NOTIFY THE INSURED OF THAT PROVISION IN THE POLICY.

A. Insurer Must Notify Insured of Policy Terms. Every insurer must disclose to a first-party claimant or beneficiary all benefits, coverage, time limits, or other provisions of any insurance policy issued by that insurer that may apply to the claim presented by the claimant or beneficiary (Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 ; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a)).

B. Estoppel to Assert Limitations Defense After Failing to Notify Insured of Policy Terms. An insurer may be estopped from raising the one-year suit provision as a defense if it has not complied with regulations requiring every insurer to disclose to a first-party claimant all time limits that might apply to the claim presented by the claimant (Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that an insured's claim is untimely. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer cannot raise the elapse of the limitations period as a defense, because the insurer failed to notify the insured of the relevant timing provisions of the insurance policy [see Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 ; 10 Cal. Code

Reg. § 2695.4(a)].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, an insured may submit these points and authorities insupport of a motion for summary judgment on the grounds that the affirmative defense of the complaint's untimeliness is untenable, or in opposition to an insurer's summary judgment motion on the grounds that the complaint is time-barred [see Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

This form may also be used in a trial brief or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the limitations period asserted by the insurer was tolled [see, e.g., § 120.120].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should argue that the insurer failed to notify the insured of the relevant policy terms as required by California regulations [Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 ; 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a)].

The form should be combined with other forms as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see § 120.20 et seq.), and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities in support of summary adjudication on the grounds that the insurer's affirmative defense of the lapsing of the contractual limitations period is not available to the insurer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)]. Similarly, these points and authorities may be used in opposition to the insurer's summary judgment motion in an action by the insured based on the insurer's failure to pay benefits under the policy [see Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints, answers, and motions between the insurer and insured, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine forms of this publication in drafting,and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Must Notify Insured of Policy Terms

In Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 , an insured sued its insurer for wrongfully refusing to pay benefits with respect to losses caused by the 1994 Northridge earthquake.

The complaint stated causes of action for breach of contract, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and declaratory relief. In its answer, the insurer raised a contract limitations affirmative defense and subsequently filed a summary judgment motion on that ground. The policy contained a contractual limitations clause, which provided:

> [N]o suit, action or proceeding for the recovery of any claim under this policy shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity unless the same shall be commenced within twelve (12) months next after discovery by the insured of the occurrence which gives rise to the claim, provided however, that if by the laws of the State within which this policy is issued such limitation is invalid, then any such claims shall be void unless such action, suit or proceeding be commenced within the shortest period of time permitted by the laws of such State.

The loss occurred on January 17, 1994, and was discovered by the insured on January 17 and 18, 1994. The insured made a claim under the policy on November 21, 1994. On April 18, 1995, the insurer denied the claim, and the insured sued on September 16, 1996. The insurer contended that under the computation standards set forth in Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 (see § 120.120), approximately ten months of the 12-month limitation period elapsed between January 18, 1994 (the discovery of the loss) and November 21, 1994 (the date of the claim). The limitation period was then tolled until April 18, 1995 (the date that the insurer denied the claim), and therefore the filing of the action an additional 17 months later on September 16, 1996, was untimely because of a net elapsed period of approximately 27 months. In its opposition to the motion, the insured submitted declarations and discovery responses stating that its employees charged with the responsibility for the claim were unaware of the 12-month policy limitations period and that the insurer did not advise the insured of the 12-month limit in the exchange of correspondence relating to the claim. The insured submitted in evidence 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2695.1 and2695.4, which are part of the Fair Claims Settlement Practices Regulations (10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 2695.1-2695.17) issued by the California Insurance Commissioner. 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a) (in effect at the time of the issuance of the policy, the loss, and the submission and denial of the claim) required insurers to disclose to insureds time limits applicable to submitted claims. The insured contended that although the time-limitation was admittedly a policy provision, in light of the insured's lack of actual knowledge of the time limit, the insurer should be estopped from relying on the policy limitations provision. In its reply, the insurer denied that 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a) applied, under traditional contract and estoppel principles, to the limitations dispute, but did not dispute its own violation of the regulation. The trial court agreed with the insurer, essentially on the ground that the consequence of a regulatory violation is solely administrative action by the Insurance Commissioner. The trial court therefore granted the summary judgment motion and entered judgment for the insurer. The insured appealed.

The court of appeal reversed summary judgment and remanded, holding that a triable issue of fact was raised as to whether the insurer should be estopped from raising the limitations defense (71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1273) . The court noted that in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, 12-month contractual limitation provisions in insurance policies are generally valid, provided they are plain, clear and conspicuous, and reasonable. Under Prudential-LMI, the one-year period is equitably tolled between the time that the insured notifies the insurer of the loss and the written denial of the claim. Therefore, the period was indisputably tolled for the 10-month period between November 21, 1994 (the date of the claim), and April 18, 1995 (the date of denial), although the action was filed an additional 17 months later, on September 16, 1996. This was a net elapsed period of approximately 27 months, well beyond the contract limitations limit of 12 months. The insured's major contention was that the insurer should be estopped from relying on the contract limitations defense, because (1) the insured was unaware of the 12-month limitations period, and (2) the insurer failed to disclose the short limitations period to the insured, despite (3) the requirement of 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a), which provides that:

> [e]very insurer shall disclose to a first party claimant ... all ... time limits ... of any insurance policy issued by that insurer that may apply to the claim presented by the claimant.

The court noted that an estoppel may arise from silence if there is a duty to speak and agreed with the insured that in this case, a duty to speak arose from the regulation. The regulation imposes on insurers an unmistakable duty to advise its insureds of applicable claim time limits. Its purpose is salutary, designed to alert insureds to their insurance policy obligations, and to foster equity, fairness, and plain-dealing in claimshandling. This and related regulations flesh out the statutory public policy of the Unfair Practices Act, the purpose of which is to regulate trade practices in the business of insurance (see Ins. Code § 790 (specifically forbidding certain unfair claims settlement practices)). The court held that this public policy gives rise to a duty to speak for the purpose of applying the doctrine of equitable estoppel. The court noted that the object and purpose of the time-limit disclosure requirement contained in the regulations is to preserve claims for resolution on the merits and remedy the trap for the unwary. Yet the limit of the Insurance Commissioner's administrative authority is to impose monetary penalties and adverse licensure action to coerce future compliance. Therapeutic as this may be, its effect is prospective only. The after-the-fact administrative sanction does nothing to rectify the very wrong the regulation was designed to prevent. Only if the courts, through their equitable powers, require compliance with the regulation will its purpose of claim preservation be achieved (71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1268-1271) .

The court stated that it is "simply unacceptable" for an insurer to take advantage of its own misconduct and thereby succeed in defeating an otherwise legitimate claim because the insured did not comply with a policy time limit of which it was not actually aware, due to the insurer's failure to provide the required notice. The court also found that nothing in Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 (see § 120.240) suggests that insurer violations of the Unfair Practices Act or its enabling regulations may not have consequences short of an independent private right of action (71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1271-1272) . Moreover, if the policy reference to "the laws of the State" is construed to include the Commissioner's Fair Claims Settlement Practices Regulations, then the 12-month period would be invalid absent compliance with the regulations, and the insured's action would appear to be timely under the policy. In response to the insurer's assertion that the insured is charged with constructive knowledge of policy provisions that are plain, clear, and conspicuous, the court pointed out that 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2695.4(a) requires the insurer to "disclose to" a claimant insured all policy "time limits." This obviously implies a type of notice, communicated independently of the policy itself, which is calculated to achieve actual rather than constructive knowledge. The implicit assumption of the regulation is that the mere existence of the policy provision is not enough, no matter how "plain, clear and conspicuous." The whole purpose of this notice is to assure actual, not merely constructive, knowledge, of the contractual limitations period within which an insured must bring suit. To permit an insurer to enforce a time limit provision based solely on evidence of constructive notice would eviscerate the purpose of the regulation (71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1272-1273) . The court of appeal therefore reversed, and remanded the case for further proceedings (71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1275) .

[b] Estoppel to Assert Limitations Defense After Failing to Notify Insured of Policy Terms

Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 , is discussed in § 120.165[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel to Assert Limitations Defense After Failing to Notify Insured of Policy Terms

In Neufeld v. Balboa Ins. Co. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 759, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 , an insured filed suit against her insurer in March 1997, based on the insurer's denial of a claim in October 1995. The insurer obtained summary judgment based on the policy's contractual one-year statute of limitations. The court of appeal noted that the opinion in Spray, Gould & Bowers v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 , in combination with the regulations of the Insurance Commissioner on which that opinion relies, has "pretty much vitiated the one-year suit provision as a defense in first party insurance cases." The court therefore reversed, finding that the insurer did not notify the insured of the one-year suit provision and that no correspondence with the insurer mentioned the one-year suit provision. Following Spray, the court held that the insurer was estopped from raising that defense and that the ruling in Spray may properly be raised retroactively (84 Cal. App. 4th 759, 761-766) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverPolicy CoverageInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
10. Estoppel to Raise Contractual Limitations Defense

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.166-120.169

[Reserved]

§§ 120.166[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.170

§ 120.170 Liability Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith When Not Party to Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE] IS NOT LIABLE TO INSURED FOR INSURER'S BREACH OF THE COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH IMPLIED IN THE INSURANCE CONTRACT, BECAUSE _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE] WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT.

Agent or Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith. Neither an agent nor an employee of an insurance company is liable to the insured for the company's breach of the covenant of good faith implied in the insurance contract to which the agent or employee is not a party (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 824, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 576, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an agent or employee of an insurance company, that the agent or employee is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that the agent or employee was not a party to the contract.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showing that the agent or employee was at all times acting solely in his or her capacity as an agent or employee of the insurer.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.171 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant agent or employee of the insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background related to actions by and against insurance agents, brokers, and employees, and the insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing, including related forms of complaint, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent or Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , was an action against an insurance company, its agency claims manager, and its agency claims adjuster for compensatory and punitive damages arising out of a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in a health and disability insurance policy. The trial court directed a verdict against defendants, ruling, as a matter of law, that defendants' failure to have plaintiff examined by a doctor of their choice or to consult with plaintiff's treating physicians and surgeon violated the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The trial court submitted to the jury the issues of causation and compensatory and punitive damages. The jury returned verdicts against all defendants. General damages of $500 and punitive damages of $400 were assessed against the agency claims adjuster; general damages of $1,000 and punitive damages of $500 were assessed against the agency claims manager; and general damages of $45,600, damages for emotional distress of $78,000, and punitive damages of $5 million were assessed against the insurance company. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment insofar as it awarded compensatory damages against the insurance company, but reversed the judgment in all other respects. The Court held that the punitive damages award against the insurer was excessive as a matter of law. With respect to the individual defendants, the Court pointed out that they acted as the insurer's agents and, as such, were not parties to the insurance contract and not subject to the implied covenant of good faith. Because the only ground for imposing liability on either of them was breach of that promise, the Court, citing Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 576, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , concluded that the judgments against them as individuals could not stand (24 Cal. 3d 809, 824) .

Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , was an action by an insured against three insurancecompanies which had insured his business premises against fire loss in the aggregate sum of $35,000, an adjusting firm and one of its claims adjusters, and a law firm and one of its attorney employees. The insured premises were damaged by fire. Defendant insurers engaged defendant adjusting firm which sent defendant claims adjuster to the scene to investigate the fire and inspect the premises. While there, the adjuster stated to a fire department arson investigator that the premises had excessive coverage under the fire policies. Plaintiff was subsequently charged in a felony complaint with the crimes of arson [Penal Code § 451] and defrauding an insurer [Penal Code § 548]. Defendant insurers retained defendant law firm to represent them in the matter of plaintiff's claim of fire loss. Defendant attorney, an employee of defendant law firm, demanded that plaintiff appear on a specified date to submit to an examination under oath and to produce certain documents [see Ins. Code § 2071]. Plaintiff's attorney responded by letter stating that he had advised plaintiff not to make any statements concerning the fire loss while criminal charges were pending and requested that the insurers waive the requirement of an examination until the criminal charges were concluded. Defendant attorney refused the request and warned that failure to appear would void coverage under the policies. On plaintiff's failure to appear, defendant attorney advised plaintiff's attorney in writing that the insurers were denying liability under the policies because of plaintiff's failure to submit to an examination under oath and to produce documents.

At the preliminary hearing in the criminal matter, defendant claims adjuster testified for the prosecution that it was his belief that plaintiff had excessive fire coverage. The criminal charge were dismissed for lack of probable cause. Plaintiff's attorney then advised defendant insurers that plaintiff was ready to submit himself for an examination. The insurers, however, reaffirmed their position that they were denying liability because of plaintiff's failure to appear. Plaintiff then sued the insurance companies, the adjusting firm, the individual claims adjuster, the law firm, and the individual attorney for compensatory and punitive damages alleging that, as a direct and proximate result of the outrageous conduct and bad faith of defendants, plaintiff suffered severe economic damage, severe emotional upset and distress, loss of earnings, and various special damages. The complaint, which was in one count, alleged that all defendants other than the insurers were the agents and employees of the insurers and were acting within the scope of their agency and employment when the acts attributed to them were committed. It was further alleged that the defendants and each of them joined together and acted in concert to falsely imply that plaintiff had a motive to deliberately set fire to and burn down his place of business and that the purpose of the defendants in creating such false implication was to establish a ground on which defendant insurers could avoid paying the amounts due plaintiff under the insurance policies issued by them. Defendants' general demurrers to the complaint were sustainedwith leave to amend and, on plaintiff's electing to stand on his complaint, an order of dismissal was entered.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment as to defendant insurance companies and remanded the cause with directions to the trial court to overrule the demurrers and allow defendants a reasonable time to answer. As to the remaining defendants, the judgment of dismissal was affirmed. With respect to the other defendants (the adjusting firm, its claims adjuster, the law firm, and the law firm's attorney employee), the Court pointed out that plaintiff alleged that they were the agents and employees of defendant insurers and of each other and were acting within the scope of that agency and employment when they committed the acts attributed to them and that, since plaintiff contended that the noninsurer defendants breached only the duty of good faith and fair dealing, the Court need not consider the possibility that they might have committed another tort in their respective capacities as total strangers to the contracts of insurance. The Court said that the noninsurer defendants obviously were not parties to the insurance agreements and were not, as such, subject to an implied duty of good faith and fair dealing and that, as agents and employees of defendant insurers, they could not be held accountable on a theory of conspiracy. The Court explained that this rule derives from the principle that corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of the corporation cannot ordinarily be held liable for inducing a breach of the corporation's contract since, being in a confidential relationship to the corporation, their action in this respect is privileged. The Court concluded that, accordingly, the judgment of dismissal in favor of the noninsurer defendants must be affirmed (9 Cal. 3d 566, 576) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agent or Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

In Iversen v. Superior Court (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 168, 127 Cal. Rptr. 49 , a mandate proceeding arising out of an action by an insured against its liability insurer and the insurer's claims supervisor for damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing by reason of the insurer's failure to accept a settlement offer within policy limits, the court of appeal ordered issuance of the writ directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the claims supervisor's motion for summary judgment and to enter an order granting the motion. The court explained that the supervisor's uncontradicted declaration in support of his motion established that he was not liable on a cause of action asserting breach of the obligation to deal fairly and act in good faith with respect to an insurance claim, that, while breach of that obligation sounds both in contract and tort, the existence of the duty which is the subject of the breach depends on acontractual relationship, and that the particular relationship is that created by the contract of insurance in which a covenant of good faith and fair dealing is implied as a matter of law. The court held that, since the supervisor was an agent of the insurer and not a party to the contract of insurance, he was not bound by the implied covenant and owed no duty to the insured not to breach it (57 Cal. App. 3d 168, 171) .

The court also rejected as inapplicable plaintiff's argument that an employee is always liable for his own torts regardless of whether his employer is also liable [see Civ. Code § 2343(3) (specifying acts for which an agent is responsible)]. The court said that the argument ignored the proposition that the employee is liable only if his conduct is a tortious breach of duty, that the supervisor did not breach a duty of good faith owed by him, and that no other tort was alleged by plaintiff (57 Cal. App. 3d 168, 172) .

In Hale v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 681, 117 Cal. Rptr. 146 (disapproved on another point in Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 822 n.5, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141), an action by an insured against his insurer and the insurer's attorney in fact and against their claims supervisor and their claims examiner for bad-faith refusal to pay medical benefits due plaintiff under his automobile liability policy, the court of appeal reversed that portion of the judgment awarding compensatory and punitive damages against the claims supervisor and claims examiner, after their motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict had been denied, with instructions to enter judgment for these defendants. The court held on the authority of the Supreme Court in Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 [see § 120.170[3][a]], that the motions of the claims supervisor and claims examiner for judgment notwithstanding the verdict should have been granted and that the judgment against them must be reversed (42 Cal. App. 3d 681, 702) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & Brokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.171

§ 120.171 Covenant Extends Only to Limits of Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER DID NOT BREACH THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING, BECAUSE THE COVENANT EXTENDS ONLY TO THE LIMITS OF THE CONTRACT, AND THE ALLEGED BREACH WAS BEYOND THE TERMS OF THECONTRACT AND WAS NOT WITHIN THE EXPECTATIONS OF EITHER PARTY TO THE CONTRACT.

Covenant Extends Only to Limits of Contract. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing extends only to the limits of the contract. The insurer's fiduciary duty is coextensive with the four corners of the contract entered into between the parties, and does not extend beyond faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party (Gibson v. Government Employees Ins. Co. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 446-448, 208 Cal. Rptr. 511).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis of these points and authorities is that the covenant extends only to the limits of the contract, and the alleged breach was beyond the terms of the contract and was not within the expectations of either party to the contract.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showing that and the alleged breach was beyond the terms of the contract and was not within the expectations of either party to the contract.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supportedby cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Covenant Extends Only to Limits of Contract

In Gibson v. Government Employees Ins. Co. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 208 Cal. Rptr. 511 , plaintiffs, insured by defendant for over 20 years, were injured by a motorist while crossing the street. They had never increased their original medical payments benefit and incurred $55,000 in unreimbursed medical damages as a result of the accident. Plaintiffs brought an action against defendant for breach of fiduciary duty in failing to inform them of the availability and potential need for underinsured motorist coverage and the inadequacy of their medical payments benefit. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer and gave plaintiffs 30 days to amend their complaint. When plaintiffs filed an amendment more than 30 days later, defendant's motion for dismissal was granted. Plaintiffs appealed from the dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. After reviewing case law the court concluded that defendant had a fiduciary duty to plaintiff as its insured. It went on to review the insurance cases discussing the tort caused by breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, concluding that thecovenant extended only to the limits of the insurance coverages afforded by the insurer to the insured. The insurer's fiduciary duty is coextensive with the four corners of the insurance contract entered into between the parties. Good faith performance emphasizes faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party (162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 446-447) . If any breach by defendant of its fiduciary duty and violation of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing occurred, it did not arise under the contract, but outside of it. Plaintiffs did not allege any failure to perform pursuant to the contract terms, but contended that defendant failed to make underinsured motorist coverage available or, alternatively, to inform them of its existence, and failed to inform them that their medical pay coverage was inadequate. The only allegation based on their expectations was that defendant would advise them or make available coverage beyond that for which they had contracted. Defendant never represented to provide comprehensive advice and coverage (162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 447-448) . Any fiduciary duty existing between an insurer and its insured is governed by the terms of the contract in effect between them and to the extent there is no contract, the relationship between them is not controlled by principles of strict fiduciary responsibility (162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 449-450) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationEntire Contract

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.172

§ 120.172 Plaintiff Lacks Standing to Bring Action Because He/She Is Neither Insured Nor Intended Third-Party Beneficiary

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF LACKS STANDING TO BRING THIS ACTION BECAUSE HE/SHE IS NEITHER AN INSURED NOR AN INTENDED THIRD-PARTY BENEFICIARY OF THE INSURANCE POLICY ISSUED BY DEFENDANT.

A. Plaintiff Fails to Satisfy Basic Requirement for Standing. In order to have standing to sue an insurer for breach of the insurer's duty to pay benefits due to an insured under an insurance policy, a plaintiff must be either a party to the insurance contract or an intended third-party beneficiary of that contract (Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1724-1725, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291).

[Optional] B. Parties Did Not Intend to Make Plaintiff Third-Party Beneficiary. Whether a third party is an intended beneficiaryor an incidental beneficiary to an insurance policy involves construction of the parties' intent, gleaned from reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances under which it was rendered (Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1725, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291).

[Optional] C. Incidental Reference or Benefit Is Insufficient to Confer Standing. The fact that a third party is incidentally named in an insurance policy, or that the policy, if carried out to its terms, would inure to a third party's benefit, is insufficient to entitle the third party to demand enforcement (Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1724-1725, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis of these points and authorities is that the plaintiff lacks standing to bring the action because he or she is neither an insured nor an intended third-party beneficiary of the insurance policy issued by the defendant insurer.

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention in an action by someone other than an insured seeking damages from the insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing arising out of the insurer's failure or refusal to pay benefits allegedly due under the policy. Typically, such an action will be brought by a third party with some stake in the payment of benefits under the policy, such as a lessee who stands to benefit directly or indirectly from the insurer's payment of policy proceeds to the lessor. The ground for the contention is that the plaintiff is neither an insured nor an intended beneficiary of the insurance contract, but rather, at most, merely an incidental beneficiary, and that the plaintiff therefore lacks standing to bring the action.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts demonstrating conclusively that the parties to the insurance contract did not enter the contract with the intent of benefitting the plaintiff, and that anybenefit under the policy that would accrue to the plaintiff was purely incidental to the contract. This issue is determined based on reading the insurance contract as a whole, in light of the circumstances under which it was entered [Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1724-1725, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291] .

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues [see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.] and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Fails to Satisfy Basic Requirement for Standing

In Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 , the plaintiff leased commercial property for the operation of a restaurant. The lease obligated the lessor to maintain rental income insurance providing coverage for damage or destruction from fire or other perils. The lease also stated that during any repairs to the premises after damage or destruction from a peril, the lessee's rent would be equitably reduced to the extent the lessor received proceeds from the rental income insurance. The lessor obtained insurance from defendant insurer. The property thereafter sustained water damage. A claim was made against the insurer, and the insurer denied coverage. Thereafter, the lessee sued the insurer, claiming that the insurer breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing and that as a result of that breach, the lessor had sued plaintiff for nonpayment of rent and structural damage to the premises. Plaintiff claimed that he was entitled to maintain the bad faith action (1) as an "implied-in-law co-insured" under the insurance policy; and (2) as a third party beneficiary of the policy. The insurer's general demurrer was sustained without leave to amend, on the ground that plaintiff had no standing to sue.

The court of appeal affirmed, ruling that plaintiff's complaint stated no cause of action under any legal theory, and could not reasonably be cured by amendment. The court noted that while an action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing sounds in tort, it exists solely because of the contractual relationship between the parties. A nonparty who is entitled to policy benefits has standing only if that party is a claimant whose benefits are wrongfully withheld. Plaintiff did not allege that he was either a contracting party or a claimant (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1722) . The argument that plaintiff was an "implied-in-law coinsured" was rejected because cases adopting the latter principle arose in a subrogation context and were equitable in nature, having no application to a claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, which is a tort claim based on contractual principles (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1723-1724) .

The court also rejected plaintiff's claim to be a third-party beneficiary of the contract, noting that in order to qualify, the contract must have been made expressly for plaintiff's benefit. The court determined that the insurance policy was not made expressly for plaintiff's benefit and therefore held that the demurrer was properly sustained (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1724-1725) .

[b] Parties Did Not Intend to Make Plaintiff Third-Party Beneficiary

The facts and background in Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 , are discussed in § 120.173[3][a]. In determining whether or not plaintiff qualified as a third-party beneficiary of the insurance policy, the court held that determination of whether a third party is an intended beneficiary or an incidental beneficiary involves construction of the parties' intent, gleaned from reading the contract as a whole in light of the circumstances under which it was entered (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1725) .

[c] Incidental Reference or Benefit Is Insufficient to Confer Standing

The facts and background in Jones v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 , are discussed in § 120.173[3][a]. The court held that the fact that a third party is incidentally named in an insurance policy, or that the policy, if carried out to its terms, would inure to a third party's benefit, is insufficient to entitle the third party to demand enforcement (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1724) . The court concluded that it was apparent from the terms of the policy that the plaintiff lessee was not an intended beneficiary. The fact that the lease itself would have caused plaintiff to receive a rent reduction had the insurer compensated the lessor for the damage was only enough to make plaintiff an incidental beneficiary (26 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1725) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawThird PartiesBeneficiariesClaims & EnforcementInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.173

§ 120.173 Plaintiff Judgment Creditor's Collusion With Insured Renders Underlying Judgment Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF, AS ASSIGNEE OF INSURED, MAY NOT RECOVER FROM INSURER ON THE POLICY BECAUSE THE UNDERLYING JUDGMENT WHICH PLAINTIFF SEEKS TO ENFORCE IS UNENFORCEABLE AS THE RESULT OF PLAINTIFF'S COLLUSION WITH INSURED.

A. Plaintiff's Agreement With Insured Constitutes Collusion. What constitutes collusion will differ with each fact situation. Collusion has been variously defined as (1) a deceitful agreement orcompact between two or more persons, for the one party to bring an action against the other for some evil purpose, as to defraud a third party of his right; (2) a secret arrangement between two or more persons, whose interests are apparently conflicting, to make use of the forms and proceedings of law in order to defraud a third person, or to obtain that which justice would not give them, by deceiving a court or its officers; and (3) a secret combination, conspiracy, or concert of action between two or more persons for fraudulent or deceitful purposes (Andrade v. Jennings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 327, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 787).

B. Insurer May Raise Defense of Collusion in Suit to Recover Under Policy. Insurer may raise the defense of collusion against an insured's assignee because as against the injured person an insurer may assert a defense based on breach by the insured of the cooperation clause of the policy. Collusive assistance in the procurement of a judgment not only constitutes a breach of the cooperation clause but also is a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Andrade v. Jennings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 327, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 787).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by an insurer that a judgment creditor who is assigned the rights of the insured against the insurer may not recover from the carrier if in obtaining the judgment, the judgment creditor and the insured engaged in collusion against the insurer.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc.§ 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Agreement With Insured Constitutes Collusion

In Andrade v. Jennings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 787 , an insurer issued an excess liability policy to the employer of the injured party. The injured party was a tuna boat captain who suffered shipboard injury and made a claim against his employer and the vessel. The injured employee filed state and federal lawsuits. Since the employer's primary insurer was insolvent, the employer and the vessel's lienholders sought to settle the injured employee's claim without impairing their interests in the vessel. Eventually, without informing the excess insurer, the insured settled with the injured employee for an amount invoking the excess policy. The injured employee agreed not to execute against the insured's assets including the vessel, with the insured assigning to the injured employee all its rights against the excess insurer. Under the settlement agreement, the injured employee dismissed his state lawsuit against the insured. However, agreeing that the injured employee could obtain judgment in his federal lawsuit against the insured in an amount invoking the excess policy issued by the excess insurer, the injuredemployee and the insured scheduled a prove-up hearing in the federal court. At the prove-up hearing the injured employee presented evidence and the insured offered no defense. The excess insurer declined to attend. The federal court entered judgment favoring the injured employee in the requested amount.

The injured employee then intervened in the insured employer's state lawsuit against the excess insurer. After the superior court granted summary adjudication/judgment favoring the plaintiff, the court of appeal reversed and remanded on the limited ground the record contained evidence raising triable factual issues on insurer's defense of collusion. On remand, the defense of collusion was tried to a jury. After a jury trial awarding a defense verdict to the insurer, the insured's assignee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court considered whether there was substantial evidence to support the jury's finding of collusion. Citing Span, Inc. v. Associated Int'l Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 463, 484 , the court stated that what constitutes collusion will differ with each fact situation. Collusion has been variously defined as (1) a deceitful agreement or compact between two or more persons, for the one party to bring an action against the other for some evil purpose, as to defraud a third party of his right; (2) a secret arrangement between two or more persons, whose interests are apparently conflicting, to make use of the forms and proceedings of law in order to defraud a third person, or to obtain that which justice would not give them, by deceiving a court or its officers; and (3) a secret combination, conspiracy, or concert of action between two or more persons for fraudulent or deceitful purposes (54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 327) . The court observed that the attorneys representing the insured violated the assistance and cooperation clauses of the excess policy issued by the excess insurer and thus committed a fraud on the excess insurer by not providing the excess insurer with a copy of the injured employee's initial offer to settle for $950,000, not providing the excess insurer with a copy of the injured employee's proposal to settle by stipulated judgment for $1.5 million, not immediately providing the excess insurer with a copy of the economist's report indicating that the injured employees wage loss exceeded $1.2 million, entering into the settlement agreement, and not presenting a defense at the federal prove-up hearing (54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 327). The court held that substantial evidence and reasonable inferences supported the jury's findings that the insured's misconduct prejudiced the excess insurer (54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 336) .

[b] Insurer May Raise Defense of Collusion in Suit to Recover Under Policy

The facts and procedural background of Andrade v. Jennings (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 787 , are discussed in § 120.173[3][a]. The court of appeal held that there was substantialevidence to support the finding of collusion between the insured under an excess liability policy in which the primary insurer was insolvent, and the injured party who sued the excess injurer to recover under the policy. The court stated that the insurer may raise the defense of collusion against the assignee because as against the injured person an insurer may assert a defense based on breach by the insured of the cooperation clause of the policy. Collusive assistance in the procurement of a judgment not only constitutes a breach of the cooperation clause but also is a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 327) . As the insured, the employer of the injured party owed its excess insurer the duty of good faith and fair dealing. An insured may not manipulate claims to an excess carrier's detriment. The issue of collusion subsumes the issue whether the insured Jorge breached the contractual assistance and cooperation clauses or the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (54 Cal. App. 4th 307, 328) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsMaterialityTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.174

§ 120.174 Casualty Insurer's Handling of Claim Was Reasonable as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

CASUALTY INSURER DID NOT BREACH THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING, BECAUSE INSURER'S HANDLING OF INSURED'S CLAIM WAS REASONABLE AS A MATTER OF LAW.

A. Casualty Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant of Good Faith. A casualty insurer, unlike a liability insurer, breaches its covenant of good faith and fair dealing only when its denial of, or delay in making, payment of benefits under a policy is unreasonable (Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 25, 148 Cal. Rptr. 653 (disapproved on another point in Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 824 n.7, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141)).

B. Reasonableness Appears as Matter of Law. When the facts presented clearly show that the insurer acted reasonably in the handling of the claim, the court may so rule as a matter of law (Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 35-36, 148 Cal. Rptr. 653 , disapproved on other grounds, Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 824 n.7, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; see West v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 868 F.2d 348, 350-352) .

[Optional] C. Insurer Is Not Liable For Mere Negligent Handling of Claim. An insurer under a first-party policy does not breach its covenant of good faith and fair dealing by conduct in the handling of a claim that is negligent at most and not unreasonable (see National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Edwards (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 339, 174 Cal. Rptr. 31).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by a casualty insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that the action has no merit because the insurer at all times acted reasonably in handling the claim and took into account equally and fairly the insured's interest as well as its own.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted, in an action to recover damages from a casualty insurer for alleged bad-faith denial of, or delay in making, payment of benefits under a casualty policy or the casualty provisions of a liability policy, in support of the contention that the action has no merit since the defendant insurer at all times acted reasonably in handling the claim and took into account equally and fairly the insured's interest as well as its own, and that defendant is, therefore, entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Paragraph C should be included when liability for bad-faith denial of, or delay in making, payment of benefits is based on mere negligence of the insurer in acting or failing to act.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showing that the insurer's conduct and discussing the reasonableness of that conduct.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Casualty Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant of Good Faith

Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 148 Cal. Rptr. 653 , was an action by an attorney, who had been diagnosed as suffering from presenile dementia, against his disability insurer for refusal to pay his disability claim. The action was for declaratory relief and for damagesfor breach of contract, emotional distress, bad-faith failure to pay, and fraud. The insurer had refused to pay because it had, after conducting an extensive investigation, concluded that the insured's illness did not result in total disability, within the meaning of the policy, until some months after the policy had lapsed for nonpayment of premium. The evidence presented at trial was sharply conflicting as to whether plaintiff had become totally disabled before or after the lapse of the policy. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $67,200 compensatory damages and $336,000 exemplary damages. By later stipulation of counsel, $2,800 in interest was added to the award. The insurance company appealed. The court of appeal modified the judgment awarding disability payments due under the policy to delete the award as to payments to become due in the future and affirmed this portion of the judgment as modified. It reversed the judgment in all other respects.

The trial court had instructed the jury that when an insurance company unreasonably denies or delays payment of benefits due under an insurance policy and does so without giving the insured's interests at least as much consideration as its own, the insurance company has breached its duty imposed by law of good faith and fair dealing and that if the jury found that defendant had breached the duty of good faith and fair dealing with respect to the disability policy, then plaintiff was entitled to recover all damage legally caused by the breach. The court of appeal held that this instruction informed the jury that to hold the insurer liable for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, it must find that the insurer unreasonably denied or delayed payment of benefits due under the policy, and that this is a correct statement of the law (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 25) .

The court explained that there are two classes of cases in which an insurer may be held liable on the so-called theory of "bad faith." The first of these is a third-party case typically involving a liability insurer which refuses to accept the third party's offer to settle his or her claim against the insured, either because the insurer erroneously denies coverage, or under circumstances which make the refusal unreasonable, that is, the settlement offer was a reasonable one (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 26, 28-29) . The second of these classes is a first-party case typically involving a casualtyinsurer insuring, for example, against sickness and accident, fire, uninsured motorist, and occupational disability. The contractual obligation of the insurer is to pay money directly to the insured, not to a third party, and to do so only if the terms and conditions for payment have been fulfilled (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 27) . The court carefully distinguished these two classes of cases and the rules applicable to each (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 27-31) .

The court held that in the second class of cases, the substance or gravamen of the wrong is an unreasonable refusal to pay benefits due under the terms of the policies (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 31) and that the ultimate test of liability in these cases is whether the refusal to pay policy benefits was unreasonable (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 32) . The court, after reviewing the evidence, held that the insurer's refusal to pay disability benefits was not, under the facts of the case, unreasonable (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 32-36) .

It should be noted that with respect to the court of appeal's deletion from the award of future benefits under the policy, the Supreme Court, in Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 824 n.7, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , held that in a valid tort cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, the jury may include in the compensatory damage award future policy benefits that they reasonably conclude, after examination of the policy's provisions and other evidence, the policy holder would have been entitled to receive had the contract been honored by the insurer. The Court disapproved Austero to the extent that it was inconsistent with this holding.

[b] Insurer Is Not Liable For Mere Negligent Handling of Claim

In West v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 868 F.2d 348 , an insured brought an action against the insurer based on the insurer's refusal to pay a claim for residential theft loss. The theft resulted from an alleged burglary, after which the insured filed a police report, and submitted a claim to the insurer in excess of $10,000. During a preliminary interview of the insured conducted by the insurer, the insured stated that he would submit documentation to substantiate the loss. He did not do so. The insurer then requested that the insured submit to an examination under oath, as provided for in the policy. An attorney for the insurer conducted the examination in the presence of a court reporter. The insured, accompanied by his attorney, refused to answer any question that he had been asked during the preliminary interview, claiming that the interview had been a statement under oath. He based that assertion on his statement at the preliminary interview that he had answered those questions truthfully. After the sworn examination, the insurer requested, and was refused, interviews with the insured's spouse and teenagedchildren. The insurer then sent the insured a letter stating that it would deny the claim until the insured complied with the terms of the policy. The letter further stated that satisfaction of those terms was a prerequisite to any lawsuit against the insurer, and that it would be willing to review the claim if further information was provided. The insured failed to provide further information, and filed the action in state court two months later, alleging causes of action for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, violation of Ins. Code § 790.03, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. The insurer removed the case to federal court, basing jurisdiction on diversity of citizenship. The district court granted the insurer's motion for dismissal for failure to state a claim, with regard to the causes of action for breach of fiduciary duty and negligent infliction of emotional distress. The district court then granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, finding that:

(1) The insurance policy required the insured and members of his household to submit to examinations under oath on reasonable request by the insurer,

(2) The insured's spouse and children refused to submit to the examinations after reasonable requests,

(3) The insured refused to answer questions at the only examination of him that was conducted under oath,

(4) Even if the preliminary interview was under oath, the insurer's request for another interview was reasonable, and

(5) The requirement that the insured and his household members submit to statements under oath was a condition precedent to the insurer's duty to pay and, therefore, the insurer breached no duty to the insured by its refusal to pay his claim. The insured appealed.

The federal court of appeals affirmed, holding that under California law and the circumstances of the case, reasonableness was properly determined as a matter of law. The court of appeals noted that the only contention on appeal is that reasonableness is always a question of fact that precludes summary judgment. However, the insured cited no authority to support that contention, and the court noted that both California and federal courts have held that in certain circumstances reasonableness may be decided as a matter of law (citing, e.g., Terry v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 962, 966-967, 140 Cal. Rptr. 510 (868 F.2d 348, 350)). The court concluded that reasonableness becomes a question of law appropriate for determination on motion for summary judgment when only one conclusion about the conduct's reasonableness is possible. The court found that the district court's determination that the insurer's actions were reasonable as a matter of law is supported by the record. The court noted that the insured made a claim to the insurer for over $10,000. The recordwas undisputed that the insured submitted no canceled checks, receipts, or other documentation proving the existence or value of the items he alleged were stolen. The only substantiation the insurer was given to verify the claim was the insured's statement at the preliminary interview of what disappeared, and how much the missing items were worth. That statement did not constitute a statement under oath pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2093-2097. The insurer scheduled an examination under oath because the insured failed to provide the documentation he said he would, and because the insurer felt that some of the information given was inconsistent. The court noted that the insured's assertion that the scheduled examination under oath was unreasonable is tantamount to a claim that insurance companies are always required to pay claims at their face value on the basis of a preliminary interview. Besides being patently illogical, this argument is controverted by the insurance policy in the instant case, and by California law (citing Hickman v. London Assurance Corp. (1920) 184 Cal. 524, 529, 195 P. 45).

Therefore, in view of the fact that the insured had not yet submitted to any statement under oath, and had not submitted any documentation, the insurer's request that he submit to a sworn examination was entirely reasonable. It was also reasonable for the insurer to request statements from the family members because of the lack of information provided by the insured (868 F.2d 348, 351). The court concluded that the district court was correct in determining that the insurer's requests were reasonable as a matter of law, noting that no reasonable jury could find that the insurer's requests for statements under oath were unreasonable (868 F.2d 348, 351-352) .

The factual background of Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 148 Cal. Rptr. 653 , disapproved on other grounds, Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 824 n.7, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , is discussed in § 120.174[3][a]. The court of appeal explained that in evaluating the evidence to see if there was any unreasonable conduct by the insurer, it is essential that no hindsight test be applied and that the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the action by the insurer must be measured as of the time the insurer was confronted with a factual situation to which it was called on to respond (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 32) . The court then summarized the evidence (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 32-35) and concluded that there was no evidence, not even an implication, that the company acted unreasonably in denying the claim (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 35) . The court held, as a matter of law, that the insurer's conduct in handling plaintiff's claim was eminently reasonable and took into account equally and fairly both the interests of the insured and the insurer, and reversed the award of damages for emotional distress on this ground (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 35-36). The court reversed the award of exemplary damages on the ground that there was no evidence whatsoever to support it (84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 36) .

[c] Insurer Is Not Liable For Negligent Handling of Claim

National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Edwards (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 174 Cal. Rptr. 31 , was an interpleader action by an insurer against the wife and against the aunt of its deceased insured to determine their respective rights in the proceeds of a life insurance policy purchased from plaintiff by the deceased. The policy was for $8,000 and contained a double indemnity provision should the insured die from injuries sustained in a vehicular accident if death resulted within 90 days of the injuries. The wife was the named beneficiary and paid all the premiums on the policy from its inception until October 1974, when, by the terms of the policy, premiums were waived because of the insured's total disability. During the same month, the insured sent a written request to the insurer that his aunt be named beneficiary. The insurer apparently conceded that the request had been received at its district office prior to the insured's death but was not received at the insurer's home office, as required by the policy, until after his death, which occurred some 17 months after the request was originally sent.

The insured and his wife had separated in October 1971, and did not thereafter live together. On March 2, 1974, the insured was involved in a motor vehicle accident and was rendered a quadriplegic. He died 751 days later on March 22, 1976. The parties stipulated that the disabling effects of the deceased's injuries were continuous until his death. The death certificate stated the cause of death as bilateral bronchopneumonia as a consequence of a spinal cord injury due to blunt force trauma.

The insurer paid into court the sum of $8,365.96 as the death benefit due on the insured's life. The wife and aunt each cross complained against the insurer claiming additional payment under the double indemnity provision and each alleging a tort action against the insurer for bad faith and unfair dealing. They also stipulated that each would receive one half of all sums collected under the policy, including any monies collected under the double indemnity provision. The insurer's motion for summary judgment on the double indemnity issue was granted on the ground the deceased had not died within 90 days from the date he sustained his injuries, the trial court concluding as a matter of law that the "process of nature rule" (rule used in appropriate cases involving disability policies to defeat applicability of period specified in policy between injury and death) did not apply to life insurance policies. The insurer's motion on the tort causes of action after completion of opening statements for nonsuit was granted, and the wife and aunt appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment on the double indemnity issue, holding that the trial court erred in concluding as a matter of law that the process of nature rule did not apply, that the rule would apply, and that it was a question of fact to be determined by the jury whether the deceased died solely as a result of the injuries he sustained in the vehicular accident (119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 332-336). The court, however, affirmed the judgments of nonsuit on the tort actions. The court pointed out that the cases that have dealt with the covenant of good faith and fair dealing have for the most part been cases involving the insurer's duty to accept reasonable settlement or duty not to unreasonably withhold payments due under the policy, although in one case the Supreme Court found a violation of fair dealing where the insurer adopted a course of conduct for the purpose of inducing subscribers to give up their rights to arbitration under the insurance contract (119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 338-339) . The court rejected the aunt's contentions that the inaction of the insurer regarding the request for change of beneficiaries was not an oversight but deliberate, based on the insurer's suspicions that she had unduly influenced the deceased and that the insurer was guilty of bad faith and unfair dealing in failing to investigate its suspicions or otherwise act when the request for change of beneficiary was received. The court held that while the failure of the insurer to take affirmative action in response to the request may have constituted negligent behavior, it was not shown to be unreasonable behavior as defined by the cases and did not constitute a violation of the covenant of fair dealing; no evidence was alluded to in the opening statement of either defendant which would support a finding of more than negligent conduct on the part of the insurer in failing to act (119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 339) .

The court also disagreed with the wife's contention that the insurer had an affirmative duty to resolve any conflict of claims as between beneficiaries at the time the request for change of beneficiary was received and that its refusal to pay her the policy benefits was a violation of its covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The court pointed out that the wife was the named beneficiary in the policy, that the insurer took no action to change her status, and that the wife had demonstrated no conduct on the insurer's part which would support her allegation of bad faith (119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 339) .

The court further held that a bad-faith action could not be predicated on the insurer's filing an interpleader unless there was a showing that the claims of the interpleading parties were not asserted in good faith, and that there was no such showing here (119 Cal. App. 3d 326, 340) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Casualty Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant of Good Faith

In Tomaselli v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1269, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 433 , homeowners sued their insurance carrier for bad faith after the carrier denied their first-party casualty claim based on failure to file the action within one year following discovery of the damage. The carrier asserted that the insureds reasonably should have discovered damage to the foundation of their home more than one year before they filed suit. A trial jury awarded compensatory and punitive damages upon finding a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The Court of Appeal found that sufficient evidence existed to support a jury finding that the handling and ultimate denial of the claim were unreasonable and in bad faith. However, the court reversed as to the punitive damages. The court held that although the evidence supported a finding that the carrier had been negligent, overzealous, legally incorrect, and callous, no evidence existed of behavior that was evil, criminal, recklessly indifferent, or done with an intent to injure (25 Cal. App. 4th 1269, 1286-1288) .

In McMillin Scripps N. P'ship v. Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , an insured under a first party property insurance policy sought recovery of the costs of investigating whether gasoline storage tanks on the property were leaking. The investigation ultimately revealed that leakage had occurred prior to the inception of the policy. The insurer failed to investigate whether the claim was covered, and the insured brought an action for breach of the covenant of good faith and other causes of action. The court of appeal affirmed the granting of the insurer's summary judgment, holding that there cannot be bad faith when there is no covered loss during the policy period, absent misrepresentation or conduct on the insurer's part that prevents the insured from protecting its interests (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220) . The court further held that there is no private right of action under Ins. Code § 790.03(h), which requires prompt investigation of insurance claims (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1221-1222) .

C & H Foods Co. v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1055, 211 Cal. Rptr. 765 , arose from several marine insurance policies purchased by plaintiffs from defendant to cover the shipment of pails of cured beef. The policies insured the beef against all risks of physical loss or damage from any external cause, but warranted free from any claims arising out of the inherent vice of the goods. After the beef arrived in a spoiled condition, plaintiffs sued for declaratory relief, bad faith, and refusal to pay benefits. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrers without leave to amend, and ordered dismissal of the causes of action. The court of appealaffirmed, holding that no cause of action for bad faith was stated. Since defective pails constituted an inherent vice of the goods themselves, and not damage from an external cause, and since the policy clearly excluded that type of damage, there was no coverage for the loss, and no bad faith in denying coverage on that ground (163 Cal. App. 3d 1055, 1067) .

Blake v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 901, 160 Cal. Rptr. 528 , was an action by the widow of an insured against an insurance company to recover an accidental death benefit provided by the policy (first count) and for damages for emotional distress allegedly caused by the insurer's bad-faith failure to settle her claim (second count). The deceased had been insured under a group life insurance policy written for his employer. The policy provided for basic coverage of $10,000, which the insurer had promptly paid, and an equal amount for accidental death. By its own express terms, however, the policy placed on plaintiff the burden of proving that death was caused by accident and that it was not caused, contributed to, or a consequence of suicide or medical treatment. The coroner had been unable to determine whether death was an accident or suicide, although it was determined that the deceased had probably ingested a lethal dose of barbiturates. Plaintiff neither made any showing to the insurer to support her claim of accidental death, nor did she, her father (who had taken the bottle containing the barbiturates), or her attorney aid the insurer in its ongoing investigation to determine whether death was accidental.

Throughout this investigation, defendant remained willing to pay the claim on discovery of persuasive facts that death was accidental. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff of $10,000 on the first count and $10,000 on the second count. Defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the second count was denied. The court of appeal, after a detailed examination of the evidence, concluded that the insurer's contention that the evidence as a matter of law was insufficient to show that it acted unreasonably in its handling of the claim was irrefutable (99 Cal. App. 3d 901, 921). The court reversed the judgment on the second count with directions to the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on that count, to grant the motion, and to enter judgment for the insurer on that count (99 Cal. App. 3d 901, 926-927). The court said that the gravamen of tortious behavior in so-called "bad faith" cases decided against insurance companies is found in the unreasonable conduct of the carrier measured against its duty arising under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing present in every insurance contract (99 Cal. App. 3d 901, 918) and held that, as a matter of law, there was no evidence that defendant acted unreasonably in withholding payment of the accidental death benefit claim (99 Cal. App. 3d 901, 921, 926) .

[b] Reasonableness Appears as Matter of Law

Strauss v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 , involved an action by one driver against three individuals insured by the same carrier under a business liability policy. At one point the plaintiff offered to settle with the carrier for policy limits in exchange for a release of one (but not all) of the defendant insureds. The carrier refused to settle in this fashion. The plaintiff eventually settled with one of the defendants under his personal auto policy, and received an assignment of bad faith rights. He then sued the insurer for bad faith refusal to settle.

The court of appeal affirmed a trial court's grant of summary judgment. The court held that a carrier is under a duty to consider the interests of all its insureds. To settle a claim against less than all insureds would leave the nonsettling defendants functionally uninsured, in clear violation of those defendant's interests. Consequently, the court held that as a matter of law, it could not have been bad faith for the carrier to have refused to settle (26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1021-1023) . Since there was no triable issue of fact over whether the insurer's handling of the claim was reasonable, a grant of summary judgment was held appropriate (26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1020, 1023) .

In Twaite v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 239, 264 Cal. Rptr. 598 , the insured brought an action against the insurer alleging breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, among other causes of action, based on the insurer's conduct with respect to a claim filed after the insured's vehicle was "totaled." The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for defendant, holding that the insurer's conduct with regard to the claim was "exemplary" and did not constitute bad faith as a matter of law, when the insurer promptly offered to replace the vehicle with a mechanically superior vehicle, and, on the insured's rejection and request for cash, promptly tendered a draft in an amount that the insured did not dispute. The court rejected the insured's contention that the insurer breached a duty to inform the insured of his appraisal rights, because the issue of the cash value did not arise, given that the insured accepted tender of the draft without dispute (216 Cal. App. 3d 239, 252-253) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityPayment Delays & DenialsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingPayments

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.175

§ 120.175 Claim Preempted by ERISA

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S STATE LAW ACTION FOR BREACH OF IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BASED ONHIS/HER ASSERTION OF AN IMPROPERLY PROCESSED CLAIM FOR BENEFITS UNDER AN EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN, IS PREEMPTED BY FEDERAL LAW UNDER ERISA.

ERISA Preempts Insured's State Law Claim. An action brought under state law, asserting the improper processing of a claim for benefits under an employee benefit plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, set forth in Title 29, United States Code, Section 1001 et seq., is preempted by federal law (Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 57, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39, 54 ; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 62, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55, 62) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention of an insurer, in a bad faith action by its insured arising out of an insurance policy under an employee benefits plan subject to regulation by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq.), that the state-law action is preempted by federal law.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should discuss facts showing that the insurance policy is part of an employee benefits plan that is subject to ERISA, and that the state law is not excepted from preemption under the ERISA savings clause [see, e.g., Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 57, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39, 54] . Note that the decision in Pilot Life is fully retroactive in effect, based on the unsettled nature of the law prior to the decision and a plaintiff's consequent inability to reasonably rely on prior law [Faria v. Northwestern Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1129, 1134, 265 Cal. Rptr. 309] .

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition tosuch a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] ERISA Preempts Insured's State Law Claim

In Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39 , the insured injured his back in an employment-related accident, and applied for benefits under a long term disability employee benefit plan, which was established by the employer's purchase of a group insurance policy from the insurer. The insurer allowed the claim, but terminated benefits after two years, and in succeeding years reinstated and terminated them several times. The insured instituted a diversity action against the insurer, alleging tortious breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duties, and fraud in the inducement, seeking to recover policy benefits, general and incidental damages, and punitive damages under Mississippi law. After discovery, defendant moved for summary judgment on theground that the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq.) preempted plaintiff's common law claim for failure to pay benefits on the group insurance policy. The district court granted the motion, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeals reversed, primarily on the basis of the United States Supreme Court's decision in Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (1985) 471 U.S. 724, 105 S. Ct. 2380, 85 L. Ed. 2d 728 , which held that the state law "regulated insurance" and was therefore saved from preemption, pursuant to the ERISA saving clause provision. Defendant brought a petition for writ of certiorari.

The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari, and reversed the decision of the court of appeals, holding that an action brought under state law that asserts improper processing of a claim for benefits under an employee benefit plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq.) is preempted by federal law (481 U.S. 41). The Supreme Court noted that three ERISA provisions relate to preemption: the preemption clause (29 U.S.C.S. § 1144(a)), the savings clause (29 U.S.C.S. § 1144(b)(2)(A)) and the deemer clause (29 U.S.C.S. § 1144(b)(2)(B)). The Supreme Court summarized the mechanics of those provisions as follows:

> (1) If a state law "relates to employee benefit plans," it is preempted.
>
> (2) The savings clause excepts from the preemption clause laws that "regulate insurance."
>
> (3) The deemer clause makes clear that a state law that "purports to regulate insurance" cannot deem an employee benefit plan to be an insurance company.

A common-sense understanding of the phrase "regulates insurance" could not support the argument that the Mississippi law of bad faith fell under the savings clause. Any breach of contract, and not merely breach of an insurance contract, may lead to liability for punitive damages under the state law. Therefore, even though the Mississippi Supreme Court had identified its bad faith law with the insurance industry, the roots of the law were firmly planted in the general principles of Mississippi tort and contract law (481 U.S. 41, 45-51) .

The Supreme Court also applied case law interpreting the phrase "business of insurance" under the McCarran-Ferguson Act (15 U.S.C.S. § 1011 et seq.), which concerns regulation and taxation of the business of insurance (see 15 U.S.C.S. § 1011). Three criteria have been used to determine whether a practice falls under the "business of insurance" for purposes of the act:

> (1) Whether the practice has the effect of transferring or spreading a policyholder's risk;
>
> (2) Whether the practice is an integral part of the policy relationship between the insurer and the insured; and
>
> (3) Whether the practice is limited to entities within the insurance industry.

McCarran-Ferguson Act factors did not support the assertion that the Mississippi law of bad faith "regulates insurance." Unlike the mandated-benefits law at issue in Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (1985) 471 U.S. 724, 105 S. Ct. 2380, 85 L. Ed. 2d 728 , the Mississippi common law of bad faith did not effect a spreading of policy-holder risk. Although the state common law of bad faith may be said to concern "the policy relationship between the insurer and the insured," the connection to the insurer-insured relationship was attenuated at best, and the common law of bad faith did not define the terms of the relationship between the insurer and insured. It declared only that, whatever terms have been agreed on in the insurance contract, a breach of that contract may in certain circumstances allow the policy-holder to obtain punitive damages.

Therefore, the state common law of bad faith was no more "integral" to the insurer-insured relationship than any state's general contract law is integral to a contract made in that state. Mississippi's law of bad faith, even if associated with the insurance industry, developed from general principles of tort and contract law available in any Mississippi breach of contract case (481 U.S. 41, 50-51). The question whether a certain state action is preempted by federal law is one of congressional intent, and express provisions of ERISA are deliberately expansive, and designed to establish pension plan regulation as exclusively a federal concern (481 U.S. 41, 44-46). Moreover, Congress clearly intended that the civil enforcement provisions under ERISA (29 U.S.C.S. § 1132(a)) be the exclusive vehicle for actions by ERISA-plan participants and beneficiaries asserting the improper processing of a claim for benefits, and that allowing state causes of action for claims within the scope of the civil enforcement provision would pose an obstacle to the purposes and objectives of Congress (481 U.S. 41, 51-57) .

In Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 , the insured's employer, a corporation, set up an employee benefit plan, subject to the provisions of ERISA, for its salaried employees. The plan paid benefits to salaried employees disabled by sickness or accident and was insured by defendant insurer. The insured received disability benefits under the terms of the plan, until the insurer's and employer's physicians determined that he was no longer disabled, at which time his benefits were terminated. When the insured refused to return to work, the employer terminated his employment. The insured then sued the employer and the insurer in Michigan state court, asserting improper processing of the claim, wrongful termination of employment, and retaliation for filing a workers' compensation claim. Defendants removed the action to federal court, alleging federal question jurisdiction over the disability benefits claim pursuant to ERISA, and pendent jurisdictionover the remaining claims. The district court found the case properly removable and granted defendants summary judgment on the merits. The federal court of appeals reversed, on the ground that the district court lacked removal jurisdiction, because the insured's complaint stated only state law causes of action subject to the federal defense of ERISA preemption, and removal was precluded if based only on a federal defense.

The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari, and reversed the decision of the court of appeals, holding that, under its decision in Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39 , plaintiff's common law contract and tort claims were preempted by ERISA. The action related to an employee benefit plan, pursuant to 29 U.S.C.S. § 1144(a). The action was based on common law of general application, not a law regulating insurance, and consequently was preempted, and not saved by the ERISA savings clause. Moreover, as a suit by a beneficiary to recover benefits from a covered plan, it was an exclusively federal cause of action (481 U.S. 41, 56-57) . The Supreme Court discussed whether a cause of action is removable if the complaint purports to raise only state law causes of action, and only the defense arises under federal law. It concluded that the federal district court's removal jurisdiction depends not on the obviousness of the preemption defense, but rather on congressional intent. Insofar as the action was necessarily federal in character under the clearly manifested intent of Congress, it was removable to federal court (481 U.S. 58, 63-67) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] ERISA Preempts Insured's State Law Claim

In Peterson v. American Life & Health Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 48 F.3d 404 , the insured's firm, consisting of the insured, his business partner, and their employee, took out a short-term group policy to provide coverage while they secured a long-term policy with another insurer. The other partner and employee subsequently moved their coverage to a long term insurer, but the insured did not do so because he did not pass a required medical exam. He then underwent emergency quintuple coronary bypass surgery. The insurer claimed that expenses related to this procedure were excluded from the plan. The insured filed a complaint against the insurer in California state court alleging various state law claims. The insurer moved to dismiss on the ground that the state law claims were preempted by ERISA.

The court held that the plan was covered by ERISA because it had been established by an employer for the purpose of proving medical insurance for its participants and employees, and the employee was still being provided with such insurance, albeit under another policy. The insured therefore had standing to bring an ERISA action because he was a persondesignated to receive benefits from an ERISA plan (48 F.3d 404, 408-409) . Because he had standing to bring an ERISA action, the insured's state-law claims were preempted by ERISA (48 F.3d 404, 412) . He could not use Ins. Code § 12921.5(b)(7) to require the insurer to provide coverage for costs associated with the particular condition he suffered because this would "reform the nature of his policy and obtain benefits for which he never bargained" (48 F.3d 404, 410) .

In Qualls v. Blue Cross of Cal. (9th Cir. 1994) 22 F.3d 839 , an insured was covered under a small group health policy. After electrocution by a faulty electric fan, he lapsed into a coma and suffered permanent brain damage. The insured, through his guardian ad litem, filed an action to enforce his rights under the policy. Among the causes of action were state law claims. The district court granted summary judgment in favor of the insurer holding, among other things, that the state law claims were preempted by ERISA because the policy was a "plan" for ERISA purposes. The Ninth Circuit agreed. The individual policy was subject to employer contributions, and coverage was free and automatic for all full time employees. This was sufficient to bring the policy within ERISA (22 F.3d 839, 843-844) . Moreover, the fact that the insured was no longer employed by the employer was irrelevant. If the policy was governed by ERISA during the insured's employment, it continued to be governed by ERISA once he left (22 F.3d 839, 843 n.4).

In Spain v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 11 F.3d 129 , the wife and daughter of an employee benefit plan participant sued the plan administrator for the wrongful death of the participant. After the participant was diagnosed with cancer, the plan administrator first denied coverage for a bone marrow transplant, then later approved the procedure. The participant died in spite of receiving the transplant, and his wife and daughter sued for common law wrongful death arising out of negligent administration of the plan, alleging that the initial denial of the procedure led to the participant's death. Stating that ERISA's preemption clause is deliberately expansive, and following Pilot Life Ins. Co v. Dedeaux, 481 U.S. 41, 45-46 , the Ninth Circuit affirmed that the state common law action was preempted by federal law because, even though no benefits were sought under the plan, the claim arose from the negligent administration of benefits claims (11 F.3d 129, 131-132).

In Kanne v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 867 F.2d 489 , an insured under a group health insurance policy, which he purchased through his employer, sued his insurer for breach of contract, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, and violation of Ins. Code § 790.03(h)(3) (before the effective date of Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 297-305, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 , discussed in § 120.230, which prospectively abrogated a privatestatutory cause of action under that section). The district court awarded compensatory and punitive damages, but the Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that under the Supreme Court's holdings in Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39 , and Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 , the insured's state common-law claims arising out of delay in payment were claims for improper processing and therefore were preempted by ERISA (867 F.2d 489, 491-493) . The Ninth Circuit also held the statutory claim under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)(3) preempted under Pilot Life (867 F.2d 489, 493-494) .

In Hughes v. Blue Cross of N. Cal. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 832, 263 Cal. Rptr. 850 (in which opening appellate briefs were filed prior to the decision in Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39), the defendant insurer raised the issue of preemption by ERISA for the first time on appeal. The court of appeal noted that although a question of federal subject-matter jurisdiction involves a choice of forum, and is a nonwaivable issue, the case before it did not involve subject-matter jurisdiction. Subject-matter jurisdiction questions arise when federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction, for example, in bankruptcy and patent law. Inasmuch as this case concerned concurrent state and federal jurisdiction, based on the denial of a claim for benefits under a group insurance policy, it presented a question of choice of law, a waivable issue at trial, rather than choice of forum. After weighing the circumstances of the case, including the insured's lack of an opportunity to refute an ERISA defense at trial, the court of appeal concluded that the insurer had waived that issue at trial, and also refused to remand the matter for a hearing on that issue, noting an absence of precedent to remand a case for further hearing to determine the possible application of a new legal theory not raised in the trial court (215 Cal. App. 3d 832, 849-859) .

In Lambert v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 456, 259 Cal. Rptr. 398 , an insured under a group insurance plan secured by his stepfather's employer brought an action against the insurer stating causes of action for common-law bad faith and violation of Ins. Code § 790.03(h), arising from the denial of insurance benefits. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment on the ground that the action was preempted by ERISA. The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting plaintiff's contention that triable issues of fact existed regarding whether the group insurance plan was an employee welfare benefit plan under 29 U.S.C.S. § 1002(1), and holding that factors such as the employer's payment of policy premiums and other involvement, and its administration of the plan, demonstrated the existence of an ERISA plan as a matter of law (211 Cal. App. 3d 456, 463-465) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawDisability InsuranceGeneral OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)General OverviewPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)Federal PreemptionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.176

§ 120.176 Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant By Failing to Investigate Loss That Was Not Covered

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER DID NOT BREACH THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING WHEN IT ALLEGEDLY FAILED TO INVESTIGATE A FIRST-PARTY CLAIM, BECAUSE AT NO TIME DID THE POLICY COVER THE CLAIM.

Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant By Failing to Investigate Loss That Was Not Covered. In the context of first-party claims, the insurer's duty to investigate is an auxiliary duty that arises as a consequence of the insurer's primary duty to promptly indemnify a covered loss. When this primary duty is absent, such as when there is no coverage, the auxiliary duty to investigate is likewise absent (McMillin Scripps N. P'ship v. Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 247 ; Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1136, 1153, 271 Cal. Rptr. 246, 256) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that an insurer's alleged failure to adequately investigate the insured's claim, when the insurer contends that the claim ultimately was found to be outside policy.

These points and authorities may be submitted in a first-party bad faith action based in whole or in part on an insurer's alleged failure to adequately investigate the insured's claim, when the insurer contends that the claim ultimately was found to be outside policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts to demonstrate that the policy does not provide coverage for the insured's claim. If the insurer is moving for summary judgment, to establish that the claim was not covered, the moving party should attach a copy of the policy as an exhibit to the moving papers, along with any other relevant materials, such as a judgment for the insurer in a prior action on the claim.

This form should be used only in connection with a first-party claim--that is, a claim by an insured against the insurer arising out of injuries or damages suffered directly by the insured. Typically, first-party claims arise under property and casualty insurance policies or health insurance policies.

These points and authorities should never be used in connection with a third-party claim--that is, a claim under a liability insurance policy arising out of damages to the person or property of another caused by the insured. As discussed in § 120.176[3][a], the nature of liability policies completely differs, in that the terms of the policies typically require the insurer to defend (and therefore investigate) even false, groundless, or fraudulent claims against the insured. Thus, in the third party contest the insurer often has a duty to investigate a claim even when the claim ultimately proves groundless, and the issues raised in this form therefore have no application.

Counsel should also bear in mind that when coverage does in fact exist, the failure to investigate a claim may properly form the basis for a bad faith complaint. When coverage does exist, the insurer has a duty to pay the insured's claim promptly, and the lack of proper investigation is relevant to the issue of the insurer's bad faith [McMillin Scripps N. P'ship v. Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222 ; 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 247 ; see also Opsal v. United Services Auto. Assn. (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1197, 1205, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352 (refusal to pay benefits must be unreasonable)].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supportedby cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant By Failing to Investigate Loss That Was Not Covered

In McMillin Scripps N. P'ship v. Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , a property owner incurred significant investigation costs to determine the source of leaking gasoline on his property. Ultimately, it was determined that his insurance did not cover this type of loss. Nevertheless, he sued his property insurance carrier, alleging that the insurer breached the insurance contract by failing to pay for the investigation costs. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the carrier.

The Court of Appeal affirmed, predicating its holding on several grounds. First, the policy did not expressly provide for recoupment of investigative costs if coverage was found to be nonexistent (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220) . Second, the court found no basis for any implied right to payment of investigation costs. While courts are free to find implied rights in contracts, those rights must be closely connected to the express provisions of the contract (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220) . In this case, the insurance policypromised only to pay for enumerated casualty losses (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220) . In contrast, a liability policy provides "radically different" benefits; typically, it requires an insurer to defend any suit against the insured, regardless of whether the suit is groundless, false, or fraudulent. From this express duty to defend, courts have implied a duty to provide a defense whenever the insurer's investigation discloses a potentially covered claim (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1220-1221 , citing Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 267, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168). The court concluded that the "sharp differences between first and third party polic[i]es" prevented it from creating any new implied right to payment for investigation costs in first-party policies. Such a right would, in effect, give first party policies a fundamental characteristic of liability policies: payment not only for covered casualties, but also for the cost of resolving a dispute (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1221) .

Moreover, the court concluded that failure to investigate the claim did not amount to a breach of the contract of good faith and fair dealing. Relying on Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1136, 1153, 271 Cal. Rptr. 246, 256 , the court concluded that the covenant is implied as a "supplement" to the express contractual covenants to prevent a party from engaging in conduct that frustrates the other party's primary right to benefits under the contract. Absent such a right, however, the court concluded that the "auxiliary" implied covenant "nothing upon which to act as a supplement, and should not be endowed with an existence independent of its contractual underpinnings" (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222) .

The court did suggest, however, that under unusual circumstances an insurer might still be liable for tortious bad faith despite the fact that the policy did not provide coverage. For instance, an intentional course of conduct designed to impede the insured's claim and mislead the insured as to the available coverage might amount to bad faith in any event (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222-1223 citing out-of-state authority). The court noted that while Ins. Code § 790.03(h)(3) does require prompt investigation of all claims, that statute does not create any private right of action and cannot be privately enforced by the insured (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1221-1222 , citing Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins.

Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 307, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58).

In Love v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1136, 271 Cal. Rptr. 246 , an insured submitted a claim that was denied. Five years later the claim was resubmitted, and again denied. A first-party bad faith action was filed, based on breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. One of the alleged bases for breach of the covenant was a failure to investigate. The trial court granted summary judgment dismissing the case.

The Court of Appeal affirmed. It held that the second claim was not filed in a timely fashion, so no benefits were due under the policy. The duty to investigate was only ancillary to the primary duty to pay benefits. Since the primary duty did not exist, the duty to investigate was likewise nonexistent (221 Cal. App. 3d 1136, 1153) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.177

§ 120.177 Insurer's Precontractual Conduct Does Not Support Bad Faith Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER DID NOT BREACH THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING, BECAUSE ALLEGED CONDUCT OF INSURER OCCURRED BEFORE THE CONTRACT WAS FORMED.

Insurer's Precontractual Conduct Not Actionable. Precontractual conduct cannot support a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Hess v. Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 941, 945, 235 Cal. Rptr. 715).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that the alleged conduct occurred prior to the formation of the insurance contract.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should set forth the effective date of the insurance contract, and show that the insurer's conduct occurred prior to that date.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff insured, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Precontractual Conduct Not Actionable

In Hess v. Transamerica Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 941, 235 Cal. Rptr. 715 , an individual sought "key person" coverage from defendant's predecessor insurance company as a condition for loan approval on behalf of a company of which she was the sole shareholder, chief executive officer, and chairperson of the board. After examining her,the insurer's doctor discovered that she had higher than normal blood pressure. The insurer then agreed to issue the policy only on the condition that she and the company (plaintiffs) pay additional monthly premiums. Several years later, at plaintiffs' urging, the insurer reviewed her condition, and lowered the premium payment. Plaintiffs then brought an action against the successor insurance company, seeking reformation of the contract and return of excess premium payments, as well as damages for breach of its duty of good faith. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a bad-faith action does not arise prior to the existence of a contractual relationship between the contracting parties (190 Cal. App. 3d 941, 945) . The court rejected plaintiffs' argument that defendant had a duty of good faith and fair dealing during the period prior to the inception of the contract (190 Cal.

App. 3d 941, 944-945) . An insured's initial decision to obtain insurance and the corresponding decision of an insurer to offer coverage remain, at least at the inception of the contract, an arm's length transaction governed by traditional standards of freedom of contract. Consequently, precontractual conduct in evaluating the health of an applicant for insurance is not conduct that will support a cause of action for bad faith, although that conduct may be actionable under theories of fraud or fraudulent inducement (190 Cal. App. 3d 941, 945) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityElements of Bad FaithInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.178

§ 120.178 "Bad Faith" Action Is Actually Fire Policy Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S CLAIM IS BARRED BY INSURANCE CODE SECTION 2071, BECAUSE THE ACTION IS A "TRANSPARENT ATTEMPT TO RECOVER ON THE POLICY" AND INSURED FAILED TO COMMENCE SUIT WITHIN ONE YEAR OF ACCRUAL.

A. Insured's Claim Is Barred by Statute of Limitations. No suit or action on a fire insurance policy for the recovery of any claim is sustainable in any court of law or equity unless all the requirements of the policy have been complied with, and unless commenced within 12 months next after inception of the loss (Ins. Code § 2071; Prieto v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1192, 275 Cal. Rptr. 362).

B. So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Fire Insurance Policy. In actions involving a fire insurance policy, the12-month limitation period of Insurance Code Section 2071 governs a bad-faith claim as well as a contractual claim based on failure to pay benefits under the policy, when the bad-faith claim is, in essence, an action on the policy, and an attempt to recover policy benefits (Prieto v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1192-1196, 275 Cal. Rptr. 362).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that the claim denominated as a bad faith claim is actually a claim on the fire insurance policy, and is therefore subject to the one-year statute of limitations of Ins. Code § 2071.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting a general demurrer to a complaint, in a memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that plaintiff failed to file a breach-of-contract action to recover benefits under the policy within the statutory 12-month limitation period, and is actually attempting to circumvent the statute by relabelling a contract cause of action as a bad-faith claim [see, e.g., Abari v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 530, 536, 252 Cal. Rptr. 565 (causes of action for bad faith and unfair practices sought damages in amount equal to policy benefits plus interest)].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc.§ 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.189 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Claim Is Barred by Statute of Limitations

The factual and procedural background of Prieto v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 275 Cal. Rptr. 362 , is discussed in § 120.178[3][b]. The court noted that Ins. Code § 2071 prescribes as part of the standard form for fire insurance policies in California the following limitation of action: "No suit or action on this policy for the recovery of any claim shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity unless all the requirements of this policy shall have been complied with, and unless commenced within 12 months next after inception of the loss" (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1192) . However, the court also stated that the rules of flexible accrual and equitable tolling set forth in Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 provides policyholders under Ins. Code § 2071 with protections similar to those granted under the common law by the case of Frazier v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 90, 103, 214 Cal. Rptr. 883 . Therefore, an insured who makes a timely claim willhave a right to wait until denial of the claim before the statute begins running again, but the statute will have commenced running, as its terms require, on inception of the loss. The court in Prieto therefore concluded that plaintiff's bad-faith cause of action based on failure to pay benefits, and the emotional distress cause, are governed by the one-year limitation prescribed by Ins. Code § 2071 for actions on the policy. However, the court reversed the order of dismissal for further determination, as required under Prudential, regarding application of its notification rules to the facts: specifically, whether plaintiffs gave notice immediately after the loss as required (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1196-1197).

[b] So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Fire Insurance Policy

In Prieto v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 275 Cal. Rptr. 362 , the insureds under a fire insurance policy brought an action against the insurer primarily for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. After a fire destroyed the business insured under the policy, plaintiffs demanded benefits under it. The insurer ultimately mailed plaintiffs a letter refusing to pay any sums under the policy, on the sole ground that they suspected the plaintiffs set the fire intentionally. Plaintiffs filed suit almost one year later, alleging that despite its actual or constructive knowledge that the fire was accidental, the insurer refused to pay any benefits or sums under the policy, in violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Plaintiffs claimed losses including indebtedness, loss of business income, and emotional distress; and sought punitive damages. Plaintiffs also stated a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress against the insurer as well as the company that investigated the claim, based on the same facts, and again sought punitive damages. Both defendants demurred generally to the complaint. The insurer's demurrer was based primarily on the one-year limitation period for actions on fire insurance policies, prescribed by Ins. Code § 2071. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend, and dismissed. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal agreed that the action was barred by Ins. Code § 2071, but reversed with directions to grant plaintiffs leave to amend to establish, if possible, that the action was in fact filed within the one-year limitation period (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1196-1197) . The court stated that the primary issue on appeal is whether the provision applies to plaintiffs' bad faith and emotional distress causes of action, which were commenced more than 12 months after the fire that initiated plaintiffs' loss. Defendants cited several cases strongly indicating that plaintiffs' claims were "on the policy" and hence covered by the statute. In Lawrence v. Western Mut. Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 565, 571-573, 575, 251 Cal. Rptr. 319 , the court of appeal held that "inception of the loss"occurs at the time of the damage or of its discovery, not when plaintiff later becomes aware of his or her legal rights. Therefore, it held that plaintiff's claim for recovery under the policy was time-barred. It also held that the additional tortious bad-faith claim, alleging misrepresentations in the policy, was barred as well because it related to the "complete denial of the claim on the underlying policy" and was "fundamentally a claim on the policy" (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1192-1193) . In Abari v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 530, 536, 252 Cal. Rptr. 565 , the court of appeal affirmed a demurrer based on the limitation under Ins. Code § 2071 when the facts showed the loss occurred and was discovered well more than a year before the suit. The court also held that plaintiff's concurrent causes of action for bad faith and unfair insurance practices were as vulnerable under the limitation as the breach of contract claim. The court in Abari rejected plaintiff's argument that the cause of action were not "on the policy," because plaintiff sought by them to recover essentially the same damages; it stated that the bad faith and related claims were "a transparent attempt to recover on the policy." In addition, the court in Magnolia Square Homeowners Assn. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1063, 271 Cal. Rptr. 1 , affirmed a declaratory judgment that an insurer had no duty to indemnify because the limitation under Ins. Code § 2071 had expired before suit. The court in Magnolia also affirmed dismissal of the insured's cross complaint for bad faith and breach of fiduciary and statutory duties, because "the essence of those claims is an attempt to recover damages for failure to provide benefits under subject contract of insurance."

The court in the instant case rejected plaintiff's reliance on one case involving a fire insurance policy, in which an insured's claims for bad faith, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and fraud were held not subject to the limitation period under the statute [see Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 49, 147 Cal. Rptr. 565] . That case was held to be distinguishable, factually and legally, because the alleged breaches of covenant derived from activities that occurred long after the fire loss and related to the repair and restoration of the insureds' home. Although the claims arose out of the contractual relationship, the damages were not attributable to a risk covered by the policy, and hence the action was not one "on the policy." For the same reason, the statute did not bar the emotional distress claim based on the same facts [225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1193] . The court in Prieto concluded that case is distinguishable from the instant case because it was based on a subsequent event that occurred after the initial policy coverage was triggered. Plaintiff also relied on Frazier v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 90, 103, 214 Cal. Rptr. 883 , a case based on a life-insurance policy, in which the insurer immediately paid the basic death benefit, but investigated the possibility of the decedent's suicide. In Frazier, although the court found the two-year policy limitation period applicable to the insured's bad-faith claim, it concludedthat the bad-faith claim was timely filed, despite the fact that the contract claim was untimely, because the bad-faith cause of action did not accrue until after formal denial of the claim.

Therefore, Frazier is distinguishable because it involved a subsequent event, that is, the bad-faith claim arose after the insurer paid on the policy, based on the insurer's unsatisfactory conduct after that point in time. In addition, the court in Prieto noted, the claim in Frazier involved a policy limitation that did not (apparently) derive from statutory prescription, in that it concerned a life insurance policy, rather than a fire insurance policy, which is governed by the limitation provision of Ins. Code § 2071 (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1194). However, the court stated, Frazier is relevant to the instant case because the insurer's alleged misconduct involved breach of a primary obligation to pay policy benefits (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1194-1195). Frazier found, however, that the cause of action did not accrue until the insurer refused to pay. The court in Prieto observed that analytical approach would violate Ins. Code § 2071 if applied to a claim governed by that provision, because the statute provides that claims for policy benefits regarding covered losses accrue on inception of the loss. The court further recognized that the obligation to pay benefits due under the policy also constitutes a component of the duty of good faith and fair dealing imposed by law on insurers.

However, the court found no authority for the proposition that plaintiff's election to seek redress under the implied covenant rather than the express contract should nullify the legislatively prescribed limitation for actions that are "on the policy." The court expressed the opinion that the California Supreme Court, in Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 387, 798 P.2d 1230 supported its conclusion that Ins. Code § 2071 applies to plaintiffs' bad faith and related causes of action. In Prudential, the Court defined "inception of the loss" with respect to the insured's duty to notify the insurer, which bears on the accrual of the limitations period; and also established equitable tolling principles with regard to that statute. In the course of that decision, the Court specifically endorsed the decisions in Lawrence and Abari, including Abari's holding that Ins. Code § 2071 applied to the bad-faith claims asserted in that case. Although implying that some bad-faith suits might survive the limitation, the Court cited Abari to the effect that the rule that the one-year suit provision does not apply to bad-faith suits is inapplicable when the insured's bad-faith action is a "transparent attempt to recover on the policy" notwithstanding the insured's failure to commence suit within one year of accrual (225 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1195) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] So-Called "Bad Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Fire Insurance Policy

In Jang v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 917 , the purchaser and former mortgage-holder of property damaged in a fire cross-complained against the insurance company that had issued the relevant fire insurance on that property. This action, which also involved the former owners and the former owners' attorneys, followed a settlement agreement concerning the appropriate amount of fire insurance benefits. The cross-complaint alleged civil conspiracy and bad faith, based on the disputed amount of benefits offered by the insurer. The insurer was awarded summary judgment against the purchaser on the ground that the limitations period had expired, based on the one-year period designated by Ins. Code § 2071. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that if the gravamen of a bad faith action pertains to the insurer's handling of the initial claim, the cause of action is governed by the policy's limitations period, pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071 (80 Cal. App. 4th 1291, 1303-1304) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.179

§ 120.179 Property and Multi-Peril Policy Action Is Barred by Policy Limitations Clause

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S CLAIM IS BARRED BY INSURANCE CODE SECTION 2071, BECAUSE THE ACTION IS A "TRANSPARENT ATTEMPT TO RECOVER ON THE POLICY" AND INSURED FAILED TO COMMENCE SUIT WITHIN ONE YEAR OF ACCRUAL.

A. Insured's Claim Is Barred by Policy Limitations Clause Based on Ins. Code § 2071. A limitations clause in a property and multi-peril policy taken word for word from Insurance Code Section 2071 is a valid provision, and any action not brought within the limitations period is barred, unless the limitations clause was inapplicable due to estoppel or waiver (Velasquez v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 717-718, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1).

B. So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Underlying Policy. In actions involving a property and multi-peril policy, a limitations clause, based on Insurance Code Section 2071, appliesto a bad-faith claim based on the denial of a claim in the underlying policy when none of the actions alleged by plaintiffs as bad faith relate to events subsequent to initial policy coverage so as to convert their action from one on the policy to one which is not. The two claims are inextricably bound (Velasquez v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 722, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that the claim denominated a bad faith claim is actually a claim on the property and multi-peril policy, and is therefore subject to the one-year statute of limitations of Ins. Code § 2071.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting a general demurrer to a complaint, in a memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to the limitations clause in the property and multi-peril policy, showing that the clause is taken word for word from Ins. Code § 2071.

- Identify the last date under the clause that the complaint must be filed.

- Identify the date the complaint was actually filed.

- Point out that the date was filed after the expiration of the limitation period and, consequently, the insurer is barred from bringing his or her claim.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background regarding the insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing, including related forms of complaint, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.189 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Claim Is Barred by Policy Limitations Clause Based on Ins. Code § 2071

In Velasquez v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 712 , the insureds under a property and multi-peril policy filed a complaint alleging causes of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and breach of statutory duties. Plaintiffs filed a claim with the insurer after a fire damaged a portion of an apartment building they owned The insurer first sent a reservation of rights letter to plaintiffs indicating that the policy had been canceled more than six months prior to the fire but that they would investigate the occurrence "to determin[e] the facts of the loss and the coverage issue." Subsequently, the insurer sent plaintiffs a letter denying their claim on the ground that the policy had been canceled. Plaintiffs' counsel sent a letter to insurer challenging the denial of coverage on the ground that plaintiffs had never received either a cancellation notice or a refund check. Counsel's letter warned that unless documentation was provided to establish cancellation, plaintiffs would file "a bad faith lawsuit" against insurers (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 716). Two years after the denial of their claim, plaintiffs filed a complaint against insurers alleging causes of action for "breach of fair dealing and good faith" and "breach of statutory duties," the latter being violations of Ins. Code § 790.03(h). The conduct that the complaint alleged as the basis for the action was the insurer's denial of the claims on the ground that the policy was canceled for nonpayment of premiums. Plaintiffs sought damages under the policy, plus interest, as well as other compensatory and punitive damages.

Insurer's amended answer to the complaint raised a number of affirmative defenses, including a defense based on the limitations clause contained in the insurance policy. The clause stated, "No suit or action on this policy for the recovery of any claim shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity unless all requirements of the policy shall have been complied with, and unless commenced within twelve months next after inception of the loss." This clause is taken word for word from Ins. Code § 2071, which sets forth the standard form for fire insurance policies. The insurer moved for summary judgment, arguing that the action was barred by the limitations clause. The trial court granted the motion (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 717) .

The court of appeal affirmed the summary judgment, stating that because the plaintiffs did not file their action until more than two years after the occurrence of the loss and two years after denial of their claim, it was barred by the limitations clause, unless the limitations clause was inapplicable due to estoppel or waiver. Plaintiffs had contended that the insurer's cancellation of the policy voided the limitations provision, precluding insurer's reliance on it for purposes of summary judgment. However, plaintiffs' entire action rested on the premise that the policy was in effect at the time of the loss, notwithstanding insurer's assertions to the contrary. As the plaintiffs' complaint asserted the validity of the policy, it was perfectly proper for the insurer to move for summary judgment on the grounds that the action was barred by the policy's limitations clause (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 718) . Plaintiffs further argued that if the limitations clause applied, the insurer waived its right to assert it by purportedly canceling the policy. However, the insurer's reservation letter expressly reserved to it "its rights under the law and under the insurance policy." The court of appeal concluded that the fact that the limitations period was not raised in insurer's subsequent denial letter did not constitute a waiver (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 722) . Plaintiffs also argued that by canceling the contract, insurer was estopped to raise the limitations clause. However, plaintiffs never accepted the cancellation and subsequent denial of benefits as valid, so the court concluded that there was no detrimental reliance, and hence, no estoppel (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 723) .

[b] So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Underlying Policy

The factual background of Velasquez v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , is discussed in § 120.179[3][a]. The plaintiffs sought to avoid the limitations bar in the policy by contending that such limitations apply only to bad-faith actions that are "on the policy." They maintained that their actions for "breach of fair dealing and good faith" and "breach of statutory duties" were not "on the policy" and were therefore exempt from the policy limitations clause. Plaintiffs reliedon Frazier v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 90, 103-104, 214 Cal. Rptr. 883 , and Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 147 Cal. Rptr. 565 . In both cases a limitations clause similar to the one in the instant case was held not to bar bad-faith actions alleging conduct by the insurer occurring after the initial policy coverage. The insurer in the instant case relied on Lawrence v. Western Mut. Ins. Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 565, 251 Cal. Rptr. 319 , and Abari v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 530, 252 Cal. Rptr. 565 , which both held that if the bad-faith action is based on allegations relating to the handling of a claim or the manner in which it is processed, it is an action "on the policy" and, therefore, subject to the limitations bar.

The court of appeal found that the plaintiffs' action here more closely fit the cases relied on by the insurer, and that the policy's limitations clause applied (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 719) . Further, after recognizing that the Lawrence and Abari decisions evince a trend by courts of appeal to limit the exemption from the limitations clauses set forth in Murphy and Frazier to the facts of those cases, the court of appeal concluded that, if denial of the claim in the first instance is the alleged bad faith and the insured seeks policy benefits, the bad-faith action is on the policy and the limitations provision applies (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 721) . In comparing the instant case to Abari, the court of appeal said that although plaintiffs sought compensatory and punitive damages as well as damages under the policy, plus interest (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 717) , the damages related solely to their allegations of denial of their claim and wrongful cancellation and not to any additional acts by insurer. The two claims are inextricably bound. None of the actions alleged by plaintiffs as bad faith related to events subsequent to initial policy coverage that would convert their action from one "on the policy" to one that is not (1 Cal. App. 4th 712, 722) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.180

§ 120.180 Defensive Pleading Was Absolutely Privileged

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S _____ [identify defensive pleading, e.g., ANSWER SETTING FORTH A GENERAL DENIAL AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES] CANNOT BE THE BASIS FOR AN ACTION FOR DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF THE DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BECAUSE A DEFENSIVE PLEADING IS ABSOLUTELY PRIVILEGED UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 47(b) AS A PUBLICATION MADE IN A JUDICIAL PROCEEDING.

Defensive Pleading Is Absolutely Privileged. Defensive pleadings in a lawsuit are absolutely privileged under Civil Code Section 47(b) as communications made in the course of a judicial proceeding and as such cannot be used as the basis for allegations of ongoing bad faith (Civ. Code § 47(b); California Physicians' Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1330, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith. The basis for these points and authorities is that defensive pleadings in a lawsuit are absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b) as communications made in the course of a judicial proceeding and as such cannot be used as the basis for allegations of ongoing bad faith.

This form may be used, for example, in a case in which an insured amends his or her complaint to allege bad faith after a defendant insurer's has filed its answer interposing a general denial and alleging certain affirmative defenses [see, e.g., California Physicians' Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1330, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (discussed in § 120.180[3][a])].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.170[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of theaffiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.186 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defensive Pleading Is Absolutely Privileged

In California Physicians' Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 , plaintiff father purchased from defendant a medical health-coverage insurance policy for the care of his minor son. During the period that the policy was in effect, the son suffered an injury and required medical treatment. Although properly notified of the claim, defendant failed to pay in accordance with the terms of the policy. Plaintiff's amended complaint alleged a variety of tort causes of action for damages based on this failure to pay. Defendant answered with a general denial and several specific affirmative defenses. Plaintiff then sought and obtained permission to file, and filed, a supplemental complaint seeking damages for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing and for the intentional infliction of emotional distress. The genesis of these additional damages actions was defendant's filing of its general denial and affirmative defenses. As examples of defendant's allegedly tortious pleading, the supplemental complaint pointed to defendant's denial of agency by the person who sold the policy, defendant's assertions that the father had no standing as plaintiff, that the father made misrepresentations in purchasing the policy, that plaintiffs acted negligently and improperly, and that the trial court lacked jurisdiction over the claim by reason of ERISA.

Defendant filed a general demurrer to the supplemental complaint. After full briefing and oral argument, the court took the demurrer under submission and subsequently issued a written order overruling the demurrer. The court ruled that an insurer's duty to act in good faith continues after litigation is filed, that the interposition of defenses that are patently untenable would constitute bad faith, and that it would be inappropriate to attempt to determine which, if any, defenses fit this category at the demurrer stage. Defendant then sought review of the trial court's action by extraordinary writ.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate requiring the trial court to sustain defendant's demurrer. The court of appeal held that the answer, including the general denial and the affirmative defenses, constituted defensive pleading and as such was an absolutely privileged communication under Civ. Code § 47(b). The court explained that, because of the privilege, defensive pleading, even though allegedly false, interposed in bad faith, or even asserted for inappropriate purposes, cannot be used as the basis for allegations of ongoing bad faith (9 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1330) . The court also distinguished the facts of the instant case from those in White v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 870, 221 Cal. Rptr. 509, 710 P.2d 309 , in which the Supreme Court distinguished between a cause of action based squarely on a privileged communication (communication inadmissible) and one based on an underlying course of conduct evidenced by the communication (communication admissible). In the instant case, the court noted that plaintiffs sought to utilize the pleading as the basis for a claim of bad faith, rather than only as evidence of prior bad faith (9 Cal. App. 4th 1321, 1327, 1330) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

110 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.181

[Reserved]

§ 120.181[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.182

§ 120.182 Insurer Acted Unreasonably by Denying or Delaying Benefit Payments

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED BREACHED THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING WHEN IT ACTED UNREASONABLY IN _____ [DENYING or DELAYING] PAYMENT OF BENEFITS UNDER THE POLICY.

A. Insurer Breached Covenant of Good Faith. There is, in every insurance contract, an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and this is so whether the policy purchased is a third-party(liability) policy or a first-party (casualty) policy (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 818, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 910, 920, 148 Cal. Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 ; Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 460-461, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 ; Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 575, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032).

B. Insurer Failed to Consider Insured's Interests. The covenant of good faith requires that each contracting party refrain from doing anything to injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement, and, for the insurer to fulfill its obligation, it must give at least as much consideration to the insured's interests as it does to its own (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 818-819, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 460, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103).

C. Insurer is Liable for Failing to Pay Loss. When an insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 818, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 460, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 ; Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 575, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that the insurer handled the insured's claim in a reasonable manner.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, in an action against a first party (casualty) insurer for damages for breach of the implied covenant of good faith in denying or delaying payment of benefits, it may be used by a plaintiff insured to oppose a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c in which the insurer contends that its handling of the insured's claim was reasonable as a matter of law. In this instance, the grounds of opposition are:

- The covenant of good faith and fair dealing applies to casualty policies, or to the casualty provisions of a liability policy, as well as to liability policies,

- Whether defendant acted unreasonably in denying or delaying benefit payments under its policy is a material fact, and

- There are triable issues with respect to this fact.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.174.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.186 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background related to an insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing, including related forms of complaint, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Covenant of Good Faith

The factual background of Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In Egan, the Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the insured in part and reversed in part. The Court pointed out that in addition to the duties imposed on contracting parties by the express terms of their agreement, the law implies in every contract a covenant of good faith and fair dealing and that the precise nature and extent of the duty imposed by the implied promise will depend on the contractual purpose. With respect to insurance policies, the Court said that the implied covenant imposes obligations not only as to claims by a third party (liability policies) but also as to those by the insured (first party, or casualty policies) and that, in both contexts, the obligations of the insurer are merely two different aspects of the same duty (24 Cal. 3d 809, 818) .

Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 910, 148 Cal. Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 , was an action by an insured for compensatory and punitive damages against an insurer for bad-faith failure to pay uninsured motorist benefits under an automobile insurance policy in which plaintiff was the named insured. Plaintiff was seriously injured in an intersection accident when the car in which she was riding and which was being driven by her husband was, while making a left turn, hit broadside by an uninsured motorist. Plaintiff's policy included a medical payment provision with a $5,000 limit and an uninsured motorist provision with a $15,000 limit. Some three months after the accident, defendant paid $5,000 pursuant to the medical payment coverage but declined to pay the policy limit of $15,000 under the uninsured motorist coverage on the ground, among others, that the uninsured motorist coverage was to be decreased by the amount paid under the medical coverage. Almost three years after the accident, an arbitrator rendered a decision in plaintiff's favor on the issue of liability and reserved his decision on the question of offset. At the request of plaintiff's attorney, defendant then paid the first $10,000 and six months later when the arbitrator issued his decision on the question of offset onfavor of plaintiff, it paid the final $5,000. Plaintiff then sued the insurer for damages for its prior bad faith in failing to pay the benefits. Plaintiff died from cancer during the pendency of the action and her husband, as administrator of her estate, was substituted as plaintiff.

At trial, plaintiff proved compensatory damages of about $10,000 and that the insurer had gross assets of some $765 million, net assets of approximately $211 million, and a net income of nearly $45 million. The jury returned an undifferentiated verdict in plaintiff's favor for $1,548,211.35. The insurer's motion for new trial was denied on plaintiff's agreeing to remit all but $749,011.48 and judgment was entered accordingly. Defendant appealed from the judgment and plaintiff filed a cross appeal.

The Supreme Court affirmed on the ground that there was substantial evidence in the record of defendant's bad faith (21 Cal. 3d 910, 921-922) . The Court said that in Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , it had made it clear that the duty of an insurer to accept reasonable settlements of third-party claims against its insured is but one aspect of its obligation, imposed by law, to act fairly and in good faith in discharging its contractual responsibilities to its insured and that another aspect of that obligation is the duty of the insurer to act fairly and in good faith in handling claims submitted by its insured, which it characterized as a duty not to withhold unreasonably payments due under a policy. Thus, when an insurer fails to deal fairly and in good faith with its insured by refusing, without proper cause, to compensate its insured for a loss covered by the policy, such conduct may give rise to a cause of action in tort for breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (21 Cal. 3d 910, 920) .

Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 , was an action by an insured against an insurer under a hospital and surgical policy in which plaintiff sought both a declaration that defendant was liable under the policy and damages for physical and mental distress. The policy provided that defendant would pay the cost of hospital care, including surgeon's fees, up to a limit of $5,000 with $100 deductible. It contained an exclusion for losses caused by injuries for which compensation was payable under any workers' compensation law. While the policy was in effect, plaintiff was seriously injured and ultimately incurred $6,900 in medical charges. Defendant insurer refused to make any payments under the policy because plaintiff had filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits. The company insisted that there could be no final determination as to its liability under the policy until the workers' compensation proceeding was concluded.

At the same time, the workers' compensation carrier denied liability because of defendant's questionable employment status. The compensation aspect was ultimately determined nearly two years after the injurywhen a compromise and release was approved by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, settling the case for $3,700. Of this recovery, $1,000 was in payment of hospital bills through a lien by one hospital. The balance of $5,800 in hospital bills remained unpaid. Defendant denied liability under the policy on the ground that the $3,700 paid under the compensation settlement rendered the exclusion applicable. The trial court sitting without a jury determined in the declaratory relief count that the policy was ambiguous and therefore defendant was obligated under the policy to pay $4,900 of plaintiff's medical costs ($5,000 less $100 deductible).

A jury found for plaintiff on the second cause of action and awarded $75,000 compensatory damages and $500,000 punitive damages. Defendant's motion for a new trial on the grounds of insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict, error in law, and excessive damages was granted. Plaintiff appealed from the order granting the new trial and defendant cross appealed from the judgment. The Supreme Court reversed the order granting a new trial insofar as it granted a new trial on defendant's liability for compensatory damages and the amount of compensatory damages and affirmed it in all other respects. On the cross appeal, the Court affirmed the judgment insofar as it awarded $75,000 in compensatory damages and $4,900 as benefits under the policy. The Supreme Court, in holding the insurer liable, stated that the covenant of good faith and fair dealing applies to cases in which the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of the insured (11 Cal. 3d 452, 460-461) .

The factual background of Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal with respect to defendant insurance companies, the Supreme Court, after reviewing the holdings in several cases, said that it was manifest that a common legal principle underlay all of those decisions; namely, that in every insurance contract there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and that the duty to so act is imminent in the contract whether the insurance company is attending to the claims of third persons against the insured of the claim of the insured itself (9 Cal. 3d 566, 575) .

[b] Insurer Failed to Consider Insured's Interests

The factual background of Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the insured in part and reversed in part. The Court said that the implied promise of good faith and fair dealing requires each contracting party to refrain from doing anything to injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement (24 Cal. 3d 809, 818) and that for the insurer to fulfill its obligation not to impair the right of the insured to receive thebenefits of the agreement, it must give at least as much consideration to the latter's interests as it does to its own (24 Cal. 3d 809, 818-819) .

The factual background of Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 , is discussed in § 120.182[3][a]. In reversing in part the order for new trial and affirming in part the judgment, the Supreme Court said that the covenant of good faith and fair dealing requires that neither party will do anything to injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement and that an insurer is obligated to give the interests of the insured at least as much consideration as it gives to its own interests (11 Cal. 3d 452, 460) .

[c] Insurer is Liable for Failing to Pay Loss

The factual background of Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the insured in part and reversed in part. The Court, quoting from Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 575, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , said that when the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort (24 Cal. 3d 809, 818) .

The factual background of Silberg v. California Life Ins. Co. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 452, 113 Cal. Rptr. 711, 521 P.2d 1103 , is discussed in § 120.182[3][a]. In reversing in part the order granting a new trial and affirming in part the judgment, the Supreme Court said that the insurer's breach of its covenant of good faith sounds in tort and that the insured may recover for all detriment resulting from the breach (11 Cal. 3d 452, 460) . The Court held that defendant's failure to afford relief to its insured against the very eventuality insured against by the policy amounted to a violation as a matter of law of its duty of good faith and fair dealing implied in every policy (11 Cal. 3d 452, 460, 462) .

The factual background of Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal in favor of defendant insurers, the Supreme Court said that when the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort (9 Cal. 3d 566, 575) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Covenant of Good Faith

In Davis v. Blue Cross of N. Cal. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 418, 158 Cal. Rptr. 828, 600 P.2d 1060 , the Supreme Court, quoting from Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 818, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 [see § 120.182[3][a]], said that in addition to the duties imposed on contracting parties by the express terms of their agreement, the law implies in every contract a covenant of good faith and fair dealing (25 Cal. 3d 418, 427) .

[b] Insurer Failed to Consider Insured's Interests

The factual background of Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal as to defendant insurers, the Supreme Court, quoting from Fletcher v. Western Nat'l Life Ins. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 376, 401, 89 Cal. Rptr. 78 , said that an insurer owes to its insured an implied-in-law duty of good faith and fair dealing that it will do nothing to deprive the insured of the benefits of the policy (9 Cal. 3d 566, 575) and, citing Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658, 328 P.2d 198 , the court explained that the duty had been characterized as an implied covenant that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement (9 Cal. 3d 566, 576-577) .

In Century Sur. Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , the United States Forest Service contracted with a construction company to install an underground stream profile in a creek. The construction company entered into a subcontract with a glass company to install glass panels in the viewing chamber of the creek. After the glass installation, a dispute arose between the construction company and the glass company over the glass company's duty to apply a sealant to the seams. Before the dispute was settled and after both parties attempted to rectify the sealant problem, the creek flooded, ruining the glass panels. The construction company filed suit against the glass company, which sought coverage and defense from its insurer under a CGL policy and an installation floater endorsement that covered the glass prior to installation. The insurer denied coverage and provided a defense under a reservation of rights, and the glass company retained independent counsel following problematic communications with the insurer's counsel. Neither party prevailed in the underlying action, but the glass company incurred considerable debt, and the company's individual co-owners suffered great emotional distress. In the declaratory relief action filed by the insurer, the glass company and its owners (the insureds) cross-complained for bad faith and other torts. The jury awarded the insureds $57,000 in compensatory and $2 million in punitive damages. In discussing the required factors for the award of punitive damages, the court of appeal stated that if an insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort. For the insurer to fulfill its obligation not to impair the right of the insured to receive the benefits of the agreement, it must give at least as much consideration to the insured's interests as it does to its own (139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 949). In affirming the judgment, the court concluded that although the insurer knew that it had a duty to defend, it took every opportunity to "stall, stonewall, and engage in scare tactics" and then refused to pay the insureds' attorney in full or in a timely manner. It did this so that the insureds'attorney would withdraw from the underlying action, leaving the insureds' defense in the insurer's hands, thus allowing it to deny coverage rather than defend them (139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 965).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityPayment Delays & DenialsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingThird Party Claimants

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.183

§ 120.183 No Affirmative Defense of Insured's Comparative Bad Faith in Tort Bad Faith Action Against Insurer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

IN AN ACTION BY AN INSURED AGAINST AN INSURER FOR BREACH OF THE COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING, THE INSURER MAY NOT ASSERT THE INSURED'S COMPARATIVE BAD FAITH AS AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.

No Affirmative Defense of Comparative Bad Faith. In an action by an insured against an insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing that sounds in tort, the insurer may not assert as a defense the insured's comparative bad faith (Kransco v. American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 390, 411, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151, 2 P.3d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an insurer may not raise as an affirmative defense the insured's comparative bad faith in a bad faith action brought by the insured [see Kransco v. American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 390, 411, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151, 2 P.3d 1] . It should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 120.182 -120.186 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that because the action by the insured sounds in tort, the insurer may not raise the defense of comparative bad faith.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of complaints against liability insurers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender), Part IE.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Affirmative Defense of Insured's Comparative Bad Faith in Tort Bad Faith Action Against Insurer

In Kransco v. American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 390, 411, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151, 2 P.3d 1 , a manufacturing company sued its primary insurer for bad faith failure to settle, following a claim and resultant lawsuit by an adult who was injured while using the insured's product. Michael Hubert had jumped headfirst onto his neighbor's backyard water slide toy, known as a "Slip'N Slide," sustaining cervical injuries that rendered him a partial quadriplegic. Hubert brought a personal injury action against Kransco, which the toy. Kransco tendered defense to its primary liability carrier, American Empire Surplus Lines Ins. Co. (AES), whose policy provided coverage limits of $900,000 ($1 million,less Kransco's self-insured retention of $100,000). Kransco also had three excess policies with other carriers totaling $4 million. During the discovery phase, Hubert asked Kransco in an interrogatory if it had knowledge of prior Slip'N Slide accidents resulting in cervical injuries to adults. Kransco initially denied any such knowledge, but later amended its response to admit knowledge of two accidents, one of which resulted in death. The other accident, which caused quadriplegia, involved a slide manufactured by the corporation that sold the manufacturing rights to Kransco and resulted in a $1.5 million settlement. Kransco's amended response misstated the date of one of these accidents by ten years. During the jury trial Hubert offered to settle for $750,000, but AES rejected the offer. Based on Kransco's willingness to contribute its $100,000 self-insurance and an excess carrier's proffered $100,000, AES counter-offered $450,000, which Hubert rejected. The jury awarded Hubert roughly $2.3 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages, a "record-breaking" award. While post-verdict motions were pending, Kransco settled with Hubert. Kransco and its insurers paid $7.5 million: the excess insurers paid a total of $35 million; Kransco paid $3.1 million; and AES paid its policy limits of $900,000, although objecting to the settlement as unreasonable. At Hubert's insistence, Kransco stipulated to entry of judgment against it in the full amount of the jury verdict, plus interest, but Hubert agreed not to execute on the judgment. Additionally, under the terms of the settlement, Kransco agreed to prosecute a bad faith action against AES, and to split equally with Hubert any net proceeds from the litigation.

Kransco sued AES for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing for failure to settle during trial. AES argued that Kransco's false interrogatory responses constituted either a breach of the insured's covenant of good faith and fair dealing or negligence in the handling of the Hubert action. According to the subsequent appellate record in the bad faith action, a Kransco product development vice president knew of two adult cervical injuries that had occurred when the water slide was made by another toy manufacturer, prior to Kransco's acquisition of that manufacturer's assets. (Kransco had subsequently reintroduced the toy.) In the Hubert action, defense counsel learned of the vice president's knowledge when preparing him for a deposition, at which time counsel immediately informed Hubert's counsel. Kransco subsequently filed an amended response, which was inaccurate with respect to the date of one accident. AES was therefore informed of the prior injuries before trial, and before Hubert's settlement offer, but asserted during the bad faith trial that Hubert's counsel exploited Kransco's pretrial "blunders," resulting in the excess verdict.

During the bad faith trial, the trial court instructed the jury on both of AES's comparative fault theories. Regarding comparative bad faith, the trial court instructed the jury:

> I have already described the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that the law implies in every insurance contract. Because that implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing applies to both the insurer and the insured, Kransco had a duty to AES not to do anything that would injure AES's right to receive the benefits of their agreement. To do so would constitute bad faith on Kransco's part. Comparative bad faith does not relieve AES of its obligations or bar a recovery by Kransco against AES, but the total amount of damages to which Kransco would otherwise be entitled shall be reduced in proportion to the amount of comparative fault attributable to Kransco, Kransco's attorneys, or Kransco's agent.

Regarding comparative negligence, the trial court instructed the jury:

> Comparative negligence is the failure, if any, on the part of Kransco to exercise ordinary care, which when combined with AES's breach, if any, of its obligations of good faith and fair dealing contributed to cause Kransco's injury. The negligence referred to here is not any lack of care or breach of any legal duty owed by Kransco to Michael Hubert or other Hubert plaintiffs involved in the 1991 Wisconsin trial. It is the negligence, if any, of Kransco in the preparation and trial of the Hubert v. Kransco case, and then only if it was a legal cause of the plaintiffs' verdict in the amount returned and entered. Comparative negligence, if any, on the part of Kransco does not bar a recovery against AES, but the total amount of damages to which Kransco would otherwise be entitled shall be reduced in proportion to the amount of fault attributable to Kransco.

The jury returned a special verdict finding that AES had breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing toward Kransco in its handling of Hubert's personal injury claim. However, it also found that Kransco had breached the duty of good faith and fair dealing owed to AES or had failed to exercise ordinary care for its own safety in its handling of Hubert's claim before the verdict. The jury assessed compensatory damages at over $13.6 million, apportioning fault at 90 percent to Kransco and 10 percent to AES. (The jury further found Kransco did not act unreasonably in agreeing to the post-verdict settlement with Hubert.) Kransco moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial, on the ground, among others, that the trial court had erred in instructing on both comparative bad faith and comparative negligence theories. The trial court granted the motion for judgment n.o.v. It concluded that comparative negligence was wholly inapplicable to the case and that its instruction on comparative fault should have been limited to "whether Kransco contributed to AES's failure to settle by impairing its assessment of the risk of a substantial likelihoodof an excess judgment." The court found that the jury verdicts finding comparative fault were unsupported by the evidence because "AES presented no substantial evidence that Kransco's failure promptly to convey to AES its knowledge of prior cervical injuries contributed to AES's failure to recognize the substantial likelihood of excess judgment." Judgment was entered in favor of Kransco for the full amount of damages as calculated by the jury, plus prejudgment interest and costs. Both parties appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that in an insured's action against its insurer for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, the insurer may not raise the insured's comparative bad faith as an affirmative defense. The court further held that on the facts of this case, comparative negligence was not an available defense. The California Supreme Court granted review on the issue of comparative bad faith.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that in an action against an insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, the insurer may not raise as an affirmative defense the insured's comparative bad faith. The Court held that because of the disparate scopes and natures of the insurer's and insured's obligations of good faith, an insurer's breach sounds in tort, while the insured's arises strictly from contractual provisions (23 Cal. 4th 390, 401-402, 411) . The Supreme Court noted that it has long been recognized in California that there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything that will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement. This principle applies equally to insurance policies, which are a category of contracts. Because the covenant is a contract term, in most cases compensation for its breach is limited to contract rather than tort remedies. However, an exception to this general rule has developed in the context of insurance contracts. For a variety of policy reasons, courts have held that an insurer's breach of the implied covenant will provide the basis for an action in tort (23 Cal. 4th 390, 400) .

The Court also stated that the scope of the duty of good faith and fair dealing depends on the purposes of the particular contract because the covenant is aimed at making effective the agreement's promises. In the context of an insurance policy, the terms and conditions of the policy define the duties and performance to which the insured is entitled. One of the most important benefits of a maximum limit insurance policy is the assurance that the company will provide the insured with defense and indemnification for the purpose of protecting the insured from liability (23 Cal. 4th 390, 400-401) . An insured therefore has the legitimate right to expect that the method of settlement within policy limits will be employed to give him or her that protection. A liability insurance policy's express promise to defend and indemnify the insured against injury claims implies a duty to settle third party claims in an appropriate case. More specifically, the insurer must settle within policy limits if there is substantial likelihoodof recovery in excess of those limits. The duty to settle is implied in law to protect the insured from exposure to liability in excess of coverage as a result of the insurer's gamble, on which only the insured might lose. An insurer that breaches its implied duty of good faith and fair dealing by unreasonably refusing to accept a settlement offer within policy limits may be held liable for the full amount of the judgment against the insured in excess of its policy limits (23 Cal. 4th 390, 401) .

In this case, the jury concluded that AES breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing owed to Kransco by rejecting Hubert's $750,000 settlement offer, which was within the $900,000 policy limits, despite a substantial likelihood of recovery in excess of those limits. AES did not challenge that conclusion on appeal, but instead argued it should not be liable for the full amount of the judgment because Kransco's own litigation misconduct or comparative fault contributed to the excess verdict. Specifically, AES claimed that the jury in the personal injury action assessed $10 million in punitive damages to punish Kransco for its false and incorrect interrogatory responses made during pretrial discovery. The Court acknowledged that the duty of good faith and fair dealing in an insurance policy is a two-way street, running from the insured to the insurer and vice versa. However, the scope of the insured's duty of good faith and fair dealing, and the remedies available to the insurer for a breach of that duty, are fundamentally and conceptually distinct from the insurer's reciprocal duty, and the remedies available to the insured for breach of that duty, under the insurance policy. It is an insurer's breach of the covenant of good faith that is governed by tort principles, at least as concerns the availability of tort damages. In contrast, an insured's breach of the covenant is not a tort, and therefore does not give rise to tort damages recoverable by the insurer (23 Cal. 4th 390, 401-402) .

The Court therefore disapproved California Cas. Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 274, 218 Cal. Rptr. 817 , to the extent that it is inconsistent with this holding (23 Cal. 4th 390, 407 n.11). California Casualty, the only published California case holding that in a bad faith action the insurer may assert the affirmative defense of comparative bad faith, was grounded on the faulty premise that the obligations of insurer and insured, and thus their bad faith, are comparable. The parties are bound by a reciprocal obligation of good faith and fair dealing, but the particular duties differ given the differing performance due under the contract of insurance. A fundamental disparity exists between the insured, who performs its basic duty of paying the policy premium at the outset, and the insurer, which hopes never to perform its basic duties of defense and indemnification. An insured is thus not on equal footing with its insurer. The relationship between insured and insurer is inherently unequal, the inequality resting on contractual asymmetry. An insurer's tort liability for breach of the covenant is thus predicated on special policyfactors inapplicable to the insured. The scope of the insured's duty of good faith and fair dealing in turn is confined by the express contractual provisions of the policy (23 Cal. 4th 390, 404-405) . An insured's reciprocal duty of good faith and fair dealing does not always necessitate reciprocal conduct. Because an insured's breach of the covenant does not sound in tort, the insured's contractual breach of an express policy provision cannot be raised by the insurer as a defense in a bad faith action brought against it by the insured. It would be illogical to allow the insurer in such a suit instead to interpose as a defense the insured's contractual breach of an implied policy provision (the covenant of good faith and fair dealing) based on those same express policy terms. The Court held that the jury should not have been instructed at all with principles of comparative bad faith. Accordingly it rejected AES's argument that it was error to affirm the trial court's judgment n.o.v. entered in Kransco's favor (23 Cal. 4th 390, 405, 408) .

The Court observed that rejection of comparative bad faith in this context does not leave the insurer without remedies for an insured's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Evidence of an insured's misconduct may factually disprove the insurer's liability for bad faith by showing the insurer acted reasonably under the circumstances. The insured's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is also separately actionable as a contract claim. Some forms of misconduct by an insured will void coverage altogether under the insurance policy, and without coverage there can be no liability for bad faith on the part of the insurer. Moreover, an insured's fraudulent misconduct is separately actionable and can give rise to tort damages. These remedies adequately serve to protect an insurer from the insured's misconduct without creating the logical inconsistencies and troublesome complexities of a defense of comparative bad faith. The Court also noted that AES's argument was factually flawed--the jury was not presented with direct evidence that Kransco's counsel had been advised of the prior accidents before answering the interrogatories in dispute. In addition, as a matter of law, AES's assertion that Kransco's two false interrogatory responses alone resulted in the jury's punitive damages award is likewise flawed. Generally, punitive damages may be awarded only if it is proven that the defendant engaged in conduct intended to cause injury or engaged in despicable conduct with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others. It is questionable whether Kransco's two false interrogatory responses, exploited (in the eyes of the jury) largely through the plaintiff counsel's impassioned arguments, could themselves validly be deemed a legal proximate cause of the jury's punitive damages award and verdict. Most importantly however, to have any meaning, the express promise of a liability insurer to defend and indemnify the insured against injury claims, and the implied duty to reasonably and in good faith settle third party claims within policy limits in an appropriate case, must extend to insureds that are less than perfect litigants. An insured's knownweaknesses as a litigant should inform the insurer's assessment of the likelihood of an excess judgment, not diminish the insurer's obligation reasonably to accept settlement offers within policy limits. An insurer legitimately expects its insured's cooperation in defending third party injury claims, but cooperation does not demand flawless discovery responses (23 Cal. 4th 390, 408-410) .

The Supreme Court also discussed the comparative negligence instruction. AES based this defense on Patrick v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1566, 267 Cal. Rptr. 24 , a first-party bad faith action holding that the insured's negligence in walking backward on a roof while dragging a heavy sheet of plywood warranted jury instructions on comparative fault. The Court stated, however, that it did not grant review on the propriety of the comparative negligence instructions and accordingly did not address that issue. Moreover, extension of comparative negligence principles in Patrick to first party insurance bad faith actions is inapposite to a third party insurance bad faith action case, which is factually distinguishable. The Court stated, however, that Patrick does not shield a third-party insurer from full responsibility for its bad faith failure to settle a case, even if the insured's litigation misconduct or mishandling of the claim inflated the size of the verdict, although evidence of misconduct may support contract defenses, cross-claims, or separate causes of action for breach of the terms of the insurance contract that are otherwise available to the insurer (23 Cal. 4th 390, 411-412) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityElements of Bad FaithInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.184

§ 120.184 Insurer Conducted an Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER BREACHED THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING WHEN IT CONDUCTED AN INADEQUATE INVESTIGATION OF THE INSURED'S CLAIM.

Insurer Conducted an Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim. An insurer may breach the covenant of good faith and fair dealing when it fails to properly investigate its insured's claim for benefits under a policy (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 817, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 ; see Paulfrey v. Blue Chip Stamps (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 194-196, 197 Cal. Rptr. 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that the insurer handled the insured's claim in a reasonable manner. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer failed to properly investigate the insured's claim.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, in an action against a first party (casualty) insurer for damages for breach of the implied covenant of good faith in denying or delaying payment of benefits, it may be used by a plaintiff insured to oppose a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c in which the insurer contends that its handling of the insured's claim was reasonable as a matter of law. In this instance, the grounds of opposition are:

- The failure of the insurer to properly investigate the insured's claim may constitute a breach of the covenant of good faith,

- Whether the insurer failed to properly investigate the insured's claim and if so whether the failure constituted a breach of the covenant of good faith are material facts, and

- There are triable issues with respect to these facts.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.174. This form may also be modified to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.176. For this latter use, counsel will need to include points and authorities that contending that there is coverage under the policy [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.186[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.186 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issuesof material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Conducted an Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

The factual background of Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In Egan, the Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the insured in part and reversed in part. The Court pointed out that the directed verdict on the issue of breach of covenant of good faith rested on the insurer's inadequate investigation of plaintiff's claim for benefits under the policy and held that an insurer may breach the covenant of good faith and fair dealing when it fails to properly investigate its insured's claim (24 Cal. 3d 809, 817) . The Court said that the insured in a contract like the one before it (a health and disability policy) does not seek to obtain a commercial advantage, but, rather, protection against calamity and that, as insurers are well aware, the major motivation for obtaining disability insurance is to provide funds during periods when the ordinary source of the insured's income--his or her earnings--has stopped.

The purchase of such insurance provides peace of mind and security in the event the insured is unable to work and, to protect these interests, it is essential that an insurer fully inquire into possible bases that might support the insured's claim. The Court acknowledged that distinguishing fraudulent from legitimate claims may occasionally be difficult for insurers, especially in the context of disability policies, but that an insurer cannot reasonably and in good faith deny payments to its insured without thoroughly investigating the foundation for its denial (24 Cal. 3d 809, 819) . The Court noted that the evidence that the insurer failed to properly investigate plaintiff's claim was undisputed and held that the trial court, therefore, had correctly instructed the jury that a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing was established (24 Cal. 3d 809, 819) .

In Paulfrey v. Blue Chip Stamps (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 197 Cal. Rptr. 501 , the court of appeal extended, in theory though not in the instant fact situation, the ruling of Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 169 Cal. Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141 , to claims under health and accident insurance policies. Plaintiff in Paulfrey sued two insurers, Aetna and Blue Chip, for breach of her health and accident policy's implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing based on an alleged failure to investigate her claim. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for directed verdict, and after insurer-defendants' motion for new trial was denied, an appeal ensued.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. In reviewing the law regarding when the duty to investigate is triggered, the court cited Egan for the rule that an insurer may breach the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by failing to properly investigate an insured's claim (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 194) . The court stated that there was no reason to limit the applicability of such a duty to investigate to disability cases, since the purpose of health and accident insurance is also to protect the insured against calamity and to provide peace of mind and security (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 195) . However, the court went on to cite Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1, 26, 148 Cal. Rptr. 653 as spelling out a test of reasonableness to be applied to issues of proper investigation by insurers. The court stated that whether an insured's denial of a claim is unreasonable is dependent on the facts in each case, and that whether an insurer breached its duty to investigate is also a question of fact to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 195-196) .

Examining the facts, the court found that the evidence was conflicting regarding whether the insurers were placed on notice of plaintiff's claims under the policies. Because of the conflict, the factual issues should have gone to a jury rather than being resolved by directed verdict (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 199) . In dicta, the court went on to state that even though the law interprets insurance contracts more favorably to insureds when a conflict arises, nonetheless, an insurance contract is a bona fide contract between the insurer and the insured, and the insured has certain obligations to perform before an insured's duty to pay benefits will arise (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 199) . It seems reasonable that any responsibility to investigate onan insurer's part would not arise until the threshold issue of whether a claim was filed, or whether a good-faith effort o comply with the claims procedure was made, had been determined. In no event could an insured fail to keep his or her part of the bargain in the first instance and thereafter seek recovery for breach of a duty to pay and punitive damages based on an insurer's failure to investigate a nonclaim (150 Cal. App. 3d 187, 199-200) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Conducted Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

In Estate of Parker v. AIG Life Ins. (C.D. Cal. 2004) 317 F. Supp. 2d 1167 , the estate of a deceased insured pursued a claim for death benefits under the insured's life insurance policy, which provided death benefits coverage for specific and limited hazards, including "Freeway Coverage." The insured was killed in a vehicle collision in Cuba. The estate asserted that the insured was killed on a freeway (a divided highway) as defined in the policy. Based on an analysis of the scene of the accident by a representative of the Swiss Embassy in Havana (not provided to the court by the insurer and not authenticated), the insurer determined that the accident did not occur on a freeway as defined in the policy. In the resulting breach of contract and declaratory relief action, the court noted that an insurer owes its insured the same duty of investigation that is implied in the insurance contract under the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, separate and apart from that covenant (317 F. Supp. 2d 1167, 1171) . The duty to investigate a possible basis for an insured's claim includes the duty to investigate grounds for denying the claim (317 F. Supp. 2d 1167, 1172) . In response to the insurer's motion for summary judgment, the court held that the insurer's failure to investigate whether the road in Cuba was a "freeway" within the meaning of the "Freeway Coverage" provision precluded summary judgment. Although the insurer need not have traveled to Cuba itself to investigate the accident scene to satisfy its affirmative duty to investigate the claim that the road was a freeway, it needed to present some reasonable basis for its denial, which it failed to do (317 F. Supp. 2d 1167, 1173-1175) .

In Amerigraphics, Inc. v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 , the insured printing and design company brought an action for bad faith and contract breach against the insurer with respect to a "California Special Multi-Peril Policy" (insuring business personal property), based on conduct regarding the insured's claim for flood damage. Among other things, the insurer failed adequately to investigate the claim for replacement or repair of the damaged printer and scanner, which contributed significantly to the failure of the insured's business. The insurer's conduct included violation of California's regulatory standards, failure to advise the insured of potential available coverage, and failure to investigate the claim promptly. A jury trial resulted in a special verdict for the insured, awarding compensatory and punitive damages. The appellate court confirmed that the insurer had acted in bad faith (while reducing the amount of punitive damages), based on the insurer's unreasonable failure to pay, unreasonably delay in paying, and failure properly to investigate the loss (182 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1556) .

In McCormick v. Sentinel Life Ins. Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 200 Cal. Rptr. 732 , a bad-faith action was brought by an insured who was not given payments on his claim under a disability insurance policy. The policy had secured plaintiff's loan on his camper truck, which was also security on the loan. Plaintiff became disabled and submitted a claim, but certain information was left off his doctor's report, and defendant insurer refused to pay. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment. The court of appeal reversed, holding, among other things, that the defendant had a duty to investigate the claim because the omissions in the claim form were so minor that they could have been easily cleared up by a phone call or by later asking the doctor to supply the omitted information (153 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1047-1048) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.185

§ 120.185 Action Not on Policy Is Not Barred by Statute of Limitations or Policy Limitations Clause

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED IS NOT BARRED FROM PURSUING HIS/HER BAD-FAITH CLAIM BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS/IS NOT A CLAIM ON THE POLICY.

Bad-Faith Claim Not on the Policy Is Not Subject to Statutory Limitation Period. In actions involving a homeowner's insurance policy, a bad-faith claim for actions by the insurer that occurred subsequent to the initial loss is not an action on the policy and not barred by the statutorily mandated 12-month limitation period (Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 46-50, 147 Cal. Rptr. 565).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention that an insured is barred from pursuing his or her bad faith claim. The basis of these points and authorities is that the action is not one that is "on the policy" and therefore is not subject to the statutory limitation period governing the policy, or the limitations clause in the policy.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda opposing a general demurrer to a complaint, in a memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in §§ 120.178 and 120.179.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.186[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if appropriate, counsel should showthat the insurer's actions that are the basis of the bad-faith action occurred subsequent to the initial loss suffered by the plaintiff [see, e.g., Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 46-50, 147 Cal. Rptr. 565 (discussed in § 120.185[3][a])].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.186 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bad-Faith Claim Not on the Policy Is Not Subject to Statutory Limitation Period

In Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 147 Cal. Rptr. 565 , the insureds under a homeowner's insurance policy brought an action against the insurer for five separate causes of action. The trial court granted insurer's motion for summary judgment on the basis of two statutes of limitation (83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 41) . Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, stating that the conduct complained of occurred subsequent to the fire loss, the damages claimed were not recoverable under the policy, and the actions were not barred by the statute of limitation (83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 47, 49, 50) . Plaintiffs' first cause of action was apparently based on a theory of fraudulent misrepresentation, in that the insurer falsely represented that the contractors hired by insurer were licensed, competent, and qualified to do the repair and restoration work on insured's house. In the second cause of action, plaintiffs alleged that the insurer and others conspired to defraud plaintiffs by making the allegations discussed in the first cause of action. The conduct complained of in both causes of action occurred subsequent to the fire loss. The damages claimed were not recoverable under the insurance policy, and the action was not "on the policy" (83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 46, 47) . The third and fourth causes of action stated causes of action for bad faith. The court of appeal stated that much of the conduct complained of occurred long after the fire loss.

The court concluded that the third and fourth causes of action were not actions "on the policy" and were not barred by the statutorily mandated 12-month limitation provision (83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 47-49) . The fifth cause of action was for intentional infliction of emotional distress. The court said that this was also not an action "on the policy" and not barred by the statutorily mandated 12-month limitation period (83 Cal. App. 3d 38, 49-50) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityElements of Bad Faith

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.186

§ 120.186 Insured's Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action Against Insurer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF, AS A JUDGMENT CREDITOR OF DEFENDANT'S INSURED, HAS A DIRECT RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DEFENDANT'S UNREASONABLE _____ [REFUSAL TO PAY or DELAY IN PAYING] THE JUDGMENT OBTAINED BY PLAINTIFF AGAINST DEFENDANT'S INSURED.

A. Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action. Every policy of liability insurance issued or delivered in California must contain a provision requiring that whenever judgment is secured against the insured or the executor or administrator of a deceased insured in an action based on bodily injury or property damage, an action may be brought against the insurer on the policy and subject to its terms and conditions, by the judgment creditor to recover on the judgment (Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2)).

B. Insurer Is Liable to Judgment Creditor for Postjudgment Refusal to Pay Amount of Judgment. Insurance Code Section 11580(b)(2) confers upon the judgment creditor of an insured a direct right of action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing against an insurer that unreasonably refuses to pay the judgment creditor the amount of a judgment against the insured after the judgment becomes final. Because the judgment creditor has a direct right of action against the insurer under these circumstances, it is unnecessary for the judgment creditor to obtain an assignment of the insured's rights before bringing suit (Hand v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1857, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 258).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an insurer's contention that a party lacks standing to bring an action against the insured for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that a judgment creditor has a direct right of action against the insurer for the insurer's breach of thecovenant of good faith and fair dealing because of the insurer's unreasonable and bad-faith refusal to pay the amount of the judgment against the insured after the judgment became final.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be used to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment, or to support a motion for summary judgment by the judgment creditor against the insurer.

These points and authorities will not support a denial of summary judgment in an action based on an insurer's alleged bad-faith failure to settle a claim prior to entry of judgment, as opposed to paying a final judgment against its insured. As discussed in §§ 120.186[3][b] and 120.189[2], the duty to settle runs to the insured, not judgment creditors, and a judgment creditor therefore cannot maintain a direct action against an insurer for failure to accept a reasonable settlement offer.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.172.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.186[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. To prevail on the claim, counsel will need to refer to facts that establish that:

- Show that the plaintiff obtained a judgment against the insured,
- The judgment was covered under the terms of the defendant insurer's policy,
- The insurer refused or delayed in paying the judgment, and
- This refusal was unreasonable and in bad faith.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.186 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

As stated in § 120.186[2][a], an appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a judgment creditor's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)].The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action

The language of Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2) is substantially identical to that quoted in the form. That section basically gives judgment creditors of insureds a direct right of action against insurers to recover the amount of any judgments against the insureds, to the extent that the judgments are covered by the policies. This right exists with regard to every liability insurance policy [see Ins. Code § 11580(a) (policies subject to requirement)] issued or delivered to any person in California [Ins. Code § 11580(b)].

[b] Insurer Is Liable to Judgment Creditor for Postjudgment Refusal to Pay Amount of Judgment

In Hand v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 258 , the plaintiff was injured in an auto accident with a car driven by defendant's insured. Plaintiff alleged that after the accident, defendant admitted coverage on several occasions, and made several settlement offers. The case ultimately went to trial and plaintiff obtained a judgment against defendant. After the judgment had become final, defendant refused to pay the bulk of the judgment, claiming for the first time that the insured had been only a permissive user and that substantially lower coverage limits therefore were applicable. Plaintiff then brought an action against defendant under Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2) for the amount of the judgment, and also asserted tort claims for bad faith refusal to pay the judgment and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

The trial court granted plaintiff's summary judgment motion with respect to the underlying judgment, ruling that defendant's insured had been fully covered as a named insured under the policy and that plaintiff was entitled to recover the full amount of the judgment from defendant. However, the trial court also granted defendant summary judgment with respect to plaintiff's remaining causes of action, ruling that the duty of good faith and fair dealing could not be grafted onto the relationship created by Ins. Code § 11580 and that an insurer's failure to pay or settle could not form the basis of a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress (23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1852-1852) . Plaintiff appealed the grant of summary judgment on the tort claims.

In the published portion of the opinion, the Court of Appeal reversed the grant of summary judgment on the bad faith claim. The court stated that while Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584 is often cited for the general proposition that third party claimants may not bring bad faith claims, Murphy also stands for the proposition that by virtue of Ins. Code § 11580, a judgment creditor of an insured enjoys third party beneficiary status and rights under the policy. The court concluded that under Murphy, a third party beneficiary, and in particular one so situated by virtue of Ins. Code § 11580, may enforce extra-contractual covenants, including the covenant of good faith, to the extent that those covenants or duties run in its favor (23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1857) .

The court then held that unlike the duty to settle that was at issue in Murphy, the duty not to withhold payment of an adjudicated claim in bad faith runs not only in favor of the insured, but also in favor of a judgment creditor (23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1858) . Therefore, notwithstanding the general rule that third parties have no standing to bring a direct action against an insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, judgment creditors of an insured may maintain a direct action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing against an insurer that refuses, unreasonably and in bad faith, to pay the entire amount of a judgment after it becomes final (23 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1857) . In this limited situation, since a direct right of action exists, it is unnecessary for the insurer to obtain an assignment of the claim from the insured.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action

In Pruyn v. Agricultural Ins. Co. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 500, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 , the court of appeal held that a stipulated judgment may be sufficient for a direct action if it is procured under circumstances that protect against the potential for fraud and collusion. A good faith settlement pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 does not preclude litigation asto whether or not the settlement was free from fraud and collusion, but it does shift the burden to the insurer to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the settlement was not reasonable or was the product of fraud or collusion (36 Cal. App. 4th 500, 530) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityPayment Delays & DenialsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingPayments

116 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
1. General Defenses

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.187-120.194

[Reserved]

§§ 120.187[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.195

§ 120.195 Insurer Did Not Refuse to Accept a Valid and Reasonable Settlement Offer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER DID NOT BREACH THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BECAUSE _____ [THE SETTLEMENT OFFER MADE WAS NOT A REASONABLE (AND VALID) SETTLEMENT OFFER or NO SETTLEMENT OFFER WAS MADE].

A. Insured Failed to Show That Reasonable Settlement Offer Was Made. To hold an insurer liable for payment of a judgment against its insured in excess of the policy limits (or if action is by insured or by both insured and insured's judgment creditor and insured seeks recovery of damages in addition to amount of judgment against him or her in excess of policy limits, payment of other damages sustained by the insured in excess of policy limits), it must be shown that the insurer's failure to settle the case was a result of bad faith on its part (see Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 876, 880, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511 ; Hodges v. Standard Accident Ins. Co. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 571, 574, 18 Cal. Rptr. 17). In other words, it must be shown that the insurer unwarrantedly rejected a reasonable settlement offer, thereby breaching a duty to its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 430, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173).

B. There Is No Conflict of Interest Between Insurer and Insured. The legal rules relating to the liability of an insurer for failure to settle a case against its insured come into play only when a conflict of interest develops between the insurance carrier and its insured. A conflict of interest develops only when (1) an offer to settle an excess claim is made within policy limits, or (2) a settlement offer is made in excess of policy limits and the insured is willing and able to pay the excess (Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 877, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511).

[EITHER]

C. Insurer Had Bona Fide Belief That Recovery Would Be Within Policy Limits. An insurer does not breach its covenant of good faith in rejecting a settlement offer within policy limits when it honestly believes, and has cause to believe, that any recovery against its insured will be within the policy limits (Hodges v. Standard Accident Ins. Co. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 574, 18 Cal. Rptr. 17).

[OR]

C. No Settlement Offer Was Made. When there is no conflict of interest between the insurer because no settlement offer is made by the third-party plaintiff, the issue of whether the insurer is liable for failure to settle the case does not arise (Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 877, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511).

[OR]

C. The Settlement Offer Was Not Valid. The nonacceptance of a settlement offer on the ground that the offer failed to indicate that the approval of a third party, whose approval is necessary for the contract to take effect, had been obtained does not constitute a bad-faith refusal to settle so as to render the insurer liable for the excess judgment recovered against its insured in a third-party action or for other damages sustained by the insured (see Coe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 992-994, 136 Cal. Rptr. 331).

[OR]

C. The Settlement Offer Did Not Completely Release All Insureds. An insurer's duty to settle extends to all of its insureds. Therefore, an insurer may, within the boundaries of good faith, reject a settlement offer that does not include a complete release of all of its insureds (Strauss v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1021, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 ; see Lehto v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 60, 73-74, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814).

[OR]

C. Defending Insurer Did Not Participate in Settlement. A defending insurer cannot be bound to a settlement made without the insurer's participation and without any actual commitment on the insured's part to pay the judgment, even if the settlement has been found to be in good faith for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (Hamilton v. Maryland Cas. Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 718, 730, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318, 41 P.3d 128).

D. Rule That Insurer Is Not Bound by Settlement Without Its Participation Applies Whether Claim Against Insurer Is Based on Contract or Tort. The rule that a defending insurer is not bound by a settlement made without its participation applies whether the claim against the insurer to recover on an agreed or stipulated judgment is based on breach of contract or on tortious bad faith (Wolkowitz v. Redland Ins. Co. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 164, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 95).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis for these points and authorities is that the insurer did not refuse to accept a valid and reasonable settlement offer.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts. For example, they may be used in an action:

- Brought by an insured against a liability insurer to recover damages sustained as a result of alleged bad faith.

- Brought by a third-party judgment creditor suing on the insured's claim to recover the amount of a third-party judgment in excess of policy limits.

- In an action by both the third-party judgment creditor suing as a partial assignee of the insured's claim against the insurer to recover the amount of the judgment in excess of the policy limits, on the one hand; and the insured seeking to recover damages, other than the excess judgment, on the other hand; both sustained as a result of the insurer's alleged breach of the covenant of good faith.

This form may also be used in a trial brief or in an appellate brief.

When using these points in support of a motion for summary judgment by a defendant insurer the ground of the motion, for example, would be that the action has no merit because it indisputably appears from the papers submitted on the motion that the defendant insurer did not refuse to accept a reasonable settlement offer [see Hodges v. Standard Accident Ins. Co. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 574, 18 Cal. Rptr. 17 (determination of whether or not insurer has breached its duty to insured in failing to settle case is question of law when, from uncontroverted evidence, reasonable person following law can draw but one conclusion on issue)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.205 et seq., may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Failed to Show That Reasonable Settlement Offer Was Made

Although the court of appeal opinions in both the Merritt and Hodges cases imply that dishonesty, fraud, or concealment are necessary to establish bad faith on the part of an insurer, the Supreme Court has indicated to the contrary in Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 . Crisci involved an action by an insured against her insurer to recover damages proximately resulting from the insurer's refusal to settle a claim against the insured within policy limits. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff, the Supreme Court noted that several cases [see, e.g., Critz v. Farmers Ins. Group (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 788, 796, 41 Cal. Rptr. 401 ; Palmer v. Financial Indem. Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 419, 429, 30 Cal. Rptr. 204 ; Davy v. Public Nat'l Ins. Co. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 387, 396, 5 Cal. Rptr. 488] , in considering the liability of the insurer for failure to accept a settlement offer, contain language to the effect that bad faith is the equivalent of dishonesty, fraud, and concealment. The Court said that obviously a showing that the insurer has been guilty of actual dishonesty, fraud, or concealment is relevant to the determination whether it has given consideration to the insured's interest in considering a settlement offer within the policy limits, but that the language used in the cases should not be understood as meaning that in the absence of evidence establishing actual dishonesty, fraud, or concealment, no recovery may be had for a judgment in excess of the policy limits.

The Court added that Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658-659, 328 P.2d 198 makes it clear that liability based on an implied covenant exists whenever the insurer refuses to settle in an appropriate case and that liability may exist when the insurer unwarrantedly refuses an offered settlement when the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is by accepting the settlement. Liability is imposed, the Court explained, not for a bad faith breach of the contract, but for failure to meet the duty to accept reasonable settlements, a duty included within the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The Court concluded that examination of the balance of the Palmer, Critz, and Davy opinions makes it abundantly clear that recovery may be based on unwarranted rejection of a reasonable settlement offer and that the absence of evidence, circumstantial or direct, showing actual dishonesty, fraud, or concealment is not fatal to the cause of action.

Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511 , was an action on an assigned claim to recover from defendant insurer the amount of a judgment in excess of policy limits previously recovered by plaintiff against defendant's insured. The litigation arose out of a nighttime collision of trucks, one of which was driven by plaintiff who was seriously injured in the accident. The other truck was driven by an employee of defendant's insured. Plaintiff sued both the insured and its employee. The insurer engaged a law firm to represent the defendants in that action. The law firm concluded that the accident was caused by an improper lane change by plaintiff and so advised the insurer. It also advised the insurer that settlement was out of the question because of the substantial sums already spent and those expected to be spent in the care of plaintiff by the workers' compensation carrier for plaintiff's employer. Plaintiff recovered judgment for $434,000. The insurer paid plaintiff $100,000, the full policy limit. In exchange for a covenant not to execute against it on the unsatisfied judgment, defendant's insured paid plaintiff $20,000 and assigned to him its claim for damages as an insured against defendant insurer. Plaintiff's complaint against the insurer was in two counts, one based on bad faith and the other on negligent defense. Defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the negligent defense count was granted, and the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff on the bad-faith count in the amount of $499,000.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment for defendant on the negligent defense cause of action, but reversed the judgment for plaintiff on the bad-faith count with directions to enter judgment for defendant on that count as well (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 884) . In the course of its opinion, the court of appeal said that the cases unanimously agree that in considering an insurance carrier's liability for rejection of an offer to settle within policy limits, the test is bad faith and not negligence (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 873) . Quoting from Davy v. Public Nat'l Ins. Co. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 387, 396, 5 Cal. Rptr. 488 , the court said that good faith implies honesty, fair dealing, and full revelation; that bad faith implies dishonesty, fraud, and concealment, and that neither mistaken judgment nor unreasonable judgment is the equivalent of bad faith (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 876) . Quoting from Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 688, 319 P.2d 69 , the court said that to justify liability in excess of policy limits, substantial culpability (bad faith rather than mere negligence) on the part of the insurer is required, and that negligence alone is insufficient to render the insurer liable (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 880) .

Hodges v. Standard Accident Ins. Co. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 18 Cal. Rptr. 17 , was an action on an assigned claim to recover from defendant insurer and its adjuster the amount of a judgment in excess of policy limits previously recovered by plaintiff against defendant insurer's insured. The action was based on the insurer's alleged bad-faith rejection of a prejudgment settlement offer within policy limits in the previous action. The insured's trustee in bankruptcy had assigned to plaintiff any cause of action that the insured might have against the insurer. The previous action arose out of an intersection collision in which both parties, entering the intersection at a right angle to each other, claimed to have entered the intersection with the green light. The action was tried three times. The first two trials were in the insured's favor, but the third trial resulted in a verdict for plaintiff for $35,721.20, reduced by consent to $27,721.20. The insurer paid plaintiff $12,003.26 (the policy limits of $10,000 plus interest and costs), in partial satisfaction of the judgment.

The insurer had refused a settlement offer of $5,000 made prior to the first trial and not withdrawn until after verdict in the third trial, after being advised by its adjuster that the case had a settlement value of $500 and by its attorney that liability was 50-50 and that, assuming liability, the case was worth from $2,500 to $3,500. The trial court found that the insurer had acted in bad faith and rendered judgment for plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed with directions to enter judgment for defendants (198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 581) . The court acknowledged that liability of an insurer for failure to exercise good faith to the insured in acting on a settlement offer within policy limits is well established in California, and, quoting from Davy v. Public Nat'l Ins. Co. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 387, 396, 5 Cal. Rptr. 488 , the court said that good faith implies honesty, fair dealing, and full revelation, that bad faith implies dishonesty, fraud, and concealment, and that neither mistaken judgment nor unreasonable judgment is the equivalent of bad faith (198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 574) .

[b] There Is No Conflict of Interest Between Insurer and Insured

The facts and procedural background of Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511 , are discussed in § 120.195[3][a]. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment for defendant on the negligent defense cause of action, but reversed the judgment for plaintiff on the bad-faith count with directions to enter judgment for defendant on that count as well (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 884) . The court concluded that, while much remains obscure in this field of the law, it is apparent that the legal rules relating to bad faith come into effect only when a conflict of interest develops between the carrier and its insured. The court held that such a conflict of interest develops only when an offer to settle an excess claim is made within policy limits or when a settlement offer is made in excess of policy limits and the insured is willing and able to pay the excess (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 877) .

[c] Insurer Had Bona Fide Belief That Recovery Would Be Within Policy Limits

The factual background of Hodges v. Standard Accident Ins. Co. (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 18 Cal. Rptr. 17 , is discussed in § 120.195[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the judgment for plaintiff with directions to enter judgment for defendants. The court said that liability on the part of the insurer for refusal to accept an offer of settlement may not be predicated on its failure to correctly predict the outcome of the action it is defending and that an insurer does not act in bad faith to the insured when it honestly believes and has cause to believe that any probable liability will be less than the policy limits (198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 574) . It added that the exercise of good faith does not require that the unusual, out-of-the-ordinary verdict be anticipated (198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 575) . The court explained that the act of appraising a case is not an exact science and that there is room for a variety of honest judgments. It said that the insurer must appraise the case prior to the trial on its general experience and that the insurer should not be penalized for its failure to predict accurately the action of a jury (198 Cal. App. 2d 564, 575) .

[d] No Settlement Offer Was Made

The factual background of Merritt v. Reserve Ins. Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 110 Cal. Rptr. 511 , is discussed in § 120.195[3][a]. In reversing judgment for plaintiff on the bad-faith count with directions to enter judgment for defendant insurer, the court of appeal noted that plaintiff at no time made any offer to settle, that neither he, nor his counsel, nor the worker's compensation carrier ever advanced any suggestion that settlement could be profitably discussed, and that since no offer to settle was ever made, either within policy limits (the normal prerequisite for a conflict of interest) or above policy limits but within feasibility limits of the insured's resources, no conflict of interest ever developed between the insured and the carrier. Therefore, the court concluded, the issue of the carrier's bad faith in relation to its insured never arose (34 Cal. App. 3d 858, 877) .

[e] The Settlement Offer Was Not Valid

Coe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 136 Cal. Rptr. 331 , was an action by the insured's assignee against defendant insurance company to recover the amount of a judgment previously recovered by the assignee against the insured in excess of policy limits. The third-party action arose out of a collision between the insured's car and a truck being driven by Richard Coe, who was seriously injured. The circumstances of the collision indicated that the insured negligently caused the accident. Coe was covered by workers' compensation and the compensation carrier notified defendant insurer that it intended to assert against any recovery a lien for money paid out on account of Coe's injuries. An attorney, acting in behalf of Coe and members of Coe's family, sent defendant insurer a letter which contained an offer to settle the claim against defendant's insured for $25,000, the policy limit. The offer was received by defendant at its home office April 8 and, by its terms, required acceptance by April 15. No mention was made in the offer regarding the compensation carrier's claim. On April 9, defendant wrote the attorney stating that the settlement demand was premature for a number of specified reasons, including the fact the attorney had not indicated that a release would be executed by the compensation carrier. The attorney did not reply to this letter. Coe subsequently died from his injuries, and a wrongful death action was brought by his widow for herself and her children, as decedent's heirs. The wrongful death action resulted in a judgment against the insured for $250,000. The widow then gave the insured a covenant not to execute on the judgment, took an assignment of the insured's rights against the insurer for bad-faith refusal to settle, and commenced the present action, which resulted in a judgment against the insurer in an amount in excess of $300,000.

The court of appeal reversed. It held, as a matter of law, that the letter from the attorney was not a settlement offer because the worker's compensation carrier was neither a party to it nor mentioned in it and no provision had been made for its consent or for disposition of its right to reimbursement for the benefits paid on the Coe claims. Citing Lab. Code § 3859 and Lab. Code § 3860 and cases, the court said that no settlement of any of the Coe claims against the insured could have been effective at any time without the written consent of the workers' compensation carrier. The court noted that when the approval of a third party is necessary for a contract to take effect, there is no contract until the approval has been obtained (66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 992) and that the attorney's failure to offer or guarantee the compensation carrier's consent and release meant that none of his clients made an offer whose acceptance by the insurer would have produced a valid settlement of the claims against the insured (66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 992-993) . The court explained that acceptance of the offer as made would have left the insured exposed to a recoupment action by the compensation carrier and would have amounted to an abdication by the insurer of its responsibilities to its own insured (66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 994) .

[f] The Settlement Offer Did Not Completely Release All Insureds

Strauss v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 , involved an action by one driver against three individuals insured by the same carrier under a business liability policy. At one point the plaintiff offered to settle with the carrier for policy limits in exchangefor a release of one (but not all) of the defendant insureds. The carrier refused to settle in this fashion. The plaintiff eventually settled with one of the defendants under his personal auto policy, and received an assignment of bad faith rights. He then sued the insurer for bad faith refusal to settle.

The court of appeal affirmed a trial court's grant of summary judgment. The court held that a carrier is under a duty to consider the interests of all its insureds. To settle a claim against less than all insureds would leave the nonsettling defendants functionally uninsured, in clear violation of those defendant's interests. Consequently, the court held that as a matter of law, it could not have been bad faith for the carrier to have refused to settle (26 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1021-1023) .

In Lehto v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 60, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 , plaintiff was injured in a head-on collision. The driver of the other car and his father, the car's owner, were insured under a policy providing limits of $25,000 per person and $50,000 per accident. Plaintiff's medical bills exceeded those limits. The insurer filed an interpleader action in order to apportion the policy limits among the five claimants. An agreement was reached as to apportionment, but because plaintiff refused to release the insureds, the court ordered that plaintiff's share of the proceeds be held by the court pending resolution of the action. Plaintiff then offered to release just the father in exchange for the $25,000 policy limits. Both the insureds and the insurer rejected this offer. The insureds settled for $2,635,000 and plaintiff filed a bad faith claim seeking $2.5 million in damages on the insured's assigned bad faith claim against the insurer, plus additional compensatory and punitive damages. The jury awarded $2.5 million in damages on the assigned claim and an additional $1 million on a statutory bad faith claim.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that plaintiff's argument that he should be able to release one insured in return for the policy limits while maintaining his tort action against the other insured was contrary to sound public policy. First, it would permit the claimant to inject himself into the insurance relationship, and to direct the insurer to favor one insured over the other. Thus, the claimant would determine which insured would receive the full benefits of the insurance policy. Such a result, stated the court, could hardly be said to be within the reasonable expectations of the insured (31 Cal. App. 4th 60, 73). The court further stated that acceptance by the insurer of the "offer," as made, would have amounted to an abdication of its responsibilities to its own insured. Specifically, it would have breached its implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing not to injure the insured's rights under the policy, and its obligation to consider the interests of the insured equally with its own. The court held that bad faith refusal to accept a settlement offer cannot occur when acceptance of the offer would itself constitute bad faith (31 Cal. App. 4th 60, 74).

[g] Defending Insurer Did Not Participate in Settlement

In Hamilton v. Maryland Cas. Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 718, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318, 41 P.3d 128 , a liability insurer agreed to defend the insured against a personal injury suit. The insurer refused a settlement demand within policy limits. The claimant and the insured, without the insurer's participation, agreed on a settlement, under which the claimant agreed not to execute judgment against the insured, and the insured assigned to the claimant the insured's cause of action for breach of the insurer's duty to accept a reasonable settlement demand. The trial court approved the settlement as made in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. In an action by the claimant, as the insured's assignee, against the insurer for breach of contract based on the insurer's failure to accept the claimant's settlement offer, the trial court denied the insurer's motion for summary judgment. Following the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, the trial court entered judgment in favor of the plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, and the California Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the court of appeal, holding that a defending insurer cannot be bound to a settlement made without its participation and without any actual commitment on its insured's part to pay the judgment, even if the settlement has been found to be in good faith for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (27 Cal. 4th 718, 730) . Although an assignment may be made before trial, the assignment does not become operative, and the claimant's action against the insurer does not mature, until a judgment in excess of policy limits has been entered against the insured (27 Cal. 4th 718, 725) . Settlements reached without the consent or participation of the defending insurer, and incorporating a covenant not to execute or a similar device, are entitled to no weight in a later action against the insurer for failure to settle (27 Cal. 4th 718, 726) . The claimant in this case may not maintain an action for breach of duty to settle because, in light of the settlement before trial and the covenant not to execute against the insured, the stipulated judgment is insufficient to prove that the insured suffered any damages from the insurer's breach of its settlement duty (27 Cal. 4th 718, 729-734) .

[h] Rule That Insurer Is Not Bound by Settlement Without Its Participation Applies Whether Claim Against Insurer Is Based on Contract or Tort

In Wolkowitz v. Redland Ins. Co. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 164, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 95 , the bankruptcy trustee for an insured company sued the company's insurer for bad faith refusal to accept a pretrial offer to settle a personal injury action against the company within policy limits and related causes of action. The trustee sought to recover as damages the amount of an allowed claim filed by the personal injury plaintiff. Theallowance of the claim (in excess of $26 million) was the result of an agreement between the personal injury plaintiff and the trustee, and occurred on the bankruptcy court's granting of the trustee's motion seeking the allowance. The trial court sustained the demurrer to the complaint, and dismissed the complaint.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the complaint failed to state a cause of action against the insurer (and its attorneys) because it failed to allege facts sufficient to establish that the insured suffered any claimed damages as a result of the refusal to settle the personal injury plaintiff's action. Until a judgment has been entered against the insured after a trial, there is no assurance that the insured will suffer any damage from the insurer's breach of its implied obligation to accept a reasonable settlement offer. If the insurer has accepted defense of the action, no trial has been held to determine the insured's liability, and a covenant not to execute excuses the insured from bearing any actual liability from a stipulated judgment, the entry of a stipulated judgment is insufficient to show, even rebuttably, that the insured has been injured to any extent by the failure to settle, much less in the amount of the stipulated judgment (112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 163) . Without a judicial determination of the insured's actual liability, the claimants as assignees could not establish either that the insured was damaged as a result of the insurer's refusal to settle or the amount of damages. In addition, the court held that if, as in this case, an insured, without an insurer's agreement, stipulates to a judgment against it in excess of both the policy limits and the previously rejected settlement offer, and if that stipulated judgment is coupled with a covenant not to execute, the agreed judgment cannot fairly be attributed to the insurer's conduct, even if the insurer's refusal to settle within the policy limits was unreasonable (112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 164) . Therefore, it does not matter whether the claim that is asserted against the insurer to recover on an agreed or stipulated judgment is based on an alleged breach of contract or, as in this case, a claim of tortious bad faith (112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 164) . Furthermore, for purposes of an action against the debtor's insurer based on an unreasonable refusal to settle, the bankruptcy court's approval of an uncontested claim without an evidentiary hearing provides no reliable basis to establish damages resulting from the refusal to settle (112 Cal. App. 4th 154, 166) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Had Bona Fide Belief That Recovery Would Be Within Policy Limits

In Western Polymer Tech., Inc. v. Reliance Ins. Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 14, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78 , the court rejected an insured's attempt to hold an insurer liable for bad faith on the theory that the insurer unreasonably accepted a settlement offer within policy limits (32 Cal. App. 4th 14, 23) . While noting that an insurer should not be able to further its own interest by settling a claim within policy limits through use of the insured's money without some form of consent by the insured, the court rejected the insured's contention that injury to the insured's business reputation was a sufficient basis to hold the insurer liable. The court held that no reasonable reading of the policy language in question would create an expectation that the insurer has to forgo settlement in favor of vindicating the insured's reputation (32 Cal. App. 4th 14, 26-27) .

Camelot by the Bay Condominium Owners' Assn. v. Scottsdale Ins. Co. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 33, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 , was an action by an insured's assignee against an insurer for damages for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The underlying action was a construction defect case in which there were questions as to whether some defects were covered by the insurance policy. The total damages in the case were never greater than $937,245. In the course of the litigation, the plaintiff made a settlement offer of $300,000, well within policy limits of $1,000,000. However, the insurer refused to accept the offer. The insured and the plaintiff then entered into a stipulated judgment for $675,000 in exchange for a covenant not to execute and an assignment of rights. In the subsequent bad faith action, the trial court held that the insurer improperly allowed coverage issues to interfere with its settlement considerations. The insurer appealed. The court of appeal reversed, stating that even when coverage issues were present, there was no duty to settle within policy limits because there was never any threat of an excess judgment against the insured (27 Cal. App. 4th 33, 53-54) .

[b] Rule That Insurer Is Not Bound by Settlement Without Its Participation Applies Whether Claim Against Insurer Is Based on Contract or Tort

In Mercado v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 824 , an assigned insurance bad faith case removed to federal district court, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed summary judgment for the defendant, an automobile policy insurer. The insured had struck a pedestrian and, ultimately and without the insurer's participation, entered into a stipulated judgment with the pedestrian against the insured in excess of the policy limits, which the insurer had already offered in an attempt to settle. The insured had also assigned to the pedestrian all claims against the insurer. The Court of Appeals held that because the insurer had not participated in the settlement, the insurer's liability for the stipulated judgment was foreclosed by Hamilton v. Maryland Cas. Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 718, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318, 41 P.3d 128 (340 F.3d 824, 826-827) . Furthermore, the holding in Hamilton applies not only to contract claims for bad faith, but also to tort claims for bad faith, such as the claim in this case (340 F.3d 824, 827) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGood Faith & Fair DealingInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsPolicy LimitsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.196

§ 120.196 Third-Party Judgment Creditor Lacks Standing to Sue Insurer Without Valid Assignment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF, AS THIRD PARTY CREDITOR, LACKS STANDING TO SUE INSURER BECAUSE THE CAUSE OF ACTION SUED ON BELONGS TO DEFENDANT'S INSURED AND NOT TO PLAINTIFF AND _____ [THE INSURED HAS NOT MADE A VALID ASSIGNMENT OF THE CAUSE OF ACTION TO PLAINTIFF or THE INSURED'S PURPORTED ASSIGNMENT OF THE CAUSE OF ACTION TO PLAINTIFF IS INVALID].

Insured Made No Valid Assignment. A third-party judgment creditor of defendant's insured may not sue a liability insurer to recover the amount of its judgment in excess of policy limits without first obtaining from the insured an assignment of the latter's cause of action, if any, against the insurer for breach of its covenant of good faith in failing to accept a reasonable settlement offer (Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 942-944, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith for failing to accept a settlement. The basis for these points and authorities is that the plaintiff judgment creditor lacks standing to sue the insurer because the insured has not made a valid assignment of the insured's cause of action against the insurer.

This form may be combined with points and authorities contending that a stipulated judgment with covenant not to execute is not a valid transfer without court approval [see § 170.197].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For example, if this form is being used in support of an insurer's motion for summary judgment, the ground of the motion may be that the action has no merit because it indisputably appears from the papers submitted on the motion that:

- The insurer paid the full policy limit on the judgment together with interest and costs,
- Any cause of action against the insurer based on its alleged breach of its covenant of good faith with its insured resides in the insured and not in the insured's judgment creditor,
- The insured has not made a valid assignment to the judgment creditor of the insured's cause of action, if any, against defendant,
- There are, therefore, no triable issues as to any material fact, and
- The insurer is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

This form may also be used in a trial brief or in an appellate brief.

For legal background relating to when assignment is necessary for an insured's judgment creditor to be permitted to sue an insurer on behalf of the insured, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.190 and 120.206 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Made No Valid Assignment

Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584 , was an action against an insurer brought by the third-partyjudgment creditor of defendant's insured. The complaint alleged that plaintiff, in a prior action, had sued defendant's insured for wrongful death of her nine-year-old son, that defendant in that action had rejected settlement demands for $23,500 and $25,000 (the policy limit), and that plaintiff thereafter received a verdict of $85,000 but remitted all over $42,000 on the insurer's motion for new trial. That judgment was affirmed on appeal, and the insurer paid plaintiff the policy limit plus interest. Plaintiff then sued defendant insurer to recover the unpaid portion of the judgment in excess of the policy limit alleging that defendant had breached its duty of good faith to its insured by having refused to settle the prior action within policy limits. Plaintiff did not, however, allege that the insured had assigned to her his cause of action against the insurer, and the trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings on this ground. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court pointed out that when an insurance carrier breaches its duty to its insured to settle (1) the insured may recover the excess award over policy limits (17 Cal. 3d 937, 941) , (2) the insured may assign his or her cause of action against the insurer to the third-party judgment creditor, (3) the assignment is permitted without the consent of the insurance carrier, even when the policy provides to the contrary (17 Cal. 3d 937, 942) , (4) a third-party judgment creditor of the insured may, under the provisions of Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2), without an assignment, sue the insurer to recover the judgment up to the policy limits, but that this section does not authorize the third-party judgment creditor to proceed against the insurer for the excess of the judgment over the policy limits (17 Cal. 3d 937, 944) , (5) while a third-party beneficiary may enforce a contract expressly made for his other benefit under Civ. Code § 1559 (17 Cal. 3d 937, 943), he or she may not enforce covenants made not for his or her benefit but, rather, for the benefit of others, and (6) the duty to settle is intended to benefit the insured and not the injured claimant (17 Cal. 3d 937, 944).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Made No Valid Assignment

In Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865 , the Supreme Court stated that in the absence of an assignment, a third-party claimant cannot bring an action on a duty owed to the insured by the insurer and that the plaintiffs, standing in the place of the injured party, could claim no duty owing to the insured to defend since no assignment of the insured's right was claimed (22 Cal. 3d 865, 889).

In Shaolian v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 268, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702 , the insured, who had liability insurance in a homeowner's insurance policy, injured a third party who then attempted to sue the insurerbased on the medical coverage provisions in the policy. The court of appeal stated that inasmuch as the insurer's duties flow to its insured alone, a third party claimant may not bring a direct action against an insurance company. As a general rule, a third party may directly sue an insurer only if there has been an assignment of rights by, or a final judgment against, the insured (71 Cal. App. 4th 268, 271-272) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawThird PartiesGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingThird Party Claimants

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.197

§ 120.197 Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF, AS THIRD PARTY CREDITOR, LACKS STANDING TO SUE INSURER BECAUSE THE STIPULATED JUDGMENT WITH COVENANT NOT TO EXECUTE, ENTERED INTO BY PLAINTIFF JUDGMENT CREDITOR AND DEFENDANT'S INSURED, IS NOT VALID ASSIGNMENT OF THE INSURED'S CLAIM.

Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment. A stipulated judgment with a covenant not to execute against the insured will not support an assignment of the insured's cause of action to the judgment creditor unless the stipulated judgment and assignment is specifically approved by the court as a good faith settlement under Code of Civil Procedure Section 877.6 after a hearing on that issue, or has otherwise been found by a court to satisfy the criteria for a good-faith settlement, so that there is no basis for concern over the possibility of collusive conduct (Smith v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1114, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 ; see Roman v. Unigard Ins. Group (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith for failing to accept a settlement. The basis for these points and authorities is that the stipulated judgment with covenant not to execute is not a valid assignment, without approval by the court under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

This form may be combined with points and authorities generally contending that there was no valid assignment of insured's claim against the insurer [see § 170.196].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For example, if this form is being used in support of an insurer's motion for summary judgment, the ground of the motion may be that the action has no merit because it indisputably appears from the papers submitted on the motion that:

- The insurer paid the full policy limit on the judgment together with interest and costs,
- Any cause of action against the insurer based on its alleged breach of its covenant of good faith with its insured resides in the insured and not in the insured's judgment creditor,
- The insured has not made a valid assignment to the judgment creditor of the insured's cause of action, if any, against defendant,
- There are, therefore, no triable issues as to any material fact, and
- The insurer is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

This form may also be used in a trial brief or in an appellate brief.

For legal background relating to when assignment is necessary for an insured's judgment creditor to be permitted to sue an insurer on behalf of the insured, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of theaffiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.190 and 120.206 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

In Smith v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1114, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 , the insured was convicted of drunken driving, manslaughter, and felony hit and run driving after being involved in an accident in which another person was killed. The parents of the accident victim sued the insured for wrongful death. Two insurance policies potentially applied. One insurer undertook the insured's defense, but the other relied on a policy exclusion to deny coverage. Before the wrongful death action went to trial, the plaintiffs, insured, and participating insurer reached a settlement under which the parties stipulated to a judgment in favor of plaintiffs. As part of this settlement, the insured assigned to plaintiffs all claims that he might have against the nonparticipating insurer based on its failure to defend or settle the action. In consideration for this assignment, plaintiffs agreed not to execute on the stipulated judgment against the insured personally. Plaintiffs then sued the nonparticipating insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the action, and plaintiffs appealed (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1108-1109) .

The court of appeal concluded that while case law permits assignments in consideration of covenants not to execute (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1110-1111) , policy considerations make it undesirable to allow assignment of bad faith actions prior to a judgment in the underlying action. The court reasoned that if an assignment were permitted prior to judgment, the assignee could then litigate both the insured's liability and the insurance coverage issue in a single action, in contravention of Evid. Code § 1155 and public policy articulated in case law (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1112) . Moreover, the liability issue could not be litigated in an adversarial context because the insured may appear as an ally of the claimant, thereby putting the insurer at an unfair disadvantage (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1113) . Accordingly, a stipulated judgment with a covenant not to execute would not be sufficient to support an assignment of the insured's bad faith claim to plaintiffs. A judgment against the insured, or payment by the insured in settlement of the claim, would be required to support such an assignment (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1114) .

However, the court accepted plaintiffs' alternative argument that the insured's criminal conviction for manslaughter constituted an adjudication of liability sufficient to support the assignment. The court agreed that under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, the jury trial in which the insured was convicted would conclusively establish his negligence in the civil action. Such an adjudication of liability would remove the court's objection to assignment of the bad faith claim because the issue of liability would not have to be litigated in a nonadversarial context, and the insurer would not be put to an unfair disadvantage (5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1115-1116) .

In Roman v. Unigard Ins. Group (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 , an arson fire in an apartment building killed or injured several members of a family. The surviving family members sued the building owners and manager. Claiming noncoverage, the manager's insurer refused to participate in negotiations that resulted in a settlement by the other parties. Subsequently the manager, without its insurer's participation, also settled under an arrangement whereby a stipulated judgment was entered in a specified amount. This settlement was subject to a court determination, on submission of evidence by plaintiffs, that the judgment was fair and reasonable. The manager also assigned all its rights against its insurer to plaintiffs, and plaintiffs agreed not to execute against the manager personally. After a hearing, the court found that the settlement was in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 and was not the result of collusion or fraud. Subsequently, plaintiffs sued the manager's insurer for bad faith, breach of contract, and other claims. The court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment on the grounds that plaintiffs had no standing to sue because the management company's assignment of its claims against the insurer was invalid under Smith v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1114, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 , and plaintiffs appealed (26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 179-183) .

The court of appeal reversed. Relying on Sanchez v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1778 , the court held that astipulated judgment and covenant not to execute, when approved by a court as a good faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, is sufficient to support an assignment because it eliminates any concern that the parties engaged in collusive or abusive conduct (26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

In Sanchez v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1778 , an insurer refused to defend a wrongful death action. The action resulted in a stipulated judgment that was approved by the court as a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The stipulated judgment contained a covenant not to execute against the insured until after the plaintiff's action against the insurer was resolved. Plaintiff filed a direct action against the insurer and the insurer demurred on the basis of the "no action" clause in its policy, which prohibited actions against the insurer until after the insurer's obligation was determined by a judgment following actual trial or a written agreement of the insurer, insured, and claimant. The trial court sustained the demurrer, but the court of appeal reversed, holding that a stipulated judgment approved by a court under Code Civ. Proc § 877.6 is sufficient to support an action under the "no action" clause and Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2) (the "direct action") statute because the court review of the claim eliminated concern over potential collusion, fraud, or tortious conduct in connection with the settlement (21 Cal. App. 4th 1778, 1788-1789) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewContracts LawPerformanceAssignmentGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityCovenants Not to ExecuteInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.198

§ 120.198 Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED WAIVED ANY CLAIM HE/SHE MIGHT HAVE AGAINST INSURER FOR PURELY PERSONAL DAMAGES WHEN HE/SHE ASSIGNED HIS/HER CLAIM TO INSURED'S THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT CREDITOR.

Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor. An insured who assigns to his or her judgment creditor the insured's claim against the insurer for damages for the insurer's breach of its covenant of good faiththereby waives any claim for purely personal damages that the insured might have against the insurer (Purcell v. Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814, 97 Cal. Rptr. 874).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable for breach of the implied covenant of good faith for failing to accept a reasonable settlement. The basis for these points and authorities is that the insured is no longer the real party in interest because the insured assigned whatever cause of action he or she might have against the insurer, to his or her third-party judgment creditor, and the assignee thereafter sued the insurer on the assigned claim. In doing this, the insured waived any claim he or she might have to recover damages against the insurer for any purely personal wrong.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by defendant insurer in an action by its insured to recover damages for breach of the implied covenant of good faith in failing to accept a reasonable offer to settle the case against the insured in a third-party action which resulted in a judgment against the insured in excess of the policy limits. The grounds for the motion would be, for example, that the action has no merit because it indisputably appears from the papers submitted on the motion:

- The insured has assigned to his or her third-party judgment creditor whatever cause of action he or she might have against the insurer for failure to settle,
- The assignee thereafter sued defendant in the assigned claim,
- Plaintiff is, therefore, not the real party in interest and has waived any claim he or she might have to recover damages for any purely personal wrong,
- There are no triable issues as to any material fact, and
- Defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

This form may also be used by an insurer in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.195[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showingthat the insured assigned the claim to his or her judgment creditor and that the latter subsequently sued the insurer on the assigned claim.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.190 and 120.206 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

Purcell v. Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 97 Cal. Rptr. 874 , was an action by an insured against his insurer for damages for mental and physical pain and suffering resulting from defendant's failure tosettle, within policy limits, a claim against plaintiff for bodily injury, property damage, and wrongful death. Judgment in excess of the policy limit had been rendered against plaintiff insured in the third-party action, and plaintiff assigned to the third-party judgment creditors his cause of action against defendant insurer. The third-party judgment creditors then sued defendant on the assignment, and plaintiff in a separate action sued defendant to recover damages for pain and suffering. Defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings was granted, and plaintiff appealed. Plaintiff contended that he had two causes of action against his insurer, one for the pecuniary loss resulting from the judgment in excess of policy limits and one for pain and suffering and that only the former had been assigned.

The court of appeal rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment. The court said that while the general rule is that causes of action for injuries to person and property are separate, all damages for a single breach of contract must be recovered in one action, that even if defendant's actions were viewed as a tortious breach of the duty owed plaintiff, the same result followed (20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 813) . Quoting from Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 832, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 , the court said that compensatory damages do not constitute a plaintiff's cause of action, that his cause of action arises from the wrong inflicted on him, and that for the infliction of that wrong he is allowed an award of damages. An entire claim arising either on a contract or from a wrong cannot be divided and made the subject of several suits (20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 813) . The court said that plaintiff could not split the cause of action and explained that, had plaintiff desired to retain his claim for emotional distress, he could have contracted with the third parties to pay to them all or any part of a judgment he might recover from the insurer and that, had he done so, he could have recovered all proper damages without submitting the defendant to a multiplicity of lawsuits (20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814) . The court concluded that plaintiff possessed a single and indivisible cause of action against defendant. Having assigned his cause of action to his judgment creditors in clear and unequivocal language, plaintiff simply waived any claim for personal damages that he might have been able to recover had he, himself, brought the action against the insurer for all damages (20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

In Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584 , the Supreme Court summarized Purcell v. Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 97 Cal. Rptr. 874 [see § 120.198[3][a]] as follows: An insured assigned his cause of action for breach ofthe duty to settle, the assignee suing on the assignment; subsequently, the insured sued for mental distress; the second action was held to violate the rule against splitting a cause of action; the court suggested that the insured should have brought a single action in his own name for all damage, agreeing to pay part of the recovery to the assignee (17 Cal. 3d 937, 942) .

In San Jose v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 447, 115 Cal. Rptr. 797, 525 P.2d 701 , an original writ proceeding arising out of a purported class action against a municipal airport to recover for diminution in the market value of property allegedly caused by aircraft noise, vapor, dust, and vibration, the theories of liability being nuisance and inverse condemnation, the trial court certified the case as a class action, and defendant sought extraordinary relief based on the contention, among others, that plaintiffs did not adequately represent the members of the class. The Supreme Court upheld this contention and directed issuance of a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to vacate its order of certification and to dismiss the class action portion of the suit (12 Cal. 3d 447, 465) .

The Court pointed out that damages recoverable in a successful nuisance action for injuries to real property include not only diminution in market value but also damages for annoyance, inconvenience, and discomfort, actual injuries to the land, and costs of minimizing future damages. The Court noted that, under California law, a party cannot, as a general rule, split a single cause of action because the first judgment bars recovery in a second suit on the same cause, and that plaintiffs, by seeking damages only for diminution in market value, would effectually be waiving, on behalf of the hundreds of class members, any possible recovery of potentially substantial damages, present or future, and that this they may not do (12 Cal. 3d 447, 464) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.199

§ 120.199 In Action by Insured Against Insurer for Failure to Settle, Insured May Not Recover Punitive Damages Awarded Against Insured in Underlying Action if Punitive Damages Award Was Based on Insured's Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED IS NOT ENTITLED TO RECOVER FROM INSURER THE AMOUNT OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES AWARDED AGAINST INSURED IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION, BECAUSE THE PUNITIVE DAMAGES AWARD WAS BASED ON THE INSURED'S OWNCONDUCT, AND PUBLIC POLICY PREVENTS INDEMNIFICATION OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

Insured Cannot Recover from Insurer Punitive Damages Awarded Against Insured. An insured may not recover from the insurer the amount of punitive damages awarded against the insured in the underlying third-party action following the insurer's failure to settle, if the punitive damages were awarded against the insured because of the insured's own conduct (PPG Indus., Inc. v. Transamerica Ins. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 310, 315-319, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 975 P.2d 652).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted, in a case in which the punitive damages were awarded against the insured because of the insured's own conduct, in support of the contention by an insurer that the insurer is not liable to the insured for punitive damages awarded against the insured in the underlying action, following the insurer's refusal to settle with the third party [see PPG Indus., Inc. v. Transamerica Ins. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 310, 315-319, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 975 P.2d 652] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of counsel's case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showing that the punitive damages award against the insured was based on the insured's own conduct.

This form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument with respect to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] In Action by Insured Against Insurer for Failure to Settle, Insured May Not Recover Punitive Damages Awarded Against Insured in Underlying Action if Punitive Damages Award Was Based on Insured's Conduct

PPG Indus., Inc. v. Transamerica Ins. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 310, 315-319, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 975 P.2d 652 , was an action against an insurer by the successor in interest to the insured, for failure to settle the third-party claim within policy limits although the insured had urged the insurerto do so. Following the insurer's refusal to settle, the injured person brought a lawsuit against the insured in which the jury awarded the plaintiff $5.1 million in compensatory damages and $1 million in punitive damages. The injury to the plaintiff occurred because a windshield distributed and installed by the insured "popped out" during a collision, propelling the plaintiff through the resultant opening and rendering him a paraplegic. The plaintiff showed that the method used by the insured to install the windshield (using silicone instead of industry-recommended urethane) created, with the insured's knowledge, the defective and dangerous condition that caused the plaintiff's injuries. The punitive damages award was based on the insured's conduct in this respect. Following the judgment, the insurer paid the policy limits of $1.5 million plus over $1 million in costs and interest. The excess insurer paid the remainder of compensatory damages, leaving the insured to pay the $1 million in punitive damages. The insured's successor in interest sued the insurer for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, alleging that the insurer unreasonably refused to settle the underlying lawsuit and seeking compensatory damages representing the $1 million in punitive damages that it was required to pay in the underlying suit. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer, relying on the well-established rule prohibiting indemnity coverage for punitive damages awarded against the insured. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, and the insured sought review.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal, holding that an insured is prohibited from shifting to the insurance company the obligation to pay punitive damages resulting from the insured's egregious misconduct in the underlying lawsuit. First, the Court stated that public policy prevents liability for intentional wrongdoing from being offset or reduced by the negligence of another. Second, the purpose of punitive damages is to punish the defendant and to deter future misconduct by making an example of the defendant. If the Court were to allow the intentional wrongdoer to shift responsibility for its morally culpable behavior to the insurance company, which surely will pass to the public its higher cost of doing business, it would defeat the public policies of punishing the intentional wrongdoer for its own outrageous conduct and deterring it and others from engaging in that conduct in the future. Third, public policy prohibits indemnification for punitive damages. In this case, the Court noted, punitive damages in the third-party lawsuit were awarded not against the insurance company for its unreasonable failure to settle that lawsuit, but rather against the insured for the insured's own morally reprehensible behavior in installing the windshield on the injured party's vehicle. The Court concluded that an insured may not shift to its insurance company, and ultimately to the public, the payment of punitive damages awarded in the third-party lawsuit against the insured as a result of theinsured's intentional, morally blameworthy behavior against the third party (20 Cal. 4th 310, 315-319) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPunitive Damages Exclusions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.200-120.204

[Reserved]

§§ 120.200[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.205

§ 120.205 Insurer Did Not Act in Act Good Faith in Rejecting Settlement Offer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED BREACHED THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BY REJECTING THE SETTLEMENT OFFER.

A. Insurer Failed to Act in Good Faith. Every insurance contract contains an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement (Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658, 328 P.2d 198 ; Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 756, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322).

B. Insurer Breached Its Duty By Failing to Settle Claim. The obligation of good faith and fair dealing requires a liability insurer, in an appropriate case, to settle the claim against its insured, although the express terms of the policy do not impose such a duty (Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 14-16, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 ; Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 659, 328 P.2d 198).

C. Insurer Failed to Take Insured's Interest Into Consideration. In deciding whether to compromise a claim against its insured, the insurer must take into account the interest of the insured and give it at least as much consideration as it does to its own interest (Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 659, 328 P.2d 198 ; Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 756, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322).

D. Insurer's Breach Established by Factors. In deciding whether the insurer's refusal to settle constitutes a breach of its duty to exercise good faith, the following factors should be considered: (1) the strength of the injured claimant's case on the issuesof liability and damages; (2) attempts by the insurer to induce the insured to contribute to a settlement; (3) failure of the insurer to properly investigate the circumstances so as to ascertain the evidence against the insured; (4) the insurer's rejection of the advice of its own attorney or agent; (5) failure of the insurer to inform the insured of a compromise offer; (6) the amount of financial risk to which each party is exposed in the event of a refusal to settle; (7) the fault of the insured in inducing the insurer's rejection of the compromise offer by misleading it as to the facts; and (8) any other factors tending to establish or negate bad faith on the part of the insurer (Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 689, 319 P.2d 69 ; see also Coe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 981, 990, 136 Cal. Rptr. 331).

E. Insurer's Conduct Fails Objective Test. In determining whether an insurer has given consideration to the interests of the insured, the test is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer (Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 429, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173).

F. Insurer Is Liable for Entire Judgment. A liability insurer that refuses to accept a reasonable settlement offer within policy limits of the claim against its insured, in violation of its duty to consider in good faith the interest of the insured in the settlement, is liable for the entire judgment against the insured, even if it exceeds the policy limits (Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 15, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 ; Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 661, 328 P.2d 198 ; Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 682, 319 P.2d 69).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that the insurer did not breach the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by handling the insured's claim in a reasonable manner. The basis of these points and authorities is that by failing to accept a reasonable settlement offer, the insurer breached the implied covenant.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by a plaintiff insured in an action against a liability insurer for damages for breach of the implied covenant of good faithbased on the insurer's refusal to settle a claim against its insured within policy limits. In this context, this form would be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment by the insurer. The grounds of the opposition are:

(1) There is in every insurance contract an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing on the part of the parties,

(2) Pursuant to this implied covenant, an insurer has a duty to act in good faith towards its insured,

(3) The duty of good faith requires the insurer to settle the claim against its insured within policy limits when there is a substantial likelihood of recovery in excess of those limits,

(4) Whether the insurer acted in good faith in rejecting the settlement offer is a material fact [see Garner v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 847-848, 107 Cal. Rptr. 604 (whether or not insurer has acted in good faith in negotiating settlement is question of fact)]; and

(5) There are triable issues with respect to this fact.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.195 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.186[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.186 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background related to an insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing, including related forms of complaint, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Act in Good Faith

Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 328 P.2d 198 , was an action to recover from defendant insurer the amount of a judgment in excess of policy limits previously recovered by plaintiff and his wife in a third-party action against defendant's insured. Plaintiff and his wife had been struck in a marked pedestrian crosswalk by a truck driven by defendant's insured. Plaintiff was seriously injured, and his wife suffered minor injuries. The policy limits were $10,000 for each person injured and $20,000 for each accident. The insured notified defendant of the accident and was told that the policy did not provide coverage because the insured was driving a truck which did not belong to him. Plaintiff and his wife then sued the insured. Defendant refused to defend the action against the insured, and the insured employed competent counsel to represent him. On the second day of trial, the insured informed defendant that plaintiffs would compromise the case for $4,000, that he did not have enough money to effect the settlement, and that it was highly probable that the jury would return a verdict in excess of policy limits. Under the policy, defendant was obligated to defend any personal injury suit covered by the policy, but it was given the right to make such settlement as it might deem expedient.

The insured demanded that defendant assume defense and settlement of the case, but defendant refused. Trial resulted in a judgment against the insured in favor of plaintiff for $25,000 and in favor of his wife for $1,250. The insured did not pay the judgment, and plaintiff and his wife sued defendant insurer under a provision of the policy permitting the injured party to maintain an action against the insurer after obtaining judgment against the insured [see Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2)]. Judgment was rendered in favor of plaintiff for $10,000 and in favor of his wife for $1,250, which sums defendant insurer paid. Plaintiff then obtained an assignment of the insured's rights against defendant insurer and commenced an action to recover the portion of the judgment exceeding the policy limits. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, but the trial court entered judgment fordefendant notwithstanding the verdict. In reversing the judgment with directions to the trial court to enter judgment on the verdict, the Supreme Court said that there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement and that this principle is applicable to insurance policies (50 Cal. 2d 654, 658) .

In Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739 , in affirming the judgment for plaintiff insured, the court of appeal said that every insurance contract contains an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and that good faith and fair dealing means that each party is prevented from interfering with the other's right to benefit from the contract (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 756) .

[b] Insurer Breached Its Duty By Failing to Settle Claim

Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 , was an action to recover the amount of a judgment in excess of policy limits previously recovered by plaintiff against defendant's insured. Plaintiff and her husband had been injured in a car accident caused by the negligence of defendant's insured and sued the insured for damages. The insurer assumed defense of that action but reserved its right to litigate the coverage issue and brought a declaratory relief action against plaintiff and the insured for a determination as to whether the policy afforded coverage. Plaintiff's subsequent offer to settle her claim for $10,000, the full amount of the policy, was rejected by defendant, which stated it would be willing to offer the policy limits only if it were judicially determined that the policy did in fact provide coverage. Defendant admitted the offer was reasonable and conceded that its insured was negligent. Despite defendant's efforts to expedite the declaratory relief action, the personal injury action went to judgment, resulting in an award against the insured for $33,889.30. The trial court in the declaratory relief action ruled in favor of the insurer on the coverage issue, but that determination was reversed on appeal. A final judgment holding that the policy did provide coverage was entered more than four years after the action was commenced. The insurer paid plaintiff the policy limit plus interest.

The insured assigned his rights against the insurer to plaintiff in exchange for her promise to release him from personal liability on the outstanding judgment. Plaintiff, as assignee of the insured's rights, then commenced an action against the insurer to recover the portion of the judgment exceeding the policy limits. The trial court rendered judgment for defendant after finding that the insurer's liability could be predicated only on a showing of bad faith and that the insurer entertained a bona fide belief that coverage did not exist (15 Cal. 3d 9, 13-14) . The Supreme Court reversed. The Court said that the implied covenant of good faith and fairdealing imposes a duty on the insurer to settle a claim against its insured within policy limits whenever there is a substantial likelihood of a recovery in excess of those limits (15 Cal. 3d 9, 14-15) , and that whenever it is likely that the judgment against the insured will exceed policy limits so that the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is a settlement which can be made within those limits, a consideration in good faith of the insured's interests requires the insurer to settle the claim (15 Cal. 3d 9, 16) .

The factual background of Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 328 P.2d 198 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict with directions to the trial court to enter judgment on the verdict for plaintiff, the Supreme Court said that it is common knowledge that a large percentage of the claims covered by insurance are settled without litigation, that this is one of the usual methods by which the insured receives protection, and that under these circumstances, the implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing requires the insurer to settle in an appropriate case although the express terms of the policy do not impose such a duty. The Court added that when there is a great risk of a recovery beyond the policy limits so that the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is a settlement which can be made within those limits, a consideration in good faith of the insured's interest requires the insurer to settle the claim (50 Cal. 2d 654, 659) .

[c] Insurer Failed to Take Insured's Interest Into Consideration

The factual background of Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 328 P.2d 198 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict with directions to the trial court to enter judgment on the verdict for plaintiff, the Supreme Court said that the insurer, in deciding whether a claim should be compromised, must take into account the interest of the insured and give it at least as much consideration as it does to its own interest (50 Cal. 2d 654, 659) .

In Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff insured, the court of appeal said that the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is always a prominent issue in the settlement phase of insurance cases because of the possibility of a conflict of interest between the interests of the insurer and the insured. The court observed that when a conflict of interests emerges, the carrier has the obligation of protecting the interests of the insured equally with its own, and that such a conflict arises not only at the litigation stage, butalso at the moment when a third-party claimant offers to settle an excess claim within the policy limits (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 756) .

[d] Insurer's Breach Established by Factors

Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 319 P.2d 69 , was an action to recover from defendant insurer the amount of a judgment in excess of the policy limits previously recovered by plaintiff against defendant's insured. Plaintiff was injured by the negligent driving of defendant's insured. The policy limit was $5,000 for bodily injury to any one person. Plaintiff sued the insured who was represented by a law firm hired by defendant to defend the insured. Plaintiff's offer before trial to settle the litigation for $5,000 was rejected by defendant insurer. During trial, defendant insurer made offers of settlement in the amounts of $3,000, $3,500, and $4,000, but rejected offers to settle for the policy limit, maintaining throughout that unless it could save some money on the settlement, it had no reason to settle. The action against the insurer resulted in a judgment for plaintiff in the amount of $15,000. Defendant insurer paid the sum of $5,000, plus $138.50 costs, leaving a balance of $10,000 on the judgment. The insured filed for bankruptcy, and the trustee in bankruptcy assigned all of the insured's interests in any claims against defendant insurer to plaintiff, who then commenced the action to recover the balance of the judgment. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment of dismissal. The court of ap peal reversed with directions to allow plaintiff to file an amended complaint (155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 696) . The court said that the factors set out in Paragraph D should be considered in determining whether the insurer's refusal to settle constitutes a breach of its covenant of good faith (155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 689) .

[e] Insurer's Conduct Fails Objective Test

Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 , was an action by an insured, a 70-year-old immigrant widow, against her insurer to recover damages proximately resulting from the insurer's refusal to settle a claim against plaintiff insured within policy limits. Plaintiff owned an apartment building which had an outside wooden stairway that was defective. A tenant was seriously injured as a result of the defect and she and her husband sued plaintiff for $400,000. Plaintiff was covered by a general liability policy in the amount of $10,000 issued by defendant. The policy obligated defendant to defend any suit against the insured and authorized it to make any settlement it deemed expedient. Both the attorney employed by defendant to defend the insured and the insurer's claims manager felt that a jury verdict would be not less than$100,000 against the insured if the jury felt the accident triggered the tenant's psychosis which had developed.

The tenant offered to settle her claim for $10,000. Defendant insurer would pay only $3,000, and later rejected the tenant's settlement demand of $9,000 at a time when plaintiff had offered to pay $2,500 of it. The jury awarded the tenant $100,000 and her husband $1,000. Defendant paid $10,000. A settlement was arranged between the tenants and plaintiff insured whereby the tenants received $22,000, a 40 percent interest in plaintiff's claim to a particular piece of property, and an assignment of plaintiff's cause of action against defendant insurer. Plaintiff, as a result, became indigent and worked as a babysitter. Her grandchildren paid her rent. The change in her financial condition was accompanied by a decline in physical health, hysteria, and suicide attempts. She then brought the present action. The court awarded plaintiff $91,000, plus interest, for the judgment she suffered in the prior third-party action, and $25,000 for mental suffering. Defendant appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. It said that in determining whether an insurer has given consideration to the interests of the insured, the test is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer (66 Cal. 2d 425, 429) .

[f] Insurer Is Liable for Entire Judgment

The factual background of Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][b]. The Supreme Court, in reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, said that California authorities establish that an insurer who fails to accept a reasonable settlement offer within policy limits because it believes the policy does not provide coverage assumes the risk that it will be held liable for all damages resulting from such refusal, including damages in excess of applicable policy limits (15 Cal. 3d 9, 12) . Quoting from Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 658, 660, 328 P.2d 198 , the Court said it was not claimed that the settlement offer was unreasonable in view of the extent of the injuries and the probability that the insured would be found liable, that the insurer's only reason for refusing to settle was its claim that the accident was not covered by the policy, that an insurer who denies coverage does so at its own risk, and that if the denial is found to be wrongful, it is liable for the full amount which will compensate the insured for all the detriment caused by the insurer's breach of the express and implied obligations of the contract (15 Cal. 3d 9, 15) .

The factual background of Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 328 P.2d 198 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict with directions to enter judgment on the verdict for plaintiff, the Supreme Court said that an insurer who wrongfully declines to defend and who refuses to accept a reasonable settlement within the policy limits in violation of its duty to consider in good faith the interest of the insured in the settlement is liable for the entire judgment against the insured, even if it exceeds the policy limits (50 Cal. 2d 654, 661) . The Court earlier in its opinion explained that the decisive factor in fixing the extent of liability is not the refusal to defend; it is the refusal to accept an offer of settlement within policy limits (50 Cal. 2d 654, 659) .

The factual background of Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 319 P.2d 69 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][d]. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, the court of appeal said that when an insurer engages in compromise negotiations of a claim against the insured, it owes the insured a duty to exercise good faith; breach of this duty renders the insurer liable for damages (155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 682) .

NOTE:

In Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 , amicus curiae argued that whenever an insurer receives a settlement offer within policy limits and rejects it, the insurer should be liable in every case for the amount of anyfinal judgment, whether or not the judgment is within the policy limits [Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 430, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d

173] . The Supreme Court favorably discussed the reasons for and effect of such a rule [Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 430-431, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173] , but declined to specifically adopt it on the ground that in the case before it, the evidence was clearly sufficient to support the determination that the insurer breached its duty to consider the interests of the insured in rejecting the proposed settlements [Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 431-432, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173] . In view of the Supreme Court's favorable discussion of the proposed rule, counsel may wish to argue for absolute liability before the trial court, as well as arguing breach of the covenant of good faith, although no California decision has been found adopting or rejecting the proposed rule [see Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 17 n.6, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 (proposed rule has been adopted by New Jersey Supreme Court in well-reasoned opinion, but declining to resolve whether it applies in California on ground that in case before it, defendant's liability for excess judgment could be predicated on its rejection of reasonable settlement offer)]. Failure to argue such liability in the trial court may preclude the issue's being raised for the first time on appeal [see Marsango v. Automobile Club of S. Cal. (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 688, 694-695, 82 Cal. Rptr. 92]

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Act in Good Faith

In Murphy v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 937, 132 Cal. Rptr. 424, 553 P.2d 584 , the Supreme Court stated that in every contract there isan implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that neither party will do anything which injures the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement and that this principle is applicable to insurance policies.

In Archdale v. American Int'l Specialty Lines Ins. Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 449, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632 , third parties sued the insureds for personal injuries arising out of a vehicle accident. The defendants' automobile liability insurer provided a defense, which resulted in an excess judgment. In a subsequent action, the third party (under an assignment of rights) brought a breach of contract action against the insurer, alleging a failure to accept multiple reasonable settlement offers within the policy limit. The appellate court reversed summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The court held, among other things, that in every contract, including policies of insurance, there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing that neither party will do anything that will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement (154 Cal. App. 4th 449, 463) .

In Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. v. Harbor Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 105, 111, 149 Cal. Rptr. 313 , the court of appeal stated that there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every insurance policy that neither party will do anything that will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the policy.

[b] Insurer Breached Its Duty By Failing to Settle Claim

In Archdale v. American Int'l Specialty Lines Ins. Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 449, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632 , third parties sued the insureds for personal injuries arising out of a vehicle accident. The defendants' automobile liability insurer provided a defense, which resulted in an excess judgment. In a subsequent action, the third party (under an assignment of rights) brought a breach of contract action against the insurer, alleging a failure to accept multiple reasonable settlement offers within the policy limit. The appellate court reversed summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The court held, among other things, that the implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing requires the insurer to settle in an appropriate case although the express terms of the policy do not impose the duty (154 Cal. App. 4th 449, 463) .

Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , arose out of a single car collision. Cain, a passenger in the car, was seriously injured and subsequently sued Jew, the owner and operator of the car, which was insured under a liability policy having a $25,000 limit. Prior to trial, Cain's attorney made offers to settle the claim for the policy limit. The insurer rejected the offers. The jury returned a verdict in favor of Cain for $57,883. The insurer paid Cain $25,000, the policy limit. Jew then assigned to Cain any cause of action he might have against the insurer because of its failure to have settled for the policy limit, including the right to sue for the amount of the excess verdict. He reserved to himself, however, any cause of action for physical injuries sustained by him as a result of the insurer's failure to settle. Subsequently, Cain and Jew jointly sued defendant insurer, alleging bad faith breach of contract and seeking compensatory and exemplary damages. The jury returned a verdict for Cain in the amount of $32,883.69 (amount of prior judgment in excess of policy limit) and a verdict in favor of Jew for $25,000 compensatory damages and $115,000 punitive damages. Judgment was entered on these verdicts, and the insurer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It said that under California law, every liability insurance policy carries an implied covenant obligating the insurer to act in good faith in considering settlement offers and that this obligation requires the insurer to give the offer its intelligent and informed consideration (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 791) . Quoting from Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 429, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 , the court said that when there is great risk of a recovery beyond policy limits so that the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is a settlement which can be made within those limits, a consideration in good faith of the insured's interest requires the insurer to settle the claim (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 792) .

[c] Insurer Failed to Take Insured's Interest Into Consideration

The factual background of Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , is discussed in § 120.205[4][b]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal said that the implied covenant obligating the insurer to act in good faith in considering settlement offers requires that the insurer give equal consideration to the interests of its insured (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 791) . The court said that the issue before it was whether the insurer failed to do this when it refused the settlement offers (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 791-792) . The court reviewed the evidence and concluded that the record supported a finding that defendant insurer had tortiously breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by a wrongful refusal to settle within the policy limits and by failing to give equal consideration to the interests of its insured (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 794) .

[d] Insurer's Conduct Fails Objective Test

In Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff insured, the court of appeal said that the measure for determining whether the insured's interests were properly considered is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer. The court noted that in deciding whether to compromise the claim, the insurer must conduct itself as though it alone were liable for the entire amount of the judgment, and that the insurer must give informed consent to any offer of settlement and must advise the insured of the offer and of the insurer's assessment of that offer (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 756).

The factual background of Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , is discussed in § 120.205[4][b]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal, citing Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 429, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 , said that the test to be applied in determining whether the insurer gave equal consideration to the interests of its insured is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 792) .

[e] Insurer Is Liable for Entire Judgment

The factual background of Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , is discussed in § 120.205[4][b]. In affirming thejudgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal said that a breach by the insurer of any of its obligations (to act in good faith in considering settlement offers, to give the offer its intelligent and informed consideration, to advise the insured of any settlement offers, together with the results of its investigations, and to give equal consideration to the interests of its insured), when coupled with a refusal to settle within the policy limits, renders the insurer liable for the entire amount of a judgment against its insured, including any portion in excess of policy limits (47 Cal.App. 3d 783, 791) . The court explained that liability is not imposed for a bad-faith breach of the contract, but for failure to meet the duty to accept reasonable settlements and that liability may exist when the insurer unwarrantedly refuses an offered settlement where the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is by accepting the settlement (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 792) . The court further held that the award to the insured of damages for mental distress and punitive damages was proper and supported by the evidence (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 792-794) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGood Faith & Fair DealingInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.206

§ 120.206 Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF JUDGMENT CREDITOR HAS STANDING TO SUE INSURER FOR INSURER'S BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING IN INSURER'S FAILURE TO ACCEPT A REASONABLE SETTLEMENT, BECAUSE INSURED PROPERLY ASSIGNED HIS/HER INTEREST TO JUDGMENT CREDITOR.

Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor. An action for damages in excess of the policy limits based on insurer's wrongful failure to settle is assignable (Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 14 n.3, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 ; Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 661, 328 P.2d 198).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that insured made a proper assignment of his or her rights against the insurer to the judgment creditor.

This form may be used by a judgment creditor in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in §§ 120.206 and 120.211.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

The factual background of Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 ,is discussed in § 120.205[3][b]. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, the Supreme Court, quoting from Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 661, 328 P.2d 198 , said that an action for damages in excess of the policy limits based on an insurer's failure to settle is assignable, whether the action is considered as sounding in tort or in contract (15 Cal. 3d 9, 14 n.3).

The factual background of Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 328 P.2d 198 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict with directions to enter judgment on the verdict for plaintiff, the Supreme Court said that an action for damages in excess of the policy limits based on an insurer's wrongful failure to settle is assignable, whether the action is considered as sounding in tort or in contract (50 Cal. 2d 654, 661) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

The factual background of Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , is discussed in § 120.205[4][b]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal noted that the insurer did not challenge the assignability of the insured's cause of action against his insurer to the insured's third-party judgment creditor (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 794) , the implication being that such an assignment is proper.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGood Faith & Fair DealingInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsPolicy Limits

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.207

§ 120.207 Insured's Failure to Pay Excess Judgment Does Not Exonerate Insurer's Wrongful Refusal to Settle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS LIABLE FOR ITS BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING EVEN THOUGH INSURED FAILED TO PAY THE EXCESS JUDGMENT RENDERED AGAINST HIM/HER, BECAUSE PAYMENT OF THE JUDGMENT IN EXCESS OF THE POLICY LIMIT BY THE INSURED IS NOT A PREREQUISITE TO SUIT.

Nonpayment of Excess Judgment by Insured. Payment of the judgment in excess of the policy limit by the insured is not aprerequisite to suit against the insurance company for wrongful refusal to settle (Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 689-690, 319 P.2d 69).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that payment of the judgment in excess of the policy limit by the insured is not a prerequisite to suit against the insurance company for wrongful refusal to settle.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.195 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonpayment of Excess Judgment by Insured

The factual background of Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 319 P.2d 69 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][d]. In reversing judgment for defendant, the court rejected defendant's argument that payment by the insured of the amount of the judgment in excess of the policy limit is a prerequisite to his cause of action for wrongful refusal to settle. The court said that logic and reason supported the contrary view and that the insured's cause of action arises when he or she incurs a binding judgment in excess of the policy limit (155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 689-690) . An insurance company may not, the court said, take advantage of the limited financial ability of its insured in order to escape its obligations (155 Cal. App. 2d 679, 690) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsExcess JudgmentsInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGood Faith & Fair Dealing

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.208

§ 120.208 Insurer's Breach of Covenant Is Not Excused by Insured's Failure to Perform Contractual Obligation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS LIABLE FOR ITS BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING DESPITE ANY ALLEGED FAILURE BY INSURED TO PERFORM ITS CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATION BECAUSE INSURER'S DUTY UNDER THE COVENANT IS UNCONDITIONAL AND INDEPENDENT OF THE PERFORMANCE OF THE INSURED'S CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS.

Insurer Breached Its Unconditional Duty of Good Faith. The insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing is unconditional and independent of the performance of the insured's contractual obligations (Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 578, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer's breach of the covenant is not excused by the insured's failure to perform contractual obligation.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.195 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessaryfoundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Its Unconditional Duty of Good Faith

The factual background of Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , is discussed in § 120.170[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal as to defendant insurers, the Supreme Court noted that all parties appeared to assume that plaintiff's contractual duty to appear and submit to an examination and to produce documents was a dependent condition (whether precedent or subsequent) to defendants' covenant of good faith and fair dealing. In other words, the underlying premise of their arguments was that if plaintiff's failure to appear as demanded constituted a breach of plaintiff's obligation under the policies, then defendants' duty of good faith and fair dealing was excused.

The Court, however, concluded that it need not consider these contentions because it did not think that the controlling issue was the nature of plaintiff's duty, that is, whether his dependent duty was precedent or subsequent; rather, the Court said, the crucial issue was the nature of defendants' duty, that is, whether their duty of good faith and fair dealing was absolute or conditional (9 Cal. 3d 566, 577) . The Court said that while it might be argued that defendants would be excused from their contractual duties (e.g., obligation to indemnify) if plaintiff breached his obligations under the policies, it did not think that plaintiff's alleged breach excused defendants from their duty, implied by law, of good faith and fair dealing. In other words, the insurer's duty is unconditional and independent of the performance of plaintiff's contractual obligations (9 Cal. 3d 566, 578) .

The Court explained that the existence of a contractual relationship does not insulate defendant insurers from liability that is ordinarily visited on tortfeasors for interfering with a property interest of the insured in receiving the benefits of the agreement and that, therefore, even though the duty allegedly assumed by defendant insurers arises from an existing contractual relationship, this duty is independent of the performance of plaintiff's contractual obligations (9 Cal. 3d 566, 578) . The Court concluded that the duty of good faith and fair dealing on the part of defendant insurance companies is an absolute one. The Court added, however, that it wasn't saying that the parties couldn't define, by the terms of the contract, their respective obligations and duties, but merely that no matter how those duties were stated, the nonperformance by one party of its contractual duties cannot excuse a breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing by the other party while the contract between them is in effect and not rescinded (9 Cal. 3d 566, 578) . It should be noted that the Court, in a footnote, added that even if defendants' duty were construed as a dependent condition (that is, dependent on plaintiff's performance of his obligation under the policies), plaintiff's failure to appear would still not be fatal to his cause of action; the allegations of the complaint demonstrated the plaintiff's failure to appear was induced by defendants' conduct, in breach of their duty of good faith and fair dealing, and that, therefore, plaintiff's obligation to appear could be seen as excused by defendants' alleged breach (9 Cal. 3d 566, 578 n.9).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.209

§ 120.209 Good-Faith Denial of Coverage Is No Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EVEN IF INSURER BELIEVED IN GOOD FAITH THAT THE POLICY DID NOT COVER THE LIABILITY, INSURER IS LIABLE FOR ITS BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BECAUSE AN INSURER'S ERRONEOUS GOOD-FAITH BELIEF THAT THE POLICY DOES NOT COVER LIABILITY IS NO DEFENSE.

Good-Faith Belief in Noncoverage as No Defense. A liability insurer's "good faith," though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer (Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 16, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. They may be used by an insured in an action against a liability insurer when the insurer admits that the settlement offer made was reasonable, or does not challenge the reasonableness of the offer, but contends that in rejecting the offer it acted in a bona fide belief that the policy did not cover the liability. The basis of these points and authorities is that such belief is not a defense.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts. For example, they may be used in an action:

- Brought by an insured against a liability insurer to recover damages sustained as a result of alleged bad faith.

- Brought by a third-party judgment creditor suing on the insured's claim to recover the amount of a third-party judgment in excess of policy limits.

- In an action by both the third-party judgment creditor suing as a partial assignee of the insured's claim against the insurer to recover the amount of the judgment in excess of the policy limits, on the one hand; and the insured seeking to recover personal damages, other than the excess judgment, on the other hand; both sustained as a result of the insurer's alleged breach of the covenant of good faith.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.195 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposingan insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Belief in Noncoverage as No Defense

The factual background of Johansen v. California State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][b]. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, the Supreme Court, quoting from Comunale v. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 660, 328 P.2d 198 (discussed in § 120.205[3][a], [b]), said that an insurer who denies coverage does so at its own risk. Although its position may not have been entirely groundless, if the denial is found to be wrongful, the insurer is liable for the full amount which will compensate the insured for all the detriment caused by the insurer's breach of the express and implied obligations of the contract (15 Cal. 3d 9, 15) . The Court concluded that, accordingly, contrary to defendant's suggestion, an insurer's "good faith," though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer (15 Cal. 3d 9, 16) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsReasonable BasisInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.210

§ 120.210 Insurer Is Not Exonerated by Its Unilateral Delegation of Duty to Make Independent Risk Evaluation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS LIABLE FOR ITS BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING, EVEN THOUGH IT HAD NOT OBTAINED THE CONSENT OF _____ [name], BECAUSE INSURER HAS A RESPONSIBILITY TO ITS INSURED TO MAKE AN INDEPENDENT EVALUATION OF THE RISK TO WHICH THE INSURED IS EXPOSED.

Insurer Is Not Exonerated by Its Unilateral Delegation of Duty to Make Independent Risk Evaluation. An insurer may not escape responsibility to its insured to make an independent evaluation of the risk to which the insured is exposed by relying on a unilateral practice established by it of refusing to settle or compromise any claim or suit against its insured without the consent of a third party (Garner v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 848-850, 107 Cal. Rptr. 604).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer is liable for its breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, even though it had not obtained the consent of a third party, because the insurer has a responsibility to its insured to make an independent evaluation of the risk to which the insured is exposed.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.195 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Not Exonerated by Its Unilateral Delegation of Duty to Make Independent Risk Evaluation

The factual background of Garner v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 107 Cal. Rptr. 604 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][3]. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer as to liability and directing the trial court to enter judgment for plaintiff after trial on the single issue of the amount of damages to be awarded, the court of appeal said that there is a clear implicit consensus in the cases thatthe duty to consider and weigh all the factors bearing on the advisability of a settlement in the interests of the insured is on the insurance carrier, that this legal duty obviously is exercised normally in conjunction with the judgment of counsel defending the case against the insured, and that it was equally obvious that neither the "insured [sic, insurer?] nor counsel" could base its legal duty to the insured solely on a finding by a medical review committee composed of physicians who are members of some local medical society (31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 848) . The court said that defendant owed to plaintiff "its independent evaluation of the risk to which plaintiff was exposed by reason of the malpractice litigation," and its experience and expertise in total claims evaluation as an insurance company, and that it could not ignore the desires or instructions of the insured because, in the final analysis, the exposure and the ultimate risk of loss were the insured's (31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 849-850) .

The court concluded that, in this case, resolution of the critical question--to settle or not to settle--had been vested in and delegated exclusively to the medical review committee, and that regardless of the consultations and discussions which were had, the ultimate determination in the case was made neither by the insured nor the insurer, but by an independent committee which, no matter how well-meaning, bore neither the risk nor the hazards of the loss. The court said that this body held only a portion of the total expertise that was needed to make a fully considered judgment based on those multiple factors that must be carefully weighed, measured, and evaluated by professionals whose primary interest is the protection of the insured and that plaintiff, under the terms of the policy, was entitled to this fuller protection (31 Cal. App. 3d 843, 850) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.211

§ 120.211 Insured's Assignment of Claim Is Valid Because Stipulated Judgment Was Approved by Court

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF JUDGMENT CREDITOR HAS STANDING TO SUE INSURER FOR ITS BREACH OF THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BECAUSE THERE WAS A VALID ASSIGNMENT OF THE CLAIM TO PLAINTIFF BASED ON A COURT-APPROVED, GOOD FAITH SETTLEMENT.

A. Insured Properly Assigned Rights in Consideration of Personal Release. An insured may assign its rights against the insurer in consideration for a personal release from liability (Samson v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 220, 240-241, 178 Cal. Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32 ; Zander v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 802-803, 66 Cal. Rptr. 561).

B. Assignment Is Valid With Court Approval. A settlement of the underlying claim in which the insured assigns to the plaintiff the insured's claim against the insurer for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and the plaintiff in return agrees not to personally execute against the insured, is sufficient to support an assignment of the insured's claim when the settlement is reduced to a stipulated judgment and that judgment is approved by the court as a good-faith settlement under Code of Civil Procedure Section 877.6 (Roman v. Unigard Ins. Group (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that the assignment by the insured judgment debtor to the plaintiff judgment creditor is valid because the prior settlement was approved by the court in that action as a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

This form may be used by a judgment creditor in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.197.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication whenthe evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Rights in Consideration of Personal Release

In Samson v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 220, 240-241, 178 Cal. Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32 , the insured was sued after being involved in an auto accident. A question arose as to whether a policy issued on another vehicle owned by the insured provided coverage for the accident. The insurer that issued the policy in question denied coverage and refused to defend. Plaintiffs, the insured, and a second insurer ultimately reached a partial settlement whereby the second insurer contributed its policy limits and plaintiffs agreed not to execute against the insured in return for an assignment of the insured's rights against the nonparticipating insurer. When the action went to trial, the insured presented no defense and did not contest liability or damages. A substantial judgment was entered, the insured assigned his rights against the nonsettling insurer to plaintiffs in accordance with the earlier agreement, and plaintiffs sued the nonsettling insurer for policy limits and bad faith. Plaintiffs were granted summary judgment, and an appeal followed (30 Cal. 3d 220, 226-229) .

After holding that coverage existed, that the insurer breached its duty to defend, and that the insurer therefore was bound by the judgment against its insured, the California Supreme Court concluded that the covenant not to execute in return for assignment of the cause of action was not inherently collusive. The Court rejected the insurer's claim that the parties had intentionally "set up" the insurer for an excess judgment, holding that under the facts, there was no showing that any of the parties had breached any duty or engaged in any improper conduct (30 Cal. 3d 220, 240-241). Accordingly, the trial court's order granting summary judgment was affirmed (30 Cal. 3d 220, 243).

In Zander v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 802 , the insurer denied coverage in the underlying action and refused to participate in the defense. Thereafter, judgment against two of the defendants was obtained in that action under an arrangement whereby plaintiffs made an oral covenant not to execute against those defendants (which was subsequently reduced to writing) and those defendants did not appear at the trial. The court held that when an insurer has repudiated its obligation to defend its insured, the insured, in the absence of fraud, may settle on the best terms possible, taking a covenant not to execute. The court also held that the giving of such a covenant does not bar the plaintiff's subsequent action directly against the insurer (259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 802). Moreover, the facts that the insured permitted plaintiff to take an uncontested judgment and that the plaintiff proved a case unopposed were not sufficient to establish fraud or collusion (259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 806) .

[b] Assignment Is Valid With Court Approval

The facts in Roman v. Unigard Ins. Group (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 , are discussed in § 120.197[3][a]. The settlement in the underlying action was approved by the court as a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The court of appeal held therefore that the proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 eliminated any concern that the parties engaged in collusive or abusive conduct. Thus, the stipulated judgment and covenant not to execute were sufficient to support the assignment (26 Cal. App. 4th 177, 184) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGood Faith & Fair DealingInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.212

§ 120.212 Insured Did Not Waive Claim for Personal Damages Because Assignor and Assignee Are Joined as Plaintiffs

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED DID NOT WAIVE HIS/HER CLAIM FOR PERSONAL DAMAGES AGAINST INSURER WHEN HE/SHE ASSIGNED HIS/HER CLAIM TO INSURED'S THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT CREDITOR, BECAUSE BOTH THE PARTIAL ASSIGNOR AND PARTIAL ASSIGNEE JOIN AS PLAINTIFFS IN SUING THE INSURER ON THE CLAIM.

Insured Did Not Waive Personal Damages Claim Because Assignor and Assignee Are Joined. A partial assignee may sue on the assigned claim by joining, as plaintiff, the partial assignor, and the partial assignor may sue by joining, as plaintiff, the partial assignee; when this is done, the rule against splitting a cause of action does not apply (Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 795-796, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention by an insurer that its refusal to settle was consistent with its duty toward its insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insured did not waive his or her claim for personal damages by assigning his or her rights to the judgment creditor because both the insured assignor and the judgment debtor assignee are joined as plaintiffs.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

When appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.198.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.205[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.205 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Did Not Waive Personal Damages Claim Because Assignor and Assignee Are Joined

The factual background of Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 , is discussed in § 120.205[3][b]. Among its various contentions on appeal, all of which were rejected by the court of appeal, defendant insurer, while not challenging the assignability of the cause of action against it, argued that the assignment totally divested Jew, the insured, of any right to recovercompensatory or punitive damages. Defendant relied on Purcell v. Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 807, 97 Cal. Rptr. 874 , for the proposition that, by assigning his cause of action, the insured waived any cause of action he might have for emotional distress.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, explained that at common law a partial assignee had no legal standing to sue, the underlying rationale being that the original creditor could not split his cause of action and sue the debtor in two separate actions and that he could not bring about the same result by assigning part of the claim to another and subjecting the debtor to two suits by different plaintiffs. Enforcement of a partial assignment of a claim was permitted in equity, however, by the process of requiring joinder of all interested parties, that is, the assignor and all partial assignees. Since legal and equitable actions have been merged under the codes and the equity procedure of joinder has been adopted, there is no longer any procedural obstacle to enforcement of the partial assignment. The plaintiff partial assignee may sue by joining the partial assignor, and the partial assignor may sue on joinder of the partial assignee (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 794-795) .

The court distinguished Purcell "in at least two respects." First, the terms of the Jew-Cain assignment expressly reserved to Jew any cause of action which he might have against the insurer for physical injuries sustained by him as a result of its failure to settle within policy limits, whereas in Purcell, the insured had made a blanket assignment of all causes of action against the insurer. Second, and more significantly, Cain and Jew were joined as parties plaintiff in a single suit against the insurer, whereas in Purcell separate suits were instituted by the injured party and the insured. The court said that the procedure utilized by plaintiffs Cain and Jew was clearly in accord with the modern rules governing partial assignments and comported with the "primary right" theory advanced by Pomeroy and followed in California. The court concluded that because the partial assignor and the partial assignee were joined as parties plaintiff in the same lawsuit, the judgment was binding on both of them, and the insurer was protected from future litigation arising out of the same facts under the doctrine of res judicata (47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 796) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesJoinderGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

131 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
2. Refusal to Settle

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.213-120.214

[Reserved]

§§ 120.213[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
3. Damages for Attorneys' Fees

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.215

§ 120.215 Attorney's Fees Are Improper in Action by Insurer Against Consecutive or Concurrent Insurers

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER HAS NO STANDING TO RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES IN AN ACTION AGAINST A CONSECUTIVE OR CONCURRENT INSURER FOR CONTRIBUTION OF COSTS INCURRED IN DEFENDING THE INSURED.

Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable as Damages by Insurer. An insurer is not entitled to receive its attorney's fees from another insurer in an action to seek contribution of costs incurred in defending a common insured because it has no contractual relationship with the other insurers and therefore no standing to recover its attorney's fees (CNA Cas. of Cal. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 620-621, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a grant of attorney's fees as damages in an action by an insurer against another insurer for contribution of costs incurred in defense of a common insured is improper [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437; CNA Cas. of Cal. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 620-621, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276] .

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in support of an motion to strike portions of the complaint. It may also be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment or in support of a motion for summary judgment. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, counsel should include facts showing that the action is one for contribution among insurance companies, andthat the attorney's fees sought are those for the instant action, and not for an action alleging breach of a covenant of good faith and fair dealing, or tortious conduct.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a memorandum of points and authorities supporting a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain no triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to noticed motions to strike, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions against insurers for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion to strike, see Ch. 160, Motions to Strike .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable as Damages by Insurer

In CNA Cas. of Cal. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276 , an insurer brought an action against other insurers for contribution of costs incurred in defending a common insured. The insured obtained comprehensive general liability insurance policies from plaintiff and defendants for various periods of time and for different types of coverage. Insured was sued for violation of anti-trust statutes, and tendered the defense of the complaint to all its insurers, which, with the exception of plaintiff, rejected the tender. After incurring expenses in the defense of the anti-trust action, plaintiff brought an action against the remaining insurers to seek contribution for the costs incurred therein. The trial court found that defendants had a duty to defend the insured, and ordered defendants to reimburse plaintiff for its post-tender costs of defense in the ratio that their separate policy limits bear to the total limit of all the policies. Defendants appealed, and plaintiff cross-appealed, contending, inter alia, that it is entitled to receive its own attorney's fees in bringing the action for contribution.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding, inter alia, that plaintiff has no contractual relationship with the other insurers and therefore no standing to assert a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing in its own right, or to recover its attorney's fees (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 621) . In addressing defendants' appeal, the court cited Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 , and held that the duty to defend is much broader than the duty to indemnify. Although the duty to indemnify is only determined after liability is finally established, the duty to defend must be assessed at the outset of the case (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 605) . The insurer's obligation to defend is not dependent on the facts contained in the complaint alone; and the insurer must furnish a defense when it learns of facts from any source that create the potential of liability under its policy (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 605-606) . Citing Fresno Econ. Import Used Cars, Inc. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 272, 142 Cal. Rptr. 681 , the court held that before an insurer may rightfully reject a tender of defense, it must investigate and evaluate the facts expressed or implied in the third-party complaint as well as those that it learns from its insured and any other sources (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 610) .

In addressing plaintiff's cross-appeal requesting attorney's fees, the court rejected plaintiff's argument that it was equitably subrogated to the rights of the insured, and should recover its attorney's fees, as the insured would have had it sued defendants for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 620-621) . Plaintiff's contention wasbased entirely on hypothetical situations because the insured did not assert any claim against defendants for their failure to defend the anti-trust action. The defense costs at issue in the instant action were those incurred by plaintiff on the insured's behalf in the anti-trust action, and the insured suffered no loss in the instant case. There was no finding that any of the insurers breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing with the insured, nor that their conduct in the matter was tortious, nor was it an issue in the instant case. The holding in Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 818-819 , allowing attorney's fees as damages, is inapplicable to the instant case because tortious conduct by the insurers or bad faith was never alleged, argued, proved, or determined (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 621 n.12).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCoinsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCoinsuranceContributionInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
3. Damages for Attorneys' Fees

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.216

§ 120.216 Attorney's Fees Recoverable as Damages Only for Work Attributable to Recovery of Amount Due On Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

IN A MIXED CONTRACT AND TORT CASE, PLAINTIFF MAY RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES AS DAMAGES ONLY TO THE EXTENT THAT THE ATTORNEY'S FEES ARE ATTRIBUTABLE TO THE RECOVERY OF THE AMOUNT DUE ON THE INSURANCE POLICY.

Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages Only for Work Attributable to Recovery of Amount Due on Policy. If a party is entitled to recover attorney's fees as damages in an action involving both contract and tort causes of action, the fees recoverable may not exceed the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the rejected payment due on the insurance contract, and fees attributable to obtaining any portion of the award that exceeds the amount due under the policy are not recoverable (Cassim v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 780, 806-807, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374, 94 P.3d 513).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that in a mixed contract and tort action, attorney's fees recoverable as damages pursuant to Brandt [Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 ; see § 120.220] are limited to the portion of the fees attributable to obtaining the payment due on the policy, to the exclusion of fees attributable to obtaining damages in excess of that amount.

If appropriate, this form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.220.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, counsel should include facts and, if necessary, calculations, showing that the opposing party is seeking Brandt fees in excess of the proper amount [see § 120.216[3] [a] regarding calculations].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context, such as in an appellate brief.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to recovery of attorney's fees, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees , Part II (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions against insurers for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Recoverable as Damages Only for Work Attributable to Recovery of Amount Due on Policy

In Cassim v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 780, 806, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374, 94 P.3d 513 , the plaintiffs sued their insurer, seeking recovery of first-party policy benefits due on their homeowner's policy following damage to their home, as well as tort damages for bad faith in the handling of their insurance claim. The jury awarded the plaintiffs a combined $3,594,600 in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages.Before the verdict, the parties stipulated that the trial court sitting as a trier of fact would separately decide the issue of Brandt fees--that is, the amount of attorney's fees payable as damages [see Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 ; § 120.220]. Without explanation, the trial court awarded the plaintiffs $1,193,533 in Brandt fees. The record did not indicate how trial court arrived at its figure, although the amount is approximately one third of the compensatory damages award. The insurer appealed on the ground that the plaintiffs' attorney's closing argument was prejudicial. The court of appeal reversed and remanded for a new trial.

On review, the California Supreme Court concluded that even assuming the plaintiffs' counsel committed misconduct in closing argument, no prejudice resulted. In addition, the Court held that the award of Brandt fees was correct, although the trial court was required to recalculate the amount of those fees (33 Cal. 4th 780, 805-812) . Because the trial court's decision was not supported by substantial evidence, it abused its discretion in awarding that large an amount of Brandt fees (33 Cal. 4th 780, 794) . Specifically, the fees recoverable may not exceed the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the rejected payment due on the insurance contract. Fees attributable to obtaining any portion of an award that exceeds the amount due under the policy are not recoverable (33 Cal. 4th 780, 807) . The Court noted that the plaintiffs had agreed to pay their attorney a 40 percent contingency fee (40 percent of all sums recovered). Nothing in the contingency fee agreement differentiated between recovery on the contract and recovery on the tort, or between compensatory damages and punitive damages. The amount due on their insurance policy, based on the damage to their home, was apparently $40,856. Permitting the plaintiffs in a mixed contract/tort case to recover the majority of their attorney's fees attributable to the entire compensatory damages award (about 83 percent of those fees) is inconsistent with the premise of Brandt. In a contingent fee context, the trier of fact must determine the percentage of the legal fees paid to the attorney that reflects the work attributable to obtaining the contract recovery. No portion of legal fees attributable to the punitive damages award can be recovered as Brandt fees. The focus of Brandt was solely on ensuring that attorney's fees for contract recovery did not diminish a plaintiff's compensatory damages award, and did not concern diminution of the punitive damages award, which is essentially a windfall for plaintiffs that the law permits for public policy reasons. Moreover, the Brandt fees can never exceed the legal fees for the combined tort and contract recovery (33 Cal. 4th 780, 812) . To determine the percentage of the legal fees attributable to the contract recovery, the trial court should determine the total number of hours an attorney spent on the case, and then determine how many hours were spent working exclusively on the contract recovery. Hours spent working on issues jointly related to both the tort and contract should be apportioned, with some hours assigned to the contract and some to the tort. The apportioned contract figure should be added to the hours spent on the contract alone, and that sum should be divided by the total number of hours worked, resulting in the appropriate percentage (33 Cal. 4th 780, 812) . The Court also noted that the amount of Brandt fees, even in a contingency case, could exceed a set percentage of the contract benefit. Moreover, in either an hourly or a contingent fee case, the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the contract benefits could conceivably exceed those benefits entirely, although an award of Brandt fees in excess of the amount of legal fees for tort and contract recoveries combined would be an abuse of discretion (33 Cal. 4th 780, 809 n.13). The Court rejected the insurer's argument that Brandt fees in this case should have been limited to 40 percent (pursuant to the contingency fee agreement) of the benefits owing under the contract (33 Cal. 4th 780, 810) . On remand, the plaintiffs bear the burden of demonstrating how the fees for legal work attributable to both the contract and the tort recoveries should be apportioned (33 Cal. 4th 780, 813) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCosts & Attorney FeesAward Calculations

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
3. Damages for Attorneys' Fees

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.217-120.219

[Reserved]

§§ 120.217[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
3. Damages for Attorneys' Fees

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.220

§ 120.220 Attorney's Fees Expended to Recover Policy Benefits Are Proper Element of Damages in Action for Tortious Breach of Insurance Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES INCURRED TO COMPEL PAYMENT OF POLICY BENEFITS TORTIOUSLY WITHHELD BY INSURER.

A. Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages. When an insurer tortiously withholds benefits due under a policy, attorney's fees reasonably incurred to compel payment of the benefits are recoverable as an element of the damages resulting from the tortious conduct, and are not precluded by Section 1021 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 818-819, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 ; Pacific-S. Mortgage Trust Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 703, 717, 212 Cal. Rptr. 754). Recoverable attorney's fees are those incurred to compel payment of benefits wrongfully withheld by the insurer, such as fees incurred in negotiating a settlement or in bringing a breach of contract action against the insurer. These fees are distinguished from attorney's fees attributable to the bringing of the bad-faith action itself, which are not recoverable [Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 817, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796] .

[Optional] B. Insured's Assignment of Bad Faith Cause of Action CarriesWith It Right to Brandt Fees. An insured's assignment of a cause of action against an insurance company for tortious breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by wrongfully denying benefits due under an insurance policy carries with it the right to recover Brandt fees that the assignee incurs to recover the policy benefits in the lawsuit against the insurance company (Essex Ins. Co. v. Five Star Dye House, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1252, 1264, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 362, 137 P.3d 192).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose a contention that an award of attorneys fees as damages for an insurer's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is not proper [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437 (motion to strike); see also Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 817, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 (attorney's fees recoverable as damages)]. The basis of these points and authorities is that attorney's fees expended to recover policy benefits are a proper element of damages in an action for tortious breach of insurance contract.

Paragraph B should be included when the insured has assigned a bad faith cause of action against the insurer and the insured is entitled to Brandt fees.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should include facts showing the insurer's initial refusal to pay benefits rightfully due the insured, retention of counsel by the insured, and counsel's efforts to secure payment of the benefits, such as through settlement negotiations or institution of a breach of contract action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(j)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to noticed motions to strike, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions against insurers for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion to strike, see Ch. 160, Motions to Strike .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 120.216 may be used to oppose the motion supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages

In Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 , plaintiff brought an action for breach of contract, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and unfair trade practices against an insurer for its refusal to pay benefits allegedly due under plaintiff's disability insurance policy. In its cause of action for breach of the duty of good faith, plaintiff sought to recover as damages the attorney's fees incurred in connection with the contract cause of action. Defendant insurer successfully moved to strike the portion of the complaint seeking attorney's fees on the ground that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 precludes an award of attorney's fees except as authorized by an agreement between the parties or by statute. Plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The Supreme Court issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order striking portions of the complaint seeking attorney's fees. Reviewing thelaw of bad-faith tort actions, the Court observed that when an insurer, in discharging its contractual responsibilities, breaches its duty to deal fairly and in good faith by refusing, without proper cause, to compensate the insured for losses covered by the policy, the insurer becomes liable for any damages proximately caused by its breach. If the insurer's tortious conduct compels the insured to retain an attorney to obtain the benefits due under a policy, the insurer is liable in a tort action for the attorney's fees expended, because the fees are an economic loss proximately caused by the tort (37 Cal. 3d 813, 817) . In discussing the effect of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, the Court distinguished between recovery of attorney's fees as damages resulting from a tort, and recovery of attorney's fees qua attorney's fees, such as those attributable to the bringing of the bad-faith action itself. It held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 precludes only the latter (37 Cal. 3d 813, 817-818) . The Court added that the fees recoverable may not exceed the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the rejected payment due on the insurance contract.

Fees attributable to obtaining any portion of the plaintiff's award that exceeds the amount due under the policy are not recoverable (37 Cal. 3d 813, 819) . In reaching its decision, the Court adopted the reasoning of Mustachio v. Ohio Farmers Ins. Co. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 358, 118 Cal. Rptr. 581 , which allowed recovery of attorney's fees incurred by an insured for settlement negotiations after the insurer threatened nonpayment if its first offer of payment was refused, and disapproved Austero v. Washington Nat'l Ins. Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 408 , which had reversed an award of attorney's fees in a bad-faith tort action (37 Cal. 3d 813, 816-817).

In Pacific-S. Mortgage Trust Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 703, 212 Cal. Rptr. 754 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant insurance company seeking damages for defendant's alleged bad-faith refusal to settle a claim made on a commercial blanket bond issued by defendant to plaintiff. The action was brought after defendant refused to indemnify plaintiff for damages suffered by plaintiff as a result of fraudulent misrepresentations made by an employee. Defendant cross complained against the employee. After being tried to two juries, the case resulted in the trial court's decision that plaintiff's loss was covered by the bond and that defendant breached its duty of good faith in failing to investigate or negotiate the claim. The trial court awarded damages and attorney's fees to plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal reduced the amount of damages to reflect the improper computation of prejudgment interest, but otherwise affirmed. The court addressed each of the issues raised by defendant on appeal, including the contention that an award for attorney's fees was improper. Citing Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 , the court found that the award of attorney's fees was proper to the extent the fees were attributable to efforts to obtain the payments withheld in bad faith (166 Cal. App. 3d 703, 717) .

[b] Insured's Assignment of Bad Faith Cause of Action Carries With It Right to Brandt Fees.

In Essex Ins. Co. v. Five Star Dye House, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1252, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 362, 137 P.3d 192 , the insured, who owned a trucking business that transported commercial machinery, dropped and damaged a commercial dryer during delivery, which resulted in a lawsuit by the customer for damages of lost profits while the machine was under repair. The insured tendered defense of the action to his insurer, which refused to defend. After paying for his own defense, the insured lost the suit, which resulted in a $1.35 million judgment for the plaintiff. The insured then assigned to the plaintiff all his claims and causes of action against his insurer, in exchange for a delay in execution of the judgment until the claims against the insurer for the judgment amount were exhausted. Notwithstanding the assignment, the insured remained liable for the full judgment amount, plus interest. The insurer then filed an action for declaratory relief against the insured and the plaintiff in the underlying action, which cross-complained for breach of contract and bad faith. The insured was dismissed as a defendant based on his previous assignment of all claims. The trial court found the existence of an insurance contract between the insured and his insurer, potential coverage under that policy for the underlying claim against the insured, and bad faith by the insurer in not defending the underlying action. The court awarded the assignee $1.6 million in damages against the insurer, but denied the assignee's request for Brandt fees. The Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment against the insurer, but reversed as to the denial of attorney's fees.

The California Supreme Court granted review to determine whether assignment of a tort action against an insurer for wrongfully withholding policy benefits includes the right to recover Brandt fees, and affirmed the judgment of the Court of Appeal. The Court noted that in Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal.3d 813, 817, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 , it held that when an insurer denies coverage in bad faith, the insured can recover attorney fees in an action to recover the policy benefits (38 Cal. 4th 1252, 1258). The Court stated that actions for bad faith against an insurer have generally been held to be assignable, including claims for breach of the duty to defend. Although some damages potentially recoverable in a bad faith action, including damages for emotional distress and punitive damages, are not assignable, the cause of action itself remains freely assignable as to all other damages. In this case, the assignee sought to recover as tort damages the monetary value of the policy benefits wrongfully withheld by the insurer (38 Cal. 4th 1252, 1263). Brandt fees do not possess any of the personal aspects that preclude assignment of other tort damages, such as damages for emotional distress; they are not damages arising from the personal tort aspect of the bad faith cause of action. The Court rejected the insurer's argument that because Brandt fees are tort damages, they are recoverable only if incurred by the insured personally, rather than by the assignee. As a general rule, the assignee of a chosein action stands in the shoes of the assignor, taking his or her rights and remedies. The Court therefore concluded that an insured's assignment of a cause of action against an insurance company for tortious breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by wrongfully denying benefits due under an insurance policy carries with it the right to recover Brandt fees that the assignee incurs to recover the policy benefits in the lawsuit against the insurance company (38 Cal. 4th 1252, 1264) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages.

In Downey Savings & Loan Assn. v. Ohio Casualty Ins. Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1072, 234 Cal. Rptr. 835 , the jury returned a verdict awarding compensatory and punitive damages to the plaintiff in an action for insurance bad faith and related causes of action. In a subsequent hearing regarding plaintiff's request for attorney's fees on the bad-faith issue, the trial court granted defendant's motion barring plaintiff from introducing evidence on the issue of costs and attorney's fees incurred in the bad faith cause of action, ruling that they were not a recoverable item of damages. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. The court held that under Brandt, when an insurer tortiously withholds benefits, the insured is entitled to recover attorney's fees incurred to compel payment of the policy benefits because the attorney's fees are an economic loss, or damages, proximately caused by the tort (189 Cal. App. 3d 1072, 1085) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityAssignment of ClaimsInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityElements of Bad FaithInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCosts & Attorney FeesFailure to Pay Claims

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
3. Damages for Attorneys' Fees

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.221-120.229

[Reserved]

§§ 120.221[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
4. Insurer's Misrepresentations

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.230

§ 120.230 Insurer Made Wrongful Misrepresentation Regarding Existence of Insured's Right to Obtain Review of Denial of Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER BREACHED THE IMPLIED COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING BY REPEATEDLY MISLEADING INSURED INTO BELIEVING HE/SHE HAD NO RECOURSE TO REVIEW THE CLAIM DENIAL, ALTHOUGH THE POLICY SPECIFICALLY PROVIDED AN IMPARTIAL REVIEW PROCESS, THEREBY DELIBERATELY INTENDING TO CAUSE INSURED TO FORFEIT HIS/HER RIGHTS OF REVIEW.

Insurer's Wrongful Misrepresenting Regarding Insured's Right to Review of Denial of Claim. An insurer's course of conduct designed to mislead an insured into forfeiting a contractual right to impartial review of a claim denial constitutes breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1, 13-15, 233 Cal. Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insured's contention that the insurer repeatedly misled the insured into believing that the insurer's decision to deny a claim for benefits was final and could not be appealed, when in fact the policy provided for an impartial review process.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in a motion for a directed verdict [see Code Civ. Proc. § 630 (motion for directed verdict)]. It may also be used in trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Consequently, counsel should discuss evidence showing that either the arbitration clause was inconspicuous, or the insurer had reason to know that the insured was not aware of the review rights under the policy, regardless of the placement of the review clause.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Wrongful Misrepresenting Regarding Insured's Right to Review of Denial of Claim

In Sarchett v. Blue Shield of Cal. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1, 233 Cal. Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267 , plaintiff obtained insurance offered by his employer under a group policy provided by defendant. Plaintiff was subsequently hospitalized by a member physician of defendant. Defendant paid plaintiff's medical and diagnostic testing bills, but denied his claim for the hospital stay, based on two provisions of the policy: (1) an exclusion for services when hospitalized primarily for diagnostic purposes or medical observation, and (2) an exclusion for services not medically necessary. Plaintiff and others acting on his behalf repeatedly protested the denial of coverage, and received several denial letters from defendant, implying that defendant's decision was final, and failing to mention that any appeal procedures were available, when, in fact, the policy required impartial dispute-resolution mechanisms. The hospital utilization review committee lodged a protest, and defendant wrote a letter to that committee, but notto plaintiff, offering plaintiff a peer review on the condition that he produce further information.

In fact, peer review was an unconditional right under the contract. The matter was submitted to arbitration, and decided in favor of plaintiff. The superior court vacated the award, and set the matter for trial de novo. The trial court directed a verdict for plaintiff on breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing. The court found that the policy failed to reserve for defendant the right to review the medical necessity of a procedure ordered by the physician and not excluded from coverage by the contract. It also found that defendant violated the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by disagreeing with the judgment of the treating physician solely on the basis of retrospective review of hospital files, when plaintiff was not clearly informed of that procedure in the health plan. It based the directed verdict on the fact that defendant had failed to advise plaintiff of his contractual right to impartial review and arbitration in repeated denial letters to him. The jury awarded plaintiff damages for his hospital costs, compensatory damages, and punitive damages. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the jury instructions with regard to defendant's failure to pay the hospital bill, and defendant's disagreement with the treating physician solely on the basis of retrospective review, were erroneous, and remanded the case (43 Cal. 3d 1, 5-16) . However, the Court held that at retrial, the court should instruct the jury that defendant breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing by failing to advise plaintiff of his right to peer review and arbitration (43 Cal. 3d 1, 16) . Citing Davis v. Blue Cross of N. Cal. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 418, 428, 158 Cal. Rptr. 828, 600 P.2d 1060 , the Court noted that the insurer's implied duty of good faith and fair dealing includes a responsibility to inform its insureds of their rights under the policy's arbitration clause. In Davis, the policy's arbitration provision was obscurely placed in fine print, whereas in the instant case it was adequately set out with a boldface heading. However, defendant had reason to know that plaintiff was uninformed of his rights, because he repeatedly protested the denial without demanding review by an impartial panel of physicians. Defendant then failed to mention his right to review by anyone other than the single hired consultant who initially denied the claim. That conduct appeared designed to mislead subscribers into forfeiting their contractual right to impartial review and arbitration of disputed claims (43 Cal. 3d 1, 15) .

NOTE:

Sarchett concerned a group insurance policy offered by the plaintiff's employer. Although the applicability of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq.) to plaintiff's claim does not appear to have been raised, counsel should nevertheless be aware that the United States Supreme Court has held that an action brought under state law asserting the improper processing ofa claim for benefits under an employee benefit plan subject to ERISA is preempted by federal law, unless the state law regulates insurance [see Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39, 54 ; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 65, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55, 62] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityPayment Delays & DenialsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
4. Insurer's Misrepresentations

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.231-120.239

[Reserved]

§§ 120.231[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
5. Breach of Statutory Duties

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.240

§ 120.240 Statute Does Not Confer Any Private Right of Action on Plaintiff in Unfair Claims Settlement Practices Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF, AS A PRIVATE LITIGANT, HAS NO PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION UNDER INSURANCE CODE SECTION 790.03(h).

Plaintiff as Private Litigant May Not Bring Action for Damages Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h). Neither Insurance Code Section 790.03 nor any other California statute expressly authorizes first-party private litigants to recover damages from insurers for violations of Insurance Code Section 790.03(h). Although the California Supreme Court formerly recognized the existence of such a cause of action (see Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 880, 884, 153 Cal. Rptr. 842, 592 P.2d 329), that holding was prospectively overruled as to actions filed on or after October 18, 1988. After the latter date, no private litigant may sue an insurance company for damages under Insurance Code Section 790.03(h) (Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 292, 305, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that plaintiff has no standing to sue the insurer. The basis of these points and authorities is that a private right of action no longer exists under Ins. Code § 790.03(h).

In 1979, the California Supreme Court held that a private right of action for damages existed under Ins. Code 790.03(h) against insurers who commit unfair claims settlement practices [Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 880, 884, 153 Cal. Rptr. 842, 592 P.2d 329] . This statutory right of action was independent of any common law rights of action arising out of the insurer's covenant of good faith and fair dealing or other duties arising in connection with the handling of insurance claims.

The rights of action could be asserted by insureds and, unlike a common law action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, couldalso be asserted directly against the insurer by third persons who were not parties to the insurance contract. The only prerequisite to a third party's action against the insurer was that the third party's lawsuit against the insured must have been "concluded" [Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 880, 884, 153 Cal. Rptr. 842, 592 P.2d 329] .

In 1988, however, the Court reversed itself and overruled Royal Globe prospectively, abolishing the private right of action under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) [see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 292, 305, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58] . Abolition of the private right of action did not extend to cases filed before October 18, 1988, the date on which the Moradi-Shalal opinion became final. However, the court held that in all such third party cases, a final judicial determination of the insured's liability must have been obtained before filing the action [see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 292, 305, 306, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58] .

Although Moradi-Shalal involved a third-party claim, subsequent decisions have confirmed that its abolition of a private right of action under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) applies to first-party claims as well [see Tricor Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 880, 882, 887, 269 Cal. Rptr. 642 ; Zephyr Park Ltd. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 833, 836-838, 262 Cal. Rptr. 106] .

Thus, with the limited exception noted above, a private right of action no longer exists under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) with respect to first parties.

In the wake of Moradi-Shalal, the courts have rejected attempts to assert claims under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 (the unfair competition statutes) that could no longer be asserted under Ins. Code § 790.03(h). In Industrial Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1095-1097, 257 Cal. Rptr. 655 , the court held that the remedies available under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 are limited to injunctive relief and do not include an award of damages. In Safeco Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1494, 265 Cal. Rptr. 585 , the court summarily rejected a claim under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, ruling that the latter section could not be used to circumvent Moradi-Shalal. In Maler v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1592, 1598, 270 Cal. Rptr. 222 , the court rejected plaintiff's attempt to "bootstrap" a violation of Ins. Code § 790.03 onto the unfair conduct prohibition in Ins. Code § 1861.03 (enacted as part of Proposition 103), ruling that the latter section did not supersede the Moradi-Shalal prohibition on private causes of action under Ins. Code § 790.03 [but see Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 257, 283-284, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 895 P.2d 56 (action by an life insurance brokerage firm against insurers, competitors, and trade associations, in which California Supreme Court ruled that cause of action for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. based on conduct made unlawfulunder the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16720 et seq.) did not compromise Court's holding in Moradi-Shalal because it did not constitute an no attempt to use the Unfair Competition Act to enforce a provision of the Unfair Practices Act)].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by a defendant insurer to support a demurrer on the ground that no private right of action existed under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) on the date the complaint was filed. This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insurer's memorandum of points and authorities supporting a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain no triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff as Private Litigant May Not Bring Action for Damages Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

In Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 , plaintiff was injured when her car was struck by a vehicle driven by defendant's insured. Initially, the insurer did not respond to plaintiff's claim, but the claim ultimately was settled about five months later for slightly less than plaintiff's original demand. Thereafter plaintiff sued the insurer for unfair claims settlement practices under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) and Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 880, 884, 153 Cal. Rptr. 842, 592 P.2d 329 . The trial court sustained the insurer's general demurrer on the ground that the absence of a final judgment against the defendant precluded a Royal Globe action. The court of appeal reversed, holding that a settlement coupled with a dismissal with prejudice was a sufficient conclusion of the underlying action for Royal Globe purposes.

The Supreme Court reconsidered the underlying validity of the Royal Globe decision, concluding that Royal Globe was wrongly decided in the first instance and that no private cause of action exists for violation of Ins. Code § 790.03(h) (46 Cal. 3d 287, 304) . However, the Court declined to apply its decision retroactively to cases seeking relief under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) before the date on which the Moradi-Shalal opinion became final (46 Cal. 3d 287, 305) . With respect to Royal Globe claims then currently pending, the court decided that settlement is an insufficient conclusion of the prior action for purposes of Royal Globe (46 Cal. 3d 287, 306, 313) . Rather, there must be a "conclusive judicial determination" of liability (46 Cal. 3d 287, 306) .

In Tricor Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 880, 882, 886, 887, 269 Cal. Rptr. 642 , and Zephyr Park Ltd. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 833, 836-838, 262 Cal. Rptr. 106 , two courts of appeal concluded that Moradi-Shalal applies to first-party as well as third-party actions.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff as Private Litigant May Not Bring Action for Damages Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

In McMillin Scripps N. P'ship v. Royal Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , an insured under a first party propertyinsurance policy sought recovery of the costs of investigating whether gasoline storage tanks on the property were leaking. Ultimately, investigation revealed that leakage had occurred prior to the inception of the policy. The insurer failed to investigate whether the claim was covered, and the insured brought an action for breach of the covenant of good faith and other causes of action. The court of appeal affirmed the granting of the insurer's summary judgment, holding that there cannot be bad faith when there is no covered loss during the policy period, absent misrepresentation or conduct on the insurer's part that prevents the insured from protecting its interests (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1224) . The court noted that while Ins. Code § 790.03(h)(3) imposes a duty to promptly investigate all claims (whether or not they are ultimately determined to be covered), no private right of action exists under that section (19 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1221-1222) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilitySettlement ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingThird Party ClaimantsInsurance LawIndustry RegulationGeneral Overview

140 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
C. Improper Claims Settlement Practices
5. Breach of Statutory Duties

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.241-120.249

[Reserved]

§§ 120.241[Reserved]

141 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.250

§ 120.250 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Insured's Material Concealment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER RESCINDED THE INSURANCE CONTRACT PRIOR TO COMMENCEMENT OF THIS ACTION ON THE GROUND OF INSURED'S MATERIAL CONCEALMENT.

A. Insurer's Right to Rescind for Concealment. Concealment, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the injured party to rescind an insurance contract (Ins. Code §§ 22, 331).

B. Misrepresentation Not Required. Misrepresentation and concealment are not synonymous and each constitutes a separate ground for rescinding an insurance contract (Dinkins v. American Nat'l Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 222, 232, 154 Cal. Rptr. 775).

C. Insured Engaged in Concealment as Defined. Neglect to communicate that which a party knows, and ought to communicate, is concealment (Ins. Code § 330).

D. Insured Failed to Communicate Material Facts. Each party to an insurance contract must communicate to the other, in good faith, all facts within his or her knowledge that are or that he or she believes to be material to the contract and as to which he or she makes no warranty, and which the other has not the means of ascertaining (Ins. Code § 332).

[Optional] E. Questions in Insurance Application are Material. The fact that the insurer has required answers to specific questions in an insurance application is usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law (Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 916, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353 ; see also Williamson & Vollmer Eng'g, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 272, 134 Cal. Rptr. 427).

[Optional] F. Concealment Applies to Modification of Insurance Contract. The provisions of Insurance Code Sections 330-361, relating to concealment and representations, apply to a modification of an insurance contract as well as to its original formation (Ins. Code § 361).

G. Rescission Is Proper Prior to Commencement of Action on Contract. Whenever a right to rescind an insurance contract is given to the insurer by any provision of Insurance Code Sections 100-679.73, the right may be exercised at any time previous to the commencement of an action on the contract (Ins. Code § 650).

[Optional] H. "Action on the Contract," as Used in Ins. Code § 650, Defined. An action on the contract, as that term is used in Insurance Code Section 650, means an action on the insurance contract by a party to the contract (Allstate Ins. Co. v. McCurry (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 273-274, 36 Cal. Rptr. 731 , disapproved on other grounds, Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674).

[Optional] I. Rescission Applies to All Insureds Under Contract. The rescission exercised by the insurer under Insurance Code Section 650 applies to all insureds under the contract, including additional insureds, unless the contract provides otherwise (Ins. Code § 650).

[Optional] J. Rescission Applies to Assigned Risk Motor Vehicle Policy. The statutory remedy of rescission applies to assigned risk motor vehicle policies (Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785).

[Optional] K. Insurer May Raise Defense of Rescission After Insured Commences Action. Although an insurer cannot rescind an insurance policy unilaterally after the insured files suit to enforce the policy, it may raise rescission as a defense (Atmel Corp. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 2006) 416 F. Supp. 2d 802, 805) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurance contract was rescinded by the insurer because of the concealment of a material fact by the insured.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

Paragraph E should be included if the concealment was in the insurance application, and Paragraph F should be included if the concealment related to the modification of the insurance contract.

Paragraph H should be included if the policy involved is a liability policy and the rescission followed the filing of an action by a liability claimant against the insured but before any judgment was entered in that action.

Paragraph I should be included when there is more than one insured covered by the policy, including additional insureds.

Paragraph J should be included if the policy in question is an assigned risk motor vehicle liability policy.

Paragraph K should be included if the insured has already filed an action against the insurer to enforce the policy, and the insurer raises rescission of the policy as a defense.

Numerous statutes cover specific misrepresentations, the effect of concealment and misrepresentation with respect to certain policies, and what statements are to be considered representations rather than warranties. These statutes should be checked if the case involves such a specific misrepresentation or such a policy.

For example, prohibited misrepresentations by an insurer or by an insurer's officer or agent are covered by Ins. Code §§ 780-784 and unfair practices by Ins. Code §§ 790-790.10. Ins. Code § 2071, which sets forth the standard form of fire insurance policy for California, requires inclusion of the following provision: "This entire policy shall be void if, whether before or after a loss, the insured has willfully concealed or misrepresented any material fact or circumstance concerning this insurance or the subject thereof, or the interest of the insured therein, or in case of any fraud or false swearing by the insured relating thereto." Ins. Code § 6010, which sets forth the standard form mutual fire insurer's policy, contains an identical requirement.

Special rules relating to concealment and representations peculiar to marine insurance are set forth in Ins. Code §§ 1900-1905, and implied warranties peculiar to marine insurance are covered by Ins. Code §§ 1920-1927. California law applies to marine insurance contracts when California and federal admiraltylaw are materially the same on the issues presented [Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's v. Montford (9th Cir. 1995) 52 F.3d 219, 222 n.1 (applying California Insurance Code to claims of rescission of marine insurance contract based on misrepresentations by insured)].

In addition, Ins. Code § 10244(4) requires that funeral insurance contracts contain a provision that all statements made by the insured in the application for the policy or its reinstatement will, in the absence of fraud, be deemed representations and not warranties.

Ins. Code § 10113, relating to the contents of life, disability, and life and disability policies, provides in part that "all statements purporting to be made by the insured shall, in the absence of fraud, be representations and not warranties." Ins. Code § 10207(b), requires that group life policies contain a provision that all statements made by the employer or by the individual employees are, in the absence of fraud, representations and not warranties and that such statements will not be used in defense to a claim under the policy unless contained in a written application. Ins. Code § 10270.6(a), relating to group disability master policies, contains a similar provision.

Ins. Code § 10380, relating to disability policies, provides that the falsity of any statement in the application shall not bar the right to recovery under the policy unless the false statement was made with actual intent to deceive or unless it materially affected either the acceptance of the risk or the hazard assumed by the insurer, and Ins. Code § 10381.5 provides in part that the insured shall not be bound by any statement made in an application for such a policy unless a copy of the application is attached to or endorsed on the policy when issued as a part thereof.

Ins. Code §§ 10113 and 10381.5 preclude an insurer from raising the defense of fraud based on statements that an insured made in an application for insurance, if the application had not been attached to or endorsed on the policy when issued. The insurer may not invoke the defense of misrepresentations in or omissions from the unattached and unendorsed application [Ins. Code §§ 10113, 10381.5; Ticconi v. Blue Shield of California Life & Health Ins. Co. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 528, 540-541, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 888]. The practice of postclaims underwriting is categorically prohibited [Ins. Code § 10384; Ticconi v. Blue Shield of Calif. Life & Health Ins. Co. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 528, 540, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 888].

The statutory remedy of rescission given by the Insurance Code is merely superimposed on the law governing contracts generally and is not in derogation of other remedial rights which are recognized and implemented by other provisions of law. The statutory remedy of rescission is, therefore, not the exclusive remedy of one who has become entitled to avoid an insurance contract by reason of the acts or omissions of the other party to it which are fraudulent in their nature. Rather, the injured party, instead of rescinding, may in an appropriate case, sue for affirmative relief for any injury sustained by the other's wrongful act or omission or set up the fraud by way of affirmative defense to an action brought to enforce the defendant's apparent liability [Williamson & Vollmer Eng'g, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 274-275, 134 Cal. Rptr. 427 ; see also Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 681, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; De Campos v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 519, 529, 265 P.2d 617] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- A material concealment on the part of the insured.
- Rescission by the insurer prior to commencement of the action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues [see, e.g., § 120.251] and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.260, 120.262, 120.267, and 120.268 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not Required

Dinkins v. American Nat'l Ins. Co. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 222, 154 Cal. Rptr. 775 , was an action by the insured under a family policy naming as insureds plaintiff and five of his 11 children, including his daughter Glinda Ann, to recover payment of the benefit provided for the death of Glinda Ann, who died of gunshot wounds during the contestable period of the policy term. The insurer denied plaintiff's claim for payment on the ground that it was entitled to rescind the policy because of the concealment or misrepresentation of a material fact by plaintiff with respect to the state of Glinda Ann's health at the time that the policy application was completed, and plaintiff sued the insurer to recover the benefit and for other damages. The evidence showed that plaintiff's answers in the insurance application were incorrect insofar as they related to Glinda Ann's past medical history, and there was evidence that defendant would not have covered Glinda Ann by its policy had the true facts been known. Defendant submitted to the trial court a full set of jury instructions covering among other things the defendant's right to withhold payment had a misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact occurred. No instructions on this issue were proposed by plaintiff. The trial court, however, composed its own instructions which it gave to the jury. These instructions placed on defendant the burden of proving a material misrepresentation by plaintiff and substantially omitted any reference to the defense of concealment. The judgment entered on the jury's special verdicts awarded plaintiff the policy benefit, compensatory damages for emotional and mental distress, punitive damages, and attorney's fees.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that the trial court had prejudicially erred in failing to instruct the jury on the defense of concealment. This failure resulted in raising defendant's burden of proof from that of merely establishing that a material fact was omitted from the insurance application to that of establishing an affirmative act of misrepresentation by plaintiff. The court explained that misrepresentation and concealment are not synonymous and that if they were, there would be no reason for the legislature to treat them separately as it has done (92 Cal. App. 3d 222, 232) . The court pointed out that in Ins. Code §§ 330-339, the legislature deals with concealment as intentional, unintentional, or merely negligent with each type of concealment having a different effect, and that in Ins. Code §§ 350-361 the legislature deals separately with representations and the effect of their falsity on a party's right to rescind (92 Cal. App. 3d 222, 232-233) . The court added that, moreover, California courts have consistently treated misrepresentation and concealment as distinct alternative defenses in the context of insurance coverage (92 Cal. App. 3d 222, 233) .

[b] Questions in Insurance Application are Material

Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353 , was an action by the beneficiary to recover on a life insurance policy. From a judgment awarding plaintiff the full double indemnity coverage, defendant insurer appealed. The insurer had contended that (1) no insurance existed because no policy had been issued at the time of the decedent's accidental death and (2) if it did exist, the contract was rendered void and unenforceable because of the decedent's alleged misrepresentations in his insurance application regarding the state of his health and past medical history. Although holding from the evidence presented at the trial that an insurance contract did exist and that there was no misrepresentation by the decedent, the Supreme Court, in affirming the judgment, noted that material misrepresentation or concealment of material facts are grounds for rescission of the policy, that an actual intent to deceive need not be shown, that materiality is determined solely by the probable and reasonable effect which truthful answers would have had on the insurer, and the fact that the insurer has demanded answers to specific questions in an application for insurance is in itself usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law (9 Cal. 3d 904, 916) .

Williamson & Vollmer Eng'g, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 134 Cal. Rptr. 427 , was an action by an engineering firm against its insurer for a declaration of the insurer's duty under a liability policy to defend and indemnify plaintiff against a claim asserted by an architect to whom plaintiff had furnished services on a project. The general contractor on the project had sued the owner to recover payments allegedly wrongfully withheld for work performed on the general contract. The owner cross complained against the architect who, in turn, filed a cross complaint against the engineering firm seeking indemnity for any loss the architect might incur on the owner's claim for negligence in the design and supervision of work for which the engineering firm was allegedly responsible. The engineering firm tendered defense of the architect's claim to defendant insurer, which refused to either defend or indemnify. Plaintiff then sued the insurer for declaratory relief. In its application for the insurance, plaintiff has answered "no" to the question whether it was aware of any circumstances which might result in any claim against it. However, prior to that time plaintiff had received from the architect a letter notifying plaintiff of major deficiencies in the air distribution system of the project at least partly caused by the installation of ducts that were smaller than called for on the construction drawings, stating that the reduced duct sizes were shown on the shop drawings submitted by thecontractor and approved by plaintiff, and advising plaintiff that the architect held plaintiff responsible for correcting the condition. The insurer contended that the "no" answer in the application constituted misrepresentation and concealment relieving it from liability to defend or indemnify the insured. Plaintiff appealed from an adverse judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected plaintiff's argument that the word "claim" as used in the insurance application was ambiguous. It set forth a number of definitions for the word (64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 269) and concluded that it could not say, as a matter of law, that the letter itself did not constitute a claim within these definitions, much less, that it should not have produced an awareness of circumstances which would result in a claim (64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 269-270) . The court also said that it was clear that, as used in the policy, the word "claim" was not limited to a formal lawsuit (64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 270) . The court explained that materiality of the claim was evident from the terms of the policy and from the fact that the question was asked in the insurance application and was established by the testimony of plaintiff's insurance broker that if the matter had been known to him he would have included a reference of it in the application, by the testimony of the insurance underwriter that if the true circumstances had been disclosed the policy would have been issued with an endorsement excluding liability for any services under the contract in question, and by the testimony of an experienced mechanical engineer that in his opinion the type of letter in question indicated problems out of which some sort of claim might arise, even if he thought it invalid, that he would have brought the situation to the attention of his insurance broker, and he would have answered the question in the affirmative (64 Cal. App. 3d 261, 272) .

[c] "Action on the Contract"

Allstate Ins. Co. v. McCurry (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 36 Cal. Rptr. 731 , disapproved on other grounds, Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674) was a declaratory relief action by an insurance company against its insured, who defaulted, and others for a determination of plaintiff insurer's liability under an automobile liability policy. In the application for the insurance, the insured had made materially false statements and representations justifying rescission of the policy. The policy had been issued at 9 a.m. on April 19, 1961, and at 6 p.m. the same day the insured was involved in an automobile accident with the nondefaulting defendants. On May 16, 1961, plaintiff informed its insured that the policy had been canceled effective June 5, 1961. On October 30, 1961, the nondefaulting defendants sued the insured for damages for personal injuries and property damage sustained in the accident. The insured tendered defense of that action to plaintiff insurer, which refused it. Three and a half months later, plaintiff insurer sued for declaratory relief.

The nondefaulting defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground that the action was barred because the insurance policy had not been rescinded prior to the time an action on the contract was filed. The demurrer was overruled. From a subsequent judgment in favor of plaintiff insurer, the nondefaulting defendants appealed, contending the demurrer should have been sustained. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It held that the demurrer was properly overruled since the limitation specified in Ins. Code § 650 did not apply (224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 273) .

The court explained that for the right of the insurer to rescind a contract of insurance to be restricted under Ins. Code § 650 it is necessary that an action on the contract be brought by a party to the contract and that an action by a third party against an insured for injuries received in an accident with the insured's car is not an action on the insurance contract (224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 273-274) . The court pointed out that there being no provision in the policy providing that it should inure directly to the benefit of any injured person, no obligation rested on the insurer until judgment was secured against the insured and, until that contingency arose, no right of action against the insurer accrued to the injured person (224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 275-276) . Accordingly, the court held that an action against the insured for personal injuries is not an action on the contract under Ins. Code § 650 and that the trial court properly determined that Ins. Code § 650 did not prevent plaintiff from canceling the insurance contract (224 Cal. App. 2d 271, 276) .

Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Cary (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 257, 67 P.2d 129 , which held that Ins. Code § 650 was a limitation on the right to rescind and not an extension of it, was an action by an insurance company to rescind four noncancellable health insurance policies issued some 11 years earlier on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation in the insurance applications. The court of appeal rejected the insurer's argument that the general statute of limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)] and the code sections relating to rescission [Civ. Code §§ 1689-1693] did not apply because Ins. Code § 650 permitted an insurer to rescind at any time previous to the commencement of an action on the contract. The court said that it read these sections together so that the latter should be interpreted as meaning that the insurer may rescind at any time within the statutory period, as long as no action has been commenced on the policy, and that Ins. Code § 650 is really a limitation on the right to rescind, rather than an extension of it (20 Cal. App. 2d 257, 261) .

[d] Rescission Applies to Assigned Risk Motor Vehicle Policy

Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785 , was a declaratory relief action by the insurer of a motorist injured in an automobile accident against the motorist, the negligent minor driver of the other car, and the minor driver's insurer for a declaratory judgment that defendant insurer's policy covered the accident. Defendant insurer had issued an assignedrisk policy to the minor motorist, who had been diagnosed as a schizophrenic and who had received psychiatric care. The insurance application asked whether the applicant had any mental or physical disability, and the "no" box was checked. The application did not request information concerning the applicant's history of medical care. Subsequently, defendant insurer hired a retail credit company to make an investigation in the course of which the minor's mother informed the investigator that the minor had been hospitalized for psychiatric care and that he was presently under the care of a psychiatrist.

The investigator omitted this information from her report to defendant insurer. The minor subsequently, while driving a car, was involved in an accident with a car owned and being driven by plaintiff's insured. On receipt of the accident report, defendant insurer requested a special investigation from the retail credit company regarding the minor's mental condition. The new retail credit report stated that the minor was under treatment for schizophrenia when the application for insurance was made and the policy issued and that he had previously been hospitalized for that condition. On receiving this report, defendant insurer rescinded the policy from the date of its inception on the ground of material concealment. Plaintiff insurer paid its insured under the uninsured motorist provisions of its policy and then sued for declaratory relief. The trial court rejected the insureds' proffered jury instruction that the duty on the part of defendant insurer to investigate insurability is a nondelegable affirmative duty and that defendant insurer could not escape liability for any failure to perform the duty by entrusting it to an independent contractor. After jury trial, the court rendered judgment determining that the rescission was effective as against defendant insurer's insured but ineffective as against plaintiff and plaintiff's insured. Both insureds moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and, on denial of their motions, both they and defendant insurer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the orders denying the motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but reversed the judgment on the ground that the trial court had committed reversible error in refusing the requested jury instruction (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 622) . On appeal, appellant insureds and plaintiff argued that once a risk had been assigned and the designated insurer had ratified the coverage, the only method open to the insurer to relieve itself of an assigned risk which had been accepted was that specified in former 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2470 and that the statutory remedy of rescission provided in the Insurance Code did not apply to such policies. Defendant insurer, on the other hand, argued that former 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2470 applied only to cancellation and not to rescission of insurance policies and that rescission was a statutory remedy [Ins. Code §§ 331, 338, 359] not affected by the administrative regulations comprising the assigned risk plan (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 618) .

The court of appeal agreed with defendant insurer. It pointed out that there was nothing in the legislation authorizing assigned risks [Ins. Code § 11620 et seq.] suggesting that the laws applying to insurance policies in general were not applicable to the assigned risk plan, that the former regulations promulgated by the California Automobile Assigned Risk Plan (CAARP) deal only with cancellation and not with rescission, that cancellation and rescission are not synonymous, that the former is prospective and the latter retroactive, and held that defendant insurer was correct in its contention that the statutory remedy of rescission is applicable to assigned risk policies (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619) .

[e] Insurer May Raise Defense of Rescission After Insured Commences Action

Atmel Corp. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 2006) 416 F. Supp. 2d 802 , was an action arising from a third-party suit filed against the insured, a manufacturer of computer chips, based on the sale of allegedly defective chips. The insurer, which had issued policies to the insured covering general liability and errors and omissions, refused to defend on the ground that the insured had known about the alleged manufacturing problems before the policy was issued, but had failed to disclose them in the policy applications. After several years of correspondence between the insurer and the insured regarding the insured's duty of full disclosure and the insurer's right to rescind, the insured sued the insurer for damages and declaratory relief. The insurer counterclaimed, alleging rescission, breach of contract, and related claims, and also raised rescission as an affirmative defense. The insurer also tendered rescission of the policy and offered the insured a check for the premiums paid thus far, which the insured rejected and returned. The insured sought partial summary judgment to establish that under Ins. Code § 650, the insurer was precluded from unilaterally rescinding the policies after the insured had filed suit, that the policies were therefore still in place, and that the insurer's duty to defend was still an issue in the case. The insurer responded that Ins. Code § 650 is a procedural statute intended to avoid multiple suits raising rescission, and that it had not lost any of its substantive rights to rescind.

The federal district court held that the insured was correct in that the statute precluded the insurer from unilaterally rescinding the policy after the insured filed suit to enforce the policy. The court also held, however, that an insurer may raise the same issues by asserting rescission as an affirmative defense and counterclaim (416 F. Supp. 2d 802, 805) . Moreover, because rescission is retroactive to the time that the representation becomes false, if the insurer is entitled to rescission, then it never owed the insured a duty to defend. Therefore, if the insurer prevails on its affirmative defense, the policies are rendered void ab initio. Because a valid rescission voids a policy ab initio, and both the insured's attempted enforcement of and the insurer's attempted rescission of the policy would be decided in one action, any preliminary declaration that the policies were in effect or that theinsurer was in breach of its duties would be inappropriate. The court also noted that the practical effect of its ruling was limited: the insurer was precluded from unilaterally rescinding the policy after the insured filed suit; the insured could argue that the insurer acted in bad faith by refusing to defend, that the policies were in effect, and that the insurer was not entitled to rescission; and the insurer could argue that based on the insured's concealment and misrepresentation in its application, the insurer was entitled to rescission, the policies were void ab initio, and therefore that the insurer had no duty to defend (416 F. Supp. 2d 802, 807) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer's Right to Rescind for Concealment

In United States Specialty Ins. Co. v. Bridge Capital Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2007) 482 F. Supp. 2d 1164 , the insurer under D&O policies sought rescission and moved for summary judgment. The federal district court granted the motion, holding that the policies were void ab initio because the company made material misrepresentations on the insurance application and renewal application regarding the number of previous claims of sexual harassment. Pursuant to Ins. Code §§ 331 and 334, a material misrepresentation or concealment in an insurance application, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the insurer to rescind the insurance policy ab initio (482 F. Supp. 2d 1164, 1166, 1167-1170) .

In Nieto v. Blue Shield of Cal. Life & Health Ins. Co. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 60, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 , reh'g denied, 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 275 (2010) , the insured failed to disclose information about her medical condition and treatment with respect to her back problems, in an application submitted to her health insurance provider. The policy stated that the insurer may terminate the policy for cause based on material information that is false or misrepresented on the application. Several months after issuing the policy, after learning that although the insured had been treated for back problems within the relevant period covered in the application, she had not mentioned it, the insurer rescinded the policy. In the action filed by the insured for breach of contract, bad faith, and related claims, the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the insurer was entitled to rescind the policy based on the applicant's material misrepresentations and omissions. Among other things, the court stated that pursuant to Ins. Code § 331, concealment, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the injured party to rescind insurance coverage (181 Cal. App. 4th 60, 75-77) .

In TIG Ins. Co. v. Homestore, Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 749, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 528 , a D&O liability policy application required the applicant to include a copy of the corporation's latest "form 10-Q," which is a quarterly financial report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. After a corporation's former chief financial officer pleaded guilty to filing a false form 10-Q, the insurer obtained rescission of the D&O policy against the corporation and its officers and directors, based on the falsified form attached to the application. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the policy language allowed rescission regarding insureds in addition to the officer who concealed material facts (137 Cal. App. 4th 749, 755-756) .

[b] Insured Failed to Communicate Material Facts

Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720, 312 P.2d 241 , was an action by plaintiff as beneficiary to recover on an insurance policy issued by defendant on the life of her deceased husband. After a verdict in plaintiff's favor, defendant unsuccessfully moved for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and judgment was entered on the verdict. Defendant appealed, claiming that its motion should have been granted because of the deceased's misrepresentations and concealment of material facts in stating his medical history in the insurance application. The deceased was a 32-year-old physician who applied for the insurance on September 10, 1949. In his insurance application, he answered "10 years ago" to the question when he last consulted or received treatment for his health from any physician, surgeon, or practitioner; he answered "None" to the requirement that he state the name of every other physician, surgeon, or practitioner who had attended or treated him or with whom he had consulted for any reason or ailment, serious or not serious, within the past five years; he answered "Yes" to the question whether he was in good health; he answered "US. Army induction 1944" to the question whether he had ever had a health or physical examination; he answered "No" to the question whether he had ever had a special heart study or an electrocardiogram; he answered "No" to the question whether he had ever been in a clinic, hospital, sanitorium, or asylum for observation, treatment, or diagnosis; he answered "No" to the question whether there had been any suspicion of, or whether he'd ever had or been treated, for palpitation of heart, shortness of breath, pain in chest, abnormal pulse, any disease of the heart or blood vessels, or a high blood pressure; and he answered "Nothing other than usual childhood diseases" to the question whether he had ever had any illness, disease, operation, or injury other than as already stated. Deceased certified that these answers were full complete, and true and agreed that they should form a part of the insurance contract. Thereafter a doctor selected by defendant examined the deceased and reported his condition as satisfactory.

The policy was issued September 19, 1949, and the insured died of a heart attack on June 1, 1950. The autopsy established the cause of death as "coronary arteriosclerosis, severe," with "old occlusion of left circumflex coronary artery. Subtotal occlusion of left anterior coronary artery. Anterior myocardial scar. Visceral congestion, moderate." The answers given in the insurance application were false.

The testimony of defendant's witnesses at trial established that the policy was issued in reliance of the truth of the representations made in the application and that, had the true facts been known, a different procedure would have been followed by defendant in processing the application, and the policy would not have been issued.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for plaintiff and order denying defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict with directions to enter judgment for defendant (48 Cal. 2d 720, 730). The Court stated that defendant insurer had a right to know all that the deceased insured knew relating to the specific questions asked in the insurance application (48 Cal. 2d 720, 727).

[c] Insured Failed to Communicate Material Facts

In West Coast Life Ins. Co. v. Ward (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 181, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , the insurer obtained a declaratory judgment that it properly rescinded a life insurance policy covering the life of the defendant's wife after receiving a claim for payment following her death. The insurer based its right to rescission on two inaccurate answers on the application regarding the existence of other life insurance policies. Pursuant to *Ins. Code § 332, "[e]*ach party to a contract of insurance shall communicate to the other, in good faith, all facts within [his or her] knowledge [that] are or [that he or she] believes to be material to the contract." Because the insured's failure to disclose other current insurance policies in her application was material to the insurer's decision to issue the policy, and because the insurer did not waive the right to information of material facts, the insurer was entitled to summary judgment (132 Cal. App. 4th 181, 186-188, 193) .

In Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. v. RDD, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2010) 685 F. Supp. 2d 1052 , the insurer sought rescission of a policy issued to a restaurant business for employment practices liability insurance. The insurer alleged that rescission was proper based on the insured's failure to disclose prior to issuance of the policy facts concerning one employee's resignation because she had been sexually harassed. The federal district court granted summary judgment for the insurer, holding that a materially false representation at the time of, or before, issuance of a policy may result in rescission of the policy. Materiality is determined by the probable and reasonable effect that truthful answers would have had on the insurer. That the insurer has demanded answers to specific questions in an application for insurance is in itself usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law (685 F. Supp. 2d 1052, 1057) .

[d] Questions in Insurance Application are Material

In United States Specialty Ins. Co. v. Bridge Capital Corp. (C.D. Cal. 2007) 482 F. Supp. 2d 1164 , the insurer under D&O policies sought rescission and moved forsummary judgment. The federal district court granted the motion, holding that the policies were void ab initio because the company made material misrepresentations on the insurance application and renewal application regarding the number of previous claims of sexual harassment. Pursuant to Ins. Code §§ 331 and 334, a material misrepresentation or concealment in an insurance application, whether intentional or unintentional, entitles the insurer to rescind the insurance policy ab initio. That an insurer has demanded answers to specific questions on an application for insurance is usually sufficient to establish the materiality of that information as a matter of law (482 F. Supp. 2d 1164, 1166, 1167-1170) .

In Admiral Ins. Co. v. Debber (E.D. Cal. 2006) 442 F. Supp. 2d 958 , an insurer brought an action against the insured to rescind an employment-liability insurance policy, alleging that in response to questions in its application for the policy (and renewal), the insured gave untruthful negative answers by failing to disclose two prior lawsuits containing claims for sexual harassment and retaliation. The federal district court stated that an insurer's demand for answers to specific questions in an insurance application usually is sufficient to establish the materiality of those questions as a matter of law. Specifically, an insurance applicant's loss history is a fact material to the insurance risk, supporting rescission (442 F. Supp. 2d 958, 966-967) . In addition, the court found that the insurer did not unreasonably delay the action for rescission, precluding the defense of laches (442 F. Supp. 2d 958, 972) .

In Imperial Cas. & Indem. Co. v. Sogomonian (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 169, 243 Cal. Rptr. 639 , the insurer under a homeowner's policy sought rescission of the policy after it had made a payment of benefits following a fire that destroyed the insureds' home. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer on the ground that in their application the insureds had made material misrepresentations as a matter of law. The court of appeal reversed with directions to enter a summary adjudication of the issue of materiality (and requiring further proceedings regarding damages), holding that the fact that the insurer has demanded answers to specific questions in an application, is in itself usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law (198 Cal. App. 3d 169, 179) .

The factual background of Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720, 312 P.2d 241 , is discussed in § 120.250[4][a]. In reversing the judgment and order with directions to enter judgment for defendant insurer, the Supreme Court said that the deceased was bound in good faith to communicate the material facts in the insurance application, and the fact that defendant put the questions in writing and asked for written answers was itself proof that it deemed the answers material (48 Cal. 2d 720, 727) .

In Rutherford v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 44 Cal. Rptr. 697 , the court of appeal noted the general rule that when an applicant for life insurance is asked for material information about his or her medical history and he or she does not give the specific information requested, the insurance company is entitled to void the policy (234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 724) .

[d] Rescission Is Proper Prior to Commencement of Action on Contract

In Old Line Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1600, 281 Cal. Rptr. 15 , the court of appeal let a writ of mandate issue, ordering the trial court to vacate its order denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action to recover policy benefits brought by the estate of the deceased insured. The court held that insurer's rescission of the life insurance policy was lawful pursuant to Ins. Code § 331, because of the insured's misrepresentations of her smoking history on the insurance application (229 Cal. App. 3d 1600, 1604-1606) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalMaterial MisrepresentationInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCancellation & RenewalGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.251

§ 120.251 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Material Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER RESCINDED THE INSURANCE CONTRACT PRIOR TO COMMENCEMENT OF THIS ACTION ON THE GROUND OF INSURED'S MATERIAL CONCEALMENT.

A. Insurer Has Right to Rescind. The injured party is entitled to rescind the insurance contract from the time a representation, whether affirmative or promissory, becomes false in a material point (Ins. Code § 359; O'Riordan v. Federal Kemper Life Assurance (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 281, 287, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507, 114 P.3d 753). A representation is false when the facts fail to correspond with its assertions or stipulations (Ins. Code § 358).

B. Time of Reference. A representation may be made at the time of, or before, issuance of the policy (Ins. Code § 351). The completion of the contract of insurance is the time to which a representation must be presumed to refer (Ins. Code § 356).

[Optional] C. No Intent to Deceive Required. When false representations as to material matters have been made, the existence of a fraudulent intent to deceive is not essential (Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720, 725, 312 P.2d 241).

[Optional] D. Form of Representation. A representation may be oral or written (Ins. Code § 350).

[Optional] E. Severable Endorsement Subject to Rescission. If issues relating to the validity of an endorsement are severable from the main policy, a party may seek rescission of the endorsement without seeking rescission of main policy (Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 775-776, 284 Cal. Rptr. 680).

[Optional] F. Insurer May Rescind if Applicant for Life Insurance Misrepresented Smoking History to Obtain Nonsmoker Rate. If an applicant for life insurance misrepresents his or her history as a smoker to obtain a nonsmoker rate, the insurer may rescind the policy [O'Riordan v. Federal Kemper Life Assurance (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 281, 287, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507, 114 P.3d 753] .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurance contract was rescinded by the insurer because of the insured's material misrepresentation.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. See also § 120.250[2][a].

Optional Paragraph D should be included if the false representation was oral. Optional Paragraph E should be included if it is argued that an endorsement to the policy, rather than the entire policy, was rescinded. Optional Paragraph F should be included if the applicant misrepresented his or her history as a smoker to obtain a nonsmoker rate.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.250[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- A material misrepresentation on the part of the insured.
- Rescission by the insurer prior to commencement of the action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.250) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.260 and 120.268 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for summary judgment supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Right to Rescind

The factual and procedural background of O'Riordan v. Federal Kemper Life Assurance (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 281, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507, 114 P.3d 753 , is discussed in § 120.251[3][d]. The California Supreme Court ruled that pursuant to Ins. Code § 359, a materially false representation at the time of, or before, issuance of a policy may result in rescission of the policy (36 Cal. 4th 281, 287) .

[b] No Intent to Deceive Required

The factual background of Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720, 312 P.2d 241 , is discussed in § 120.250[4][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment with directions to enter judgment for defendant insurer. The Court stated that when false representations as to material matters have been made, the existence of a fraudulent intent to deceive is not essential, and noted that at the outset of the case defendant had submitted an instruction stating that the "presence of an intent to deceive is not essential," which, the Court said, is a correct statement of the law (48 Cal. 2d 720, 725, 729) .

[c] Severable Endorsement Subject to Rescission

In Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 284 Cal. Rptr. 680 , the insurer issued a policy providing general liability coverage for insured's fruit stand, which was located on property leased from the State. An agent of the State told the insured that he was required to furnish insurance coverage naming the State as an additional insured for liability arising out of the possession of the leased property. The State furnished a certificate of insurance to insured to be executed by the insurance agent on behalf of the insurer. The certificate included a statement that the endorsement assured compliance by the named insured with the terms and provisions of the lease entered into between the insured as lessee and the State as lessor. The insurer amended the policy accordingly, naming the State, its officers, agents, and employees as additional insured under the policy. In fact, however, the lease did not require the lessees to provide the insurance to the State, although it did require them to indemnify the State for any third-party claims arising out of the use of the leased property. While the policy was in effect, a motor vehicle accident involving the property occurred, resulting in litigation that named both insured and the State as defendants.

The insurer undertook defense of both defendants, incurring attorney's fees and expenses. The insurer filed an action against the State to rescind the certificate of insurance because of the agent's misrepresentation; to seek a declaratory judgment that the State was not an additional insured under the policy and was not entitled to coverage for the claims arising out of the vehicle accident; and to seek reimbursement for attorney's fees and expenses. The State demurred on the ground that the complaint failed to allege any facts constituting legal grounds for rescission, arguing that the endorsement did not affect the materiality of the risk. The State also argued that the contract the insurer seeks to rescind is between the insurer and the named insured, and that the State is merely a third-party beneficiary; therefore, the alleged misrepresentations made by the State to the named insured did not induce the insurer to issue a rider to the insurance policy. The trial court dismissed the action after sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court erroneously sustained the demurrer without leave to amend; the facts alleged in the complaint could support a cause of action for rescission, and because any defects in the complaint could be cured by amendment, leave to amend should have been granted (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 775) . The court stated that under Civ. Code § 1689, a party to a contract may rescind the contract if its consent was given by mistake or fraud exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom it rescinds, or of any other jointly interested party to the contract. Ins. Code § 359 provides that if a representation is false in a material point, whether affirmative or promissory, the injured party is entitled to rescind the contract from the time the representation becomes false (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 771) . The court noted that in the instant case, the allegations of the complaint adequately establish (1) a misrepresentation or mistake (that the lease between the State and the named insured required the insured to obtain from its insurer an endorsement adding the State as an additional insured); (2) that the insurer relied on the misrepresentation or mistake in issuing the endorsement; and (3) that but for the misrepresentation or mistake, the certificate of insurance would not have been issued. The court rejected the State's argument that the misrepresentation or mistake was not material. The court stated that the risk assumed by the insurer in naming the State as an additional insured did increase and change the nature of riskassumed under the policy, and that whether the State's representations caused the insurer to issue the endorsement was a factual issue that cannot be resolved on demurrer (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 773-775). The court concluded that the insurer had stated (or at least could state) a cause of action for rescission, and that the trial court should therefore have given the insurer the opportunity to amend the complaint to correct any defects (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 775).

The court also stated, for the guidance of the trial court, that an additional insured added by endorsement is a third-party beneficiary of the insurance contract; and that the third-party beneficiaries' rights are derivative. Because the issues relating to the validity of the endorsement are severable from the main policy, the insurer may seek rescission of the endorsement without seeking rescission of the main policy (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 775) . The court quoted Civ. Code § 1599: "Where a contract has several distinct objects, of which one at least is lawful, and one at least is unlawful, in whole or in part, the contract is void as to the latter and valid as to the rest." The court also relied on Keene v. Harling (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 318, 320, 38 Cal. Rptr. 513, 392 P.2d 273 , for the rule that whether a contract is entire or separable depends on its language and subject matter, which presents a question of construction to be determined by the court according to the intention of the parties. If the contract is divisible, the first part may stand, although the latter is illegal. Further, the court relied on language from Simmons v. California Inst. of Tech. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 264, 275, 209 P.2d 581 , for the proposition that, if a good cause for rescission exists as to one part of a divisible or separable contract, that portion may be rescinded in equity without disturbing the remainder. In the instant case, the court noted, the endorsement was not only executed at a different time than the underlying contract, but it added an additional party to the insurance contract as an insured, thus creating separate and separable rights and obligations from those existing under the underlying contract between the insurer and the named insured (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 776) .

[d] Insurer May Rescind if Applicant for Life Insurance Misrepresented Smoking History to Obtain Nonsmoker Rate

In O'Riordan v. Federal Kemper Life Assurance (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 281, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507, 114 P.3d 753 , the insured under a life insurance policy had answered "no" to the question whether she had smoked during the preceding 36 months, consequently obtaining a preferred nonsmoker rate. After the insured's death, the insurer's investigation revealed that she actually had smoked during the 36 months preceding the application. The insurer refused to pay benefits under the policy, and the beneficiary filed an action against the insurer, seeking policy benefits. The insurer sought summary judgment on the ground that it had rescinded the policy, based on the insured's concealment of her smoking history in the application. The trial court granted summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that triable issues of material fact existed with respect to whether the insured concealed or failed to communicate material information to the insurer regarding her use of cigarettes during the relevant period (36 Cal. 4th 281, 286-287) . The Court also held that if an applicant for life insurance misrepresents his or her history as a smoker to obtain a nonsmoker rate, the insurer may rescind the policy (36 Cal. 4th 281, 287) . The Court discussed the two pertinent questions in the medical questionnaire inquiring into the insured's cigarette and tobacco use. The first question asked, "Have you smoked cigarettes in the past 36 months?" That inquiry can reasonably be construed as an attempt to determine habitual use, not the smoking of a single cigarette or two during that entire period, as some facts tended to show. If the the insurer had attempted to determine whether an applicant had smoked one or two cigarettes, it could have inquired into the smoking of "any" cigarette during the relevant period. The second question asked: "Have you used tobacco in any other form in the past 36 months?" Because this question directly followed the question pertaining to cigarette use, an applicant could reasonably construe it as inquiring into use of tobacco in any form other than cigarettes. Therefore, an applicant who smoked only a few cigarettes, but did not use tobacco in any other form during the period at issue could correctly answer "no" to this question. Therefore, if (as the beneficiary maintained) the insured smoked only a cigarette or two during the 36 months preceding her application and did not use any other tobacco products, she did not conceal her cigarette use by answering "no" to the two questions at issue. Moreover, even if, as the insurer contended, those two questions required disclosure of even a single cigarette smoked during the period at issue, the insured did not conceal that information from the insurer if she mentioned it to the agent when she applied for the life insurance. The insurer contended, however, that the insured did not tell the agent that she had smoked any cigarettes during the 36 months preceding the application. According to the medical report of the insured's own physician, the physician prescribed a nicotine patch in the year preceding her application, indicating that she smoked more extensively. After viewing more conflicting evidence, the Court concluded that the question of the insured's cigarette use was a disputed material fact and that summary judgment at this stage in the proceedings was therefore improper (36 Cal. 4th 281, 287-289) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Right to Rescind

In Mitchell v. United Nat'l Ins. Co. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 457, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 627 , an insured sued its insurer for breach of contract and bad faith after the insurer denied a claim for loss by fire. Concluding that the fire resulted from arson committed by the insured's representative, the insurer had rescinded the policy and offered to return the premium. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer based on (1) the alternative grounds of material misrepresentation in the insurance application regarding the description, condition, and use of the property, and (2) the "dishonest act" exclusion. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that Ins. Code §§ 331 and 359 are part of a larger statutory framework imposing heavy burdens of disclosure on both parties to an insurance contract with respect to material representations and the provision of requested information. An insurer may therefore rescind a fire insurance policy based on the insured's negligent or unintentional misrepresentation of a material fact in the insurance application, notwithstanding the willful misrepresentation clause included in the required standard form pursuant to Ins. Code §§ 2070 and 2071 (127 Cal. App. 4th 457, 468, 472-474, 479) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalMaterial MisrepresentationInsurance LawLife InsuranceDisclosure ObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.252-120.259

[Reserved]

§§ 120.252[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.260

§ 120.260 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Concealed or Misrepresented Fact Was Immaterial

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ANY FACT ALLEGEDLY CONCEALED OR MISREPRESENTED BY THE INSURED WAS IMMATERIAL AND THEREFORE NOT GROUNDS FOR A PURPORTED POLICY RESCISSION UNDER INSURANCE CODE SECTIONS 334 AND 360.

[EITHER]

A. Concealment Not Material. To constitute a ground for avoidance of an insurance policy, concealment must be with respect to a material fact (Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 61, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055).

[OR]

A. Misrepresentation Not Material. The injured party may rescind an insurance contract for a false representation only when the representation was false in a material point (see Ins. Code § 359).

[CONTINUE]

B. Determination of Materiality. Materiality is to be determined not by the event, but solely by the probable and reasonable influence of the facts on the party to whom the communication is due, in forming his or her estimate of the disadvantages of the proposed contract, or in making inquiries (Ins. Code § 334 (concealment); Ins. Code § 360 (false representation)).

C. Materiality From Standpoint of Insurer. Materiality, from the insurer's standpoint, is determined by the probable and reasonable effect that truthful disclosure would have had on the insurer in determining the advantages of the proposed contract, that is, whether the insurer was misled into accepting the risk or fixing the premium (Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 61, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer priorto commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the concealed or misrepresented fact was immaterial.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence that establishes that the alleged misrepresentation or concealment related to fact that was not material.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.261 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Material Concealment Required

Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055 , was an action by the insureds, a rubber product manufacturing business composed of several corporations with the same individual as president, against two insurance companies under fire policies insuring plaintiffs' stock and against the agent of the insurers. Both policies contained automatic sprinkler warranties, requiring the insureds, in consideration of a reduced rate, to use diligence to maintain the sprinkler system and its water supply. A fire destroyed stock kept in a new building in which no sprinkler system had yet been installed. The insurers denied liability under their policies and cross complained against their agent and the agent's associate for indemnity. The trial court instructed the jury that the sprinkler warranty required plaintiffs to use due diligence in installing a sprinkler system in the new building, but it refused to submit to the jury the affirmative defenses, raised by one of the insurers, of misrepresentation and concealment. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiffs against the insurers, a verdict against the agent and his associate on the cross complaint of one of the insurers, and a verdict for the agent and his associate on the cross complaint of the other insurer.

The Supreme Court affirmed the portion of the judgment in favor of the insureds and that portion of the judgment on the cross complaint of one insurer in favor of the agent and his associate. It reversed that portion of the judgment in favor of the other insurer on its cross complaint against the agent and the agent's associate on the ground that the agent and his associate were entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the basis of the jury's verdict in favor of the insureds (14 Cal. 3d 45, 65-66) . With respect to the affirmative defenses of misrepresentation and concealment, the Court said that in order to constitute grounds for avoidance of an insurance policy, misrepresentation or concealment must be with respect to amaterial fact (14 Cal. 3d 45, 61) . The Court held that the failure of the insureds to disclose to the insurer, who raised the defenses, that they were storing stock in a newly constructed building prior to installation of the automatic sprinkler system was not material since the insurer, under the terms of its policy, had assumed the risk of covering stock in a newly constructed building pending installation of sprinklers (14 Cal. 3d 45, 62) . The Court therefore held that the trial court did not err in refusing to submit the affirmative defenses to the jury (14 Cal. 3d 45, 60-61) .

[b] Materiality From Standpoint of Insurer

The factual background of Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055 , is discussed in § 120.260[3][a]. In affirming the portions of the judgment in favor of the insureds, the Supreme Court, replying to the insurer's argument that the insureds' conduct constituted misrepresentation and concealment and citing Ins. Code § 334 (concealment) and Ins. Code § 360 (misrepresentation), said that materiality is determined by the probable and reasonable effect that truthful disclosure would have had on the insurer in determining the advantages of the proposed contract and that, essentially, the Court had to decide whether the insurer was misled into accepting the risk or fixing the premium of insurance (14 Cal. 3d 45, 61) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Material Concealment Required

Rutherford v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 44 Cal. Rptr. 697 , was an action by the deceased's widow against defendant insurer to recover the proceeds of a life insurance policy issued by defendant to the deceased. The policy was solicited by agents of the defendant which had previously issued other life insurance policies in small amounts to the deceased. The insurance application set forth much of the deceased's medical history, but parts of it were omitted. In addition, the answers given were inconsistent among themselves and with answers given in the applications for the prior policies. The application had been filled out by a doctor employed by defendant to examine insurance applicants. Evidence showedthat the doctor would write down what he thought the applicant meant and was not too interested in detail; if an applicant mentioned something not too serious the doctor might ignore it. The deceased signed the application, although he did not read it. The policy was executed on March 12, 1958, and the deceased died of a heart attack on August 17, 1959. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff. Defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was denied, and defendant appealed.

Although the court of appeal affirmed the judgment on the grounds that defendant was estopped to assert the falsity of the answers in the application as a defense to the action and that defendant by its failure to make further inquiry as to the deceased's medical history had waived any misstatements or concealment in the application, the court, after noting the general rule that when an applicant for life insurance is asked for material information about his medical history and does not give the specific information requested, the insurance company is entitled to void the policy [citing Ins. Code §§ 331, 10380], said that the concealment must be of a material fact in order to justify rescission of the policy or to permit the defense of fraud to an action on the policy (234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 724, 725) .

[b] Determination of Materiality

The factual background of Rutherford v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 44 Cal. Rptr. 697 , is discussed in § 120.260[4][a]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff against the insurer, the court quoted the provisions of Ins. Code § 334 (234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 725) .

[c] Materiality From Standpoint of Insurer

The factual background of Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420, 274 P.2d 633 , is discussed in § 120.261[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff against defendant insurer, the Supreme Court, with respect to the insured's "No" answer to the question whether an electrocardiogram had ever been made, said that whether or not an electrocardiogram had ever been made of his heart action was immaterial and that an incorrect answer on an insurance application does not give rise to the defense of fraud where the true facts, if known, would not have made the contract less desirable to the insurer (43 Cal. 2d 420, 427) . The Court explained that the electrocardiogram showed that the insured's heart was "essentially normal" and that defendant did not claim that this part of the medical history, if known, would have influenced it to consider the risk less desirable (43 Cal. 2d 420, 427) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalMaterial Misrepresentation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.261

§ 120.261 Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions of Health in Insurance Application Does Not Constitute Concealment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURED'S NONDISCLOSURE OF MERE TEMPORARY INDISPOSITIONS OF HEALTH DOES NOT CONSTITUTE CONCEALMENT.

Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions in Insurance Application. The nondisclosure, in an application for life, accident, or health insurance, of feelings of trivial discomfort, or of temporary indispositions not affecting the general soundness and healthfulness of the system or tending to undermine and weaken the constitution, in answering general questions as to whether the applicant within a specified period has suffered, or has ever suffered any mental disease or infirmity or any bodily disease or illness or received medical or surgical advice or attention, or consulted a physician, does not constitute a fraudulent concealment and will not sustain either an action or defense founded on it (see Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420, 427, 274 P.2d 633 ; Travelers Ins. Co. v. Byers (1932) 123 Cal. App 473, 478-480, 11 P.2d 444).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because illnesses omitted form insurance applications were merely temporary indispositions not affecting the overall general health of the insured.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that information which the insured did not disclosed on the insurance application pertained to feelings of trivial discomfort, or of temporary indispositions not affecting the general soundness and healthfulness of the system or tending to undermine and weaken the constitution.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions in Insurance Application

Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420, 274 P.2d 633 , was an action by the insured's widow and named beneficiary under a life insurance policy against the insurer to recover under the policy. The insured, a 28-year-old man, had been solicited by defendant's agent. A doctor selected by defendant examined the insured and found nothing wrong with his physical condition. The insured made a written application for insurance on a form provided by defendant and paid the first premium in full. In the application, the insured had replied "No" to the questions whether he had ever had "high blood pressure," whether he had ever had a "pain" in his chest or any "illness" or "disease" other than as specified in the application, and whether he had an "electrocardiogram" made. He also stated in the application that he had previously been examined by a Dr. Long. In response to inquiries made by defendant, Dr. Long replied that the insured had visited him two years before complaining of a "heavy feeling" in the chest. Dr. Long stated that his examination revealed a "moderately obese patient with no important clinical findings," that laboratory studies included an electrocardiogram which was "essentially normal," that the first blood pressure reading was above normal and that the second reading taken about a week later under less tension was normal as to the systolic pressure and a little above normal as to the diastolic pressure.

Dr. Long advised the insured to lose weight and "reassured" him as to his physical status. After receiving Dr. Long's report, defendant requested that the insured submit to further medical examination, but before this could be arranged the insured was killed in an automobile accident. The autopsy disclosed no evidence of disease and showed that the insured's death resulted from external violence. Several days after the accident, defendant, having received information of the death, tendered to plaintiff the full amount of the first premium payment and informed her that, in view of Dr. Long's report, the insured's application could not be approved. In denying liability under the policy, the insurer claimed first that there was no insurance contract in effect and secondly that the insured's application was fraudulent as a result of the "No" answer mentioned above.

The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiff, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that an insurance contract came into being immediately on defendant's receipt of the completed application and the first premium payment (43 Cal. 2d 420, 425) . With respect to the insured's "No" answer to the question whether he had ever had pain in the chest and the insured's failure to report as an "illness" or "disease" that he had experienced a "heavy feeling" in his chest at the time he consulted Dr. Long, the Court said there was no evidence that the insured ever had a pain in hischest, and that his failure to mention the heavy feeling in his chest did not constitute fraud, since questions concerning illness or disease in insurance applications do not relate to minor indispositions but are to be construed as referring to serious ailments which undermine the general health (43 Cal. 2d 420, 426-427) .

Travelers Ins. Co. v. Byers (1932) 123 Cal. App 473, 11 P.2d 444 , was an action by an insurance company for rescission of two life and accident insurance policies it had issued to defendant's decedent. Defendant was the insured's widow and the named beneficiary under the policies. She cross complained against plaintiff insurer to recover the amounts of the policies, which plaintiff had refused to pay. Plaintiff alleged that it had been induced to issue the policies by reason of decedent's following representations, which plaintiff alleged were fraudulent, in his applications for the insurance:

> (1) Within the previous five years, he had not suffered any mental disease or infirmity or any bodily disease or infirmity and had received no surgical advice or attention;
>
> (2) Within that period he had received medical advice or attention for slight colds, causing him illness for two days, and influenza causing him illness for 10 days (mentioned in second but not in first application); and
>
> (3) He was then in good health.

The policies were issued in 1928. In 1929, the insured was killed as the result of a fall from the fourth floor of a hospital. An autopsy revealed that the insured had a chronic kidney condition. No evidence was introduced showing that the insured had ever received treatment for the kidney condition or that he had been aware of it. There was evidence that the insured had over the two-year period prior to the applications called on a doctor 16 times and that two years before the applications were made the insured had spent a day in a hospital. But there was no evidence tending to show the purpose of the visits to the doctor or of the hospital stay. The trial court found that the insured's representations were true and entered judgment for defendant on the complaint and for the cross complainant on the cross complaint.

The court of appeal affirmed. It defined the following terms, as used in applications for life, accident, and health insurance: "bodily infirmity" includes only an ailment or disorder of a somewhat established or settled character and not a mere temporary disorder arising from a sudden and unexpected derangement of the system (123 Cal. App 473, 478) ; "illness" is a disease or ailment of such a character as to affect the general soundness and healthfulness of the system and not a mere temporary indisposition which does not tend to undermine and weaken the constitution; that is, it relates to matters which have a sensible, appreciable form and appliesordinarily to matters of substantial character and not to a slight and temporary indisposition, speedily forgotten (123 Cal. App 473, 478) ; "consult a physician" means a consultation as to some disease or illness with which the applicant was or had been afflicted, not to some feeling of trivial discomfort or temporary indisposition not affecting the general health (123 Cal. App 473, 479) "medical advice or attention" means medical advice or attention for some ailment which would affect the general soundness and healthfulness of the system (123 Cal. App 473, 479-480) . The court held that the insured's failure to report the colds and influenza in his first application did not constitute a fraudulent concealment since they were mere indispositions not affecting the general soundness and healthfulness of the system or tending to undermine and weaken the constitution and, hence, that neither an action nor a defense founded on it could be sustained (123 Cal. App 473, 480) .

With respect to the unreported doctor's visits, the court pointed out that it did not appear what the consultations were for, whether for an illness of the insured or in regard to an illness of some member of his family (123 Cal. App 473, 477) , and that, with respect to the hospital stay, for all that appeared from the record, the insured could have been checking up on his general physical condition, merely as a precautionary measure (123 Cal. App 473, 478) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions in Insurance Application

The factual background of Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353 , is discussed in § 120.260[3][c]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff beneficiary under a life insurance policy, the Supreme Court, quoting from Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420, 427, 274 P.2d 633 , said that questions in an insurance application concerning illness or disease do not relate to minor indispositions, but are to be construed as referring to serious ailments which undermine the general health (9 Cal. 3d 904, 916) .

In Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720 , the Supreme Court reversed the judgment for plaintiff beneficiary under a life insurance policy with directions to enter judgment for defendant insurer on the ground the insured had made fraudulent misrepresentations in his application for insurance which vitiated the policy. However, the court stated that when an applicant for life insurance is asked generally whether he or she has had or been treated for any disease or ailment, the failure to mention minor or temporary indispositions is not material to the risk and will not avoid the policy (48 Cal. 2d 720, 725) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawLife InsuranceDisclosure ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawLife InsuranceDisclosure ObligationsHealth Conditions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.262

§ 120.262 No Disclosure Was Required

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED WAS NOT REQUIRED TO MAKE THE PURPORTED DISCLOSURES, AND THEREFORE NO GROUNDS EXISTED FOR RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE POLICY.

[EITHER]

A. Other Party Knew Facts. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate, except in answer to the other's inquiries, information of matters which the other knows (Ins. Code § 333(1)).

[AND/OR]

B. Other Party Should Have Known Facts. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate, except in answer to the other's inquiries, information of matters which, in the exercise of ordinary care, the other ought to know, and of which the party has no reason to suppose him or her ignorant (Ins. Code § 333(2)).

[AND/OR]

C. Disclosure Waived. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate except in answer to the other's inquiries, information of matters of which the other waives communication (Ins. Code § 333(3)).

[AND/OR]

D. Nondisclosed Matter Tends Only to Prove Existence of Risk Excluded by Warranty. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate, except in answer to the other's inquiries, information of matters which prove or tend to prove the existence of a risk excluded by a warranty, and which are not otherwise material (Ins. Code § 333(4)).

[AND/OR]

E. Nondisclosed Matter Relates to Excepted Risk. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate, except in answer to the other's inquiries, information of matters which relate to a risk excepted from insurance, and which are not otherwise material (Ins. Code § 333(5)).

[AND/OR]

F. Nondisclosed Matter Relates to Insured's Interest. Information of the nature or amount of the interest of one insured need not be communicated unless in answer to an inquiry, except as prescribed by Section 381 of the Insurance Code (requiring that the policy specify, among other things, the interest of the insured in property insured if the insured is not the absolute owner of it), or by the provisions of the insurance contract if such provisions are prescribed by the Insurance Code as part of a standard form (Ins. Code § 337).

[AND/OR]

G. Opinion. Neither party to an insurance contract is bound to communicate, even on inquiry, information of his or her own judgment on the matters in question (Ins. Code § 339).

[Optional] H. Knowledge Presumed. Each party to an insurance contract is bound to know (1) all the general causes which are open to his or her inquiry equally with that of the other, and which may affect either the political or material perils contemplated, and (2) all general usages of trade (Ins. Code § 335; Newman v. Firemen's Ins. Co. (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 394-395, 154 P.2d 451 ; E.A. Boyd Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 182, 94 P.2d 1046).

[Optional] I. Waiver of Disclosure by Insurance Contract or by Implication. The right to information of material facts may be waived by the terms of insurance or by neglect to make inquiries as to such facts, when they are distinctly implied in other facts of which information is communicated (Ins. Code § 336; Reserve Insurance Co. v. Apps (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 228, 231-232, 149 Cal. Rptr. 223).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the insured was not required to make the purported disclosures, and therefore no grounds existed for rescission of the insurance policy.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summaryjudgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

Paragraph H should be used with Paragraph B, if the opposing party was presumed to have had knowledge of the nondisclosed facts.

Paragraph I should be used with Paragraph E, if the waiver was made

(1) In the insurance contract itself or

(2) By the other party's neglecting to make inquiry concerning nondisclosed matter that was implied in other facts of which information was communicated.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insured was not required to make the purported disclosures, and therefore no grounds existed for rescission of the insurance policy.

In the case of an opposition to an insurer's motion for summary judgment, the insured would need to establish that:

- The effectiveness of the purported rescission depends on whether disclosure of the allegedly concealed fact or facts was required,
- Whether disclosure was required is a material fact, and
- There are triable issues with respect to this fact.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing themotion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge Presumed

Evid. Code § 620 provides in part that all presumptions declared by law to be conclusive are conclusive presumptions.

Civ. Code § 1646 provides that a contract is to be interpreted according to the law and usage of the place where it is to be performed; or, if it does not indicate a place of performance, according to the law and usage of the place where it is made.

Newman v. Firemen's Ins. Co. (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 154 P.2d 451 , was an action by an insured against his insurer to recover under a fire policy covering his house and its contents. Plaintiff had sustained two prior losses at the same premises under prior fire policies issued by defendant and, after the second loss, defendant had marked its files to indicate that it would not accept further insurance from "Jacob Newman for 976 Pine Grove Avenue." There was no evidence that this fact was ever communicated to plaintiff. Plaintiff applied for the present policy under the name Dr. A. J. Newman, and the policy issued covered the property located at 6200 Buena Vista Terrace. Both 976 Pine Grove Avenue and 6200 Buena Vista Terrace described the same premises. Plaintiff's full name was Alfred Jacob Newman, and the evidence indicated that he variously used his full name, or either his first or middle name with his last name, or his first name, middle initial, and last name. He also held various degrees entitling him to use the title "Dr." He applied for the present policy by phone throughan agent who had been recommended to him and who, unknown to him, was an agent for defendant. He introduced himself to the agent as Dr. Newman and gave, as his initials, A.J., when asked for them. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal held that plaintiff was under no duty to give the insurer information disclosing prior losses in the absence of an inquiry on the subject. The court quoted Ins. Code §§ 330 and 332-335 in whole or in part (67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 392) and summarized the holding of E.A. Boyd Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 94 P.2d 1046 , from which it quoted extensively (67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 393-394) . The court said that while the decision in Boyd was placed on the ground of estoppel operating against the insurer, the court in that case also held that what had been said regarding the estoppel of the insurance company, which was created by its knowledge of the uncommunicated facts, did not conflict with the quoted provisions of the Insurance Code, and that, moreover, the facts and circumstances presented in Boyd were such as to have warranted a decision in that case based solely on the authority of the pertinent provisions of the Insurance Code (67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 394-395) .

Citing Ins. Code §§ 332, 333, and 335, the court said that (1) in the present case there was no misstatement of facts, merely a failure on plaintiff's part to reveal that he was the same person as Jacob Newman and that 6200 Buena Vista Terrace was the same premises as 976 Pine Grove Avenue; (2) from all that appears in the record, defendant had the means of ascertaining the uncommunicated facts; (3) under the circumstances presented, the facts were such as could have been ascertained by defendant in the exercise of ordinary care; (4) there was no evidence in the record on which to base an inference that plaintiff supposed defendant to be ignorant of the facts left undisclosed, or from which to infer that plaintiff had any reason to suppose defendant ignorant of such facts; and (5) in the absence of inquiry, plaintiff was not bound to disclose such facts on applying for the fire insurance involved (67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 395) .

The court nevertheless affirmed the judgment on the ground that the evidence supported the trial court's findings that plaintiff knowingly and falsely claimed loss of property which had been destroyed in the prior fires, that he grossly overstated the value of each item of property claimed to have been damaged or destroyed, and that plaintiff made these statements knowing that they were false (67 Cal. App. 2d 386, 399) .

E.A. Boyd Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 94 P.2d 1046 , was an action by an employer against its insurer to recover, under a fidelity bond, the amount embezzled by an employee. The employee had been convicted of embezzlement some seven years before while employed by a bank, and defendant insurer had paid a part of the bank's loss.Plaintiff knew of the employee's prior record but, believing that the employee had, based on his employment record during the seven years, been rehabilitated, did not communicate the conviction to defendant. The employee had been added to the schedule of coverage under the present bond as Merwin L. Devin, whereas defendant's records showed the name of M.L. Devin as a former embezzler. Defendant suspected that the two names might be of the same person and several times instructed its agent to check it out, but the agent failed to do so. Defendant did not, however, strike the employee's name from the bonding list until after the loss occurred, at which time it denied liability and served notice of rescission. Judgment for plaintiff was affirmed on the ground defendant was under the circumstances, estopped from claiming that the bond was void (35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 179-180) .

The court nevertheless added that the provisions of Ins. Code §§ 330-339, relied on by defendant, were not in conflict with what it had said regarding the estoppel of the insurance company which was created by its knowledge of the uncommunicated fact complained of (35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 182) . The court quoted the provisions of Ins. Code §§ 332, 333, and 335 and said that it followed that since no questions were asked plaintiff regarding the honesty or previous record of the employee, and evidence of his former defalcation was available to defendant in its own records, plaintiff's failure to have voluntarily informed defendant of that fact was not such fraud or concealment as would warrant the cancellation of the bond on that account (35 Cal. App. 2d 171, 182) .

[b] Waiver of Disclosure by Insurance Contract or by Implication

Reserve Ins. Co. v. Apps (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 228, 149 Cal. Rptr. 223 , was an action by an insurance company against its insured and his wife for a declaratory judgment that the motor vehicle liability policy issued by plaintiff to defendant husband did not cover defendant wife. The wife was involved in an automobile accident on the day coverage commenced. The policy provided coverage for the insured's spouse if he or she was a resident of the same household; however, two months prior to the accident, defendants, who had been married for many years, entered into a trial separation with the husband living at an apartment and the wife remaining in the family home. From an adverse judgment, plaintiff insurer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held immaterial plaintiff's argument that it was not fully informed as to the husband's marital status, since the policy covered a spouse. The court also rejected plaintiff's argument that the application for insurance did not show the wife's prior driving experience, since it did not show the driving experience of the many possible permissive users whom it covered. The court noted that an insurermay required an application to disclose spouses and potential permissive users and their past records, but, if it does not, it assumes whatever risks that may be involved (85 Cal. App. 3d 228, 231). The court further held that the trial court was correct in finding, under the evidence presented, that the family home was still a residence of the husband with the wife a resident in that home (85 Cal. App. 3d 228, 231-232) and said that if an insurer desires not to cover spouses separated under the conditions shown to exist, it should make that purpose clear in its policy and, lacking any such more explicit definition of "resident," an insurer must, under well-settled doctrines of interpretation of insurance policies, accept liability under any reasonable interpretation of the words it uses (85 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Disclosure by Insurance Contract or by Implication

In Rutherford v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 719 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff against defendant insurer, the court of appeal held that defendant was estopped to assert the falsity of the answers in the application as a defense to the action (234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 727-733). Citing Ins. Code § 336, the court further held that defendant had waived any misstatements or concealment in the application because defendant failed to request additional information from the insurance doctor or from the insured's doctors after it had been put on notice that the insurance application form was incomplete and inaccurate in material respects (234 Cal. App. 2d 719, 733-735) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsWarrantiesInsurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.263

§ 120.263 Insured May Rebut Statutory Presumption That Representation Refers to Time Insurance Contract Is Completed

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE REPRESENTATION DID NOT REFER TO THE TIME THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS COMPLETED, BUT TO THE EARLIER TIME OF _____ [specify, e.g., WHEN THE APPLICATION MADE].

Statutory Presumption as Rebuttable. The statutory presumption that a representation refers to the time the insurance contractis completed (Ins. Code § 356) is rebuttable (Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Devore (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 129, 137, 56 Cal. Rptr. 881, 424 P.2d 321).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer's purported rescission of the insurance contract was not effective because the representation did not refer to the time the insurance contract was completed, but rather an earlier time, such as when the application made.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.

- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the representation did not refer to the time the insurance contract was completed, but rather an earlier time, such as when the application made.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues ofmaterial fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumption as Rebuttable

Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Devore (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 129, 56 Cal. Rptr. 881, 424 P.2d 321 , involved two consolidated actions. The first was by an insurance company to cancel or rescind a 15-year mortgage term life insurance policy issued to Charles Devore, who died after suit was filed and whose widow was substituted in his place, and the second was by the widow against the insurer to recover the insurance benefits. Part A of the application for the insurance had been executed by decedent on September 2, 1959. On September 21, 1959, decedent submitted to a medical examination by a doctor of the insurer's choice. During the examination, the doctor filled in Parts B and C of the application. Part B, which was signed by decedent, contained questions relating to decedent's medical history, and Part C was the doctor's report on the physical examination given to decedent. Decedent's negative answers to questions in Part B directed towards ascertaining whether decedent had any history of heart trouble, including whether he had ever had an electrocardiogram, were true at the time they were made. The application was sent to the insurer's San Francisco headquarters.

Subsequently, on October 19, 1959, decedent was given an electrocardiogram by his own doctor which disclosed an abnormality. The doctordiagnosed the condition as arteriosclerotic heart disease, but did not tell the decedent. Instead, he suggested that decedent be admitted to a hospital for rest and medication to prevent trouble. Decedent entered the hospital on October 21, 1959, and was discharged on October 26. The insurer approved issuance of a policy on November 12 and issued a policy on an intermediate basis which was delivered to the decedent on November 30. On the same date, decedent paid a full year's premium and signed a document entitled "Application Amendment," which had been prepared by the insurer. The document amended the application in several specified particulars and contained the statement that the application, "as amended, is correct and true, and I hereby ratify and confirm the statements therein made as the date hereof." No questions were asked regarding any change in his medical history since the date of the original application. The decedent died of heart disease on January 10, 1962.

The trial court found that the decedent's answers in his original application were substantially true when made and that the above quoted statement in the application amendment meant that the answers in the original application were true when they were made in September, not that they were still true on November 30. The court rendered judgment for the widow, and the insurer appealed, contending, among other things, that misrepresentation occurred as a matter of law since, under Ins. Code § 356, the completion of the contract is the time to which a representation must be presumed to refer. The insurer urged that the contract was not completed until delivery and that, since the representations in the original application were, by the terms of Ins. Code § 356, deemed to be made at the time of completion of the contract, the decedent must be held as a matter of law to have answered the questions falsely. The Supreme Court rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment. It held that the presumption specified in Ins. Code § 356 is rebuttable and that since the trial court had found as a fact that the representations were referable to an earlier time, the date of the application, the conclusion was controlling (66 Cal. 2d 129, 137) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsExceptionsStatutory PresumptionsEvidenceInferences & PresumptionsPresumptionsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.264

§ 120.264 Ambiguous Representation Is Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT BASED ON INSURED'S ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE, WHEN PROPERLY CONSTRUINGTHE REPRESENTATION MOST FAVORABLY FOR THE INSURED, THE REPRESENTATION WAS TRUE.

A. Construction of Uncertain Terms. Any uncertainty in a contract is to be interpreted against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist (Civ. Code § 1654).

B. Ambiguous Representations Drafted by Insurer to be Construed in Favor of Insured. The settled rule that all ambiguities must be interpreted against the insurer applies to representations drafted by the insurer which the insured signs (Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Devore (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 129, 136, 56 Cal. Rptr. 881, 424 P.2d 321).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because when construed most favorably for the insured the representation, as it was understood by the insured, was true.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.251.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the specific representation drafted by the insurer, and point out that when construed against the drafter, the representation of the insured is true.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Construction of Uncertain Terms

Civ. Code § 1654 provides that in cases of uncertainty not removed by the preceding rules (Civ. Code §§ 1635-1653), the language of a contract should be interpreted most strongly against the party who caused the uncertainty to exist. The promisor is presumed to be such party, except in a contract between a public officer or body, as such, and a private party, in which it is presumed that all uncertainty was caused by the private party.

[b] Ambiguous Representations Drafted by Insurer to be Construed in Favor of Insured

The factual background of Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Devore (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 129, 56 Cal. Rptr. 881, 424 P.2d 321 , is discussed in § 120.263[3][a]. The "Application Amendment" was drafted by the insurer and submitted to the insured for signature at the time the policy was delivered (November 30, 1959). By the amendment, the policy classification was changed to "Intermediate" (a substandard policy at a higher premium), the amount of insurance was changed to $20,000, the policy was to bear as the date of issue September 1, 1959, and the answer "No" was to be inserted to a specified question in Part B of the application, relating to the applicant's association with persons suffering from tuberculosis. The amendment further stated: "These amendments and declarations are to be considered as a part of the said application and subject to the agreements, covenants, and statements therein contained. The said application, together with these amendments, is to be considered as the basis of and as a part of the contract of insurance. The said application, as amended, is correct and true, and I hereby ratify and confirm the statements therein made as of the date hereof."

The trial court found that the italicized statement was ambiguous in that it could be construed to mean, as contended by the insurer, that the answers given by decedent in the original application were true as of November 30, the date the amendment was executed, or to mean that the decedent was confirming that the answers in the original application were true when they were made in September. The trial court adopted the latter construction and also found that the decedent reasonably understood the language of the amendment to mean that the insurer was satisfied with and was relying on the September application and, on the basis of that application, was issuing a substandard intermediate policy if the insured authorized the application to be amended so as to apply for the substandard policy at a higher rated premium and to include in it the other amendments specified (66 Cal. 2d 129, 133) . The Supreme Court agreed. It held that, in view of the settled rule that all ambiguities must be interpreted against the insurer, the decedent, in signing the amendment, merely represented that he reaffirmed the answers given on his prior application as of the time they were made in September and hence it was unnecessary to decide whether the alleged misrepresentations were material to the risk (66 Cal. 2d 129, 136) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.265

§ 120.265 Purported Representation Was Mere Hearsay Statement and That Fact Was Made Known to Insurer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE INSURED'S ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION WAS MERE HEARSAY AND THAT WAS MADE KNOWN TO THE INSURER.

Representation on Hearsay. An insured who has no personal knowledge of a fact may nevertheless repeat information which he or she has on the subject and believes to be true, with the explanation that the insured does so on the information of others; or the insured may submit the information in its whole extent to the insurer. In neither case is the insured responsible for its truth, unless it proceeds from the insured's agent whose duty it is to give the information (Ins. Code § 357).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer's purported rescission of the insurance contract was not effective because the insured's alleged misrepresentation was mere hearsay and that was made known to the insurer.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.251.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation on Hearsay

Under Ins. Code § 357, an insured who has no personal knowledge of a fact may nevertheless repeat information which he or she has on the subject and believes to be true, with the explanation that the insured does so on the information of others; or the insured may submit the information in its whole extent to the insurer. In neither case is the insured responsible for its truth, unless it proceeds from the insured's agent whose duty it is to give the information.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.266

§ 120.266 Representation Was Altered or Withdrawn

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE REPRESENTATION RELIED ON WAS _____ [ALTERED or WITHDRAWN] BEFORE THE INSURANCE BECAME EFFECTIVE.

Alteration or Withdrawal of Representation. A representation may be altered or withdrawn before the insurance is effected, but not afterwards (Ins. Code § 355).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the representation relied on was altered or withdrawn before the insurance became effective.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.

- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the representation relied on was altered or withdrawn before the insurance became effective.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, whenthe evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration or Withdrawal of Representation

Under Ins. Code § 355, a representation may be altered or withdrawn before the insurance is effected, but not afterwards.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.267

§ 120.267 Incorrect or Incomplete Answers in Insurance Application Were Due to Insured's Ignorance of Fact or Failure to Appreciate Significance of Information

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE INSURED _____ [DID NOT HAVE PRESENT KNOWLEDGE OF THEFACTS ALLEGEDLY CONCEALED OR MISREPRESENTED and/or DID NOT APPRECIATE THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE FACTS OF WHICH THE INSURED WAS AWARE].

Applicant's Ignorance of Facts or Their Significance. The incorrect or incomplete responses of an applicant for insurance caused by the applicant's lack of present knowledge of the facts or failure to appreciate the significance of information related to the applicant do not constitute a ground for rescinding the policy (Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904, 916, 109 Cal. Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the insured did not have present knowledge of the facts allegedly concealed or misrepresented or did not appreciate the significance of the facts of which the insured was aware.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insured did not have present knowledge of the facts allegedly concealed or misrepresented or did not appreciate the significance of the facts of which the insured was aware.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicant's Ignorance of Facts or Their Significance

In Thompson v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 904 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff beneficiary under a life insurance policy, the Supreme Court, in reviewing the rules of law applicable in appraising a claim of misrepresentation in procuring insurance, said that if the applicant for insurance had no present knowledge of the facts sought, or failed to appreciate the significance of information related to him, his incorrect or incomplete responses would not constitute grounds for rescission (9 Cal. 3d 904, 916) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicant's Ignorance of Facts or Their Significance

In Cohen v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 720, 726, 312 P.2d 241 , the Supreme Court, citing Travelers Ins. Co. v. Byers (1932) 123 Cal. App 473, 481, 11 P.2d 444 , and Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420, 426, 274 P.2d 633 , noted the rules that failure of an applicant to disclose a physical condition of which he or she is ignorant will not affect the policy and that a lay person might reasonably be excused if, in disclosing information in an insurance application, he or she failed to understand the meaning of certain medical terms and for that reason omitted some fact in his or her medical history (48 Cal. 2d 720, 726) .

In Ransom v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 420 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff against defendant insurer, the Supreme Court, with respect to the insured's "No" answer to the question whether he had ever had high blood pressure, said that there was no evidence that the insured had ever been informed that he had high blood pressure, that the doctor had told him that he had a "mild hypertension," that it did not appear that the insured knew what the term meant, and that, as a layman, he might reasonably have failed to understand that it had any relation to blood pressure (43 Cal. 2d 420, 426).

In Travelers Ins. Co. v. Byers (1932) 123 Cal. App. 473 , affirming the judgment for defendant the (beneficiary under a life insurance policy) on the complaint and for the cross complainant (the beneficiary) on the cross complaint, the court held that a failure to disclose facts of which the applicant was ignorant (kidney condition) will not afford ground for avoiding the policy because of the concealment, that a presumption of intent to deceive is raised only when the statements are made with knowledge of their falsity, and that the burden is on the party asserting the untruthfulness of a statement to show not only that the statement was erroneously made, but that it was willfully so (123 Cal. App. 473, 481). The court held that, since no evidence had been presented remotely tending to show that the insured had any knowledge whatsoever of his kidney condition at the time the applications were signed, the trial court's finding that the insured's statements were true was supported by the evidence (123 Cal. App 473, 481) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplicationsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.268

§ 120.268 Insurer Estopped from Rescinding Policy Because it Failed to Make Reasonable Investigation of Risk Prior to Accident

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURER WAS ESTOPPED FROM RESCINDING THE POLICY UNDER INSURANCE CODE SECTION 650 BECAUSE OF ITS FAILURE TO HAVE UNDERTAKEN AN INVESTIGATION OF THE RISK WITHIN A REASONABLE TIME AFTER THE POLICY WAS ISSUED.

A. Insurer Failed to Take Prompt Action on Application for Insurance. Because of the quasi-public nature of the insurance business and the reasonable expectation of the applicant and the general public, an insurer has an extra-contractual duty to act promptly on applications for insurance (Amex Life Assurance Co. v. Superior Court (Slome Capital Corp.) (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1233, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 898, 930 P.2d 1264 ; Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 673, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674).

B. Insurer Did Not Promptly Investigate Risk. The insurer's duty to act promptly on an insurance application applies directly to the insurer's analogous duty, after the policy is issued, to conduct with due diligence a reasonable investigation of the risk (Amex Life Assurance Co. v. Superior Court (Slome Capital Corp.) (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1233, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 898, 930 P.2d 1264 ; Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 673, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674).

C. Due Diligence Requires Investigation of Risk Within Reasonable Time. An automobile liability insurer must undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of a policy (Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 663, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785).

D. Effect of Failure to Make Reasonable Investigation of Risk. The failure of an automobile liability insurer to investigate the insured's insurability within a reasonable time after the policy isissued will render the insurer liable on the policy to a person injured as a result of the negligent operation of the car (Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 663, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619, 620, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785).

E. Estoppel to Plead Rescission Where Rights of Third Party Have Intervened. An insurer who fails to undertake a reasonable investigation of the risk may not, in an action against it to recover within policy limits the amount of a judgment previously recovered against its insured, defeat recovery by relying on an untimely attempt to rescind the policy (Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 675, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674).

F. Reasonableness of Investigation as Question of Fact. Whether an automobile liability insurer has breached its duty to the public to make a reasonable investigation within a reasonable time after issuance of the policy ordinarily constitutes a question for the trier of fact (Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 681, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 ; Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 620, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785).

[Optional] G. Rule Requiring Investigation Applies to Adding Vehicles to Existing Policy. The rule requiring the insurer to conduct a reasonable investigation of the risk applies to the addition of a car to an existing policy [United Services Automobile Assn. v. Pegos (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 392, 398, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866] .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the insurer is estopped to deny coverage due to its failure to undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable time after it issued its policy. Optional Paragraph G is for use if the insurer's failure to investigate involved additional vehicles added to an existing policy.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforcethe contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insurer failed to undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable time after it issued its policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Take Prompt Action on Application for Insurance

Amex Life Assurance Co. v. Superior Court (Slome Capital Corp.) (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1231, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 898, 930 P.2d 1264 , was an action against a life insurance company that denied the claim of a company that bought the insured's policy shortly before his death, in which the trial court denied the insurer's motion for summary judgment on causes of action for breach of contract, insurance bad faith, and equitable estoppel. Although the insured, who knew he was HIV positive, had lied on the application and sent an impostor to take the mandatory medical examination, the trial court ruled that California did not recognize the impostor defense to the incontestability clause (Ins. Code, §§ 10113.5, 10206) contained in the policy. The insurer filed a petition for a writ of mandate directing the trial court to grant its summary judgment motion; the Court of Appeal granted the petition as to the bad faith cause of action but, finding that the impostor defense, even if it existed, did not apply in the instant case, denied it in all other respects.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Appeal, holding that the insurer's challenge to coverage was barred by the policy's incontestability clause (14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1246) . Although the insurer asserted that the policy was void ab initio, there was a meeting of the minds on the identity of the person with whom the insurer was dealing. Thus, the facts fell outside the impostor defense and within the policy's incontestability provision (14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1232) . When a named insured applies for a policy, and the premiums are paid for over two years, the beneficiaries should be assured they will receive the expected benefits upon the insured's death. The deception could have been discovered at the start had the insurer simply required all applicants to produce photographic identification before conducting the examination and issuing a policy. Given the relatively light burden of such a requirement, and the burden of diligence that Ins. Code § 10113.5 places on the insurer, application of the incontestability clause was proper.

Although the insurer also asserted the examination was a condition precedent to the contract, such a claim was within the scope of the incontestability clause, which protects the insured against any defense of a breach of a condition precedent where he or she has paid premiums beyond the period of contestability (14 Cal. 4th 1231, 1232-1233) .

Note that Insurance Code sections 10113.5 and 10206 have since been amended to include an imposter defense, although it requires thatphotographic identification be presented during the application process, and that an imposter be substituted for the insured during some part of the application process (see Ins. Code §§ 10113.5(b), 10206(b), as amended by 1998 legislation). In Amex Life, the insured showed no identification of any type during the application process, so that the imposter defense would not have applied.

Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , was an action by the judgment creditor of defendant's insured to compel payment of a judgment that had been obtained for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff in an automobile accident. The insurer cross complained for a declaratory judgment that the policy was not in effect at the time of the accident, claiming it had been rescinded [see Ins. Code § 650] because of a material misrepresentation by the insured [see Ins. Code §§ 359, 360] in his application. The material misrepresentation consisted of the word "No" having been written in the application in answer to the question, "Has your license to drive or registration been suspended ... in the last five years." The application had been filled out by defendant's agent writing the answers given by the insured to the questions asked. Defendant did not begin its investigation of the insured until more than two months after the accident and almost two years after the policy had been issued.

The investigation consisted of securing a report from the California Department of Motor Vehicles which showed that the insured had one driver's license suspension and two probation orders within the five years preceding April 1958, the month that the application was made and the policy was issued. At the trial, the insured testified that the agent had not called the aforementioned question in the application to his attention and that he showed the agent his driver's license which bore a "Probation" stamp on it. The agent testified that although he did not recall asking the question, he always, as a matter of practice, did so. He also testified that he had not seen the insured's driver's license and could not remember the manner in which he obtained the license number that had been included in the application. The trial court found that defendant had issued the policy in reliance on the misrepresentation, that rescission was therefore justified, and that defendant acted promptly on discovery of the misrepresentation. The court entered judgment for defendant on both the complaint and cross complaint.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court pointed out that California has developed a line of decisions imposing a duty on all insurers to act promptly on an application for insurance. The Court said that the rationale underlying the extra-contractual imposition of this duty parallels the philosophy underlying the Financial Responsibility Law and related statutory and judicial rules governing automobile liability insurance and that the rule that an insurer must act promptly finds its source in the quasi-publicnature of the insurance business and the reasonable expectation of the applicant and the general public (71 Cal. 2d 659, 673) .

[b] Insurer Did Not Promptly Investigate Risk

The facts and procedural background of Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , are discussed in § 120.268[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for the insurer. The Court said that the following analysis of the insurer's duty to act promptly on an insurance application applies directly to the insurer's analogous duty to conduct with due diligence a reasonable investigation of insurability after issuance of the policy: (1) before one can hold himself or herself out as competent to transact the business of insurance, he or she must have fully complied with the statutes of the state relating to insurance; (2) by the soliciting, making, and receiving of the application, the parties had entered into some kind of a consensual relationship; and (3) under such circumstances, having in view the nature of the risk insured against, the insurer has the duty to act on the application within a reasonable time (71 Cal. 2d 659, 673) .

[c] Due Diligence Requires Investigation of Risk Within Reasonable Time

The facts and procedural background of Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , are discussed in § 120.268[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for the insurer. The parties stipulated in the trial court that on April 29, 1958, the insured had signed the application for automobile insurance prepared by defendant's agent and that on the same date defendant issued a policy with a $10,000 limit for injury to any one person. The insured paid the premiums on the policy in April 1958, October 1958, and April 1959. On November 28, 1959, the insured, while driving a car, struck plaintiff, a pedestrian. On December 4, 1959, plaintiff's attorneys notified defendant of plaintiff's claim. On December 8, 1959, defendant sent a reply letter to plaintiff's attorneys. On April 22, 1960, defendant rescinded the policy and returned all premiums paid. On July 26, 1960, plaintiff sued the insured who forwarded a copy of the summons and complaint to defendant. On August 2, 1960, defendant advised the insured that it would not defend the action. On November 3, 1960, judgment against defendant's insured was entered for plaintiff.

The parties further stipulated that plaintiff neither consented to nor concurred in any rescission or attempted rescission between defendant and its insured and agreed that five months after the original policy had been issued, defendant paid to, or on behalf of, the insured a claim arising out of the comprehensive coverage provisions of the policy. Defendant did not commence an investigation of its insured's insurability until more thantwo months after the accident and almost two years after the policy was issued. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, the Supreme Court, although it accepted the trial court's finding of misrepresentation based on conflicting evidence, held that an automobile liability insurer must undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of the policy (71 Cal. 2d 659, 663) .

The court of appeal has held that the duty under Barrera to investigate insurability is limited to automobile liability insurers who deny coverage for reasons arising out of their own negligence. The duty arises from the automobile Financial Responsibility Law, and therefore does not extend to circumstances not governed by that legislation. For example, Barrera does not compel the imposition of a duty on an aircraft insurer to investigate the qualifications of a pilot specifically named in a pilot-clause endorsement of a policy covering the airplane, because the legislation governing aircraft insurance does not embody all of the public policy considerations encompassed by the automobile legislation [American Continental Ins. Co. v. C & Z Timber Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1278, 241 Cal. Rptr. 466] .

The factual background of Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785 is discussed in § 120.250[3][d]. In affirming the orders denying the motions of the insureds for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but reversing the judgment, the court of appeal, quoting from Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 663, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , said that an automobile liability insurer must undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of the policy (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619) .

[d] Effect of Failure to Make Reasonable Investigation of Risk

The facts and procedural background of Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , are discussed in § 120.268[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for the insurer. The Court said that the insurer's duty to undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of the policy inures to the benefit of third persons injured by the insured, that an injured party who has obtained an unsatisfied judgment against the insured may properly proceed against the insurer, and that the insurer cannot then successfully defend on the ground of its own failure to reasonably investigate the application. The Court said that on retrial plaintiff, on showing that defendant did not reasonably investigatethe insured's insurability within a reasonable time, may recover from defendant, within the policy limits, the amount of the judgment obtained against the insured (71 Cal. 2d 659, 663) .

The factual background of Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785 is discussed in § 120.250[3][d]. In affirming the orders denying the motions of the insureds for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but reversing the judgment, the court of appeal, quoting from Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 663, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , said that the duty to undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time from the acceptance of the application and the issuance of the policy directly inures to the benefit of third persons injured by the insured, that such an injured party, who has obtained an unsatisfied judgment against the insured, may properly proceed against the insurer, and that the insurer cannot then successfully defend on the ground of its own failure reasonably to investigate the application (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 619-620) .

[e] Estoppel to Plead Rescission Where Rights of Third Party Have Intervened

The facts and procedural background of Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , are discussed in § 120.268[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for the insurer. The Supreme Court explained that the requirement that the carrier act promptly to determine insurability after issuance of an automobile liability insurance policy inures primarily to the benefit of those members of the public who suffer injury from negligent motorists and seek recovery against the responsible tortfeasors (71 Cal. 2d 659, 674) , that the duty arises from the public policy that protects the innocent victim of the careless use of automobiles from an inability to sue a financially responsible defendant, and that this duty, which the insurer incurs with the issuance of an automobile liability policy, therefore runs directly to the class of potential victims of the insured (71 Cal. 2d 659, 674-675) . Consequently, said the Court, when the insurer breaches that duty, it may not defeat recovery by the injured person, who has recovered a judgment against the insured, by relying on an untimely attempt to rescind (71 Cal. 2d 659, 675) . The Court said that the real beneficiary of the insurer's duty cannot lose his or her remedy merely because the party whose relationship with the defendant gave rise to the duty (i.e., the insured) would be barred from recovery (71 Cal. 2d 659, 677) .

The Court said that if the insurer does undertake a reasonable investigation of insurability, it retains the statutory right granted in Ins. Code § 650 to declare the rescission of the policy because of a material misrepresentation of the insured, but that when the insurer fails to conduct such areasonable investigation it cannot assert such a right of rescission against the third-party judgment creditor of its insured; nor can it complain of the denial of the statutory right when its conduct is culpable and directly contributes to the presence on the highway of a financially irresponsible motorist (71 Cal. 2d 659, 678) .

The Court further rejected the insurer's argument that the insured's negligence in the operation of the vehicle was a superseding cause insulating the insurer from liability for its own negligence in failing to investigate (71 Cal. 2d 659, 679) and explained that, although the insurer that fails to make such an investigation loses its right to rescind as to the injured person, it does not necessarily forfeit all remedies against the insured. For example, the insurer may still prosecute a cause of action against the insured for damages for wrongful misrepresentation, after satisfying the injured person's claim. Furthermore, in an action brought by the insured after he or she has satisfied the judgment against him or her in favor of the injured person, the insurer may defend on the ground of misrepresentations in the application (71 Cal. 2d 659, 681) .

[f] Reasonableness of Investigation as Question of Fact

The facts and procedural background of Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , are discussed in § 120.268[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment for the insurer. The Supreme Court said that whether or not an automobile liability insurer has breached its duty to the public to make a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable time after issuance of the policy ordinarily constitutes a question for the trier of fact (71 Cal. 2d 659, 681). The Court added that on remand, the trial court should determine whether or not the insurer conducted such a reasonable investigation, that if the trial court found that the insurer acted reasonably in light of its duty to undertake a reasonable investigation of insurability, it might allow the insurer once again to assert the invalidity of its contract of insurance with its insured as a defense to plaintiff's action, and that if the trial court concluded that the insurer breached its duty, the defense of the rescission ab initio would no longer be available to the insurer (71 Cal. 2d 659, 682).

The Court said that factors to be taken into account by the trial court in assessing the reasonableness of the insurer's course of conduct in failing to investigate the insured's driving record include the cost of obtaining the information from the department of Motor Vehicles, the availability of this information from the department or elsewhere (e.g., the insured claimed that his license suspensions appeared on the back of his driver's license), and the general administrative burden of making such an investigation, and that these factors must be weighed against the importance ofprotecting innocent members of the public against the consequences of automobile owners driving with voidable liability policies (71 Cal. 2d 659, 682) .

The factual background of Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785 , is discussed in § 120.250[3][d]. In affirming the orders denying the motions of the insureds for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but reversing the judgment, the court of appeal, quoting from Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 682, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , said that whether or not the automobile liability insurer has breached its duty to the public to make a reasonable investigation with in a reasonable time after the issuance of the policy ordinarily constitutes a question for the trier of fact, and repeated the factors listed in Barrera to be considered in determining the reasonableness of the insurer's actions (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 620) .

[g] Rule Requiring Investigation Applies to Adding Vehicles to Existing Policy

In United States Auto. Ass'n v. Pegos (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 392, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 866 , the insured requested the addition of two vehicles to her existing automobile policy. At the time, one of these vehicles had a commercial license plate. The insurer claimed that the insured answered the question of whether she would carry passengers for profit in the negative, but the insured asserted that she was not asked that question. Although the insured operated both vehicles as taxicabs, the insurer would not have insured either vehicle if it had been aware of the insured's intention to do so. Following accidents involving both added vehicles, the insurer sued the insured and an injured third party for declaratory relief, alleging that the insured's misrepresentations about the intended use of the vehicles constituted grounds for rescission of the insurance policy ab initio. The insurer and the third party filed cross-motions for summary judgment. The third party opposed the insurer's motion on the grounds that triable issues of fact remained as to the investigation conducted by the insurer into the insurability of the cars, arguing that the insurer's failure to further investigate the insured's misrepresentations barred the rescission cause of action as a matter of law. The trial court granted the insurer's motion and denied the third party's motion. The third party appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the rule requiring the insurer to conduct a reasonable investigation of the risk applies to the addition of a vehicle to an existing policy. Unless an insurer has conducted a reasonable investigation as to the insurability of its insured, it may not rescind an automobile insurance policy based on the material misrepresentations of its insured after the insured injures a third party. Under Barrera, an automobile liability insurer that wishes to preserve its right to rescind a policy of insurance based on the insured's misrepresentation must undertake a reasonable investigation of the insured's insurability within a reasonable period of time after accepting the application and issuing the policy. This duty directly inures to the benefit of third persons injured by the insured. An injured party who has obtained an unsatisfied judgment against the insured may properly proceed against the insurer, and the insurer cannot then successfully defend on the ground of its own failure reasonably to investigate the application. This obligation to investigate derives principally from the public policy underlying California's Financial Responsibility Law and the quasi-public nature of the insurance business. The insurer's failure reasonably to investigate the insurability of the insured within a reasonable time after issuance of the policy results in the loss of the insurer's right to rescind, as opposed to its right to cancel, the policy. The request to add a new vehicle to an existing policy raises the same concerns that led the Barrera court to impose the duty to investigate in the first place. This type of application for insurance is similar to the addition of a new driver to a policy. Similarly, a new car may have special features that render it uninsurable by a particular insurance company--for example, the engine may be too big or the vehicle may not be "street-legal." Furthermore, as in this case, the vehicle may be used for unacceptable purposes, such as a taxicab or for racing. Requiring a prompt and reasonable investigation furthers the critical public policy goal of California's Financial Responsibility Law of providing monetary compensation to members of the driving public who are injured by their fellow drivers. Whether the insurer conducted a reasonable investigation for this purpose is a question of fact, and therefore summary judgment was improper (107 Cal. App. 4th 392, 394-401) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplicationsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverInvestigationsInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.269

§ 120.269 Knowledge of Independent Contractor Hired by Insurer to Conduct Investigation Is Imputed to Insurer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE KNOWLEDGE OF THE INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR HIRED BY INSURER TO CONDUCT AN INVESTIGATION IS IMPUTED TO INSURER.

Knowledge of Independent Contractor Hired by Insurer to Conduct Investigation as Imputed to Insurer. The duty to investigate insurability inures directly to members of the public and isnondelegable; an insurer that employs an independent contractor as its agent to carry out the investigation is chargeable with the knowledge imparted to its agent in the course of that investigation (Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 621-622, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because knowledge of the independent contractor hired by insurer to conduct an investigation isimputed to insurer. Thus, the insurer learned the true facts and subsequently failed to rescind the policy until after the accident, although it had ample opportunity to do so.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's

provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.250 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insurer learned the true facts through its independent contract, and subsequently failed to rescind the policy until after the accident, although it had ample opportunity to do so.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.260 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge of Independent Contractor Hired by Insurer to Conduct Investigation Is Imputed to Insurer

The factual background of Fireman's Fund Am. Ins. Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 145 Cal. Rptr. 785 , is discussed in § 120.250[3][d]. In affirming the orders denying the motions of the insureds for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but reversing the judgment, the court of appeal held that the insurer's duty to investigate insurability inures directly to the members of the public and is a nondelegable one and that the trial court committed reversible error in refusing to so instruct the jury. The court further held that defendant insurer, having employed the retail credit company as its agent to make the investigation, was charged with knowledge of any information imparted to the investigator and that the insurer could not rely solely on the insured's answers in the application when the insurer had conducted an independent investigation which revealed the facts (80 Cal. App. 3d 610, 621-622) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral Overview

154 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.270-120.279

[Reserved]

§§ 120.270[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.280

§ 120.280 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Breach of Material Express Warranty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER RESCINDED THE INSURANCE CONTRACT PRIOR TO COMMENCEMENT OF THIS ACTION ON THE GROUND OF INSURED'S BREACH OF A MATERIAL EXPRESS WARRANTY.

A. Right to Rescind. The violation of a material warranty or other material provision of a policy, on the part of either party, entitles the other to rescind (Ins. Code § 447).

B. Express Warranty Defined. A statement in a policy of a matter relating to the person or thing insured, or to the risk, as a fact, is an express warranty (Ins. Code § 441).

[Optional] C. Breach of Express Warranty by Insured. The breach of an express warranty that materially affects the risk entitles the insurer to rescind the insurance contract without liability (Purcell v. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 230, 231-232, 64 P.2d 1114 ; see McKenzie v. Scottish Union & Nat'l Ins Co. (1896) 112 Cal. 548, 555, 44 P. 922).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the policy was rescinded on ground of breach of material express warranty.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

This form may also be combined with points and authorities set forth in § 120.250, relating to rescission generally. This form should also be combined with points and authorities in that form when:

- The policy involved is a liability policy and the rescission followed the filing of an action by a liability claimant against the insured, but before any judgment was entered in that action;
- There is more than one insured covered by the policy, including additional insureds; and
- The policy in question is an assigned risk motor vehicle liability policy.

Paragraph E should be included if the warranty breached was a promissory warranty, and Paragraph G should be included if the breach of warranty was by the insured.

Paragraph H should be included if the policy involved is a liability policy and the rescission followed the filing of an action by a liability claimant against the insured but before any judgment was entered in that action.

Paragraph I should be included when there is more than one insured covered by the policy, including additional insureds.

Paragraph J should be included if the policy in question is an assigned risk motor vehicle liability policy.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- A breach of material express warranty by the insured.
- Rescission by the insurer prior to commencement of the action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.251) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.290 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Express Warranty by Insured

In McKenzie v. Scottish Union & Nat'l Ins. Co. (1896) 112 Cal. 548 , the Supreme Court reversed the judgment for plaintiff insured, finding that the warranty was an express promissory warranty by the insured and that its breach avoided the policy (112 Cal. 548, 555). The Court pointed out that the object of such warranties is usually to bind the insured to the performance of certain acts which, but for the warranty, he or she would not be bound to perform (112 Cal. 548, 558) .

McKenzie was distinguished by the court of appeal in Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 384, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307 on the ground that the warranty McKenzie was one "directly affecting the risk" and hence material, whereas the one involved in Cawog was immaterial. The McKenzie case was also distinguished by the Supreme Court in Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 59 n.12, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055 , on the ground that the warranty in McKenzie was unambiguous, whereas the one involved in Holz was ambiguous.

Purcell v. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 230, 64 P.2d 1114 , was an action by a judgment creditor of defendant's insured to recover, up to the policy limit, the amount of the judgment previously obtained by plaintiff against the insured in an action arising out of an automobile accident. The public liability policy issued by defendant contained a warranty by its insured that the covered car was to be principally used and garaged in Bakersfield, Kern County, and the premium rate was fixed on the basis of this warranty. The accident occurred eight hours after the effective date of the policy. The evidence established that the car was principally and continuously used and garaged not in Bakersfield, but in Los Angeles, Los Angeles County, both for several months prior to theaccident and several months thereafter. The parties stipulated that the premium rate for a car principally used and garaged in Los Angeles was higher than the premium rate of such a car used and garaged in Bakersfield. Four months after the accident, defendant rescinded the policy on the ground of breach of warranty. The trial court found that the warranty had been breached from its inception and that the insurer therefore had the right to rescind the policy from the beginning without liability on its part and entered judgment for defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court pointed out that plaintiff did not contend that the warranty was not a material one (19 Cal. App. 2d 230, 231) and explained that the warranty was a promise on the part of the insured to use and garage the car principally in Kern County, that it was a promise which had been elevated to the importance of a warranty in reliance on which the premium rate was fixed, and that the evidence supported the trial court's finding that the promise was false when made, that it was made without any intention on the part of the insured to fulfill it, and that it was therefore broken in its inception (19 Cal. App. 2d 230, 232) .

In commenting on Purcell, the court of appeal in Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 384, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307 , pointed out that Purcell had been distinguished by the federal court in Republic Indem. Co. v. Martin (10th Cir. 1955) 222 F.2d 438 , on the ground that the use of the car, rather than where it was garaged, materially affected the risk in Purcell, whereas in the case before the federal court, there was no restriction on use, and the warranty as to where the car was to be garaged was immaterial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsWarranties

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.281

§ 120.281 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Willful Concealment of Matter Relating to Falsity of Warranty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER RESCINDED THE INSURANCE CONTRACT PRIOR TO COMMENCEMENT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE OF THE INSURED'S INTENTIONAL AND FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT OF MATTERS RELATING TO THE FALSITY OF A WARRANTY.

A. Right to Rescind. An intentional and fraudulent omission on the part of one insured to communicate information of matters proving or tending to prove the falsity of a warranty entitles the insurer to rescind (Ins. Code § 338).

B. Warranty False at Time Made Voids Policy. The falsity of a statement in an insurance application declared by the policy to be a warranty and by the insured to be absolutely true voids the policy ab initio (Craig v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 644, 645-646, 54 P.2d 486).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the policy was rescinded on ground of the insured's intentional and fraudulent concealment of matters relating to the falsity of a warranty.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

This form may also be combined with points and authorities set forth in § 120.250, relating to rescission generally. This form should also be combined with points and authorities in that form when:

- The policy involved is a liability policy and the rescission followed the filing of an action by a liability claimant against the insured, but before any judgment was entered in that action;
- There is more than one insured covered by the policy, including additional insureds; and
- The policy in question is an assigned risk motor vehicle liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.280[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- The insured's intentional and fraudulent concealment of matters relating to the falsity of a warranty.
- Rescission by the insurer prior to commencement of the action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.280 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Warranty False at Time Made Voids Policy

Craig v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 644, 54 P.2d 486 , was an action by an insured against her insurer to recover under a burglary insurance policy. In answering an item in the insurance application reading, "No burglary, theft, or robbery insurance applied for or carried by assured has been declined or canceled by any company within the last five years except as herein stated," plaintiff's authorized agent had declared "No exceptions." The insurance policy expressly declared that this statement and the answer were to be a part of the insurance policy and a warranty. The statement was in fact false because a policy of burglary insurance held by plaintiff and issued by another insurance company had beencanceled about three months prior to the time defendant's policy was issued. A month after issuance of the present policy, plaintiff's premises were burglarized and defendant, on learning of the false statement, canceled the policy. Plaintiff then sued for recovery under the policy.

Judgment in favor of defendant was affirmed on appeal. The court of appeal said that it is well settled that when a statement in the insurance application is declared by the policy to be a warranty and the insured declares the statement is absolutely true, the falsity of such statement voids the policy ab initio and the question of materiality of the false statement is removed from the consideration of the court. The court reasoned that one of the principal reasons for such warranty is to preclude all controversy as to the materiality or immateriality of the statement (11 Cal. App. 2d 644, 645-646) .

It should be noted, however, that unless the policy declares that a violation of specified provisions thereof shall avoid it, the breach of an immaterial provision does not avoid the policy [Ins. Code § 448; see also Ins. Code § 449; Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 382-383, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307 ; § 120.290].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Warranty False at Time Made as Voiding Policy

Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 67 P.2d 1046 , disapproved on other grounds, Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 679, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , was an action by the judgment creditors of defendant's insured to recover from defendant the amount of the judgment previously recovered by plaintiffs in their action against the insured arising out of an automobile accident. In the insurance application, the insured's agent had written "No" to the question, "Has this risk been canceled or rejected by any Company, if so why." Included in the warranties in the body of the policy as issued was the following: "No company has declined, canceled nor refused to continue automobile insurance, except as follows: No exceptions." The policy provided that the insured, by acceptance of the policy, made the warranties contained in it. The policy was issued on September 12, 1933, and the accident in which plaintiffs were involved took place on September 30, 1933.

On October 4, 1933, defendant mailed the insured a letter declaring the policy void as of its date of issue by reason of the alleged falsity of this representation and warranty, refunded the premium paid, and refused to defend the insured in the action by the plaintiffs. From a judgment for plaintiffs on a directed verdict on the ground defendant had failed to establish that any prior policies had been canceled, defendant appealed, contending that there was evidence from which the jury couldhave found prior cancellations and that the trial court improperly excluded evidence on which it relied to prove prior cancellations based on the insured's bad accident record. The Supreme Court agreed and reversed the judgment. The Court pointed out that plaintiffs' right was to bring an action against the insurer "on the policy and subject to its terms and limitations" an, hence, if the policy were void or voidable as to the insured, plaintiffs could not recover on it (8 Cal. 2d 663, 665) . The Court said that a breach of warranty broken in its inception prevents the policy from attaching to the risk (8 Cal. 2d 663, 669) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsWarranties

157 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.282-120.289

[Reserved]

§§ 120.282[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.290

§ 120.290 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Performance Became Unlawful or Impossible

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE PERFORMANCE OF THE WARRANTY BECAME _____ [UNLAWFUL or IMPOSSIBLE].

Performance Became Unlawful or Impossible. When, before the time arrives for the performance of a warranty relating to the future, performance becomes unlawful at the place of the contract, or impossible, the omission to fulfill the warranty does not avoid the policy (Ins. Code § 446).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the insurer's purported rescission of the insurance contract was not effective because the insured's performance of the warranty became unlawful or impossible.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.

- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.280.

See also Comments in § 120.250[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that performance under the insurance contract was impossible or unlawful.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.290) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Performance Became Unlawful or Impossible

Under Ins. Code § 446 , when, before the time arrives for the performance of a warranty relating to the future, performance becomes unlawful at the place of the contract, or impossible, the omission to fulfill the warranty does not avoid the policy.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsDisclosure ObligationsWarranties

159 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.291

§ 120.291 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Breach Was of an Immaterial Policy Provision

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE EXPRESS WARRANTY ALLEGEDLY BREACHED WAS AN IMMATERIAL POLICY PROVISION.

A. Breach of Immaterial Provision. Unless the policy declares that a violation of specified provisions thereof shall avoid it, the breach of an immaterial provision does not avoid the policy (Ins. Code § 448).

B. Applicability to Warranties. The rule set forth in Section 448 of the Insurance Code applies regardless of the fact that the provision in the policy may be characterized as a warranty (Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 383, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307).

C. Breach of Coinsurance Warranty as Immaterial. Unless the policy otherwise specifies, the insured's failure to maintain coinsurance as required by an express warranty in the policy is immaterial so long as the insurer is not required to pay under its policy any more than its share of a loss had the coinsurance been maintained (Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer priorto commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the express warranty allegedly breached was an immaterial policy provision.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.280.

See also Comments in § 120.250[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the express warranty allegedly breached was an immaterial policy provision.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.290 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability to Warranties

Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307 , was an action by an insurance company seeking a declaration of its obligations under a fire policy issued by it and covering a hotel owned by defendant insured. Defendant answered and cross complained for $10,000, the full value of the policy. At the time the policy was issued a similar $10,000 policy issued by another insurer was in effect. Plaintiff's policy contained the following: "It is understood and agreed that this policy being written in the amount of $10,000 is 50% of all contributing insurance. It is thereby warranted that all contributing insurance shall be maintained to the extent that this policy participation will not exceed 50%." The other policy expired and was not renewed. Thereafter, the hotel was damaged by fire, and evidence was offered setting the amount of the loss in excess of $20,000. The trial court rendered judgment exonerating plaintiff from any liability under its policy on the ground that defendant, in failing to renew the other fire policy, breached a warranty of coinsurance.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the cause for additional findings on the value of the property and the amount of the loss and directed the trial court to enter judgment for defendant in the amount dictated by those findings (30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 387). The court stated that the rule in California is that no right to avoid or rescind an existing policy of insurance arises from the violation by the insured of a provision in the policy unless (1) the provision materially affects the risk or (2) the policy specifically sets forth that the breach will avoid the policy. The court held that the rule is the same regardless of the fact that the provision may be characterized as a warranty (30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 383).

[b] Breach of Coinsurance Warranty as Immaterial

The factual and procedural background of Los Angeles Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cawog (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 106 Cal. Rptr. 307 , is discussed in § 120.291[3][a]. In reversing the judgment exonerating plaintiff insurer from liability under its policy, the court of appeal, after reviewing California and out-of-state cases involving breaches of warranties, said that it was onlyreasonable to conclude that the purpose of the coinsurance clause was to limit plaintiff's liability to 50 percent of the loss and that so long as that limit was maintained it appeared immaterial whether the other 50 percent was covered by an insurance policy or by the insured as a self-insurer (30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386) . The court added that more importantly, in view of the rule that an insurance policy must be interpreted in the light of the reasonable and normal expectations of the parties as to the extent of coverage (30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 384) , the insured could have reasonably understood that it was of no consequence whether the remaining 50 percent came from insurance coverage or from his own resources as a self-insurer (30 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCoinsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.292

§ 120.292 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because There Was No Breach When Ambiguous Warranty Is Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE MEANING OF THE WARRANTY WAS UNCERTAIN AND AMBIGUOUS, AND WHEN CONSTRUED IN FAVOR OF THE INSURED, THERE WAS NO BREACH.

Ambiguity in Express Warranty Resolved in Favor of Insured. Any doubt as to the meaning of a policy provision caused by the insurer's use of uncertain or ambiguous language will be resolved against the insurer in favor of the insured, and this rule applies to warranties (see Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 59-60, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the meaning of the warranty was uncertain and ambiguous, and when construed in favor of the insured, there was no breach.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.280.

See also Comments in § 120.250[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the specific material provision of the warranty that is ambiguous, identify the ambiguity, and point out that when construed in favor of the insured, the insured did not breach the warranty.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.290 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Warranty Resolved in Favor of Insured

The factual and procedural background of Holz Rubber Co., Inc. v. American Star Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 45, 120 Cal. Rptr. 415, 533 P.2d 1055 , is discussed in § 120.260[3][b]. The insurance policies in that case contained an identical Automatic Sprinkler Warranty providing that since the policy was being written at a reduced rate based on the protection of the premises by an automatic sprinkler system it was a condition of the policy that, so far as the sprinkler system and the water supply therefor were under the control of the insured, "due diligence shall be used by the insured to maintain them in complete working order" and that no change was to be made in the system or water supply without the written consent of the insurer or a specified fire rating bureau.

In affirming that portion of the judgment in favor of plaintiff insureds against defendant insurers, the Supreme Court said that an insurer who wishes to condition its contractual liability on the insured's conformance with certain conduct must do so in clear, unambiguous language, that if the insurer uses language which is uncertain, any reasonable doubt will be resolved against it, and that if the doubt relates to the extent or fact of coverage, whether as to the peril insured against, the amount of liability, or the person or persons protected, the language will be understood in its most inclusive sense for the benefit of the insured (14 Cal. 3d 45, 59-60) . The Court said that, since a semantically permissible construction of the policy would fairly achieve its manifest object of securing indemnity to the insured for the losses to which the insurance related, it adopted that construction and, accordingly, held that under the facts of the case the warranty required only that the insureds use due diligence in installing a sprinkler system in the new building and did not prohibit use of the new building for storage of insured stock pending installation of the system (14 Cal. 3d 45, 60) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsConstruction Against Insurers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.293

§ 120.293 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Loss Occurred Prior to Breach

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE INSURED'S LOSS UNDER THE POLICY OCCURRED BEFORE THE TIME ARRIVED FOR PERFORMANCE OF THE WARRANTY ALLEGEDLY BREACHED.

Loss Occurred Before Warranty Was to Be Performed. When a loss insured against happens before the time arrives for the performance of a warranty relating to the future, the omission to fulfill the warranty does not avoid the policy (Ins. Code § 446; see also Ins. Code § 449).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the insured's loss under the policy occurred before the time arrived for performance of the warranty allegedly breached.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.

- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.280 et seq.

See also Comments in § 120.250[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insured's loss under the policy occurred before the time arrived for performance of the warranty.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.290 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loss Occurred Before Warranty Was to Be Performed

Ins. Code § 449 also provides that a breach of warranty without fraud merely exonerates an insurer from the time that it occurs, or where the warranty is broken in its inception, prevents the policy from attaching to the risk.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.294

§ 120.294 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Express Warranty Was Not in Writing

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED RESCISSION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE EXPRESS WARRANTY ALLEGEDLY BREACHED WAS NOT IN WRITING AS REQUIRED UNDER INSURANCE CODE SECTION 443.

Requirement That Express Warranty Be Contained in Policy or Writing. Every express warranty made at or before the execution of a policy must be contained in the policy itself, or in another instrument signed by the insured and referred to in the policy as making a part of it (Ins. Code § 443).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was rescinded by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported rescission was not effective because the express warranty allegedly breached was not in writing as required under Ins. Code § 443.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary, under a life policy.

- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.260[2][c].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.280.

See also Comments in § 120.250[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the express warranty allegedly breached was not in writing as required under Ins. Code § 443.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.290 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Express Warranty Be Contained in Policy or Writing

Under Ins. Code § 443 , every express warranty made at or before the execution of a policy must be contained in the policy itself, or in anotherinstrument signed by the insured and referred to in the policy as making a part of it.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
1. Rescission for Material Misrepresentations or Concealment

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.295-120.299

[Reserved]

§§ 120.295[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
2. Policy Cancellation Prior to Liability or Loss

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.300

§ 120.300 Policy Was Canceled Before Liability Arose or Loss Occurred

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS CANCELED BY THE _____ [MUTUAL AGREEMENT OF THE PARTIES or INSURED or INSURER] PRIOR TO THE DATE THAT THE _____ [LIABILITY AROSE or LOSS OCCURRED].

A. Insurer Terminated Policy by Prescribed Notice. A policy may be terminated by expiration of the term for which it was written without renewal, or by either party on a prescribed statutory notice, or by mutual agreement (Clauson v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 440, 445, 50 Cal. Rptr. 615).

[Optional] B. Policy Was Canceled by Its Terms or Mutual Agreement. Insurance contracts can generally be canceled only pursuant to their terms or by mutual consent; cancellation may be effected by express or implied mutual agreement of the insurer and the insured independently of the existence of conditions authorizing cancellation under the provisions of the policy (Escobedo v. Estate of Snider (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1214, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722, 930 P.2d 979 ; Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 806, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was canceled by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the policy was canceled before the event otherwise covered under the policy occurred.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insurer in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions. Such an action may be brought by any of the following parties:

- By an insured, or the insured's beneficiary under a life policy.
- By a transferee under a life or disability policy.
- By a judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy.

A notice of cancellation of an automobile insurance policy is effective only if based on one or more of the following reasons, notwithstanding any other provision of law [Ins. Code § 1861.03(c)(1)]:

(1) Nonpayment of premium;

(2) Fraud or material misrepresentation affecting the policy or the insured; and

(3) A substantial increase in the hazard insured against.

Grounds for cancellation of automobile liability policies had previously been governed by Ins. Code § 661, which was superseded by Ins. Code § 1861.03(c)(1) pursuant to adoption by the voters of Proposition 103 in the November 8, 1988, general election [see Ins. Code § 660 (definitions regarding automobile liability policy), Ins. Code § 662 and Ins. Code § 662.1 (notice of cancellation), Ins. Code § 664 (proof of mailing), Ins. Code § 665 (notice of assigned risk plan), Ins. Code § 666 (statement of ground for cancellation), Ins. Code § 668.5 (policy in effect less than 60 days)].

Regarding cancellation of certain property and liability policies, Ins. Code § 676 governs grounds for cancellation of insurance policies, regarding risks located or resident in California, that insure the following contingencies [Ins. Code § 675]:

(1) Loss of or damage to real property that is used predominantly for residential purposes and consists of not more than four dwelling units.

(2) Loss of or damage to personal property in which natural persons resident in specifically described real property of the kind described in Paragraph (1), above, have an insurable interest, except personal property used in the conduct of a commercial or industrial enterprise.

(3) Legal liability of a natural person or persons for loss of, damage to, or injury to, persons or property, but not including policies primarily insuring risks arising from the conduct of a commercial or industrial enterprise [see Ins. Code §§ 675.5, 676.2 (commercial insurance policies)].

Ins. Code § 675 does not apply to automobile insurance, workers' compensation insurance (see Ins. Code § 676.8 (special cancellation requirements governing workers' compensation insurance), or policies exempt under Ins. Code § 679.6 (regarding certain risks eligible for placement with nonadmitted insurers) [Ins. Code § 675].

After a policy specified in Ins. Code § 675 has been in effect for 60 days or, if the policy is a renewal, effective immediately, no notice of cancellationis effective unless it is based on the occurrence, after the effective date of the policy, of one or more of the following [Ins. Code § 676; see Ins. Code § 677 (notice)]:

- Nonpayment of premium, including nonpayment of any additional premiums, calculated in accordance with the current rating manual of the insurer, justified by a physical change in the insured property or a change in its occupancy or use.

- Conviction of the named insured of a crime having as one of its necessary elements an act increasing any hazard insured against.

- Discovery of fraud or material misrepresentation by either the insured or his or her representative in obtaining the insurance; or the named insured or his or her representative in pursuing a claim under the policy.

- Discovery of grossly negligent acts or omissions by the insured or his or her representative substantially increasing any of the hazards insured against.

- Physical changes in the insured property that result in the property becoming uninsurable.

Regarding cancellation of fire insurance policies, pursuant to the standard form of fire insurance policy set forth in Ins. Code § 2071, an insured may cancel the policy at any time on request. On demand and surrender of the policy by the insured, the insurer must refund the excess of paid premium above the customary short rates for the expired time. The insurer may cancel the policy at any time by giving to the insured a 20 days' written notice of cancellation with or without tender of the excess of paid premium above the pro rata premium for the expired time. If not tendered, the excess must be refunded on demand. Notice of the cancellation must state that the excess premium, if not tendered, will be refunded on demand. With respect to policies originated or renewed after December 31, 2003, if the reason for cancellation is nonpayment of premium, the insurer may cancel the policy by giving to the insured a ten-days' written notice of cancellation [Ins. Code § 2071].

Additional statutes govern cancellation of county mutual fire insurers (see Ins. Code § 5093), county mutual fire reinsurers (see Ins. Code §§ 9010-9012), and fraternal fire insurers (see Ins. Code § 9093).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if a statute governs cancellation of the policy, counsel should set forth the provisions of the statute and show that the requirements were met to effect cancellation. If there was an agreement between the parties to cancel the policy, or the policy was canceled pursuant to policy terms, counsel should set forth facts in support of the agreement or in compliance with policy terms and show that the cancellation was effected before the event that would otherwise have incurred the insurer's liability under the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 120.330 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Terminated Policy by Prescribed Notice

Clauson v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 440, 50 Cal. Rptr. 615 , was an action against an insurer under an oral binder for fire insurance. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant insurer appealed, contending inter alia that the insurance broker in securing the oral binder had misrepresented facts by stating that the prior policy, which had been issued by another company, was expiring, whereas it had been canceled by mutual agreement of the parties. In rejecting this contention on the ground that the misrepresentation was immaterial, the court of appeal said that there is a distinction in the parlance of the insurance field between expiration of an insurance policy and its cancellation or other termination, that expiration means the policy has reached the end of the term for which it was written, and that a policy may also be terminated by either party on a prescribed statutory notice or by mutual agreement (241 Cal. App. 2d 440, 445) .

[b] Policy Was Canceled by Its Terms or Mutual Agreement

In Escobedo v. Estate of Snider (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1214, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722, 930 P.2d 979 , a wrongful death action arising out of an airplane crash, against the pilot's former aviation insurer, the trial court found no coverage because the policy had expired before the accident for nonpayment of premium, and entered judgment for defendant. The Court of Appeal reversed. However, the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court held that the trial court properly found no coverage because the policy had been canceled before the accident for nonpayment of premium (14 Cal. 4th 1214, 1222-1223) .

The Supreme Court observed that a provision of the California Uniform Aircraft Financial Responsibility Act (CUAFRA) (Pub. Util. Code §§ 24230-24410), stating that certain aircraft liability policies may not be canceled without 30 days' prior notice to the State Department of Transportation (Pub. Util. Code § 24361) is ambiguous and that neither the language of Pub. Util. Code § 24361 nor the purpose it serves within CUAFRA, is at all plain (14 Cal. 4th 1214, 1224) . Accordingly, it should be interpreted in a manner that will result in extending fewer policies' coverage beyond the time of their facial cancellation and will avoid imposing on aviators, insurers, and the department a clerical burden of dubious value under CUAFRA. Thus Pub. Util. Code, § 24361 applies only to cancellation of insurance policies that have, before cancellation, been proffered to the department to show financial responsibility after an accident under Pub. Util. Code § 24243(f) or Pub. Util. Code, § 24327(d), (e), or (f).

Plaintiff presented no evidence that the policy issued by defendant to the pilot was ever filed with, or certified to, the department. As the party with the burden of proving coverage, plaintiff also had the burden of showing any fact necessary to such a finding, including that the policy at issue fell within the class of policies subject to Pub. Util. Code § 24361 but she failed to meet that burden (14 Cal. 4th 1214, 1222-1226) .

Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710 , was a declaratory-relief action involving two insurers and several insured parties, concerning the respective obligations of the insurers regarding a March 23, 1966, fire in a third-party's residence and an ensuing lawsuit against the insureds. The insureds were insured under a comprehensive liability policy for the term of March 1, 1965, to March 1, 1966. During that period, the insureds' insurance broker discussed with another insurer the possibility of obtaining a comprehensive policy when the first policy expired. In late February, 1966, the broker sought bids from both insurers. On February 28, 1966, the insureds' current insurer mailed a written binder of insurance (a temporary contract of insurance), effective March 1, 1966, through March 30, 1966.

The binder, in effect, provided insurance according to the terms, conditions, limits, and provisions of the expiring policy, except with regard to cancellation. In relevant part, the binder stated: "A pro rata premium charge will be made for the coverage afforded by this Binder unless policies are issued and accepted by the Insured. The issuance of a Policy shall cancel this Binder." A day or two before March 1, 1966, an agent of the second insurer talked to the insureds' broker by telephone. The agent allegedly knew nothing of the first binder and issued an oral binder to the insureds with the same terms of coverage as their previous policy. He later testified that he understood that the oral binder provided coverage for the insureds effective March 1, 1966, and that a policy for the entire year would subsequently be issued, with the premium price left for later negotiation. The policy was issued on April 14, 1966, with an effective date of March 1, 1966. The insureds paid a premium for the period beginning March 1. The trial court held that the first insurer had no obligation to defend or indemnify the insureds with respect to the third-party claims, and that it was entitled to judgment in its favor both as defendant in the action brought against it by the insureds and as cross-complainant against the second insurer. It therefore held that the second insurer was solely liable for coverage of claims arising from the fire. The insureds and the second insurer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the first insurer's policy had been effectively canceled (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 806-808) . The court noted that under the terms of the first insurer's binder, it could be canceled by the issuance of a policy or written notice to the insured. Insurance contracts can generally be canceled only pursuant to their terms or by mutual consent. Cancellation may beeffected by express or implied mutual agreement of the insurer and the insured independently of the existence of conditions authorizing cancellation under the provisions of the policy. Although there may be a conflict whether substitution has occurred, this conflict is addressed to the trier of fact (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 806) .

The court rejected the second insurer's contention that liability should be apportioned pro rata between the two insurers. Although there is authority supporting the contention that if a rescission of a binder, given retroactive effect, prejudices another insurer by increasing its proportionate share of the total coverage, the liability should be apportioned, the court refused to apply that rule to the instant case. In the case before it, the court noted that the broker intended to protect the insureds and did not intend to purchase or pay for double coverage, permanent or temporary. The second policy was delivered in April 1966, with full knowledge of the possible claims resulting from the fire on March 23. Essentially, the issue is whether an insured must keep coverage it does not want or need merely to afford contribution rights to an insurer that accepted a full premium for full coverage without any expectation of, nor right to expect, contribution from anyone. The court answered in the negative (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 807) . The evidence supported the inference that the broker at no time intended to renew with the first insurer, but procured the first 30-day binder merely to assure continuity in coverage in the event that the second insurer's bid was not competitive. The court noted that this interpretation of the facts finds support in the broker's action in ordering the first insurer's binder "canceled flat" after the bid of the second insurer was analyzed and found to be satisfactory (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 808) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Terminated Policy by Prescribed Notice

In Gorham Co., Inc. v. First Fin. Ins. Co. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 , a subcontractor financed the purchase of a commercial lines policy that named the general contractor of a project for a city as an additional insured. When the insured defaulted, the lender gave the insured the required advance notice of cancellation, and notified the insurer under Ins. Code § 673(d) that it was exercising the insured's right to cancel the policy, which had been assigned to the lender as part of the financing agreement. The general contractor received no notice of cancellation. Litigation ensued involving the city, the general contractor, and the subcontractor. The contractor as an additional insured tendered defense to the subcontractor's insurer, among others. In a declaratory relief action brought by the subcontractor's insurer, the general contractor's cross-complaint sought declaratory relief and damages for breach of contract, bad faith, and related causes of action, based on the insurer's failure to defend. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, holding that the insurer properly exercised its right to cancel the policy under Ins. Code § 673(d), which governs cancellation of an insurance policy by a lender for nonpayment of premium, and that it had no duty to notify the additional insured (139 Cal. App. 4th 1532, 1541-1544) .

In In re First Capital Life Ins. Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1283, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 816 , the court denied a claim for life insurance benefits by a company that had taken out a policy insuring its president. On November 26, 1991, the policy entered a late period for nonpayment of the required premium. The insurer sent an initial late notice to the company in November, 1991 and a second late notice in December, 1991, stating that the policy would lapse on January 26, 1992, if the premium was not paid. On January 28, 1992, the insurer sent a notice informing the company that the policy had lapsed. However, in July 1992, a late notice on the policy was mistakenly sent to the company, and the company attempted to tender the premium. By this time, the company was aware that its president has been diagnosed with lung cancer. The court held that given the knowledge the insured possessed, it could not reasonably have believed the insurer intended an offer, and at no time did the insured rely on coverage after the lapse; in fact, it had purchased a replacement policy. The court further held that the insurer's mistaken notice to its insured of an offer to reinstate the policy was not a waiver of its right to declare a forfeiture of the policy (34 Cal. App. 4th 1283, 1291-1292) .

In Holland v. Sterling Cas. Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1063-1064, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 809 , the insurer issued an automobile insurance policy to the insured. Premiums on the policy were financed by a lender. The lender subsequently chose to exercise its statutory right under Ins. Code § 673 to cancel the policy. The bank claimed it served both the insurer and the insured with notice of its intent to exercise its cancellation rights, but the insured allegedly never received the notice. The insurer did receive notice, and canceled the policy. The insurer did not independently notify the insured of the cancellation. Five days after the cancellation, a person covered under the policy drove the car and injured a pedestrian. The pedestrian sued the insured, and the carrier declined coverage on the ground that the policy had been canceled prior to the accident. The insured then cross-complained against the insurer and the bank for bad faith and breach of contract. The trial court held that the policy had been canceled and granted the insurer judgment on the pleadings, and the insureds appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that Ins. Code § 673 requires that a lender, to exercise its right of cancellation, must mail both the insurer and the insured a five-day precancellation notice, followed by a subsequent confirmation of cancellation within five days following the effective date of cancellation. The burden of sending these notices is on the lender rather than the insurer, and the insurer cannot be held liable for failing to independently notify the insured of the cancellation when the lender failed to do so or the insured failed to receive the lender's notice (25 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1063-1064) .

In Coe v. Farmers New World Life Ins. Co. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 600, 257 Cal. Rptr. 411 , the widow of the insured under a life-insurance policy brought an action against the insurer, stating a cause of action, inter alia, for breach of contract. The insured had executed a request to cancel the policy on March 1, 1984; he died on April 8, 1984. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the policy had been canceled before the insurer's death; it further held that the "grace period" under the policy, which continued the policy in force for 31 days after nonpayment of premiums, had no effect with respect to the cancellation, and that no statutory provision effected a grace period for that purpose (209 Cal. App. 3d 600, 607) .

In Hoffman v. Citadel Gen. Assurance, Ltd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1356, 240 Cal. Rptr. 253 , the issue of policy cancellation arose in the context of limitations of actions, in an action by an insured against the insurer in which the trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the requirementthat a premium lender notify the insurer of cancellation under Ins. Code § 673 is for the benefit of the insurer, not the insured, and the insured cannot claim ineffective cancellation because the insurer failed to receive notice under that provision (holding therefore that the limitations period, beginning from the time of cancellation, had run before commencement of the action) (194 Cal. App. 3d 1356, 1362-1363) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
2. Policy Cancellation Prior to Liability or Loss

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.301-120.309

[Reserved]

§§ 120.301[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
2. Policy Cancellation Prior to Liability or Loss

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.310

§ 120.310 Purported Cancellation Was Not Effective Because Policy Was Not Canceled Before Loss Occurred

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S PURPORTED CANCELLATION OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT WAS NOT EFFECTIVE BECAUSE THE POLICY WAS NOT CANCELED BEFORE THE LOSS OCCURRED.

Triable Issue Exists Regarding Whether Policy Was Canceled. In an action brought by an insured against the insurer to recover benefits under an insurance policy, summary judgment for the insurer is improper when a triable issue of fact remains regarding whether the policy was effectively canceled according to law and the cancellation provisions of the policy (Preis v. American Indem. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 758-761, 269 Cal. Rptr. 617).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was canceled by the insurer prior to commencement of the action. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported cancellation was not effective because the policy was not canceled before the loss occurred.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.300.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in a case in which an insured isopposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment, counsel should state facts showing that the evidence introduced by defendant is insufficient to establish that defendant complied with procedures required by law and by the cancellation provisions of the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. In the case of the example given above, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Summary Judgment for Insurer Improper When Triable Issue Exists Regarding Whether Policy Was Canceled

In Preis v. American Indem. Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 269 Cal. Rptr. 617 , an insured under a policy covering hazard risks to property brought an action against the insurer for damages caused by the insurer's denial of the insured's claim for fire damage benefits under the policy. When plaintiff purchased the apartment building, it was covered by a policy issued by defendant to the former owners of the property. Before the transfer of ownership, plaintiff and his lender contacted the insurance broker that produced the policy, in order to obtain proof of hazard insurance, a requirement for the loan. The broker modified the policy with regard to the name of plaintiff as the insured, and the equitable interest of the lender in the property, and sent the modified policy to plaintiff and his lender, which then loaned plaintiff the money to purchase the property. The property was damaged by fire before the expiration of the policy period established under the original policy issued to the former owners. Defendant denied coverage, asserting that the policy was canceled some four months before the loss.

The policy contained a cancellation provision that stated in relevant part: "This policy may be canceled by the Company by mailing to the named insured at the mailing address shown in the declarations, written notice stating when not less than ten days thereafter such cancellation shall be effective. The mailing of notice as aforesaid shall be sufficient proof of notice. Notice of cancellation addressed to the named insured and mailed to the mailing address shown in the Declarations shall be sufficient notice to effect cancellation of this policy." At trial, defendants successfully moved for summary judgment on the grounds that the evidence showed that (1) the policy was canceled in accordance with its provisions before the fire, and (2) the broker had no authority to issue or renew a policy on the property. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that triable issues of fact existed regarding whether defendant had canceled the policy (and whether defendant negligently caused plaintiff to believe that the broker possessed the authority to modify the policy). The court noted that under the general rule, parties to an insurance policy are free, subject to legislative restriction, to arrange the occasions, method, and means of cancellation by private agreement. In the instant case, the parties agreed the insurer could cancel the policy by mailing written notice to the named insureds at the mailing address shown in the policy declaration. Therefore, under the terms of the policy, defendant was required to mail a notice of cancellation to the namedinsureds, that is, the former property owners, to effectuate the cancellation.

According to Ins. Code § 38, the affidavit of the person who mails the notice, stating the facts of the mailing, is prima facie evidence that the notice was mailed. The court noted that defendant did not submit an affidavit from anyone claiming to have mailed a cancellation notice to the named insureds. Instead, defendant presented the following evidence: a copy of a notice canceling the policy; a postal receipt showing that on a particular date some five months before the fire, an envelope was mailed by defendant's agent to the named insureds (the former property owners); and a declaration by the agent's vice-president describing the customary procedure for mailing notices of cancellation (220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 758). The court stated that the postal receipt established at most that on that given date, an envelope was mailed to the named insureds at a certain address; however, defendants presented no evidence regarding the contents of the envelope, which could in fact have been empty. Therefore, the postal receipt was not evidence that a notice of cancellation was mailed to the named insureds as required under the terms of the policy (220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 759).

The court noted that proof of mailing the cancellation notice would not have been difficult: defendants need only have submitted a declaration from a competent witness describing the following steps: (1) the witness placed a notice of cancellation of the subject policy in an envelope; (2) the envelope was addressed to the named insureds at the declared address; (3) the envelope was affixed with the proper postage; and (4) the envelope was placed in the United States mail at a certain location. However, no such declaration appeared in the record (220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 759-760) . Further, defendant's evidence of customary mailing procedures was contradicted by plaintiff's declaration that the named insureds did not receive the notice; and a declaration by the agent's vice-president stated that he mailed the notice to plaintiff, which contradicts defendant's claim that the notice was mailed to the named insureds, that is, the former owners. Consequently, the court held that triable issues of fact existed regarding whether the cancellation notice was mailed and, if it was, whether it was mailed to the named insureds as required by the terms of the policy (220 Cal. App. 3d 752, 760-761) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
2. Policy Cancellation Prior to Liability or Loss

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.311-120.319

[Reserved]

§§ 120.311[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
3. Insured's Defective Attempt to Renew

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.320

§ 120.320 Motor Vehicle Policy Expired at End of Policy Term Because of Insured's Defective Attempt to Accept Renewal Offer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE CONTRACT EXPIRED BY ITS OWN TERMS WITHOUT RENEWAL PRIOR TO THE DATE THAT THE _____ [LIABILITY AROSE or LOSS OCCURRED].

A. Insurance Contract Specifies Policy Term. An insurance contract is required to specify the period during which the insurance is to continue (Ins. Code § 381(e)).

B. Policy Expired at End of Term. A motor vehicle policy, as defined in Insurance Code Section 660(a)-(d), expires when coverage is terminated by reason of the policy's having reached the end of the term for which it was issued or the end of the period for which a premium has been paid (Ins. Code § 660(i)).

C. There Was No "Renewal" as Defined. "Renewal" or "to renew" means to continue coverage with either the insurer that issued the policy or an affiliated insurer, as defined in Section 1215 of the Insurance Code, for an additional period on expiration of the current period of a policy (Ins. Code § 660(e)).

[Optional] D. Insurer Offered to Renew Policy or Gave Nonrenewal Notice. At least 30 days prior to policy expiration, a motor vehicle insurer must deliver or mail to the named insured at the address shown in the policy either a written or verbal offer of renewal of the policy, as defined in Section 660(a)-(d) of the Insurance Code, contingent on payment of premium as stated in the offer, or a notice of nonrenewal of the policy (Ins. Code § 663; see also Ins. Code §§ 660(f) (defining nonpayment of premium), 660(h) (defining nonrenewal).

[Optional] E. Insured Did Not Accept Renewal Offer. To effect the renewal of an insurance policy, there must be both an offer by the insurer to renew and an acceptance by the insured (Fujimoto v. Western Pioneer Ins. Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 313, 150 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] F. Attempted Acceptance Did Not Comply With Terms of Offer. The insured's attempted acceptance of the insurer's renewal offer that fails to comply with the terms of the offer constitutes no acceptance and results in the expiration of the policy on its termination date (Fujimoto v. Western Pioneer Ins. Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 313, 150 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention in an action by an insured under a motor vehicle policy, as defined in Ins. Code § 660(a)-(d), or by the judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy, against the insurer for damages for breach of the insurance contract (or to enforce the contract provisions), that the insurance contract that is the subject of the lawsuit expired by its own terms prior to the date on which the insured's liability arose or loss occurred.

In addition, if applicable, this form may be used in support of the contention that the insured's attempted renewal of the policy was defective and did not result in its continuation beyond the expiration date.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Expired at End of Term

Ins. Code § 660(i) provides that "expiration," as used in Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5, means termination of coverage by reason of the policy having reached the end of the term for which it was issued or the end of the period for which a premium has been paid.

Ins. Code § 660 provides that "policy," as used in Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5, means an automobile liability, automobile physical damage, or automobile collision policy, or any combination thereof, delivered or issued for delivery in this state, insuring a single individual or individuals residing in the same household, as named insured, and under which the insured vehicles therein designated are of the following types only [Ins. Code § 660(a)]:

(1) A motor vehicle of the private passenger or station wagon type that is not used as a public or livery conveyance for passengers, nor rented to others;

(2) Any other four-wheel motor vehicle with a load capacity of 1,500 pounds or less; provided, however, that Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5 do not apply to any policy issued under an automobile assigned risk plan, or to any policy insuring more than four automobiles, or to anypolicy covering garage, automobile sales agency, repair shop, service station, or public parking place operation hazards; or

(3) A motorcycle.

The section further defines automobile liability coverage [Ins. Code § 660(b)], automobile physical damage coverage [Ins. Code § 660], and automobile collision coverage [Ins. Code § 660(d)].

[b] There Was No "Renewal" as Defined

Ins. Code § 660(e) further provides that if coverage is continued with an affiliated insurer, it shall be the same or broader coverage as provided by the present insurer, and the insured shall be notified in writing at least 20 days prior to expiration of the current policy period of the all of the following: (1) that the insurer has determined that it will not offer renewal of the policy with the present insurer, (2) that it is offering replacement in an affiliated insurer, and (3) that the insured may obtain in writing the reasons for the change in insurers if he or she requests in writing not later than one month following the expiration of the policy period or term of six months.

Ins. Code § 660(e) also provides that any policy (as defined in Ins. Code § 660(a)-(d), discussed in § 120.320[3][a]) with a policy period or term of six months or less, whether or not made continuous for successive terms on the payment of additional premiums, shall for the purpose of Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5 be considered as if written for a policy period or term of six months, and that any policy written for a term longer than one year, or any policy with no fixed expiration date, shall for the purpose of Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5 be considered as if written for successive policy periods or terms of one year.

[c] Insurer Offered to Renew Policy or Gave Nonrenewal Notice

At least 20 days prior to policy expiration, an insurer must deliver or mail to the named insured at the address shown in the policy either a written or verbal offer of renewal of the policy (as defined in Ins. Code § 660(a)-(d), discussed in § 120.320[3][a]), contingent on payment of premium as stated in the offer, or a notice of nonrenewal of the policy. The notice must contain or be accompanied by a statement that on written request by the named insured, made not later than one month following the expiration of the policy period, or delivered to the insurer, the insurer will notify the insured in writing, within 30 days of the insured's request, the reason or reasons for the nonrenewal. In the event that an insurer fails to give the named insured either an offer of renewal or notice of nonrenewal as required, the existing policy, with no change in its terms and conditions, must remain in effect for 20 days from the date that either the offer to renew or the noticeof nonrenewal is delivered or mailed to the named insured. The insurer must provide a notice to that effect to the named insured with the policy or the notice of renewal or nonrenewal.

Notwithstanding the failure of an insurer to comply with Ins. Code § 663, the policy terminates on the effective date of any other replacement or succeeding automobile insurance policy procured by the insured, or the insured's agent or broker, with respect to any automobile designated in both policies. The insurer is not required to notify the named insured, or any other insured, of nonrenewal of the policy if the insurer has mailed or delivered a notice of expiration or cancellation, on or before the 20th day preceding expiration of the policy period [Ins. Code § 663].

Ins. Code § 660(f) defines "nonpayment of premium" as used in Ins. Code §§ 660-669.5 as meaning failure of the named insured to discharge when due any of his or her obligations in connection with the payment of premiums on a policy (as defined in Ins. Code § 660(a)-(d), (discussed in § 120.320[3][a]), or any installment of such premium, whether the premium is payable directly to the insurer or its agent or indirectly under any premium finance plan [see Ins. Code § 673] or extension of credit.

Ins. Code § 660(h) defines "nonrenewal" as a notice by the insurer to the named insured that the insurer is unwilling to renew a policy.

[d] Insured Did Not Accept Renewal Offer

Fujimoto v. Western Pioneer Ins. Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 150 Cal. Rptr. 88 , was an action against an insurer by its insured for a judgment declaring that an automobile liability insurance policy issued by defendant was in force on June 23, 1976, when plaintiff, an insured under the policy, struck and injured a pedestrian while driving a car covered by the policy. The policy, which covered both plaintiff and her husband, had been issued on June 21, 1972, for a period of six months and, subject to the consent of the insurer, for successive policy periods as provided in Condition 1 of the policy. Condition 1 provided that subject to the consent of the insurer, the policy may be continued in force for successive policy periods by payment of the required continuation premium to the insurer on or before the effective date of each successive policy period and that if such premium was not paid when due, the policy would terminate as of that date and such date would be the end of the policy period.

Following its issuance, the policy was continued for successive six-month periods, the latest being from December 21, 1975, to June 21, 1976. On May 20, 1976, defendant mailed to plaintiff's husband a "Premium Notice" which set forth the policy number, a term of six months, and a due date of June 21, 1976. The body of the notice set forth the coverages of the policy, the premiums due for the respective coverages, a total premium payable of $215, and at the bottom a notice that on receipt of paymentthe insured would receive a continuation certificate of the policy for an additional six months' period, that payment must be received by the insurer before the due date indicated, and that in the event payment was not received by that date, the policy was to become null and void. Plaintiff's husband became ill on May 27, 1976, and was hospitalized until his death on July 3, 1976.

On June 22, 1976, plaintiff mailed a check for $215 to the insurer which received it on June 25 and renewed the policy for six months as of the latter date. The accident, as indicated, occurred on June 23, 1976. The pedestrian sued plaintiff, who then sued defendant insurer for declaratory relief. The trial court determined that the policy was in effect on June 23, 1976, and entered judgment accordingly. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal pointed out that to effect the renewal of an insurance policy there must be both an offer to renew (by the insurer) and an acceptance of the offer (by the insured) (86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 313) .

NOTE:

Fujimoto interpreted notice requirements pursuant to Ins. Code § 663 as it existed prior to its amendment in 1986.

[e] Attempted Acceptance Did Not Comply With Terms of Offer

The factual background of Fujimoto v. Western Pioneer Ins. Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 313, 150 Cal. Rptr. 88 , is discussed in § 120.320[3][d]. In reversing the judgment for plaintiff insured, the court of appeal held that the premium notice constituted an offer to renew within the meaning of Ins. Code § 663 [see § 120.320[3][c]], that Ins. Code § 663, a special statute requiring a motor vehicle insurer to offer renewal of a policy contingent on payment of the premium "as stated in the offer," prevailed over Ins. Code § 480, a general statute providing that an insurer is entitled to payment of the premium as soon as the subject matter insured is exposed to the peril insured against, and that because plaintiff failed to pay the premium on the due date as required by the premium notice, no acceptance of the renewal offer resulted and the policy expired on June 21, 1976 (86 Cal. App. 3d 305, 311-313) .

NOTE:

The court in Fujimoto declined to rule on the issue of whether the insurer had, by accepting the renewal premium with knowledge of the accident, waived the condition in the premium notice that if the premium was not paid by the date specified in the notice, the policy would terminate as of that date. The court declined to decide this issue because plaintiff did not plead waiver, either in the original complaint or by an amendment to conform to proof.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCancellation & RenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCancellation & RenewalNotice RequirementsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
3. Insured's Defective Attempt to Renew

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.321-120.329

[Reserved]

§§ 120.321[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
4. Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.330

§ 120.330 Insurer's Cancellation of Policy Breached Covenant of Good Faith

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT INSURER BREACHED ITS COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH BY CANCELING THE POLICY.

A. Covenant of Good Faith Applies to Insurer's Cancellation of Policy. The cancellation by an insurer of an insurance policy pursuant to its terms is subject to the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958-959, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404).

B. Improper Exercise of Discretionary Power to Cancel Breaches Covenant. An insurer's failure, in canceling a policy pursuant to a discretionary power conferred on the insurer by the policy, to exercise that discretion in good faith and in accordance with fair dealing constitutes a breach of the covenant of good faith (see Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404).

C. Bad-Faith Cancellation Subjects Insurer to Liability. An insurer who cancels an insurance policy in accordance with its terms but in breach of its covenant of good faith is liable to the insured for damages resulting from the breach (Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958-959, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the insurance policy was cancelled in accordance with the cancellation provisions of the policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported cancellation was not effective because the insurer breached its covenant of good faith in canceling the policy.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used by an insured to oppose an insurer's motion for summaryjudgment in an action for breach of the insurance contract or to enforce the contract's provisions [see also § 120.260[2][a]].

The right of insurers to cancel insurance policies is limited by the terms of the policy and any other mutual agreement between the parties, in addition to the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in every contract. Moreover, certain statutory provisions govern specific types of policies with regard to cancellation requirements.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by the points and authorities in § 120.300.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that the insurer's conduct constituted a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing [see Civ. Code § 3294 (grounds for recovery of exemplary damages)].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. The grounds would be:

(1) There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement,

(2) This covenant applies to cancellation of the policy,

(3) Whether defendant acted in good faith in canceling the policy is a material fact, and

(4) There are triable issues with respect to this fact. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Covenant of Good Faith Applies to Insurer's Cancellation of Policy

In Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404 , the court reversed the judgment dismissing the insured's amended complaint after pointing out that there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every insurance contract that neither party will do anything to injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement, that the principle applies to insurance contracts, and that the principle has been applied to impose liability on the insurer for failure to settle third-party claims or the claims of its own insured, said that it could discern no logical basis for distinguishing between an insurer's conduct in settling a claim made pursuant to the policy and that involved in an insurer's canceling a policy if bad-faith conduct is the basis for the cancellation.

The court explained that the situations are similar in that the ultimate result of the insurer's conduct effectively deprives the insured of the benefit of the bargain, that is, the coverage for the period for which he or she paid a premium, and that no plausible reason exists why cancellation provisions of a contract should be treated differently from other contractual provisions insofar as application of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealingis concerned. The court concluded that the cancellation provisions of a contract are subject to the covenant of good faith and fair dealing just as are other provisions of a contract (66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958) .

[b] Improper Exercise of Discretionary Power to Cancel Breaches Covenant

The factual and procedural background of Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404 , is discussed in § 120.330[3][a]. In his amended complaint, plaintiff had alleged that he was a specialist in neurosurgery and an employee and shareholder of a neuro-medical group, as well as a member of the nonprofit medical association to which the master policy had been issued, that during the period of negotiation for the master contract, one of the defendants represented to the association that if its members complied with the conditions precedent and did not have excessive claims filed against them, it would keep the members' malpractice policies in full force and effect, that no malpractice claims were filed against plaintiff under the policy issued to him by defendants, that defendants nevertheless, some 18 months after the policy had been in effect, gave him notice of cancellation effective 30 days from the date of the notice, and that by the cancellation defendant had intended to make an example of plaintiff for the purpose of deterring other insureds under the master contract from resisting defendant's proposed premium increase, which was substantially larger than that permitted by the master contract.

He also alleged that the cancellation was with the intent and purpose to harm and injure plaintiff in the practice of his profession, that defendant was aware that plaintiff would be unable to practice medicine and surgery in hospitals without malpractice insurance, that the canceled insurance was not available at competitive rates from solvent, nonhazardous insurance carriers, and that plaintiff had been forced to secure replacement malpractice insurance from a carrier that had been deemed undercapitalized by the California Insurance Commissioner at a premium 350 percent higher than that paid to defendant. Plaintiff sought recovery of damages for emotional distress, the amount of the increased premium he had to pay to secure other insurance, and punitive damages.

In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal said that when a contract confers on one party a discretionary power affecting the rights of the other, a duty is imposed to exercise that discretion in good faith and in accordance with fair dealing, that, in the instant case, the deprivation to the insured of the benefit of his bargain was greater than average due to the lack of competition in the field of malpractice insurance alleged in the amended complaint, and that conspiratorial conduct on the part of insurers to avoid the contractual liability they undertake is not countenanced in California (66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958) .

[c] Bad-Faith Cancellation Subjects Insurer to Liability

The factual and procedural background of Spindle v. Travelers Ins. Cos. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 136 Cal. Rptr. 404 , is discussed in § 120.330[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal said that liability for breach of the covenant of good faith sounds in tort and that an insured may recover for all detriment resulting from the violation, including mental distress (66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 958) . The court noted that the evolvement of the doctrine of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is an expression of public policy in California and held that this same doctrine is applicable to subject an insurer to liability to its insured for canceling a malpractice insurance policy in accordance with permissible terms of the cancellation provisions of the policy, if the reasons for the cancellation are such as to make the cancellation a violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The court, therefore, concluded that the complaint stated a cause of action against defendants (66 Cal. App. 3d 951, 959) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsCancellation & NonrenewalGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral Overview

171 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
4. Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.331-120.339

[Reserved]

§§ 120.331[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
5. Failure of Insurer to Provide Renewal Notice

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.340

§ 120.340 Coverage Under Motor Vehicle Policy Continued After Policy Expiration Date Because of Insurer Failed to Give Notice of Renewal or Nonrenewal to Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURED'S POLICY COVERAGE CONTINUED ON EXPIRATION OF THE POLICY TERM BECAUSE INSURER FAILED TO COMPLY WITH STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS OF INSURANCE CODE SECTION 663 IN OFFERING TO RENEW THE POLICY OR GIVING NOTICE OF NONRENEWAL.

Policy Renewed by Insurer's Failure to Give Notice of Nonrenewal. The insurer's failure to give the insured notice of renewal or nonrenewal as required by Section 663 of the Insurance Code operates to effect, on the same terms and conditions, an automatic renewal of the policy (Borders v. Great Falls Yosemite Ins. Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 86, 93-94, 140 Cal. Rptr. 33).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that the that the policy expired prior to the occurrence giving rise to the loss or liability sued on because of the insured's failure to renew the policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the purported expiration was not effective because the insurer failed to comply with the requirements stated in Ins. Code § 663.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to each of the requirements stated under Ins. Code § 663 with which the insurer failed to comply, referring to facts establishing the noncompliance.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.170 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be to oppose a motion by an insurer for summary judgment, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that triable issues of material fact remain [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. The grounds would be:

(1) Defendant insurer failed to give notice of renewal or nonrenewal as required by Ins. Code § 663, or the notice given failed to comply with statutory requirements and was therefore defective;

(2) As a consequence the policy was automatically renewed and was in effect at the time the loss occurred or liability arose;

(3) Whether defendant complied with statutory requirements in offering to renew or giving notice of nonrenewal of the policy is a material fact; and

(4) There are triable issues with respect to this fact.

Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Renewed by Insurer's Failure to Give Notice of Nonrenewal

Borders v. Great Falls Yosemite Ins. Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 86, 140 Cal. Rptr. 33 , was an action by an insured for a declaration that a renewed motor vehicle policy provided uninsured motorist coverage. The case involved the construction of former Ins. Code § 663 (repealed and replaced by another code section of the same number in 1974 and amended in 1986) and former Ins. Code § 11580.2(a) [now Ins. Code § 11580.2(a)(1)], relating to uninsured motorist coverage. Former Ins. Code § 663 provided in pertinent part that no insurer shall fail to renew a policy unless it shall mail or deliver to the named insured, at the address shown in the policy, at least 20 days' advance notice of its intention not to renew. (The section now provides in pertinent part that an insurer shall offer renewal of a policy [as defined in Ins. Code § 660], contingent on payment of premium as stated in the offer, to an insured, unless the insurer mails or delivers to the name insured, at the address shown in the policy, at least 20 days' advance notice of nonrenewal.)

At the time of applying for the policy, plaintiff signed a waiver of uninsured motorist coverage. The expiration date of the policy was June 20, 1973, and hence had a normal expiration date of 12:01 a.m. on that date. The accident occurred approximately nine hours after that time. On May 8, 1973, defendant had given notice of intention not to renew to the legal owner of the car, a finance company, but not to plaintiff insured. Consequently, the policy was renewed by operation of law because of defendant's failure to have complied with former Ins. Code § 663. From a judgment declaring that the policy as renewed did not provide uninsured motorist coverage, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It rejected plaintiff's contention that, since the renewal was by operation of law, the effect of plaintiff's waiver of uninsured motorist coverage was not continued. The court, quoting from State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Brown (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 385, 394, 115 Cal. Rptr. 213 , said that the language of former Ins. Code § 663 imported that an insurer's failure to give such notice operates to effect an automatic renewal of the policy, beyond its renewal-expiration date and irrespective of the insured's nonpayment of the renewal premium (40 Cal. App. 3d 385, 393) , and that the renewal was on the same terms and conditions as the original policy (40 Cal. App. 3d 385, 393-394) . The court held that renewal requires the assent of the insured, even when it results from the insurer's failure to give notice of nonrenewal, and hence therenewal was one by the named insured within the meaning of former Ins. Code § 11580.2(a) (40 Cal. App. 3d 385, 393-399) .

In rejecting plaintiff's contention that the waiver of uninsured motorist coverage was not continued because the renewal was not "by the named insured," as required by Ins. Code § 11580.2(a), but, rather, by operation of law, the court of appeal said that a renewal under Ins. Code § 660 (definitions, including definition of renewal) and Ins. Code § 663, in order to became effective to continue coverage, requires the assent of the insured. The court further stated that this is made more apparent by the present form of these sections; Ins. Code § 660 now defines renewal as meaning "to continue coverage for an additional policy period upon expiration of the current policy period of the policy," and Ins. Code § 663, pursuant to 1974 legislation, provided that failure to send a notice of nonrenewal results in an "offer" of "renewal of a policy, contingent upon payment of premium as stated in the offer." The court concluded that though the 1974 statute clarified the matter, it is apparent that the situation was identical under the prior form, that the renewal made obligatory by virtue of Ins. Code § 663 has at all times been one requiring the insured's agreement, and that it was, therefore, a renewal "by the named insured" (72 Cal. App. 3d 86, 96) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCancellation & RenewalNotice RequirementsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
D. Rescission, Cancellation, and Renewal of Policies
5. Failure of Insurer to Provide Renewal Notice

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.341-120.349

[Reserved]

§§ 120.341[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.350

§ 120.350 Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business and Operated Vehicle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BY CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION, THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of adverse insurer] PROVIDES THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, BECAUSE THE INSURED OF _____ [name of adverse insurer] WAS ENGAGED IN A SPECIFIED MOTOR-VEHICLE RELATED BUSINESS, AND THE VEHICLE INVOLVED IN THE ACCIDENT WAS OPERATED BY THE _____ [INSURED or AGENT/EMPLOYEE OF THE INSURED] OF _____ [name of adverse insurer].

A. Public Policy. Insurance Code Section 11580.9 expresses the total public policy of California respecting the order in which two or more automobile liability insurance policies covering the same loss will apply (Ins. Code § 11580.8).

B. Conclusive Presumption Applies to Adverse Insurer. When two or more policies affording valid and collectible automobile liability insurance apply to the same motor vehicle in an occurrence out of which a liability loss arises, and one of the policies affords coverage to a named insured engaged in the business of selling, repairing, servicing, delivering, testing, road-testing, parking, or storing motor vehicles, it is conclusively presumed that if, at the time of loss, the motor vehicle was being operated by the person engaged in any of those businesses, or by his or her employee or agent, the insurance afforded by the policy issued to that person is primary, and the insurance afforded by any other policy is excess (Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1); see Westerholm v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 634, 130 Cal. Rptr. 164).

C. Nature of Insured's Business as Determinative Factor. Under Insurance Code Section 11580.9, it is the nature of the insured's business, and not the status of the particular vehicleinvolved in the accident giving rise to the liability loss, that determines which insurance policy is primary (McCall v. Great Am. Ins. Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998,

174 Cal. Rptr. 399).

[Optional] D. Modification or Amendment of Statutory Presumptions. The presumptions stated in Insurance Code Section 11580.9, subdivisions (a)-(d), inclusive, may not be modified or amended except by written agreement signed by all insurers who have issued one or more policies applicable to the loss described in such subdivisions and all named insureds under such policies (Ins. Code § 11580.9(f)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that an adverse insurer's policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insured of the adverse insurer engaged in a motor vehicle-related business specified in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1), and either the insured, or the insured's agent or employee operated the vehicle.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

Paragraph D may be included in reply to an adverse insurer's contention that the statutory presumptions were modified or amended in some manner other than the manner required by Ins. Code § 11580.9(f).

For points and authorities supporting the contention that the conclusive presumption applies even though the insured and permissive user were both engaged in motor-vehicle related businesses, see § 120.351.

For points and authorities supporting the contention that the conclusive presumption applies to a self-insurer or public entity, see § 120.354.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- The insured of the adverse insurer was engaged in one the motor vehicle-related businesses identified in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1).

- At the time of the accident, the vehicle was driven either by the adverse party's insured, or an agent or employee of that insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant

[see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint by an insurance company against another insurance company for a judicial declaration regarding which liability policy provides primary coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.370, 129.371, and 120.374 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

Ins. Code § 11580.8 declares that it is the public policy of California to avoid, so far as possible, conflicts and litigation, with resulting court congestion, between and among injured parties, insureds, and insurers concerning which, among various policies of liability insurance and the various coverages in them, are responsible as primary, excess, or sole coverage, and to what extent, under the circumstances of any given event involving death or injury to persons or property caused by the operation or use of a motor vehicle.

The legislature in Ins. Code § 11580.8 further declares that Ins. Code § 11580.9 expresses the total public policy of California respecting the order in which two or more liability insurance policies covering the same loss will apply. This is not to be changed or modified by any provision of the Vehicle Code, except in those express cases in which the requirements of Veh. Code §§ 16450-16457 apply with regard to a liability insurance policy certified as provided in Veh. Code § 16431 (relating to proof of financial responsibility).

[b] Conclusive Presumption Applies to Adverse Insurer

In Westerholm v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 130 Cal. Rptr. 164 , the court of appeal explained that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1), the initial question is whether one of the policies afforded coverage to a named insured engaged in a business outlined in the statute, that if that question is answered in the affirmative and the vehicle was driven by the person engaged in such business (or by his employee or agent) at the time of the accident giving rise to the liability loss, the insurance afforded by his or her policy is primary (58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 634) .

[c] Nature of Insured's Business as Determinative Factor

The factual background of McCall v. Great Am. Ins. Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 174 Cal. Rptr. 399 , is discussed in § 120.371[3][a]. In holding that the policy of the insurer of the car operator provided primary coverage and that the policy of the insurer of the car leasing company was excess, the court of appeal said that by the clear language of Ins. Code § 11580.9(a) and Ins. Code § 11580.9(b), indicating that coverage depends on the nature of the business in which the insured engages, it is the nature of the insured's business, not the status of the particular vehicle involved in the accident giving rise to the liability loss, that determines which insurance policy is primary in a multipolicy situation under Ins. Code § 11580.9 (119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPriority of CoverageInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle OwnershipGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.351

§ 120.351 Presumption Applies Even Though Insured and Permissive User Both Engaged in Motor-Vehicle Related Businesses

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BY CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION, THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of adverse insurer] IS THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, EVEN THOUGH BOTH THE VEHICLE OWNER AND THE PERMISSIVE USER ENGAGED IN ONE OF THE SPECIFIED AUTOMOTIVE BUSINESSES, BECAUSE THAT FACT DOES NOT RENDER INAPPLICABLE THE STATUTORY PRESUMPTIONS.

Both Vehicle Owner and Permissive User Engaged in One of Specified Automotive Businesses. The fact that both the owner of the vehicle involved in the accident giving rise to a liability loss and the permissive user of that vehicle were engaged in one of the businesses listed in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a), does not render inapplicable the presumptions set forth therein (Zurich-Am. Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 487-488, 149 Cal. Rptr. 472).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that an adverse insurer's policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the fact that both the vehicle owner and the permissive user engaged in one of the specified automotive businesses does not render inapplicable the statutory presumptions of Ins. Code § 11580.9(a).

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

For points and authorities supporting the contention, generally, that the conclusive presumption applies to the policy of an insurer whose insured is engaged in a motor-vehicle related, see § 120.350.

For points and authorities supporting the contention that the conclusive presumption applies to a self-insurer or public entity, see § 120.354.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.350[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.370, 120.374 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Both Vehicle Owner and Permissive User Engaged in One of Specified Automotive Businesses

The factual background of Zurich-Am. Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 149 Cal. Rptr. 472 , is discussed in § 120.370[3][a]. In Zurich-American Ins. Co., the trial court had held that since both plaintiff's insured and defendant's insured were engaged in businesses described in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a), that subdivision did not apply and that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) defendant (the insurer of the truck sales company that owned the vehicle) was primarily liable and the policy issued by plaintiff (the insurer of the truck-painting business whose employee was the permissive user of the truck) was excess. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal held that the trial court had erred in its construction of Ins. Code § 11580.9(a) (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 487) . The court said that under this code section, the initial question is whether at least one of the two or more policies affording valid and collectible liability insurance affords coverage to a named insured engaged in the businesses listed. If this question is answered in the affirmative, then the second question is who was the operator of the vehicle at the time of the loss. Primary liability is placed on that party's insurance policy (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 488) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsRebuttal of PresumptionsInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UsePermissive UsersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.352

§ 120.352 Insured Was Owner or Lessee of Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BY CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION, THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of adverse insurer] PROVIDES THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, BECAUSE THE INSURED OF _____ [name of adverse insurer] IS THE OWNER/TENANT/LESSEE OF THE PREMISES WHERE THE LOSS OCCURRED, AND THE LOSS AROSE OUT OF THE LOADING AND UNLOADING OF A MOTOR VEHICLE.

Insured Was Owner or Lessee of Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle. When two or more policies are applicable to the same loss arising out of the loading or unloading of a motor vehicle, and one or more of the policies isissued to the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises on which the loading or unloading occurs, only the insurance afforded by the policy or policies covering the premises on which the loading or unloading occurs shall be primary [and the policy or policies shall cover as an additional insured with respect to the loading or unloading operations all employees of the owner, tenant, or lessee while acting in the course and scope of their employment] (Ins. Code § 11580.9(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that an adverse insurer's policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that by conclusive presumption, the insurance afforded by the policy issued by adverse insurer is the primary insurance coverage because the insured of the adverse insurer is the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises in which the loss occurred, and the loss arose out of the loading and unloading of a motor vehicle [Ins. Code § 11580.9(c)].

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

For points and authorities supporting the contention that the conclusive presumption applies to a self-insurer or public entity, see § 120.354.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.350[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing:

- The insured of the adverse insurer is either the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises in which the loss occurred, and

- The loss arose out of the loading and unloading of a motor vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition tosuch a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.372 -120.374 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseLoading & Unloading

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.353

§ 120.353 Policy Describes or Rates Motor Vehicle as Owned Automobile

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BY CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION, THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of adverse insurer] PROVIDES THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE BECAUSE THE POLICY OF _____ [name of adverse insurer] DESCRIBES OR RATES THE MOTOR VEHICLE INVOLVED INTHE INCIDENT GIVING RISE TO THE LOSS AS AN OWNED AUTOMOBILE, AND THE EXCEPTIONS TO THIS RULE IN INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.9(a) THROUGH (c) DO NOT APPLY.

A. Motor Vehicle Described in Policy as Owned or Rated Automobile. Except as provided in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a)-(c), when two or more policies affording valid and collectible motor vehicle insurance apply to the same motor vehicle or vehicles in an occurrence out of which a liability loss arises, it is conclusively presumed that the insurance afforded by the policy in which the motor vehicle is described or rated as an owned automobile will be primary and the insurance afforded by any other policy or policies will be excess (Ins. Code § 11580.9(d); see Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88).

B. Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a)-(c) Inapplicable. Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a)-(c), which specifies exceptions to the rule of Insurance Code Section 11580.9(d) as stated above, does not apply if (1) neither policy affords coverage to a named insured engaged in the business of selling, repairing, servicing, delivering, road-testing, parking, or storing motor vehicles; (2) neither policy affords coverage to a named insured engaged in the business of renting or leasing, without operators, motor vehicles that either qualify as commercial vehicles or are leased for a term of six months or longer; and (3) the loss did not arise out of the loading or unloading of a motor vehicle that is covered by one or more policies issued to the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises on which the loading or unloading occurred (Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)-(c); see Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148-149, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394 ; Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Carrier Ins. Co. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 223, 226-229, 119 Cal. Rptr. 116).

[Optional] C. Tractor/Trailer Is Treated as One Vehicle. For purposes of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d), a truck tractor hauling a trailer is treated as a single motor vehicle (Wilshire Ins. Co., Inc. v. Sentry Select Ins. Co. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 27, 34, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 60).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that an adverse insurer's policy provides the primary coverage of the loss.The basis of these points and authorities is that the adverse insurer's policy describes or rates the motor vehicle involved in the incident giving rise to the loss as an owned automobile, and the exceptions in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)-(c) do not apply. Optional Paragraph C should be used to assert that a tractor/trailer combination is treated as one vehicle.

The requirement in Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) that an automobile be described in the policy as "owned" or "rated" in the owner's policy has created special problems in the context of car rental agencies. When insurance is obtained under a "fleet" policy (a blanket policy covering all the agency's vehicles), or the owner posts a cash deposit or self-insures, the "policy of automobile insurance" (i.e., the policy, certificate of deposit, or certificate of self-insurance) [see Ins. Code § 11580.9(h)] often will not describe or rate specific vehicles. Car rental agencies and their insurers have argued that this failure to describe or rate individual vehicles renders Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) inapplicable [see Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 ; Interinsurance Exch. v. Spectrum Inv. Corp. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1243, 1251, 258 Cal. Rptr. 43 ; Ohio Cas. Ins. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 521, 149 Cal. Rptr. 562] , and in some cases have elected to self-insure specifically to achieve this result, in an attempt to shift primary insurance liability to the driver's insurer [see Interinsurance Exch. v. Spectrum Inv. Corp. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1243, 1251, 258 Cal. Rptr. 43 (citing legislative report)].

Although there is authority permitting car rental agencies to shift primary liability to the lessee's insurer under these circumstances [see Interinsurance Exch. v. Spectrum Inv. Corp. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1243, 1254-1255, 258 Cal. Rptr. 43] , the more recent and seemingly better reasoned view is that the car rental agreement and a certificate of self-insurance together constitute a "policy of automobile liability insurance" within the meaning of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d), and that since the car rental agreement does describe the rented car as an owned vehicle, Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) applies [Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1253, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88] .

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities stating the public policy respecting the order in which two or more automobile liability insurance policies covering the same loss will apply under Ins. Code § 11580.8 [see § 120.350, Paragraph A]. They may also be combined with points and authorities defining the meaning of meaningof "policies" as used in Ins. Code § 11580.9(b)-(d) [see § 120.371, Paragraph C].

For points and authorities supporting the contention that the conclusive presumption applies to a self-insurer or public entity, see § 120.354.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.350[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing that:

- The adverse insurer's policy describes or rates the motor vehicle involved in the incident giving rise to the loss as an owned automobile, and

- The exceptions in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)-(c) do not apply.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.374 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Described in Policy as Owned or Rated Automobile

In Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 , a self-insured car rental agency entered into short-term rental agreements with various individual renters. While operating the rented cars, the renters were involved in traffic collisions with third parties, who made claims against the rental agency as self-insurer. The issue presented was priority of coverage between the agency and the renter's insurers.

Under the terms of the individual rental agreements, the rental agency was required to provide the renter with liability insurance, and the agency allocated a portion of the rental fee to the to that insurance. After examining the history and background of what was then Ins. Code § 11580.9(h) (now Ins. Code § 11580.9(h)), which applied Ins. Code § 11580.9 to self-insurers, the court concluded that the legislative purpose of that section was to ensure that car rental agencies would be primarily liable for injuries arising out of the operation of their vehicles, and eliminate the situation whereby rental agencies could frustrate that purpose by self-insuring in an attempt to escape operation of the statute (25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1250-1251) .

Turning to the rental agreement, the court concluded that the agreement constituted "insurance" because it contained a provision indemnifying the renter from liability up to a specified limit. The court then determined that the rental agreement, together with the agency's certificate of self-insurance, constituted the "policy of insurance" within the meaning of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) (25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1252) .

The court then resolved the priority of coverage, noting the requirement that in order for Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) to apply, the vehicle in question must be "described" or "rated" in the owner's policy. Although the individual rental cars were not described or rated in the agency's certificate of self-insurance, they were specifically described in the rental agreement itself. This description in the rental agreement, which the court had already held to be part of the "policy of insurance," was sufficient to trigger application of Ins. Code § 11580(d), thereby rendering the agency's insurance primary and the drivers' excess (25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1253-1254) .

NOTE:

A contrary result had previously been reached in Interinsurance Exch. v. Spectrum Inv. Corp. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1243, 1251, 258 Cal. Rptr. 43 , in which the court essentially reached the same conclusion as the court in Grand Rent A Car as to the legislative history and purpose of Ins. Code § 11580.9(h), but concluded (in the context of an agency that had posted a cash deposit in lieu of insurance) that Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) was inapplicable to cash deposits (and, by implication, to other forms of financial responsibility such as certificates of self-insurance, fleet policies, and authorized bonds) because the cash deposit did not describe or rate the specific vehicle involved in the accident. The court in Grand Rent A Car sidestepped this problem by holding that the rental agreement, which did contain a specific description of the car, was part of the "policy of insurance" [Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1253, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 ; see also Ohio Cas. Ins. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 521, 149 Cal. Rptr. 562 (involving "fleet" policy)].

[b] Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a)-(c)Inapplicable

Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394 , was a declaratory relief action filed by the insurer of a drayage company against a scoutmaster, the Boy Scouts of America, and the Scouts' insurer to determine which insurer's policy covered a liability loss. The drayage company was engaged in the business of renting commercial vehicles without drivers, although the rental operations were not a major part of its business. The company loaned one of its trucks to the scoutmaster (no monetary remuneration was involved) to gather firewood which the scouts planned to sell as a fund-raising activity. As a result of a mechanical difficulty, the scoutmaster lost control of the loaded truck and hit a dwelling house, causing considerable property damage. Plaintiff's policy covered the truck as an owned automobile. The drayage company was licensed by the State Public Utilities Commission and the PUC endorsement attached to the policy increased the basic property damage from $10,000 to $50,000 per occurrence.

This endorsement contained an indemnity clause requiring the insured to reimburse the insurer for amounts paid in excess of the basic $10,000 limit. The Scouts was a named insured under a comprehensive automobile policy, issued by defendant insurer, with limits of $1 million, including property damage, and covered the truck as a nonowned automobile. Both insurers admitted coverage and liability. Plaintiff insurer settled the property damage claims for $20,062.27 and then sued for declaratory relief. The trial court, ruling that Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) applied, entered judgment declaring that defendant insurer's policy afforded primary coverage and that plaintiff's policy afforded excess coverage. The trial court attached no significance to the facts that the rental operations were only an occasional part of the drayage company's business and that there was no rental or monetary remuneration involved in the transaction with the Scouts.

The court of appeal reversed. It pointed out that Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) was designed to apply in a business setting in which a commercial vehicle is leased to a profit-making entity and disagreed with the trial court's reasoning that the absence of a commercial situation or rental is insignificant in determining the relevance of Ins. Code § 11580.9(b). The court concluded that the loan transaction that gave rise to the liability loss precluded the applicability of Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) (118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148-149) . The court held that the proper rule to apply was the general rule set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.9(d), that this section applies if none of the other subdivisions of Ins. Code § 11580.9 applies, that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) the policy that describes or rates the "owned" vehicle is primary and any other insurance excess, and that, accordingly, plaintiff's policy was primary. Since its liability was limited to $10,000 as a result of the PUC endorsement, defendant insurer's policy provided excess coverage for the balance (118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 149) .

Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Carrier Ins. Co. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 223, 119 Cal. Rptr. 116 , was a declaratory relief action between insurers and their insureds to determine which insurer's policy was primary and which was excess with respect to a liability claim. Plaintiff insured had rented a private passenger automobile for a three-day period from its owner, defendant insured, which was in the business of renting passenger-type automobiles on a daily basis. While operating the car, plaintiff insured was involved in an accident with a pedestrian who made claims for injuries and damages against both plaintiff insured and defendant insured. The liability insurance policy issued by plaintiff insurer covered plaintiff insured as the named insured and provided that it was excess on nonowned vehicles. The policy issued by defendant insurer covered defendant insured as a named insured, listed the automobile rented to plaintiff insured as a described, owned automobile, and provided insurance for persons using the vehicle with the permission of defendant insured. The policy also contained an endorsement making it excess if there was any other insurance applicable to the insurable event. The trial court held that the policy of defendant insurer was primary and that the policy of plaintiff insurer was excess.

The court of appeal affirmed. It rejected defendants' argument that the car was a "commercial" vehicle within the meaning of Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) and pointed out that the rental involved a short-term and not a long-term lease arrangement as required by that section (45 Cal. App. 3d 223, 226-229) . The court quoted the provisions of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) and concluded that since Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) did not apply [neither Ins. Code § 11580.9(a) nor Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) on its face was applicable], defendant insurer's policy covering the lessor of the car was primary, and plaintiff insurer's policy covering the lessee was excess (45 Cal. App. 3d 223, 229) .

[c] Tractor/Trailer Is Treated as One Vehicle

In Wilshire Ins. Co., Inc. v. Sentry Select Ins. Co. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 27, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 60 , an accident involving a tractor/trailer rig resulted in a wrongful death action. Issues arose between insurance carriers regarding whether the insurance carrier for the trailer owed the insurance carrier for the tractor a portion of the defense and indemnity costs in settling the action. The tractor was owned and driven by a company insured by one carrier, and the trailer was owned by a company insured by a second carrier. The lease agreement between the two owners provided that the tractor owner must fully indemnify the trailer owner for damages and bear any liability to a third party. The tractor was scheduled as an owned vehicle on the tractor owner's policy, and the trailer was scheduled as an owned vehicle on the trailer owner's policy. The tractor owner's policy provided liability coverage for damages resulting from the use of owned vehicles specifically described in the policy, as well as liability coverage for any nonowned trailer attached to the tractor. The "other insurance" clause provided that liability was primary if the tractor was hired by another, and a written agreement with the other carrier as lessee required the tractor owner to hold the lessee harmless. If the covered trailer was connected to the covered tractor, liability coverage for the trailer was also primary if coverage for the tractor was primary. The trailer owner's policy provided liability coverage for damages resulting from the use of the trailer, and it contained no provision for liability resulting from the use of the tractor. The "other insurance" clause provided that if the covered trailer was connected to a power unit not covered under the policy, coverage for liability resulting from use of the trailer was excess. The tractor operator was an "insured" under this policy because the trailer was used with the permission of the owner. Therefore, the trailer owner's policy provided liability coverage for the accident, but the coverage was excess. On cross-motions for summary judgment in an action by the tractor insurer against the trailer insurer seeking contribution for defense and indemnity costs paid on behalf of both insureds, the trial court applied Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) and held that despite the language in the two policies, both insureds must share the loss equally as co-primary insurers.

The court of appeal affirmed. At least for purposes of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d), a truck tractor hauling a trailer is treated as a single motor vehicle. Therefore, both policies apply to the "same motor vehicle or vehicles in an occurrence out of which a liability loss shall arise," within the meaning of that statute. The court then identified the equipment "described or rated as an owned automobile" by the respective insurance policies. The court noted that a description or rating, in common sense understanding, means a particularization of the vehicle. Because in one policy the tractor was scheduled as an owned vehicle, and in the other policy the trailer was scheduled as an owned vehicle, and because thetractor/trailer rig is treated as a single vehicle, under Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) it is conclusively presumed that each insurance policy is primary. Because each policy had the same limit for bodily injury liability, each insurer had an equal obligation to contribute to the loss (124 Cal. App. 4th 27, 34-35) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Described in Policy as Owned or Rated Automobile

In Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Gibraltar Cas. Co. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 163, 229 Cal. Rptr. 57 , a school employee's insurer broughtan action against the school district and its insurer to recover money paid within the limits of the policy in a third-party settlement arising from a vehicle accident within the scope of the insured's employment in which the employee was driving her personal automobile. The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the conclusive presumption of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) applied and therefore plaintiff was the primary and the district was the excess carrier, because the insured's private vehicle was described and rated as an owned vehicle in plaintiff's policy, and not in the district's insurer's policy (184 Cal. App. 3d 163, 172) .

In Lovy v. State Farm Ins. Co. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 173 Cal. Rptr. 307 , the court of appeal stated that Ins. Code § 11580.9(a) did not apply to a renter of cars, although that person was also engaged in a business otherwise enumerated in that section, and that since neither subdivision (b) nor (c) of Ins. Code § 11580.9 applied in the case before it, Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) applied (117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 864-865) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle OwnershipGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle OwnershipAutomobile Dealers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.354

§ 120.354 Statutory Presumptions Apply to Self-Insurers and Public Entities

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION UNDER _____ [identify applicable statute, e.g., INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.9(d)] APPLIES EVEN THOUGH _____ [name of insurer] IS A _____ [SELF INSURER or PUBLIC ENTITY].

Statutory Presumptions Apply to Self-Insurers and Public Entities. A certificate of self-insurance issued pursuant to Vehicle Code Section 16053, a deposit of cash made pursuant to Vehicle Code Section 16054.2, a bond in effect pursuant to Vehicle Code Section 16054, or the report filed pursuant to Vehicle Code Section 16051 (report that motor vehicle involved in accident was owned or leased by or under direction of United States, California, or political subdivision or municipality of California) is considered a policy of automobile liability insurance for the purposes of Insurance Code Section 11580.9, relating to statutory presumptions regarding primary and excess coverage (Ins. Code § 11580.9(h)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that an adverse insurer's policy provides the primary, rather than the excess coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that statutory presumptions under Ins. Code § 11580.9 apply to self-insurers and public entities.

This form may be combined with the points and authorities set forth in §§ 120.350 et seq. when one of the parties is self-insured or is a public entity.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking declaratory relief, declaring that the insurer's policy provides the primary coverage of the loss.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.350[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumptions Apply to Self-Insurers and Public Entities

Ins. Code § 11580.9(h) also states that it does not establish or provide the basis for any other form of liability for or upon a self-insurer or other person holding, issuing, or establishing any form of security described in that subsection.

The facts and procedural background of Grand Rent A Car Corp. v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 , are discussed in § 120.353[3][a]. The court concluded that car rental agreements together with the rental agency's certificate of self-insurance constitute policies of automobile liability insurance for purposes of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) (25 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1252) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsExceptionsStatutory PresumptionsInsurance LawBusiness

InsuranceSelf-InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBusiness InsuranceSelf-InsuranceGovernmental Agencies

179 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
1. Policy Provides Primary Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.355-120.369

[Reserved]

§§ 120.355[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.370

§ 120.370 Operator Was Not Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business or Insured's Employee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of insurer] PROVIDES THE EXCESS INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND NOT THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE PURSUANT TO THE CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION OF INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.9(a)(2).

Operator Was Not Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business or Insured's Employee. When two or more policies affording valid and collectible automobile liability insurance apply to the same motor vehicle in an occurrence out of which a liability loss arises and one of the policies affords coverage to a named insured engaged in the business of selling, repairing, servicing, delivering, testing, road testing, parking, or storing motor vehicles, it is conclusively presumed that if, at the time of loss, the motor vehicle was being operated by any person other than the person engaged in any of those businesses and other than his or her employee or agent, the insurance afforded by the policy issued to the person engaged in any of those businesses is excess over all other insurance available to the operator as a named insured or otherwise (Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2); see also Zurich-Am. Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 487-490, 149 Cal. Rptr. 472 ; Westerholm v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 632-634, 130 Cal. Rptr. 164).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose an adverse insurer's contention that an insurance policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that a conclusive presumption exists that insurance coverage issued to an insured engaged in motor vehicle-related business is excess, not primary, where at the time of the loss, the vehicle was being operated by someone not engaged in that vehicle-related business [Ins. Code §

11580.9(a)(2)].

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

If the statutory presumptions were modified in writing by all of the insurers and insureds, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.9(f), the points and authorities in this form should be combined with those in § 120.374.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in §§ 120.350, 120.351.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities in § 120.350 [see, e.g., Paragraphs A and D, relating to public policy regarding order of liability and the nature of insured's business as determinative factor, respectively].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing the requirement for a conclusive presumption of excess coverage under Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2):

- Insured was engaged in one of the businesses specified in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1), and

- The vehicle involved in the accident giving rise to the liability loss was being operated by a person other than that insured or that insured's employee or agent.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (h), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Operator Was Not Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business or Insured's Employee

Zurich-Am. Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 149 Cal. Rptr. 472 , was a declaratory relief action between two insurance companies whose policies covered the same motor vehicle involved in a traffic accident. Plaintiff's insured was the owner of a truck-painting business and was a named insured in an automobile and garage liability insurance policy, containing limits of $300,000 for bodily injury per occurrence, issued by plaintiff. Defendant's insured was a truck-sales company and was a named insured in a liability policy, which described a particular truck as an owned vehicle. Defendant's insured had orally hired plaintiff's insured to repair and paint the front fender of the described truck. After the completion of repairs, defendant's insured requested plaintiff's insured to drive the truck to a muffler shop at which place defendant's insured was to take possession. Under customary procedure, plaintiff's insured would have delivered the truck to defendant's insured's place of business.

While en route to the muffler shop, plaintiff's insured struck a bicycle and injured the rider, who subsequently recovered judgment against both plaintiff's insured and defendant's insured in the amount of $100,000, pluscosts. Following trial on the personal injury complaint, plaintiff filed an action for declaratory relief seeking a declaration that defendant's policy provided primary coverage for the accident under Ins. Code § 11580.9. Defendant answered the complaint and filed a cross complaint seeking a declaration that plaintiff was primarily liable. The trial court held that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(d), defendant was primarily liable and plaintiff's policy was excess.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that Ins. Code § 11580.9(a) applied, that under the clear language of Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1) and Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2), the priority between coinsurers is made on the basis of who was operating the motor vehicle at the time of the accident occasioning the insurable loss and that, as used in that section, the term "operator" must include within its meaning the driver of the vehicle. Thus, when a vehicle involved in an accident was driven by one with the permission of the owner, primary liability attaches to the policy under which the permissive user is afforded coverage as a named insured, and the insurance afforded by any other policy, including that of the owner, is excess (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 487) .

The court explained that the two policies involved afforded valid and collectible liability insurance and that at least one of the policies was issued to a named insured in one of the automotive businesses specified, that he was proceeding in the course and scope of that business and not as an agent for the owner, that the truck-painting company owner was the operator of the truck at the time of the accident, and that he was delivering the truck from his place of business to the owner (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 488-489) . The court concluded that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(a), the liability policy issued to the truck-painting owner was primary, and the policy issued to the truck-sales company was excess (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 489) . The court held that since the policy issued to the truck-sales company was excess, plaintiff must bear the primary responsibility and, under the applicable limits of its policy, the entire loss (85 Cal. App. 3d 481, 490) .

Westerholm v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 130 Cal. Rptr. 164 , was a personal injury action against the driver of a car involved in an accident and the car's owner, a garage business. At the time of the accident, defendant driver was 18 years old, living with his parents, and insured under a policy issued to his father with personal injury limits of $15,000. Defendant garage owner held an automobile liability policy, covering the car, issued by another insurance company with personal injury limits of $100,000. The garage owner's insurer defended the action and cross complained, in defendants' names, against the father's insurer for declaratory relief. It claimed that under Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2), the policy issued to the father furnished primary coverage and that cross defendant was obligated to furnish a defense to the driver and to pay any judgment entered in plaintiff's favor. This garage owner's insurer settledthe personal injury action for $75,000, a reasonable sum. The cross action was tried by the court without a jury, and judgment was entered ordering that cross defendant pay to the garage owner's insurer the sum of $15,000 as partial reimbursement for the $75,000 paid in settlement of the personal injury action. The trial court determined that Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2) was controlling and that, under this section, cross defendant's policy furnished primary coverage (58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 632) .

The court of appeal affirmed. It said that the findings of the trial court, together with the stipulation of facts, established that the garage owner's insurer had issued an automobile liability policy to the garage owner, who was engaged in the business of repairing cars, that the car was an insured vehicle under that policy and was used in the garage owner's business, that at the time of the accident the car was being driven by the 18-year-old son who was neither an employee nor an agent of the garage owner, and that automobile liability insurance coverage was extended to the driver under the policy issued to this father by cross defendant. Thus, the conclusive presumption set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(2) applied, with the result that the insurance afforded by the garage owner's policy was excess over the insurance available to the driver under the policy issued by cross defendant (58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 633-634) . The court explained that under Ins. Code § 11580.9, the initial question is whether one of the policies affords coverage to a named insured engaged in a business as outlined in the statute. If that question is answered in the affirmative, and the vehicle was driven by the person engaged in that business (or by that person's employee or agent) at the time of an accident, the insurance afforded by that person's policy is primary; if the vehicle was driven by any other person, the insurance available to the person under the garage owner's policy is excess. The court concluded that since the car was being driven by a person other than as described in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)(1), and the policy was issued to a person engaged in one of the businesses specified, the policy was excess (58 Cal. App. 3d 628, 634) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawExcess InsuranceApportionment of LiabilityInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCoverageGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.371

§ 120.371 Insured Is Lessor of Commercial Vehicles or Long-Term Lessor of Motor Vehicles

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of insurer] PROVIDES THE EXCESS INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND NOT THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, PURSUANT TO THE CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION OF INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.9(b), GOVERNING LESSORS OFCOMMERCIAL VEHICLES OR LONG-TERM LESSOR OF MOTOR VEHICLES.

A. Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Motor Vehicle Leasing Business. If two or more policies apply to the same loss, and one policy affords coverage to a named insured that in the course of its business rents or leases motor vehicles without operators, it is conclusively presumed that the insurance afforded by that policy to a person other than the named insured or his or her agent or employee is excess over, and not concurrent with, any other valid and collectible insurance applicable to the same loss covering the person as a named insured or as an additional insured under a policy with limits at least equal to the financial responsibility requirements specified in Veh. Code § 16056. The presumption applies only if, at the time of the loss, the involved motor vehicle either: (1) qualifies as a "commercial vehicle"; or (2) has been leased for a term of six months or longer. For this purpose, "commercial vehicle" means a type of vehicle subject to registration or identification under the laws of California that is either: (1) used or maintained for the transportation of persons for hire, compensation, or profit; or (2) designed, used, or maintained primarily for the transportation of property (Ins. Code § 11580.9(b); see also McCall v. Great Am. Ins. Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998-999, 174 Cal. Rptr. 399).

B. Meaning of "Policies" as Used in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(b)-(d). As used in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(b)-(d), "policies" means automobile liability insurance policies (Metro U.S. Servs., Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 678, 682, 158 Cal. Rptr. 207).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose an adverse insurer's contention that an insurance policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurance afforded by the policy issued by the insurer opposing the contention provides the excess insurance coverage, and not the primary insurance coverage, pursuant to the conclusive presumption of Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) (governing lessors of commercial vehicles or long-term lessor of motor vehicles).

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against anotherinsurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

If the statutory presumptions were modified in writing by all of the insurers and insureds, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.9(f), the points and authorities in this form should be combined with those in § 120.374.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.350.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities in § 120.350 [see, e.g., Paragraphs A and D, relating to public policy regarding order of liability and the nature of insured's business as determinative factor, respectively].

When the driver of a rented or leased vehicle is involved in an accident, the general rule stated in Ins. Code § 10580.9(d), under which the vehicle owner's insurance is primary and the driver's insurance is excess, ordinarily applies. Thus, when a person rents a car from a car rental agency, and is thereafter involved in an accident, under the general rule the car rental agency's insurance will be primary and any other insurance excess.

Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) states two exceptions for rented or leased vehicles to the general rule noted above. The general presumption that the vehicle owner's insurance is primary and the lessee's insurance is excess is reversed if the motor vehicle in question is leased without an operator and either (1) qualifies as a "commercial vehicle" or (2) has been leased for a term of six months or longer. "Commercial vehicle" means a type of vehicle subject to registration or identification under the laws of California that is either: (1) used or maintained for the transportation of persons for hire, compensation, or profit; or (2) designed, used, or maintained primarily for the transportation of property. In these circumstances, a special exception to the general rule states that any insurance provided by the lessor's policy to any person other than the lessor and the lessor's agents and employees will be excess over any other applicable insurance covering the same person as a named or additional insured, provided that the applicable limits of the other insurance are at least equal to the minimum financial responsibility requirements [Ins. Code § 11580.9(b); see Veh. Code § 16056 (financial responsibility requirements)]. In the typical fact context, this will mean that when a commercial vehicle or a long-term lease is involved, the lessee's insurance will be primary and the lessor's insurance excess.

The purpose of this exception is to insure that coverage reflects the realities of the transaction in question. If a passenger vehicle is leased or rented for less than six months, the economic benefit and the risk of ownership remains with the lessor and the lessor's policy is primary. If a passenger vehicle is leased for a term exceeding six months, the ownershiprisk shifts to the lessee and the insurance policy issued to the owner/lessor becomes excess [Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 147, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394] . In the commercial context, since a commercial lessee usually will be making a profit from the use, the lessee's policy should be primary [Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394] .

A rental car is not a "commercial vehicle" simply by virtue of the fact that the rental itself is a commercial transaction. Rather, the use to which the lessee puts the vehicle is determinative. If the lessee uses the leased vehicle to transport persons for hire, or if the vehicle is designed, used, or maintained primarily for the transportation of property, the vehicle qualifies as "commercial" for purposes of this exception [Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Carrier Ins. Co. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 223, 228, 119 Cal. Rptr. 116] . In other words, as to leased or rented commercial vehicles, the emphasis is on the business use of the equipment [Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394] . Thus, "casual" leasing comes within this exception as long as it can reasonably be stated that the transaction involved was a commercial transaction [see Mission Ins. Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 97, 101, 206 Cal. Rptr. 383] . However, the exception is inapplicable if the vehicle is loaned without consideration rather than being rented or leased, even if the owner is in the business of renting or leasing commercial vehicles [Transport Indem. Co. v. Alo (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 143, 148-149, 172 Cal. Rptr. 394] .

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.370[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing the requirements set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.9(b).

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicialnotice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Motor Vehicle Leasing Business

McCall v. Great Am. Ins. Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 174 Cal. Rptr. 399 , was a declaratory relief action filed by an insurer and its insured against a car leasing company, a car rental company, and the leasing company's insurer to determine which of the two policies involved provided primary, and which excess, coverage of the liability loss involved. The leasing company was engaged in the business of leasing automobiles for six months or longer. It leased one of its cars to plaintiff insured's company for a period of three years for use by plaintiff insured as an employee of the company. Subsequently, a loan car, owned by the car-rental company, was substituted for the leased car while the latter was being repaired. Plaintiff insured, while driving the loan car, was involved in the accident giving rise to the liability loss. Both plaintiff insurer's policy and that of defendant insurer covered the loan car. The trial court declared that plaintiff insurer's policy provided primary coverage and that defendant's policy was excess.

The court of appeal affirmed. It explained that the lease under which plaintiff insured received the loan car while the leased car was being repaired was for three years, that the loan vehicle was supplied by the terms of the loan agreement to customers of the leasing company only with the loan agreement providing for the signature of the lessee, and that it was manifest that the loan car was a part of the leasing company's long-term leasing business (119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998) . The court held that Ins.Code § 11580.9(b) applied because that section provides that if one of the two policies affording coverage covers an insured in the business of leasing motor vehicles for six months or longer, that insurance is excess, with primary coverage being presumed under the policy covering the named or additional insured, that plaintiff insurer's policy was therefore primary and defendant insurer's policy was excess (119 Cal. App. 3d 993, 998-999) .

[b] Meaning of "Policies" as Used in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(b)-(d)

In Metro U.S. Servs., Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 678, 158 Cal. Rptr. 207 , plaintiff Metro had leased a dump truck to defendant city. While driving the truck, the city's employee had an accident allegedly injuring several persons who then sued plaintiff Metro, the city, and the city's employee for damages. Plaintiff Metro in no way contributed to the cause of the accident. Plaintiff Metro was insured by an insurance company, and defendant city was a self-insurer. The city refused to provide a defense for plaintiff Metro in the third-party action, and plaintiff Metro and its insurer then sued the city for declaratory relief. Plaintiffs appealed from a judgment in favor of the defendant. The court of appeal affirmed on the ground that Ins. Code § 11580.9, as it then read, did not apply to self-insurers. In the course of its opinion, the court said that it was obvious that the word "policies" as used in Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) means the same as that used in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a), where the complete wording is: "Where two or more policies affording valid and collectible automobile liability insurance apply to the same motor vehicle." The court pointed out that the failure to repeat the entire terminology was carried on throughout subdivisions (a) through (f) and concluded that it was clear that "policies" in subdivision (b) means automobile liability insurance policies (96 Cal. App. 3d 678, 682) .

The court's ultimate holding that Ins. Code § 11580.9 was inapplicable to self-insurers was based on the language of the section as it existed prior to enactment of current Ins. Code § 11580.9(h), which now specifically states that a certificate of self-insurance, among other things, is a "policy of automobile insurance" for purposes of Ins. Code § 11580.9. However, the statutory change does not appear to negate the court's conclusion that the word "policies" as used in Ins. Code § 11580.9(b) means automobile liability policies. Instead, the current statutory wording simply defines what is included in the latter term.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle OwnershipLeases & Rental Vehicles

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.372

§ 120.372 Policy Covers Motor Vehicle When Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of insurer] PROVIDES THE EXCESS INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND NOT THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, PURSUANT TO THE CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTION OF INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.9(c), RELATING TO POLICY COVERING MOTOR VEHICLE WHEN LOSS OCCURRED DURING LOADING OR UNLOADING OF VEHICLE.

B. Named Insured Owns or Rents Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle. When two or more policies are applicable to the same loss arising out of the loading or unloading of a motor vehicle, and one or more of the policies is issued to the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises on which the loading or unloading occurred, it is conclusively presumed that the insurance afforded by the policy covering the motor vehicle is not primary, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any endorsement required by law to be placed on that policy, but is excess over all other valid and collectible insurance applicable to the same loss with limits up to the financial responsibility requirements specified in Vehicle Code Section 16056. In that event, the two or more policies are not to be construed as providing concurrent coverage; rather, only the insurance afforded by the policy or policies covering the premises on which the loading or unloading occurs is primary, and that policy or policies shall cover as an additional insured with respect to the loading or unloading operations all employees of the owner, tenant, or lessee while acting in the course and scope of their employment (Ins. Code § 11580.9(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose an adverse insurer's contention that an insurance policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurance afforded by the policy issued by the insurer opposing the contention, provides the excess insurance coverage, and not the primary insurancecoverage, pursuant to the conclusive presumption of Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) (policy covering motor vehicle when loss occurred during loading or unloading of vehicle).

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

If the statutory presumptions were modified in writing by all of the insurers and insureds, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.9(f), the points and authorities in this form should be combined with those in § 120.374.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities in § 120.350 [see, e.g., Paragraphs A and D, relating to public policy regarding order of liability and the nature of insured's business as determinative factor, respectively].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.352.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.370[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to evidence establishing the requirements set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.9(c).

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statementof undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Named Insured Owns or Rents Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

The limits of liability specified in Veh. Code § 16056 are not less than $15,000 for personal injury to or death of one person in any one accident, $30,000 for personal injury to or death of two or more persons in any one accident, and $5,000 property damage in any one accident [Veh. Code § 16056(a)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Named Insured Owns or Rents Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

In Charmac, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664, 284 Cal. Rptr. 635 , the court concluded that Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) applies only with respect to policies covering the same insured for the same loss. Thus, it applies when the driver of a vehicle sues a premises owner for injuries sustained by the driver while the owner's employees were loading or unloading the vehicle on the premises. In this situation, the owner is covered under the premises liability policy, and the owner's employees are also covered under the driver's vehicle liability policy as permissive users while unloading the vehicle. The court held that Ins.Code § 11580.9(c) does not apply when two independent tortfeasors are insured under their own policies and neither is an additional insured under the other's policy, such as when a nonemployee injured while unloading a vehicle sues both the premises owner and the vehicle owner (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 667-668) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseLoading & Unloading

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.373

§ 120.373 Policies Do Not Cover Same Insured for Same Loss When Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of insurer] PROVIDES THE EXCESS INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND NOT THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, BECAUSE THE LOSS OCCURRED DURING LOADING OR UNLOADING OF VEHICLE, AND THE POLICIES DO NOT COVER THE SAME INSURED FOR SAME LOSS.

Statutory Presumption Inapplicable to Policies Covering Independent Tortfeasors. The presumption under Insurance Code Section 11580.9(c) assigns priorities among insurance coverage only when two or more insurance policies cover the same insured for the same loss. It is inapplicable to determine coverage among policies that cover independent tortfeasors insured under their own policies (Charmac, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 663-669, 284 Cal. Rptr. 635).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose an adverse insurer's contention that an insurance policy provides the primary coverage of the loss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurance afforded by the policy issued by the insurer opposing the contention provides the excess insurance coverage, and not the primary insurance coverage, because the loss occurred during loading or unloading of vehicle, and the policies do not cover the same insured for same loss.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issuedby the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

If the statutory presumptions were modified in writing by all of the insurers and insureds, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.9(f), the points and authorities in this form should be combined with those in § 120.374.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities in § 120.350 [see, e.g., Paragraphs A and D, relating to public policy regarding order of liability and the nature of insured's business as determinative factor, respectively].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.352.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.370[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumption Inapplicable to Policies Covering Independent Tortfeasors

In Charmac, Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 284 Cal. Rptr. 635 , a worker injured while unloading a truck sued the owner of the truck and owner of the premises (neither of whom were his employer), seeking damages for his injuries. Defendants cross complained against each other for total or partial indemnity. The truck owner also brought a declaratory relief action against the premises insurer, which answered and cross complained for declaratory relief against the truck owner. The subject of the declaratory relief action was whether the premises insurer had primary liability for the injuries, obligating it to defend and indemnify the premises owner before the vehicle insurer became obliged to pay under an "excess policy." The declaratory relief action was severed from the main action, and the trial court concluded that the premises insurer was the primary carrier, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.9(c). Consequently, the premises insurer was held obligated to defend and indemnify the truck owner. The premises insurer appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) applies only to assess priorities among insurance policies that cover the same insured for the same loss (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664-669) . The court first discussed the legislative intent of the statute, noting that Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) was enacted expressly to avoid the conflicts and court congestion created when multiple policies cover the same loss and numerous involved parties contest which insurer is responsible as the primary carrier and which as an excess carrier. To further that purpose, Ins. Code § 11580.9 created a series of conclusive presumptions, their applicability being dependent on the factual situations, declaring which insurer would be assigned as the primary carrier and which as the excess carrier (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664) . Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) provides in pertinent part that when two or more policies are applicable to the same loss arising out of the loading or unloading of a motor vehicle, and one or more of the policies is issued to the owner, tenant, or lessee of the premises on which the loading or unloading occurs, the vehicle insurance is conclusively presumed to be excess over all other valid and collectible insurance applicable to the same loss. The premises insurance is primary, and covers as an additional insured with respect to the loading or unloading operations all employees of the owner, tenant, or lessee while acting in the course and scope of theiremployment. The truck owner contended that the statute was intended to apply whenever there are two independent tortfeasors, one protected by a vehicle policy and the other by a premises policy, involved in a loading or an unloading accident. The premises insurer contended that the intent of Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) is limited to the assignment of policy priorities only when multiple policies are applicable to a particular insured's liability arising from the accident.

The court stated, based on its review of the language of the statute in light of the apparent purpose of the scheme as a whole, that it has no application when two independent tortfeasors, each having its own insurance and neither being a named or an additional insured under the other's policy, are codefendants in a tort action such as the instant case. The court observed that the apparent general purpose of Ins. Code § 11580.9 is to assign priorities among policies that insure a single tortfeasor (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 665) . Previous courts examining Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) have construed it in a manner consistent with the requirement that the multiple policies all apply to a single tortfeasor. It has been noted that the legislative intent behind Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) was to avoid the recurring controversies that arise when the driver of a vehicle is injured on the premises during loading or unloading of the vehicle and the driver sues the premises owner. In those circumstances, two policies are potentially applicable: the premises policy, because the premises owner is a named assured; and the vehicle policy covering the driver's vehicle, because the owner's employees unloading the vehicle would be "permissive users" of the vehicle and hence additional insureds under the vehicle policy. A suit by the driver against the owner invariably raised the issue as to which policy covering the same loss was primary. Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) clearly determines the respective responsibilities of the two insurers: the premises policy is primary, and the vehicle policy is excess (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 666) .

The truck owner contended that the only requirement of the application of Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) is that two or more policies be "applicable to the same loss," meaning the same injury to the third party. It further contended that the statute does not depend, as a predicate for its applicability, on resolving priorities among coinsurers that are obliged to indemnify the same insured. The court rejected these contentions, finding that a predicate to the statute's application is that multiple policies be "applicable to the same loss" (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 667) . When, as in the instant case, two independent tortfeasors are insured under their own policies and each is not an additional insured under the other's policy, the policies simply are not applicable to the same loss (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 667-668) .

The court noted that the truck owner's argument depends entirely on its interpretation of the term "same loss": the same injury incurred by the third party. However, liability policies generally do not "apply" to losses by third parties; instead, they "apply" to indemnify an insured for the insured's legal liabilities in relation to the insured's loss. For example, in theinstant case, the "loss" to which the premises policy applies is constituted by "all sums which the insured shall become legally obligated to pay as damages ... caused by an occurrence. ..." The term "insured" is limited to persons or organizations "qualifying as an insured in the "Persons Insured" provision." The vehicle policy presumably has similar application, that is, to indemnify the truck owner for any liability it has to the plaintiff.

Inasmuch as the vehicle policy applies to the truck owner's loss, but the premises policy does not (in that it owes no obligation to indemnify noninsureds under it), the two policies do not apply to the same loss, that is, the loss of the insured. The court's final reason for rejecting the premise insurer's interpretation is that it would make the truck owner an additional insured under the premises policy by operation of law, which would create new coverage, a result unintended by the legislature (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 668) . The court concluded that Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) is only applicable when assessing priorities among insurance policies that cover the same insured for the same loss; and because there are not two policies indemnifying the truck owner against the plaintiff's claim, Ins. Code § 11580.9(c) has no application in the instant case (233 Cal. App. 3d 660, 664, 669) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseLoading & Unloading

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.374

§ 120.374 All Insurers and Insureds Modified Statutory Presumption

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURANCE AFFORDED BY THE POLICY ISSUED BY _____ [name of insurer] PROVIDES THE EXCESS INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND NOT THE PRIMARY INSURANCE COVERAGE, BECAUSE ALL INSURERS AND INSUREDS MODIFIED STATUTORY PRESUMPTION.

All Insurers and Insureds Modified Statutory Presumption. The presumptions stated in Insurance Code § 11580.9(a) to (d), inclusive, may be modified or amended by written agreement signed by all insurers who have issued a policy or policies applicable to a loss described in those subdivisions and all named insureds under those policies (Ins. Code § 11580.9(f)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose an adverse insurer's contention that an insurance policy provides the primary coverage of theloss. The basis of these points and authorities is that the statutory presumptions were modified by the written agreement of the insurers and insureds.

This form may be used in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, it may be used in an action by an insurance company against another insurance company seeking a judicial declaration that the policy issued by the adverse insurer provides the primary coverage of the loss, the plaintiff's policy provides the excess coverage.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.350 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.370[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the written agreement of all the insureds and insurers which modifies the statutory presumptions set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.9(a)-(d).

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by an adverse insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
EvidenceInferences & PresumptionsExceptionsStatutory PresumptionsInsurance LawExcess InsuranceGeneral Overview

185 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Actions Between Motor Vehicle Liability Insurers
2. Policy Provides Excess Insurance Coverage

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.375-120.379

[Reserved]

§§ 120.375[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.380

§ 120.380 Tort Committed Against Insured Is Independent of Insurance Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURED[, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT], BECAUSE THE TORT HE/SHE COMMITTED IS INDEPENDENT OF THE INSURANCE CONTRACT.

Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Liable for Tort Not Arising From Insurance Contract. An agent or employee of an insurer is liable to an insured for wrongful and unprivileged acts committed against the insured that are not based on a breach of the insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing arising under the insurance contract (Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 510-511, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that torts committed against the insured are independent of the insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing [see Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 510-511, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is liable to the insured for independent torts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint or a defense motion for summary judgment in an action brought by aninsured that states tort causes of action against an insurer's agent or employee. For use in this context, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers or summary judgment motions generally.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be modified to oppose the points and authorities supporting a defense motion for summary judgment set out in § 120.170.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that the tort alleged does not arise from the insurer's duty to the insured under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing arising under the insurance contract, but rather that the defendant's conduct constitutes a tort distinct from the breach of the insurer's duty under the implied covenant.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.381 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgmentagainst the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

For discussion and forms regarding civil conspiracy, see Ch. 126, Conspiracy , in that publication. For discussion and forms regarding fraud, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , in that publication. For discussion regarding the liability of an agent for wrongful acts, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 120.392 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Liable for Tort Not Arising From Insurance Contract

In Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478 , an insured brought an action against his insurer, a company representing the insurer and an employee of that company, and a psychologist who conducted an examination for insurance purposes, alleging that all the defendants acted to deprive him of benefits due under the insurance policy. With respect to the company representing the insurer and its employee, the complaint alleged causes of action in fraud, conspiracy to defraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The insured filed a claim with his insurer to obtain disability benefits after he sustained injuries in an accident. An employee from a company hired by the insureras its representative contacted the insured and referred him to a clinical psychologist, who examined the insured and allegedly filed a false report with the insurer, which denied the insured benefits because of the report, allegedly according to preconceived design. The insured filed suit. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend with respect to causes of action against the insurer's representative and its employee for conspiracy to defraud, actual and constructive fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The insured appealed from the order dismissing those causes of action.

The court of appeal reversed with respect to all causes of action except that for constructive fraud (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 517) . With regard to the cause of action for conspiracy, the court noted that it was predicated on a conspiracy to defraud the insured by setting up a "medical examination" of him in a way predetermined to produce a false report of his physical condition, and furnishing the insurer with a false but plausible excuse to deny his claim for permanent disability benefits. To be actionable conspiracy, the alleged combination must result in the commission of a civil wrong, either by perpetration of an unlawful act or some injurious act by unlawful means, resulting in damage. The court noted that the crucial issue is whether a cause of action for conspiracy will lie (assuming that all the necessary allegations are pleaded) against persons not parties to the contract of insurance.

The insurer's representative and its employee (collectively referred to here as the agents) cited Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 in support of their contention that they could not be held liable for conspiracy, because they were not party to the insurance contract. In Gruenberg, an insured sued the insurers, an insurance adjuster and its employee, and a law firm and its attorney-employee. The court of appeal held that the noninsurer-defendants were not subject to liability for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, because they were not parties to the insurance contract; the Gruenberg court also found that the noninsurer defendants, as agents and employees of the insurers, could not be held liable on a theory of conspiracy. The court in the instant case distinguished Gruenberg on the ground that the sole basis of the complaint was the defendants' alleged breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and not other torts (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 509-510) .

The insured in the instant case based his conspiracy claim not on breach of the implied covenant, but rather on the commission of fraudulent and unprivileged acts (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 510-511) . The duty of every person to abstain from injuring the person or property of another, or infringing on any rights of another person, is independent of contractual duties. The court noted that if a wrongful act underlying the conspiracy agreement is set forth in the complaint, the conspiracy averment is unnecessary to the statement of a cause of action for conspiracy. The plaintiffmay therefore state a cause of action against several persons by simply alleging that the named defendants committed the acts. With regard to the cause of action for deceit, the agents asserted that the insured failed to establish the elements of a misrepresentation and causation. They argued that the insured's allegation that they advised him that he was to submit to a medical examination at the psychologist's office was not a misrepresentation, because it was true.

However, the insured further alleged that the insurer hired the agents to examine him and to prepare a medical report that would falsely state his condition, and that the agents, the insurer, and the psychologist agreed that the psychologist would prepare a false report in justification of the insurer's denial of his claim. Although mere nondisclosure is not ordinarily actionable unless the defendant is a fiduciary with a duty to disclose, active concealment or suppression of facts by a nonfiduciary is the equivalent of a false representation, that is, actual fraud. The insured pleaded facts showing that the defendants orchestrated a scheme to deprive him of his insurance benefits, and that part of the scheme was to lead him to believe that he was going to receive a physical examination while concealing from him a material fact, that is, that by prearrangement between defendants, the examination was to be dishonest and produce a false report of his condition.

Defendants' active concealment from the insured of this material fact constituted a false representation (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 512-513) . With respect to causation, the court noted the requirement for three distinct elements: (1) actual reliance; (2) damage resulting from the reliance; and (3) justifiable reliance. The insured alleged that the psychologist agreed with the remaining defendants to conduct a sham examination of him to be used as a basis for a false report of his condition; that the psychologist misrepresented to him that he was a medical doctor who would conduct a medical examination for insurance purposes; that the examination was being requested in order to give the insurer sufficient medical information to consider his claim objectively; that in reliance of those representations, he submitted to the examination; and that a false report based on the alleged examination was performed. To show causation, the plaintiff must plead that he believed the representations to be true (or that he was ignorant of their falsity), and that in reliance on the representations, he or she entered into the transaction.

When the defendants represented to the insured that he was to be examined by the psychologist (reputedly a medical doctor), the representation carried with it an implied representation that the examination would be fairly conducted, and that an honest report was to be prepared from it, not that it would be a bogus examination to be used as a basis for a false report to defeat the insured's claim (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 513) . Notwithstanding that there was no direct averment in the complaint thatthe fraudulent representation induced the insured to submit to the examination, the complaint fairly implied that he intended to allege, and did allege though defectively, that he relied on the misrepresentation made by the defendants, and that they were the inducements for him to submit to the bogus examination (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 513-514) . The court concluded that the agents' argument that no sufficient facts were alleged to show that either the examination report or their conduct was a proximate cause of the denial of the insured's claim was without merit, because the complaint pleaded facts showing that the insured was entitled to some relief, sufficient to withstand attack by demurrer (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 514) .

The court also found the complaint sufficient to state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 515-516). The court affirmed the judgment with respect to the cause of action for constructive fraud, on the ground that the necessary element of a fiduciary duty of disclosure was lacking with respect to the agents, as noninsurers (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 516-517) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Liable for Tort Not Arising From Insurance Contract

In Saunders v. Cariss (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 905 , the court of appeal reversed dismissal of an insured's action against his insurance agent that arose from the agent's forging the insured's signature on an agreement reducing the coverage limits on his uninsured motorist policy. Following an accident with an uninsured motorist, the insured hired an attorney to recover the full benefits of the actual policy limits, and sued the agent to recover his attorney's fees. The court of appeal stated that an agent who performs an unauthorized act is subject to tort liability, and although the complaint erroneously labeled the cause of action as fraud, it did support a cause of action for professional malpractice (224 Cal. App. 3d 905, 909) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & BrokersTortsIntentional TortsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.381

§ 120.381 Liability for Conspiracy to Defraud Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURED[, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT], BECAUSEAGENTS AND EMPLOYEES OF AN INSURER ARE SUBJECT TO LIABILITY FOR CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD AN INSURED.

Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Conspiracy to Defraud Insured. A cause of action for conspiracy will lie against agents and employees of insurers, even though the agents are not parties to the insurance contract, when they join the insurer in a conspiracy to defraud the insured (Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 511, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that an agent or employee of an insurer is subject to liability for conspiracy to defraud the insured.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is liable to the insured for independent torts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint or a defense motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured that states tort causes of action against an insurer's agent or employee. For use in this context, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers or summary judgment motions generally.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assertthat there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Conspiracy to Defraud Insured

Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478 , is discussed in § 120.380[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & BrokersTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.382

§ 120.382 Liability for Actual Fraud Against Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURED[, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE WASNOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT], BECAUSE AGENTS AND EMPLOYEES OF AN INSURER ARE SUBJECT TO LIABILITY FOR ACTUAL FRAUD AGAINST AN INSURED.

Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Actual Fraud Against Insured. Agents and employees of an insurer are subject to liability for actual fraud against an insured on the basis of a material false representation on which the insured relies, and which the insured believes to be true, that results in the wrongful deprivation of the insured's rights to benefits under the insurance policy (Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 513, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that an agent or employee of an insurer is subject to liability for actual fraud against the insured [see (Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 511, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is liable to the insured for independent torts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint or a defense motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured that states tort causes of action against an insurer's agent or employee. For use in this context, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers or summary judgment motions generally.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Actual Fraud Against Insured

Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478 , is discussed in § 120.380[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & BrokersTortsBusiness TortsFraud &

MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.383

§ 120.383 Agent Breached Duty to Insured to Inform Insured Accurately of Policy Provisions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURED[, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT], BECAUSE HE/SHE BREACHED HIS/HER DUTY TO INSURED TO INFORM INSURED ACCURATELY OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE INSURANCE POLICY.

A. Agent Owes Insured Duty of Due Care. An insurance agent owes the insured a duty of due care under general agency principles (Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211).

B. Agent for Several Insurance Companies Who Selects Insured's Company Is Agent of Insured. If an insurance agent is the agent for several companies and selects the company with which to place the insurance or insures with one of them according to directions, the insurance agent is the agent of the insured (Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211).

C. Agent Who Prepares Insurance Proposal Is Under Duty of Due Care to Inform Insured Accurately of Policy Provisions. An insurance agent who undertakes to prepare an insurance proposal for the insured to review before purchasing an insurance policy owes a duty of care to the insured to inform the insured accurately of the policy's provisions (Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211).

D. Insured Entitled to Reasonably Rely on Agent's Representations Regarding Scope of Coverage. An insured should be able to rely on an agent's representations of coverage without independently verifying the accuracy of those representations by examining the relevant policy provisions, unless the agent's representation is equivocal or some caution or warning is given (Clement v. Smith (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676).

E. Agent Prohibited From Misrepresenting Policy Terms. An insurer, or an insurer's officer or agent, or an insurance broker or solicitor shall not cause or permit to be issued, circulated, or usedany misrepresentation of the terms of a policy issued by the insurer or sought to be negotiated by the person making or permitting the misrepresentation (Ins. Code § 780(a); Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211).

F. Misrepresentation to Induce Another to Take Out Policy Prohibited. A person shall not make any misrepresentation to any other person for the purpose of inducing, or tending to induce, that person to take out a policy of insurance (Ins. Code § 781(a); Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insured's insurance agent owes the insured a duty to inform him or her accurately of the provisions in the insurance policy [see Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is liable to the insured for independent torts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint or a defense motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured that states tort causes of action against an insurer's agent or employee. For use in this context, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers or summary judgment motions generally.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth the representations made by defendant regarding a certain risk that the insured believed was covered under the policy, the contrasting policy provisions or absence of policy provisions, and the resultant loss to plaintiff because that risk was not in fact covered under the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 120.391 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Owes Insured Duty of Due Care

Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 , is discussed in § 120.383[3][c].

[b] Agent for Several Insurance Companies Who Selects Insured's Company Is Agent of Insured

Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 , is discussed in § 120.383[3][c].

[c] Agent Who Prepares Insurance Proposal Is Under Duty of Due Care to Inform Insured Accurately of Policy Provisions

In Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 , the insureds brought an action against their insurance agent, alleging negligence in misrepresenting the terms of a policy, and seeking damages arising from a loss to their property caused by a risk that the agent failed to reveal was excluded under the policy. The insureds owned a building in which they rented units to tenants. In August 1980, the insureds decided to change insurance agents and contacted a new agency to obtain coverage similar to that provided in the existing policy. The new agency sent the insureds an insurance proposal accompanied by a cover letter. The cover letter advised the insureds that the most competitive program for the type of property involved was a particular package offered by particular insurer. The cover letter described the coverage under that policy as "All Risk" except for the "perils on the exclusion list."

The insurance proposal also described the coverage as "All Risk" subject to "All Risk Property Coverage Exclusion list attached for reference." The exclusion list contained eight exclusions. It did not list an exclusion for loss due to water backing up through drains or sewers, and that loss was not reasonably included within any listed exclusion. Nothing in the cover letter, the description of coverage in the proposal, or the exclusion list indicated that the policy had other exclusions not contained in the exclusion list. The proposal contained the following disclaimer: "This proposal is prepared for your convenience only and is not intended to be a complete explanation of policy coverage or terms. Actual policy language will govern the scope and limits of protection afforded." On the basis of the proposal, the insureds determined that the policy satisfied their needs and obtained the policy, which they did not read when received. Two years later, a sewer adjacent to the insureds' property drained into the building, damaging property and causing the loss of the use of two units as rentals.

The insurer refused to cover the losses because of an exclusion in the policy for loss "caused by, resulting from, contributed to or aggravated by ... water which backs up through sewers or drains." The insureds brought an action against the agency and the agent who sold them the policy, alleging that the agent negligently misrepresented the terms of the policy with no reasonable ground for believing the representations to betrue. They also alleged breach of the contract to insure and sought reformation of the contract. The trial court granted the agents' motion for summary judgment, and the insured appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that there were triable issues of fact with respect to the causes of action for misrepresentation and breach of contract, based on the agents' duty to inform the insured accurately of the provisions of the policy (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866-867) . The court noted that negligent misrepresentation is a form of deceit defined as the assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true. To be actionable as deceit, the representation must have been made with the intent to induce the recipient to alter his or her position, resulting in injury or risk. That intent can be inferred from defendant's knowledge that the plaintiff would act in reliance on the representation. Responsibility for negligent misrepresentation rests on the existence of a legal duty, imposed by contract, statute, or otherwise, owed by a defendant to the injured person. One party to a business transaction is under a duty to exercise reasonable care to disclose to the other before the transaction is consummated facts basic to the transaction, if he or she knows that the other is about to enter into it under a mistake regarding those facts, and that the other, because of the relationship between them, the customs of the trade, or other objective circumstances, would reasonably expect a disclosure of those facts. The court noted that few policyholders are actually cognizant of the provisions of their policies, and the insured usually confides implicitly in the agent securing the insurance (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864) . Consequently, an insurer's duty includes the duty to inform an insured reasonably of the insured's rights and obligations under the insurance policy (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864-865) .

If an insurance agent is the agent for several companies and selects the company with which to place the insurance or insures with one of them according to directions, the insurance agent is the agent of the insured. When the agency relationship exists there is not only a fiduciary duty, but an obligation to use due care. The individual defendant, as an independent insurance agent, therefore owed a duty of due care to the insureds under agency principles. The insureds asserted that the provisions of Ins. Code § 780, Ins. Code § 781, and Ins. Code § 790.03 establish the duty of agents and brokers to disclose fully and accurately the provisions of policies they obtain for the insured. Ins. Code § 780 prohibits an insurer, or an insurer's officer or agent, from misrepresenting policy terms issued by the insurer or sought to be negotiated by the person making or permitting the representation. Ins. Code § 781 prohibits a misrepresentation for the purpose of inducing another person to take out an insurance policy. Ins. Code § 790.03 provides that it is unfair competition and an unfair and deceptive act or practice in the business of insurance to misrepresent the terms of an insurance policy (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865) .

The court agreed with the insureds, finding that those provisions state a statutory duty on the part of agents and brokers to describe accurately the provisions of the policies that they procure for their clients. The trial court had concluded that the agent owed no duty to the insureds, pursuant to Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 , which held that the general duty of reasonable care that an insurance agent owes the client does not include the obligation to procure a policy affording the client complete liability protection. However, the Jones court distinguished that case from others that held that an insurer has a duty to inform the insured of his or her rights and obligations under the policy, particularly when the insured's apparent lack of knowledge may result in a loss of benefits or a forfeiture of rights. In the instant case, the agent's duty to the insureds arose because the agent undertook to prepare an insurance proposal for the insureds to review before purchasing a policy of insurance. The agent therefore came under a duty of due care to inform the insureds accurately of the policy provisions. The cover letter described the coverage on the building as "All Risk" except for perils on the exclusion list; the proposal also stated that coverage is "All Risk" subject to the exclusions listed; and the exclusion list did not expressly or impliedly contain the loss in question.

The court declined to state as a matter of law that the disclaimer in the proposal is sufficient to override and nullify the exclusion list, and concluded that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the agent negligently misrepresented the terms of the policy to the insureds (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866) . With regard to the cause of action for breach of contract, the trial court granted summary judgment because of undisputed evidence that the insureds had requested coverage similar to their previous policy, which excluded losses caused by water backing up through sewers or drains. The court of appeal held that the insureds' request for similar coverage was merely an invitation to the agent to make an offer to provide coverage for their building. By the proposal, the agent offered to obtain "All Risk" coverage subject to specific exclusions, which did not include that for the damage that occurred. When the insureds accepted the offer, a binding contract was formed obligating the agent to obtain the coverage outlined in the proposal. The trial court's granting of the summary judgment motion was therefore in error (199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 867) .

[d] Insured Entitled to Reasonably Rely on Agent's Representations Regarding Scope of Coverage

In Clement v. Smith (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 39, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 , an insurance agent represented to an insured that there was coverage under the insured's liability policy for possible litigation arising out of the insured's breach of contract. When litigation between the insured and athird party ensued, the insurer denied coverage. The insured then sued the insurance agent for negligent misrepresentation. The trial court found in favor of the insured. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the insured's reliance was reasonable because an insured should be able to rely on an agent's representations of coverage without independently verifying the accuracy of those representations by examining the relevant policy provisions, unless the representation is equivocal or some caution or warning is given. The court further held that causation was established because the misrepresentations caused the insured to forego procuring additional insurance that would have covered the claims in question.

[e] Agent Prohibited From Misrepresenting Policy Terms

Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 , is discussed in § 120.383[3][c].

[f] Misrepresentation to Induce Another to Take Out Policy Prohibited

Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 858, 245 Cal. Rptr. 211 , is discussed in § 120.383[3][c].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsTypesInsurance Agent & Insurance CompanyInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & Brokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.384

§ 120.384 Agent Breached Duty to Insured to Explain Policy Limitations When Silence Would Mislead Insured to Believe Certain Coverage Existed

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURED[, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT], BECAUSE HE/SHE BREACHED HIS/HER DUTY TO PLAINTIFF BY FAILING TO EXPLAIN LIMITING PROVISIONS OF THE POLICY UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES THAT CAUSED PLAINTIFF TO BELIEVE ERRONEOUSLY THAT PLAINTIFF WAS COVERED FOR THE RISK THAT RESULTED IN AN UNINSURED LOSS.

Agent Breached Duty to Explain Limiting Provisions if Silence Is Misleading Under Circumstances. An insurance agent may be liable for damages arising from the insured's lack of coverage if the agent negligently failed to explain limiting provisions of the policy under circumstances in which the agent's silence misled the insuredinto believing that certain coverage existed (Westrick v. State Farm Ins. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 691-693, 187 Cal. Rptr. 214).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insured's insurance agent owes him or her a duty to explain limiting provisions of a policy when the agent's silence would mislead the insured under the circumstances [see Westrick v. State Farm Ins. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 691-693, 187 Cal. Rptr. 214] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is liable to the insured for independent torts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint or a defense motion for summary judgment in an action brought by an insured that states tort causes of action against an insurer's agent or employee. For use in this context, these points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers or summary judgment motions generally.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that the agent's failure to explain certain limiting policy provisions to the insured resulted in the insured's belief that certain coverage existed, and that a subsequent loss damaged the insured because it arose from the same risk that the insured mistakenly believed was covered under the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposinga motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Breached Duty to Explain Limiting Provisions if Silence Is Misleading Under Circumstances

In Westrick v. State Farm Ins. (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 187 Cal. Rptr. 214 , an insured brought an action against his insurance agent for negligence based on the agent's failure to explain a limiting provision in his automobile liability policy, to seek recovery of damages arising from an accident resulting in losses not covered under the policy. The insured planned to cover a new six-wheel vehicle he had purchased under a "30-day automatic coverage" clause in his insurance policy, which provided provisional insurance for new vehicles purchased by existing customers of the insurer. When the insured called to notify his insurance agent thathe had purchased a new vehicle, his agent declined to take down additional information about the vehicle purchased, and failed to inform him of an exclusion in his four six-wheel vehicles. Believing he was covered, insured let his son drive the six-wheel vehicle the following day. The vehicle was in an accident and insured suffered an uninsured loss. The insured and his son brought an action against the insured's agent and the insurer, seeking relief for damages under theories of negligent misrepresentation and negligence. The trial court entered a directed verdict for the defendants, holding that the defendants owed no duty to warn the insured of lack of coverage, as a matter of law. The insured and his son appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that under the circumstances, the agent could be held liable in tort for failing to explain the limiting provisions under the policy (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 691-693) . The court noted that at trial, the insured's regular agent testified that he could not recall any conversation about automatic coverage on a jeep truck. He stated that before the accident, he did not know if automatic coverage applied to commercial vehicles, and would have had to obtain that information from his home office. He also stated that he did not know if the insurer would have been willing to insure the welding truck. He did admit that he had power to bind coverage on a pickup truck used in the agricultural real estate business. He further testified that he and his father worked in the same office and used the same telephone number, but represented different clients. The two agents routinely answered each other's telephone calls in the other's absence and wrote insurance or handled claims for the other's clients. He stated that he thought his father's conversation with the insured took place a day later than the insured asserted it did, and that he did not learn of the call until the day after the accident. The agent's father also testified that the telephone conversation took place the day after the date specified by the insured. He stated that he could have issued a binder on behalf of his son provided the vehicles met the company's underwriting standards, and that he did not discuss the matter further because the insured told him he preferred to speak to his son rather than to him.

An insurance broker who testified as an expert stated that according to the standard of care in the insurance industry, the agent's father had a duty to inquire whether the vehicles were covered under the existing policy and to warn the insured not to drive them until insurance was procured. He said that he would have issued a binder on the pickup truck if the client had presented certain equipment certifications. An underwriter of the insurer testified that his company generally insured six-wheel vehicles, but declined to insure the welding truck when the insured's agent ultimately spoke to him about it. The court of appeal noted that a jury could have found that the agent told the insured that the jeep truck he had intended to buy would be automatically insured under his policy. The court furthernoted that the agent's father understood the purpose of the telephone call from the insured but "ignored the situation," and that the insured was unaware of the policy exclusion regarding six-wheel vehicles, relying on the expertise of his agent's father. Inasmuch as he had not been told anything to the contrary, he reasonably believed that his new trucks, just as the pickup truck, were automatically insured for 30 days. Had he known the welding truck was not covered, he would not have allowed his son to drive it until he had obtained insurance for it.

The court concluded that the evidence, if believed by a jury, would have sustained a finding of the agent's negligence. The agents asserted that the insured never requested insurance, and even if he did, he requested it of his regular agent, not that agent's father, on whom he did not rely as his agent. The court disagreed, holding that the insured's telephone conversation to his agent's father communicated with sufficient clarity his desire to obtain coverage for the two vehicles. When the insured discovered that his agent was absent, he began to describe the vehicles to his agent's father, which indicated the insured's reliance on that agent's knowledge and expertise in his regular agent's absence (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 690) . Moreover, the two agents were each other's agents by mutual agreement, each having the power to respond to requests for insurance by the other's clients. As against a principal, both principal and agent are deemed to have notice of whatever either has notice of, and ought, in good faith and the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, to communicate to the other. (The court declined to say whether the insured's cause of action is defeated as a matter of law because he could not rely on the expertise of his agent's father, or because the agents had no notice of each other's conduct.) The agents also asserted that an insurance agent cannot be liable for damages arising from a client's lack of coverage unless the agent expressly promised to obtain the insurance but negligently failed to do so. They argued that neither agent ever promised to procure coverage for the welding truck, that the agent's statements concerning automatic coverage related solely to a four-wheel pickup truck, and that the regular agent's father made no promises or representations of any kind.

The court noted, however, that although an insurance agent who promises to procure insurance will indeed be liable for his or her negligent failure to do so, it does not follow that he or she can avoid liability for foreseeable harm caused by his or her silence or inaction merely because of a lack of an express promise to assume responsibility. The court analyzed previous cases that recognized that a disparity of knowledge may impose an affirmative duty of disclosure (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 691) . Those cases have set forth circumstances under which an insurer owes an affirmative duty of disclosure to the insured (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 692) . The insured's request for insurance, his previous questions and long relationship with his insurance agency, and the foreseeability of harm obligated his agent'sfather to respond to the request with further inquiries. The agent's father knew more concerning the scope of the automatic-coverage clause than the insured did. Under the circumstances, the court found it only "just and equitable" to require him to explain the limiting provisions to the insured.

The court found no reason to distinguish between the misfeasance of giving erroneous information and the nonfeasance of giving no information at all. Given a relation involving a duty of care irrespective of a contract, a tort may result as well from acts of omission as of commission in the fulfillment of the duty recognized by law. The insured presented sufficient evidence to warrant a jury determination on the questions of the agents' duty, the foreseeability of harm, and the connection between the agents' conduct and the insured's loss (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 692-693) . The fact that the agent's conduct consisted of inaction instead of a wrongful action is not determinative. The court also rejected the agents' assertion that the insured could not reasonably assume his policy covering four-wheel passenger vehicles also applied to a six-wheel commercial truck. The insured's previous inquiry regarding coverage of the jeep truck, his attempt to furnish the agent with identifying information regarding the purchased vehicles, and the agent's response that the information was not necessary constitute evidence that would support a jury finding in favor of the insured (137 Cal. App. 3d 685, 693) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & BrokersTortsBusiness TortsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.385

§ 120.385 Agent Liable to Insurer for Negligently Inducing Insurer to Provide Coverage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURER BECAUSE HE/SHE NEGLIGENTLY INDUCED PLAINTIFF TO PROVIDE INSURANCE COVERAGE.

Agent Liable to Insurer for Loss Resulting From Negligent Inducement to Provide Coverage. If an insurance agent negligently induces an insurer to assume coverage on which it suffers a loss, the agent is liable (United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 594, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insurer. The basis of these points and authorities is that insurer's agent is liable to the insurer for negligent inducement to provide coverage to an insured, resulting in loss to the insurer [see United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 594, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent is liable to the insurer for losses resulting from the agent's negligent inducement to provide coverage. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that the terms of the insurance contract agreed to by the agent were unreasonable according to the standards of the insurance industry, causing the plaintiff to assume an unreasonable risk of coverage under the circumstances and resulting in loss to the plaintiff.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insurer's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by the insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavitsor declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Liable to Insurer for Loss Resulting From Negligent Inducement to Provide Coverage

In United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770 , an insurer sued its corporate agent and an officer of that corporation to recover damages arising from losses caused by negligence in contracting with a particular insured. The insurer, an out-of-state corporation, entered into a general agency contract with a licensed corporate insurance agent in California. Under the terms of the agreement, the agent had authority to solicit and underwrite proposals for insurance, to determine the premium rate, and to issue contracts of insurance on the insurer's behalf. The president and principal executive officer of the corporate agent issued a liability policy in October 1961 to a particular company and its subsidiaries. The risk under the policy was "self-rated" and was not measurable by any published standard or comparable rate. The insurer canceled that policy in 1963 because of excessive-loss history. In 1965 the insurer filed an action against the insured seeking rescission of the insurance contract on the basis of allegations that the insured misrepresented its projected loss ratio; the action resulted in judgment for the insured, and no appeal was taken. The insurersubsequently filed an action against the corporate agent and the agent's president, stating several causes of action. The trial court entered judgment for the insurer against both the corporate and individual defendants, on the cause of action in negligence, based on issuance of the policy at the premium rate established by the defendants. The defendants appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the judgment with respect to the corporate defendant and reversed with respect to the individual defendant (1 Cal. 3d 586, 599) . The defendants argued that the evidence did not support the findings of negligence. The trial court found that during the time the agency relationship existed, defendants owed a duty to the insurer to exercise reasonable care in handling the insurer's business and, in the investigation and underwriting of each insurance risk, also to make a reasonable effort to produce a profit for the insurer. Several months before issuing the policy in question, the individual defendant had carried on negotiations with that insured's broker, and had been supplied with current, accurate, and detailed underwriting information concerning the risk of that company dating back several years. The individual defendant reviewed and analyzed the information personally. The trial court received evidence concerning the custom and practice in the insurance industry regarding "self-rated" insurance risks and found that in the exercise of reasonable care, the defendants should have known that the policy would probably result in substantial financial loss to the insurer, because the premium rate, compared to reasonable calculations under industry standards, was excessively low (1 Cal. 3d 586, 592) .

The Supreme Court noted that actionable negligence involves a legal duty to use due care, a breach of that duty, and the breach as the proximate or legal cause of the resulting injury. The defendant corporation was a fiduciary to the insurer during the existence of the agency agreement. A professional agent is required to have the particular knowledge and to exercise the particular skill and diligence expected of it. If an insurance agent negligently induces an insurer to assume coverage on which it suffers a loss, the agent is liable. The Court further noted that liability is not incurred by a mere error of judgment in the exercise of discretion unless the error is based on want of care or diligence. With respect to the individual defendant, however, the Court found that as an officer of the corporate agency, he was not responsible to a third person for negligence amounting to mere nonfeasance, regarding a breach of duty owing to the corporation alone (1 Cal. 3d 586, 594-595) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesAgentsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.386

§ 120.386 Agent Liable to Insurer for Extra-Contractual Damages Incurred by Insurer as Result of Agent's Wrongful Conduct Resulting in Insurer's Denial of Underlying Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS INSURER'S _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE], IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF INSURER FOR THE EXTRA-CONTRACTUAL DAMAGES INCURRED BY PLAINTIFF IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S WRONGFUL CONDUCT CAUSED PLAINTIFF TO DENY THE UNDERLYING CLAIM.

A. Agent's Liability for Losses Incurred by Principal. An insurance agent is liable for all losses incurred by its principal, the insurance company, as a result of the agent's conduct, when the agent's acts are the legal cause of the insurer's injury, amount to a breach of the agent's duty to its principal, and no fault is attributable to the insurer (Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135).

B. Extra-Contractual Damages. Liability of an insurance agent for damages incurred by its principal, the insurance company, as a result of the agent's conduct extends to amounts incurred by the insurer to settle an action arising out of the insurer's denial of an insurance claim, even when the amount of the settlement exceeds the limits of the underlying policy, provided that those damages are solely attributable to the agent's breach of duty to the insurer. Under these circumstances, public policy does not preclude imposition of liability (Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355-1356, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insurer. The basis of these points and authorities is that an insurance agent is liable to an insurer for damages incurred by the insurer as a result of the agent's wrongful conduct with respect to an underlying policy or claim. The agent'sconduct may be negligent, or may consist of misrepresentations or other conduct.

The damages sought by the insurer may exceed the policy limits of the underlying policy in appropriate instances, and may be based on amounts expended by the insurer to settle or otherwise dispose of the underlying claim. Authority permitting the insurer to recover damages in excess of the underlying policy limits in this situation is based on a fact pattern in which the insurer's denial of the underlying claim was found to be wholly the agent's fault. In that case, the absence of any wrongful conduct by the insurer negated the agent's argument that the agent was, in effect, being held liable for the insurer's bad faith [see Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355-1356, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 (discussed in § 120.386[3][a])]. However, if an insurer is found to bear some measure of culpability for the conduct that resulted in settlement of the underlying action, it is possible that such a public policy argument might generate a different result [see Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1356, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 , in which the court repeatedly stressed a jury finding that the insurer was not at fault].

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Specifically, counsel should set forth facts showing that the insurance agent's conduct was negligent or intentional and that this conduct misled the insurer into taking the actions that caused the insurer to incur liability. Counsel should also set forth any facts showing that the agent's actions were the sole reason why the insurer denied the underlying claim or took whatever other actions caused the insurer to incur liability, and that no independent fault is attributable to the insurer.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.380 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insurer's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by the insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizableevidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary

Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent's Liability for Losses Incurred by Principal

In Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 , a life insurance agent who did not handle property insurance requested that defendant insurance agent, who did handle property insurance, obtain insurance covering an apartment building owned by one of the life insurance agent's clients. Defendant filled out the insurance application, but neglected to describe the apartment building as the insured property and also gave the owner's residence as his mailing address. As a result, the insurer issued a policy listing the residence address rather than the apartment building as the insured property. The property owner thereafter regularly paid premiums in the belief that the apartment building was insured. Months later, a routine loss-control investigation by the insurer disclosed that the property located at the listed address not an apartment building. The insurer thereafter instructed defendant to return the policy for cancellation and to obtain replacement insurance. The property owner signed a cancellation form but did not date the form. The date was later filled in by the agent, who forwarded the cancellation form to the insurer. The insurer canceled the policy butaccepted two more monthly premiums from the property owner. When the property owner received another billing from the insurer, he believed that the insurer had corrected its error and that the apartment building was still insured. As a result, no replacement insurance was ever actually obtained.

Approximately six weeks after the cancellation, a fire destroyed the apartment building. When a claim was made, defendant finally discovered the original address error in the insurance application. Defendant explained the error to the insurer and asked that the insurer reform the policy to conform to the property owner's expectations. Instead, the insurer denied coverage, stating that the policy had been cancelled before the loss was incurred and refunding the two additional monthly premiums the insured had paid.

The property owner sued the insurer and the agent for negligence, bad faith, and related claims, seeking reformation of the contract and rescission of policy cancellation, as well as compensatory and punitive damages. The insurer and agent cross-complained against each other for indemnity. During the course of the action, it was discovered that the agent rather than the owner had filled in the date on the cancellation form, bringing the validity of the cancellation into question. The insurer ultimately settled with the property owner for $1,050,000 (the policy limits were $250,000). The insurer thereafter pursued its cross-complaint against the agent for indemnity, fraud and deceit, negligence, fraud and negligence by a fiduciary, and breach of contract. Ultimately, the jury awarded the insurer the full amount of its previous settlement. The jury found that defendant was negligent when he incorrectly filled out the original application, that the insurer was not negligent, and that the agent's negligence caused the insurer damage in the amount of the policy limits. The jury also found that the agent was liable for negligent misrepresentation for improperly executing the cancellation form and failing to advise the insurer of that fact. The jury found that the latter acts caused the delay in paying the property owner's claim and resulted in the insurer's settlement with the property owner for an additional $800,000. The insurer was also awarded attorneys' fees and prejudgment interest, and the agent appealed.

On appeal, the agent argued that an insurer may not be permitted to obtain indemnity for payments made in settlement of bad faith claims. The court held that under the doctrine of equitable indemnity, a tortfeasor may obtain partial indemnity from another tortfeasor on a comparative fault basis, with the injury borne by each individual tortfeasor in proportion to his or her respective fault. Under the facts, the court was satisfied that the insurer's indemnity cause of action arose out of the agent's own negligence and negligent misrepresentations, and that the agent was not being held liable for the insurer's bad faith (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354) . It further held that an insurer may recover damages paid in settlement ofa delayed payment of an insured's claim as a result of its agent's negligent acts. Under the facts presented, the agent's actions were the legal cause of the delay, and no fault was attributed to the insurer. The agent had breached duties owed to the insurer as the agent's principal, specifically the duties to exercise due care in filling out the insurance application and to accurately represent the facts of the cancellation to the insurer (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354-1355) . The court rejected the agent's contention that public policy considerations precluded application of the doctrine of equitable indemnity under the facts presented (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355-1356) . Accordingly, the judgment against the agent was affirmed.

[b] Extra-Contractual Damages

The facts and holding in Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 , are discussed in § 120.386[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsDuties & LiabilitiesGeneral OverviewInsurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityPayment Delays & Denials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.387-120.389

[Reserved]

§§ 120.387[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.390

§ 120.390 Insurer Has No Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage Limits Absent Promise to the Contrary

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS PLAINTIFF'S INSURER, IS NOT LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR LOSSES RESULTING FROM PLAINTIFF'S INADEQUATE COVERAGE UNDER THE INSURANCE POLICY, BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS UNDER NO DUTY TO ADVISE PLAINTIFF OF THE ADEQUACY OF PLAINTIFF'S COVERAGE UNDER THE POLICY AND MADE NO IMPLIED OR EXPRESS ASSERTIONS TO PLAINTIFF TO THE CONTRARY.

A. No Fiduciary Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage. An insurer's fiduciary duties are limited to those arising out of the insurance contract and do not include the duty to advise the insured regarding the adequacy of coverage limits, absent a representation that it will do so (Shultz Steel Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 522-523, 231 Cal. Rptr. 715).

B. No Special Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage. An insurer that makes no recommendations to the insured regarding liability limits owes no special duty extrinsic to theinsurance contract to recommend adequate coverage limits (Shultz Steel Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 524-525, 231 Cal. Rptr. 715).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an insured's contention that the insurer is liable to the insured for losses resulting from inadequate coverage under the insurance policy, when the insurer made no implied or express assertions to the insured that it would provide adequate coverage to meet the insured's needs [see Shultz Steel

Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 522-523, 231 Cal. Rptr. 715] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer is not liable to an insured for losses resulting from inadequate coverage under the policy.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that defendant was merely the plaintiff's insurer and in no way acted as an agent or made representations to the insured regarding adequate policy limits with regard to the risk in question.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.391 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an agent for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fiduciary Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage

In Shultz Steel Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 231 Cal. Rptr. 715 , an insured brought an action against its insurer and insurance agent for negligence and indemnity regarding inadequate liability coverage arising from injuries incurred by a third party on the insured's premises. The insured, a steel manufacturer, purchased a $500,000 liability insurance policy from the insurer through an insurance broker, which, according to undisputed facts, acted as a duly authorized agent for the insurer. The insured's liability arose from an accident on its premises in which an electrical contracting firm's employee was electrocuted and severely injured. The accident victim brought suit against the insured. While the underlying action was pending, the insured brought an action against the insurer and the broker/agent, for negligence and indemnification for any uninsured loss incurred in the underlying action. (Ultimately the third party was awarded damages in excess of $5 million.) The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment. The insured appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that an insurance carrier is not vicariously liable under general agency principles for the alleged negligence of its agent (who is also an independent broker) for the agent's failure torecommend increased liability insurance coverage. It also held that independent of the insurance contract, the insurer is not liable to the insured on a special-duty theory for failure to recommend an increase in liability insurance coverage (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 517) . The court assumed for purposes of the appeal that the agent imprudently advised the insured regarding the amount of liability insurance coverage. Therefore, the main issue on appeal was whether the insurer became vicariously liable to the insured for the carelessness of the agent under the doctrine of respondeat superior.

The court noted the general rule that an agent is one who represents the principal in dealings with third persons, and the principal is liable for the torts of the agent under the doctrine of respondeat superior. However, for this liability to be imposed on an innocent principal, the agent's tort must have been committed during the course and scope of the agent's employment (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518) . A principal may be liable for the torts of its agent if the principal directed or authorized the agent to perform the tortious act; and the principal may become liable for an action not originally authorized if the principal ratifies the act. The court discussed previous cases in which an insured alleged that the insurer breached a fiduciary duty arising outside the insurance contract (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 521) . The controlling case, Gibson v. Government Employees Ins. Co. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 441, 208 Cal. Rptr. 511 , held that an insurer's duty to advise the insured could not be based on the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, because the covenant extends only to the limits of the insurance coverage afforded by the insurer to the insured, that is, of insurance entered into between it and its insured. Gibson also held that the duties the insureds sought to impose on the insurer could not be based on the principles of strict fiduciary responsibility, because those duties do not apply to conduct extrinsic to the insurance contract (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 522) .

Applying Gibson to the instant case, the court concluded that the insurer owed no duty to advise the insured regarding the adequacy of its liability coverage limits. There was no evidence that the insurer made representations to either the broker/agent or the insured that the insurer would advise the insured regarding the appropriate liability coverage limits. On the contrary, the evidence showed that the insurer did not make those representations. The court concluded that, as a matter of law, there is no triable issue regarding whether the insurer owed a duty to advise the insured. The court also found that the insurer did not ratify the broker/agent's actions in causing the insured to carry inadequate coverage. Although the insurer was aware of the insured's $500,000 policy, evidence indicated that it had no way of knowing whether the insured had umbrella or excess coverage with another insurer; and no evidence showed that the insurer knew the $500,000 limits were inadequate or that the insured hadnot rejected suggestions to increase its coverage. The final issue was whether independent of the insurance contract, the insurer is liable to the insured, on a special-duty theory, for failure to recommend an increase in liability insurance coverage; or, stated in other terms, whether the insurer owed the insured a direct duty to recommend that it increase its policy limits.

The insured alleged, inter alia, that the insurer was periodically responsible for providing renewal quotations and making requested coverage changes for its general liability policy, that it made safety recommendations after periodic inspections of the insured premises, and that on one occasion, it recommended that the limits be increased on property damages (but not on liability coverage). However, the court noted that no evidence was offered to contradict evidence that the insurer did not make liability limits recommendations (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 524) . There was no indication that the inspections or any other alleged activities had anything to do with liability coverage recommendations; they dealt rather with plant safety matters and factors relevant to the determination of premium quotations.

The court noted that in those situations in which the insurer gave advice regarding other types of insurance coverage, the insurer discussed the matter with the broker/agent, not with the insured, and the advice related to property coverage, not general liability coverage limits recommendations. Therefore, the evidence showed that the insured never received advice from the insurer relating to liability coverage limits recommendations, nor did the insurer make liability limits recommendations to any insured (187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 525) . Consequently, there is no triable issue of fact regarding whether the insurer owed a special duty to the insured extrinsic to the insurance contract.

[b] No Special Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage

Shultz Steel Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 513, 231 Cal. Rptr. 715 , is discussed in § 120.390[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & BrokersInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.391

§ 120.391 Insurance Agent Owes No Duty to Insured to Provide Complete Protection Under Insurance Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS PLAINTIFF'S INSURANCE AGENT, HAS NO DUTY TO PLAINTIFF TO PROVIDE COMPLETE PROTECTION FORANY EVENTUAL LOSS INCURRED BY PLAINTIFF, AND MADE NO IMPLIED OR EXPRESS PROMISE TO PLAINTIFF TO ASSUME THAT DUTY.

A. Agent Does Not Have Duty to Provide Complete Protection. The general duty of reasonable care that an insurance agent owes the client does not include the obligation to procure a policy affording the client complete protection (Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 .

B. Mere Agency Relationship Does Not Imply Duty to Advise of Additional Coverage. The mere existence of an agency relationship between an insurance agent and an insured imposes no duty on the agent to advise the insured of the advantages of additional coverage (Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717).

[Optional] C. Previous Reliance on Agent's Advice Insufficient to Impose Greater Duty. The mere allegation in a complaint that an insured has purchased insurance from an insurance agent for several years and followed his or her advice on certain insurance matters is insufficient to imply the existence of a greater duty (Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717).

[Optional] D. Agent's Assurance That Coverage Is Adequate Does Not Imply Broader Agency Relationship. An insured's request for sufficient coverage, and an insurance agent's assurance that a policy provides adequate coverages do not, by themselves, imply an expanded principal-agent relationship (Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an insured's contention that the insurance agent has a duty to the insured to provide complete coverage under the insurance policy [see Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurance agent owes no duty to the insured to provide complete coverage. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint brought by the insured, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrer motions generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that defendant did not expressly or impliedly represent to plaintiffs that the insurance protection under the policy was adequate.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.390 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an agent for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Does Not Have Duty to Provide Complete Protection

In Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 , the parents of an injured child brought a negligence action against their landlords, seeking damages arising from a swimming pool accident. The parties entered into a stipulated judgment for an amount far in excess of the applicable limits under the defendant's liability insurance policy, and the plaintiffs agreed not to execute on the judgment, provided the defendants would pay them a portion of the judgment and transfer any legal rights they had against the insurance brokers that had sold them the liability policy. The insureds filed a cross complaint against the brokerage firm and the individual agent (referred to subsequently as the agents) that sold them the policy, alleging breach of fiduciary duty based on their failure to provide liability insurance sufficient to protect their personal assets and satisfy the underlying judgment. The insureds alleged that the agents held themselves out as insurance consultants and experts, had taken care of their insurance needs for 10 years, during which time the insureds relied on their expertise, and had "expressly and impliedly" represented to the insureds that the insurance protection under the policy was adequate. The agents demurred, arguing that they did not have a duty to provide the insureds with liability insurance sufficient to "cover every conceivable eventuality" and that therefore the complaint failed to state a cause of action for negligence. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. The insureds appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the general duty of reasonable care that an insurance agent owes the client does not include the obligation to procure a policy affording the client complete protection (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956) . In a case of first impression, the court noted that it needed to determine whether the agents owed the insureds a legal duty of care to provide them with a policy of liability insurance sufficient to protect their personal assets and to satisfy any judgment against them arising out of the insureds' negligent acts (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953) . Ordinarily, an insurance agent assumes only those duties normally found in any agency relationship. This includes the obligation to use reasonable care, diligence, and judgment in procuring the insurance requested by an insured. The mere existence of that relationship imposes no duty on an agent to advise the insured on specific insurance matters. An agent may point out to the insured the advantages of additional coverage and may ferret out additional facts from the insured applicable to that coverage, but is under no obligation to do so; nor is the insured under an obligation to respond.

The court noted that an agent may assume additional duties by an express agreement or a holding out (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954) . In thatcase, the agent may be liable to the insured for losses that resulted as a breach of that special duty. The insureds relied in part on Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164 , which held that an agent is liable in negligence to the insured for failing to obtain coverage requested by the insured after asserting that it has done so. That case is distinguishable, however, because the agents procured the requested coverage (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 955) . The general duty of reasonable care that an insurance agent owes the insured does not include the obligation to procure a policy affording the client complete liability protection. The court analyzed the complaint to determine whether it alleged facts from which a special or greater duty could reasonably be inferred. The complaint did not allege the existence of an express agreement creating a broader agency relationship in which the agents were to advise, suggest, and procure liability insurance in an amount sufficient to protect their personal assets and satisfy any judgment against them arising out of the insureds' negligence.

The mere allegation in a complaint that an insured has purchased insurance from an insurance agent for several years and followed the agent's advice on certain insurance matters is insufficient to imply the existence of a greater duty. Nor can the existence of a broader agency relationship warranting the imposition of a greater duty be reasonably inferred from the complaint's allegation that the agents had assured the insureds of the adequacy of their liability coverage. An insured's request for "sufficient coverage" and an agent's assurance that the policy provided "adequate" coverage do not, in and by themselves, imply an expanded principal-agency relationship. Purchasers of insurance generally seek "sufficient coverage." To imply the existence of a broader agency agreement from that exchange would in effect make the agent a "blanket insurer for his principal." The court further stated that an insurance policy arises out of the insured's desire to be protected in a particular manner against a specific kind of obligation. It is the insured's responsibility to advise the agency of the insurance he or she wants, including the limits of the policy to be issued. Ordinarily, the person seeking liability insurance knows better than the agent the extent of his or her personal assets, and the premium the insured can afford or is willing to pay.

The complaint did not allege that the agents knew the extent of the insureds' personal assets (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 956-957) . The insureds merely stated that "financial information" of theirs was made available to the agents. The court found that allegation too vague and conclusionary to support the implication of a broader duty. Moreover, the complaint did not allege that liability coverage for the amount of the underlying judgment was available for the insured property and, if so, whether the insureds would have been willing to pay the premium for it. Nor did the complaint allege that the insured had delegated to the agents the burden of determining liability coverage in an amount that would have afforded them completeprotection from any judgment arising out of a third-party negligence action. Absent allegations such as those, the insureds retained the responsibility of deciding how much liability insurance to carry and how much premium to pay. The court concluded that the cross complaint did not allege facts from which it could reasonably infer that the agents were under a duty to procure complete liability protection for the insureds. To hold otherwise would drastically and unilaterally expand the principal-agent relationship (189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 957) .

[b] Mere Agency Relationship Does Not Imply Duty to Advise of Additional Coverage

Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 , is discussed in § 120.391[3][a].

[c] Previous Reliance on Agent's Advice Insufficient to Impose Greater Duty

Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 , is discussed in § 120.391[3][a].

[d] Agent's Assurance That Coverage Is Adequate Does Not Imply Broader Agency Relationship

Jones v. Grewe (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 950, 234 Cal. Rptr. 717 , is discussed in § 120.391[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & Brokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.392

§ 120.392 Insurer's Agent or Employee Is Not Party to Insurance Contract and Therefore Is Not Subject to Liability for Constructive Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS THE _____ [AGENT or EMPLOYEE] OF PLAINTIFF'S INSURER, IS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT AND THEREFORE IS NOT SUBJECT TO LIABILITY FOR A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD BROUGHT BY PLAINTIFF.

Agents and Employees of Insurer Not Subject to Liability for Constructive Fraud. An insured cannot state a cause of action for constructive fraud against the agents or employees of an insurer when only the insurer is in a fiduciary relationship with the insured(Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 517, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to the insured for constructive fraud, on the ground that the agent or employee does not have a fiduciary relationship to the insured [see (Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 517, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurer's agent or employee is not liable to the insured for constructive fraud. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint brought by an insured with regard to a cause of action for constructive fraud, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that defendant was not in a fiduciary relationship with plaintiff but was merely an agent or employee representing the insurer, which was the only party that had a fiduciary duty to plaintiff.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.390 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by an insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supportedby cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (h), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Not Subject to Liability for Constructive Fraud

The facts and procedural background of Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 169 Cal. Rptr. 478 , are discussed in § 120.380[3][a]. The court held that an agent or employee of an insurer is liable to an insured for wrongful and unprivileged acts committed against the insured that are not based on a breach of the insurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing arising under the insurance contract (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 510-511) . With respect to the insured's cause of action for constructive fraud against the insurance agents, the court affirmed the trial court's sustaining of defendant's demurrer. The court noted that unlike actual fraud, constructive fraud depends on the existence of a fiduciary relationship of some kind, and that relationship must be alleged (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 516-517) .

Although the insured did not contend that a fiduciary relationship existed between him and the insurance agents, he did contend that the confidential relationship that existed between those defendants and the insurer (which does have a confidential relationship with the insured as his insurer), imposes on the agents a duty to refrain from assisting in the implementation of the scheme to deny him his disability benefits, as wellas the duty to disclose the scheme to him. Active concealment or suppression of facts by a nonfiduciary is the equivalent of a false representation, that is, actual fraud. However, the elements of a representation and falsity are absent from constructive fraud, which consists of the breach of the fiduciary duty of disclosure of relevant matters arising from the relationship. Inasmuch as there was no fiduciary relationship alleged between the insured and anyone other than the insurer, and there were no facts alleged sufficient to show that a confidential relationship existed between the insured and the agents, the demurrer to the cause of action for constructive fraud was properly sustained by the trial court (111 Cal. App. 3d 498, 517) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesAgentsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationConstructive FraudGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
1. Liability of Insurance Agent or Employee

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.393-120.399

[Reserved]

§§ 120.393[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.400

§ 120.400 Broker Negligently Obtained Inadequate Coverage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT, AS PLAINTIFF'S INSURANCE BROKER, IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR LOSSES CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S NEGLIGENT CONDUCT IN OBTAINING INADEQUATE COVERAGE UNDER THE INSURANCE POLICY.

Broker Liable for Negligently Obtaining Inadequate Coverage. An insurance broker who negligently represents an insured with respect to obtaining the correct amount of coverage is subject to liability to the insured for loss suffered by the insured due to the negligence (Reserve Ins. Co. v. Pisciotta (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 800, 816-817, 180 Cal. Rptr. 628, 640 P.2d 764).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an insurance broker is liable to the insured, or a third party who had a claim against the insured, for losses resulting from the broker's negligent conduct in obtaining inadequate insurance coverage [see Reserve Ins. Co. v. Pisciotta (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 800, 816-817, 180 Cal. Rptr. 628, 640 P.2d 764 ; Nowlon v. Koram Ins. Ctr., Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1441, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurance agent owes the insured a duty to inform him or her accurately of the policy provisions. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to summary judgment motions generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related California Forms of Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing the existence of a risk to plaintiff of which the defendant had knowledge, or should have had knowledge, which remained uninsured or inadequately insured because of defendant's negligence, to the plaintiff's detriment.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.401 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For points and authorities regarding fraud generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For points and authorities regarding the liability of an agent to a third party for wrongful acts, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker Liable for Negligently Obtaining Inadequate Coverage

In Reserve Ins. Co. v. Pisciotta (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 800, 180 Cal. Rptr. 628, 640 P.2d 764 , an insurer brought a declaratory relief action regarding the application of the "family exclusion" in a marine liability policy; additional issues were litigated concerning potential liabilities of the insured, his broker, and the primary and excess insurers. The insured obtained primary and excess coverage from two different insurers for his boat. The primary policy was in effect until May 11, 1976. The excess policy contained a "maintenance clause," which required the insured to maintain underlying coverage "not more restrictive" than the coverage under the current primary policy, which provided a single limit of $300,000 per occurrence and contained no family exclusion. The insured and his broker discussed the possibility of obtaining replacement coverage on the expiration of the existing primary policy, but the insured elected to allow the primary policy to lapse because he planned to sell the boat. When he later decided to use the boat, he arranged for the broker to obtain replacement primary coverage.

The broker obtained coverage effective June 26, 1976, on which date the insured's stepson was severely injured when the insured's boat, operated by the insured, collided with another boat. The replacement policy contained a family exclusion and provided "split limit" coverage, instead of the "single limit" coverage provided in the previous policy. The new policy limits were $100,000 per occurrence for injury to one person, and $300,000 per occurrence for injuries to more than one person. The stepson, a minor, filed a complaint through his guardian ad litem for damages against the insured and the driver of the other boat. The primary insurer filed a declaratory relief action seeking a ruling that the family exclusion in the policy applied to the stepson, relieving the insurer of a duty to indemnify the insured regarding liability for the stepson's injuries. The inured filed a cross complaint seeking the following alternative declarations: (1) if the exclusion did not apply and the insurer was consequently required to provide $100,000 of primary coverage, either the excess or primary insurer was responsible for any liability of the insured from $100,000 up to $300,000; or (2) if the exclusion did apply, the broker was responsible for any liability up to $300,000 because of his negligence in procuring a replacement policy containing the family exclusion.

The excess insurer did not dispute that it provided coverage for any liability in excess of $300,000. The trial court found the exclusion to be ambiguous regarding application to the stepson, and therefore interpreted the exclusion in favor of the insured, concluding that the primary insurerwas required to provide coverage up to its policy limit of $100,000. Following a jury trial, both the broker and the insured were found negligent in obtaining an inadequate replacement policy, and the broker was found liable for $150,000 of the resultant gap in coverage, which represented 75 percent of the fault. The jury also found that the broker was not negligent in obtaining a replacement policy containing a family exclusion. The trial court also ruled ("inexplicably") that the excess insurer was liable for indemnification of the insured's portion (25 percent) of responsibility for the coverage gap of $200,000. (The opinion does not state the amount of damages determined in the underlying suit brought by the stepson.) All parties appealed. The California Supreme Court modified the judgment with respect to the amount of the excess insurer's liability. Noting the primary insurer's postjudgment insolvency, and the insured's breach of the maintenance clause, the Court held that the excess insurer's duty to indemnify the insured was limited to the first $100,000 of the insured's liability (30 Cal. 3d 800, 812-816). The Court affirmed the judgment with respect to, inter alia, the finding of negligence against the broker (30 Cal. 3d 800, 816-817) . The broker challenged the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the finding that he was negligent in procuring a replacement primary policy containing lower limits than those in the previous primary policy.

The Court stated that evidence of the broker's negligence was apparent. He testified that he was a qualified broker with 20 years' experience, that he understood his duty to inform the insured of any coverage problems, and that he failed to review the insured's file before obtaining coverage on the day of the accident. The broker informed the insured of the alternative insurance and of the fact that the new policy would have the "split limit" coverage. However, he did not tell the insured that the new coverage differed from the previous primary coverage, or that the excess policy required him to maintain underlying coverage of $300,000. Although the broker realized that if the insured obtained the new primary policy, a gap in coverage would be possible, he never alerted the insured to that danger. The Court determined that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the verdict. Therefore, because the broker was found to be 75 percent responsible for the $200,000 gap in coverage, he is liable in the amount of $150,000 (30 Cal. 3d 800, 816-817) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsDuties & LiabilitiesNegligent Acts of AgentsLiability of AgentsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company

OperationsRepresentativesBrokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.401

§ 120.401 Presumption of Negligence for Obtaining Insurance From Out-of-State Carrier

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT, AS PLAINTIFF'S INSURANCE BROKER, IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR LOSSES CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S NEGLIGENT CONDUCT BECAUSE OF THE PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE IN OBTAINING INSURANCE FROM AN OUT-OF-STATE CARRIER.

Presumption of Negligence for Obtaining Insurance From Out-of-State Carrier. An insurance broker who obtains insurance from an out-of-state carrier, unless the sale is made through a surplus line broker, (see Ins. Code § 703, Ins. Code § 1761, Ins. Code § 1776, Pen. Code § 439) may be presumed negligent under Evidence Code Section 669(a), and therefore be held liable for losses caused by the insolvency of the out-of-state carrier (Nowlon v. Koram Ins. Ctr., Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1441, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that an insurance broker is liable to the insured, or a third party who had a claim against the insured, for losses resulting from the broker's negligent conduct in obtaining inadequate insurance coverage based on the presumption of negligence which arises when the broker has procured insurance from an out-of-state insurance carrier [see Nowlon v. Koram Ins. Ctr., Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1441, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the presumption of negligence.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing the existence of a risk to plaintiff of which the defendant had knowledge, or should have had knowledge, which remained uninsured or inadequately insured because of defendant's negligence in obtaining out-of-state coverage, to the plaintiff's detriment.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.400 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent . For points and authorities regarding negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Negligence for Obtaining Insurance From Out-of-State Carrier

In Nowlon v. Koram Ins. Ctr., Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683 , plaintiff was injured at his place of employment. His employer had a general liability insurance policy to insure against liability to third parties for personal injuries arising out of business activities. The insurer, brokered by the defendant, was not authorized to transact business in California and was not a member of the California Insurance Guarantee Association (CIGA). The insurer later became insolvent. Plaintiff then brought an action against defendant insurance broker, alleging that the broker should be presumed negligent based on violations of variousstatutes prohibiting the sale of insurance for an insurer that is not authorized to sell insurance in California, unless such sales are made by a surplus line broker [see Ins. Code § 703, Ins. Code § 1761, Ins. Code § 1776, and Pen. Code § 439]. Plaintiff alleged that he was damaged by defendant's negligent brokering of the insurance policy. The trial court sustained a demurrer to plaintiff's first amended complaint without leave to amend (1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1439-1440) .

The court of appeal reversed with instructions to the trial court to allow plaintiff to amend his complaint to allege that the insurance policy was not obtained by or through a surplus line broker (1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1443, 1447) . The court assumed that no surplus line broker was involved in the transaction in its discussion regarding the presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669. It found that plaintiff, as a third-party plaintiff, would have been entitled to make a claim for CIGA benefits had the insolvent insurance company been a member of CIGA (1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1444) , that the case of an insolvent insurer and a claimant with no recourse to the CIGA fund is precisely one of the types of occurrences that these prohibitive statutes [see Ins. Code § 703, Ins. Code § 1761, Ins. Code § 1776; Pen. Code § 439] were designed to prevent (1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1445) , and that the Insurance Code provisions governing contracts of insurance entered into in California generally have a central purpose not only of protecting the insured but also of safeguarding the rights of third parties who may be injured by the acts or omissions of the insured (1 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1446-1447) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsDuties & LiabilitiesNegligent Acts of AgentsLiability of AgentsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.402

§ 120.402 Broker Failed to Obtain Promised Coverage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS PLAINTIFF'S INSURANCE BROKER, IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR LOSSES CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S FAILURE TO OBTAIN COVERAGE THAT PLAINTIFF REQUESTED AND THAT DEFENDANT ASSURED PLAINTIFF IT HAD OBTAINED.

A. Broker Liable in Negligence for Failing to Obtain Promised Coverage. An insurance broker that advises an insured that it obtained coverage requested by the insured, and fails to do so, is liable to the insured in negligence for injuries proximately caused by its conduct (Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810-811, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164).

B. Broker Liable in Fraud Based on Misrepresentation That Requested Coverage Was Obtained. An insurance broker that misrepresents to the insured that it has obtained requested coverage, when in fact it failed to do so, is liable to the insured in fraud if the insured justifiably relied on the misrepresentation to the insured's detriment (Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 811, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the insured's insurance broker is liable to the insured for losses resulting from the broker's failure to obtain coverage that the insured requested and the broker promised to obtain [see Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810-811, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurance broker is liable to the insured for losses resulting from the broker's failure to obtain promised coverage. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to summary judgment motions generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that plaintiff requested that defendant, as his or her broker, obtain certain coverage, that defendant promised to do so, and that plaintiff suffered a loss resulting from lack of coverage regarding the risk in question.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.400 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer,or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent . For points and authorities regarding negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker Liable in Negligence for Failing to Obtain Promised Coverage

In Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164 , an insured brought an action against his broker, alleging negligence and fraud based on the broker's assertions to him that it had obtained requested coverage although it had failed to do so. In early 1966, the insured purchased an auto shredder, an expensive piece of equipment, for use in his scrap iron and metal business. A bank financed the purchase of the shredder through a loan that obligated the insured to make large monthly payments. While the shredder was being shipped to him, the insured contacted an officer of his insurance brokerage firm to discuss fire and extended insurance coverage on the shredder. The firm had handled his insurance needs for 10 years, and he relied on its expertise and advice regarding insurance matters.

The insured specifically requested "business interruption coverage" on the shredder, which would cover losses sustained because of its mechanical breakdown. The insured told the brokerage officer of his security obligation to the bank and explained the importance of insuring against a breakdown of the equipment. The insured alleged that the officer telephoned him on April 1, 1966, to inform him that he had obtained the type of coverage requested and that "everything would be covered" except breakdown caused by flood or earthquake. The brokerage officer sent a memo to the insurer requesting the issuance of an "all-risk" business interruption policy, containing an exclusion only for flood and earthquake; a copy of the memo was mailed to the insured. The brokerage officer testified that two days after issuing the memo, he told the insured that he had obtained the requested coverage. The insurer issued a policy that provided fire and extended coverage for loss or damage to the shredder for a three-year period, commencing April 15, 1966. It covered loss because of business interruption, but specifically excluded loss caused by a mechanical breakdown.

Neither the insured nor the broker read the policy when received. In June 1966, the shredder broke down and was out of operation for approximately one month. It broke down again in October and was inoperative for approximately two months. The insured expended in excess of $1,000 to expedite repairs during the breakdowns. In December 1966, the insurer notified the insured that the loss was not covered under the policy. The insured promptly contacted an insurance agent in Washington and obtained a premium quotation for a policy with another insurer, which provided business interruption coverage for loss arising from mechanical breakdown with no exclusions. The insured referred the paperwork to a second officer at his brokerage firm, who completed the process of obtaining the insurance. The insured filed a complaint against the brokerage firm, alleging breach of oral contract, negligence, and fraud, based on the broker's failure to obtain a business interruption policy covering mechanical breakdown. He obtained a judgment in his favor on the causes of action for negligence and fraud, and was awarded damages and prejudgment interest; the broker appealed. The insured subsequently filed a second complaint against the broker, seeking damages for loss of value of his business and stating causes of action in negligence and fraud arising out of the same facts alleged and presumably proved in the first action. The trial court sustained the broker's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, and the insured appealed. The cases were consolidated on appeal.

The court of appeal modified the first case with respect to the amount of interest awarded, and affirmed the dismissal of the second action (19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 814) . With respect to the first case (which resulted in a judgment for the insured), the court rejected the broker's contention thatthere was no causal relationship between the negligence and fraud and the damages alleged. The court noted that the foundational element of legal cause is cause in fact. It is necessary to show that the conduct contributed in some way to the injury (lack of coverage), so that "but for" the conduct, the injury would not have occurred (19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810) . If the act or omission was a substantial factor in bringing about the result, it will be regarded as a legal cause of the injury. The court noted that the insured requested coverage to insure against a breakdown of the shredder. He relied on the broker's representation that it had obtained coverage when in fact it had not. Within a few days after learning that he was not covered, he obtained the coverage elsewhere. If the broker had not misrepresented the fact of coverage under the first policy, it is reasonable to infer that the insured would have obtained the coverage from the other insurer. Indulging in all reasonable inferences from the evidence, the court concluded that the broker's conduct was a substantial factor in bringing about the harm to the insured.

The court also rejected the broker's assertion that the judgment for fraud was unsupported by evidence showing the insured's reliance on its negligent misrepresentation. The court noted that there is ample evidence to support the implied finding that the insured justifiably relied on the broker's statement that he had obtained the requested coverage. The insured had relied on the brokerage firm for years in all aspects of his insurance business. It was reasonable that the insured would accept the representations regarding coverage and not read the policy. The broker also asserted that the insured unreasonably incurred his damages by failing to read the policy.

Inasmuch as the broker did not raise contributory negligence as an affirmative defense, the issue was not before the trial court, and could not be raised on appeal. Moreover, there was no evidence on which the trial court could find that the insured could have avoided his damages by reasonable efforts not taken (19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 811). (The court proceeded to disallow the award of prejudgment interest and modified the judgment in that respect.) With respect to the second case, the court affirmed the judgment, holding that a party may not split a cause of action, using the same wrong as the basis for separate suits (19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 814) .

[b] Broker Liable in Fraud Based on Misrepresentation That Requested Coverage Was Obtained

Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164 , is discussed in § 120.402[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsDuties & LiabilitiesNegligent Acts of AgentsLiability of AgentsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesBrokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.403

§ 120.403 Insured's Reliance on Broker's Representation of Coverage Justifiable if Supported by History of Similar Reliance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURED JUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON THE BROKER'S REPRESENTATION OF COVERAGE BASED ON A HISTORY OF SIMILAR RELIANCE.

Insured's Reliance on Broker's Representation of Coverage Justifiable if Supported by History of Similar Reliance. An insured's reliance on a broker's representations regarding coverage, without reading the policy, is justifiable when the insured substantially relied on the broker regarding insurance matters over an extended period of time (Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 811, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the insured justifiably relied on the broker's representation of coverage [see Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810-811, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an insurance broker is liable to the insured for losses resulting from the broker's failure to obtain promised coverage. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to summary judgment motions generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showingthe existence of a risk to plaintiff of which the defendant had knowledge, or should have had knowledge, which remained uninsured or inadequately insured because of defendant's negligence in obtaining out-of-state coverage, to the plaintiff's detriment.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.400 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, or insurer's agent or employee, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent . For points and authorities regarding negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Reliance on Broker's Representation of Coverage Justifiable if Supported by History of Similar Reliance

Greenfield v. Insurance Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 803, 97 Cal. Rptr. 164 , is discussed in § 120.402[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBad Faith & Extracontractual LiabilityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral

OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesBrokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.404

§ 120.404 Two-Year Limitations Period Applies to Action Against Broker Based on Broker's Failure to Execute Professional Duties

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT BROKER IS TIME-BARRED BECAUSE THE APPLICABLE LIMITATIONS PERIOD FOR AN ACTION AGAINST AN INSURANCE BROKER FOR THE BROKER'S FAILURE TO EXECUTE THE BROKER'S PROFESSIONAL DUTIES IS TWO YEARS, AND THE TWO-YEAR LIMITATIONS PERIOD HAS ELAPSED.

Two-Year Limitations Period Applies to Action Against Broker for Failure to Execute Professional Duties. If the gravamen of a suit by an insured against an insurance broker is the broker's failure to execute obligations as an insurance broker, the two-year limitations period for professional negligence under Code Civ. Proc. § 339 applies (see Hydro-Mill Co., Inc. v. Hayward, Tilton & Rolapp Ins. Assocs., Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1158-1160, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an insured's contention that an insurance broker is liable to the insured for causes of action stemming from the broker's failure to execute the broker's professional duties, on the ground that the action is time-barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 339.

This form may be used by an insurance broker in various procedural contexts, such as in support of a motion for nonsuit on the ground that the action is barred by the statute of limitations. This form may also be used in a trial brief or in an appellate brief.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in §§ 120.400 and 120.402.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should show why the causes of action are essentially grounded in the insurance broker's failure toperform professional duties, assert that the two-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 339 applies, and then show that this limitations period has elapsed.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues, and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a memorandum of points and authorities in support of the insurance broker's motion for nonsuit [see, e.g., Hydro-Mill Co., Inc. v. Hayward, Tilton & Rolapp Ins. Assocs., Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1152, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against agents and brokers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion of how to combine the forms of this publication, and discussion and general forms for completing a memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Two-Year Limitations Period Applies to Action Against Broker for Failure to Execute Professional Duties

In Hydro-Mill Co., Inc. v. Hayward, Tilton & Rolapp Ins. Assocs., Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , a corporation purchased earthquake insurance through its insurance broker, but discovered following the Northridge earthquake that the broker had not obtained the full amount of coverage that the corporation had sought. Specifically, in addition to broad coverage of the location that the corporation owned, the corporation sought limited coverage for premises that it leased. Instead of providing coverage for the leased locations, and omitting coverage for physical damage to the structures as requested, the broker omitted all coverage for the leased locations. After receiving policy benefits in accordance with the policy as written, the corporation brought an action against the broker, stating causes of action for negligence, breach of oral contract, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty. During the court trial, the broker unsuccessfully moved for nonsuit on the ground thatthe causes of action were time-barred. Following a judgment for the corporation, the insurance broker appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding, among other things, that the action was been time-barred pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 339. The court stated that an agent or broker that fails to procure insurance as requested is liable for any resulting damage. Generally, an insurance agent is liable to a client in tort if the agent's intentional acts or failure to exercise reasonable care with regard to the obtaining or maintenance of insurance results in damage to the client. To determine the statute of limitations applicable to a cause of action, a court must identify the nature of the cause of action--that is, the gravamen of the cause of action. The nature of the right sued on, and not the form of action or the relief demanded, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1153) . The court proceeded to discuss all four causes of action, holding that the gravamen of each of them was the defendant's failure to execute its obligations as an insurance broker and therefore that each cause of action was governed by the two-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 339 (115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1154-1160) . The court then held that the statute of limitations began to run on the date on which the insurer offered to pay the policy amount on the insured's claim (December 9, 1994, or some 11 months following the earthquake), which was also the date on which the insurer clarified that coverage for the leased premises was excluded. The court also held that the trial court erred in holding that the limitations period was tolled until the insurer denied the claim in writing, which denial occurred in its answer to the complaint. The statute of limitations period was not tolled as to the broker while the insurer processed the claim, although the limitations period was tolled as to the insurer during the claim-processing period. Because the corporation did not file suit on or before December 9, 1996, the complaint was untimely filed (115 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 1162-1164) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesBrokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
2. Liability of Insurance Broker

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.405-120.409

[Reserved]

§§ 120.405[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
3. Liability of Insurer's Corporate Director or Officer

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.410

§ 120.410 Director or Officer of Corporate Insurance Agent Is Not Liable to Insurer for Negligent Inducement to Provide Coverage--Director or Officer Is Not Bound Individually

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, AS A _____ [DIRECTOR or OFFICER] OF PLAINTIFF'S CORPORATE INSURANCE AGENT, IS NOT INDIVIDUALLY LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR NEGLIGENT INDUCEMENT TO PROVIDE COVERAGE, BECAUSE DEFENDANT DID NOT PURPORT TO BIND HIMSELF/HERSELF INDIVIDUALLY TO THE INSURANCE CONTRACT.

Directors and Officers of Corporate Agent Not Individually Liable. Directors and officers of a corporate insurance agent are not personally liable to the insurer for negligent inducement to provide coverage regarding insurance contracts signed by them for and on behalf of the corporation unless they purport to bind themselves individually (United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 595, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a director or officer of an insurer's corporate agent is liable to the insurer for negligent inducement to provide coverage to an insured [see United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 595, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a director or officer of a corporate insurance agent is not liable to the insurer for negligent inducement to provide coverage. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment, in which case they may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to demurrers generally. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.380[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth facts showing that defendant did not purport to bind himself or herself individually to the insurance contract.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a director's or officer's memorandum of points and authorities opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication by an insurer, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For points and authorities regarding agency generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent. For points and authorities regarding negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Directors and Officers of Corporate Agent Not Individually Liable

The facts and procedural background of United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 586, 83 Cal. Rptr. 418, 463 P.2d 770 , are discussed in § 120.385[3][a]. The California Supreme Court found that a corporate insurance agent that negligently induces an insurer to assume coverage on which it suffers a loss is liable to the insurer (1 Cal. 3d 586, 594) . With respect to the individual defendant, who was the president and principal executive officer of the corporate insurance agent, the Court found no personal liability for negligence and reversed the judgment against him accordingly (1 Cal. 3d 586, 594-595) .

The relationship between the individual defendant and the insurer is distinguishable from that between the corporate defendant and the insurer. The trial court imposed liability on the individual defendant for his active participation in the tortious (negligent) act of his principal, which caused pecuniary harm to a third person. The defendant urged on appeal the he was never a fiduciary to the insurer, and owed it no duty of care. The insurer asserted that the defendant was its subagent and that it breached the duty of care arising from the relationship. However, the Court noted that no relationship of subagent was established (1 Cal. 3d 586, 594) . As president and principal officer of defendant corporation, the individual defendant was a fiduciary to and an agent of that corporation. He had a duty to the corporation to exercise his corporate powers in good faith and with a view to its interests. Directors and officers are not personally liable on contracts signed by them for and on behalf of the corporation unless they purport to bind themselves individually. His acts were done in the course and scope of his employment, for and on behalf of the corporation, and not as a contracting party.

Directors or officers of a corporation are not responsible to third persons for negligence amounting merely to nonfeasance, regarding a breach of duty owing to the corporation alone; the act must also constitute a breach of duty owed to the third person. The Court noted that liability imposed on agents for active participation in tortious acts of the principal have been mostly restricted to cases involving physical injury, not pecuniary harm, to third persons. Neither the evidence nor the findings support the conclusion that the individual defendant was personally liable to the insurer by reason of his negligent performance of his corporate duties (1 Cal. 3d 586, 595) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
F. Tort Actions Against Insurance Agents, Employees, and Brokers
3. Liability of Insurer's Corporate Director or Officer

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.411-120.419

[Reserved]

§§ 120.411[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST

12-121 California Points & Authorities 121.syn

§ 121.syn Synopsis to Chapter 121: INTEREST

§ 121.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 121.02 Governing Law

§ 121.03 Use of This Chapter

§ 121.04 Interest in General

§ 121.05 Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

§ 121.06 Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action

§ 121.07 Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Action

§ 121.08 Prejudgment Interest in Court's Discretion

§ 121.09 When Interest Stipulated in Contract

§ 121.10 Compounding of Interest

§ 121.11 When Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed

§ 121.12 Postjudgment Interest

§ 121.13 Cessation of Interest

§ 121.14 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 121.15 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 121.16-121.29 [Reserved]

§ 121.30 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Right to Prejudgment Interest

When Damages Certain [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

[b] Mandatory Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain in Noncontract Actions

[c] Damages as Certain When Only Dispute Regards Liability

[d] Damages as Certain When Defendant Admits, Stipulates To, or Receives Uncontradicted Evidence of Value

[e] Unliquidated Setoff as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

[f] Slight Variance Between Amount Claimed and Amount Awarded as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

[g] Prejudgment Interest Permitted Against State or Any of Its Political Subdivisions

[h] Prejudgment Interest in Indemnity Action

[i] Failure to Prevail at Administrative Level Does Not Preclude Prejudgment Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

[b] Mandatory Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain in Noncontract Actions

[c] Damages as Certain When Only Dispute Regards Liability

[d] Damages as Certain When Defendant Admits, Stipulates To, or Receives Uncontradicted Evidence of Value

[e] Slight Variance Between Amount Claimed and Amount Awarded as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

[f] Prejudgment Interest Permitted Against State or Any of Its Political Subdivisions

§ 121.31 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest as Proper in Inverse Condemnation Action Even Though Amount of Damages Uncertain

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certainty of Damages Unnecessary for Prejudgment Interest in Inverse Condemnation Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Certainty of Damages Unnecessary for Prejudgment Interest in Inverse Condemnation Action

§ 121.32 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest in Court's Discretion From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages [Civ. Code § 3287(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretionary Prejudgment Interest From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretionary Prejudgment Interest From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages

§ 121.33 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice [Civ. Code § 3288]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Rate of Interest

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

[b] General Prayer for Relief as Sufficient to Support Court's Award of Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

§ 121.34 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest Rate Stipulated in Contract Continues Following Breach [Civ. Code § 3289(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest Rate Stipulated in Contract Continues Following Breach

§ 121.35 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest Rate Not Stipulated in Contract Entered Into After January 1, 1986 [Civ. Code § 3289(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 121.36 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Usurious Rate Stipulated in Contract Entered Into After January 1, 1986 [Civ. Code § 3289(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Rate Stipulated Is Usurious

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Rate Stipulated Is Usurious

§ 121.37 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--"Time-Price" Doctrine Makes Usury Law Inapplicable to Finance Charge Stipulated in Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Award of "Time-Price" Differential, Late Charge, or Finance Charge as Prejudgment Interest

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time-Price Differential Is Not Interest

[b] Late Charge in Commercial Contract

[c] Charge as Liquidated Damages

[d] Finance Charge in Retail Installment Account

§ 121.38 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Absence of Prayer for Interest as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Prayer for Interest as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

§ 121.39 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Accepting Payment of Principal as Waiving Claim to Interest Only When Parties Dealing at Arm's Length

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accepting Payment of Principal as Waiving Claim to Interest Only When Parties Dealing at Arm's Length

§ 121.40 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Accepting Payment of Principal as Not Waiving Claim to Interest Due Under Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accepting Payment of Principal as Not Waiving Claim to Interest Due and Payable Under Contract

§ 121.41 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

§ 121.42 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest on Judgments as Part of Damages, Not Penalty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest on Judgments as Part of Damages, Not Penalty

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 121.43 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action From Date of Plaintiff's Offer to Compromise Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [Civ. Code § 3291]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action From Date of Plaintiff's Offer to Compromise Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998

[b] Prejudgment Interest in Action for Personal Injuries Resulting From Strict Liability

[c] Mandatory Award of Prejudgment Interest

[d] Prejudgment Interest When Plaintiff Makes Multiple Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offers

§ 121.44 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Action Allowed When Just Under Circumstances [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Actions

§ 121.45 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Conditional Tender Not Sufficient to Stop the Running of Interest [Civ. Code §§ 1494, 1504]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conditional Tender Does Not Stop Running of Prejudgment Interest

§ 121.46 Supporting Contention That Compound Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

§ 121.47 Supporting Contention That Postjudgment Interest Must Be Awarded--Award of Postjudgment Interest Is Mandatory [Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010, 685.020]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Postjudgment Interest Is Mandatory

[b] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest

[c] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest Payable in Installments

[d] Accrual When Judgment Modified on Appeal

[e] Rate of Postjudgment Interest

[f] Postjudgment Interest Allowed on Prejudgment Interest

[g] Waiver by Payment of Principal Not Applicable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest

[b] Postjudgment Interest Allowed on Prejudgment Interest

§ 121.48 Opposing Contention That Interest Should Be Awarded--Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest [Civ. Code § 1504]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest

§ 121.49 Opposing Contention That Interest Should Be Awarded--Acceptance of Principal as Waiver of Interest [Civ. Code § 3290]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Principal as Waiver of Interest

§ 121.50 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries Unless Plaintiff Had Made Offer of Settlement Lower Than Judgment [Civ. Code §§ 3288, 3291]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries

[b] Plaintiff Did Not Obtain Judgment Exceeding Amount of Last Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries

§ 121.51 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on Nonmoney Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on Nonmoney Judgment

§ 121.52 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed for Period During Which Debtor Prevented From Paying by Law or by Creditor [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed for Period During Which Debtor Prevented From Paying by Law or by Creditor

§ 121.53 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

[b] Damages as Uncertain in Quantum Meruit

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

[b] Damages as Uncertain in Quantum Meruit

§ 121.54 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--No Prejudgment Interest Under Civ. Code § 3288 in Absence of Request for Specific Jury Instruction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Prejudgment Interest Under Civ. Code § 3288 in Absence of Request for Specific Jury Instruction

§ 121.55 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed In Wrongful Death Action Without Showing of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice [Civ. Code § 3288]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed in Wrongful Death Action Without Showing of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

[b] Willful Misconduct Does Not Justify Award of Prejudgment Interest

§ 121.56 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded Under Civ. Code § 3291--Judgment Does Not Include Award for Personal Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Allowed Only on Damages Awarded for Personal Injury

[b] Insurance Bad-Faith Action Is Not One for Personal Injury

[c] Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy is Not Claim for Personal Injury

[d] Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

§ 121.57 Opposing Contention That Compound Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest May Not Be Compounded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest May Not Be Calculated on Accrued Interest

[b] Ambiguous Contract Cannot Be Construed to Provide Compound Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interest May Not Be Calculated on Accrued Interest

§ 121.58 Opposing Contention That Postjudgment Interest Should Be Awarded From Date of Original Judgment Reversed on Appeal--Postjudgment Interest Only From Time of New Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Postjudgment Interest on Judgment Reversed on Appeal

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Postjudgment Interest on Judgment Reversed on Appeal

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.01

§ 121.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 121.30-121.45] and opposing [see §§ 121.50-121.56] the contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded, and supporting [see § 121.46] and opposing [see § 121.57] the contention that compound prejudgment interest should be awarded. It also contains points supporting the contention that postjudgment interest should be awarded [see § 121.47], opposing the contention that any interest should be awarded [see §§ 121.48, and 121.49], and opposing the contention that postjudgment interest should be awarded from the date of entry of an original judgment reversed on appeal [see § 121.58].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.02

§ 121.02 Governing Law

Interest is defined in Civ. Code § 1915. Civ. Code § 3302 includes interest in the definition of the detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only. Civ. Code §§ 3287-3291 generally set forth circumstances under which a party is entitled to prejudgment interest. Prejudgment interest in an unfair competition action under either Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750 (action by individual) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 16760 (action by Attorney General) is governed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761. The allowable rate of interest is governed by Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, and Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010. Postjudgment interest is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010-685.030.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.03

§ 121.03 Use of This Chapter

Although the contentions supported and opposed by the memoranda in this chapter may arise in several different procedural contexts during the course of litigation, they are most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. They may also be useful in a trial or appellate brief. The memoranda set forth in this chapter may be adapted for use in any procedural context in which the issue of prejudgment, postjudgment, or compound interest arises. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in summary judgment or summary adjudication proceeding. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to VacateCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.04

§ 121.04 Interest in General

Interest is defined as the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties for the use, or forbearance, or detention of money [Civ. Code § 1915]. The inclusion of prejudgment interest in a judgment is not the granting of damages in excess of the loss [Nordahl v. Department of Real Estate (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 665-666, 121 Cal. Rptr. 794 ; see § 121.41], nor is it an assessment of a penalty [Harland v. State of California (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 847, 160 Cal. Rptr. 613 ; see § 121.42].

The inclusion of prejudgment interest in an award is simply a recognition of the fact that one of the elements of direct loss suffered by a party deprived of the use of his or her money or other property is the value of its use, which in the case of money is represented by interest at the legal rate [Nordahl v. Department of Real Estate (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 665-666, 121 Cal. Rptr. 794 ; see § 121.41].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.05

§ 121.05 Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

If a person is entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and the right to recover such damages is vested in him or her on a particular day, he or she is entitled also to recover interest from that day [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]. Damages are considered to be certain when the only real dispute between the parties regards liability [Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 656, 149 Cal. Rptr. 711 ; see § 121.30]. Damages may be certain even if there is a slight variance between the amount claimed and the amount awarded and even if the debtor is entitled to an unliquidated setoff [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 408-409, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; see § 121.30].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.06

§ 121.06 Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action

In any action brought to recover damages for personal injury, if the plaintiff makes an offer to compromise pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the judgment must bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of theplaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that is exceeded by the judgment [Civ. Code § 3291; see § 121.43]. When there are two successive unaccepted Code Civ. Poc. § 998 offers tendered by a successful plaintiff in personal injury litigation and that plaintiff subsequently recovers a judgment in excess of either offer, the prejudgment interest awarded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3291 begins from the date of the first offer [Ray v. Goodman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87-92, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659] . Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply to a public entity or to a public employee for an act or omission within the scope of employment. Nor does it apply in family law matters [In re Marriage of Green (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 14, 24, 261 Cal. Rptr. 294] and in insurance bad-faith actions [Gourley v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 121, 126-130, 822 P.2d 374, 3 Cal. Rptr. 666] . However, it does apply in a defamation action [O'Hara v. Storer Communications, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1101, 1117-1119, 282 Cal. Rptr. 712] .

Some courts have held that a party may recover prejudgment interest under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and Civ. Code § 3291 when judgment is entered on an award made after judicial arbitration provided that the amount of the judgment exceeds the amount of a prior offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [see, e.g., Joyce v. Black (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322-323, 266 Cal. Rptr. 8 ; Wagy v. Brown (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-9, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48 (judgment not more favorable when for exact amount of plaintiff's offer)]. However, prejudgment interest accrued under Civ. Code § 3291 is not part of judgment and plaintiff cannot obtain interest on that prejudgment interest [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 516, 530-533, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 41 P.3d 46] . One court has used broad language to apply a contrary rule in the context of contractual arbitration [Woodard v. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 656, 666, 217 Cal. Rptr. 514] .

The 10 percent interest rate of Civ. Code § 3291 is not combined with the 10 percent interest rate of Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a) (judgment bears 10 percent rate of interest from date judgment rendered) to give a combined interest rate of 20 percent, but instead is applied separately or conjunctively with Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a) to permit recovery of no more than a 10 percent rate of interest for the covered time period [Mendez v. Kurten (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 481, 487, 215 Cal. Rptr. 924 (applied separately or conjunctively so as not to offend Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestRates

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.07

§ 121.07 Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Action

In an unfair competition action under either Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750 (action by individual) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 16760 (action by Attorney General), prejudgment interest may be allowed if the court finds that such an award is just under the circumstances [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16750(a), 16760(a)(2), 16761]. The interest is calculated on the actual damages at the rate of 10 percent per annum for the period beginning on the date of service of the complaint and ending on the date of judgment, or for any shorter period therein. In determining whether an award of prejudgment interest is just, the court can consider only the following:

> (1) Whether the person, Attorney General, or opposing party, or the representative of any of these people, made motions or asserted claims or defenses so lacking in merit as to show that the party or representative acted intentionally for delay, or otherwise acted in bad faith [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(a)];
>
> (2) Whether, in the course of the action involved, the person, Attorney General, or opposing party, or the representative of any of these people, violated any applicable rule, statute, or court order providing for sanctions for dilatory behavior or otherwise providing for expeditious proceedings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(b)]; and
>
> (3) Whether the person, Attorney General, or opposing party, or the representative of any of these people, engaged in conduct primarily for the purpose of delaying the litigation or increasing the cost thereof [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(c)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.08

§ 121.08 Prejudgment Interest in Court's Discretion

In a contract action in which the claim is unliquidated, the creditor may recover prejudgment interest in the court's discretion. The court may fix a date for the accrual of interest no earlier than the date on which the action was filed [Civ. Code § 3287(b); see § 121.32].

In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, interest may be given in the discretion of the trier of fact [see Civ. Code § 3288; Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 ; see § 121.33].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.09

§ 121.09 When Interest Stipulated in Contract

Any legal rate of interest stipulated by a contract entered into before January 1, 1986, remains chargeable after a breach, as before, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [Civ. Code §§ 3289(a), 3289.5; Casey v. Gibbons (1902) 136 Cal. 368, 371, 68 P. 1032 ; see § 121.34]. If a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, the obligation shall bear interest at rate of 10 percent per annum after a breach [Civ. Code § 3289(b); see Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1431-1433, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310 (if rate of interest specified in contract is usurious, Civ. Code § 3289(b) allows recovery of interest at 10 percent per annum fromdate of breach); but see Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 704, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (discussed in § 121.34.3, disapproving grounds on which Mark McDowell Corp. found interest rate to be usurious)]. For purposes of Civ. Code § 3289(b), the term "contract" does not include a note secured by a deed of trust on real property [Civ. Code § 3289(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.10

§ 121.10 Compounding of Interest

Although the general rule is that interest may not be computed on accrued interest unless by special statutory provision or by stipulation of the parties, postjudgment interest is calculated on the principal damages plus prejudgment interest, if any, and compound interest may be allowed against a wrongdoing trustee [Boscus v. Bohlig (1916) 173 Cal. 687, 691, 162 P. 100 ; Falkner v. Hendy (1889) 80 Cal. 636, 645, 22 P. 401 ; Estate of Sharp (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 585, 95 Cal. Rptr. 816 ; see §§ 121.46, 121.47, and 70].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.11

§ 121.11 When Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed

Prejudgment interest is not allowed on a nonmoney judgment or when the debtor is prevented by law, or by the act of the creditor, from paying the debt [see Civ. Code § 3287(a); Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. County of Sonoma (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 296, 321, 152 Cal. Rptr. 903, 591 P.2d 1 ; Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 94, 107, 98 Cal. Rptr. 293, 490 P.2d 805 , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1316, 31 L. Ed. 2d 583 ; see §§ 121.50-121.52].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.12

§ 121.12 Postjudgment Interest

Every money judgment is entitled to have interest accrue at the legal rate from the date of entry of judgment [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010; Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 442-443, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76 ; see also § 121.47].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.13

§ 121.13 Cessation of Interest

A tender of payment by the debtor stops the running of interest [Civ. Code § 1504; Ferrea v. Tubbs (1899) 125 Cal. 687, 689, 58 P 308 ; see also § 121.48]. Although an offer of payment stops the running of interest on an obligation, an offer to pay part of an amount owed will not stop the running of prejudgment interest if it is conditioned on the creditor's dropping a demand for other sums claimed [see Civ. Code §§ 1494, 1504; Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1553-1554, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592] . Tender and deposit of the amount owing pursuant to Civ. Code § 1500 will stop the running of interest [Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1554 n.2, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592] .

Acceptance of payment of the whole principal, as such, by the creditor waives all claim to interest unless the parties were not dealing at arm's length [see Civ. Code § 3290; Mitchell v. City of Los Angeles (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 618, 630, 49 Cal. Rptr. 13 ; see also §§ 121.39 and 121.49] Civ. Code § 3290 is applicable only to interest as damages, not to postjudgment interest. Thus, cashing a check in satisfaction of judgment does not waive one's right to postjudgment interest [San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.14

§ 121.14 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion of, and forms for use in, proceedings involving usurious rates of interest, see Ch. 568, Usury in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For a discussion of the law regarding interest as an element of damages, see Ch. 177, Damages in that publication. For a discussion of, and an alternative form for use in, seeking inclusion of postjudgment interest in a judgment, see Ch. 318, Judgments .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesUsury

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.15

§ 121.15 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Some aspects of interest on notes and negotiable instruments are addressed in Ch. 166, Negotiable Instruments. For a memorandum regarding recovery of interest in an action for claim and delivery, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-121 California Points & Authorities §§ 121.16-121.29

[Reserved]

§§ 121.16[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.30

§ 121.30 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Right to Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER INTEREST ON HIS/HER/ITS DAMAGES FROM _____, BECAUSE HIS/HER/ITS RIGHT TO RECOVER DAMAGES WAS VESTED ON THAT DATE AND THE AMOUNT OF DAMAGES WAS CERTAIN, OR CAPABLE OF BEING MADE CERTAIN BY CALCULATION, ON THAT DATE.

A. Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain. When the right to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, vests on a particular day, the person entitled to collect the damages is also entitled to recover interest from that day (Civ. Code § 3287(a); Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 682, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 ; Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060-1061, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153).

[Optional] B. Mandatory Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain in Noncontract Actions. When damages are certain or capable of being made certain as of a particular date, prejudgment interest is mandatory under Section 3287(a) of the Civil Code even though the action is not based on contract (Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 796-797, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1).

[Optional] C. Damages as Certain When Only Dispute Regards Liability. When there is no dispute over the basis for computation of damages, one party's denial of liability does not make the damages unascertainable within the meaning of Section 3287(a) of the Civil Code (Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 656, 149 Cal. Rptr. 711 ; Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060-1061, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153).

[Optional] D. Damages as Certain When Defendant Admits, Stipulates To, or Receives Uncontradicted Evidence of Value. When damages are entered into by stipulation or admission, or when answers to interrogatories or valuation from experts provide the defendant with an amount certain for damages that remains undisputed, prejudgment interest starts to run, when otherwise appropriate, from the time the defendant stipulated to, admitted, or received the undisputed evidence of value (Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 798-801, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1).

[Optional] E. Unliquidated Setoff as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest. When the amount of a claim is certain, but is reduced by reason of an unliquidated setoff, interest properly is allowed on the balance found to be due from the time the amount of the claim itself became certain and was due (Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 409, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; Great Western Drywall, Inc. v. Roel Construction Co., Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 761, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235 ; Leaf v. Phil Rauch, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 376, 120 Cal. Rptr. 749).

[Optional] F. Slight Variance Between Amount Claimed and Amount Awarded as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest. A slight difference between the amount of damages claimed and the amount awarded does not mean that the damages were not fixed and determinable, and thus does not preclude an award of prejudgment interest (Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 408-409, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153).

[Optional] G. Prejudgment Interest Permitted Against State or Any of Its Political Subdivisions. Section 3287(a) of the Civil Code permits the recovery of damages and interest from the State of California or any county, city, city and county, municipal corporation, public district, public agency, or any political subdivision of the state (Civ. Code § 3287(a); Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 685, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 ; Mass v. Board of Educ. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 612, 624, 39 Cal. Rptr. 739, 394 P.2d 579).

[Optional] H. Prejudgment Interest in Indemnity Action. In an action for implied equitable indemnity, prejudgment interest should be awarded from the date that the successful party made payment in satisfaction of the underlying judgment and not merely from the date of entry of indemnity judgment (E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 377-378, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879).

[Optional] I. Failure to Prevail at Administrative Level Does Not Preclude Prejudgment Interest. The interest available under Civil Code Section 3287(a) is available to claimants who are unsuccessful in the administrative proceeding but who prevail on appeal in a judicial trial de novo (Nordquist v. McGraw-Hill Broadcasting Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 576, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 221).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memoranda may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a) on the ground that the damages were certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and the right to recover the damages vested on a particular day. The contention supported by this form is most likely to be raised by plaintiffin a contract action, but may also be raised in conversion, fraud, or other tort actions where the damages were certain and vested prior to trial.

These points may be combined, if appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract], or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .] The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specifically demonstrate how the facts of the case prove that plaintiff's damages were certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and that the right to recover the damages vested on the particular day from which counsel contends interest should be calculated.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 121.50, 121.52, and 121.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

In Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 , plaintiff commenced an action in administrative mandamus to challenge the determination of the Department of Social Welfare that she was ineligible for benefits under the aid to the needy disabled program (former Welf. & Inst. Code § 13500 et seq.). The trial court issued a writ ordering payment to plaintiff of retroactive benefits along with attorney's fees and prejudgment interest.

Defendant appealed the judgment, contending, among other things, that the award of interest authorized under Civ. Code § 3287 is limited to contract and tort actions. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that when a recipient of welfare benefits is adjudged entitled to retroactive payment of benefits pursuant to the statutory obligation of the state, such recipient is entitled to an award of prejudgment interest at the legal rate from the time each payment becomes due (17 Cal. 3d 671, 685) . Under Civ. Code § 3287(a), a claimant must satisfy three conditions for the recovery of interest in a mandamus action against the state: (1) There must be an underlying monetary obligation; (2) The recovery must be certain or capable of being made certain by calculation; and (3) The right to recovery must vest on a particular day (17 Cal. 3d 671, 682) . Since all of these conditions were satisfied in this case, it was appropriate for the trial court to grant prejudgment interest.

In Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 , plaintiffs were independent concessionaires operating departments in a large department store. The department store was broken into, burned, and looted. In consolidated actions, plaintiffs sued defendant insurance company for refusal to pay on one policy insuring against loss from fire and on another policy insuring against loss from business interruption. The jury found for plaintiffs on both insurance policies. Plaintiffs then moved, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a), for an award of prejudgment interest from the date their claims became due and, alternatively, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(b), for prejudgment interest form the date of filing suit. The motions were denied. Plaintiffs' appeal raised only the issue of the propriety of the trial court's action denying their motions for prejudgment interest (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1057-1060) .

The court of appeal reversed the trial court for its denial of prejudgment interest on the sum due under the fire policy. The essential dispute on that cause of action involved the issue of coverage and not computation of the amount of loss. Plaintiffs contended that the loss was caused by fire, while defendant contended that the loss was caused by fire, while defendant contended that the loss was due to looting. Relying on Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 407-408, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 (discussed in § 121.30[3][e]), the court of appeal held that damages are deemed certain or capable of being made certain within Civ. Code § 3287(a) when there is essentially no dispute between the parties concerning the basis of computation of damages, if any are recoverable, but there is a dispute centering on the issue of liability giving rise to damages. The obligor's denial of any liability at all does not make the damages uncertain within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287 (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060-1061) .

The court of appeal did, however, affirm the trial court's denial of prejudgment interest on the judgment entered on the policy of business interruption insurance. The sole issue in the suit on the business interruption policy was the extent of plaintiffs' damages for losses admittedly covered. The extent of that loss depended on a judicial determination to be made from conflicting evidence; it was not ascertainable from data furnished by plaintiffs to the defendant. The court noted that Civ. Code § 3287(a) does not authorize prejudgment interest as a matter of law when the amount of damage, as opposed to the determination of liability, depends on a judicial determination based on conflicting evidence and is not ascertainable from truthful data supplied by the claimant to his debtor (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062-1063) .

[b] Mandatory Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain in Noncontract Actions

Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1 , was a consolidated action brought by plaintiffs whose personal and real property was damaged after defendant's warehouse was destroyed by fire. Defendant appealed the liability aspects of the verdict in favor of plaintiffs, while plaintiffs appealed that portion of the judgment denying them prejudgment interest.

In reversing the portion of the judgment denying prejudgment interest, the court of appeal had to resolve the questions of whether or not prejudgment interest pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a) is available in tort actions for damages for the loss of real and personal property, and whether the evidence established that the damages of the tenants and owners were certain. In holding that Civ. Code § 3287(a) does apply and requires prejudgment interest in tort actions for property damages when the value of the property destroyed can readily be calculated, the court of appeal first examined the language of Civ. Code § 3287(a) and noted that it applies without restriction to every person who is entitled to recover damages. The court then went on to discuss several cases allowing the recovery of prejudgment interest in causes of action other than those in contract. Those cases include Mass v. Board of Educ. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 612, 39 Cal. Rptr. 739, 394 P.2d 579 (mandamus action); Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 (mandamus action where claim based on statutory obligation); Friedman v. City of Los Angeles (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 317, 125 Cal. Rptr. 93 (destruction of real property); and Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 648, 131 Cal. Rptr. 646, 552 P.2d 430 (inverse condemnation) (74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 796-797) .

Counsel should note that despite the overwhelming authority cited in Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1 , for the proposition that prejudgment interest pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a) is allowable in certain noncontract actions, at least one court of appeal has nevertheless held that Civ. Code § 3287(a) applies only in cases when the recovery is predicated on breach of contract [Pepitone v. Russo (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 685, 690, 134 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

[c] Damages as Certain When Only Dispute Regards Liability

Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 149 Cal. Rptr. 711 , originated as three consolidated actions involving plaintiff's claim for money due for labor and materials furnished a subdivider in connection with the construction of a public improvement project (85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 651) . Defendant appealed a verdict for plaintiff that included prejudgment interest.

Among defendant's contentions on appeal was that its good-faith dispute regarding liability on its bond rendered the amount due under the construction contract "incapable of ascertainment," thereby precluding prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. In rejecting this contention, the court of appeal, relying on Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060-1061, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 (discussed in § 121.30[3][a]), held that when there is no dispute over the basis for computation of damages, one party's denial of liability does not make the damages unascertainable within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287 (85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 656) .

The factual background and holding of Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 , is discussed in § 121.30[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal reversed the trial court for its denial of prejudgment interest on the sum due under a fire insurance policy. The essential dispute on that cause of action involved the issue of coverage and not computation of the amount of loss. Plaintiffs contended that the loss was caused by fire, while defendant contended that the loss was due to looting. Relying on Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 407-408, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 (discussed in § 121.30[3][e]), the court of appeal held that damages are deemed certain or capable of being made certain within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287(a) when there is essentially no dispute between the parties concerning the basis of computation of damages, if any are recoverable, but there is a dispute centering on the issue of liability giving rise to damage. The obligor's denial of any liability at all does not make the damages uncertain within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287(a) (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1060-1061) .

[d] Damages as Certain When Defendant Admits, Stipulates To, or Receives Uncontradicted Evidence of Value

The factual background and part of the holding of Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1 , are discussed in § 121.30[3][b]. In that case, the court of appeal also had to determine whether the damages were certain or capable of being made certain, because if they were, prejudgment interest must be granted as a matter of right. Each plaintiff's case presented a slightly different situation regarding whether the damages were certain; however, in allowing prejudgment interest for each plaintiff, the court of appeal held prejudgment interest runs from the date the damages are of a nature to be certain or capable of being made certain by calculation and the exact sum due to the plaintiff is made known to the defendant. Thus, if the defendant does not know or cannot readily ascertain damages, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to provide the defendant with some statement and supporting data from which the defendant can make the necessary determination. In this case, where the defendant stipulated to or admitted the amount of damages, the damages were held to be certain from the date of admission or stipulation. Furthermore, the court noted, the unchallenged estimates of an expert areappropriate to render damages certain from the date the defendant receives the estimates (74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 798-805) .

[e] Unliquidated Setoff as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

In Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 , plaintiff contracted to build missile trailers for defendant. The lawsuit arose following the parties' failure to agree on price changes following defendant's change of specifications. The trial court determined that plaintiff should recover $289,000 plus prejudgment interest rather than the $296,000 claimed damages (65 Cal. 2d 396, 398-403) .

Defendant contended, among other things, that the damages were not certain because they were offset by an unliquidated amount due to plaintiff's settlement of claims with subcontractors and its salvage of materials. The court of appeal held that this does not preclude the allowance of interest on the balance of the claim. Reductions in damages due to plaintiff's efforts to mitigate damages should not preclude an award of prejudgment interest. If the rule were otherwise, a plaintiff might be encouraged to forgo opportunities to mitigate damages so as not to jeopardize his right to prejudgment interest (65 Cal. 2d 396, 409) .

However, the court of appeal did agree with defendant that the trial court erred insofar as it awarded interest from the date of termination on the portion of the damages attributable to settlement expenses, since these expenses were not incurred until after the date of termination. The court stated that interest is not intended to be a windfall. It thus held that interest on this portion of the award should date only from the judgment (65 Cal. 2d 396, 409) .

In Great Western Drywall, Inc. v. Roel Construction Co., Inc*. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 761, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235* , a subcontractor sued the general contractor on a construction job for breach of contract. The general contractor cross-complained against the subcontractor for breach of contract and negligence. After a bench trial, the court awarded each party damages. The award did not specify whether the general contractor's recovery for property damages was on a contract or tort theory. The award to the subcontractor included change order requests (COR's) that the general contractor admitted were undisputed, and in prejudgment interest on that amount. The general contractor moved for stay of entry of judgment, arguing the award of prejudgment interest to the subcontractor on the amount of undisputed COR's was improper based on the facts and established case law.

On appeal, the general contractor argued that the subcontractor was not entitled to prejudgment interest because the entire amount of the subcontractor's recovery was an offset since it arose from its deficient performance of the subcontract. The subcontractor countered that the general contractor's tort damages could not be offset against the subcontractor's recovery on liquidated contract damages. The court of appeal first held that prejudgment interest on liquidated damages is an element of compensatory damages [166 Cal. App. 4th 761, 767]. The court further held that an award of unliquidated damages to a cross-complainant is a setoff against prejudgment interest awarded a plaintiff for liquidated damages [166 Cal. App. 4th 761, 768]. The court concluded that even if the trial court intended to award property damages for negligence as opposed to breach of contract, the general contractor was entitled to a setoff of its entire award. The court held that the general contractor's damages arose entirely from the subcontractor's deficient performance of the contract, and the general contractor's mere inclusion of an alternative count for negligence in its cross-complaint, and any arbitrary reliance by the trial court on one theory over another, should not adversely affect the general contractor's setoff rights [166 Cal. App. 4th 761, 770].

Leaf v. Phil Rauch, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 120 Cal. Rptr. 749 , was an action brought by the plaintiffs for restitution based on rescission of a motor vehicle conditional sale contract and for damages for breach of warranty. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs for the amount paid by them on the contract, plus amounts expended for towing and car rental. Based on conflicting evidence, the court allowed the defendant a setoff for the reasonable value of the plaintiffs' use of the car. The plaintiffs appealed that part of the judgment which denied them prejudgment interest on the sum awarded to them (47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 373-375) .

In reversing the judgment insofar as it failed to include prejudgment interest, the court of appeal first reviewed the general principles applicable to awards of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a). The court noted that prejudgment interest is allowable when the amount due plaintiff is fixed by the terms of a contract, or is readily ascertainable by reference to well-established market values. On the other hand, interest is not allowable when the amount of the damages depends on a judicial determination based on conflicting evidence and is not ascertainable from established market prices or values (47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 375) . In this case, the court observed, the amount of plaintiffs' damages was certain, while the amount of the setoff was determined on the basis of conflicting evidence. The court of appeal held that when the amount of a claim is certain but is reduced by reason of an unliquidated setoff, interest properly is allowed on the balance found to be due from the time it became due. Since the requirement of Civ. Code § 3287(a) regarding certainty of damages was met, plaintiffs were entitled, as a matter of right, to recover prejudgment interest on the sum awarded from the time the amount of the claim itself became certain and due (47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 376) .

[f] Slight Variance Between Amount Claimed and Amount Awarded as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

The factual background and part of the holding of Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 , is discussed in § 121.30[3][e]. In that case, defendant contended, among other things, that the trial court erred in granting prejudgment interest because, under Civ. Code § 3287, prejudgment interest may be granted only when the damages are liquidated, and, since plaintiff's original demand exceeded the amount awarded, the damages were not certain, or capable of being made certain. Although the Supreme Court agreed that prejudgment interest may be granted under Civ. Code § 3287(a) only when the damages are liquidated, it held that merely a slight difference between the amount of damages claimed and the amount awarded does not preclude an award of damages claimed and the amount awarded does not preclude an award of prejudgment interest, and the erroneous omission of a few matters from the account or erroneous calculation of the costs does not mean that the damages are not capable of being made certain by calculation (65 Cal. 2d 396, 407-409) .

The factual background and part of the holding of Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 , is discussed in § 121.30[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal also held that the fact that plaintiffs' recovery slightly exceeded their proof of loss and was slightly under the amount claimed in their amended complaints did not detract from the proposition that the damages on the fire policy were fixed and determinable (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062) .

[g] Prejudgment Interest Permitted Against State or Any of Its Political Subdivisions

In 1959, Civ. Code § 3287(a) was amended so that it would be applicable to the State of California or any county, city, city and county, municipal corporation, public district, public agency, or any political subdivision of the state.

The factual background and part of the holding of Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 , are discussed in § 121.30[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court found that the trial court had misapplied the general rule that interest cannot be recovered against a state or municipality. The Court noted that while it is true that governmental entities traditionally have beenimmune from liability for interest, Civ. Code § 3287, as amended in 1959, provides a clear statutory exception to the general rule. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that when a recipient of welfare benefits is adjudged entitled to retroactive payment of benefits pursuant to the statutory obligation of the state, such recipient is entitled to an award of prejudgment interest at the legal rate from the time each payment becomes due (17 Cal. 3d 671, 683-685) .

In Mass v. Board of Educ. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 612, 39 Cal. Rptr. 739, 394 P.2d 579 , the trial court upheld the suspension of a teacher by a school board. Following lengthy intermediate appeals and remands, plaintiff brought the present action for mandate. In determining that plaintiff was wrongfully terminated, the Supreme Court ordered payment of salary that the plaintiff would have earned, as well as interest on each such payment from the time it would have been paid. In so holding, the Supreme Court first noted that in 1955, Civ. Code § 3287 was amended so that it applies to any political subdivision of the State of California. Since plaintiff's suspension could not be sustained, the salary payments became vested as of the dates they accrued. If plaintiff had not been wrongfully suspended, he would have obtained the benefit of the moneys paid as of those dates; he thus lost the natural growth and productivity of the withheld salary in the form of interest. Furthermore, the Supreme Court disapproved a line of authority suggesting that interest could not be recovered in mandamus actions. The Court held that an action in mandamus may support a judgment for interest when it involves recovery on a general underlying monetary obligation (61 Cal. 2d 612, 624-627) .

[h] Prejudgment Interest in Indemnity Action

In E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879 , plaintiffs obtained an indemnity judgment from defendant based on underlying personal injury and wrongful death judgments for damages in which both plaintiffs and defendant paid half of the judgments. The trial court awarded plaintiffs postjudgment interest from the date that the indemnity judgment was entered. Plaintiffs appealed, contending that they were entitled to prejudgment interest from the date that they made payment in satisfaction of the underlying judgments. Defendant contended that plaintiffs' damages were not certain or ascertainable until the trial court determined whether or not plaintiffs were entitled to full or partial indemnity and entered judgment in the indemnity action.

The court of appeal, in agreeing with plaintiffs, modified that part of the judgment to allow plaintiffs to recover interest from the date that they paid their portion of the underlying judgments. Citing prior California law, the court stated that under Civ. Code § 3287(a), prejudgment interest must be granted as a matter of right if damages are certain or ascertainable, and the interest runs from the date when the damages are certain or ascertainable and when the sum due is made known to the defendant. Accordingly, the court held that plaintiffs' damages were certain when they satisfied the judgments in the underlying suit. Moreover, defendant was aware of the exact amount paid because it paid the other half of the judgment. The possibility of any reduction, or even an actual reduction, in the amount of the indemnity judgment did not render plaintiffs' damages any less certain (138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 377-378) .

[i] Failure to Prevail at Administrative Level Does Not Preclude Prejudgment Interest

In Nordquist v. McGraw-Hill Broadcasting Co. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 221 , plaintiff, after resigning from his position as television station sports director/newscast anchor, filed a claim for overtime compensation with the California Labor Commissioner pursuant to Lab. Code § 98 et seq. Following an evidentiary hearing, the commissioner ruled that plaintiff was an exempt employee and thus was not entitled to overtime compensation. Plaintiff sought a trial de novo in superior court. The trial court concluded that plaintiff was a nonexempt employee entitled to overtime compensation. The parties stipulated to the amount of overtime compensation plaintiff was entitled to and proceeded to trial on the issue of his entitlement to prejudgment interest. The trial court held that plaintiff was not entitled to interest under Lab. Code § 98.1(c) which provides for interest on awards granted by the Labor Commissioner, but was entitled to it under Civ. Code § 3287, which provides generally for an award of interest on damages. Defendant appealed the award of prejudgment interest, contending that plaintiff was not entitled to any prejudgment interest because he did not prevail in the administrative proceeding. Defendant argued that because plaintiff was not entitled to interest under the statute that specifically governed the claim, he should not have been entitled to interest under Civ. Code § 3287, which provides a general grant of interest.

The court of appeal affirmed, ruling that the trial court properly awarded plaintiff prejudgment interest (32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 573) . The parties agreed that plaintiff was not awarded compensation in the administrative proceeding, and therefore was not entitled to interest under Lab. Code § 98.1(c). The only question remaining was whether the court should infer from Civ. Code § 3287 a legislative intent or determination that interest awardable under Civ. Code § 3287 was not available to claimants who were unsuccessful in the administrative proceeding but who prevailed on appeal in a judicial trial de novo. Plaintiff relied on a line of cases holding that the Legislature's failure to expressly provide for interest on retroactive government benefit awards did not prevent the recipient from recovering interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a). In each of these cases, the courts found nothing in the statutory scheme governing the particular benefit that suggested a legislative intent to preclude recovery of interest on damages awarded as prejudgment benefits. In this case, the statutory scheme governing employeecompensation claims expressly awarded prejudgment interest to claimants who prevailed in the administrative proceeding. According to the court, the purpose of the Labor Code section was to afford a speedy method by which wage earners could determine their rights in wages, while at the same time affording due process to employers and a procedure for appeal (32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 574) . As a corollary to this purpose, the Legislature provided disincentives to discourage meritless and unwarranted appeals. Defendant contended that the Legislature sought to discourage appeals by employees by denying interest even if the appeal had merit. The court rejected this argument because it failed to acknowledge the difference in the rate of interest under the two statutes (32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 575) . The court noted specifically that the "adjusted annual rate" of Lab. Code § 98.1(c) was substantially more generous that the fixed rate provided by Civ. Code § 3287(a). Because the interest rates varied substantially, the court found that application of the pertinent interest statute in this case both effectuated the legislative purpose of discouraging meritless appeals since the employer who appeals an administrative award to the employee would pay the higher interest rate, and protected the right of the damaged but originally unsuccessful employee to fully recoup his losses from the employer's erroneous denial of wages (32 Cal. App. 4th 555, 575) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain

The court of appeal in Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 286 Cal. Rptr. 146 , affirmed an award of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) in this declaratory relief action between insurers regarding which was the primary insurer. The amount was certain when the settlement was paid to the injured, so interest was payable from that date. The only dispute related to legal issues regarding the cancellation of a policy and which party was liable as primary insurer (234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1173-1174) . The court referred to appellant's confusion of the amount owed by proposal of four "inapt theories of lesser liability," but held that the alternative theories and amounts of liability proposed under each could not confuse the magnitude of its obligation and did not render the award uncertain so as to prohibit the application of Civ. Code § 3287(a) (234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1174) .

The court of appeal in Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 , affirmed the issuance of a writ of mandate by the superior court directing payment to petitioners of interest, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a), on unemployment benefits withheld by EDD. The unemployment benefits were originally denied, but that ruling was reversed by an administrative law judge in 1987. The benefits were paid in 1987, but EDD refused to pay interest on the amounts owed. The court of appeal said that the Legislature's failure to provide expressly for interest in a specific situation does not prevent a recipient from receiving interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a), which authorizes the recovery of interest on damages that are certain or capable of being made certain by calculation when the right to recover has vested on a particular day. This right applies in actions based on a general underlying monetary obligation, including the obligation of a governmental entity (223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242) .

[b] Mandatory Prejudgment Interest When Damages Certain in Noncontract Actions

In Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749 (discussed in § 121.30[3][a]), the Supreme Court held that an award of prejudgment interest was appropriate pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a) in a mandamus action against the state based on a statutory obligation when the following conditions are met: (1) There must be an underlying monetary obligation; (2) The recovery must be certain or capable of being made certain by calculation; and (3) The right to recovery must vest on a particular day (17 Cal. 3d 671, 682) .

In Mass v. Board of Educ. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 612, 39 Cal. Rptr. 739, 394 P.2d 579 (discussed in § 121.30[3][g]), a mandate action brought by a suspended teacher seeking reinstatement, back wages, and interest, the Supreme Court held that an award of prejudgment interest was appropriate pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287. The Court reasoned that since mandate is the most expeditious and the most frequently used procedure of relief for persons improperly discharged from their positions, such persons should not be subjected to the loss of full restitution by the denial of interest merely because of the selection of this procedure for redress (61 Cal. 2d 612, 625-627) .

The court of appeal in Credit Managers' Assn. v. Brubaker (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1587, 285 Cal. Rptr. 417 , modified a judgment in favor of an assignee for the benefit of creditors that had recovered a preference from the insolvent's chief executive officer to include prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3282(a) on the amount of the preference recovered from the date of the demand letter. The letter requested the exact amount awarded and set forth the exact amounts owed and the manner of their calculation. That was sufficient certainty for purposes of Civ. Code § 3282(a) (233 Cal. App. 3d 1587, 1595) .

See also Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 286 Cal. Rptr. 146 , discussed in § 121.30[4][a].

[c] Damages as Certain When Only Dispute Regards Liability

The federal appellate court in Adams v. Johns-Manville Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 876 F.2d 702 , a diversity action arising out of asbestos litigation and applyingCalifornia law, upheld the award of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) on damages pursuant to settlement agreements, saying that this was proper because the amount of damages was not in dispute, only the question of liability. In addition, the court said that an order refusing to enforce settlement agreements based on a theory of lack of settlement authority is not a prevention by law from paying the debt and does not fall within this exception. Thus, when the settlement agreements were ultimately affirmed, an award of prejudgment interest on the amounts stipulated by the agreements was proper (876 F.2d 702, 710) .

In Marine Terminals Corp. v. Paceco, Inc. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 193 Cal. Rptr. 687 , an action for breach of contract and negligence arising from defendant's faulty repair of plaintiff's crane, plaintiff supplied defendant with invoices that reflected the monetary costs incurred by plaintiff because of the faulty repair. Defendant disputed its liability for the charges, but not the amount of the charges. The court of appeal stated that defendant's denial of liability in itself does not make the damages uncertain (145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 995) . By submitting the invoices to defendant, plaintiff made its damages known to defendant and rendered them certain (145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 996) .

See also Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 286 Cal. Rptr. 146 , discussed in § 121.30[4][a].

[d] Damages as Certain When Defendant Admits, Stipulates To, or Receives Uncontradicted Evidence of Value

In Caplan v. Schroeder (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 515, 15 Cal. Rptr. 145, 364 P.2d 321 , an action for breach of contract, the Supreme Court held that although the value of the property at issue was not certain and could not be made certain by calculation, prejudgment interest nevertheless should have been allowed from the date the parties stipulated to the property's value (56 Cal. 2d 515, 521) .

In Shell Oil Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1633, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 580 , an insurer appealed a plaintiff's judgment for breach of a liability insurance policy on a variety of grounds, including that an award of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) was improper because plaintiff had proposed three different measures of damages to the court, all of which were in dispute. The court of appeal upheld the award, stating that the certainty required by the statute is absent when the amounts due turn on disputed facts, but not when the dispute is confined to the rules governing liability (44 Cal. App. 4th 1633, 1651) . Since the plaintiff's alternative theories required only the court's legal determination of which was appropriate, at which point the amount recoverable would be fixed, prejudgment interest was appropriate. The court thus affirmed the judgment.

Marine Terminals Corp. v. Paceco, Inc. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 193 Cal. Rptr. 687 , is discussed in § 121.30[4][c]

[e] Slight Variance Between Amount Claimed and Amount Awarded as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

In Marine Terminals Corp. v. Paceco, Inc. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 193 Cal. Rptr. 687 (discussed in § 121.30[4][c]), the invoices submitted by plaintiff to defendant as proof of the amount of damages actually included some inapplicable charges. Based on this error, defendant argued that plaintiff's damages were not capable of being made certain by calculation because the data supplied was not true and precisely correct. The court of appeal found that the errors in the invoices were minor and could have been easily corrected at the time the demand for payment was made, and that at no time prior to trial had defendant disputed the amount or method of calculating plaintiff's damages (145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 997-998) . The erroneous omission of a few matters from the account or erroneous calculation of the costs does not mean that the damages are not capable of being made certain by calculation (145 Cal. App. 3d 991, 997) .

Block v. Laboratory Procedures, Inc. (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 87 Cal. Rptr. 778 , was an action for breach of a stock option contract in which the "bid" and "asked" prices were alleged, but the market value was in dispute. In upholding the trial court's disallowance of prejudgment interest, the court of appeal reiterated the principle that when damages can be arrived at only by judicial determination on conflicting evidence, the damages are uncertain and there is no basis for an award of prejudgment interest. In reaching this conclusion, the court stated in dictum that merely a slight difference between the amount of the damages claimed and the amount of the award does not preclude an award of prejudgment in interest (8 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 1046-1047) .

[f] Prejudgment Interest Permitted Against State or Any of Its Political Subdivisions

The court of appeal in Goldfarb v. Civil Service Com. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 633, 275 Cal. Rptr. 284 , reversed an order denying appellant's petition for mandate and held that Civ. Code § 3287(a) entitles civil servants to interest on each installment of back salary awards from the date the salary fell due (225 Cal. App. 3d 633, 636) .

See discussion of Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 , under § 121.30[4][a]. The right to interest applies in actions based on a general underlying monetary obligation, including the obligation of a governmental entity (223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242) . Applied to actions against the state, the only three conditions for recovery of interest are (1) there must be an underlying monetary obligation; (2) the recovery must be certain or capable of being made certain; and (3) the right to recovery must vest on a particular day (223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242-243) . The court rejected the argumentthat welfare benefits and unemployment benefits were designed to serve different functions and thus cases allowing interest on welfare benefits were not controlling. To the contrary, the court said that any distinction in the goals of various governmental programs is entirely unrelated to the right to interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) (223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 244) . Similarly, the court rejected the argument that 26 U.S.C. § 3304(a)(4), which requires that all money withdrawn from the unemployment fund of a state be used solely in payment of unemployment compensation, exclusive of expenses of administration, prohibited payment of interest on unemployment benefits (223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 244-246) .

In Santa Clara County Environmental Health Assn. v. County of Santa Clara (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 74, 218 Cal. Rptr. 678 , the trial court granted an environmental association's petition for writ of mandate directing the county to fix salary rates according to certain procedures, and the county appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, holding, inter alia, that the trial court did not err in awarding the association prejudgment interest because Civ. Code § 3287(a) is an exception to the general rule that interest cannot be recovered against a state or municipality (173 Cal. App. 3d 74, 84) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterestTortsDamagesInterestGeneral OverviewTortsPublic Entity LiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.31

§ 121.31 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest as Proper in Inverse Condemnation Action Even Though Amount of Damages Uncertain

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER INTEREST ON HIS/HER/ITS DAMAGES FROM _____, 19 _____, THE DATE OF THE COMPENSABLE TAKING, IN ORDER TO FULFILL THE CONSTITUTIONAL MANDATE FOR JUST COMPENSATION.

Certainty of Damages Unnecessary for Prejudgment Interest in Inverse Condemnation Action. The right to prejudgment interest in inverse condemnation accrues as of the date the compensable taking or injury occurs without regard to the nature or scope of the compensable event and without regard to the fact that the amount of damages may not be certain, or capable of being made certain, as of that date (Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 648, 657, 131 Cal. Rptr. 646, 552 P.2d 430).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded in an inverse condemnation action from the date that the compensable taking or injury occurred, despite the fact that damages were unliquidated at that time.

These points may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Chapter 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certainty of Damages Unnecessary for Prejudgment Interest in Inverse Condemnation Action

Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 648, 131 Cal. Rptr. 646, 552 P.2d 430 , was commenced by plaintiff landowners as an action for inverse condemnation against defendant, whose excavations resulted in damage to plaintiffs' property. The defendant appealed the award for plaintiffs, contending, in part, that the trial court erred in awarding prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287 because the amount of damages was not ascertained until the jury reached its verdict.

In affirming the award of prejudgment interest commencing with the date on which damage caused by the withdrawal of lateral support commenced, the Supreme Court held that the right to prejudgment interest in inverse condemnation actions accrues as of the date the compensable taking or injury occurred, without regard to the nature or scope of the compensable event (17 Cal. 3d 648, 657-658) . The Court did recognize the general rule, as stated in Lineman v. Schmid (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 204, 212, 195 P.2d 408 , that under Civ. Code § 3287, prejudgment interest is not allowable when the amount of damages must be determined from conflicting evidence and resolved by verdict, accord, or judgment. The Court held, however, that the general principle must be rejected with regard to inverse condemnation actions in order to fulfill the constitutional mandate for just compensation (17 Cal. 3d 648, 657) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Certainty of Damages Unnecessary for Prejudgment Interest in Inverse Condemnation Action

In Friedman v. City of Los Angeles (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 317, 125 Cal. Rptr. 93 , the court held that an award of prejudgment interest was appropriate pursuant to Civ. Code § 3287(a) in an action against a city for the wrongful demolition of a building. The uncontradicted testimony of the owner of the building as to the value of the destroyed property satisfied the requirement that the damages were reasonably certain (52 Cal. App. 3d 317, 322) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationRemedies

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.32

§ 121.32 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest in Court's Discretion From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages [Civ. Code § 3287(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THE COURT EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO AWARD PREJUDGMENT INTEREST FROM AS EARLY AS THE DATE THE ACTION WAS FILED, BECAUSE THIS IS A CONTRACT ACTION IN WHICH THE CLAIM IS UNLIQUIDATED.

Discretionary Prejudgment Interest From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages. Every person who is entitled under any judgment to receive damages based on a cause of action in contract in which the claim was unliquidated may also recover interest from a date prior to the entry of judgment as the court may, in its discretion, fix, but in no event earlier than the date the action was filed (Civ. Code § 3287(b); A & M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 495-497, 186 Cal. Rptr. 114).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the court should exercise its discretion to award prejudgment interest from as early as the date the action was filed. The argument supported by this form should only be made in a contract action in which the claim is unliquidated [Civ. Code § 3287(b)].

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the fact that this is a contract action for unliquidated damages.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretionary Prejudgment Interest From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages

In 1967, Civ. Code § 3287 was amended by adding the language now contained in subdivision (b), which provides that every person who is entitled under any judgment to receive damages based on a cause of action in contract in which the claim was unliquidated may also recover interest thereon from a date prior to the entry of judgment as the court may, in its discretion, fix, but in no event earlier than the date the action was filed.

In A & M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 186 Cal. Rptr. 114 , plaintiff, a solely owned farming company, had purchased a weight-sizing machine from defendant to help process its tomato crop. Defendant's standard form contract was used, which contained disclaimers of warranties and all consequential damages. The machine failed to work properly, and plaintiff's crop was lost. Plaintiff offered to return the machine for a refund, but defendant refused the offer and demanded full payment of the balance due. Plaintiff filed an action for damages for breach of express and implied warranties. After two trials resulted in a hung jury and an order for new trial, the trial court ruled that the waiver provisions were unconscionable, and the jury returned a general verdict for plaintiff. The court also awarded plaintiff attorney's fees and prejudgment interest. Defendant appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed judgment for plaintiff. The court upheld the trial court's determination that the disclaimer of warranties and the exclusion of consequential damages were unconscionable and therefore unenforceable. The court also affirmed the award of consequential damages and attorney's fees for plaintiff. The court then held that the trial court properly exercised its discretion in awarding prejudgment interest. Supporting factors included that over seven years passed between the time plaintiff filed its first complaint and the time judgment was entered. The fact that the hung jury in the first trial or the granting of the new trial motion after the second trial was not defendant's fault was irrelevant. The court stated that the award of seven-percent interest to plaintiff didnot penalize defendant for litigating a bona fide dispute; rather, it was merely a recognition of an additional amount of damage incurred by plaintiff as a result of defendant's breach of warranty. The court also held that the trial court was permitted to take cognizance of the exceedingly higher market interest rates during the seven-year period in exercising its discretion to award prejudgment interest. Finally, the court held that the trial court properly viewed defendant's refusal of plaintiff's offer of settlement as placing the prejudgment interest amount at risk (135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 495-497) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretionary Prejudgment Interest From Date of Filing of Complaint in Contract Action for Unliquidated Damages

In Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585 , plaintiff's horse was injured and had to be put to death while in the possession of defendant bloodstock agent. Plaintiff sought damages on both negligence and breach of contract theories. The jury verdict awarded damages under the contract cause of action and stated that no interest was to be awarded. The trial court nonetheless awarded prejudgment interest. Defendant appealed, arguing, among other things, that the award of interest was contrary to the verdict. The court of appeal affirmed, and, as to the interest award, held that the trial court, not the jury, had discretion to award prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(b), because the judgment was based on an unliquidated claim of contract damages. The court concluded that the trial court did not abuse this discretion (172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 555-556) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterestContracts LawRemediesLiquidated Damages

41 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.33

§ 121.33 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice [Civ. Code § 3288]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THE TRIER OF FACT EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION IN DECIDING WHETHER PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST BECAUSE THIS IS A CASE INVOLVING _____ [BREACH OF AN OBLIGATION NOT ARISING FROM CONTRACT and/or OPPRESSION and/or FRAUD and/or MALICE].

A. Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice. In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, interest may be given, in the discretion of the trier of fact, even though damages may be unliquidated (see Civ. Code § 3288; Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 ; Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 94, 106-107, 98 Cal. Rptr. 293, 490 P.2d 805 , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1316, 31 L. Ed. 2d 583).

[Optional] B. General Prayer for Relief as Sufficient to Support Court's Award of Interest. When the court is the trier of fact, a general prayer for "such other and further relief as the court deems just and proper" is sufficient to support the court's award of prejudgment interest under Civil Code Section 3288 (Segura v. McBride (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1028, 1041, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that discretionary prejudgment interest should be awarded by the trier of fact pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288. The argument supported by this form should be made only in an action for breach of an obligation not arising from contract, or in a case involving oppression, fraud, or malice [see Civ. Code § 3288].

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should point out the facts giving rise to the action and demonstrate that the suit is for breach of an obligation not arising from contract or that it involves oppression, fraud, or malice.

[b] Rate of Interest

The basic rate of prejudgment interest when the action is not based on a contract is the constitutional 7 percent rate [Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; see Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1585-1586, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343 ; Continental Airlines Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 433-434, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 ; see also Civ. Code § 3291 (ten percent interest on judgment calculated from date of any Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer that exceeded the judgment)]. Compound interest may be awarded in cases involving a fiduciary relationship [Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1586, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] .

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 121.50, 121.51, 121.53 and 121.54 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

Civ. Code § 3288 provides that in an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, interest may be given, in the discretion of the jury.

The factual background of Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 , is discussed in § 121.42[3][a]. In that case the defendant bank contended on appeal, among other things, that the trial court had abused its discretion when it awarded prejudgment interest, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288, calculated from the date of withdrawal. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that this negligence action was within the purview of Civ. Code § 3288 and that the decision to award prejudgment interest may not be overturned unless the trial court abused its discretion.

The Court explained that under Civ. Code § 3288 the trier of fact, whether it be judge or jury, may award prejudgment interest in an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice. A party does not have to prove both a breach of a noncontractual obligation and oppression, fraud, or malice. Even if plaintiff's damages are not liquidated, prejudgment interest may be awarded. Prejudgment interest is awarded to compensate a party for the loss of the use of his or her property. Since, in this case, the estate was deprived of the use of $250,000 for several years because of defendant's negligence, and since the date of each unauthorized withdrawal was readily ascertainable, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial judge to award prejudgment interest (21 Cal. 3d 801, 814-815) .

In Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 94, 98 Cal. Rptr. 293, 490 P.2d 805 , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041 , the plaintiff brought an action on the theory of constructive fraud to enforce the terms of an oral agreement made for her benefit between her mother and her stepfather whereby the stepfather agreed to bequeath to plaintiff certain property of plaintiff's mother. The trial court awarded plaintiff the fair market value of the subject property together with prejudment interest from the date of the stepfather's death. On appeal, defendants contended that since the value of the property was in dispute, the damages were unliquidated and an award of prejudgment interest was improper.

In rejecting this argument, the Supreme Court pointed out that plaintiff was not proceeding on a breach of contract action but was proceeding on the theory of constructive fraud. Therefore, she was entitled to the benefit of Civ. Code § 3288. This section allows the trier of fact to award prejudgment interest whether or not damages are liquidated. Since the stepfather had promised to turn over the mother's property to plaintiff on his death, and since his failure to do so constituted constructive fraud, the trial court had discretion under Civ. Code § 3288 to award plaintiff interest from the date on which the fraud occurred, even though the amount of damages was unliquidated (6 Cal. 3d 94, 106) .

The trial court also awarded plaintiff interest on stock sold by the stepfather before his death, with interest running from the date of sale. Defendants contended the obligation to plaintiff did not arise until the stepfather's death and that his estate should not be liable for interest prior to that time. In rejecting this argument, the Supreme Court held that former Civ. Code § 2237 (now see Prob. Code §§ 16440(a) (measure of liability for breach of trust), 16441 (measure of liability for interest) obligates a trustee who has wrongfully disposed of trust property to account for all profits so made, or the value of the use of the property, or to account for its proceeds with interest. Thus, the trial court properly awarded plaintiff interest from the date of sale on the proceeds of the stock sold by the stepfather during his life (6 Cal. 3d 94, 106-107) .

[b] General Prayer for Relief as Sufficient to Support Court's Award of Interest

In Segura v. McBride (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1028, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 , the plaintiff sued for damages based on violations of the Home Equity Sales Contract Act [see Civ. Code § 1695 et seq.]. The case was tried without a jury, and a judgment was entered in the plaintiff's favor. The judgment included an award of prejudgment interest.

On appeal, the court of appeal, although partially reversing the judgment on other grounds, upheld the trial court's power to award prejudgment interest. The court of appeal determined that Civ. Code § 3288 governed the issue because the action was for unliquidated damages on an action other than contract. The court then pointed out that when the trial court acts as the trier of fact, it has discretion to award prejudgment interest under Section 3288, citing Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 (discussed in § 121.33[3][a]). The court of appeal held that the plaintiff's general prayer for "such other and further relief as the court deems just and proper" was sufficient for the court, on its own, to invoke its power to award such prejudgment interest as it deemed just and equitable (5 Cal. App. 4th 1028, 1041) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Discretion of Trier of Fact for Breach of Obligation Not Arising From Contract or for Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

In Baker v. Pratt (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 222 Cal. Rptr. 253 , plaintiff sole minority shareholder brought a successful shareholder's derivative action alleging that the sole majority shareholder had fraudulently misappropriated corporate funds and property. Following defendant's motion for a new trial, the trial court forced plaintiff to waive prejudgment interest and accept a modified judgment in lieu of having the trial court grant the motion. The court of appeal rejected defendant's rationale that the trial court did not have the power to add interest to the awarded sums because those sums were not capable of having been made certain by calculation before the completion of the various accountings that were the basis for the entry of judgment. Rather, the court noted, under Civ. Code § 3288 a litigant proceeding on a theory of fraud arising out of a violation of a fiduciary relationship is entitled to interest at the discretion of the trier of fact, regardless of whether or not the awarded sum is unliquidated. When the trial court found that the defendant had violated former Civ. Code § 2228 (now see Prob. Code §§ 16002, 16004) by committing a fraud against the beneficiary of a trust, it laid the basis for its discretion to award prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3288 (176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 382-383) .

Zlotoff v. Tucker (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 988, 201 Cal. Rptr. 692 , was an action for breach of contract and fraud against the buyer in a contract for the sale of realty. The trial court found for plaintiff and awarded compensatory damages and fees under a liquidated-damages clause, in addition to awarding punitive damages for fraud (154 Cal. App. 3d 988, 990-994) . The court also awarded interest from the date that escrow closed on the sale between the parties, based on its finding that defendant had committed fraud in the inducement. Defendant appealed and contended, inter alia, that it was error to award interest from this date because the liquidated-damages clause provided only for interest from the date of the breach, which occurred sometime later. The court of appeal affirmed. In regard to the award of interest, the court noted that the trial court had found defendant liable for both breech of contract and fraud. The court held that the trial court had acted within its discretion in awarding interest, citing Civ. Code § 3288 (154 Cal. App. 3d 988, 994) .

In Harsany v. Cessna Aircraft Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 196 Cal. Rptr. 374 , an action to recover the value of an aircraft allegedly destroyed by defendants' negligence, the court of appeal held that the loss of the plane was a property loss for which prejudgment interest could be granted in the discretion of the trier of fact (148 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 1144) . The court noted that in Greater Westchester Homeowners Asso. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 102-103, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , cert. denied (1980) 449 U.S. 820, 101 S. Ct. 77, 66 L. Ed. 2d 22 (discussed in § 121.50[3][a]), the Supreme Court held that prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3288 was not appropriate when the loss is intangible and inherently nonpecuniary. However, the court in Harsany held that Greater Westchester merely precludes interest on damages awarded for emotional and mental distress and does not preclude an award of interest on a property loss, even when the amount of the loss is disputed (148 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 1143-1144) .

In Gherman v. Colburn (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 544, 140 Cal. Rptr. 330 , an action between joint venturers involving alleged breach of fiduciary duties, the court of appeal held that a jury may award interest even on an unliquidated sum against a joint venturer who has violated his or her fiduciary duties (72 Cal. App. 3d 544, 587) .

In Vogelsang v. Wolpert (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 102, 38 Cal. Rptr. 440 , a fraud action, defendant contended the trial court erred by awarding plaintiff both prejudgment interest and punitive damages. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that it is well settled that interest may be awarded under Civ. Code § 3288 in a fraud action in the discretion of the trier of fact. Furthermore, interest and exemplary damages are not mutually exclusive; both may properly be awarded in the same case (227 Cal. App. 2d 102, 125) .

In Nathanson v. Murphy (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 462, 305 P.2d 710 , a fraud action, the court of appeal held that the trial judge acted within his discretion by entering a nunc pro tunc order modifying his original order, which had granted plaintiff prejudgment interest. The new order allowed interest only from the time of the judgment. In affirming the trial court's nunc pro tunc order, the court of appeal held that in a fraud case the trial court possesses discretion whether or not interest shall be allowed from the date of the fraud or only from the date of judgment. When Civ. Code §§ 3287 and 3288 are read together, the proper rule is that the defrauded party may ask for damages from the date of the fraud, but whether the interest is to be awarded is left to the discretion of the trier of fact and is to be exercised after considering the circumstances of the case (147 Cal. App. 2d 462, 466-467) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestRates

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.34

§ 121.34 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest Rate Stipulated in Contract Continues Following Breach [Civ. Code § 3289(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT _____ PERCENT, THE RATE STIPULATED IN THE CONTRACT, FROM _____ [date], THE TIME OF THE BREACH, UNTIL THE CONTRACT IS SUPERSEDED BY A VERDICT OR OTHER NEW OBLIGATION.

A. Interest Rate Stipulated in Contract Continues Following Breach. Anylegal rate of interest stipulated by a contract remains chargeable after a breach of the contract, as before, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation (Civ. Code § 3289(a); Roodenburg v. Pavestone Company, L.P. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 190-192, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 ; Casey v. Gibbons (1902) 136 Cal. 368, 371, 68 P. 1032 ; Roodenburg v. Pavestone Company, L.P. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 191-192, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 ; Reid v. Balter (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1196, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287).

[Optional] B. Retail Installment Contract. For purposes of Civil Code Section 3289, the rate of the contracted finance charge shall be the legal rate of interest stipulated by a retail installment contract subject to Civil Code Sections 1801-1812.20 (Civ. Code § 3289.5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded at the rate stipulated in the contract from the time of the breach until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation. Optional Paragraph B is for use when the contract involved is a retail installment contract governed by the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act contained in Civ. Code § 1801 et seq. [see Civ. Code § 3298.5]. The contention supported by this form may be raised in an action based on breach of a contract that contains a provision specifying the agreed rate of interest.

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort , Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should specifically point out that this is an action for breach of contract, the date of the breach, and the clause in the contract that specifies the agreed rate of interest.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest Rate Stipulated in Contract Continues Following Breach

Roodenburg v. Pavestone Company, L.P. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 , involved an operating agreement whereby the parties formed a limited liability company. The agreement provided that if the plaintiff was terminated from the company or resigned for cause, the defendant would purchase his interest in the company for the value of his capital account at the time. When the parties could not agree on the value of the capital account, the plaintiff sued for breach of contract and was awarded damages. The court awarded the plaintiff prejudgment interest. The defendant appealed, arguing that Civ. Code § 3287(a) barred prejudgment interest because the amount owed on the breach of contract claim was uncertain until the jury reached its verdict. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that the operating agreement included a provision for prejudgment interest, and therefore Civ. Code § 3287(a) did not apply (171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 190-192) .

Casey v. Gibbons (1902) 136 Cal. 368, 68 P. 1032 , was an action to foreclose a mortgage. The defendant appealed the judgment of foreclosure, contending, among other things, that the trial court erred in allowing interest after maturity of the note. In affirming the judgment of the trial court, the Supreme Court, relying on Civ. Code § 3289, held that the rate of interest was stipulated in the contract and remains chargeable after a breach of the contract, as before, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation (136 Cal. 368, 371) .

In Roodenburg v. Pavestone Company, L.P. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 191-192, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 , the plaintiff and the defendant formed a limited liability company. The company's operating agreement appointed the plaintiff general manager and provided that, if the plaintiff resigned for cause, the company would purchase his interest in the company for the value of his capital account at the time plus a severance payment. The operating agreement provided that any amounts not paid when due would bear interest at the rate of 1.5 percent per month until paid. When the plaintiff resigned and the parties could not agree on the value of the capital account, the plaintiff sued the company for breach of the operating agreement. The jury found for the plaintiff. The court awarded plaintiff prejudgment interest.

On appeal, the defendant argued that the interest award was improper under Civ. Code § 3287(a) because the amount owed on plaintiff's breach of contract claim was uncertain until the jury reached its verdict. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that uncertainty in the amount of the judgment was irrelevant when interest was awarded pursuant to a provision of the contract, and not under Civ. Code § 3287(a) [171 Cal. App. 4th 185, 191] .

Reid v. Balter (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287 , was an action to collect the unpaid balance on an installment note. Plaintiffs were successful, but were only awarded interest at the contract rate (12 percent) until March 1, 1988, the date the last installment was due under the terms of the note. The trial court allowed interest thereafter, until the date of judgment, at the rate of 10 percent per annum. The court of appeal reversed to require recalculation of interest at 12 percent interest through the date of judgment (14 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1196) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.35

§ 121.35 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest Rate Not Stipulated in Contract Entered Into After January 1, 1986 [Civ. Code § 3289(b)]

[1] FORM

[This form may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT TEN PERCENT PER ANNUM AFTER THE BREACH BECAUSE THE CONTRACT WAS ENTERED INTO AFTER JANUARY 1, 1986, DOES NOT STIPULATE A LEGAL RATE OF INTEREST, AND IS NOT A NOTE SECURED BY A DEED OF TRUST ON REAL PROPERTY.

Interest Rate Not Stipulated in Contract. If a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, the obligation shall bear interest at a rate of 10 percent per annum after a breach (Civ. Code § 3289(b)). For the purposes of Civil Code Section 3289(b), the term "contract" shall not include a note secured by a deed of trust of real property (Civ. Code § 3289(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded at the rate of 10 percent per annum after breach of a contract that does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, and is not a note secured by a deed of trust on real property [see Civ. Code § 3289(b)].

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that plaintiff is entitled to prejudgment interest at ten percent per annum after the breach of a contract that does not does stipulate a legalrate of interest. This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Therefore, counsel should show that the contract was entered into after January 1, 1986, and does not stipulate a legal rate of interest.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.36

§ 121.36 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Usurious Rate Stipulated in Contract Entered Into After January 1, 1986 [Civ. Code § 3289(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT THE RATE OF 10 PERCENT PER ANNUM AFTER BREACH EVEN THOUGH THE RATE STIPULATED BY THE CONTRACT WAS USURIOUS.

When Rate Stipulated Is Usurious. The 10 percent interest rate of Section 3289(b) of the Civil Code is payable after breach when a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, provides a usurious rate of interest (Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1432-1433, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310 (disapproved on another ground in Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 704, 706-709, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded at the rate of 10 percent per annum after breach of a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, that provided for interest at a usurious rate [see Civ. Code § 3289(b) (not applicable to note secured by deed of trust on real property)]. This form should be combined with additional authorities from § 121.34 or 121.35 when appropriate.

Note that the Supreme Court disapproved the authority cited in this form on another ground, and the authority should therefore be used with caution [see discussion in § 121.36[3][a]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the particular case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Rate Stipulated Is Usurious

Plaintiff in Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310 , did grading work for defendant pursuant to a contract executed on September 29, 1986, which provided that all sums not paid when due would thereafter bear interest at 1.5 percent per month. The trial court found that defendant owed plaintiff $46,649, and awarded costs, attorney's fees, and interest at the rate of 10 percent per annum from February 3, 1987, the date of breach. Defendant paid the rest of the judgment and appealed the interest award. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal first concluded that the rate provided by the contract was usurious and therefore void (214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1431) . The court noted the rule that payment of usurious interest on a note is prohibited before the maturity of the note, but thereafter, the payee is entitled to interest at the legal rate (214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1431-1432) . Denial of interest before maturity is considered sufficient deterrent, but after maturity, if the obligor withholds payment of the principal sum, it is neither unjust nor contrary to public policy to allow interest at the legal rate on any judgment for the principal sum (214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1432) . The court concluded that the same rationale should be applied in this situation and that the express language of Civ. Code § 3289(b) applied to allow recovery of interest at the rate of 10 percent per annum from the date of breach (214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1432-1433) .

Note that the Supreme Court disapproved the decision in Mark McDowell Corp. to the extent that it held the contract provision for a late charge constituted "interest" at a usurious rate [see Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 704, 706-709, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (discussed in § 121.37[3][b])]. Thus, the decision in Mark McDowell Corp. should be used with caution as an authority; it is arguably still valid precedent for the proposition that prejudgment interest may be recovered at the legal rate when a contract stipulates a usurious rate, but it should not be cited as authority for the proposition that the particular type of provision involved in the case is usurious.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Rate Stipulated Is Usurious

The rule applicable to notes was applied in Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 , to a usurious note executed before January 1, 1986. Then, the legal rate was 7 percent per annum; and interest at that rate was held recoverable after maturity (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 744) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawDefensesUsuryContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.37

§ 121.37 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--"Time-Price" Doctrine Makes Usury Law Inapplicable to Finance Charge Stipulated in Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO _____ [PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT THE RATE or THE FINANCE CHARGE] OF _____ [specify percent] PERCENT PER ANNUM IMPOSED PURSUANT TO THE CONTRACT BECAUSE THE CHARGE IS A TIME-PRICE DIFFERENTIAL AND THUS USURY LAW IS INAPPLICABLE.

A. Time-Price Differential Is Not Interest. A "time-price" differential or a "finance charge" in a bona fide sale of goods or services is not a form of interest within the meaning of the California Constitution, Article XV, provision against usury (Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 704, 709, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (disapproving contrary holdings in Crestwood Lumber Co. v, Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 819, 148 Cal. Rptr. 129 , and Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310); Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 872, 880, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893).

[Optional] B. Late Charge in Commercial Contract. A provision in a commercial contract that calls for interest at a specified percent per year on late payments does not violate the usury law. Such a late charge is not subject to the usury law, because it does not constitute payment for the "loan or forbearance of any money" within the meaning of the California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1. It is exempt from the usury law under the time-price doctrine and the principle that a debtor by a voluntary act cannot render an otherwise valid contract usurious (Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (disapproving contrary holdings in Crestwood Lumber Co. v. Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 819, 148 Cal. Rptr. 129 , and Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310); O'Connor v. Televideo System, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 718, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237).

[Optional] C. Charge as Liquidated Damages. A finance charge of a specified percent per year on late payments constitutes a valid liquidated damage provision unless the party seeking to invalidate it establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made (Civ. Code § 1671; O'Connor v. Televideo System, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 719, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237 ; Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 885, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893).

[Optional] D. Finance Charge in Retail Installment Account. A finance charge of a specified percent per year on unpaid balances owed on a retail installment account subject to the Unruh Act (Section 1801 et seq. of the Civil Code) is subject to the time-price doctrine, is not a loan or forbearance of money, and is not subject to the usury law (Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 880, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded at a rate provided in a contract [see Civ. Code § 3289(a)], despite the fact that the rate apparently exceeds that permitted under the usury law. The ground for the contention is that the payment is not interest but is actually a late charge or "time-price" differential.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the particular case and the points of law raised. Specifically, counsel should set forth the contract terminology and the circumstances surrounding its making to provide the factual basis for establishing the transaction as a "bona fide credit sale."

[b] Award of "Time-Price" Differential, Late Charge, or Finance Charge as Prejudgment Interest

The majority in Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 , in effect affirmed the trial court's award of a sum as prejudgment interest, but held that this sum was not subject to the usury law, because it constituted a time-price differential or finance charge rather than "interest." As pointed out by the minority opinion, the majority declined to address an important issue: whether such a sum may be properly awarded as "prejudgment interest" under Civ. Code § 3289(a) when in fact it is not deemed to be "interest" at all [Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 716, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 (opn. of Mosk, J., concurring and dissenting)]. In other cases, the recovery of such sums was apparently upheld as a "finance charge" that was essentially a part of the plaintiff's damages (or liquidated damages), rather than as prejudgment interest [see O'Connor v. Televideo System, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237 (contract apparently called the sum "interest"); Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 880, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 (contract and statute used the term "finance charge")].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time-Price Differential Is Not Interest

Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d 1247 , is discussed in § 121.37[3][b].

Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 , is discussed in § 121.37[3][d].

[b] Late Charge in Commercial Contract

Southwest Concrete Production v. Gosh Construction Corp. (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 701, 274 Cal. Rptr. 404, 798 P.2d

1247 , arose from a dispute regarding the quality of pipe supplied by plaintiff to defendant construction company. Plaintiff sued to recover the unpaid balance. The jury held that the invoices and delivery tickets that accompanied the pipe constituted a contract, which defendant had breached, and that the contract contained a provision for interest of 1.5 percent per month (18 percent per year) on late payments. Plaintiff was awarded prejudgment interest at the rate of 18 percent per year based on the contract. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal, although reversing and remanding on other grounds, affirmed the award of prejudgment interest at 18 percent, holding that the late charge was not subject to the usury law. The Supreme Court granted review to resolve the conflict among courts of appeal on the issue of whether a provision in a commercial contract that calls for interest at 18 percent per year on late payments violates the usury law, and concluded that it did not (51 Cal. 3d 701, 704, 709) . The Court began its discussion by noting that the California usury law is based on Cal. Const., Art. XV, § 1, which limits that interest payable for "any loan or forbearance of any money." A loan of money is delivery of a sum of money to another under a contract to return at some future time an equivalent amount. A forbearance of money is the giving of further time for the payment of a debt or an agreement not to enforce a claim at its due date. However, both a loan of money and a forbearance are distinguished from a sale, which is the transfer of property in a thing for a price in money (51 Cal. 3d 701, 705) .

In determining whether a transaction constitutes a loan or forbearance, one looks to the substance rather than the form of the transaction: the issue is whether or not the bargain of the parties, in the light of all circumstances, has as its true object the hire of money at an excessive rate of interest (51 Cal. 3d 701, 705) . One exception to the usury law that arises in this context is the "time-price" doctrine. The "time-price" doctrine arises when property is sold on credit as an advance over the cash price. In this type of transaction, often called a bona fide credit sale, the seller finances the purchase of property by extending payments over time and charging a higher price for carrying the financing. A bona fide credit sale is not subject to the usury law because it does not involve a loan or forbearance (51 Cal. 3d 701, 705) .

Another exception to the usury law is the rule that a debtor by voluntary act, such as voluntary default, cannot render an otherwise valid transaction usurious. If the excessive interest is caused by a contingency under the debtor's control, the transaction will not be deemed usurious (51 Cal. 3d 701, 706) .

Although Crestwood Lumber Co. v. Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 819, 148 Cal. Rptr. 129 , involved substantially similar facts, the Supreme Court noted that the reasoning in Crestwood Lumber Co. had been criticized by legal commentators, had been undercut by Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 (discussed in § 121.37[3][d]), and failed to consider Com. Code § 2207 when it concluded that the late charge did not qualify as a liquidated damage provision because the parties had not agreed to it (51 Cal. 3d 701, 706-708) . Com. Code § 2207 provides that additional terms become part of a contract between merchants unless the person receiving them objects to them. Under Com. Code § 2207, the clause providing for late charges on overdue invoices becomes part of the contract (51 Cal. 3d 701, 708) . Nevertheless, the Court did not reach the question of the validity of these late charges as liquidated damages (51 Cal. 3d 701, 709) .

The Supreme Court said that Crestwood Lumber Co. erred in holding the transaction to be a cash sale; it was not; it was a credit sale, as was this transaction (51 Cal. 3d 701, 708) . A cash sale is one in which the buyer and the seller exchange the goods and payment at the same time; any other method of payment is "on credit." This was a credit sale because payment was to be made within a certain number of days after delivery of the pipe. If payment was not made by that date, then finance charges would accrue. There was no forbearance. A forbearance is giving further time for payment of a debt or an agreement not to insist on payment at the due date. If the invoices truly constituted an agreement to give further time for payment in exchange for an 18 percent surcharge on the principal, then the buyer could conceivably forbear ad infinitum, so long as the finance charge was paid, and the creditor could never recover the principal. The creditor would never be able to sue to collect the money past due because it was receiving consideration for its agreement to forbear (51 Cal. 3d 701, 708) .

Plaintiff in O'Connor v. Televideo System, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237 , was the assignee of a company that performed computer circuit board assembly for defendant. When the work was complete, the company would send defendant invoices that stated the amount due should be paid within 30 days and provided that "All past due accounts are subject to a late charge of 1 1/2% per month or 18% per annum." The company filed a complaint for damages, account stated, goods sold and delivered, and open book account. The complaint alleged that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in the amount of $128,401.92 plus interest at the rate of 1.5 percent per month. The matter was triedwithout a jury, and the court found that defendant owed $43,800 for assembly work, that the parties had agreed to a charge of 1.5 percent per month on the amounts past due, that the interest charge was reasonable, and that plaintiff was entitled to collect it. Defendant filed a request for statement of decision to determine whether the finance charges assessed on the unpaid debt were usurious and barred by California law. The trial court concluded that the finance charge represented a "time-price" differential, agreed to by the parties, that the charge was commercially reasonable, and that it was consistent with the existing practice between the parties. The amended judgment was for $43,800 along with finance charges at 18 percent per annum totaling $21,024. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the charge was not usurious but instead constituted a valid liquidated damages provision (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 713, 719) . The court defined usury as the exacting, taking, or receiving of a greater rate than is allowed by law, for the use of loan of money. A transaction is usurious if there is a loan at greater than the legal rate of interest or an exaction at more than the legal rate for the forbearance of a debt or sum of money due. A loan of money is a contract by which one delivers a sum of money to another, and the latter agrees to return at a future time a sum equivalent to that which he or she borrowed [Civ. Code § 1912]. A forbearance is the giving of further time for the payment of a debt or an agreement not to insist on payment at the due date. Both a loan of money and a forbearance are to be distinguished from a sale, which is the transfer of property in a thing for a price in money. To determine whether a transaction is usurious, one must look to the substance rather than the form of the transaction (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 713) .

One principle that may render the usury laws inapplicable is that a debtor by his or her voluntary act cannot render an otherwise valid transaction usurious. If the excessive interest is caused by a contingency under the lender's control, or not under the borrower's control, the transaction is usurious, but not when the contingency is under the borrower's control (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714) .

Another exception to the usury law is the "time-price" doctrine. This doctrine applies when property is sold on credit as an advance over the cash price. In these circumstances, the seller finances the purchase of property by extending payments over time. This type of transaction, often called a bona fide credit sale, is not subject to the usury law, because it does not involve a loan or forbearance (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714) . The court discussed Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 (discussed in § 121.37[3][d]), which held that retail revolving charge accounts were bona fide sales of goods to which the time-price doctrine applied, and Crestwood Lumber Co. v. Citizens Sav. & Loan Assn. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 819, 148 Cal. Rptr. 129 , and Mark McDowell Corp. v. LSM 128 (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 263 Cal. Rptr. 310 , both of which involved commercial transactions and both of which held an 18 percent per annum charge on past due installments to be usurious (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714-716). The court declined to follow Crestwood Lumber Co. and Mark McDowell Corp. for several reasons. First, neither considered the principle that a transaction not usurious at its inception cannot become usurious by virtue of the debtor's voluntary default (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 716-717) . Second, the charge was not usurious, because there was no forbearance. The quoted portion of the contract did not constitute a forbearance because the company did not agree to forgo its right to collect the money immediately; it only stated that a penalty would be imposed if it was made to wait for payment (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 717) . Third, the court did not believe, as had Crestwood Lumber Co. and Mark McDowell Corp., that Fox was distinguishable because it involved transactions subject to the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 717-718) . Finally, the court noted that the purpose of the usury law supported its conclusion that the transaction was not usurious. The usury laws were enacted primarily to protect the indigent, who are helpless to protect themselves in a practical sense. That is not the situation in this case, involving two companies of relatively equal bargaining power, evidently dealing at arm's length, and freely agreeing to an invoice form that is commonplace in these types of transactions. Thus, the court concluded that the transaction was not usurious, because (1) it was not usurious at its inception but only became so if the debtor did not make timely payment and (2) there was no forbearance as required by Cal. Const., Art. XV, § 1 (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 718) .

[c] Charge as Liquidated Damages

The facts and procedural background of O'Connor v. Televideo System, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 267 Cal. Rptr. 237 , are discussed in § 121.37[3][b]. Defendant also argued that the finance charge was an invalid liquidated damage provision or penalty within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1671 and former Com. Code § 2718. Civ. Code § 1671(b) states that a provision in a contract liquidating damages for the breach of the contract is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate it establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made. Former Com. Code § 2718(1) provided that damages for breach by either party may be liquidated in the agreement but only at an amount that is reasonable in the light of the anticipated or actual harm caused by the breach, the difficulties of the proof of loss, and the inconvenience of no feasibility of otherwise obtaining an adequate remedy. Read together, it is clear that defendant must establish that the charge was unreasonable before the court could conclude that it should be invalidated. However, the court said, the defendant wholly failed to establish that the charge was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made. Moreover, the trial court in its statement of decision expressly found that the charge was reasonable under the circumstances and had been agreed to by both parties to the contract (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 718) . Their agreement is also established by Com. Code § 2207, which provides that additional terms become part of the contract between merchants unless the person receiving them objects. Accordingly, the 18 percentcharge constituted a valid liquidated damage provision (218 Cal. App. 3d 709, 719) .

The facts and procedural background of Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 , are discussed in § 121.37[3][d]. In the case of oil company accounts that were not revolving, that is, that required the bill to be paid when rendered and imposed finance charges only if the customer failed to pay the bill within 25 days of receipt, plaintiffs also challenged the charges as invalid liquidated damages. The court distinguished Garrett v. Coast & Southern Federal Savings (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 731, 108 Cal. Rptr. 845, 511 P.2d 1197 , on which plaintiffs relied, noting that the charge in that case was unreasonable because it was 2 percent of the unpaid mortgage principal, most of which was not due, whereas, there was uncontradicted evidence that the oil company's credit card operations incurred substantial losses, that delinquent accounts cost a substantial amount to process, that the 1.5 percent finance charge does not cover the extra expense, and that it would be impracticable, extremely difficult, and expensive to attempt to determine the actual damage the oil company suffered as a result of a customer's default, and that the late charge represents a reasonable endeavor to fix the amount of the oil company's loss (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 885) .

[d] Finance Charge in Retail Installment Account

Fox v. Federated Department Stores, Inc. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 156 Cal. Rptr. 893 , represented 11 consolidated class actions challenging as usurious the finance charges imposed by defendants on retail installment accounts. Defendants were retail stores and oil companies. The retail store accounts were admittedly subject to the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.), and the rates charged on those accounts were within the limits set by the Unruh Act. Thus, the challenge to those accounts was made on the ground that the Unruh Act was unconstitutional as violative of the usury provision [see Cal. Const., art. XV]. Judgment was for defendants, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, agreeing with the trial court that the usury provision is inapplicable to finance charges on retail installment accounts because those "retail installment sales" are not loans or forbearances within the meaning of the usury provision (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 872, 874) . The oil company accounts also were held to be retail installment sales subject to the Unruh Act and the charges were within the limits allowed by that act (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 884) . The store accounts were called "retail installment accounts" or revolving accounts. The account is established in a single agreement between the store and the customer without a down payment. It permits the customer to make continuing credit purchases from time to time without having to enter into a new contract on the occasion of each purchase. The agreement provides for minimum monthly installment payments, but the customer has the option of making payments in excess of the minimum monthly amount at any time. The account carries a "finance charge" as defined in Civ. Code § 1802.10, which is not precomputed, but is periodically calculated on the monthly balances (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 875) .

The court discussed the origin and history of the "time-price" doctrine, which was first enunciated in England in 1774 and first announced in this country in 1861. California's first usury law was enacted in 1918. In 1927, the Supreme Court in Verbeck v. Clymer (1927) 202 Cal. 557, 261 P. 1017 , adopted the time-price doctrine, describing it as applicable to a bona fide sale in which the purchase price is named and the terms of sale are fixed and certain deferred payments are provided for. There is no element of loan, nor is the transaction a subterfuge devised to conceal what is in fact a loan (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 876) .

The court then discussed the history and legislative intent of the Unruh Act, which was first adopted in 1959, and traced the terminology used in the original act [see former Civ. Code §§ 1802.9, 1802.10 ("time sale price"; "service charge" is synonymous with "time price differential")] (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 878-880) . The court concluded that the revolving charge accounts are validly classified as subject to the time-price doctrine, are not loans or forbearance of money, are not subject to the usury law, and that the act is constitutional (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 880) .

With respect to the oil company accounts, the court held that the fact that the sales were made by independent retailers while the credit cards were issued by the oil companies did not prevent application of the time-price doctrine to the transactions (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 882-884) . In the case of oil company accounts that were not revolving, that is, that required the bill to be paid when rendered, and imposed finance charges only if the customer failed to pay the bill within 25 days of receipt, the court applied the rule that a transaction not usurious at its inception does not become usurious by virtue of a finance charge levied because of the customer's voluntary act in failing to make payment when due (94 Cal. App. 3d 867, 884) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawDefensesUsuryContracts LawRemediesLiquidated Damages

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.38

§ 121.38 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Absence of Prayer for Interest as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included, along with additional points, in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER PREJUDGMENT INTEREST DESPITE THE ABSENCE OF A PRAYER FOR INTEREST.

Absence of Prayer for Interest as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest. If the plaintiff in a contested action is entitled to interest, the court may award interest even though the complaint contains no prayer for interest (Sanders v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 252, 263, 90 Cal. Rptr. 169, 475 P.2d 201 ; see Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 662 n.12, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179).

[Plaintiff should include additional points, such as those set forth in §§ 121.30 -121.34, 121.39 -121.43, and 121.46, which specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded despite the absence of a prayer for interest. This form should ordinarily be combined with additional points, such as the ones set forth in §§ 121.30 -121.34, 121.39 -121.43, and 121.46, that specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions

After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Prayer for Interest as Not Precluding Prejudgment Interest

Sanders v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 252, 90 Cal. Rptr. 169, 475 P.2d 201 , was an action by city employees seeking retroactive salary and wage increases. The superior court ordered that defendants pay certain salary and wage increases retroactively and, despite the absence of a prayer in the complaint for interest, prejudgment interest.

In affirming the order appealed from, the Supreme Court held that an action to recover retroactive pay increases is an action for damages within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287 and that in this case the damages were capable of being made certain before judgment. Furthermore, the Court held, in a contested action interest may be awarded if the plaintiff is entitled thereto, even though the complaint contains no prayer for interest (3 Cal. 3d 252, 262-263) .

The issues before the California Supreme Court in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179 included a claim for prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291 (prejudgment interest allowed if plaintiff obtains more favorable judgment than offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998). The court of appeal, in reaching the merits of the claim, had preliminarily held that Civ. Code § 3291 does not require a plaintiff to demand prejudgment interest in the complaint (6 Cal. 4th 644, 650) . In similarly reaching the merits, the Supreme Court noted that the court of appeals had necessarily decided the procedural issue regarding the necessity of a prayer for prejudgment interest before proceeding on the merits (6 Cal. 4th 644, 662 n.12). In that the Supreme Court remanded the case for recomputation of prejudgment interest (6 Cal. 4th 644, 662), the case implicitly supports the appellate court holding that no prayer is required.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.39

§ 121.39 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Accepting Payment of Principal as Waiving Claim to Interest Only When Parties Dealing at Arm's Length

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER PREJUDGMENT INTEREST DESPITE PLAINTIFF'S ACCEPTANCE OF PAYMENT OF PRINCIPAL BECAUSE THE PARTIES WERE NOT DEALING AT ARM'S LENGTH.

Accepting Payment of Principal as Waiving Claim to Interest Only When Parties Dealing at Arm's Length. The principle embodied in Section 3290 of the Civil Code that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest is a rule of construction to be applied between parties dealing at arm's length, when their agreement is to be inferred from the fact that principal is tendered and accepted. This rule cannot be invoked when the conditions of payment are such that the creditor has no opportunity to assert his or her claim for interest at the time of payment because of the inequality of bargaining positions of the parties (Mitchell v. City of Los Angeles (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 618, 630, 49 Cal. Rptr. 13 ; McConnell v. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 469, 482-483, 24 Cal. Rptr. 5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that his or her right to prejudgment interest was not waived by acceptance of payment of the principal because the parties were not dealing atarm's length. The contention supported by this memorandum is most likely to be raised by plaintiff in a contract action in which the defendant has paid the principal allegedly owing.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch.

65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should specifically demonstrate that the parties were not dealing at arm's length and that plaintiff lacked the opportunity or bargaining power to assert his or her claim to interest at the time that defendant made the payment of principal.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 121.48 and 121.49 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accepting Payment of Principal as Waiving Claim to Interest Only When Parties Dealing at Arm's Length

Mitchell v. City of Los Angeles (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 618, 49 Cal. Rptr. 13 , was a consolidated action commenced by retired fire and police department pensioners and widows of pensioners against a city and its board of pension commissioners to determine pension rights and benefits affecting them.

Following the initial judgment in a related case, the defendant sent plaintiffs checks accompanied by a notice informing the recipients that they could either accept or reject the checks; however, under Civ. Code § 3290, accepting the check meant waiver of any claim to interest (239 Cal. App. 2d 618, 629) .

In reversing the judgment solely for the purpose of making a proper computation of the interest, the court of appeal stated that the trial court correctly held that Civ. Code § 3290 was never intended to authorize a forced election in instances involving parties whose relationships were of the type here presented. For public officials to threaten to withhold the payment of funds which they concede are due and owing to pensioners unless the latter forfeit other sums to which they are entitled, or their claim thereto, is not in accord with the duties and obligations of such officials (239 Cal. App. 2d 618, 630) .

McConnell v. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 469, 24 Cal. Rptr. 5 , was an appeal from an order of the superior court instructing the Insurance Commissioner, as liquidator of the insolvent Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of California, regarding the payment of interest on claims for damages payable to those holders of noncancellable disability insurance policies who declined to accept reinsurance in the reorganized company (205 Cal. App. 2d 469, 471) . Defendant contended that plaintiffs' acceptance of payment clearly designated as a payment of principal in full was a waiver of their right to interest (205 Cal. App. 2d 469, 482) .

The court of appeal rejected this contention, stating instead that Civ. Code § 3290 (providing that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest) is a rule of construction to be applied between parties dealing at arm's length, when their agreement is to be inferred from the fact that principal is tendered and accepted. This rule cannot be invoked, however, when the conditions of payment are such that the creditor has no opportunity to assert his or her claim for interest at the time of payment (205 Cal. App. 2d 469, 482-483) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsWaiversGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.40

§ 121.40 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Accepting Payment of Principal as Not Waiving Claim to Interest Due Under Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER INTEREST DESPITE PLAINTIFF'S ACCEPTANCE OF PAYMENT OF PRINCIPAL BECAUSE SUCH INTEREST IS DUE UNDER THE CONTRACT BETWEEN THE PARTIES.

Accepting Payment of Principal as Not Waiving Claim to Interest Due and Payable Under Contract. The provision set forth in Section 3290 of the Civil Code that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest applies only to situations in which interest is claimed as damages for nonpayment or default payment of a debt. It does not apply to situations in which the interest claimed is part of the debt, that is, when the claim is based on a contract, express or implied, to pay interest (Kawasho Internat. (U.S.A.), Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Service, Inc. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 794, 201 Cal. Rptr. 640).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that his or her right to interest was not waived by acceptance of thepayment of the principal because such interest is not claimed as damages but has accrued under the terms of a contract between the parties. The contention supported by this form is most likely to be raised by plaintiff in a contract action in which the defendant contends that the whole principal owing has been paid.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue, as, for example, on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)]. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should specifically demonstrate that the interest is claimed not as damages but as a debt accrued under a contract provision, express or implied, to pay interest, which remains owing notwithstanding payment of the principal obligation.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 121.48 and 121.49 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accepting Payment of Principal as Not Waiving Claim to Interest Due and Payable Under Contract

Kawasho Internat. (U.S.A.), Inc. v. Lakewood Pipe Service, Inc. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 201 Cal. Rptr. 640 , was a contract action in which plaintiff sought to recover sums allegedly owed by defendant, who had paid the principal amounts owed under the contract but had not paid the interest accrued under the contract because of defendant's delinquent payments of the principal. Defendant appealed the judgment in plaintiff's favor and argued, inter alia, that plaintiff had waived all claim to interest under Civ. Code § 3290 by accepting payment of the principal amounts.

The court of appeal affirmed. In rejecting defendant's contention, the court held that Civ. Code § 3290 applied only to situations in which interest is claimed as damages for nonpayment or default in payment of a debt, and not when the interest is claimed, as here, as part of the debt, on the basis of a contract, express or implied, to pay interest (152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 794) . The court reasoned that interest due under a contract obligation to pay interest is a part of the debt, becoming an accretion to the principal. Thus any payment less than the aggregate of the principal and accrued interest is merely a payment on account and does not extinguish the right to interest on the principal (152 Cal. App. 3d 785, 795) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.41

§ 121.41 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AS PART OF HIS/HER/ITS COMPENSATORY DAMAGES BECAUSE PREJUDGMENT INTEREST IS MERELY COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF USE OF MONEY.

Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss. The inclusion of interest in a verdict is not the granting of damages in excess of the loss incurred; it is simply a recognition that one of the elements of direct loss suffered by a party deprived of the use of his or her money or other property is the value of its use, which in the case of money is interest at the legal rate (see Civ. Code §§ 1915, 3302; Prob. Code §§ 16440, 16441; Nordahl v. Department of Real Estate (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 665-666, 121 Cal. Rptr. 794).

[Plaintiff should include additional points, such as those set forth in §§ 121.30 -121.39, 9, 10, and 20, which specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded and that the inclusion of interest in the judgment is not the awarding of damages in excess of the loss. This form should ordinarily be combined with additional points, such as the ones set forth in §§ 121.30 -121.39, 121.42, 121.43, and 121.46, which specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion of the loss suffered by plaintiff by being deprived of the use of his or her money.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

Civ. Code § 1915 defines interest as the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties for the use, or forbearance, or detention of money.

Civ. Code § 3302 provides that the detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest.

Prob. Code § 16440(a) provides that if the trustee commits a breach of trust, the trustee is chargeable with any of the following that is appropriate under the circumstances: (1) any loss or depreciation in value of the trust estate resulting from the breach of trust, with interest; (2) any profit made by the trustee through the breach of trust, with interest; (3) any profit that would have accrued to the trust estate if the loss of profit is the result of the breach of trust. If the trustee has acted reasonably and in good faith under the circumstances as known to the trustee, the court, in its discretion, may excuse the trustee in whole or in part from liability under Prob. Code § 16440(a) if it would be equitable to do so [Prob. Code § 16440(b)]. If the trustee is liable for interest pursuant to Prob. Code § 16440, the trustee is liable for the greater of either the amount of interest that accrues at the legal rate on judgments, or the amount of interest actually received [Prob. Code § 16441].

In Nordahl v. Department of Real Estate (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 121 Cal. Rptr. 794 , plaintiff received a judgment for $7,500 plus prejudgment interest against a licensed real estate broker who had misappropriated plaintiff's money. After application by plaintiff pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471, the trial court ordered payment of the judgment out of the Real Estate Education, Research and Recovery Fund. The Department of Real Estate appealed, contending that the trial court erred in ordering the commissioner to pay prejudgment interest.

In affirming the trial court's decision, the court of appeal held that the inclusion of interest in the verdict pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288 was not the granting of damages in excess of the loss incurred. The court noted that when, by virtue of the fraud or breach of fiduciary duty of defendant, a plaintiff has been deprived of the use of his money or property and is obliged to resort to litigation to recover it, the inclusion of interest in the award is necessary in order to make plaintiff whole. For this reason, it is proper to have such interest run from the time plaintiff parted with the money or property on the basis of defendant's fraud. The reason interest runs from the time the plaintiff pays money to the fraudulent defendant is that if interest were not so paid, plaintiff would not be fully compensated for his or her loss. The Civil Code provisions authorizing interest under these circumstances are simply a recognition that one of the elements of direct loss suffered by a party deprived of the use of his or her money or other property is the value of its use, which in the case of money is interest at the legal rate (48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 665-666) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inclusion of Interest in Judgment as Not Granting Damages in Excess of Loss

See Bronco Wine Co. v. Frank A. Logoluso Farms (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 699, 262 Cal. Rptr. 899 , discussed in § 121.42[4].

In Gherman v. Colburn (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 544, 140 Cal. Rptr. 330 , plaintiffs obtained a judgment, including prejudgment interest, against defendants who had allegedly converted joint venture assets. On appeal, defendants contended the inclusion of prejudgment interest is precluded by Civ. Code § 3358, which prohibits the recovery of a greater amount in damages for the breach of an obligation than would have been gained by the full performance. In rejecting this argument the court of appeal held that Civ. Code § 3358 was not intended to exclude interest awardable under Civ. Code § 3288 (72 Cal. App. 3d 544, 590) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.42

§ 121.42 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest on Judgments as Part of Damages, Not Penalty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AS AN ASPECT OF COMPENSATORY DAMAGES AND NOT AS A PENALTY.

Interest on Judgments as Part of Damages, Not Penalty. Interest on judgments is awarded to compensate a party for the loss of use of his or her property and not as a penalty (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 815, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 ; Harland v. State of California (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 847, 160 Cal. Rptr. 613).

[Plaintiff should include additional points, such as those set forth in §§ 121.30-121.41, 121.43 and 121.46, which specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded and that the inclusion of such interest in the judgment is not a penalty. This form should ordinarily be combined with additional points, such as the ones set forth in §§ 121.30-121.41, 121.43, and 121.46, which specifically apply to the facts of the case and support plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract ]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion of the loss suffered by plaintiff by being deprived of the use of his or her money.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest on Judgments as Part of Damages, Not Penalty

Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 , which is also discussed in § 121.33[3][a], was an action commenced by heirs of an estate to collect damages from a bank that negligently allowed money to be misappropriated from the estate. The trial court awarded damages, plus prejudgment interest running from the time of each unauthorized withdrawal.

On appeal the bank contended, among other things, that the trial court abused its discretion when it awarded prejudgment interest, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288, calculated from the date of withdrawal. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that this negligence action was within the purview of Civ. Code § 3288 and that the decision to award prejudgment interest may not be overturned unless the trial court abused its discretion.

The Court explained that under Civ. Code § 3288, the trier of fact, whether it be the judge or the jury, may award prejudgment interest in an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice. A party does not have to prove both a breach of a noncontractual obligation and oppression, fraud, or malice. Moreover, prejudgment interest may be awarded even if plaintiff's damages are not liquidated. Prejudgment interest is awarded to compensate a party for the loss of the use of his or her property. Since, in this case, the estate was deprived of the use of $250,000 for several years because of defendant's negligence, and since the date of each unauthorized withdrawal was readily ascertainable, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial judge to award prejudgment interest (21 Cal. 3d 801, 814-815) .

In Harland v. State of California (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 160 Cal. Rptr. 613 , plaintiffs obtained a sizeable award against the state for personal injuries and wrongful death. Following the affirmance of the judgment on appeal, the state paid the judgment but refused to pay interest. The trial court then issued an order, following plaintiff's motion, establishing the amount of accrued interest. The instant decision stemmed from the state's appeal of this order.

In affirming the trial court's award of interest on a judgment against the state, the court of appeal first noted that Cal. Const., Art. XV, § 1, applies to a judgment rendered in any court of this state and contains no exceptions for the state or any other class of defendant (99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842) . In response to the state's argument that imposing interest on a judgment against the state would be an inappropriate penalty, the court of appeal held that interest is not awarded as a penalty for nonpayment while a party seeks appellate review of a judgment. Interest is awarded because the party who has retained the money has had its use and benefit while the party who has been entitled to the money has been deprived of the opportunity to use it (99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 847) .

[4] Additional Authorities

In Bronco Wine Co. v. Frank A. Logoluso Farms (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 699, 262 Cal. Rptr. 899 , the court of appeal affirmed an award of interest, as provided by the contract in question, on late payments. An administrative award concerning the same defaults in payment for grapes included statutory penalties pursuant to Food & Agric. Code § 55881. Defendant contended that penalties and interest could not both be assessed against it because they were duplicative and it would be unfair. The court of appeal disagreed, noting that interest is a form of compensation used to restore plaintiff for moneys that have been unavailable for a business or investment. Its purpose differs from that of a late fee or penalty. In addition, Food & Agric. Code § 55437 provided that the penalty was cumulative and in addition to any other right, remedy, or penalty (214 Cal. App. 3d 699, 714) . Thus, both interest and statutory late penalties could be awarded incident to the same principal breach (214 Cal. App. 3d 699, 715) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterestTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment Interest

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.43

§ 121.43 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action From Date of Plaintiff's Offer to Compromise Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [Civ. Code § 3291]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT THE RATE OF 10 PERCENT PER ANNUM CALCULATED FROM _____, THE DATE OF PLAINTIFF'S FIRST OFFER TO COMPROMISE PURSUANT TO SECTION 998 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE THAT IS EXCEEDED BY THE JUDGMENT.

A. Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action From Date of Plaintiff's Offer to Compromise Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998. In any action brought to recover damages for personal injury, if the plaintiff makes an offer to compromise pursuant to Section 998 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the judgment must bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Section 998 of the Code of Civil Procedure that is exceeded by the judgment (Civ. Code § 3291).

[Optional] B. Prejudgment Interest in Action for Personal Injuries Resulting From Strict Liability. An award of prejudgment interest is authorized under Section 3291 of the Civil Code when an action for personal injuries is based on strict liability (see Fortman v. Hemco (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 241, 261-262, 259 Cal. Rptr. 311).

C. Mandatory Award of Prejudgment Interest. An award of prejudgment interest pursuant to Civil Code Section 3291 is mandatory, and such interest must be awarded if the statutory prerequisites are met (Morin v. ABA Recovery Service (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-207, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509).

[Optional] D. Prejudgment Interest When Plaintiff Makes Multiple Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offers. When a personal injury plaintiff tenders successive unaccepted Code of Civil Procedure Section 998 offers and subsequently recovers a judgment in excess of any of the offers, the prejudgment interest awarded pursuant to Civil Code Section 3291 begins from the date of the first offer (Ray v. Goodman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87-92, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that he or she is entitled to prejudgment interest. The argument supported by the memorandum should only be made in a personal injury action in which the plaintiff made an offer to compromise pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that was not accepted by the defendant and which was exceeded by the judgment [Civ. Code § 3291]. This argument should not be made when the defendant is a public entity or a public employee being sued for an act or omission within the scope of employment because Civ. Code § 3291 specifically exempts these defendants.

These points may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)]; see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda in §§ 121.50 and 121.55 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by the memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Personal Injury Action From Date of Plaintiff's Offer to Compromise Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998

In any action brought to recover damages for personal injury, Civ. Code § 3291 provides that if the plaintiff makes an offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the judgment must bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that is exceeded by the judgment. However, prejudgment interest accrued under Civ. Code § 3291 is not part of judgment and plaintiff cannot obtain interest on that prejudgment interest [Hess v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 516, 530-533, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 41 P.3d 46] . Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply to a public entity or to a publicemployee for an act or omission within the scope of employment.

[b] Prejudgment Interest in Action for Personal Injuries Resulting From Strict Liability

Fortman v. Hemco (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 241, 259 Cal. Rptr. 311 , was an action commenced by minor plaintiff against multiple defendants, including a manufacturer of fiberglass molds and cast products, to recover damages based on strict liability for extensive injuries sustained when she was ejected from her parents' Jeep after she inadvertently unlatched a rear-hinged passenger door while the vehicle was in motion. The plaintiff made an offer to the defendant manufacturer to compromise her claim pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998, and the manufacturer declined to respond. The trial court thereafter awarded the plaintiff pretrial interest based on her offer to compromise.

On appeal, the manufacturer pointed to the language of Civ. Code § 3291(a), which provides among other things that a plaintiff may resort to that section's provisions in any action brought to recover damages for personal injury sustained by any person resulting from or occasioned by the tort of any other person, whether by negligence or by willful intent of that person, and whether the injury was fatal or otherwise. The manufacturer argued that the reference to a tort "by negligence or by willful intent" excluded any award of prejudgment interest in an action based on strict liability. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court stated that the purpose of the statute is to foster settlements in cases involving personal injury and that it is not a plausible interpretation of legislative intent that the Legislature meant to encourage settlements in personal injury actions based in negligence or intentional tort but not those arising from strict liability (211 Cal. App. 3d 241, 261-262) .

[c] Mandatory Award of Prejudgment Interest

In Morin v. ABA Recovery Service (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509 , plaintiffs first offered to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 for $24,000. After arbitration had resulted in an award of $75,000, defendant rejected paying the award and offered $40,000. Plaintiffs rejected the offer and proceeded to trial. After plaintiffs had rested, defendant offered $82,000, which was also rejected. The jury then returned a general verdict in favor of plaintiffs for a total of $67,500 compensatory and punitive damages. Plaintiffs' request for prejudgment interest under the authority of Civ. Code § 3291 was denied by the trial court, which construed the statute as discretionary. The appellate court reversed and held that an award of prejudgment interest under the statute was mandatory if its conditions had been met, even if the defendant subsequently offers to settle for an amount in excess of that ultimately awarded in the judgment. The court recognized a certain unfairness in applying the statute to the facts of the case, but found that the statutory language, "shall bear interest," was clear and not susceptible to any other construction (195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-207) . The court went on to hold, however, that the statute, by its terms, applied only to damages recovered for personal injury. Because plaintiffs had sought recovery for both personal and economic injury, they bore the burden of proof of showing how the jury had allocated the damages awarded among the various injuries. The court stated that special jury findings should be used to determine the allocation, although the case was remanded in order to give the plaintiffs an opportunity to prove the damages allocated to personal injury by other means, if possible (195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 207-212) .

[d] Prejudgment Interest When Plaintiff Makes Multiple Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offers

In Ray v. Goodman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87-92, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659 , plaintiff sued two defendants after a fall on a "dangerous stairway" attached to property defendants owned. Plaintiff initially tendered a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to each defendant, offering to settle for $400,000 from each defendant. He later served a second Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to settle in the total amount of $400,000. Defendants did not accept either offer. At jury trial, plaintiff was awarded over $900,000 in damages. In post-trial cost proceedings, the trial court ordered that prejudgment interest accrued from the date of the second plaintiff's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer only (142 Cal. App. 4th 83, 85-86) .

The court of appeal reversed. Based on the legislative history of Civ. Code § 3291, the court held that when a personal injury plaintiff tenders successive unaccepted Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offers and subsequently recovers a judgment in excess of any of the offers, the prejudgment interest awarded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3291 begins from the date of the first offer (142 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87-92) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestRates

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.44

§ 121.44 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Action Allowed When Just Under Circumstances [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT THE RATE OF 10 PERCENT PER ANNUM FOR THE PERIOD BEGINNING ON _____ [date], THE DATE OF SERVICE OF THE COMPLAINT, AND ENDING ON _____ [date], THE DATE OF THE JUDGMENT, BECAUSE SUCH AN AWARD OF INTEREST IS JUST UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Actions. A person who hasrecovered damages for unfair competition pursuant to either Section 16750 or 16760 of the Business and Professions Code may recover prejudgment interest on the actual damages at the rate of 10 percent per annum for the period beginning on the date of the service of the complaint and ending on the date of the judgment, or for any shorter period therein, if the court finds that the award is just under the circumstances, as determined by considering only the criteria enumerated in Section 16761 of the Business and Professions Code, as set forth below (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16750(a), 16760(a)(2), 16761).

[Optional] B. No Intent to Delay or Commit Other Acts of Bad Faith by Plaintiff. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because neither plaintiff nor any representative of plaintiff made motions or asserted claims or defenses so lacking in merit as to show that plaintiff or plaintiff's representative acted intentionally for delay, or otherwise acted in bad faith (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(a)).

[Optional] C. No Violation by Plaintiff of Rules Governing Dilatory Behavior or Expeditious Proceedings. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because neither plaintiff nor any representative of plaintiff violated any applicable rule, statute, or court order providing for sanctions for dilatory behavior or otherwise providing for expeditious proceedings (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(b)).

[Optional] D. No Conduct by Plaintiff Primarily to Delay or Increase Cost of Litigation. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because neither plaintiff nor any representative of plaintiff engaged in conduct primarily for the purpose of delaying the litigation or increasing the cost thereof (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(c)).

[Optional] E. Intent by Defendant to Delay or Commit Other Acts of Bad Faith. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because _____ [defendant or a representative of defendant] made motions or asserted claims or defenses so lacking in merit as to show that _____ [defendant or defendant's representative] acted intentionally for delay, or otherwise acted in bad faith (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(a)).

[Optional] F. Violation by Defendant of Rules Governing Dilatory Behavior or Expeditious Proceedings. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because _____ [defendant or a representative of defendant] violated an applicable rule, statute, or court order providing for sanctions for dilatory behavior or otherwise providing for expeditious proceedings (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(b)).

[Optional] G. Conduct by Defendant Primarily to Delay or Increase Cost of Litigation. Prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of this case because _____ [defendant or a representative of defendant] engaged in conduct primarily for the purpose of delaying the litigation or increasing the cost thereof (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded in an action for unfair competition action under either Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750 (action by individual) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 16760 (action by Attorney General) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761].

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should select the optional paragraphs in this form that are pertinent to the case. It is important to note that the criteria listed in the optional paragraphs are the only criteria that the court may consider in determining whether or not an award of prejudgment interest is just under the circumstances of the case [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761]. Thus, it may be necessary for counsel to establish at least the criteria mentioned in optional Paragraphs B through D. In addition, counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the optional paragraphs selected. For example, counsel should specify the applicable rule, statute, or court order providing for sanctions for dilatory behavior that the defendant or defendant's representative violated, or the type of conduct that the defendant or defendant's representative engaged in primarily for the purpose of delaying the litigation.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to prejudgment interest in unfair competition actions, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest in Unfair Competition Actions

Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750(a) provides that any person who is injured in his or her business or property by reason of anything forbidden or declared unlawful under the unfair competition laws [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16700-16760] may sue to recover three times the damages sustained by him or her plus interest on the actual damages pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 16760(a)(2) provides that in an action by the Attorney General, as parens patriae on behalf of natural person residing in the state, for injury sustained by such persons to their property by reason of any violation of the unfair competition laws [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16700-16760], the court shall award the state as monetary relief three times the total damage sustained, as described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 16760(a)(1), plus interest pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16761.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.45

§ 121.45 Supporting Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Conditional Tender Not Sufficient to Stop the Running of Interest [Civ. Code §§ 1494, 1504]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AT THE RATE OF _____ PERCENT PER ANNUM FOR THE ENTIRE PERIOD BEGINNING ON _____ [date], THE DATE _____ [specify even triggering accrual of interest, e.g., ON WHICH THE PRINCIPAL SUM BECAME OWING], BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S TENDER WAS CONDITIONED ON PLAINTIFF'S PERFORMANCE OF ACTS THAT PLAINTIFF WAS NOT OBLIGATED TO PERFORM, AND THUS DID NOT AMOUNT TOTENDER OF THE AMOUNT DEFENDANT OWED TO PLAINTIFF.

Conditional Tender Does Not Stop Running of Prejudgment Interest. In order for an offer of payment to stop the running of interest pursuant to Section 1504 of the Civil Code, the offer must be free from any conditions that the creditor is not bound, on his or her part, to perform (Civ. Code § 1494; Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1553-1554, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that his or her right to prejudgment interest did not cease when defendant made a conditional offer of payment. The most common type of conditional offer would be an offer to pay part of the amount owing in return for the creditor's release of any claim to the remainder. Note that this form applies even if plaintiff did not prevail at trial on the claim, or part of the claim, he or she was asked to release as part of the conditional offer [Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1554, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592] . This contention will most likely by used in a case involving a contract, note, or other sum certain [see §§ 121.30-121.32, 121.34, 121.35].

This form may be combined with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to invoke the contention. The points may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the particular conditions to the offer of payment, establishing that plaintiff was not bound to perform them.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in § 121.48 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conditional Tender Does Not Stop Running of Prejudgment Interest

Civ. Code § 1504 is set forth in § 121.48.

Klinger v. Realty World Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 242 Cal. Rptr. 592 , was an action by a franchise marketing broker against a franchisor to collect commissions on the sale of two franchises. One franchise was owned by defendant; the other was owed by a franchisee who, in light of sums found to be missing from client accounts, agreed with defendant to divest himself of that franchise. Defendant and the third party each agreed to pay plaintiff a commission for the sale of their respective franchises. Nevertheless, plaintiff demanded both commissions from defendant. About six months after the sales were negotiated, defendant offered to pay the admittedly owed commission for the franchise it sold, but only if plaintiff accepted that sum as full satisfaction of the amount demanded and released his claim for the other commission. The trial court awarded plaintiff the amount of the commission earned on the sale of defendant's franchise with prejudgment interest from the date of the sale to the date of defendant's offer. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal modified the judgment to provide for interest on the commission from the date of the sale until it was paid. Defendant relied on Civ. Code § 1504, but the court noted that Civ. Code § 1494 prohibits the conditioning of an offer on any conditions that the creditor is not bound to perform. The court cited several cases, including Mission Ins. Group, Inc. v. Merco Construction Engineers, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 1059, 1067, 195 Cal. Rptr. 781 , for the proposition that conditional offers are not within the purview of Civ. Code § 1504 (196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1553) . The court said there was no legal justification for defendant's refusal to pay the sum it admittedly owed unconditionally. Nor did it matter that defendant ultimately prevailed on the merits of the claim to the second commission. By coercively tying the two sums together, defendant forfeited the right to stop interest on the commission it did owe (196 Cal. App. 3d 1549, 1554) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawPerformanceTender & Delivery

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.46

§ 121.46 Supporting Contention That Compound Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO COMPOUND INTEREST UNDER SECTION 3288 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE THERE IS A SHOWING OF WRONGDOING ON THE PART OF A TRUSTEE.

Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee. Compound interest is allowable under Section 3288 of the Civil Code, when there is a showing of wrongdoing on the part of a trustee, whether voluntary or involuntary (Falkner v. Hendy (1889) 80 Cal. 636, 645, 22 P 401 ; McNulty v. Copp (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 697, 712, 271 P.2d 90).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that compound interest should be allowed against a wrongdoing trustee. The contention supported by this form is most likely to be raised in an action based on the oppression, fraud, or malice of a defendant who occupied a position of trust with regard to plaintiff.

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the nature of the trust relationship between plaintiff and defendant, as well as the oppression, fraud, or malice involved in the defendant's conduct.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in § 121.57 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

Falkner v. Hendy (1889) 80 Cal. 636, 22 P 401 , was an action commenced by plaintiff for an accounting and to recover alleged partnership assets from his partner. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff including interest compounded monthly to the date of the judgment. Defendant appealed, contending, among other things, that the trial court erred in allowing compound interest.

The Supreme Court found that although defendant was not a partner, he was accountable as a trustee and compound interest at legal rates may be charged against a trustee on moneys fraudulently, wrongfully or oppressively withheld (80 Cal. 636, 645) .

McNulty v. Copp (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 697, 271 P.2d 90 , was an appeal from three separate actions involving a dispute between two sisters over division of their father's estate. The trial court found that one of the sisters, Mrs. Ahern, had been guilty of oppression, fraud, and malicious conduct regarding her occupancy, retention, and misappropriation of both real and personal property and the proceeds of insurance. As a result, the other sister, Mrs. Eldridge, was awarded damages plus prejudgment interest compounded annually.

Among the questions presented on appeal was the propriety of the award of compound interest. In affirming the portion of the judgment awarding compound interest, the court of appeal noted that Civ. Code § 3288 allows either the jury or the judge to award interest in an action in tort in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice. The record amply supported a conclusion that Mrs. Ahern was guilty of fraud. The court of appeal held that it is proper to allow compound interest when there is a showing of wrongdoing on the part of a trustee, whether voluntary or involuntary (125 Cal. App. 2d 697, 712) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compound Interest Allowable Against Wrongdoing Trustee

In In re Thompson (1894) 101 Cal. 349 , the Supreme Court approved the imposition of compound prejudgment interest against a trustee of an estate who had used money from the estate to invest for his own purposes (101 Cal. 349, 354-355).

Long v. Neeland (1931) 118 Cal. App 203, 4 P.2d 815 , was an action against a banker who had promised plaintiff, a personal friend, that he would invest plaintiff's money and obtain greater profit for plaintiff than if plaintiff merely deposited it in the bank. In affirming the allowance of compound interest against defendant, who had invested the money for his own benefit, the court of appeal held that the question whether interest should be compounded rests generally on the circumstances of each particular case. When it appears that the trustee has willfully omitted to invest trust funds and has used them for his or her own benefit or has failed to keep an account so that it is extremely difficult or impracticable to ascertain with any degree of certainty what profit was realized from the trust fund, compound interest should be allowed (118 Cal. App 203, 206) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestEstate, Gift & Trust LawTrustsTrusteesDuties & PowersGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.47

§ 121.47 Supporting Contention That Postjudgment Interest Must Be Awarded--Award of Postjudgment Interest Is Mandatory [Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.010, 685.020]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO POSTJUDGMENT INTEREST ACCRUING AT THE LEGAL RATE FROM _____ [THE DATE OF ENTRY OF JUDGMENT or THE DATE EACH UNPAID INSTALLMENT ON THEJUDGMENT BECAME DUE], UNTIL THE JUDGMENT IS SATISFIED.

A. Postjudgment Interest Is Mandatory. California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1 does not merely set a ceiling on the postjudgment interest rate, but mandates its award (San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 151, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38).

[EITHER]

B. Accrual of Postjudgment Interest. Interest commences to accrue on a money judgment on the date of entry of the judgment (Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(a); Bellflower City School Dist. v. Skaggs (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 278, 280, 339 P.2d 848).

[OR]

B. Accrual of Postjudgment Interest Payable in Installments. Unless the judgment otherwise provides, if a money judgment is payable in installments, interest commences to accrue as to each installment on the date the installment becomes due (Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Accrual When Judgment Modified on Appeal. When a judgment is modified on appeal, whether upward or downward, the new sum draws interest from the date of entry of the original judgment or order, not from the date of the new judgment (Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 442-443, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76).

D. Rate of Postjudgment Interest. Interest accrues at the rate of 10 percent per annum on the principal amount of a money judgment remaining unsatisfied (Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a)).

[Optional] E. Postjudgment Interest Allowed on Prejudgment Interest. Postjudgment interest may be awarded on a judgment consisting, in part, of prejudgment interest (Boscus v. Bohlig (1916) 173 Cal. 687, 691, 162 P. 100 ; Big Bear Properties, Inc. v. Gherman (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 908, 913, 157 Cal. Rptr. 443).

[Optional] F. Waiver by Payment of Principal Not Applicable. Civil Code Section 3290, which provides that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claims of interest, applies to prejudgment interest as damages and has not been extended to apply to interest accrued on an unpaid judgment (San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's contention that postjudgment interest should be awarded at the legal rate from the date of entry of the judgment. This contention could arise in any case in which a party receives a money judgment.

This form should be combined with points relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of postjudgment interest. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for correction of a clerical mistake in the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 473; see generally Ch. 131, Judgments]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Optional Paragraphs C and F raise points that respond to objections contending that the moving party is not entitled to postjudgment interest. Thus, for tactical reasons, counsel may prefer to use those paragraphs, if applicable, in a supplemental memorandum (such as a reply brief) to respond to objections raised in an opposing memorandum.

Paragraph D sets forth the rate at which postjudgment interest accrues under Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010. For judgments entered prior to January 1, 1983, however, interest would accrue at the former rate of seven percent through December 31, 1982, and then at the ten percent rate beginning on January 1, 1983 [see, e.g., American National Bank v. Peacock (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1207-1208, 212 Cal. Rptr. 97 ; see also § 121.47[3][e]]. Thus, in such cases, this form should be modified to reflect the appropriate rates of interest governing the entire period the judgment remains unsatisfied.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if counsel is using this form to support a motion to insert interest on a judgment [see, e.g., San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 149, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38 , discussed in § 121.47[3][a]], he or she may cite facts from a declaration in support his or her motion, and from documents on file in the action, showing (1) that a money judgment was entered in the action, and the moving party is therefore entitled to an award of interest on the judgment; (2) the date from which the postjudgment interest is owed (that is, the date of the judgment, if postjudgment interest is due under Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(a), or each date an unpaid installment was due under Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(b)); (3) any amount paid by the opposing party; and (4) failure of the opposing party to pay the full of amount of such interest, and the amount owed.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in § 121.58 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Postjudgment Interest Is Mandatory

Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 provides that the rate of interest on a judgment rendered in any court of this state shall be set by the Legislature at not more than 10 percent per annum. In the absence of the setting of such rate by the Legislature, the rate of interest on any judgment rendered in any court of the state shall be 7 percent per annum.

In San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38), a labor union representing school teachers filed motions to insert interest on judgments in favor of the teachers, and the trial court granted the motions. The school district appealed from the order.

The court of appeal modified as to the rate of interest, but affirmed the judgment in all other respects. The school district argued that Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 does not create an entitlement to postjudgment interest, but merely sets a ceiling on the interest rate. The court stated that this conclusion is directly contrary to that arrived after lengthy analysis in Harland v. State of California (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842-848, 160 Cal. Rptr. 613 , which held that Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 mandates postjudgment interest, that public entities are not excluded from the mandate, and that the interest begins to accrue when the judgment is entered (222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 151) .

[b] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest

Bellflower City School Dist. v. Skaggs (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 278, 339 P.2d 848 , involved a condemnation action commenced to acquire certain lots for the enlargement of an existing school site. Following an interlocutory judgment, plaintiff did not move for a new trial, appeal, or take steps seeking to have the judgment vacated or modified. On motion of the property owners, the court made an order fixing interest on the awards from the date of entry of the interlocutory judgment. The plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the order. On appeal, the plaintiff contended that no interest should accrue on an interlocutory judgment in condemnation until 30 days after all possibility of direct attack had been exhausted (52 Cal. 2d 278, 279-280) . In rejecting the plaintiff's argument, the Court held that an interlocutory judgment in condemnation is a judgment within the meaning of former Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 [now see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, and Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010, setting the rate of interest on all judgments in California]. The Court concluded that interest should run from the date the interlocutory judgment of condemnation was entered. The court, citing Glenn v. Rice (1917) 174 Cal. 269, 275-276, 162 P. 1020 , noted that in ordinary civil cases a judgment bears interest from the date of its entry even though it is subject to direct attack (52 Cal. 2d 278, 280) .

[c] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest Payable in Installments

Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(a) provides that except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(b), interest commences to accrue on a money judgment on the date of entry of the judgment. Code Civ. Proc. § 685.020(b) provides that, unless the judgment otherwise provides, if a money judgment is payable in installments, interest commences to accrue regarding each installment on the date the installment becomes due.

[d] Accrual When Judgment Modified on Appeal

Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76 , involved orders of the trial court made after judgment, one taxing an item of costs as effective on a certain date, and the other overruling a motion to allow the item of costs with interest as of a different date. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court modified and affirmed the order. The sole question presented on the appeal was on what date should interest commence on an award of costs that was the subject of a previous appeal. The Court, citing Beeler v. American Trust Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 435, 438, 170 P.2d 439 , and Barnhart v. Edwards (1900) 128 Cal. 572, 575 , stated that when a judgment is modified on appeal, whether upward or downward, the new sum draws interest from the date of entry of the original order, not from the date of the new judgment (28 Cal. 2d 435, 442). On the other hand, based on the Court's decision in Cowdery v. London etc. Bank (1903) 139 Cal. 298, 303, , when a judgment is reversed on appeal the new award subsequently entered by the trial court can bear interest only from the date of entry of such new judgment (28 Cal. 2d 435, 442-443).

[e] Rate of Postjudgment Interest

Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a) provides that interest accrues at the rate of 10 percent per annum on the principal amount of a money judgment remaining unsatisfied. The 10 percent interest rate became effective on January 1, 1983 [see American National Bank v. Peacock (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1207-1208, 212 Cal. Rptr. 97 (construing Stats. 1982, ch. 150, § 3); see also Stats. 1982, ch. 1364, §§ 1, 2, 3, 5 (declaring intent that Section 685.010, as added by Stats. 1982, ch. 150, become effective on January 1, 1983, and remain operative until July 1, 1983, at which time it was repealed; and enacting new Section 685.010, operative July 1, 1983, containing identical subdivision (a)].

Apparently due to an oversight, the statute, as originally adopted, erroneously stated the effective date to be January 1, 1982 [compare Stats. 1982, ch. 150, § 6 with Stats. 1982, ch. 1364, § 5; see American National Bank v. Peacock (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1207-1208, 212 Cal. Rptr. 97] . Section 685.010 has beenconstrued, however, to become effective on January 1, l983, based on legislative history indicating a lack of intent to make the statute retroactive, and to avoid the unconstitutionality of a retroactive effect [American National Bank v. Peacock (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1210-1212, 212 Cal. Rptr. 97 ; see also Hill v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1076, 1078, 220 Cal. Rptr. 144 (following American National Bank and rejecting contrary dicta in Gutierrez v. State Ranch Services (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 83, 88-89, 198 Cal. Rptr. 16); Hersch v. Citizens Savings and Loan Assn. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 373, 378, 218 Cal. Rptr. 646 (following American National Bank)].

Thus, for example, if a trial court entered judgment against a defendant on September 10, 1979, for a decision rendered on March 14, 1977, interest on the judgment would accrue at the rate of seven percent per annum from March 14, 1977, to the date of judgment. Thereafter, assuming the judgment remained unpaid, the rate would remain the same through December 31, 1982. Beginning on January 1, 1983, the effective date of Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010, the interest would accrue at the rate of ten percent per annum, until paid [see American National Bank v. Peacock (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1207-1208, 212 Cal. Rptr. 97] .

[f] Postjudgment Interest Allowed on Prejudgment Interest

Boscus v. Bohlig (1916) 173 Cal. 687, 162 P. 100 , was an action to foreclose a mechanics' lien. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings, and awarded the plaintiff prejudgment interest on the entire amount owing from the date of the completion of the work by plaintiff, even though one-half of the amount was not due until 30 days after completion (173 Cal. 687, 688-691) . The defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. One of the defendants' contentions on appeal was that the trial court erred in its allowance of interest. The Court agreed that the trial court erred by allowing interest to begin accruing from the date of completion on the one-half of the sum that was not payable until 30 days after completion. The Court held, however, that it was proper for the prejudgment interest to be added to the principal and that the aggregate amount should thereafter draw interest (173 Cal. 687, 691) .

In Big Bear Properties, Inc. v. Gherman (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 908, 157 Cal. Rptr. 443 , a judgment including prejudgment interest and costs was entered and affirmed on appeal against plaintiffs in a previous action. Plaintiffs subsequently filed an action in interpleader and for declaratory relief, contending, among other things, that the allowance of postjudgment interest on the portion of the judgment representing prejudgment interest constituted an impermissible compounding of interest. Defendants moved for summary judgment and the motion was granted by the trial court. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, declaring that the entire judgment in the prior action, including that portion attributable to prejudgment interest, did and would continue to bear interest at the legal rate until paid. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Before discussing the merits of the plaintiffs' contentions, the court first noted that even the plaintiffs recognized that all money judgments, by operation of law, bear interest at the legal rate from the date of entry. The court then went on to reject the plaintiffs' contention because, although compound interest generally is not allowable on a judgment, it is established that a judgment bears interest on the whole amount from its date of entry even though the amount is in part made up of interest. As a consequence, compound interest may in effect be recovered on a judgment whereby the aggregate amount of principal and interest is turned into a new principal (95 Cal. App. 3d 908, 913) .

[g] Waiver by Payment of Principal Not Applicable

The facts and procedural background of San Francisco Unified School Dist. v. San Francisco Classroom Teachers Assn. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 272 Cal. Rptr. 38 , are discussed in § 121.47[3][a]. In San Francisco Unified School Dist., the defendant school district contended that when employees represented by the plaintiff union cashed checks consisting of backpay and benefits owed by the defendant, the teachers waived their right to postjudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3290, which provides that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest (222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 149) . The court stated, however, that Civ. Code § 3290 is part of a statutory scheme originally enacted in 1872 regarding "interest as damages." Thus, concluded the court, in context, the statute's plain language makes it applicable to "all claims" to prejudgment interest as damages, and the defendant cited no authority for extending its application to interest accrued on an unpaid judgment (222 Cal. App. 3d 146, 150) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accrual of Postjudgment Interest

The facts and procedural background of Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76 , is discussed in § 121.47[3][d]. In Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo, the Supreme Court, in setting a firm date for the commencement of interest on the award of costs that was the subject of a previous appeal, reiterated several basic principles for awarding postjudgment interest (55 Cal. 2d 439, 442-443) . Citing Bellflower City School Dist. v. Skaggs (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 278, 280, 339 P.2d 848 , discussed in § 121.47[3][b], the Court stated that a judgment bears interest from the date of its entry in the trial court even though it is still subject to direct attack (55 Cal. 2d 439, 442) .

[b] Postjudgment Interest Allowed on Prejudgment Interest

Estate of Sharp (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 95 Cal. Rptr. 816 , stemmed fromthe administration of a very large estate. One of the beneficiaries, a hospital, contended that the trial court erred in the manner in which it dealt with prejudgment interest. The court of appeal rejected the hospital's proposed allocation of interest because it would result in compound interest. Interest may not be computed on accrued interest unless by special statutory provision or by stipulation of the parties, although when a judgment is rendered which awards interest, the full amount of the judgment will bear interest at the statutory rate from the date of entry (18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 585) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.48

§ 121.48 Opposing Contention That Interest Should Be Awarded--Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest [Civ. Code § 1504]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO INTEREST SUBSEQUENT TO _____ [date], THE DATE THAT DEFENDANT MADE AN OFFER OF _____ [PAYMENT or PERFORMANCE].

Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest. An offer of payment or other performance, duly made, although the title to the thing offered is not transferred to the creditor, stops the accrual of interest on the obligation, and has the same effect on all its incidents as a performance thereof (Civ. Code § 1504; Ferrea v. Tubbs (1899) 125 Cal. 687, 689, 58 P 308).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that either prejudgment or postjudgment interest should be awarded. Defendant may make the argument supported by this form whenever he or she has tendered the payment or other performance to which plaintiff is entitled and plaintiff is seeking interest accruing from a date subsequent to the tender. The contention regarding prejudgment interest would most likely arise in an action based on contract; the contention regarding postjudgment interest could arise in any action in which a money judgment has been rendered and the judgment debtor has tendered the amount due [see, e.g., Sills v. Siller (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 735, 744-745, 32 Cal. Rptr. 621 (judgment debtor's tender of amount due under judgment, refused by judgment creditor for fear of jeopardizing appeal, as stopping running of interest)].

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment or postjudgment interest following a tender of payment arises. The prejudgment interest issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. §

657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The postjudgment interest issue may arise, for example, on a motion to compel entry of satisfaction of judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 675(a); see generally Ch. 131, Judgments]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the date and circumstances surrounding defendant's offer of payment or performance.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest

In Ferrea v. Tubbs (1899) 125 Cal. 687, 58 P 308 , the plaintiff appealed a money judgment in his favor. Pending the appeal, defendants tendered plaintiff the full amount of the judgment, with all costs, and interest to that date. Plaintiff refused the tender and subsequently lost the appeal. Defendants then sought and obtained an order from the superior court that the judgment be conditionally satisfied on the payment into court of the amount of the original tender. Plaintiff appealed this order, contending that defendants' tender pending the original appeal did not stop the running of interest on the judgment. The Supreme Court rejected this argument and held that plaintiff's refusal of the tender operated as a release of all interest which would otherwise have accrued on the judgment after the date of the tender (125 Cal. 687, 693) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Tender of Payment as Stopping Accrual of Interest

Beeler v. American Trust Co. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 1, 147 P.2d 583 , involved a dispute between a bank and one of its customers regarding whether a document was a deed or a mortgage. The customer offered the full amount due under the purported mortgage, which the bank refused because it contended that the customer was a tenant who was obligated to vacate the premises. The Supreme Court affirmed the finding of the trial court that the document was a mortgage and, since the bank had refused a valid offer of payment, the indebtedness ceased to bear interest as of the date of the tender (24 Cal. 2d 1, 28-29) .

Rose v. Hecht (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 662, 211 P.2d 347 , involved a dispute between the owner and lessees of a hotel. The lessees' repeated offers to pay themonthly rent were refused by the lessor, who sought reformation of the purported lease and was concerned acceptance of rent would prejudice his rights. In reversing the trial court's award of interest on the rental payments due, the court of appeal held that statutory law clearly supported the lessees' contention that they owed no interest on the rentals because of their offers to pay and their actual tenders of checks for the amounts due (94 Cal. App. 2d 662, 664-665) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewContracts LawPerformanceTender & Delivery

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.49

§ 121.49 Opposing Contention That Interest Should Be Awarded--Acceptance of Principal as Waiver of Interest [Civ. Code § 3290]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO ANY INTEREST BECAUSE PLAINTIFF ACCEPTED PAYMENT FROM DEFENDANT OF THE ENTIRE PRINCIPAL OWING.

Acceptance of Principal as Waiver of Interest. Accepting payment of the whole principal waives all claim to interest (Civ. Code § 3290; Valentine v. Donohoe-Kelly Banking Co. (1901) 133 Cal. 191, 194, 65 P 381).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that either prejudgment or postjudgment interest should be awarded. Defendant may make this argument whenever plaintiff has already accepted payment of the entire principal plus any accrued interest due and has acknowledged the payment as payment in full.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment or postjudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages. [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort , and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the circumstances surrounding the payment and acceptance by plaintiff of the entire principal owed by defendant.

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the memoranda set out in §§ 121.39 and 121.40.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Principal as Waiver of Interest

Civ. Code § 3290 provides that accepting payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest.

In Valentine v. Donohoe-Kelly Banking Co. (1901) 133 Cal. 191, 65 P 381 , the estate of a guarantor of notes paid to defendant bank the unpaid principal of the notes and 23 days' interest to which the bank contended it was entitled. The bank surrendered the notes as paid and canceled. The bank, still having in its possession an account belonging to the estate, subsequently contended that it was entitled to additional interest on the notes it had surrendered. The estate sued and obtained a judgment against the bank for the amount held by the bank which the bank contended it was owed as interest earned on the notes after they were sold to the bank, including interest earned after the testator's death. Defendant bank appealed the judgment and an order denying its motion for a new trial.

In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court relied on Civ. Code § 3290 and held that its broad language applies to express contracts. The Court found that the fact that the notes were surrendered by the bank and canceled on payment of what the bank stated to be the balance due for principal and interest is almost a conclusive circumstance, in the absence of fraud or mistake (133 Cal. 191, 194) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewContracts LawPerformanceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesCompensatory DamagesInterest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.50

§ 121.50 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries Unless Plaintiff Had Made Offer of Settlement Lower Than Judgment [Civ. Code §§ 3288, 3291]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST ON A CLAIM OF GENERAL DAMAGES FOR PAIN AND SUFFERING RESULTING FROM PERSONAL INJURIES UNLESS PLAINTIFF OBTAINS A JUDGMENT EXCEEDING PLAINTIFF'S PREJUDGMENT OFFER TO COMPROMISE PURSUANT TO SECTION 998 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries. Prejudgment interest is not allowed on a claim of general damages for pain and suffering resulting from personal injuries unless plaintiff obtains ajudgment exceeding plaintiff's prejudgment offer pursuant to Section 998 of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Civ. Code § 3291; Greater Westchester Homeowners Asso. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 102-103, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329).

B. Plaintiff Did Not Obtain Judgment Exceeding Amount of Last Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer. Prejudgment interest is not allowed when the plaintiff does not obtain a judgment exceeding the amount of the plaintiff's last offer under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998, even if the amount of the judgment supersedes earlier Section 998 offers (see Civ. Code § 3291; Wilson v. Wal-Mart Stores (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 382, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Civ. Code § 3291 provides that, in any action brought to recover damages for personal injury, if the plaintiff makes an offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that the defendant does not accept before trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the judgment will bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that is exceeded by the judgment. Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply to a public entity or to a public employee for an act or omission within the scope of employment.

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention, based on Civ. Code § 3288, that prejudgment interest should be allowed on an award of general damages for personal injuries.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort , and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

This form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries

Greater Westchester Homeowners Asso. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , was commenced by homeowners against an airport on a nuisance theory seeking damages for emotional and mental distress. Following a judgment for plaintiffs, the trial court issued a postjudgment order imposing prejudgment interest on the award.

On appeal, defendant contended, among other things, that the trial court improperly awarded prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3288 for the personal injuries and emotional distress sustained by reason of the airport noise. In agreeing with defendant and reversing the judgment insofar as it awarded prejudgment interest on the personal injury claims, the Supreme Court noted that damages for the intangible, noneconomic aspects of mental and emotional injury are inherently nonpecuniary, unliquidated, and not readily subject to precise calculation. The amount of such damages is necessarily left to the subjective discretion of the trier of fact. The Court stated that retroactive interest on such damages adds uncertain conjecture to speculation. Moreover, where, as here, the injury was of a continuing nature, it is particularly difficult to determine when any particular increment of intangible loss arose. Therefore, the Court concluded, prejudgment interest on a claim of general damages for suffering cannot be allowed (26 Cal. 3d 86, 102-103) .

In reaching this decision, the Supreme Court distinguished its opinion in Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814-815, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 (discussed in § 121.33[3][a], and in § 121.42[3][a]), which held that Civ. Code § 3288 permits discretionary prejudgment interest for unliquidated tort claims. In Bullis, the prejudgment interest was awarded to compensate a party for the unliquidated loss of his or her property. It represented the accretion of wealth which money or particular property could have produced during a period of loss. This is clearly distinguishable from damages for the intangible, noneconomic aspects of mental and emotional injury (26 Cal. 3d 86, 102-103) .

It must be noted, however, that this case was decided prior to the enactment, in 1982, of Civ. Code § 3291. Civ. Code § 3291 modifies the holding in this case by providing that, in any action brought to recover damages for personal injury, if the plaintiff makes an offer to compromise pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the judgment shall bear interest at the legal rate of 10 percent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that is exceeded by the judgment. Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply, however, to an action againsta public entity or to a public employee for an act or omission within the scope of employment.

[b] Plaintiff Did Not Obtain Judgment Exceeding Amount of Last Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer

In Wilson v. Wal-Mart Stores (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 382, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 , plaintiff sued defendant after falling in one of defendant's stores and injuring her back. By special verdict, the jury found defendant to have been negligent and awarded plaintiff $230,000 in economic damages and $120,000 in noneconomic damages for a total of $350,000. However, because the jury also found that plaintiff's own negligence contributed 50 percent to her injuries, judgment was entered in her favor in the amount of $175,000. Before trial, plaintiff served on defendant a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to compromise for $150,000, with each side to bear its own costs and attorney's fees. Defendant made no response within statutory period, so the offer was deemed rejected. Plaintiff later served a second Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer on defendant with the settlement price of $249,000, with each side to bear its own costs and attorney's fees. That offer was also deemed rejected by defendant's failure to accept it within the statutory period. Following the jury verdict, plaintiff filed a memorandum of costs that included prejudgment interest calculated from the date of the first statutory offer to the date of the judgment. Defendant moved to tax costs, and the trial court granted defendant's motion on the ground that plaintiff could not recover prejudgment interest or expert fees because she failed to obtain a judgment more favorable than her second Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer, which was the effective offer, because it effectively extinguished her first offer (72 Cal. App. 4th 382, 387-388).

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the second offer superseded and extinguished the first one, finding that the legislative purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is better served by a bright line rule in which the parties know that any judgment will be measured against a single valid statutory offer, i.e., the statutory offer most recently rejected, regardless of offers made earlier in the litigation. (72 Cal. App. 4th 382, 388-391).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on General Damages for Personal Injuries

The facts and procedural background for Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 184 Cal. Rptr. 87 , are set out in § 121.55[3][a]. In*Fox,* the court of appeal relied on the refusal of the Supreme Court in Greater Westchester Homeowners Asso. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 102, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 933 (1980) (discussed in § 121.50[3][a]) to permit prejudgment interest in personal injury actions in setting out an analogous prohibition on prejudgment interest in wrongful death actions (133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 572-573) . The court stated that Greater Westchester Homeowners Assn. confirmed that the purpose of prejudgment interest is to compensate a party for lost property. Damages for intangible, noneconomic losses are of a different nature from damages due to loss of property, since the amount of such intangible damages are necessarily left to the subjective discretion of the trier of fact. Retroactive interest on such damages adds uncertain conjecture to speculation (133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesInterestRatesTortsProcedureSettlementsOffers

59 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.51

§ 121.51 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on Nonmoney Judgment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT _____ [IS SEEKING or OBTAINED] A NONMONEY JUDGMENT.

Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on Nonmoney Judgment. Prejudgment interest may only be awarded on a money judgment, and not on a judgment awarding stock or other personal property (Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 94, 107, 98 Cal. Rptr. 293, 490 P.2d 805 , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1316, 31 L. Ed. 2d 583).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that he or she is entitled to prejudgment interest on a nonmoney judgment.

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the type of relief sought or obtained by plaintiff and point out that this relief is of a nonmoney nature and, therefore, prejudgment interest is not allowed.

This form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed on Nonmoney Judgment

The background and part of the holding of Redke v. Silvertrust (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 94, 98 Cal. Rptr. 293, 490 P.2d 805 , cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1316, 31 L. Ed. 2d 583 , is discussed in § 121.33[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that the trial court erred in awarding plaintiff interest from the date of judgment on the fair market value of stock wrongfully retained by the stepfather. The Court held that interest may only be awarded on a money judgment; it may not be awarded on a judgment awarding stock or other personal property (6 Cal. 3d 94, 107) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.52

§ 121.52 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed for Period During Which Debtor Prevented From Paying by Law or by Creditor [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST FROM _____ [date], TO _____ [date], THE PERIOD DURING WHICH DEFENDANT WAS PREVENTED BY _____ [LAW or BY PLAINTIFF'S ACTIONS] FROM PAYING THE ALLEGED DEBT.

Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed for Period During Which Debtor Prevented From Paying by Law or by Creditor. Prejudgment interest may not be awarded for the period during which the debtor was prevented by law, or by the act of the creditor, from paying the debt (Civ. Code § 3287(a); Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. County of Sonoma (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 296, 321, 152 Cal. Rptr. 903, 591 P.2d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that he or she is entitled to prejudgment interest for any period during which the defendant was prevented from paying by law or by the creditor [see Civ. Code § 3287(a)].

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the law or the actions of the creditor that prevent the debtor from paying the obligation.

This form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed for Period During Which Debtor Prevented From Paying by Law or by Creditor

Civ. Code § 3287(a) provides, in part, that interest is not recoverable for the period during which the debtor is prevented by law or by the act of the creditor from paying the debt.

Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. County of Sonoma (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 296, 152 Cal. Rptr. 903, 591 P.2d 1 , involved five original proceedings for writs of mandate by labor organizations representing local government employees seeking pay increases contracted for prior to passage of Proposition 13. Subsequent to passage of Proposition 13, the state Legislature enacted Gov. Code §§ 16280 and 16280.5, which prevented state surplus funds from going to any locality which provided a cost-of-living increase in 1978-1979 in excess of that granted state employees. The petitioners sought the writs of mandate to compel the local agencies to grant the increases called for in their agreements, along with prejudgment interest, and to prohibit the state from enforcing the condition for payment of state funds set forth in Gov. Code §§ 16280 and 16280.5.

In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing payment of the salary increases, the Supreme Court denied prejudgment interest because of the provisions of Civ. Code § 3287(a), which prohibit prejudgment interest if the debtor is prevented by law from paying the debt. The Court observed that the practical effect of Gov. Code §§ 16280 and 16280.5 was to prevent the local governmental entities from paying the increases because such payment would have required them to renounce state surplus funds, resulting in serious financial hardship (23 Cal. 3d 296, 321) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawPerformanceImpossibility of PerformanceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.53

§ 121.53 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST AS A MATTER OF RIGHT BECAUSE HIS/HER/ITS DAMAGES ARE UNLIQUIDATED.

A. Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated. Prejudgment interest is recoverable as a matter of right only when the damages are liquidated or, although unliquidated, can be established with reasonable certainty or are calculable by reference to a well-established market value (see Civ. Code § 3287(a); Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 407, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062-1063, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 ; Distefano v. Hall (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 380, 387-389, 69 Cal. Rptr. 691).

[Optional] B. Damages as Uncertain in Quantum Meruit. In an action in quantum meruit to recover the reasonable value of services rendered, when the value of the services can only be established by evidence, prejudgment interest under section 3287(a) of the Civil Code is not recoverable (Swinnerton v. Argonaut L. & D. Co. (1896) 112 Cal. 375, 379, 44 P 719 ; Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be awarded as a matter of right. Such an argument would be made when the opposing party contends that thedamages sought or recovered by the party seeking prejudgment interest were unliquidated. Although these points may establish that plaintiff has no absolute right to prejudgment interest, counsel should be aware that plaintiff still might be entitled to have the trier of fact award prejudgment interest in its discretion [see Civ. Code §§ 3287(b), 3288; see also §§ 121.33 and 121.54]. Furthermore, prejudgment interest may be awarded in an action for damages for personal injuries if the defendant has failed to accept plaintiff's offer to compromise made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [see Civ. Code § 3291; see also § 121.43].

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of why plaintiff's damages were not liquidated and cannot be, or could not have been, established with reasonable certainty prior to judgment.

This form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

Civ. Code § 3287(a) provides, in part, that every person who is entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and for which the right to recover is vested in him or her on a particular day, is entitled also to recover interest from that day.

The background of Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 , is discussed in § 121.30[3][e] and also under § 121.30[3][f]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that prejudgment interest may be allowed as a matter of right only when the damages are liquidated. It should be noted that, as discussed more fully in § 121.30, the Court also held that the existence of an unliquidated setoff or a slight variance between the amount claimed and the amount awarded does not mean that the damages are not liquidated (65 Cal. 2d 396, 407-409) .

The background and holding of Esgro Central, Inc. v. General Ins. Co. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 98 Cal. Rptr. 153 , is discussed in § 121.30[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal held that prejudgment interest as a matter of law is not authorized under Civ. Code § 3287(a) when the amount of damage, as opposed to only the determination of liability, depends on a judicial determination based on conflicting evidence and is not ascertainable from truthful data supplied by the claimant to his or her debtor (20 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062-1063) .

Distefano v. Hall (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 380, 69 Cal. Rptr. 691 , involved an action filed by a contractor against owners on a written contract for the construction of an apartment house. Among the major issues determined at trial were those of the owner's counterclaim for faulty construction as well as an alleged limitation on labor costs. Both parties appealed a judgment in favor of plaintiff. On appeal, plaintiff contended, among other things, that the trial court erred by denying prejudgment interest.

In affirming the trial court, the court of appeal held that the allowance of interest as damages by way of compensation for wrongful detention of money due to plaintiff only occurs when the sum is liquidated or ascertainable within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287(a). Under this statute, interest cannot be awarded prior to judgment when the amount of damages cannot be ascertained except on conflicting evidence. The rationale for this rule is that when a defendant does not know the amount he or she owed and cannot ascertain it except by accord or judicial process, he or she cannot be in default for not paying it (263 Cal. App. 2d 380, 388) .

In this case, the amount due to plaintiff could not be determined until after various questions were resolved at trial. Therefore, the trial court properly concluded that defendants were not able to ascertain the exact amount due and correctly denied prejudgment interest to plaintiff (263 Cal. App. 2d 380, 389) .

[b] Damages as Uncertain in Quantum Meruit

In Swinnerton v. Argonaut L. & D. Co. (1896) 112 Cal. 375, 44 P 719 , plaintiffs sued defendants in quantum meruit for services rendered in managing defendant's property. Plaintiffs recovered a judgment, including prejudgment interest, from which defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court held that it was error to include prejudgment interest in the award. The Court stated that in an action to recover the reasonable value of services performed by a plaintiff, the amount, character, and value of which can only be established by evidence in court or by an accord between the parties, and which are not susceptible of ascertainment by computation or by reference to market rates, plaintiff is not entitled to interest accruing prior to verdict or judgment (112 Cal. 375, 379) .

In Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825 , plaintiffs sued defendant to recover for architectural and engineering servicesrendered in connection with the construction of a warehouse addition and alterations to defendant's bottling house. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiffs for the reasonable value of their services plus prejudgment interest. On appeal, defendant contended, among other things, that the award of prejudgment interest was error.

In agreeing with this contention, the court of appeal held that it is well established that when there is no express contract and the action is in quantum meruit to recover the reasonable value of services rendered, interest is not recoverable prior to judgment. In an action in quantum meruit when there is an express contract but when the value of the services can only be established by evidence and is not susceptible of computation from the face of the contract or by reference to established market values, interest is also not recoverable prior to judgment (180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634) . Furthermore, even when there is an express contract for the performance of services and the action is for a breach, if, because of defendant's prevention of performance, the amount due cannot be computed by the contract terms, thereby rendering the damages uncertain and incapable of being made certain by calculation at the time the cause of action accrues, interest is not recoverable as an element of damage prior to judgment (180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634-635) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest as Matter of Right Only When Damages Liquidated

Polster, Inc. v. Swing (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 427, 434-436, 210 Cal. Rptr. 567 , was an action by a lessor against lessees for failure to return the leased premises in the same condition as received. Judgment was in plaintiff's favor and included an award of prejudgment interest from the date that defendants returned the premises. On defendants' appeal, the court of appeal struck the award of prejudgment interest, holding the amount due plaintiff as damages was not a sum certain within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287(a) (164 Cal. App. 3d 427, 436) . The court first stated the rule that Civ. Code § 3287(a) does not authorize prejudgment interest as a matter of law when the amount of damages depends on a judicial determination based on conflicting evidence (164 Cal. App. 3d 427, 434) . The court reasoned that, in this case, the defendants did not know and could not readily compute the damages, and the plaintiff did not supply them with an adequate statement and supporting data so that they could ascertain the damages (164 Cal. App. 3d 427, 435) . Furthermore, the amount of damages actually determined by the court was significantly less than that demanded by plaintiff, a fact militating against a finding of certainty under Civ. Code § 3287(a) (164 Cal. App. 3d 427, 435-436) .

Chesapeake Industries, Inc. v. Togova Enterprises, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 901, 197 Cal. Rptr. 348 , involved an action for an accounting on a business property lease in which the trial court awarded the lessor prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a). The court of appeal reversed the award of interest, finding that the lessee's liability for breach under the lease agreement was not ascertainable on information reasonably available to lessee at time claim was filed. The court held that although inexact knowledge of the amount of indebtedness at the time a claim is filed does not automatically bar an award of prejudgment interest, the circumstances in the instant case did not allow the damages to be made certain by calculation as required by Civ. Code § 3287(a) (149 Cal. App. 3d 901, 907, 914) .

[b] Damages as Uncertain in Quantum Meruit

In Samuels v. Singer (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 545, 36 P.2d 1098 , an action to recover the value of the use and occupation of real property for the period of defendant's wrongful detention, the court of appeal ruled that the trial court erred in granting prejudgment interest. The case was governed by the general rule that in quantum meruit actions the exact amount to which plaintiff is entitled is uncertain until determined by the trier of fact, and, since the person liable does not know what sum he or she owes, he or she cannot be in default for not paying (1 Cal. App. 2d 545, 555) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestContracts LawRemediesEquitable ReliefQuantum MeruitContracts LawRemediesLiquidated Damages

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.54

§ 121.54 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--No Prejudgment Interest Under Civ. Code § 3288 in Absence of Request for Specific Jury Instruction

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

IN THE ABSENCE OF A REQUEST FOR A SPECIFIC JURY INSTRUCTION ON DISCRETIONARY INTEREST PURSUANT TO SECTION 3288 OF THE CIVIL CODE, IT IS NOT ERROR FOR THE COURT TO FAIL TO SO INSTRUCT THE JURY AND TO OMIT PREJUDGMENT INTEREST IN ITS AWARD.

No Prejudgment Interest Under Civ. Code § 3288 in Absence of Request for Specific Jury Instruction. In the absence of a request for a specific jury instruction on discretionary interest pursuant to Section 3288 of the Civil Code, it is not error for the court to fail to so instruct the jury and to omit prejudgment interest in its award (Dixon Mobile Homes, Inc. v. Walters (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 964, 974, 122 Cal. Rptr. 202).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract and/or a case of oppression, fraud, or malice in opposition to plaintiff's contention that prejudgment interest should have been awarded. This argument would only be made when plaintiff failed to request a specific jury instruction on discretionary interest pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288 and subsequently contends it was error for the court not to so instruct the jury and award prejudgment interest.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 65, Damages]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

This form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Prejudgment Interest Under Civ. Code § 3288 in Absence of Request for Specific Jury Instruction

Dixon Mobile Homes, Inc. v. Walters (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 964, 122 Cal. Rptr. 202 , was an action by the seller of a mobile home for repossession and damages. The buyer cross complained for rescission, restitution, and damages. Both parties appealed from the judgment following a jury trial which awarded the buyer both compensatory and punitive damages.

Defendant buyer contended on appeal that the trial court erred by failing to award prejudgment interest pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288 (vesting discretion in the jury for prejudgment interest in cases of oppression, fraud, or malice). The court of appeal rejected this contention, holding that in the absence of a specific request from a party, the court is under no duty to instruct on discretionary interest pursuant to Civ. Code § 3288. Since the defendant made no such request at trial, it was not error for the court to omit such an instruction and for the subsequent judgment to omit prejudgment interest (48 Cal. App. 3d 964, 974) .

It should be noted that in Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 815 fn. 18, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 , the Supreme Court disapproved a statement in Dixon indicating that Civ. Code § 3288 limits the award of interest to cases of fraud, oppression, or malice. Another court of appeal has, in addition, held that Dixon does not support the proposition that a party waives prejudgment interest by failing specifically to request it; it only addresses the court's duty to instruct on the issue [Segura v. McBride (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1028, 1041, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsRequests for InstructionsCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.55

§ 121.55 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded--Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed In Wrongful Death Action Without Showing of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice [Civ. Code § 3288]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT _____ [IS SEEKING or OBTAINED] AN AWARD OF DAMAGES FOR WRONGFUL DEATH AND DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT DID NOT SHOW OPPRESSION, FRAUD, OR MALICE[, AND PLAINTIFF HAS NOT OBTAINED A JUDGMENT EXCEEDING HIS/HER/ITS PREJUDGMENT OFFER TO COMPROMISE PURSUANT TO SECTION 998 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE].

A. Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed in Wrongful Death Action Without Showing of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice. Absent oppression, fraud, or malice, prejudgment interest should not be awarded in a wrongful death action [if plaintiff made prejudgment offer to compromise, add: unless plaintiff obtains a judgment exceeding plaintiff's prejudgment offer pursuant to Section 998 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (see Civ. Code §§ 3288, 3291; Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573, 184 Cal. Rptr. 87 ; but see Canavin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 512, 525-528, 196 Cal. Rptr. 82).

[Optional] B. Willful Misconduct Does Not Justify Award of Prejudgment Interest. Willful misconduct on the part of defendant does not constitute oppression, fraud, or malice so as to justify an award of prejudgment interest in a wrongful death action (see Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. State of California (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 116, 122, 171 Cal. Rptr. 187).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:
After the decisions in Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 184 Cal. Rptr. 87 , and Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. State of California (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 116, 171 Cal. Rptr. 187 , the Legislature enacted Civ. Code § 3291. Under Civ. Code § 3291, prejudgment interest may be awarded against a defendant in a personal injury action, whether the injury resulted from negligence or by willful intent of the defendant, if the plaintiff makes an offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 (written offer to compromise on pending action) which the defendant does not accept prior to trial or within 30 days, whichever occurs first, and the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment. The judgment bears interest at the legal rate of 10 per cent per annum calculated from the date of the plaintiff's first offer pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 which is exceeded by the judgment, and interest accrues until satisfaction of the judgment. Civ. Code § 3291 does not apply to a public entity or to a public employee for an act or omission within the scope of employment. It thus appears that if the plaintiff has made a settlement offer pursuant to Civ. Code § 3291, this form may be used if the plaintiff does not obtain a more favorable judgment. Counsel should also note that Canavin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 512, 525-528, 196 Cal. Rptr. 82 , is in apparent conflict with Fox (see discussion in § 121.55[3][a]).

[a] Use of Form

This may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention, based on Civ. Code § 3288, that prejudgment interest should be allowed on an award of general damages for a wrongful death.

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of prejudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial ; see also Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract]. The memoranda set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memorandum set out in § 121.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Not Allowed in Wrongful Death Action Without Showing of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 184 Cal. Rptr. 87 , involved a wrongful death action. Judgment was entered for plaintiffs after trial, but the trial court refused to submit the issue of prejudgment interest to the jury. Defendant appealed and plaintiffs cross appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on a point unrelated to prejudgment interest. Addressing plaintiffs' point regarding prejudgment interest, the court noted that the case of Greater Westchester Homeowners Asso. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , cert. denied 446 U.S. 933 (1980) (discussed in § 121.50[3][a]), which the parties to the present case had identified as the controlling authority in the area, confirmed that the purpose of prejudgment interest is to compensate a party for lost property. The court stated that wrongful death damages involve neither lost property, nor are they readily ascertainable without a judicial determination based on conflicting evidence. Thus, the court reaffirmed the rule that prejudgment interest should not be awarded in a wrongful death action absent oppression, fraud, or malice (133 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573) .

It must be noted, however, that this case was decided prior to the enactment of Civ. Code § 3291 in 1982. For further discussion of this section, see the CAUTION, above.

Additionally, the more recent case of Canavin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 512, 525-528, 196 Cal. Rptr. 82 , decided by another court from the same district, appears to be in partial conflict with Fox. Canavin held that in a wrongful death action, prejudgment interest on that portion of the award representing economic loss between the decedent's death and the date of judgment may be allowed when there is no dispute between the parties concerning the basis of computation of recoverable damages (148 Cal. App. 3d 512, 524) . It may be possible to distinguish Canavin on the ground that prejudgment interest was being awarded on pecuniary, as opposed to nonpecuniary, losses being sought in the same action.

[b] Willful Misconduct Does Not Justify Award of Prejudgment Interest

Southern Pac. Transportation Co. v. State of California (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 116, 171 Cal. Rptr. 187 , was an action for indemnification arising out of a prior a wrongful death action. The wrongful death action was based on a collision between a railroad train and an automobile. In their original action, plaintiffs alleged negligence against both the corporation which owned and operated the train involved in the accident and the State of California. Subsequently, plaintiffs in the wrongful death action filed a separate action against the corporation seeking compensatory damages for the destruction of the automobile involved in the collision and medical expenses, and for punitive damages for the corporation's willful misconduct. The court ordered the actions consolidated, and the cause was eventually tried on an amended complaint containing the allegations of both former complaints. After trial, the jury entered a special verdictwhich assessed total damages and found the state, the corporation, and the decedent each one-third negligent. The jury also found the corporation guilty of willful misconduct, but denied punitive damages. In its judgment, the trial court held the corporation and the state jointly and severally liable for the amount of damages assessed, reduced by one third to account for the decedent's one-third share of contributory negligence. The trial court also held the corporation individually liable for the full amount of the damages assessed, on the theory that the corporation's willful misconduct overrode the decedent's contributory negligence.

Subsequently, the corporation paid the full amount of the assessed damages and sought indemnification from the state, based on the state's share of the fault for the collision. The trial court entered judgment against the state for one third of the assessed damages plus one half of the prejudgment interest which the trial court in the original action had assessed against the corporation. Both sides appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the trial court's decision allowing the corporation indemnification for the state's share of the fault, but overturned the trial court's award of an amount equivalent to one half of the prejudgment interest. The court held that under the present comparative negligence scheme, the concept of willful misconduct had lost its viability for all but intentional injuries that justified punitive damages (115 Cal. App. 3d 116, 121) . The court held that prejudgment interest in a tort action, like exemplary damages, is recoverable only in cases involving oppression, fraud, or malice. The court held further that willful misconduct, having been rendered obsolete as a concept by the adoption of comparative negligence, could not justify an award of prejudgment interest. Applying this reasoning to the facts of the present case, the court held that since the trial court had specifically found that the corporation had not intentionally injured the decedent, the award of prejudgment interest in the original action had been incorrect (115 Cal. App. 3d 116, 122) .

It must be noted, however, that this case was decided prior to the enactment of Civ. Code § 3291 in 1982. For further discussion of this section, see the CAUTION, above.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsWrongful Death & Survival ActionsRemediesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.56

§ 121.56 Opposing Contention That Prejudgment Interest Should Be Awarded Under Civ. Code § 3291--Judgment Does Not Include Award for Personal Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO PREJUDGMENT INTEREST UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 3291 BECAUSE THE DAMAGES AWARDED BY THE _____ [JURY or COURT] WERE NOT ON ACCOUNT OF PERSONAL INJURY.

A. Prejudgment Interest Allowed Only on Damages Awarded for Personal Injury. Section 3291 of the Civil Code, by its terms, applies only to damages recovered for personal injury, in excess of the amount for which an offer to compromise is made under Section 998 of the Code of Civil Procedure; it does not apply to any damages recovered for economic injury (Morin v. ABA Recovery Service, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-212, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509 ; see Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 656-662, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179).

B. Insurance Bad-Faith Action Is Not One for Personal Injury. Prejudgment interest under Civil Code Section 3291 is not available in insurance bad-faith actions because such an action is not brought to recover damages for personal injury (Gourley v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 121, 126-130, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666, 822 P.2d 374).

C. Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy Is Not Claim for Personal Injury. Prejudgment interest under Civil Code Section 3291 is not available in an action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy because such an action is not brought to recover damages for personal injury (Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1435-1437, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172).

D. Plaintiff's Burden of Proof. Plaintiff bears the burden of proving the amount of damages in a judgment that were awarded on account of personal injury and for which prejudgment interest may be allowed under Civil Code Section 3291 (Morin v. ABA Recovery Service (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-212, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509 ; see Lakin v.

Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 656-662, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that prejudgment interest should be allowed under Civ. Code § 3291 and Code Civ. Proc. § 998 because plaintiff was awarded more damages by judgment than what would have been received had plaintiff's offer to compromise been accepted. The ground of the opposition is that these statutes allow for prejudgment interest only on damages that are awarded for personal injury. This form may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.43. For further discussion of Civ. Code 3291 and Code Civ. Proc. § 998, see §§ 121.43 and 121.55.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prejudgment Interest Allowed Only on Damages Awarded for Personal Injury

The background and part of the holding of Morin v. ABA Recovery Service, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-212, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509 , is discussed in § 121.43[3][c]. The court of appeal held, in addition, that Civ. Code § 3291 authorizes an award of prejudgment interest only for damages for personal injury (195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 208) .

The holding of Morin was essentially adopted by the California Supreme Court in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179 . Lakin involved claims for negligence and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Plaintiff suffered personal injury, and sought damages for both emotional distress and damage to her car (6 Cal. 4th 644, 653). The Court agreed with the conclusion in Morin, that prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291 is recoverable only on the part of the judgment that represented damages attributable to personal injury (6 Cal. 4th 644, 658-659) .

[b] Insurance Bad-Faith Action Is Not One for Personal Injury

In Gourley v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 121, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666, 822 P.2d 374 , the California Supreme Court held that an action under Ins. Code § 790.03, for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in an insurance contract, is not one for "personal injury" to which Civ. Code § 3291 applies. In this case, an insured was injured in an accident with an uninsured drunk driver and claimed against her own insurer under uninsured motorist coverage. She ultimately made an offer to settle for $60,000, which was rejected by the insurer. An arbitrator awarded her $88,000, which the insurer promptly paid. She then sued the insurer for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and violation of Ins. Code § 790.03, alleging entitlement to punitive damages and general damages for pain and suffering due to the insurer's unreasonable refusal to settle the underlying claim. The insured then made an offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to settle the bad-faith action for $249,099, which the insurer rejected. A jury eventually awarded the insured $15,765 in compensatory damages (undifferentiated between economic loss and general damages) and $1,576,500 punitive damages. The trial court awarded prejudgment interest on the entire amount under Civ. Code § 3291.

The insurer appealed the award of prejudgment interest, and the California Supreme Court reversed. The court held that the crux of an insurance bad-faith action is one for interference with property rights and not one for personal injury. As such, it was not within the scope of Civ. Code § 3291. The inclusion of a claim for general damages for emotional distress does not change the essential nature of the action. Mental distress is compensable as an aggravation of the financial damages, not as a separate cause of action (53 Cal. 3d 121, 128-129) .

[c] Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy is Not Claim for Personal Injury

In Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172 the plaintiff prevailed on a claim that he had been terminated from his employment in violation of public policy. He was awarded damages for lost wages and benefits and emotional distress, and punitive damages [see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (tort damages permitted only if employment termination violates public policy)]. Plaintiff's claim for prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291 was denied by the trial court and affirmed on appeal.

Citing the California Supreme Court's holding in Gourley v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 121, 125-126, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666, 822 P.2d 374 , discussed in § 121.56[3][b], the court held that an action for wrongful termination essentially seeks to recover on a property right. The nature of a tortious wrongful termination action is not to vindicate the plaintiff's personal interest; rather the essence is to vindicate the public interest (17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1435-1437) .

[d] Plaintiff's Burden of Proof

The background and part of the holding of Morin v. ABA Recovery Service, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 205-212, 240 Cal. Rptr. 509 , is discussed in § 121.43[3][c]. The court of appeal in that case held that the plaintiff has the burden to prove entitlement to prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291. An award of damages under a general jury verdict form is insufficient to allow prejudgment interest if the plaintiff seeks damages for both personal and other injury. The court stated that special jury findings would be the most direct and effective means of establishing the fact and amount of personal injury recovery, although there may be other evidence and factors from which the trial court may make the determination (195 Cal. App. 3d 200, 208-212) .

Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109, 863 P.2d 179 is discussed in § 121.56[3][a]. The jury awarded $5,000 for property damages and $15,000 for damages arising from the defendant's providing false identification and insurance information. The plaintiff accepted that she had the initial burden to prove what part of the damages award was for personal injury, but argued that she had met it by showing that a portion of the judgment was for personal injury. She wanted to shift the burden to the defense to then prove what part was not for personal injury. The appellate court adopted the view that because she had requested prejudgment interest on the entire award, she failed to establish that the award was for personal injury and was therefore not entitled to prejudgment interest on any of it.

The Supreme Court rejected both views, and essentially endorsed the holdingof Morin. The court found no basis in law or public policy to alter the basic rule that a party must prove each fact that is essential to his or her claim [Evid. Code § 500]. Thus, it rejected any shift of the burden of proof to the defense. The Court held that the case should be remanded to the trial court to give the plaintiff the opportunity to meet her burden (6 Cal. 4th 644, 657-661) .

While the Court noted that it encourages the use of special verdicts or jury findings as the most direct and effective means of establishing the fact and amount of personal injury recovery, special findings are not the sole means to determine the amount of damages awarded for personal injury. Facts and circumstances peculiar to the case, possibly including such considerations as the parties' theories of the case, uncontroverted evidence, or jury instructions, may permit determination of the fact and amount of personal injury recovery (6 Cal. 4th 644, 662) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPrejudgment InterestTortsDamagesCompensatory DamagesGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesInterestPrejudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.57

§ 121.57 Opposing Contention That Compound Interest Should Be Awarded--Interest May Not Be Compounded

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO COMPOUND INTEREST.

A. Interest May Not Be Compounded. Interest may not be computed on accrued interest unless by special statutory provision, or by stipulation of the parties (Estate of Sharp (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 585, 95 Cal. Rptr. 816 ; State of California v. Day (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 536, 554, 173 P.2d 399).

[Optional] B. Ambiguous Contract Cannot Be Construed to Provide Compound Interest. As a matter of law an ambiguous contract cannot be construed to provide for compound interest, and extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent is not admissible to show that a loan bears compound interest (Curry v. Moody (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1553-1554, 1555-1556, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that he or she should be awarded compound interest.

It should be noted that although prejudgment interest is generally not compounded, postjudgment interest is awarded on the total amount of the judgment, including prejudgment interest [see § 121.47]. Counsel should also note that the court has the discretion to allow compound prejudgment interest against a wrongdoing trustee [see § 121.46]. Furthermore, if the parties have stipulated to compound interest, or have agreed in the contract which is the subject of the lawsuit that compound interest should be allowed on any damages resulting from either party's breach, the court may allow compound interest [see § 121.34].

This form may be combined, when appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of compound interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, for example, if plaintiff contends he or she is entitled to compound interest because defendant is a wrongdoing trustee, counsel should discuss the nature of plaintiff and defendant's relationship to prove it did not involve a trust situation, or that defendant's conduct did not amount to oppression, fraud, or malice.

The points in this form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.46.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest May Not Be Calculated on Accrued Interest

The factual background and holding of Estate of Sharp (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 95 Cal. Rptr. 816 , are discussed in § 121.47[4][b]. In that case, the court of appeal held that interest may not be computed on accrued interest unless by special statutory provision or by stipulation of the parties, although when a judgment is rendered which awards interest, the full amount of the judgment, including any accrued prejudgment interest, will bear interest at the statutory rate from the date of entry (18 Cal. App. 3d 565, 585) .

State of California v. Day (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 536, 173 P.2d 399 , was commenced by the State of California to recover state compensation insurance funds that were allegedly misapplied by defendants. The trial court awarded plaintiff a money judgment to be compounded annually. Defendants appealed, contending, among other things, that the trial court erred in allowing compound interest.

The court of appeal agreed with this contention and directed the trial court to modify its judgment by striking out all amounts representing compound interest and inserting, in lieu thereof, simple interest. The court stated that the general rule is that interest may not be computed on accrued interest unless by special statutoryprovision, or by stipulation of the parties, and in the latter event, the amount may not be fixed in conflict with statutory provisions. The court held that the discretion granted to the court in Civ. Code § 3288 to award prejudgment interest in cases of oppression, fraud, or malice does not include the right to make an order for interest on interest, because such compound interest would constitute a penalty over and above that expressly allowed in cases of oppression, fraud, or malice (76 Cal. App. 2d 536, 554-555) .

[b] Ambiguous Contract Cannot Be Construed to Provide Compound Interest

In Curry v. Moody (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 , plaintiffs sued for declaratory relief and to quiet title based on a forged reconveyance of a deed of trust on property purchased by defendants. The trial court awarded damages to the plaintiffs equivalent to the principal of the note secured by the trust deed and compound interest and attorneys fees. The defendant's appealed, contending that under the promissory note, the plaintiffs were entitled to only simple interest from the inception of the loan to the foreclosure sale, and compound interest from the date of the foreclosure sale to the trial. The dispute related to the interpretation of language in the note stating, "I promise to pay ...#x2026; interest from [date of inception] at the rate of 13 percent per annum, payable at the time of sale of the house ...#x2026; should interest not be so paid it shall thereafter bear like interest as the principal."

The court of appeal modified the judgment to calculate prejudgment interest using simple interest from the inception of the contract until the date the house was sold, and using compound interest from the date of sale until the date of trial. Although the plaintiffs argued that extrinsic evidence should be admitted to show the party's intend, the court determined that the evidence was not competent to establish the meaning urged by the plaintiffs. Furthermore, as a matter of law, an ambiguous contract cannot be construed to provide for compound interest (40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1553-1554) . The court concluded that the provision principal and interest shall be "payable at the time of sale of the house" cannot reasonably be construed to mean principle and interest shall "be payable from the inception of the contract." In any event, the court stated, extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent is not admissible to show that a loan bears compound interest. The reason for this rule is found in Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, which provides in relevant part "interest shall not be compounded, nor shall the interest thereon be construed to bear interest unless an agreement to that effect is clearly expressed in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith" (40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1555) . Thus, the court concluded that the very fact the note is ambiguous as to whether compound interest began to accrue from the inception of the loan is enough to defeat that interpretation (40 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1556) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interest May Not Be Calculated on Accrued Interest

In Ninety Five Ten v. Crain (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 36, 282 Cal. Rptr. 141 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of the payee of a promissory note that called for interest-only payments during the time of the delinquencies on which the lawsuit was brought. The judgment awarded plaintiff interest on the principal from the date of breach to the date of judgment. Plaintiff appealed, contending that under Civ. Code § 3302 (detriment caused by breach of obligation to pay money as amount due by terms of obligation with interest thereon; see § 121.41, prejudgment interest should have been awarded on the delinquent interest that comprised the amount of the award). The court of appeal disagreed, citing Civ. Code §§ 3357, 3358, and the provision in the Usury Law that specifies that on a loan of money, interest shall not be compounded, nor shall interest thereon be construed to bear interest unless an agreement to that effect is clearly expressed in writing and signed by the party to be charged (231 Cal. App. 3d 36, 39) . The court of appeal discussed and disapproved Daum Development Corp. v. Yuba Plaza, Inc. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 65, 89 Cal. Rptr. 458 , to the extent it may be construed to sanction award of interest on interest in absence of an agreement for that interest (231 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40-41) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment InterestContracts LawContract InterpretationAmbiguities & Contra ProferentemGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesInterestGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 121 INTEREST
PART II. FORMS

12-121 California Points & Authorities § 121.58

§ 121.58 Opposing Contention That Postjudgment Interest Should Be Awarded From Date of Original Judgment Reversed on Appeal--Postjudgment Interest Only From Time of New Judgment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO POSTJUDGMENT INTEREST ONLY FROM _____ [date], THE DATE OF ENTRY OF THE NEW JUDGMENT FOLLOWING REVERSAL OF PLAINTIFF'S FIRST JUDGMENT.

No Postjudgment Interest on Judgment Reversed on Appeal. When a judgment is reversed on appeal, the new award subsequently entered by the trial court can bear postjudgment interest only from the date of entry of the new judgment (Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 442-443, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition toplaintiff's contention that a new award entered subsequent to a reversal of plaintiff's original award should accrue postjudgment interest from the date of entry of the original judgment. Such an award can bear interest only from the date of entry of the subsequent judgment. This argument should not be made when an appellate court has merely modified, rather than reversed, plaintiff's original judgment. When a judgment is modified on appeal, the judgment in its modified form accrues interest from the date of the original entry of judgment, not from the date of modification [Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 442, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76 (citing Beeler v. American Trust Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 435, 438, 170 P.2d 439)].

This form may be combined, where appropriate, with points relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of the propriety of postjudgment interest arises. The issue is most likely to arise on a motion for a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5); see generally Ch. 64, Damages: Tort and Ch. 65, Damages: Contract] or a motion to vacate the judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 663; see generally Ch. 155, Motions After Trial]. The points set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to contentions supported by the memoranda set out in § 121.47.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Postjudgment Interest on Judgment Reversed on Appeal

The background and holding of Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 439, 442-443, 11 Cal. Rptr. 580, 360 P.2d 76 , is discussed in § 121.47[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that when a judgment is modified on appeal, whether upward or downward, the new sum draws interest from the date of entry of the original order, not from the date of the new judgment. At pages 442-443, the Court noted that, conversely, when a judgment is reversed on appeal, the new award subsequently entered by the trial court can bear interest only from the date of entry of the new judgment [citing Cowdery v. London etc. Bank (1903) 139 Cal. 298, 303, 73 P 196] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Postjudgment Interest on Judgment Reversed on Appeal

In re Marriage of Milhan (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 765, 166 Cal. Rptr. 533, 613 P.2d 812 , was an appeal by a husband seeking a redetermination of a previous Supreme Court division of his military retirement and insurance rights in light of Hisquierdo v. Hisquierdo (1979) 439 U.S. 572, 99 S. Ct. 802, 59 L. Ed. 2d 1 . One of the contentions raised by the husband in this second appeal was that the trial court erred in awarding interest from the date on which the Supreme Court's remittitur was filed, rather than the date on which the subsequent judgment was entered.

After reiterating the principle that when a judgment is reversed on appeal, a new award subsequently entered by the trial court can bear interest only from the date of the new judgment, the Court held the remittitur in this case in effect ordered the trial court to enter judgment in the wife's favor. The remittitur fully defined and protected the rights of the parties. The trial court had only to apply equitable principles governing the enforcement of these rights. Accordingly, the filing of the remittitur constituted the entry of judgment for purposes of determining the date from which interest may run (27 Cal. 3d 765, 779) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesJudgment InterestPostjudgment Interest

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE

12-122 California Points & Authorities 122.syn

§ 122.syn Synopsis to Chapter 122: INTERFERENCE

§ 122.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 122.02 Governing Statutes

§ 122.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 122.04 Terminology Used in This Chapter

§ 122.05 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act

[1] Civil Actions

[2] Jurisdiction

§ 122.06 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

§ 122.07 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 122.08-122.19 [Reserved]

§ 122.20 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--In General

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Intentional Interference (Inducement to Breach Contract)

[b] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Contractual Relationship)

[c] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

[d] Wrongful Conduct Is Unlawful Conduct (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

[e] Specific Intent to Interfere Not Required (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

[f] Intent May Be Inferred From Conduct Substantially Certain to Interfere With Relationship

[g] Wrongfulness Independent of Interference With Contract Is Not Element of Intentional Interference With Contractual Relationship

[h] Violation of Well-Defined Trade Rules May Constitute Wrongful Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Contractual Relationship)

[b] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

§ 122.21 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference Rendered Performance of Contract More Expensive and Burdensome

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Rendering Contract Performance More Expensive and Burdensome

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference Rendering Contact Performance More Expensive

§ 122.22 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference With Unenforceable or Voidable Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Unenforceable Contract

[b] Interference With Voidable Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Unenforceable Contract

[b] Interference With Voidable Contract

§ 122.23 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contract Actionable

[b] Interference With At-Will Contract Actionable as Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

[c] Employer May Recover For Wrongful Conduct in Inducing At-Will Employee to Terminate Employment Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contact Actionable

§ 122.24 Supporting Contention That Specific Performance of Contract Interfered With Does Not Preclude Recovery for Interference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Performance Not A Bar to Damages

§ 122.25 Supporting Contention That Claim Supports Award of Punitive Damages [Civ. Code § 3294]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Punitive Damages May Be Awarded for Malicious Intentional Interference

§ 122.26 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--In General

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points And Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Conspiracy to Interfere

§ 122.27 Supporting Contention That Liability for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship May Be Imposed on Owner, Officer, or Director of Company

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Owner, Officer, or Director of Company Not Shielded From Liability

[b] Tort Liability May Be Imposed Under Alter Ego Doctrine

[c] Plaintiff's Election

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Tort Liability May Be Imposed Under Alter Ego Doctrine

§ 122.28 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Existing and Valid Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Valid and Existing Contract Required

[b] Void Contract Insufficient

[c] Fraudulently Induced Contract Insufficient

[d] Cancelled Contract Insufficient

[e] Unenforceable Contract Insufficient

§ 122.29 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Existing Non-Contractual Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Economic Relationship With Probability of Future Economic Benefit Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Economic Relationship With Probability of Future Economic Benefits Required

§ 122.30 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Knowledge of Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Knowledge of Economic Relationship Required

§ 122.31 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Intent to Interfere

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Disrupt Economic Relationship Required

[b] Attorney's Payment of Third Party Recovery to Client Rather Than Lienor Is Insufficient Interference

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Disrupt Economic Relationship Required

§ 122.32 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Wrongfulness of Interference With Prospective Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Relations Must Be Wrongful

[b] Violations of Ethical or Industry Standards Do Not Satisfy Wrongfulness Requirement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Relations Must Be Wrongful

§ 122.33 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Disruption of Contractual Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause in Fact of Contractual Interference

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cause in Fact of Contractual Interference

§ 122.34 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show That Interference Proximately Caused Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Conduct Was Substantial Factor in Causing Damages

[b] Interference With Prospective Contract or Business Relationship Must Be Moving Cause of Damages

[c] Showing of Resulting Injury Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Contract or Business Relationship Must Be Moving Cause of Damages

[b] Showing of Resulting Injury Required

§ 122.35 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Defendant Is Party to Contractual Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action if Defendant Is Party to Contract

[b] No Liability for Interfering With Subcontracts

[c] Agent Not Stranger to Contract

§ 122.36 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Making Competitive Bid on Private Contract Without Proper License Does Not Constitute Actionable Interference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action Based on Competitive Bidding by Unlicensed Defendant

§ 122.37 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Commission of Civil Wrong

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Wrongful Act Committed Pursuant to Conspiracy Required

§ 122.38 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--Contracting Party May Not Be Held Liable in Tort for Conspiracy to Interfere With Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contracting Party May Not Be Held Liable in Tort for Conspiracy to Interfere With Contract

§ 122.39 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Sporting Contests

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery for Interference Related to Sporting Contest

§ 122.40 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Employment Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Employer May Not Sue Competing Employer for Hiring Plaintiff's At-Will Employee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employer May Not Sue Competing Employer for Hiring At-Will Employee

§ 122.41 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

§ 122.42 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Fair Competition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fair Competition Is Justified

[b] Noncontractual Interference Enjoys More Extensive Privilege

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fair Competition Is Justified

§ 122.43 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Director's, Manager's, and Agent's Privilege

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Managers' Privilege

[b] Attorney for Breaching Party

[c] Predominant Motive Is Sufficient

[d] Privilege is Absolute When Applied to Termination of At-Will Employee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Manager's Privilege

[b] Predominant Motive is Sufficient

§ 122.44 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Owner's Privilege

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Owner's Privilege

§ 122.45 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Publication or Broadcast During Legislative, Judicial, or Other Official Proceeding [Civ. Code § 47(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Absolutely Privileged Publication or Broadcast

[b] Privilege Extends to Quasi-Judicial Proceedings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference Is Absolutely Privileged Publication or Broadcast

§ 122.46 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Prevention of Illegal Public Fund Expenditure [U.S. Const. Amends. I, XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. § 526a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Prevent Illegal Public Fund Expenditure

§ 122.47 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Politically Motivated Boycott [U.S. Const. Amend. I]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Politically Motivated Boycott

§ 122.48 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Right of Free Speech or Press Limits Liability for Allegedly False Statements [U.S. Const. Amend. I; Cal. Const. art. 1, § 2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Amendment Protections Apply to Interference Claim Based on Alleged Injurious Falsehood

[b] Statement Must Be False and Defamatory

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statement Must Be False and Defamatory

§ 122.49 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Petitioning Government for Redress of Grievance (Noerr-Pennington Doctrine)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

[b] Application of Noerr-Pennington Doctrine to Tort Actions for Interference

[c] Types of Proceedings to Which Doctrine Applies

[d] Litigation Protected by Doctrine Unless Objectively Baseless

§ 122.50 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Bona Fide Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Protect Bona Fide Claim

§ 122.51 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege for Fair Competition--Privilege Not Applicable to Competition by Unlawful or Illegitimate Means

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privilege for Fair Competition Is Inapplicable if Defendant Uses Unlawful or Illegitimate Means

§ 122.52 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege Based on Confidential Relationship--Privilege Not Applicable When Purpose of Interference Is Solely to Further Personal Economic Advantage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privilege Based on Confidential Relationship Does Not Justify Interference for Purpose of Personal Economic Advantage

§ 122.53 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege Based on Financial Interest--Privilege Not Applicable When Interference Is Malicious or When Requisite Interest in Third Party's Business Is Absent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Proprietary or Creditor's Interest

[b] Interference Based on Improper Motive

§ 122.54 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Publication or Broadcast During Legislative, Judicial, or Other Official Proceeding [Civ. Code § 47(b)]--Privilege Not Applicable to Publication Unrelated to Judicial Proceeding Contemplated in Good Faith

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Communication Not Protected When Unrelated to Potential Action Contemplated in Good Faith

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Communication Not Protected When Unrelated to Potential Action Contemplated in Good Faith

§ 122.55 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Petitioning Government for Redress of Grievance (Noerr-Pennington Doctrine)--Exception for "Sham" Activity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Sham" Exception to Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

[b] "Sham" Exception Applies to Tort Actions for Interference

[c] Test for "Sham" Litigation

§§ 122.56-122.69 [Reserved]

§ 122.70 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship--Negligent Contractual Performance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Criteria for Determining Duty of Care

[b] Negligent Performance of Contract as Basis for Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Negligent Performance of Contract as Basis for Action

§ 122.71 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship--Injury Is Ordinary Business Risk

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery for Injury Resulting From Ordinary Business Risk

§ 122.72 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference with Economic Relationship--Defendant Owes No Duty of Care

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery If There Is No Duty of Care

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Recovery If There Is No Duty of Care

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.01

§ 122.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities relating to actions based on intentional interference with economic relationships, including forms supporting [see §§ 122.20 -122.27] and opposing [see §§ 122.28 -122.41] the contention that the elements necessary to recover exist, and forms supporting [see §§ 122.42 -122.50] and opposing [see §§ 122.51 -122.55] the contention that the interference was legally justified or privileged.

This chapter also includes points and authorities relating to actions based on negligent interference with economic relationships, including a from supporting [see § 122.70] and opposing [see §§ 122.71, 122.72] the contention that a cause of action exists.

Because an interference action may be brought under both a negligence theory and an intentional tort theory, memoranda of points and authorities based on either theory be used in conjunction with those based on the other theory.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.02

§ 122.02 Governing Statutes

The law governing an action for intentional interference with economic relations has mostly developed through case law. Several landmark cases in this area have established the general rules governing such an action. In Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 33, 35, 37-39, 112 P.2d 631 , the Supreme Court first held that interference with a contractual relationship by lawful but unjustified means is actionable. The Court expanded on this theory in Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 822-823, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , in which the Court held that the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage applies when the defendant interferes with a business or economic relationship not subject to a legally binding agreement, but nonetheless containing a probable future economic benefit to the plaintiff. The Court has subsequently shown some inclination to limit recovery in the area of interference with merely prospective economic advantage. In Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 378, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 , the Court held that a plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic relations has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself, and noted that the case before it did not require it to consider other refinements to the precise wrongfulness that must be shown. The Court's listing of potential new requirements--such as whether a plaintiff should be required to prove that the defendant's conduct amounted to an independently tortious act, or was a species of anticompetitive behavior proscribed by positive law, or was motivated by unalloyed malice [see Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 378, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] --may presage issues that the Court will consider in future cases.

An action for negligent interference with economic relations is governed by case law, beginning with J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 .

Civ. Code § 1714(a) sets forth the general standard of care required of every person. Evid. Code § 669 creates a rebuttable presumption of negligence for the violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation under certain conditions.

The measure of damages in a negligence action is governed by Civ. Code §§ 3333-3333.2. Contractual limitations on liability for negligence are governed by Civ. Code § 1668.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsElementsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.03

§ 122.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda filed in discovery motion proceedings may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms in this chapter are in the form of contentions based on substantive points of law, and may be combined with each other, depending on the facts and issues involved. These substantive contentions may also be combined with any appropriate procedural forms, depending on the context in which they are raised. For example, they may be combined with forms in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 155, Motions After Trial , Ch. 160, Motions to Strike , or Ch. 221, Summary Judgments , if any of these procedures is involved. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief, or be used to research office memoranda and jury instructions in interference cases. Whatever procedural context or paper is involved, counsel should add argument to the points and authorities being used, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum of points and authorities or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs at the beginning of Volume 1.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.04

§ 122.04 Terminology Used in This Chapter

"Interference with economic relations" is used by some courts, and is used in this chapter, to describe all types of actionable interference, that is, all wrongful interference with a person's general right to establish and maintain a lawful, contractual business, or other advantageous economic relationship [see Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 122, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313 (inducement to breach contract, interference with contract, and interference with prospective economic advantage are separate theories on which the tort of interference with economic relations may be based); Owens v. Palos Verdes Monaco (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 855, 872, 191 Cal. Rptr. 381 ("interference with economic relations"); Zimmerman v. Bank of Am. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 55, 57-58, 12 Cal. Rptr. 319 ("interference with advantageous relationship"); see also Buxbom v. Smith (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 535, 546, 145 P.2d 305 (recognizing general cause of action for wrongful interference with another's right to establish and conduct lawful business)]. This term describes the essence of the tort, which is the disruption of an advantageous economic relationship [see Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 822, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 ; Zimmerman v. Bank of Am. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 55, 57-58, 12 Cal. Rptr. 319] .

Supreme Court decisions have used the term "interference with prospective economic advantage" in the same all-inclusive sense [see Environmental Planning & Info. Council v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 188, 193, 203 Cal. Rptr. 127, 680 P.2d 1086 (inducement of breach of contract is merely one type of broader tort of interference with prospective economic advantage); Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 823, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 (same); see also J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 (negligent interference with prospective economic advantage)], while noting the analytical differences and public-policy distinctions between interference with existing contracts and interference with commercial relations less than contractual in nature [see Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] . Because of its use by the Supreme Court, counsel may prefer to use this latter term in memoranda of points and authorities. However, identical or similar terminology is still commonly used in a more limited sense to describe interference with noncontractual economic relations as distinguished from interference with contractual relations [see, e.g., Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 122, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313 ; Manor Inv. Co. v. F. W. Woolworth, Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 592-594, 206 Cal. Rptr. 37)]. To avoid possible confusion, therefore, this chapter does not use the term "interference with prospective economic advantage" in either sense, and the term "interference with noncontractual economic relations" is used to distinguish those types of interference that do not disrupt an existing contract.

Similarly, several other terms are commonly used to describe more specific types of interference (for example, "inducing breach of contract" and "interference with business relations") [see Manor Inv. Co. v. F. W. Woolworth, Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 592-594, 206 Cal. Rptr. 37] . Counsel may prefer to use these terms in memoranda of points and authorities in accordance with local practice or personal preference.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.05

§ 122.05 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act

[1] Civil Actions

In addition to the remedies discussed in this chapter, counsel may also wish to consider whether the facts of the case would give rise to a civil action under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) (18 U.S.C.S. §§ 1961-1968). Although the object of RICO is to prevent and punish racketeering activity, its broad definitions may extend to otherwise law-abiding business persons and their respected and legitimate enterprises, that is, to conduct of legitimate business persons who engage in "garden variety" commercial fraud [see Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 909, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 ; Douglas v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 155, 159, 263 Cal. Rptr. 473 (pleading held sufficient)].

RICO authorizes a civil action by any person injured in his or her business or property by reason of a violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962 for treble damages and costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee (18 U.S.C.S. § 1964(c)). For a full discussion of RICO and the available civil remedies authorized by it, see Smith & Reed, Civil RICO (Matthew Bender).

[2] Jurisdiction

RICO provides that any person injured in his or her business or property by reason of a violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962 may sue therefor in any appropriate United States District Court. This provision is not exclusive. State courts have concurrent jurisdiction over the civil action for damages authorized by 18 U.S.C.S. § 1964(c) [Tafflin v. Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 456-457, 467, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887 ; Lou v. Belzberg (9th Cir. 1987) 834 F.2d 730, 736-739 ; Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 907-916, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375] . Civil RICO claims are arbitrable when the transaction is covered by an agreement that provides for arbitration of disputes between the parties [Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. McMahon (1987) 482 U.S. 220, 238-242, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawPrivate ActionsRacketeer Influenced & Corrupt OrganizationsGeneral OverviewAntitrust &

Trade LawPrivate ActionsRacketeer Influenced & Corrupt OrganizationsClaimsGeneral OverviewAntitrust & Trade LawPrivate ActionsRacketeer Influenced & Corrupt OrganizationsCoverage

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.06

§ 122.06 Related Pleadings and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms for use in actions for interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to negligence generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions for conspiracy to interfere with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 126, Conspiracy (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.07

§ 122.07 Related Points and Authorities

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum of points and authorities or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For points and authorities relating to negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

For additional discussion and forms relating to conspiracy to interfere with economic relations, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-122 California Points & Authorities §§ 122.08-122.19

[Reserved]

§§ 122.08[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.20

§ 122.20 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--In General

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HIS/HER INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S _____ [CONTRACTUAL or NONCONTRACTUAL] ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAD _____ [A VALID AND EXISTING CONTRACT or AN ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP CONTAINING THE PROBABILITY OF A FUTURE ECONOMIC BENEFIT] WITH _____ [name], DEFENDANT KNEW OF THIS _____ [CONTRACT or ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP] AND [COMMITTED INTENTIONAL ACTS DESIGNED TO INDUCE A DISRUPTION OF THE CONTRACT WITH, OR A BREACH OF CONTRACT BY, _____ (name) or COMMITTED ACTS WRONGFUL BY SOME MEASURE OTHER THAN THE INTERFERENCE ITSELF WITH THE INTENT TO DISRUPT THE PROSPECTIVE RELATIONSHIP] AND HIS/HER ACTS DID _____ [CAUSE ACTUAL DISRUPTION OF THE _____ (CONTRACT or ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP) or INDUCE _____ (name) TO BREACH THE CONTRACT], RESULTING IN DAMAGES TO PLAINTIFF.

[EITHER, if action based on inducement to breach a contract]

A. Elements of Intentional Interference (Inducement to Breach Contract). To plead an actionable wrong for inducement to breach a contract, the plaintiff must allege that (1) he or she had a valid and existing contract with a third party; (2) defendant had knowledge of the contract and intended to induce its breach; (3) the contract was in fact breached by the contracting third party; (4) the breach was caused by defendant's unjustified or wrongful conduct; and (5) plaintiff suffered damages as a result (Freed v. Manchester Serv., Inc. (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189, 331 P.2d 689).

[OR, if action based on interference with a contractual relationship]

A. Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Contractual Relationship). To plead an actionable wrong for interference with a contractual relationship, the plaintiff must allege that (1) he or she had a valid and existing contract with a third party; (2) defendant had knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant committed intentional and unjustified acts designed to interfere with or disrupt the contract; (4) actual interference with or disruption of the relationship occurred; and (5) damages were suffered as a result (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 55, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305).

[OR, if action based on interference with a noncontractual economic relationship]

A. Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship). To plead an actionable wrong for interference with a noncontractual economic relationship, the plaintiff must allege that (1) he or she had an economic relationship with a third party containing the probability of a future economic benefit to plaintiff; (2) defendant had knowledge of this relationship; (3) defendant committed intentional acts designed to disrupt the relationship, and those acts were wrongful by some measure other than the interference with the plaintiff's interest itself; (4) actual disruption of the relationship occurred; and (5) plaintiff suffered damages as a result (Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305).

[Optional] B. Wrongful Conduct Is Unlawful Conduct (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship). An act is independently wrongful for purposes of alleging a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage if it is unlawful, which means that it must be conduct proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1159, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937).

[Optional] C. Specific Intent to Interfere Not Required (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship). In an action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage that has not ripened into a contract, a plaintiff is not required to allege that the defendant acted with the specific intent or purpose of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, and it is sufficient that the plaintiff plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of the defendant's action (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1153, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937).

[Optional] D. Intent May Be Inferred From Conduct Substantially Certain to Interfere With Relationship. A party's intent to interfere with a contract or other economic relationship may be established by inference as well as by direct proof and may be inferred from conduct that is substantially certain to interfere with the relationship (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 449, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305).

[Optional] E. Wrongfulness Independent of Interference With Contract is Not Element of Intentional Interference With Contractual Relationship. Because intentionally inducing or causing a breach of an existing contract is wrongful in and of itself, plaintiff in an action for intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship is not required to plead or prove that defendant's conduct is wrongful apart from the interference with the contract itself (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513).

[Optional] F. Violation of Well-Defined Trade Rules May Constitute Wrongful Conduct. In an action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage between competitors who are bound by well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association, or profession, a violation of those rules or standards may constitute wrongful conduct under the Korea Supply standard if the rule or standard allegedly violated provides for, or gives rise to, a sanction or means of enforcement for a violation (Stevenson Real Estate Servs., Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Servs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's cause of action for intentional interference with economic relations generally satisfies the elements essential for recovery. One of the three alternative Paragraphs A should be used depending on whether the action is based on interference (1) inducing a breach of contract, (2) with a contractual relationship, or (3) with a noncontractual relationship. Optional Paragraph B may be included in an action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage to define the standard for evaluating the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct.

These contentions may be combined with additional contentions supporting the existence of a particular element [see §§ 122.21 -122.23], supporting recovery regardless of plaintiff's ability to obtain specific performance of the contract interfered with [see § 122.24], supporting recovery of punitive damages [see § 122.25], or supporting the existence of a conspiracy to interfere [see § 122.26].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the elements of interference with economic relations. This argument may arise in opposing a general demurrer to a complaint, a motion for nonsuit, a defense motion for summary judgment, or other similar procedure. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should thus set forth facts showing the existence of each element of the tort.

The tort of intentional interference with economic relations may be subdivided into three general theories of liability: inducement to breach a contract, interference with a contractual relationship, and interference with a noncontractual economic relationship. Each of these theories involves different factual elements [see Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 ; Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 ; Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 122-123, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313] . Counsel should define the elements of the tort according to which theory or theories is most applicable.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 122.28 -122.35 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contentions supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Intentional Interference (Inducement to Breach Contract)

In Freed v. Manchester Serv., Inc. (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 331 P.2d 689 , plaintiff, an attorney, had contracted to provide legal services to a washrack operator in exchange for a share of the profits from operation of the washrack. Defendant, the lessor of the washrack, later entered into a new lease with the washrack operator and another person, as copartners, thereby allegedly extinguishing plaintiff's right to receive his share of the profits from the operator's sole operation of the washrack. Plaintiff brought an action for inducement to breach a contract. The trial court entered an order sustaining the general demurrer of one of the defendants and dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. The court listed the elements which must be alleged in an action for inducement to breach a contract, stating that plaintiff must allege the existence of a valid contract; that defendant had knowledge of the existence of the contract and intended to induce a breach thereof; that the contract was in fact breached resulting in injury to plaintiff; and that the breach and resulting injury was proximately caused by defendant's unjustified or wrongful conduct (165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189) . The court noted that unless it appears on the face of the complaint that a defendant's conduct was justified, justification is an affirmative defense. In the case at hand, the court found that the complaint did allege that (1) plaintiff had a contract with the washrack operator, (2) defendants knew of this contract, (3) defendants intended to induce its breach, (4) the washrack operator did breach the contract, (5) defendants' wrongful conduct was the proximate cause of the breach, and (6) plaintiff suffered damages (165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 190) . The court concluded that the complaint did not affirmatively show the existence of justification, and that plaintiff stated a cause of action (165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 190-191) .

NOTE:

The Supreme Court in Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 [see §§ 122.20[3][b] and 122.20[3][g]], held that wrongfulness independent of the act of interfering with the contract itself is not an element of an action for intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship. While the Court did not address the issue, the Court did not distinguish between an action based on an inducement to breach an existing contract and one based more generally on interference with an existing contract. However, the language used by the Court clearly demonstrates it intended that the holding be applied to an action brought under either theory. Thus, in light of that opinion, plaintiff in an action for interference with an existing contract based on inducing a breach of contract does not need to allege that the interference was "wrongful" beyond the fact that the interference was intended to induce the breach.

[b] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Contractual Relationship)

In Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , plaintiffs, who were engaged in the holding, ownership, and financing of real property, brought suit against the only companies offering real estate title insurance in their county. Defendants had an established practice of refusing to issue title insurance on properties acquired at tax sales, despite the fact that titles of parcels purchased by tax sale are deeded free and clear by operation of law. This refusal, along with defendants' efforts to convince the public that title insurance was a necessity, caused a great reduction in the value and marketability of plaintiffs' land bought at tax sales and resulted in the attempted rescission and breach of contracts for sale of plaintiffs' land to third-party purchasers. In the suit, plaintiffs alleged that defendants' refusal to issue title insurance on these properties interfered with plaintiffs' contracts for sale of the property to purchasers, that the defendants conspired to refuse to issue title insurance for property obtained at a tax sale, and that defendants intentionally, willfully, and deliberately interfered with the contractual relations of members of the general public for the sale of land purchased at tax sales. The case was dismissed by stipulation as to two of the three defendants, and the remaining defendant successfully demurred to the causes of action brought against it. The court of appeal affirmed, holding in part that plaintiffs could not state a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations because the refusal to issue title insurance on the properties was not wrongful for a reason other than the impact such refusal had on the contracts with the plaintiffs' purchasers.

The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal. The Court reaffirmed that the elements which a plaintiff must plead to state the cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are (1) a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach of disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage (19 Cal. 4th 26, 55) . The Court then held that, unlike in a claim for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff alleging intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship need not allege that the defendant's conduct was wrongful apart from the interference with the contract itself. This is discussed further in § 122.20[3][g]. The Court also noted that the tort of intentional interference with performance of a contract does not require that the actor's primary purpose be disruption of the contract, quoting extensively the language from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 766 (19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56) .

The Court then concluded that the complaint sufficiently alleged a cause of action for intentional interference with existing contractual relations. The complaint alleged a contract between plaintiff and a land purchaser. Knowledge of the contract was implied in an allegation that defendant refused to issue a policy of title insurance unless the purchaser initiated a quiet title action. Disruption of the contractual relationship was alleged in an allegation that the purchaser then failed to complete payment. Damages were alleged in the lost benefits of the transactions and related legal costs. By a conspiracy allegation and similar allegations regarding the tax deeds to purchasers which defendants refused to insure, plaintiffs satisfied those elements of the cause of action. Finally, the complaint alleged that defendants deliberately, willfully, and intentionally interfered with the contractual relations of purchasers of land and sellers who are members of the public owning land purchased through a tax sale, including, but not limited to, the plaintiffs. The Court reserved for trial the issue of plaintiffs' proof that the remaining defendant intended to interfere with land sale contracts when it denied title insurance, as well as the issue of whether the defendant can establish that it had a legitimate business purpose which justified its actions (19 Cal. 4th 26, 56-57) .

In Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 , plaintiff had sued defendant utility company for libel, slander, and intentional interference with contract and prospective economic advantage based in part on statements made by defendant's officials to plaintiff's employer, a newspaper that reported on the energy industry, which ultimately caused the employer to terminate plaintiff's employment. The statements, which pertained to plaintiff's previous volunteer work for an environmental organization, implied that plaintiff had a conflict of interest that would compromise her objectivity as a reporter and consisted of records of plaintiff's previous appearance in a Public Utilities Commission proceeding on behalf of the organization and an account of a conversation concerning plaintiff allegedly held between one of defendant's officials and a representative of the organization, the truth of which was disputed by plaintiff. The trial court granted summary adjudication for defendant on these causes of action and entered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal stated that the elements of a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are: (1) a valid contract between the plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of the contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448) . The court noted that a cause of action under this theory will lie for the intentional interference by a third person with a contractual relationship either by unlawful means or by means otherwise lawful when there is a lack of sufficient justification. Unlawful means include defamation and other tortious conduct (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 449) . The court concluded that there was a triable issue of fact concerning the interference causes of action. The trier of fact could reasonably find that the defendant's executive's conduct was substantially certain to interfere with plaintiff's interests and could infer culpable intent from this fact. The court also held that defendant could not be liable for conveying to plaintiff's employer truthful copies of government documents or an accurate account of its executive's conversation with the environmental organization's representative, but could be held liable on a finding that defendant had defamed plaintiff by conveying a false account of the conversation (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 450) .

[c] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

In Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 , plaintiff was an automobile wholesaler who alleged that defendant Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (Toyota) had interfered with his prospective economic relationships by requiring purchasers of its Lexus automobiles to agree not to sell the automobiles for use outside the United States (in order to preclude the development of a resale market for Lexuses in Japan). Once Toyota had discovered that plaintiff was purchasing Lexuses and reselling them in Japan, it put his name on an "offenders list" given to dealers along with a warning that sales to those on the list could lead to sanctions on the dealers. Plaintiff's lawsuit went to the jury, which was instructed (over plaintiff's objection) with BAJI No. 7.82, modified to provide that the cause of action required proof that defendant "intentionally engaged in wrongful acts or conduct designed to interfere with or disrupt" plaintiff's prospective relationships. The jury returned a divided verdict for Toyota, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed on the ground that plaintiff need not establish that the conduct was wrongful; the Supreme Court granted review and reversed the court of appeal.

The Court examined the history of the causes of action for interference with contracts and interference with prospective economic relations, noting the historical emphasis on the "intentionality" requirement, and the existence of the defense of privilege, which could be used to justify conduct based on the defendant's own competitive business interests (11 Cal. 4th 376, 381-383) . The Court also discussed the calls for reexamination and reform, including the Restatement and the Second Restatement and the responses of courts to the Restatements (11 Cal. 4th 376, 383-387) . In discussing the California treatment of the cause of action, the Court set out the elements of the cause of action from Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , as well as its statements that privilege or justification was an affirmative defense, and that a significant privilege or justification is free competition (11 Cal. 4th 376, 389) .

The Court went on to discuss the criticisms of the broad scope of the cause of action, especially the potential for liability based on nothing more than competitive business practices that are not otherwise wrongful (11 Cal. 4th 376, 389-391) . The Court concluded that the criticisms are valid, and support the conclusion that a distinction needs to be made between interference with an existing contract on the one hand, and a prospective relationship on the other. The interests invaded are not of nearly equal dignity, so economic relationships short of contractual should stand on a different legal footing as far as the potential for tort liability is reckoned (11 Cal. 4th 376, 392) . The Court found the notion that inducing the breach of an existing contract is merely a subevent of a "more inclusive" class of acts that interfere with economic relations generally may not be objectionable in theory, but in practice has been mischievous. Instead, the Court stated, courts should give a greater solicitude to those relationships that have ripened into agreements, and recognize that relationships short of that subsist in a zone in which the rewards and risks of competition are dominant (11 Cal. 4th 376, 392) . Therefore, the Court held that the trial court's modification of BAJI No. 7.82 to require proof that the conduct was wrongful in addition to being intentional was not error (11 Cal. 4th 376, 393) . To the extent that Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 and Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 206 Cal. Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158 , are inconsistent with this requirement, the Court disapproved them (11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 n.5).

In Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , one of the defendants, a property owner, erected a sign on her property that read: "For Sale--Contact Your Local Broker." A group of potential buyers approached plaintiff, a real estate broker, and asked about the property. Plaintiff advised the buyers about the merits of the parcel. The buyers promised to return the next day, but never did. Plaintiff sent the seller a note informing her that he was the "procuring cause" of the potential buyers and asking her to refer them to him if they contacted her. Plaintiff learned later that a sale had been made to the buyers without his participation. Plaintiff unsuccessfully requested the seller to pay him a commission. There was no written agreement between plaintiff and the seller or buyer regarding the payment of a commission on the sale of the property. Plaintiff sued the seller and the buyers for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage (that is, intentional interference with a noncontractual relationship) [see § 122.04]. The trial court sustained general demurrers by defendant buyers. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the demurrers relating to plaintiff's actions for interference. The court stated that in the real estate brokerage context, the elements of interference with a noncontractual relationship are (1) an economic relationship between the broker and vendor or broker and vendee containing the probability of economic benefit to the broker; (2) knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship; (3) intentional acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) damages to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant (14 Cal. 3d 815, 827) . Finding that each of these elements was adequately alleged by the plaintiff in the complaint, the Court concluded that plaintiff had stated a cause of action for interference (14 Cal. 3d 815, 828-830) .

NOTE:

To the extent that the opinion in Buckaloo is inconsistent with the requirement that the plaintiff plead and prove that the defendant's interference was wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself, the opinion was disapproved by the California Supreme Court in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 .

The factual and procedural background of Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 , is discussed in § 122.20[3][b]. In addition to alleging that defendant's statements caused plaintiff's employer to terminate her employment, plaintiff alleged that defendant's statements to the editor of another newspaper for whom she had worked as a free-lance reporter caused the other newspaper to discontinue accepting her articles for publication.

In concluding that the record in that case presented a triable issue of fact regarding the elements of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage, the court noted that the elements of that tort differ from that of the tort of intentional interference with contractual relationship only to the extent that the former cause of action presupposes an economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third party with the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448) . The court observed that plaintiff did not have a contractual relationship with the other newspaper and that the newspaper was not obliged to compensate her or to accept her articles. She was merely on a list of reporters privileged to submit articles that would be reviewed for publication. Nevertheless, she did enjoy an economic relationship with the newspaper offering the probability of future economic benefit because she could be expected to be paid for those articles that were accepted for publication (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 449) . Because the court concluded that there was evidence in the record that defendant may have acted unlawfully in intervening with the editor of the newspaper, there was a triable issue as to whether the defendant's interference was justified (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 451-456) .

[d] Wrongful Conduct Is Unlawful Conduct (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

In Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 , the plaintiff was a business that represented a company that competed for a contract to provide the Republic of Korea with military radar systems. Even though the plaintiff's client's bid was $50 million lower and its equipment allegedly superior, the contract went to a competing company. After evidence emerged suggesting that the contract was awarded because an agent for the competing company had extended bribes and sexual favors to key Korean officials, the plaintiff brought suit against the company that won the contract and the offending agent, asserting causes of action for conspiracy, intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, and unfair competition. The plaintiff alleged that but for the bribes and sexual favors extended by the agent, conduct that violated the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, the contract would have been awarded to the plaintiff's client and the client would have paid the plaintiff a commission of over $30 million. Moreover, the plaintiff alleged that the defendants knew of the plaintiff's relationship with its client and that the illegal conduct would cause the plaintiff substantial financial loss. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer to all counts. The court of appeal reversed, finding that the plaintiff had sufficiently stated causes of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage and statutory unfair competition.

The California Supreme Court granted review to address two specific issues, one of which was whether the plaintiff had adequately pleaded a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage even though the plaintiff failed to plead that the defendants had the specific intent to interfere with the plaintiff's business expectancy. In the course of concluding that plaintiff had adequately pleaded this cause of action, the Court clarified that an act is independently wrongful for purposes of alleging a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage if it is unlawful, which means that it must be conduct proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1159) . In this case, the Court concluded that the plaintiff had met this requirement by alleging that the defendants' conduct in offering bribes and sexual favors to foreign officials to procure a contract constituted a violation of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1159) .

[e] Specific Intent to Interfere Not Required (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

The factual and procedural background of Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 , is described in § 122.20[3][d]. In concluding that the plaintiff had sufficiently pleaded a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, the Court held that a plaintiff in such an action is not required to plead that the defendant acted with the specific intent or purpose of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. It is sufficient that the plaintiff plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of the defendant's conduct (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1153) . The Court noted that the use of the word "designed" in the typical formulation of the third element of the tort does not necessarily mean specific intent. Consistent with the intent requirement imposed by Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , in a cause of action for intentional interference with contract, and the parameters of the interference tort and use of the word "intent" in the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 8A, comment b, the Court held that specific intent was not a required element (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1155-1157) . The Court also noted that the inclusion in the tort of a requirement that the plaintiff prove that the defendant's conduct was wrongful by some measure other than the fact of the interference--which, as the Court clarified, required a showing that the conduct was unlawful by some independent legal standard--makes an additional showing of specific intent to interfere unnecessary. Under the parameters of the tort as articulated by the Court, the impropriety of a defendant's conduct comes from unlawful conduct combined with the defendant's knowledge that the conduct will interfere, or is substantially certain to interfere, with the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1159-1162) .

[f] Intent May Be Inferred From Conduct Substantially Certain to Interfere With Relationship

The factual and procedural background of Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 , is discussed in § 122.20[3][b]. In discussing the elements of the torts of intentional interference with contractual relationship and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, the court of appeal noted that both torts require intentional acts designed to interfere with a contractual or economic relationship. Citing Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 767 , 206 Cal. Rptr. 354 , 686 P.2d 1158 , the court stated that intent may be established by inference as well as by direct proof. Thus, the jury may infer culpable intent from conduct substantially certain to interfere with the contract or prospective economic relationship (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 449) . In the case before it, the court concluded that the trier of fact could reasonably find that the defendant's executive's conduct in intervening with the plaintiff's employer and with the other newspaper for which she worked was substantially certain to interfere with plaintiff's interests and could infer culpable intent from this fact (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 450) .

[g] Wrongfulness Independent of Interference With Contract Is Not Element of Intentional Interference With Contractual Relationship

The factual and procedural background of Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , is discussed in § 122.20[3][b]. In reaching its decision that plaintiffs had stated a cause of action for intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship sufficient to withstand a demurrer, the Supreme Court held that wrongfulness independent of the act of interfering with the contract itself is not an element of an action for intentional interference with an existing contractual relationship. The Court, citing its earlier opinion in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 [see § 122.20[3][c]], reaffirmed that interference with an existing contract receives greater solicitude than interference with prospective economic advantage, and recognized that intentionally inducing or causing a breach of an existing contract is a wrong in and of itself (19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56) .

NOTE:

While it did not address any possible distinction, the Supreme Court in Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 55-56, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , did not distinguish between an action based on an inducement to breach an existing contract and one based more generally on interference with an existing contract. However, the language used by the Court clearly demonstrates it intended that the holding be applied to an action brought under either theory.

[h] Violation of Well-Defined Trade Rules May Constitute Wrongful Conduct

In Stevenson Real Estate Servs., Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Servs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235 , the plaintiff was a real estate broker who was hired to represent a company in its search for new office space to lease. After months of searching, the plaintiff showed the company a particular property and provided the company with substantial information, photographs, and analysis concerning the property. The company told the plaintiff that it was interested in making an offer on a lease, but would have to get prior approval from a second company that was about to acquire it. The plaintiff was initially given approval by a representative of the second company to negotiate on a lease for the property, but subsequently was told that the parent company of the second company had interceded and demanded that the lease negotiations be handled by a different broker. The plaintiff objected and notified the other broker that its conduct was in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct of the American Industrial Real Estate Association. The company eventually signed a long-term lease for the property, but the plaintiff received no commission, which instead went to the broker provided by the parent company. The plaintiff sued the other broker and its successor in interest for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants and denied leave to amend. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court first rejected the defendants' contention that the second broker was not subject to the Rules of Professional Conduct after noting that the defendants had not requested judicial notice of those Rules necessary to their argument, and as such, the trial court erred in accepting their position (138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1221) . The court then addressed the defendants' argument that a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct would not be sufficient to constitute "wrongful conduct" under the standard provided by the Supreme Court Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 [see § 122.20[3][d]]. The court noted that the Supreme Court had specified that the "independently wrongful" element required proscription by some "constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard." Because these specified sources account for virtually all sources of legal restrictions, the phrase "other determinable legal standard" must refer to some other source of limitations on behavior. Therefore, the court held that in an action between competitors who are bound by well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association, or profession, a violation of those rules or standards may constitute wrongful conduct under the Korea Supply standard, although if a particular rule or standard unduly restricts free competition, that particular rule may not be an appropriate basis for an interference action (138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223) . In reaching its decision, the court distinguished the court of appeal opinion in Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 [see § 122.32]. In that case, the industry standards used by the plaintiff to attempt to show wrongful conduct were too vague and not necessarily known to all industry members (138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222) .

The court also held that the rule or standard allegedly violated must be independently actionable, which necessarily requires that the rule or standard provide for, or give rise to, a sanction or means of enforcement for a violation. A right to arbitration between aggrieved members of the trade or association would be sufficient to meet this requirement. However, because the plaintiff in this particular case had not alleged that the standards violated were independently actionable, the court remanded to allow the plaintiff the opportunity to amend the complaint to meet this requirement, if possible (138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223-1224) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Contractual Relationship)

In Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313 , plaintiff developers had obtained a secured loan from defendant lender in order to construct a townhouse development. When plaintiffs failed to comply with the loan agreement, the lender filed a judicial foreclosure action and concurrently obtained an ex parte order appointing a receiver to take possession of the development. Prior to the receiver's confirmation, plaintiffs obtained deposits on two units. Defendants later approached plaintiffs, stating their desire to act as real estate agents for the development despite the pending foreclosure action. Defendants were given the exclusive right to sell the units, but they sold none. Furthermore, defendants warned the depositors that a purchase of the units on which they had made deposits could be arranged directly from the foreclosing lender at a substantially lower price than that offered by plaintiffs (the lender had been awarded title to the units in settlement of plaintiffs' debt). Each time the depositors visited the development, defendants repeated these warnings and advisements. The depositors soon withdrew the money they had deposited with plaintiffs and agreed to purchase from the lender. Plaintiffs filed a complaint alleging interference with a contractual relationship. The court of appeal affirmed a verdict in favor of plaintiffs. The court noted that to prevail under a theory of "interference with a contractual relationship," a plaintiff must prove (1) he or she had a valid and existing contract with a third party; (2) defendant had knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant committed intentional and unjustified acts designed to interfere with or disrupt the contract; (4) actual interference with or disruption of the relationship; and (5) resulting damages (166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 123) . Although the court found that the jury had been erroneously instructed as to the first element of the tort, the court found the instruction did not compel reversal. The court stated that the existence and validity of the contract or contracts at issue had been established at trial, and that it was not reasonably probable that, absent the error, the jury would have returned a verdict in defendants' favor (166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 123-124) .

[b] Elements of Intentional Interference (Interference With Noncontractual Relationship)

The court of appeal in Tri-Growth Ctr. City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 265 Cal. Rptr. 330 , reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment. The court held that a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage was stated and triable issues of fact existed. Defendant law firm, which had previously represented plaintiff partners in other ventures, used confidential information regarding the plaintiff partnership's negotiations for the purchase of property, allowing the firm to make its own, more favorable offer for the property (216 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 1153-1154) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsElementsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsElementsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageElements

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.21

§ 122.21 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference Rendered Performance of Contract More Expensive and Burdensome

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HIS/HER INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S CONTRACT WITH _____ [name], BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAS CAUSED PLAINTIFF'S PERFORMANCE UNDER THE CONTRACT TO BECOME MORE EXPENSIVE AND BURDENSOME.

Interference Rendering Contract Performance More Expensive and Burdensome. A defendant is liable for his or her intentional interference with a contract between plaintiff and a third party, either by unlawful means or by means otherwise lawful but unjustified, when that interference renders plaintiff's performance under the contract more expensive and burdensome (Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 224, 232, 11 Cal. Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 ; Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1120, 1131, 225 Cal. Rptr. 120).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that, in establishing the fact of injury to plaintiff in an action for intentional interference with a contract, plaintiff is not necessarily limited to showing a breach of the contract by the third party, but may also rely on the fact that his or her own contract performance has been rendered more expensive or burdensome.

This contention may be combined with additional contentions supporting the existence of an interference action [see § 122.20] or particular elements [see §§ 122.22, 122.23], supporting recovery regardless of plaintiff's ability to obtain specific performance of the contract interfered with [see § 122.24], supporting recovery of punitive damages [see § 122.25], or supporting the existence of a conspiracy to interfere [see § 122.26].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the defendant's interference, for example, in opposition to a demurrer or motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should include facts showing that defendant disrupted plaintiff's contractual relationship with a third party by rendering plaintiff's performance more expensive or burdensome.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Rendering Contract Performance More Expensive and Burdensome

In Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 224, 11 Cal. Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 , plaintiff school board director alleged that defendant school board trustees maliciously engaged in conduct with intent to discredit plaintiff's reputation and to obtain removal of plaintiff from her position. Defendants had allegedly made statements to various persons, including newspaper reporters and members of the public, to the effect that plaintiff suppressed facts from the board, tampered with minutes of board meetings, received "kickbacks" from district employees, engaged in "shady dealings," and "cleaned up" on business transactions involving the district. Plaintiff filed an action against the trustees alleging interference. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding that plaintiff properly stated a cause of action for interference (55 Cal. 2d 224, 234-235) . The Court noted that an action will lie for the intentional interference by a third person with a contractual relationship either by unlawful means or by means otherwise lawful when there is a lack of sufficient justification. The Court stated that this rule applies when the plaintiff's performance has been rendered more expensive or burdensome (55 Cal. 2d 224, 232) . In this case, the Court found that false statements of the sort allegedly made by defendants would be defamatory, and that the statements would make it difficult and burdensome for plaintiff to perform her contractual obligations (55 Cal. 2d 224, 234) .

In Ramona Manor Convalescent Hosp. v. Care Enters. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1120 , 225 Cal. Rptr. 120 , defendants were the sublessees of a hospital. Plaintiffs were prospective lessees who had contracted with the hospital owners to take possession after the sublessee's lease had expired. Defendants held over their tenancy beyond the expiration date of their lease, delaying plaintiffs' move into the building. The hospital owners prevailed in an unlawful detainer action against defendants. Then plaintiffs brought an action for damages against defendants alleging intentional interference with contractual relations and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed regarding the interference causes of action. The court stated that in recent years, the tort of inducing breach of contract has expanded to permit liability when the defendant does not literally induce a breach of contract, but makes plaintiff's performance of the contract more expensive or burdensome (177 Cal. App. 3d 1120, 1131) . In this case, the court found that the necessary elements of interference were present, and that defendants were properly found liable for both interference with contractual relations and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage (177 Cal. App. 3d 1120, 1130-1134, 1144) .

NOTE:

The court of appeal rejected an interference claim based on conduct that allegedly rendered the plaintiff's contractual performance more expensive. In that case, the defendants protested the construction of a nuclear power plant, and in response, the plaintiff dispatched over 100 sheriff's deputies. The plaintiff claimed that the defendants' blockade interfered with its employment relationships with the deputies and other personnel because it required additional services that made the plaintiff's salary payments more expensive. The court of appeal held, without discussion and without mention of either Lipman or Ramona, that the defendants' conduct was not the kind of "disruption of the relationship" required to state an interference claim [County of San Luis Obispo v. Abalone Alliance (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 848, 861, 223 Cal. Rptr. 846] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference Rendering Contact Performance More Expensive

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 is discussed in § 122.41[3][a]. Although concluding that public policy prevented plaintiff from stating a cause of action for interference with contract or prospective economic advantage, the Supreme Court acknowledged that interference that makes enjoyment of a contract more expensive or burdensome may be actionable (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1127, 1129) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsElementsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsRemedies

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.22

§ 122.22 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference With Unenforceable or Voidable Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HIS/HER INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name], NOTWITHSTANDING THE FACT THAT THE DISRUPTED RELATIONSHIP IS EVIDENCED BY AN UNENFORCEABLE OR VOIDABLE CONTRACT.

A. Interference With Unenforceable Contract. Interference with an economic relationship containing the probability of future benefit to the plaintiff is actionable, and the tort of interference does not require that such relationship involve a legally enforceable contract (Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865).

[Optional] B. Interference With Voidable Contract. Contracts which are voidable by reason of the statute of frauds, formal defects, lack of consideration, lack of mutuality, or uncertainty of terms, still afford a basis for a tort action when the defendant interferes with their performance (Golden v. Anderson (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 714, 719, 64 Cal. Rptr. 404 ; see Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 822, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that the element of plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party is sufficiently established by the existence of a relationship that contains the probability of future economic benefit, even though it lacks an unenforceable contract or is evidenced by a voidable contract.

This contention may be combined with additional contentions supporting the existence of a particular element [see §§

122.20, 122.21, 122.23], supporting recovery regardless of plaintiff's ability to obtain specific performance of the contract interfered with [see § 122.24], supporting recovery of punitive damages [see § 122.25], and supporting the existence of a conspiracy to interfere [see § 122.26].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of unenforceable or voidable contracts, for example, by response to a demurrer or by summary judgment motion. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the economic relationship, although lacking an enforceable contract or evidenced by a voidable contract, nonetheless contained a probability of future economic benefit.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Unenforceable Contract

The facts and procedural background of Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , are discussed in § 122.20[3][c]. The Supreme Court reversed the demurrers relating to plaintiff's actions for interference. Relying on Zimmerman v. Bank of Am. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 55, 57, 12 Cal. Rptr. 319 , the court stated that the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage is not dependent on compliance with the statute of frauds. The tort is based on interference with a relationship between the parties irrespective of the enforceability of the underlying agreement. The tort of interference with an advantageous relationship, or with a contract does not disintegrate because it relates to a contract not written or an advantageous relation not articulated into a contract. The nature of the tort does not vary with the legal strength, or enforceability, of the relation disrupted. The actionable wrong lies in the inducement to break the contract or to sever the relationship, not in the kind of contract or relationship so disrupted, whether it is written or oral, enforceable or not enforceable (14 Cal. 3d 815, 822) . The Court noted that, in this case, plaintiff had alleged that the seller intended her sign to constitute an open listing with all area brokers, that the seller intended that brokers induced by the sign to cooperate with buyers would be paid a commission for procuring a buyer on terms the seller would accept, and that plaintiff understood this to constitute an invitation to himself and other area brokers to attempt to find a buyer for the seller's property (14 Cal. 3d 815, 828) . According to the court, these allegations, together with others concerning the real estate customs and practices in the community, were sufficient to state the "economic relationship" element of the cause of action, even though the seller and plaintiff had no enforceable contract (14 Cal. 3d 815, 828-829) .

[b] Interference With Voidable Contract

In Golden v. Anderson (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 714, 64 Cal. Rptr. 404 , plaintiff real estate broker agreed orally with the owner/seller of a ranch to attempt to find a buyer. Plaintiff discussed the sale of the ranch with defendant corporation, which expressed interest. Defendant corporation later purchased the lot through one of its employees. This employee misrepresented his identity, causing the seller to think plaintiff had no role in bringing about the sale. As a result, plaintiff received no commission. Plaintiff brought actions against the defendant corporation and the employees involved in the purchase, alleging that defendants tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship. The trial court granted the individual employees' motion for summary judgment and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to six of the defendants because it found that their actions were not intentional (256 Cal. App. 2d 714, 720) . As to three other defendants, it reversed. The court acknowledged that the brokerage agreement relied on by defendants was an oral agreement that was subject to the statute of frauds and was therefore voidable. In deciding that an interference action nonetheless would lie against these three defendants, the court noted that contracts which are voidable by reason of the statute of frauds, formal defects, lack of consideration, lack of mutuality, or even uncertainty of terms, could still afford a basis for a tort action when the defendant interferes with their performance (256 Cal. App. 2d 714, 719) .

The facts and procedural background of Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , are discussed in § 122.20[3][c]. The Supreme Court indicated that an interference action is not dependent on compliance with the statute of frauds when it is based on an economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third party containing a probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff (14 Cal. 3d 815, 822, 827) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Unenforceable Contract

In Rader Co. v. Stone (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 10, 223 Cal. Rptr. 806 , plaintiff filed several causes of action against defendants, alleging intentional interference with prospective business advantage (that is, intentional interference with a noncontractual relationship; see discussion in § 122.04). The trial court granted defendants' demurrers, and plaintiff appealed. One of the defendants argued on appeal that plaintiff's cause of action failed due to the lack of a valid written contract. Citing Buckaloo [see § 122.22[3][a]], the court of appeal held that intentional interference with a noncontractual relationship does not require the existence of a legally binding agreement (178 Cal. App. 3d 10, 28) . The court reversed the demurrers, concluding that plaintiff's allegations were sufficient as against a demurrer to state a cause of action for noncontractual interference (178 Cal. App. 3d 10, 29) .

In Zimmerman v. Bank of Am. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 55, 12 Cal. Rptr. 319 , plaintiff alleged that defendants tortiously induced the breach of plaintiff's oral contract. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and rendered judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed. Reversing, the court of appeal noted that the agreement in question fell within the statute of frauds. The court then held that the statute of frauds could not be invoked as a defense by defendants because the actionable wrong in an interference case lies in the inducement to break the contract or to sever the relationship, not in the kind of contract or relationship so disrupted (191 Cal. App. 2d 55, 57) .

[b] Interference With Voidable Contract

In Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 , plaintiffs, who were certified shorthand reporters, brought suit against another group of certified shorthand reporters and two insurance companies for unfair business practices and for interference with contract and with prospective economic advantage. The suit arose out of the practice of "direct contracting," under which the defendant group of reporters entered into a contract with the insurance companies for the exclusive right to report depositions taken by the attorneys who represented the insurance companies. The trial court sustained demurrers to all causes of action, but the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to overrule the demurrers.

In the cause of action for interference with contract, two of the plaintiff reporters claimed that defendants intentionally interfered with their contract with a law firm that had represented the insurance companies. Defendants contended that the pleading was insufficient because it failed to allege any definite obligation on the part of the law firm to actually use plaintiffs' services. The appellate court rejected this contention, noting that the complaint alleged that plaintiffs were to perform certain acts and that the law firm agreed, in turn, to utilize plaintiffs' service for the reporting of professional liability claims. The complaint further alleged that the contract was to continue as long as both parties were satisfied with the other's performance. The court held that this language adequately pleaded the law firm's duty to use plaintiffs' reporting services. In any event, the court observed, case law recognizes a tort action for interference with a contract even if the contract is unenforceable (27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 842-843) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageElements

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.23

§ 122.23 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HIS/HER INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S CONTRACTUAL RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name], NOTWITHSTANDING THE FACT THAT THE DISRUPTED CONTRACT IS TERMINABLE AT WILL.

A. Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contract Actionable. An action may lie for interference when defendant has unjustifiably interfered with a terminable-at-will contract to which the plaintiff is a party (Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 34, 39-40, 172 P.2d 867 ; Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 ; Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat'l Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52).

B. Interference With At-Will Contract Actionable as Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage. Interference with an at-will contract is properly viewed as an interference with prospective economic advantage, rather than as interference with an existing contract, because the expectation of an at-will contract is that of a future relationship between the parties to the contract (Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1151-1152, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513).

[Optional] C. Employer May Recover For Wrongful Conduct in Inducing At-Will Employee to Terminate Employment Contract. If a competing employer induces the employee of another employer to terminate an at-will employment relationship, the former employer of that employee may pursue an action against the competing employer for interference by pleading and proving the elements of a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage (Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1154-1155, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that the plaintiff may recover for interference with an employment contract, even though that employment contract was terminable at the will of the contracting parties.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of terminable-at-will contracts, for example, by response to a demurrer or a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contract Actionable

In Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 34, 172 P.2d 867 , plaintiff insurance agent had contracted with various insurance companies to sell policies. The companies were members of an insurance board, which along with a local association of fire insurance agents, accused plaintiff of violating his contracts with members of the board by placing insurance with nonboard companies. On plaintiff's refusal to cease the practice, the board and association caused the termination of plaintiff's contracts with board companies. Plaintiff sued the board and association, alleging that defendants interfered with his contractual relations by pressuring insurance companies to terminate their contracts with him. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to plaintiff's complaint without leave to amend and entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court first analyzed plaintiff's agency employment contracts with the insurance companies. The Court disputed plaintiff's allegation that in the insurance business, agency contracts are customarily regarded as being permanent and revocable only for cause. The Court, citing state and federal case authority, stated that a contract for permanent employment is only a contract for an indefinite period terminable at the will of either party, unless it is based on some consideration other than the services to be rendered. The Court remarked that, since plaintiff did not allege such consideration, it could not conclude that the insurance companies had breached the contracts in terminating them (29 Cal. 2d 34, 39) . The Court then addressed the issue of whether an interference action could be based on a terminable-at-will contract. Noting that the majority of cases have held that unjustifiable interference with terminable-at-will contracts may be actionable, the Court concluded that plaintiff's complaint properly stated a cause of action for interference (29 Cal. 2d 34, 39-40) .

The factual and procedural background of Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 , is discussed in § 122.20[3][b]. In reversing a summary adjudication for the defendant, the court observed that the tort of interference with contractual relations could be based on plaintiff's employment relationship with her employer, even if that relationship was regarded as a contract at will (a matter on which the court expressed no opinion). As the court observed, reviewing courts have reiterated in case after case that the contractual relationship is at the will of the parties, not at the will of outsiders (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 448) .

In Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat'l Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 , plaintiff bank president alleged that defendant, a controlling shareholder in the bank, intentionally, maliciously, and without justification caused the bank to discharge him. Plaintiff's complaint alleged intentional interference with contractual relations. The court sustained general demurrers to the complaint and dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to the interference action. The court noted that pursuant to federal law, the bank's board could dismiss plaintiff without liability for breach of contract (6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 596-597) . Nonetheless, the court stated that the fact that the bank was privileged to discharge plaintiff at any time would not necessarily privilege a third party unjustifiably to induce the termination. Citing Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 34, 39, 172 P.2d 867 , the court noted that the fact that a contract is at the will of the parties does not make it one at the will of others (6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598) . The court concluded that defendant's liability would turn on the question of whether or not defendant, because of his relationship with the bank, was privileged to cause plaintiff's termination (6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 599-600) .

[b] Interference With At-Will Contract Actionable as Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

In Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 , the president of a law firm, and the firm itself, brought suit against two former attorneys of the firm for conduct accompanying their departure from the firm. The plaintiffs alleged that when the defendants left the firm suddenly to start their own firm, the defendants also cultivated employee discontent and personally solicited other firm employees to depart the firm as well, destroyed computer files containing client information, left no status reports or lists of pending matters or deadlines, improperly solicited the plaintiffs' clients to their new firm, and misappropriated company trade secrets. After a bench trial, the court found for the plaintiffs on causes of action for interference and misappropriation of trade secrets. The defendants appealed. The court of appeal affirmed in most respects, and the defendants appealed again.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The defendants argued that they could not be liable for interfering with the employment contracts of the plaintiffs' other employees, because those contracts were terminable at the will of the employer or the employee. The Court recognized that courts have historically allowed parties to sue for intentional interference with an at-will contract, even an at-will employment contract. However, the Court also recognized the state's established public policy providing a former employee the right to engage in competition against a former employer, pointing out that it is not ordinarily a tort to hire the employees of another for use in the hirer's business (33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1148-1149) . Citing analysis from the Restatement (Second) of Torts, the Court noted that even if a party to a contract is free to terminate that contract at will, there is still a subsisting contractual relationship and an expectation of a future relationship. Therefore, the Court held that interference with an at-will contract is properly viewed as interference with prospective economic advantage, rather than as interference with an existing contract, because the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage protects future expectancies without requiring the existence of a legally-binding contract (33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1151-1152) .

[c] Employer May Recover For Wrongful Conduct in Inducing At-Will Employee to Terminate Employment Contract

The factual and procedural background of Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 , is described in § 122.23[3][b]. The Supreme Court held that a plaintiff may recover for interference with an at-will employment relationship, although the plaintiff must plead and prove the elements of a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage. In accordance with the elements of that cause of action, the plaintiff must show that the defendant engaged in conduct that is independently wrongful--that is, conduct that is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard. Therefore, an employer may pursue an action against a competing employer for interfering with the plaintiff's at-will employment relationships, although the plaintiff must show that the competing employer engaged in wrongful conduct that consisted of something more than just hiring away the plaintiff's employees (33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1152-1154) . The Court concluded that the evidence of the conduct of the defendants in this particular case was sufficient to support the trial court's finding that the defendants did more than just offer jobs to the plaintiffs' employees, because the defendants purposefully engaged in unlawful acts that crippled the plaintiffs' business operations and caused the plaintiffs' employees to terminate their employment contracts (33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1154-1155) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Terminable-at-Will Contact Actionable

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 is discussed in § 122.41[3][a]. Although concluding that public policy prevented plaintiff from stating a cause of action for interference with contract or prospective economic advantage, the Supreme Court acknowledged that interference with contracts that are terminable at will or in accordance with express provisions is actionable on the theory that, if legal protection from outside interference is afforded to an economic relationship that is wholly prospective, such protection must also be afforded to contractual relationships that are subject to termination (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1126-1129) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.24

§ 122.24 Supporting Contention That Specific Performance of Contract Interfered With Does Not Preclude Recovery for Interference

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE FACT THAT PLAINTIFF HAS OBTAINED A DECREE OF SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE IN HIS/HER CONTRACT ACTION AGAINST _____ [name] DOES NOT PRECLUDE HIM/HER FROM RECOVERING DAMAGES FOR DEFENDANT'S INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH THE CONTRACT BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND _____ [name].

Specific Performance Not a Bar to Damages. When a third party has interfered with the performance of a contract, a plaintiff may bring an action for damages against the interferor, regardless of the availability of specific performance against the breaching contractual party (Owens v. Palos Verdes Monaco (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 855, 872, 191 Cal. Rptr. 381 ; Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507-509, 47 Cal. Rptr. 114).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by a plaintiff that he or she may recover damages against a defendant in a action for intentional interference with plaintiff's contract with a third party, notwithstanding the fact that plaintiff has also obtained specific enforcement of the contract interfered with in a contract action against the third party.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to damages generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender)

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to damages generally, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Performance Not A Bar to Damages

In Owens v. Palos Verdes Monaco (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 855, 191 Cal. Rptr. 381 , plaintiff, a real estate developer, contracted with a defendant, a limited partnership, to buy a parcel of land. After defendants refused to perform, plaintiff successfully brought an action for specific performance. Plaintiff had also brought an action against one of the members of the partnership for conspiracy to interfere with the land sale contract, but the trial court dismissed this claim. The trial court concluded that the dismissal of plaintiff's tort claim had been in effect preordained by plaintiff's election of remedies to seek specific performance. Plaintiff appealed from the dismissal of his tort claim.

The court of appeal reversed. In support of its decision, the court cited Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507-509, 47 Cal. Rptr. 114 , in which the court of appeal held that a vendee under an executory purchase contract can obtain specific performance of the contract as well as compensatory and exemplary damages against a third party who induced the vendor not to go ahead with the sale. Defendant argued that Duff was not applicable because defendant was not an unrelated third person, but a partner in the selling partnership. The court rejected this argument, stating that an action for conspiracy to induce a breach a contract will lie against a party to the agreement, regardless of the fact that the party would not be directly liable for its breach as such (142 Cal. App. 3d 855, 872) .

In Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 47 Cal. Rptr. 114 , plaintiffs entered into a binding contract for the purchase of a lot from persons who shall be called here contracting defendants. Two other defendants, who shall be called third-party defendants, did not want plaintiffs and their family to live in their neighborhood because plaintiffs were black. The third-party defendants maliciously caused the contracting defendants to refuse to perform the contract. Instead, the contracting defendants conveyed the property to the third party defendants "as trustees." The trial court decreed specific performance with incidental damages against the contracting defendants. The court also gave judgments against the third party defendants for compensatory and punitive damages. The third-party defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendants argued on appeal that since plaintiffs were made whole by the judgment for specific performance with incidental relief, they could not have additional relief against the third party defendants. They argued that since plaintiffs could not obtain specific performance and have an action at law for damages for breach of contract against the contracting defendant, neither could they sue and recover against the third party defendants inducing the breach of contract after having sought and obtained specific performance (237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507) . The court disagreed with defendants' theory, stating that specific performance, plus incidental relief would not really make plaintiffs whole. According to the court, the suit for specific performance gave plaintiffs the property they were entitled to receive and the incidental expenses and other damages to which they were subjected in their efforts to pursue and recover that property. The court remarked that such relief would not necessarily encompass the total damages suffered since the tort was intentional. Noting that the trial court awarded plaintiffs only incidental damages against the contracting defendants, the appellate court said that plaintiffs were entitled to recover damages for all harm resulting from defendants' acts. The court added that there was no showing that the damage award against the third-party defendants would result in a double recovery of compensatory damages (237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 508-509) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawRemediesSpecific PerformanceTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsRemedies

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.25

§ 122.25 Supporting Contention That Claim Supports Award of Punitive Damages [Civ. Code § 3294]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be com bined with other appropriate forms of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant is liable for plaintiff's injuries caused by defendant's interference.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES AGAINST DEFENDANT BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] WAS MALICIOUS.

Punitive Damages May Be Awarded for Malicious Intentional Interference. Punitive damages are available in an action for intentional interference with economic relations when the plaintiff demonstrates that the acts of the defendant were malicious (Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 509, 47 Cal. Rptr. 114 ; Guillory v. Godfrey (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 628, 633, 286 P.2d 474).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that punitive damages should be imposed on defendant in an action for intentional interference with economic relations.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of liability for intentional interference with economic relations. For example, they may be combined with points and authorities opposing a motion for a new trial made by a defendant on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to support an award of punitive damages. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, and in any other relevant points and authorities combined with this form to show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should allege facts demonstrating that that defendant's interference was malicious.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to damages generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to damages generally, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for a new trial, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Punitive Damages May Be Awarded for Malicious Intentional Interference

The facts and procedural background of Duff v. Engelberg (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 47 Cal. Rptr. 114 are discussed in § 122.24[3][a]. The plaintiffs alleged that the third party defendants maliciously caused the contracting defendants to refuse to perform a contract because plaintiffs were black. The court of appeal reviewed the trial court's judgment against the third party defendants for $500 in punitive damages and found such award was proper. Citing Civ. Code § 3294, the court noted that the complaint had alleged and the court had found that the acts of the conspirators were malicious (237 Cal. App. 2d 505, 509) .

In Guillory v. Godfrey (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 628, 286 P.2d 474 , plaintiffs alleged that defendants, with intention to destroy plaintiffs' restaurant business, maliciously and wantonly intimidated plaintiffs' customers. Plaintiffs contended that the interference started when plaintiffs hired a black cook; then defendants began making intimidating and offensive remarks to customers about to enter the cafe. Other harassing actions by defendants included a forcible eviction of a customer from the restaurant. Plaintiffs pleaded that as a result of defendants' acts, business dropped off more than 50 percent and that plaintiffs lost money in the business and profits amounting to $1,000. At the trial, a jury awarded plaintiffs compensatory damages in the sum of $2,250 and punitive damages of $2,000. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. Defendants argued on appeal that no punitive damages should have been awarded against them. The court stated that actual malice was the basis for the punitive damage award, and that such malice was plainly proved in the case. The court added that it was for the jury to determine the proper proportion which the compensatory damages should bear to the punitive award, and that it could not be said on the record that the punitive award was excessive to either defendant (134 Cal. App. 2d 628, 633) .

NOTE:
The decisions in Duff and Guillory were decided before 1987 legislative amendments that modified the statutory definition of "malice" for purposes of Civ. Code § 3294 and added language requiring that proof of conduct supporting an award of punitive damages must be shown by "clear and convincing evidence" [Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c)(1)]. For further discussion of these changes and their effect, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness

RelationshipsRemediesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsRemedies

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.26

§ 122.26 Supporting Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--In General

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF HAS ALLEGED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR CONSPIRACY TO INTERFERE WITH ECONOMIC RELATIONS BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND _____ [name], BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS ALLEGED THE FORMATION AND OPERATION OF A CONSPIRACY, WRONGFUL ACTS DONE PURSUANT THERETO, AND DAMAGES ARISING THEREFROM.

Elements of Conspiracy to Interfere. To plead an actionable wrong for conspiracy to interfere with economic relations, the plaintiff must allege (1) the formation and operation of a conspiracy, (2) wrongful acts done pursuant to the conspiracy, and (3) damages arising from the conspiracy (Olivet v. Frischling (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 837, 164 Cal. Rptr. 87 ; Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 64, 35 Cal. Rptr. 652).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a plaintiff alleged all elements necessary to state a cause of action for conspiracy to interfere with economic relations. This contention may be combined with additional contentions supporting the existence of a particular element [see §§ 122.20 -122.23], supporting recovery regardless of plaintiff's ability to obtain specific performance of the contract interfered with [see § 122.24], or supporting recovery of punitive damages [see § 122.25].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the elements of conspiracy. This argument may arise in opposing a motion for summary judgment or nonsuit, a demurrer, or other similar procedure. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should allege facts showing the existence of the three elements of the tort.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to conspiracy in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 126, Conspiracy (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy .

[d] Opposing Points And Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 122.37 and 122.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Conspiracy to Interfere

In Olivet v. Frischling (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 164 Cal. Rptr. 87 , plaintiffs and defendants were members of a general partnership which engaged in the sale and lease-back of medical equipment to a hospital. Defendants were members of the governing board of the hospital, but plaintiffs were not. Defendants formed a competing partnership to sell and lease back equipment to the hospital. Because the defendants were in a position, as board members of the hospital, to control lease-back transactions, they were able to exclude the original partnership from doing business with the hospital. Defendants conducted all of the hospital's lease-back transactions through the new partnership. Plaintiffs filed suit against the defendants, alleging inter alia, civil conspiracy to interfere with a business relationship. Defendants' demurrers were sustained without leave to amend and the trial court ordered a dismissal. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court stressed that the real gist of a conspiracy action is not the conspiracy itself, but rather the damages suffered thereby. Citing Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 64, 35 Cal. Rptr. 652 , the court noted that to state a conspiracy action a plaintiff must allege (1) the formation and operation of a conspiracy, (2) wrongful acts done pursuant thereto, and (3) damages arising therefrom (104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 837) . The court concluded that plaintiffs sufficiently pleaded causes of action against defendants for conspiracy to interfere with plaintiff's economic relationships (104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 842-843) .

In Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 35 Cal. Rptr. 652 , plaintiff brought an action against his employer and others for conspiracy to interfere with his employment contract. Defendants allegedly brought false charges against plaintiff and conspired to deprive plaintiff of a fair hearing on such charges, all for the purpose of securing the discharge of plaintiff from his employment in violation and breach of a collective bargaining agreement. The trial court granted defendants' demurrers and plaintiff appealed.

Reversing, the court of appeal found that a cause of action for conspiracy to interfere with an employment contract would lie against the employer (223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 72) . The court noted that the elements of a conspiracy were (1) the formation and operation of the conspiracy, (2) the wrongful act or acts done pursuant thereto, and (3) the damage resulting from such act or acts (223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 64) . The court found that plaintiff stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for conspiracy. Plaintiff alleged that defendant employer conspired with codefendants to bring false charges against plaintiff and to deprive plaintiff of a fair hearing on these charges for the purpose of securing his discharge in violation of the union agreement. The court said it was clear that the false charges were wrongful acts which would work an invasion of plaintiff's right to continue in employment according to the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement (223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 74-75) .

NOTE:

In Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 507-508, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 , the California Supreme Court held that a contracting party cannot be held liable in tort for conspiracy to interfere with its own contract. In so holding, the Court disapproved a long line of court of appeal decisions that had held to the contrary, including Olivet and Wise [Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] . It appears that Olivet and Wise are still valid authority, however, for the point stated in this form--that is, the elements of a cause of action for civil conspiracy against a defendant who is not a party to the contract.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsConcerted ActionCivil ConspiracyGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.27

§ 122.27 Supporting Contention That Liability for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship May Be Imposed on Owner, Officer, or Director of Company

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

UNLESS THE INTERFERING CONDUCT IS SHOWN TO BE PRIVILEGED OR JUSTIFIED, AN OWNER, OFFICER, OR DIRECTOR OF A COMPANY MAY BE LIABLE FOR INTERFERING WITH A CONTRACT TO WHICH THE COMPANY WAS A PARTY.

A. Owner, Officer, or Director of Company Not Shielded From Liability. Unless the defendants can show that the conduct was privileged or justified, a claim for interference with an economic relationship founded in contract may be brought against an owner, officer, or director of a company whose contract was the subject of the litigation (Woods v. Fox Broad. Sub., Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 463).

[Optional] B. Tort Liability May Be Imposed Under Alter Ego Doctrine. When a defendant's conduct is not otherwise privileged, the alter ego doctrine cannot be used as a shield to prevent imposition of tort liability for intentional interference with an economic relationship on an owner, director, or manager who caused a corporation to breach its contract (Shapoff v. Scull (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1471-1473, 272 Cal. Rptr. 480).

[Optional] C. Plaintiff's Election. Although it would be inconsistent to impose liability on an alter ego for both breach of the corporation's contract and for the tort of interference, after a judgment has been rendered on both claims, the plaintiff is entitled to elect whether to proceed on the contract claim or on the tort claim (see Shapoff v. Scull (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1462, 1473, 272 Cal. Rptr. 480).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that tort liability for intentional interference with economic relationship may be imposed on a shareholder, director, or officer of a corporation. The authority on which the form is based is limited to situations in which the "manager's privilege" [see §§ 122.43, 122.52, 122.53] does not apply. It is not clear whether a court would apply the same analysis or reach the same result in a situation in which the conduct was privileged.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the points described--for example, in opposition to a motion for summary judgment or a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the particular case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should insert facts, or refer to findings, establishing that defendants were not a party to the contract that forms the basis of the complaint, and if necessary, that the alter ego doctrine applies and that the alter ego's conduct was not privileged.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For memorandum of points and authorities opposing the imposition of liability for interference on a party to the contract, a concept that might, in some situations, be used to oppose the authority in this form, see § 122.35. For memoranda of points and authorities supporting the imposition of liability for interference on owners or managers if the "manager's privilege" does not apply, see §§ 122.52, 122.53.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Owner, Officer, or Director of Company Not Shielded From Liability

In Woods v. Fox Broad. Sub., Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 463 , the plaintiffs were former corporate officers of an entertainment company with vested compensatory stock options in the company. Under these stock provisions, if the owner sold the company, the plaintiffs were required to sell their options, but were each guaranteed one percent of the sale price of the company. The company formed a joint venture with other broadcasting entities, and the plaintiffs became officers affiliated with the newly formed company. The new company took over responsibility for the stock option contracts. The owner of the plaintiffs' original company decided to sell, as did the other owning entities of the newly-formed company, triggering the plaintiffs' stock option buyout clause. The sales price, initially set at $5.3 billion, was lowered by $400 million in exchange for the buyer taking over a major league baseball television contract that was losing money. Although the plaintiffs each received over $20 million, which represented their one percent share, the price reduction effectively cost them $4 million each. Alleging causes of action for interference with their stock contract and prospective economic advantage, the plaintiffs sued the other broadcasting entities that owned part of the newly-formed company that had been sold, arguing that the sales price was lowered in part to reduce the amount owed under the plaintiffs' stock buyout provision. The trial court sustained demurrers for these entities on the grounds that they were not strangers to the contract and therefore could not be liable in tort for interfering with the contract. The plaintiffs amended their complaint, replacing the interference claims with breach of contract claims. The trial court again sustained demurrers for the defendants. The plaintiffs then appealed the initial ruling sustaining the demurrers on the interference claims.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted the established rule that a party to a contract cannot beliable for interfering with that contract, and that in those circumstances, a plaintiff is relegated to a suit for breach of contract. The court also noted that, for many years, courts had allowed interference claims based on the contractual obligations of a business entity to be maintained against officers, owners, and directors of that entity, although these defendants could defend on the basis of certain business privileges (129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 350-351) . However, in the course of its opinion in Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503 , the California Supreme Court suggested that "outsiders [with a] legitimate social or economic interest in the contractual relationship" were not "strangers to a contract" and therefore could not be liable for interfering with the contract (129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 351-353) . Because of this language, the defendants argued that an ownership interest in a business entity confers immunity from tort liability for interfering with the entity's contracts. The court of appeal noted, however, that the Supreme Court's broad language appeared to be dicta and was not relevant to the Court's holding in that case, which involved liability for conspiracy to interfere. Refusing to read the Supreme Court's holding in the broad fashion favored by the defendants, the court of appeal held that pursuant to established case law predating the Applied Equipment decision, unless defendants can show that their conduct was privileged or justified, a claim for interference with an economic relationship founded in contract may be brought against an owner, officer, or director of a company whose contract was the subject of the litigation (129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 355-356) . Although the defendants argued that they could prove privilege or business justification, the court and the parties recognized that the issue was not presently before the court on appeal of the demurrers sustained by the trial court (129 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356) .

[b] Tort Liability May Be Imposed Under Alter Ego Doctrine

Plaintiff in Shapoff v. Scull (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 272 Cal. Rptr. 480 , had a contract with the corporate defendant, an undercapitalized "shell" corporation. The original judgment was against the corporation and its two principals, awarding plaintiff $55,000 for breach of a development agreement with the corporation, $50,000 for intentional interference with contractual relations, and $300,000 in punitive damages. The judgment was based in part on findings that the individual defendants were the alter egos of the corporate defendant and that the breach was caused by one of the alter ego's tortious interference. That individual defendant moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, asking the court to limit his liability to the contract claim on the ground that it was inconsistent to impose liability on both the contract claim and the tort claim [see § 122.35]. The trial court agreed that it was inconsistent, and gave plaintiff the election to enforce one or the other. Not surprisingly, plaintiff chose to proceed on the tort claim. The trial court amended the judgment to delete its determination that the individual was an alter ego of the corporation. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first discussed the fact that a party to the contract may be liable for conspiring to cause its breach, and characterized defendants' argument as implicitly based on the notion that the trial court's alter ego finding prevents the existence of a third party and thus the occurrence of any interference by a third party (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1465) . The court rejected that notion, and compared the manager's privilege and the alter ego doctrine, noting that in the context of the manager's privilege the tort liability of an owner, director, or manager depends on whether he or she was acting to protect the interest of the corporation. In contrast, alter ego liability is not predicated on defendant's intent to advance the interest of a corporation; rather, it may be used only when its use will avoid fraud or injustice. Thus, when a defendant's conduct is not otherwise privileged, the potential existence of alter ego liability will not protect the defendant from tort liability (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1466) . The imposition of liability under the alter ego doctrine does not depend on whether the owner or manager was acting in the corporation's interest. The doctrine imposes liability to avoid inequitable results that would otherwise be suffered by the party who dealt with the corporation (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1469-1471) . The court noted that defendant had not tendered the manager's privilege to the jury either by argument or requested jury instructions. However, the evidence suggested that the manager's privilege would not have applied because, in causing the corporation to breach the contract, the alter ego was acting to recoup losses on investments unrelated to the corporation or in retaliation for an unrelated project (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1471-1472) . In arguing that the alter ego doctrine should be applied to limit the alter ego's liability to the contract claim, defendant was attempting to obtain relief that would be denied to similarly situated defendants under the "manager's privilege" criteria (immunity without regard to motive). The court rejected such an application of the alter ego doctrine (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1472) .

The court noted that plaintiff did not appeal the fact that he had been required to elect between the contract claim and the tort claim, so the related issue of whether one person can be held liable both in tort for interference and on the contract as an alter ego was not addressed (222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1473) .

NOTE:
In Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 507-508, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 , the California Supreme Court disapproved the statement in Shapoff that a contracting party can be held liable in tort for conspiring to cause the contract to be breached [Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454] . However, the court of appeal has subsequently held that the Supreme Court's disapproval in Applied Equip. extended only to the holding in Shapoff that a party to a contract can be held liable in tort for conspiring to interfere with his or her own contract, and not to the holding that the alter ego doctrine could not be used to shield a defendant from tort liability [Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 898-901, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] . In many cases, the alter ego may be able to successfully assert a director's, manager's, or agent's privilege [see § 122.43] or an owner's privilege [see § 122.44].

[c] Plaintiff's Election

Shapoff v. Scull (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 272 Cal. Rptr. 480 , is discussed in § 122.27[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Tort Liability May Be Imposed Under Alter Ego Doctrine

In Webber v. Inland Empire Invs., Inc., (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 , the plaintiff was the holder of a promissory note executed by a corporation, secured by a deed of trust on a parcel of land. However, that deed of trust was junior to another deed held by a bank that had provided much of the financing in a land purchase deal that involved not only the parcel relevant to the plaintiff, but three other parcels as well. The plaintiff eventually initiated foreclosure proceedings after the corporation failed to make payments on the note. However, the individual who controlled the corporation responded by using other corporations he controlled to purchase the note owned by the bank, and then foreclosing on that note, effectively extinguishing the plaintiff's junior lien. The plaintiff then brought suit against the relevant corporations and the individual who controlled those corporations, asserting a claim for conspiracy to intentionally interfere with a contractual relationship. The court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff on that cause of action, despite the defendants' claims that there could be no liability for a conspiracy to interfere with a contract because the corporation that executed the promissory note could not be liable in tort for interfering with its own contract, all of the relevant corporations were the alter egos of the others, and all were actually controlled by the one individual defendant, who took the actions he did to protect his own economic interests in connection with a contract made by his own corporation. In concluding that the defendants could not hide behind the alter ego doctrine to shield themselves from liability, the court of appeal relied on the decision in Shapoff v. Scull [see § 122.27[3] [b], which it found to be essentially indistinguishable from the case before it (74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 897-901) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionTortious Interference With Business RelationsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.28

§ 122.28 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Existing and Valid Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH A CONTRACTUAL RELATIONSHIP BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING A VALID AND EXISTING CONTRACT BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND A THIRD PERSON.

A. Valid and Existing Contract Required. Interference with a contractual relationship, as the basis for a tort cause of action, requires a plaintiff to prove that he or she had a valid and existing contract with a third party (see Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 123, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313).

[Optional] B. Void Contract Insufficient. A plaintiff cannot posit liability for tortious interference with a contractual relationship on a void contract (A-Mark Coin Co. v. General Mills, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 322, 195 Cal. Rptr. 859).

[Optional] C. Fraudulently Induced Contract Insufficient. A fraudulently procured contract cannot be the subject of the tort of interference with a business or contractual relationship (Renaissance Realty, Inc. v. Soriano (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d Supp 13, 18 , 174 Cal. Rptr. 837).

[Optional] D. Canceled Contract Insufficient. There is no cause of action for interference with a contractual relationship when at the time of the alleged interference, the alleged contract had been canceled by a third party (see Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 997, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720).

[Optional] E. Unenforceable Contract Insufficient. An unenforceable contract cannot form the basis of a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 867, 879, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship to which the plaintiff was a party on the ground that plaintiff failed to allege a valid existing contract with a third person.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the nonexistence of a valid contract, for example, by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel could include facts stating that the contract in question involved an illegal subject matter.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 122.20.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Valid and Existing Contract Required

The facts and procedural background of Shamblin v. Berge (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 212 Cal. Rptr. 313 , are discussed in § 122.20[4][a]. The court of appeal noted that to prevail under a theory of "interference with a contractual relationship," a plaintiff must prove (1) he or she had a valid and existing contract with a third party; (2) defendant had knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant committed intentional and unjustified acts designed to interfere with or disrupt the contract; (4) actual interference with or disruption of the relationship; and (5) resulting damages 166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 123) . Although the court found that the jury had been erroneously instructed regarding the first element of the tort, the court found the instruction did not compel reversal. The court stated that the existence and validity of the contract or contracts at issue had been established at trial, and it was not reasonably probable that, absent the error, the jury would have returned a verdict in defendants' favor (166 Cal. App. 3d 118, 123-124) .

[b] Void Contract Insufficient

In A-Mark Coin Co. v. General Mills, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 195 Cal. Rptr. 859 , plaintiff coin dealer had entered into an agreement with an estate to purchase coins. This agreement had been authorized by a probate court order. Subsequently, defendants offered to bid a higher price for the coins, notwithstanding the existing agreement to sell the coins to plaintiffs. The probate court vacated and set aside its order authorizing the private sale, declared plaintiff's purchase agreement to be void ab initio, and ordered a public sale, at which defendants could interpose their higher bid. Plaintiff appealed from the probate court's order, and the Supreme Court of Nevada affirmed. At the public sale, plaintiff purchased the coins, but for $1.4 million more than the amount called for under the private sale agreement. At trial, plaintiff alleged intentional interference with a contractual relationship and with an advantageous business relationship. The trial court found for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Noting that the Nevada probate court declared plaintiff's original contract to be void ab initio, the court held that plaintiff could not posit liability for tortious interference with a contractual relationship on a void contract (148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 322) . The court cited authority indicating that a contract subject to court approval, or other governmental confirmation and not yet approved or confirmed, is not sufficient to support a claim of tortious interference with contract (148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 321-323) .

[c] Fraudulently Induced Contract Insufficient

In Renaissance Realty, Inc. v. Soriano (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13 , 174 Cal. Rptr. 837 , defendant homebuyers had agreed to purchase a house through plaintiff realtor. The realtor fraudulently concealed from defendants the fact that the price of the house had been increased to include a broker's commission. Pending the closing of the escrow, another realtor convinced defendants to terminate the agreement. This realtor subsequently purchased the house and resold it to the homebuyers at a profit, but for less than what the buyers would have paid under the original agreement with plaintiffs. Plaintiff sued both the second realtor and the homebuyers for interference with a contractual relationship. The trial court awarded plaintiff damages from defendants. Defendants appealed.

The appellate department of the superior court reversed. The court noted the necessity for making a distinction between those contractual or business relationships unenforceable because of the statute of frauds, formal defects, lack of consideration or uncertainty, and those that are invalid because they are illegal or against public policy. The court found that a fraudulently conceived contractual relationship, such as the one involving plaintiff, cannot be the basis of the tort of interference with a contractual relationship (120 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 18) .

[d] Cancelled Contract Insufficient

Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720 , involved an action for intentional inducement to breach a contract. In Dryden, plaintiffs had contracted to purchase certain products from an olive oil manufacturer. The contract was to bind the manufacturer's successors. The manufacturer later repudiated the contract, alleging that plaintiffs were in material breach and had made fraudulent representations, and transferred the ownership of the plant to defendants. Plaintiffs then brought suit against defendants for intentional interference with contractual and/or advantageous economic and business relationships. The trial court sustained a general demurrer by one of the defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that the performance of the disputed contracts had been abandoned and discontinued by defendant's predecessors in interest many months prior to the transfer of the plant to defendant. Under such circumstances, the court found that the proximate cause necessary to establish an interference action was lacking as a matter of law (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 997) . In any case, the court stated that as a successor party to the contract, defendant was not a "third party" and that consequently an action for intentional interference with contractual relationship could not properly lie against defendant (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 998-999) .

[e] Unenforceable Contract Insufficient

In Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 867, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 , plaintiff had negotiated for a retail lease agreement with a shopping center owner. The negotiated terms of the lease were reduced to a written agreement which was signed by plaintiff but not by the owner. Instead, owner leased the premises to defendant, a retail business in direct competition with plaintiff. Plaintiff then filed an action for interference with contractual relations. The trial court granted summary adjudication in favor of defendant. On appeal, plaintiff contended that it was entitled to maintain an action for intentional interference with a contractual relationship, even though the alleged lease agreement was unenforceable under the statute of frauds.

The court of appeal rejected this argument, and affirmed the judgment. The court stated that the question of whether a third party's interference with a voidable or unenforceable contract could form the basis of a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations had been recently addressed in PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 579 . In that case, the court held that if a party is not obligated to perform a contract, then a stranger who intentionally interferes with that relationship does not disturb an enforceable contract but only a prospective economic relationship. The court concluded that plaintiff could not maintain a cause of action for intentional interference with a contractual relationship because the alleged lease agreement was unenforceable as a matter of law (52 Cal. App. 4th 867, 879) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.29

§ 122.29 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Existing Non-Contractual Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH A NON-CONTRACTUAL ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THE EXISTENCE OF AN ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND A THIRD PARTY CONTAINING A PROBABILITY OF FUTURE ECONOMIC BENEFIT TO PLAINTIFF.

Economic Relationship With Probability of Future Economic Benefit Required. A necessary element of the tort of intentional interference with a noncontractual economic relationship is an economic relationship between the plaintiff and some third person containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff (Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 71, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 ; Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 330, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with an economic relationship to which the plaintiff was a party on the ground that plaintiff failed to allege an economic relationship with a third party containing a probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the nonexistence of the requisite economic relationship, for example, by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show how plaintiff's complaint fails to allege an economic relationship containing a probability of economic benefit.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 122.20.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Economic Relationship With Probability of Future Economic Benefit Required

In Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 , plaintiff racehorse owner brought an action for interference with noncontractual economic relations against the driver of a second racehorse. Plaintiff alleged that, during a harness race in which the two horses were competing, the driver drove the second horse into plaintiff's horse and struck it with his whip. Plaintiff's horse finished in fifth place. According to plaintiff, plaintiff's horse would have made a better finish in the race and would have won a larger prize, had the driver not caused the horse to break stride. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on the ground that plaintiff failed to state a cause of action. The court of appeal affirmed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, stating that in an action for noncontractual interference, the plaintiff must prove that it is reasonably probable that the lost economic advantage would have been realized but for the defendant's interference (43 Cal. 3d 64, 71) . The Court indicated that it would be virtually impossible to determine the probable expectancy of winning a sporting contest (43 Cal. 3d 64, 75-76) . Finding that plaintiff failed to allege facts showing interference with a probable economic gain, the Court concluded that no cause of action existed for interference with the horse race (43 Cal. 3d 64, 77) .

In Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , plaintiff applied for a poker club license shortly after the Bell city council legalized such clubs. After the city denied his license, plaintiff claimed that city officials conspired with private individuals to create a monopoly. Plaintiff alleged that city officials received rewards, things of value, and other valuable consideration from the private individuals in exchange for their granting a license to only one club. Plaintiff alleged intentional interference by the private individuals with plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Defendants' demurrers were sustained without leave to amend and the court granted defendants' motions to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed.

In affirming the trial court's demurrers on plaintiff's interference complaint, the Supreme Court recited the elements of the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic relations (that is, interference with a noncontractual relationship) [see § 122.04], stating that the tort requires an economic relationship between the plaintiff and some third person containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff (39 Cal. 3d 311, 330) . The Court noted that the tort of intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has traditionally protected the expectancies involved in ordinary commercial dealings, not the expectancies, whatever they may be, involved in the governmental licensing process. The Court found that plaintiff could plead no protectible "expectancy," but at most a hope for an economic relationship and a desire for future benefit (39 Cal. 3d 311, 330-331) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Economic Relationship With Probability of Future Economic Benefits Required

In Westside Center Assocsiates v. Safeway Stores 23, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 507, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 793 , a partnership which owned a neighborhood shopping center sued a large supermarket for interference with prospective economic advantage. The supermarket had been the anchor tenant in the shopping center until it closed its store. The supermarket then executed its lease option to renew the lease for an additional five years, but left the anchor position vacant. The partnership contended that by closing its store and keeping the building empty the supermarket was driving down the value of the center so that it could later buy the property at an artificially low price. The partnership claimed that the supermarket thus interfered with the partnership's relationship with the class of all potential buyers for the property. However, the trial court granted an in limine motion by the supermarket to limit the partnership's evidence to matters proving that the supermarket acted with the intent to disrupt an existing relationship with a particular third party as opposed to a prospective relationship with an unknown class of potential buyers. On appeal, this ruling was upheld, with the court of appeal stating that the partnership's "interference with the market" theory is but a variation of a discredited "lost opportunity" theory which fails to provide a factual basis upon which to determine whether the plaintiff was likely to have actually received the expected benefit (42 Cal. App. 4th 507, 527) . The court concluded that the partnership's marked theory was insufficient as a matter of law to show an economic relationship with a prospective buyer which was reasonably likely to produce a future beneficial sale (42 Cal. App. 4th 507, 528) .

In Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 530, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 , plaintiff podiatrist sued a group of physicians who operated a medical office building for damages allegedly caused by their refusal to lease office space to him because of a policy of leasing space only to persons holding M.D. degrees. The plaintiff alleged antitrust violations, as well as intentional interference with prospective business advantage. The court of appeal held that the trial court correctly granted judgment on the pleadings on the interference claim. The court noted that an essential element of the tort of intentional interference with prospective business advantage is the existence of a business relationship with which the tortfeasor interfered. Although the relationship need not be contractual, an existing relationship is required. The court observed that plaintiff's claim was predicated on a claim that tenancy in defendants' building would result in future referrals and patient contacts. The court concluded from the nature of plaintiff's claim that plaintiff could not establish an existing relationship with these speculative "future patients" (25 Cal. App. 4th 530, 546) .

The court of appeal in Amid v. Hawthorne Cmty. Med. Group, Inc. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 261 Cal. Rptr. 240 , affirmed the judgment entered after sustaining of a demurrer to plaintiff's fourth amended complaint without leave to amend. The complaint included a cause of action for interference with prospective business advantage and was based on defendant's disclosure to an affiliated health insurer of an unfavorable peer review committee evaluation of plaintiff. The court of appeal said that one of the elements that plaintiff failed to sufficiently plead was an economic relationship with a third party. References to plaintiff's medical practice, right of employment with individual patients plaintiff had evaluated and treated and might evaluate and treat in future was inadequate (212 Cal. App. 3d 1383, 1392) .

The court of appeal in Hepe v. Paknad (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 244 Cal. Rptr. 823 , affirmed the sustaining of a demurrer to a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage. Plaintiff's vehicle was struck by one driven by a person who the defendant, the owner of a bar, "knew or should have known" was an alcoholic, and to whom the defendant had served alcohol shortly before the accident. After the accident, defendant allegedly concealed the driver and removed him from the area so that neither law enforcement officials nor plaintiff could establish that the driver was under the influence of alcohol at the time of the accident. Plaintiff alleged that he was thus prevented from recovering punitive damages and from acquiring a judgment that would not be dischargeable in bankruptcy. Citing Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 75, 77, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 , and Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 330, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , the court of appeal held that a personal injury judgment was not the type of economic relationship that the tort of interference has traditionally protected and further, that the right to recover punitive damages or a nondischargeable judgment was too speculative to support a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage (199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 420-421) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.30

§ 122.30 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Knowledge of Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH ECONOMIC RELATIONS BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT DEFENDANT HAD KNOWLEDGE OF THE EXISTENCE OF THE ALLEGED RELATIONSHIP.

Defendant's Knowledge of Economic Relationship Required. An essential element to a cause of action for intentional interference with economic relations is that the defendant had knowledge of the existence of the relationship interfered with (Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 995, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with an economic relationship to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the plaintiff cannot prove defendant was aware of plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party at the time defendant allegedly interfered with it.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the defendant's knowledge, for example, by demurrer or by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate how plaintiff's complaint fails to allege defendant's knowledge of plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 122.20 -122.23.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Knowledge of Economic Relationship Required

The facts and procedural background of Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720 , are discussed in § 122.28[3][d]. In Dryden, defendant executed a purchase contract with the owners of a processing plant, allegedly interfering in plaintiff's economic relations with the owners. The complaint stated that defendant learned of plaintiff's contracts with its predecessor in interest one day after the execution of the purchase contract. The court found the complaint defective, since plaintiffs failed to allege that at the time of purchasing the plant defendant was aware of the existence of previous contracts between plaintiffs and the original owners (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 995-996) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.31

§ 122.31 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Intent to Interfere

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH ECONOMIC RELATIONS BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT DEFENDANT'S ACTS WERE INTENTIONAL AND DESIGNED TO DISRUPT THE ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP.

A. Intent to Disrupt Economic Relationship Required. To state a cause of action for intentional interference with economic relations, a plaintiff must show that defendant committed intentional acts designed to disrupt the relationship (Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 766, 206 Cal. Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158 ; Khoury v. Maly's of Cal., Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 612, 618, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708).

[Optional] B. Attorney's Payment of Third Party Recovery to Client Rather Than Lienor Is Insufficient Interference. An attorney's payment of fees recovered from a third party, to his client rather than to the insurance company lienor, cannot be construed as an act designed to induce breach or disruption of a contractual relationship (Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerin (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 458, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the plaintiff cannot prove that defendant specifically intended to interfere with plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of intent, for example, by demurrer or by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. For example, counsel should state facts showing how plaintiff's complaint fails to allege specific intent.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 122.20 -122.23.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Disrupt Economic Relationship Required

In Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 206 Cal. Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158 , plaintiff, a ship supplies corporation, sought to lease from the city of Eureka a large portion of a new marina. The city conditioned approval of the lease on plaintiff's development of a marine fuel dealership on the property, requiring plaintiff to provide written evidence of a binding agreement with an oil supplier. Plaintiff reached an agreement with defendant, an oil supplier, and plaintiff obtained from defendant a letter setting forth the terms of agreement. On presentation of this letter to the city, the city agreed to lease the property to plaintiff. After the lease was signed, the petroleum market changed from a buyer's to a seller's market. Defendant adopted a "no new business" policy. Several months later, the federal government adopted regulations restricting the allocation of petroleum products. The regulations apparently would have barred defendant from supplying petroleum to plaintiff pursuant to the terms of the agreement. Plaintiff obtained a supply order from the federal government, enabling it to carry on business with defendant anyway. Defendant subsequently claimed that no contract existed between it and plaintiff, and that it had no obligation to supply plaintiff with fuel. After defendant successfully appealed from the supply order, plaintiff appealed to have the order reinstated. Plaintiff obtained a court decision providing that an order directing defendant to fulfill its supply obligations would be issued on the filing of a copy of a court decree that a valid contract existed between the parties under state law. Plaintiff asked defendant to stipulate to the existence of a contract, but defendant refused. Plaintiff subsequently discontinued its operations. Plaintiff filed suit against defendant alleging that defendant tortiously interfered with plaintiff's contractual relationship with the city. The jury found for plaintiff, awarding both compensatory and punitive damages. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment against defendant for intentional interference with economic relations. Quoting from Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 33, 37, 112 P.2d 631 , the court stated that the act of inducing the breach of contract must be an intentional one. If the actor had no knowledge of the existence of the contract or his or her actions were not intended to induce a breach, he or she cannot be held liable though an actual breach results from his or her lawful and proper acts (36 Cal. 3d 752, 765) . Citing Restatement of Torts § 766, the Court noted that it is not enough that the actor intended to perform the acts which caused the result--he or she must have intended to cause the result itself (36 Cal. 3d 752, 765) . The Court stated that specific intent to interfere is a necessary element which must be pleaded and proved in an interference action (36 Cal. 3d 752, 766) . Here, the Court found that plaintiff failed to carry its burden of pleading intent, since there was no evidence that defendant acted with the purpose or design of causing plaintiff to breach its contract with the city (36 Cal. 3d 752, 767) .

In Khoury v. Maly's of Cal. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 612, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708 , the parties entered an oral agreement under which defendant would supply a certain brand of hair care products to plaintiff's beauty salon, for sale to plaintiff's customers, if plaintiff and his employees agreed to attend a training class and to sell the products. Pursuant to the agreement, plaintiff and his employees attended the training, defendant supplied the products, and plaintiff displayed and sold the products. Plaintiff developed a clientele loyal to the products who would accept no substitutes. Thereafter, defendant refused to continue to supply plaintiff with the products, allegedly damaging plaintiff's business. Plaintiff filed a complaint against defendant setting forth, among others, a cause of action for interference with advantageous business relationship. Specifically, plaintiff alleged that defendants, with full knowledge of plaintiff's reliance on the product line sold by defendant, and intending to injure, destroy, and otherwise interfere with plaintiff's business, wrongfully, fraudulently, knowingly, intentionally, and maliciously refused to sell the products to plaintiff, intending to ruin and interfere with his beauty and supply business. Plaintiff also alleged that defendants intended to induce plaintiff's customers to cease doing business with plaintiff. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to this cause of action without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed with respect to plaintiff's cause of action for interference. The court noted that although the complaint generally pleaded the elements of intentional interference with prospective business advantage, the complaint failed to state any factual basis for the assertion that defendant interfered with plaintiff's business relations, having the improper malicious purpose to destroy plaintiff's business. The sole alleged conduct of defendant was the breach of contract to supply the beauty products to plaintiff. The effect on plaintiff's customers (with whom defendant had no relations) and the damage to plaintiff's business were simply consequences of breach of contract. The court noted that if a contract plaintiff could plead in a conclusory way that the defendant maliciously intended to drive the plaintiff out of business, the tort of interference with prospective business advantage would be routinely pleaded in breach of contract cases. Allowing such conclusory pleading would be contrary to the cautious policy of the courts about extending tort remedies to ordinary commercial contracts (14 Cal. App. 4th 612, 618) .

[b] Attorney's Payment of Third Party Recovery to Client Rather Than Lienor Is Insufficient Interference

In Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerin (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 707 , an auto insurer sued the attorney representing its insureds in connection with their claims against third party tortfeasors allegedly responsible for their injuries. Two of plaintiff's causes of action stated claims for intentional interference with contract. The complaint alleged that plaintiff had valid contracts with the insureds, that defendant was aware of the contracts, and that defendant interfered with those contracts by paying himself and his clients that portion of the third party recoveries to which plaintiff was entitled. The policy language at issue provided that when an insured had been paid damages by plaintiff under the policy and also recovered from another, the amount recovered from the other must be held by insured in trust for plaintiff and reimbursed to plaintiff to the extent of its payment. Defendant demurred. The trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that it failed to see how an attorney paying funds to his client rather than to the lienor could be construed as an act designed to induce breach or disruption of a contractual relationship (53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 458) . Instead, the court saw this act by the attorney as facilitating compliance with the contract by providing the client with the funds necessary for performance. The court stated that as a general matter, an attorney receiving payment of a judgment or settlement on behalf of his or her client has no obligation to satisfy the client's debts out of that fund. It is only when the creditor has some property interest in the fund or a trust relationship exists that such an obligation might arise. In this case, the court found that plaintiff had no equitable lien on any third party recoveries and no trust relationship existed between plaintiff and defendant. Therefore, plaintiff failed to state claims for intentional interference with contract (53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 459) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Disrupt Economic Relationship Required

The court of appeal in Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 , affirmed a judgment for defendants entered after sustaining demurrers without leave to amend with respect to causes of action by spouses for intentional interference with contractual relationships. Both spouses worked for the defendant hospital. The wife, a nurse, alleged sexual harassment by a male physician. The husband, a doctor, complained to the hospital about that physician, and in retaliation, a third physician refused to examine the husband's patients. In affirming the judgment with respect to the wife's cause of action against the harassing physician, the court of appeal agreed with the trial court that allegations that the defendant "embarked on course of intentional conduct designed to disrupt plaintiff's relationship with the hospital" were insufficient in that they pleaded a legal conclusion, not facts. Although the judgment was reversed to allow the wife to amend to allege environmental sexual harassment, that is, to show a hostile work environment, the court concluded that even if such a cause of action were successfully pleaded, there was no logical inference that the harassing physician intended to disrupt the wife's relationship with the hospital by his harassment of other employees. Thus the wife had not and could not state a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relationship (214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 619) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefenses

88 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.32

§ 122.32 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Wrongfulness of Interference With Prospective Economic Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH PROSPECTIVE ECONOMIC RELATIONS BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT THE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT WAS WRONGFUL BY SOME MEASURE BEYOND THE FACT OF THE INTERFERENCE ITSELF.

A. Interference With Prospective Relations Must Be Wrongful. A plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic relations has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself (Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740).

[Optional] B. Violations of Ethical or Industry Standards Do Not Satisfy Wrongfulness Requirement. Allegations that the defendant's conduct was unethical, or violated vague industry standards, are insufficient to meet the test of wrongfulness in a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage (Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1259, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with plaintiff's prospective economic relations. The ground of opposition set forth is that the plaintiff has not met the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself.

These points and authorities may be compined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that wrongfulness has not been alleged, for example, by demurrer or by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 122.20.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss plaintiff's failure to allege and/or establish that the interference with plaintiff's prospective economic relations was wrongful.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition . (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Relations Must Be Wrongful

The facts and procedural background of Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 , are discussed in § 122.20[3][c]. The Court held that a plaintiff seeking to recover for alleged interference with prospective economic relations has the burden of pleading and proving that the defendant's interference was wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself (11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393) .

[b] Violations of Ethical or Industry Standards Do Not Satisfy Wrongfulness Requirement

In Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 , the plaintiff was a manufacturer of aluminum parts that had subcontracted with the defendant, another aluminum parts manufacturer, for powder coating on certain parts for a workbench project that the plaintiff was working on for a third party. Approximately one or two months after the plaintiff began shipping parts to the third party, the defendant discovered defects in parts that it had powder-coated for the plaintiff, but the plaintiff and the defendant each blamed the other for the defects. After the parties were unable to resolve the dispute, the defendant ceased work on the subcontract, put the plaintiff on a credit hold, and demanded C.O.D. payment for parts that it had finished but not yet delivered. When the plaintiff threatened a lawsuit, however, the defendant delivered the parts on a credit basis. During this time period, the third party who had hired the plaintiff was experiencing severe financial difficulties, precipitating the plaintiff's decision to stop shipping parts to that party. However, the defendant was unaware of these facts and directed one of its salepersons to solicit the work directly from the third party. Over the course of the next three months, the defendant engaged in a series of court actions to recover from the plaintiff for amounts allegedly owed under their contract, and the plaintiff counter-sued for breach of contract and related claims. The plaintiff also sued the third party for the amount allegedly owed in unpaid invoices. Two months later, the third party first ordered aluminum parts directly from the defendant, but after six months, the defendant refused to perform additional work due to the third party's inability to pay the invoices. Three months later, the third party filed for bankruptcy. Three months after that, the plaintiff sued the defendant for misappropriation of trade secrets, unfair competition, conversion, and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant used die drawings provided by the plaintiff to fabricate the aluminum parts and to solicit business on the parts directly from the third party. The defendant raised the privilege of competition as an affirmative defense. At trial, the plaintiff decided to pursue only the actions for conversion and intentional interference, although it considered the trade secrets claim to be subsumed within the interference claim. The court granted nonsuit on the conversion claim, and the jury returned a defense verdict on the interference action. The court awarded attorney's fees based on certain bad faith conduct by the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Although it was not entirely clear, the court considered the plaintiff's main contention on appeal to be that the trial court improperly required the plaintiff to establish the separate tort of misappropriation of trade secrets to defeat the competition privilege. The plaintiff argued that it was sufficient that it show that the defendant violated industry standards and acted unethically in soliciting the account of a company with which the plaintiff was currently doing business. The court reviewed the standard set forth in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 [see § 122.32[3][a]], requiring that the plaintiff in an action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage prove that the interference was independently wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of interference itself (95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1256-1257) . The court noted that the Supreme Court left this standard undefined, although one concurring opinion in Della Penna suggested that tortious or illegal conduct would be required, rather than merely conduct that arguably violated business ethics (95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1258) . The court then looked at cases pre-dating Della Penna that had addressed a wrongfulness standard in assessing a the defendant's alleged intentional interference with prospective economic relations. These cases suggested to the court that showing wrongfulness required a showing that the defendant's conduct was unlawful, illegitimate, or independently actionable. The court then concluded that allegations that the defendant's conduct was unethical, or violated vague industry standards, were insufficient to meet the test of wrongfulness. The court deemed that imposing liability for that type of conduct would create uncertainty and chill, rather than maximize, competition (95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1259) .

NOTE:

In a subsequent opinion, the court of appeal distinguished the vague industry standards at issue in Gemini Aluminum from more defined standards, such as might be contained in well-established, written rules. In Stevenson Real Estate Servs., Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Servs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235 [see § 122.20], the court of appeal held that in an action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage between competitors who are bound by well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association, or profession, a violation of those rules or standards may constitute wrongful conduct under the Korea Supply standard, if the rule or standard allegedly violated provides for, or gives rise to, a sanction or means of enforcement for a violation (138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Relations Must Be Wrongful

In Arntz Contracting Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 464, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 , plaintiff, a general contractor, had been terminated from a public works construction project by the property owner who complained of deficient workmanship. The surety, which had issued performance, labor, and material bonds on the project, took over the project and complete construction using substitute contractors. Plaintiff sued the surety for interference with prospective economic relations claiming that defendant's termination of bonding frustrated plaintiff's ability to secure bonding from other sureties. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, basing its ruling on Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740 . In Della Penna, the Supreme Court held that a plaintiff seeking to recover for an alleged interference with prospective economic relations must plead and prove that the defendant not only knowingly interfered with the plaintiff's expectancy, but engaged in conduct that was wrongful by some legal measure other than the fact of the interference itself. Defendant claimed that it did no more than protect its contractual right under its agreements with plaintiff and truthfully report the contractual dispute to interested third parties. Plaintiffs claimed that defendant intentionally interfered with its prospective economic relations by (1) terminating its bonding of plaintiff, (2) putting plaintiff "in claim" and (3) sending false reports to defendant's reinsurers. The court of appeal analyzed the claims in light of the Della Penna wrongfulness standard and found nothing actionable in any of them (47 Cal. App. 4th 464, 479-481) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageElements

89 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.33

§ 122.33 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Disruption of Contractual Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT THE DEFENDANT'S ACTS ACTUALLY INTERFERED WITH PLAINTIFF'S CONTRACT WITH _____ [name].

Cause in Fact of Contractual Interference. An action for interference with contractual rights will lie only if the defendant's act induced the breach of contract between the plaintiff and third party or if the defendant purposely caused a third person not to perform a contract with the plaintiff (Short v. Nevada Joint Union High Sch. Dist. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1101, 210 Cal. Rptr. 297 ; Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 995-996, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the plaintiff has not shown that defendant's conduct actually interfered with plaintiff's contractual relationship with a third party.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of noninterference, for example, by demurrer or by summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. For example, counsel should discuss how the plaintiff's complaint fails to allege facts showing that defendant disrupted a contract between plaintiff and a third party.

These points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 122.20 -122.23.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause in Fact of Contractual Interference

In Short v. Nevada Joint Union High Sch. Dist. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 210 Cal. Rptr. 297 , plaintiff was employed by defendant school district as a security chief. The terms of plaintiff's employment contract allowed for termination under certain circumstances, including "lack of funds." After the school board terminated plaintiff, plaintiff sued, alleging that school administrators tortiously induced the school district to breach its contract with him. The trial court granted defendants' motions for nonsuit on this claim, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that plaintiff failed to show that any administrator interfered with the performance of the employment contract. The court noted that defendants' termination actions against plaintiff were fully consistent with the terms of plaintiff's contract and did not run afoul of its terms (163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1101) . Concluding that none of the defendants induced a breach of plaintiff's contract, the court found that neither the school administrators nor the district were liable for conspiracy to interfere with the contract (163 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1102) .

The facts and procedural background of Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720 , are discussed in § 122.28[3][d]. The plaintiffs sued the purchasers of an olive oil plant, alleging that defendant's purchase would interfere with contractual relations between plaintiffs and the plant's original owners. Plaintiffs' complaint stated that defendant learned of plaintiff's contracts with the original owners the day after the execution of the purchase contract. In rejecting plaintiffs' interference claim, the court noted that an action for interference with contractual rights lies only if defendant's act induced the breach of contract between the plaintiff and the third party or if defendant purposely caused a third person not to perform the contract with another. The court found plaintiffs' cause of action defective, since plaintiffs failed to indicate that defendant induced or otherwise purposely caused the breach of contract (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 995-996) . According to the court, plaintiffs' allegations conclusively demonstrated that the performance of the disputed contracts had been abandoned and discontinued by the original owners of the plant many months prior to the transfer of the plant to defendant. Thus, proximate causation was lacking as a matter of law (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 997) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cause in Fact of Contractual Interference

In Davis v. Nadrich (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 414 , plaintiff attorney sued another attorney for intentional interference with plaintiff's partnership agreement. Plaintiff alleged that defendant referred clients to plaintiff's law partner individually, rather than to their law firm, causing plaintiff to lose his share of the fees to which he allegedly would have been entitled under the partnership agreement. The trial court granted summary judgment for the referring attorney, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal concluded that plaintiff had offered no evidence that his partnership agreement precluded either partner from accepting individual referrals. In the absence of such evidence, there was no proof of an actual breach of the partnership contract and thus no cause of action for interfering with that contract premised on defendant's referrals (174 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10) .

The facts and procedural background of Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 , is discussed in § 122.33[3][a]. In considering the husband's cause of action against the third physician for intentional interference with the husband's relationship with the hospital and his patients, the court of appeal agreed that the husband was unable to state a cause of action. Although the complaint alleged that the husband's relationship with the hospital was actually disrupted because he had to seek other physicians to assist with his patient and the welfare of those patients was actually threatened, there was no allegation that plaintiff lost patients. In addition, having to seek other physicians or threats to patient welfare are not the kind of economic interest that the tort of interference is designed to protect (214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 620) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.34

§ 122.34 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show That Interference Proximately Caused Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH ECONOMIC RELATIONS BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE PROXIMATELY CAUSED DAMAGES TO PLAINTIFF.

[EITHER, if alleging contractual interference]

A. Defendant's Conduct Was Substantial Factor in Causing Damages. A plaintiff seeking to hold another liable for intentional interference with an existing contract must prove that defendant's conduct was a substantial factor in causing the harm alleged (Bank of New York v. Fremont Gen. Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 523 F.3d 902, 909-910 ; CACI No. 2201).

[OR, if alleging noncontractual interference]

A. Interference With Prospective Contract or Business Relationship Must Be Moving Cause of Damages. Before recovery can be had for interference with and loss of a future or prospective contract or business relationship, it must appear that such contract or relationship would otherwise have been entered into (Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 77, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 ; Brody v. Montalbano (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 725, 738, 151 Cal. Rptr. 206).

B. Showing of Resulting Injury Required. A plaintiff does not state a cause of action for interference with economic relations when he or she fails to show that defendant's interference caused economic loss on the part of the plaintiff (see Baldwin v. Marina City Props., Inc. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 407, 145 Cal. Rptr. 406).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contractual relationship to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the plaintiff cannot show that defendant's conduct proximately caused plaintiff to suffer economic loss.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damage, for example, by demurrer or by summary judgment motion. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the facts shown by the plaintiff are insufficient to establish that the defendant's interference proximately caused injury to the plaintiff.

In an appropriate case these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 122.20 -122.23.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Conduct Was Substantial Factor in Causing Damages

In Bank of New York v. Fremont Gen. Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 523 F.3d 902 , plaintiff was a New York bank that held funds used to secure the payment of workers' compensation claims by a workers' compensation insurer. New York law required an insurer to maintain accounts to cover the payment of claims, and also required an insurer to enter into a contractual agreement with the custodial bank specifying that the bank could not release principal funds from these accounts without a written request from the insurer accompanied by written approval from the New York Superintendent of Insurance, although interest could be withdrawn without approval from the Superintendent. Despite these requirements, over the course of 12 months, the corporate parent of this insurer had instructed plaintiff bank to transfer funds totaling approximately $14 million from the custodial accounts, which including amounts from the principal, into a non-custodial account at another institution. This was done without the Superintendent's approval, even though at least some of plaintiff's employees knew about the requirements for such transfers. The insurer eventually ran into financial difficulties and was placed into conservatorship in California. Due to these financial difficulties, an accounting was required of plaintiff, at which time it determined that it was partially responsible for mistakenly transferring principal amounts from the custodial accounts. The New York Insurance Department required that this money be replaced, and plaintiff entered into an agreement to pay the missing amount, with interest. The Superintendent then assigned to plaintiff the right to recover from the insurer's corporate parent. Plaintiff sued the corporate parent in federal court, alleging intentional interference with its contract with the insurer and other causes of action. The trial court granted defendant's motion for partial summary judgment on the intentional interference claim after concluding that the damages were not caused by defendant's conduct. After bench trial on the other claims, judgment was entered for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the partial summary judgment on the interference cause of action. The district court had concluded that the transfer requests submitted by defendant to plaintiff did not actually cause the transfers, which instead were caused by plaintiff's breach of its own independent duty to secure written permission from the Superintendent before the transfers. However, the Court of Appeals held that the district court applied the wrong standard for causation. The Court concluded that the appropriate standard for causation for an intentional tort under California law is the "substantial factor" test, which is broader than but generally produces the same result as the "but for" rule of causation, under which a defendant's conduct is a cause of injury if the injury would not have occurred "but for" that conduct. The Court noted that as long as there is a factual chain of causation, the presence of an independent intervening cause does not defeat a showing that a defendant's conduct was a substantial factor in causing the harm. The Court concluded that irrespective of plaintiff's conduct, defendant's multiple requests for funds transfers from the custodial accounts were a substantial factor in causing the actual transfers, even though plaintiff's failure to get the Superintendent's approval may have also played a role (523 F.3d 902, 909-910) .

NOTE:

The courts in Allen v. Powell (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 502, 508, 56 Cal. Rptr. 715 , and Freed v. Manchester Serv., Inc. (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 186, 189 fn. 2, 331 P.2d 689 , have held that it is not necessary to allege that the contract would otherwise have been performed because this allegation is sufficiently implied in the more general allegation of proximately caused damage.

[b] Interference With Prospective Contract or Business Relationship Must Be Moving Cause of Damages

The facts and procedural background of Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 , are discussed in § 122.29[3][a]. The Supreme Court stated that the plaintiff in a noncontractual interference action must prove that it is reasonably probable that plaintiff's lost economic advantage would have been realized but for defendant's interference (43 Cal. 3d 64, 71) . The Court noted that allowing recovery without proof of probable loss would essentially eliminate the tort's element of causation, which links the wrongful act with the damages suffered (43 Cal. 3d 64, 74) . The Court indicated that it would be virtually impossible to determine the probable expectancy of winning a sporting contest (43 Cal. 3d 64, 75-76) . Finding that plaintiff failed to allege facts showing interference with a probable economic gain, the Court concluded that no cause of action existed for interference with the horse race (43 Cal. 3d 64, 77) .

In Brody v. Montalbano (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 725, 151 Cal. Rptr. 206 , defendant school administrator alleged that several parents of students conspired to interfere with his prospective economic advantage. The parents had written a letter to and filed a formal complaint with the school board, accusing plaintiff of misconduct in handling a student disciplinary matter. As a result of the parents' action, the school board held a hearing. After the hearing, the board concluded that some of the allegations of the parents were well founded, but it did not hold plaintiff to be personally responsible. The administrator later brought an action against the parents which proceeded to trial by jury. At the conclusion of all the evidence, defendants' motions for directed verdict and judgment were granted by the trial court. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court found that plaintiff failed to sustain his burden of proof to show that, but for defendants' conduct, there was a reasonable probability that an economic advantage would have accrued to him. Plaintiff introduced evidence that he was ranked third on a list of 10 candidates for a position as a secondary opportunity principal, that he was not offered such a position during the period the list remained in force, and that the persons ranked first, second, and eighth were selected as secondary opportunity principals prior to the time defendants sent their letter to the board. Plaintiff admitted that he did not know why he was not appointed. The court held that this was not sufficiently substantial evidence to support a verdict in favor of plaintiff, and that the trial court did not err in granting a motion for directed verdict (87 Cal. App. 3d 725, 738) .

[c] Showing of Resulting Injury Required

In Baldwin v. Marina City Props., Inc. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 145 Cal. Rptr. 406 , plaintiffs contracted to sell their limited partnership interests in a real estate development company to a third party. The sales contract provided that plaintiffs would receive cash and promissory notes from the buyer in exchange for the partnership interests. To secure the transaction, plaintiffs retained a security interest in the partnership interests. While this contract was in effect, the general partner of the development company made a call on the limited partners for additional capital contributions. None of the limited partners responded. The general partner then contributed $500,000 to the limited partnership. As a result of the contribution, the general partner's percentage share of capital contributions to the limited partnership increased while that of the limited partners decreased. The buyer defaulted on its payments, and plaintiffs demanded reconveyance of the pledged security interests. Defendant offered to comply with the demand. However, by this time, the security interests had been proportionately reduced due to the general partner's capital contributions. Plaintiffs sued the general partners alleging that the capital contributions impaired their security interests in the limited partnership and were a wrongful interference with prospective contractual or economic advantage. The trial court sustained defendants' general demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed the court's subsequent dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed as to the interference action, stating that the plaintiffs did not allege facts remotely suggesting that there had been any interference with any prospective business or economic advantage of the plaintiffs. The court found that the security agreement had not been breached and that there was no allegation that the value of the collateral had been impaired. The court stressed that while the proportionate interest or share of the collateral in the limited partnership had been reduced, this was not an allegation that the collateral had a lower value or that its value as a collateral had been impaired (79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 407) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Prospective Contract or Business Relationship Must Be Moving Cause of Damages

In Wilson v. Loew's Inc. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 183, 298 P.2d 152 , plaintiffs were professionals in the motion picture industry who refused to answer certain questions before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives. Plaintiffs alleged that the defendants, motion picture producers and distributors, circulated a list containing the names of motion picture workers who refused to cooperate with the House Committee, pursuant to an agreement to prevent such persons from gaining further employment in the industry. Plaintiffs' actions for intentional interference with prospective economic relations were rejected by the trial court, which sustained defendants' demurrers. Plaintiffs appealed. The trial court affirmed the judgment against plaintiffs. Reviewing prior case authority, the court stated that before recovery can be had for interference with and loss of a future or prospective contract or business relationship, it must appear that such contract or relationship would otherwise have been entered into (142 Cal. App. 2d 183, 190) . In this case, the court found the complaint devoid of any allegation of fact that any contract or relationship would have been entered into between any one of plaintiffs and any one of defendant motion picture producers and distributors or with anyone in the motion picture industry but for the alleged agreement. The court could find no factual showing of denial of employment. The court added that there was no allegation that at the time the agreement was made, or at any time thereafter, any one of plaintiffs was an employee of any one of the defendants or had any reasonable prospect of becoming an employee, or that any of plaintiffs had any prospect of becoming a producer of motion pictures (142 Cal. App. 2d 183, 194) . At the oral argument, plaintiffs' counsel conceded that it was not alleged that plaintiffs did apply for work and were denied the right to work. The court concluded that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (142 Cal. App. 2d 183, 195) .

[b] Showing of Resulting Injury Required

In Salma v. Capon (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 873 , cross-plaintiff filed a cross-complaint alleging causes of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, conversion, and others, against cross-defendant, based on cross-defendant's actions to recover a house that cross-defendant had sold to an intermediary, who then sold to cross-plaintiff. Cross-defendant filed a motion to strike the intentional interference cause of action under the anti-SLAPP statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. In alleging the cause of action for intentional interference, cross-plaintiff claimed that, because he was required to reveal cross-defendant's conduct in trying to recover the house to potential lenders, that conduct disrupted cross-plaintiff's efforts to refinance the house and caused the value of the house to decline. The court of appeal held that the motion to strike the intentional interference claim should have been granted because cross-plaintiff failed to establish a probability of success on the merits as required to withstand the motion to strike. The court noted that cross-plaintiff failed to provide any competent evidence to support his bare allegation that the value of the property was diminished by cross-defendant's conduct. In the absence of such evidence, cross-plaintiff could not show that cross-defendant's conduct caused him actual economic detriment (161 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1292) .

In Girard v. Delta Towers Joint Venture (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1741, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 102 , plaintiff tenant sued its landlord for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage based on the defendant landlord's failure to disclose to plaintiff that plaintiff's subtenant had signed a sublease with another tenant. The subtenant was on the verge of insolvency and needed to find less expensive office space. After defaulting on its sublease with the plaintiff, plaintiff and subtenant entered into a compromise and release involving a cash settlement. The subtenant meanwhile had negotiated a new, less expensive sublease with another tenant of the defendant, with defendant's consent. The court of appeal, reversing a judgment for the plaintiff tenant, held that the plaintiff had failed to establish the requisite loss of economic advantage because plaintiff had failed to show that it would have been better off had defendant landlord disclosed the other sublease. The subtenant's insolvency problem would have been more severe had it not obtained the compromise and release from the sublease with plaintiff, and it was unlikely that the defendant could have obtained more cash for the compromise and release had it known of the other sublease (20 Cal. App. 4th 1741, 1750) .

Hepe v. Paknad (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 244 Cal. Rptr. 823 , is discussed in § 122.29[3][a]. The court of appeal held that certain damages are too speculative to support a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage (199 Cal. App. 3d 412, 421) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsElements

91 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.35

§ 122.35 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Defendant Is Party to Contractual Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH _____ [CONTRACT or PROSPECTIVE ECONOMIC ADVANTAGE] WILL NOT LIE AGAINST DEFENDANT BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT IS A PARTY TO THE CONTRACT WITH WHICH HE/SHE/IT ALLEGEDLY INTERFERED.

[EITHER]

A. No Cause of Action if Defendant Is Party to Contract. A plaintiff does not have a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage against a party who had a contract with the plaintiff, if the conduct that is the basis for the suit constitutes a breach of that contract (JRS Prods., Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. of Am. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 168, 181-183, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 840).

[OR]

A. No Cause of Action if Defendant Is Party to Contract. An action for intentional interference with a contractual relationship will not lie against a defendant who was a party to the contractual relationship which was allegedly interfered with (Deeter v. Angus (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 241, 253, 224 Cal. Rptr. 801 ; Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 998-999, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720).

[Optional] B. No Liability for Interfering With Subcontracts. Neither a party to a contract nor agents of that party may be liable for interference with related subcontracts that would require the performance of the party to the primary contract (PM Group, Inc. v. Stewart (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 55, 65, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227).

[Optional] C. Agent Not Stranger to Contract. An agent for a contracting principal, including a corporate agent or employee, cannot be liable for interfering with the principal's contract with the plaintiff if the alleged interference was committed when the agent was acting within the scope of the agency (Mintz v. Blue Cross of California (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1594, 1604, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contract to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the defendant was also a party to the contract, and consequently a tort action for intentional interference is precluded by the availability of a contract remedy. Alternate paragraphs are included depending on whether the theory of recovery asserted is interference with contract or interference with prospective economic advantage.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should allege facts showing that the defendant was a party to the contract.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the points and authorities in §§ 122.20 -122.23.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectivley Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action if Defendant Is Party to Contract

In Deeter v. Angus (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 241, 224 Cal. Rptr. 801 , defendant real estate brokers allegedly breached an oral agreement with plaintiff real estate brokers to pay the plaintiffs a commission. Defendants included two corporations and a husband and wife who were officers at both corporations. Plaintiffs claimed that the wife persuaded her husband not to honor the oral commission agreement. The trial court sustained, without leave to amend, defendants' demurrers to the action for interference with contractual relations. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to the action for interference with contractual relations. According to the court, plaintiffs' cause of action required plaintiffs to allege that they had a valid and existing contract with a third party. The court noted that the claim for breach of a cooperating broker's agreement averred that the husband acted for both himself and all the other defendants. Accordingly, the wife was a party to the agreement and could not be sued for interference (179 Cal. App. 3d 241, 253) .

The facts and procedural background of Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720 , are discussed in § 122.28[3][d]. The plaintiffs sued the purchaser of an olive oil plant, alleging that defendant's purchase would interfere with contractual relations between plaintiffs and the plant's original owners.

The court of appeal found that defendant's demurrer should be upheld because, on the record, defendant was a party to the contracts with the performance of which it allegedly interfered. This circumstance was demonstrated not only by the allegations of the complaint, but also by the agreements incorporated in, and attached to, the complaint. The agreements in dispute explicitly provided that the provisions therein would bind the seller's successors and assigns. The court held that the general rule is that the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations is a remedy created by the common law to compensate one whose contractual relations with others are interfered with by a third person (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 998-999) . According to the court, it would be superfluous to allow a plaintiff who may bring a breach of contract action also to bring an interference action. Also, such a plaintiff would be able to recover tort damages, such as punitive damages and damages for mental suffering, to which the plaintiff would not be entitled under California law in contract action (65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 999) .

In JRS Prods., Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. of Am. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 168, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 840 , the plaintiff was a dealer of copiers and fax machines that brought suit against an office products manufacturer after the manufacturer terminated a franchise agreement with the plaintiff for allegedly engaging in conduct that the manufacturer thought was taking business directly from the manufacturer. The plaintiff alleged that termination of the agreement was wrongful because the manufacturer did not first give the plaintiff written notice of the conduct that the manufacturer found objectionable. The plaintiff alleged eight causes of action, including an action for breach of contract and interference with prospective economic advantage. The trial court granted summary adjudication in favor of the manufacturer on all causes of action except the action for interference with prospective economic advantage. Recognizing that the contractual claims were the stronger claims and that a party may not generally recover for interference with a contract to which the defendant is a party, the parties agreed that the plaintiff would voluntarily dismiss the remaining interference cause of action without prejudice to facilitate a quicker appeal. However, the court of appeal dismissed the appeal as an appeal from a nonfinal judgment, forcing the plaintiff to go to trial on the interference cause of action. The plaintiff won substantial compensatory and punitive damages, and the defendant appealed. The plaintiff cross-appealed the dismissal of the contract claim.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that both appeals had merit. First, the court agreed with the plaintiff that the trial court erred in dismissing the contract claims, concluding that a franchisee is entitled under the Franchise Relations Act to seek contract damages for wrongful termination of a franchise agreement (115 Cal. App. 4th 168, 173-178) . Second, the court agreed that it was an error to allow the plaintiff to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage for conduct that was essentially a breach of contract. The court recognized existing case law that had established that a party to a contract could not recover tort damages for interference with contract from a defendant that was a party to that contract. The same conclusion applied to a cause of action termed an action for interference with prospective economic advantage. If the underlying conduct is essentially conduct that constitutes a breach of contract, a contracting party is limited to recovering for breach of contract. A breach of contract action cannot be transformed into a tort action by arguing that the breach interfered with the plaintiff's business. Therefore, because the plaintiff's essential complaint was that the defendant wrongfully terminated the franchise agreement without good cause, and that conduct, if proven, constituted a breach of the franchise contract, the plaintiff was limited to his contractual remedies, even if the conduct constituting the breach of contract also happened to violate an independent statutory duty (115 Cal. App. 4th 168, 181-183) .

[b] No Liability for Interfering With Subcontracts

In PM Group, Inc. v. Stewart (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 55, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227 , plaintiffs were a concert promoter and two subpromoters who sued a singer and his company, manager, agent, and attorney. Plaintiffs sued for intentional interference with contractual relations, among other causes of action, because after negotiations over a proposed concert tour broke down, defendants failed to return $780,000 that had been deposited toward the tour. A jury found for plaintiffs, awarded return of the deposited funds on theories of money had and received and negligent misrepresentation, and awarded $1.6 million in compensatory damages against the singer's attorney and agent on the theory that they intentionally interfered with subcontracts for individual concert performances. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment in favor of plaintiffs on the cause of action for intentional interference with the subcontracts, but otherwise affirmed. As to the interference claim, the court held that neither the singer nor his agents could have interfered with the performance of the subcontracts at issue, which would have required the singer to sing at specific venues as part of the proposed tour. The court noted that the tort of intentional interference with contractual relations can only be committed by parties who are strangers to the contract, and a contracting party is incapable of interfering with the performance of his or her own contract. Because the subcontracts at issue provided for the singer's performance, neither he nor his agents could be held liable for interfering with those subcontracts. Moreover, the court noted that because the jury specifically found that the singer and the promoter had never entered into a binding contract for the tour, none of the relevant subcontracts could have been performed. As such, plaintiffs could not prove the attorney and agent caused the failure of the subcontracts (154 Cal. App. 4th 55, 65) .

[c] Agent Not Stranger to Contract

In Mintz v. Blue Cross of California (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1594, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 , plaintiff was denied coverage for an experimental cancer treatment by the third-party administrator for plaintiff's health insurance plan. The administrator advised plaintiff of the right to internal review of that decision, but failed to notify of the right to request an independent external review as required by statute. In addition, the health plan itself stated that a member would be advised of the right to external review when the denial of services triggered such a right. Plaintiff sued the third-party administrator for intentional interference with contract, reckless infliction of emotional distress, and negligence. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on all causes of action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to the interference with contract and infliction of emotional distress causes of action, but reversed on the negligence cause of action. As to the interference with contract cause of action, the court quoted the California Supreme Court in Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 513, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 , in support of the proposition that only a "stranger to the contract" may be liable for interference with that contract. Moreover, the court recognized as established the principal that corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of a corporation cannot be liable for inducing a breach of the corporation's contract. In the case before it, the court concluded that the administrator, which was clearly acting as an agent for the health plan in administering the health insurance contract with plaintiff, could not be liable for interfering with the very contract that it was hired to administer (172 Cal. App. 4th 1594, 1603-1604) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageElements

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.36

§ 122.36 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exist--Making Competitive Bid on Private Contract Without Proper License Does Not Constitute Actionable Interference

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACT WILL NOT LIE AGAINST DEFENDANT, BECAUSE LACK OF A REQUIRED LICENSE AT THE TIME OF MAKING A COMPETITIVE BID ON A PRIVATE CONTRACT IS NOT ACTIONABLE AS INTERFERENCE.

No Cause of Action Based on Competitive Bidding by Unlicensed Defendant. The fact that a successful competitive bidder was not properly licensed at the time a private entity awarded it a contract does not, standing alone, amount to conduct actionable by an unsuccessful competitive bidder as contractual interference (Settimo Assocs. v. Environ Sys., Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 842, 846, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that defendant tortiously interfered with a contract to which the plaintiff was a party. The ground of opposition set forth is that the action is merely based on the fact that the defendant was not properly licensed when it successfully bid against plaintiff on a contract.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 122.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Cause of Action Based on Competitive Bidding by Unlicensed Defendant

In Settimo Assocs. v. Environ Sys., Inc. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 842 , plaintiff, the holder of a general B-1 contractor's license, brought an action against defendant, alleging alternative causes of action for intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage. Plaintiff complained that it had twice submitted the lowest bid by any duly licensed contractor for installing a computer support facility, only to lose each contract to defendant, which submitted lower bids. Plaintiff alleged that defendant held only a specialty contractor's license that was not sufficient for some of the work involved, and that this lack of a general contracting license alone satisfied the element of unlawful contract interference so that defendant should reimburse its lost profits. Defendant filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, which the trial court granted. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It concluded that the fact defendant was not properly licensed at the time it was awarded the contracts did not amount to actionable unlawful interference. The court noted that plaintiff had cited no statutory authority requiring a private entity to accept bids only from duly licensed contractors. It also stated that the Business and Professions Code, which contains statutory licensing regulations, neither creates nor denies any civil remedy to bidders who lose projects to unlicensed competitors. Under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7028(a) and 7031, defendant's conduct amounted to a misdemeanor and foreclosed any possibility of its suing to enforce an awarded contract. Nevertheless, the court stated, the regulatory sections of the Business and Professions Code fall within the enforcement jurisdiction of the Contractor's Licensing Board. They create no action for civil damages in a competing bidder (14 Cal. App. 4th 842, 846) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.37

§ 122.37 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--Failure to Show Commission of Civil Wrong

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR CONSPIRACY BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT A WRONG WAS COMMITTED PURSUANT TO THE CONSPIRACY RESULTING IN DAMAGES.

Wrongful Act Committed Pursuant to Conspiracy Required. To state a cause of action for conspiracy to interfere with economic relations, a plaintiff must show that an underlying civil wrong has been committed resulting in damage (Manor Inv. Co. v. F. W. Woolworth Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 595, 206 Cal. Rptr. 37).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff has established a cause of action for conspiracy to interfere with economic relations. The ground of opposition is that plaintiff has not shown the commission, pursuant to the conspiracy, of a wrongful act resulting in damages.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the absence of a civil wrong. This argument may arise in a motion for summary judgment, a demurrer, or other similar procedure. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss how the complaint fails to allege that defendant has committed a civil wrong.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to conspiracy in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 126, Conspiracy (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, see respectively Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to a cause of action for civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 122.26.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Wrongful Act Committed Pursuant to Conspiracy Required

In Manor Inv. Co. v. F. W. Woolworth Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 206 Cal. Rptr. 37 , plaintiffs alleged a cause of action against one defendant (hereinafter third-party defendant) for wrongful interference with a contract that plaintiffs had with the remaining defendants (hereinafter party defendants) and another cause of action against all defendants for conspiracy to interfere wrongfully with plaintiffs' contract. The jury found that third-party defendant was not liable for wrongful interference but that all defendants were liable for conspiracy to interfere. Defendants moved for a new trial on the grounds that the verdicts were inconsistent and that the damages awarded were excessive. The trial court granted the new trial only as to the cause of action for conspiracy on the grounds of excessive damages. Plaintiffs appealed and defendants cross appealed.

The court of appeal modified the trial court's orders and resulting judgment so as to require a new trial as to the causes of action for wrongful interference and conspiracy, and otherwise affirmed the orders and judgment (159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 599) . The court stated the general rule that liability for conspiracy requires that the facts show something was done which, without conspiracy, would give rise to a cause of action (159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 595) . The court noted that the jury vindicated the third party defendant of having interfered with the contractual relations between party defendants and plaintiffs. In the absence of conspiracy, the court stated that party defendants were incapable of interfering with their own contractual relationship with plaintiffs (159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 595-596) . The court stated that party defendants' liability could not be derived from third party defendant's liability because the jury specifically found that the third party, standing alone, was not liable for the underlying tort. The court concluded that the jury verdict vindicating the third party on the individual cause of action for interference was inconsistent with the jury verdict finding all defendants liable for conspiracy to interfere with contractual relations (159 Cal. App. 3d 586, 596) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsConcerted ActionCivil ConspiracyGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsConcerted ActionCivil ConspiracyElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.38

§ 122.38 Opposing Contention That Elements Necessary to Recover for Conspiracy to Interfere With Economic Relationship Exist--Contracting Party May Not Be Held Liable in Tort for Conspiracy to Interfere With Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE IN TORT FOR CONSPIRACY TO INTERFERE WITH THE CONTRACT AT ISSUE IN THIS CASE, BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS A PARTY TO THAT CONTRACT.

Contracting Party May Not Be Held Liable in Tort for Conspiracy to Interfere With Contract. A contracting party cannot be held liable in tort for conspiracy to interfere with its own contract (Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 507-508, 521, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff has established the elements necessary for a tort cause of action for conspiracy to interfere with an economic relationship consisting of an existing contract. These points and authorities are for use when the plaintiff has attempted to state such a cause of action against a defendant who is a party to the contract.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue stated. In many cases, the defendant's status as a party to the contract will appear on the face of the complaint, in which case this point would be combined with points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for judgment on the pleadings. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms pertaining to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to civil conspiracy generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 126, Conspiracy (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities pertaining to civil conspiracy generally, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy . For procedural points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for judgment on the pleadings, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contracting Party May Not Be Held Liable in Tort for Conspiracy to Interfere With Contract

In Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 , plaintiff entered into a subcontract with defendant Litton to procure and supply spare parts that Litton needed to fulfil a defense contract between Litton and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Plaintiff was to be paid a commission equal to a 26 percent markup on the cost of parts that plaintiff purchased for Litton. As part of its subcontract, plaintiff agreed to buy certain electron tubes that were manufactured exclusively by defendant Varian. Plaintiff then entered into an agreement with Varian to purchase 11 of these parts for resale to Litton. Subsequently, following an internal review by Litton's finance department criticizing the amount of the markup on its agreement with plaintiff, Litton entered into a direct agreement with Varian, under which Varian would sell 6 tubes directly to Litton (without any markup) and 6 tubes to plaintiff for resale to Litton (subject to the 26 percent markup). The renegotitated contract, which substantially reduced plaintiff's commission, was presented to plaintiff as a fait accompli.

Plaintiff sued both defendants for breach of their respective contracts and for tortious interference (including conspiracy to interfere) with those contracts. After trial, the trial court entered a judgment in favor of plaintiff against both defendants for contract damages and for tort damages based on conspiracy to interfere with contract, and against Litton for punitive damages. On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment as to the contract awards, but reversed as to the tort awards because of inconsistency in the jury verdicts. The court of appeal rejected Varian's argument that Varian could not, as a matter of law, be held liable for conspiracy to interfere with its own contract. The Supreme Court granted review to consider the latter issue.

On review, the Court reversed, holding that a contracting party cannot be held liable in tort for conspiracy to interfere with its own contract (7 Cal. 4th 503, 507-508, 521) . The Court observed that civil conspiracy is not a cause of action in itself, but a legal doctrine that imposes liability on persons who, although not committing a tort themselves, share with the immediate tortfeasors a common plan or design in its perpetration (7 Cal. 4th 503, 510-511) . By its nature, tort liability from conspiracy presupposes that the co-conspirator is legally capable of committing the tort, i.e., that he or she owes a duty to plaintiff recognized by law and is potentially subject to liability for breach of that duty (7 Cal. 4th 503, 511) . The Court noted the underlying tort cause of action for interference with contract does not lie against a party to the contract [see § 122.35]. The Court therefore reasoned that because a party to a contract owes no tort duty to refrain from interference with its own contract, a contracting party cannot be bootstrapped into tort liability by allegations of conspiracy (7 Cal. 4th 503, 514) . The Court also observed that to permit tort liability on a contracting party for conspiracy to interfere with contract would circumvent limitations on the damages recoverable for breach of contract and obliterate the distinction between tort and contract recovery (7 Cal. 4th 503, 516-518) . The Court specifically disapproved a long line of court of appeal decisions that had permitted tort recovery against contracting parties for conspiracy to interfere with contract (7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsConcerted ActionCivil ConspiracyGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsConcerted ActionCivil ConspiracyDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.39

§ 122.39 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Sporting Contests

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTERFERENCE BECAUSE SUCH A CAUSE OF ACTION DOES NOT LIE FOR PROSPECTIVE ECONOMIC LOSS WHICH ARISES BETWEEN COMPETITORS DURING A SPORTING CONTEST.

No Recovery for Interference Related to Sporting Contest. A cause of action for interference will not lie to redress a prospective economic loss arising between competitors in a sporting contest (Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 79, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff has established a cause of action for interference with an economic relationship. The ground of opposition is that public policy bars interference actions based on a prospective economic loss that arises between competitors in a sporting contest.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the absence of a cause of action. This argument may arise in a general demurrer or other similar procedure. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that the plaintiff seeks to recover for a prospective loss which arose between competitors in a sporting contest.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery for Interference Related to Sporting Contest

The facts and procedural background of Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 64, 233 Cal. Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728 , are discussed in § 122.29[3][a]. The plaintiff based his interference claim on defendant's alleged contact with plaintiff's racehorse during a race, claiming that the contact caused plaintiff's horse to win a smaller purse than it otherwise would have won.

The Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's claim, as a matter of law and public policy (43 Cal. 3d 64, 70-71) . As a matter of law, the Court found that plaintiff's failure to allege facts showing interference with a probable economic gain destroyed plaintiff's cause of action (43 Cal. 3d 64, 77) . As a matter of policy, the Court stated that courts are not appropriate forums for adjudicating claimed sporting event violations which allegedly result in prospective economic loss. The Court noted that if the tort of interference were recognized in a sporting competition, virtually no sporting event would take place without a tort claim from some losing competitor seeking to recover his or her supposed economic loss; placing this type of additional pressure on competitors would seriously harm competitive sports (43 Cal. 3d 64, 78) . The Court concluded that a cause of action will not lie for prospective economic loss which arises between competitors during a sporting contest (43 Cal. 3d 64, 79) . Even conspiracies formed between competitors, or between competitors and noncompetitors would not justify liability for noncontractual interference in the sports context (43 Cal. 3d 64, 79-80) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.40

§ 122.40 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Employment Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Employer May Not Sue Competing Employer for Hiring Plaintiff's At-Will Employee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN EMPLOYER MAY NOT BRING A CLAIM FOR INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH AN EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP AGAINST A COMPETING EMPLOYER THAT HIRES AWAY AN EMPLOYEE WHOSE EMPLOYMENT WAS TERMINABLE AT THE WILL OF THE EMPLOYER OR EMPLOYEE.

Employer May Not Sue Competing Employer for Hiring At-Will Employee. An employer may not bring an action for tortious interference with an employment contract against a competing employer that has hired away an employee whose employment was terminable at-will (GAB Bus. Servs., Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsom Claim Servs., Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 426-427, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted to oppose the contention that an employer may sue a competing employer for intentional interference with an employment relationship based on the defendant's hiring away of the plaintiff's at-will employee.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the interference action may not be brought against a competing employer. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the employee's employment with the plaintiff was terminable at the will of either the employee or the plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employer May Not Sue Competing Employer for Hiring At-Will Employee

In GAB Bus. Servs., Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsom Claim Servs., Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665 , the plaintiff was an independent adjusting company that filed suit against a competing adjusting company and the plaintiff's former officer and employee, who had been lured away from the plaintiff by the competing company. The suit was based on the defendants' respective roles in soliciting 17 key employees away from the plaintiff at the time that the plaintiff's former officer switched employment. The plaintiff alleged that in secretly orchestrating the exodus while still an officer with the plaintiff, the former officer owed and breached a fiduciary duty and that the competing employer engaged in unfair competition in assisting with and benefiting from that breach of fiduciary duty. The plaintiff also alleged that these actions constituted intentional interference with the plaintiff's contract with its employees. At trial, the court refused to instruct the jury that the officer owed a fiduciary duty as a matter of law and also refused to instruct on the theory of intentional interference with existing employment relationships. The jury found that the plaintiff's former officer did not owe a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff and otherwise found for the defendants on all causes of action. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed in part. The court first held that the trial court committed reversible error in refusing to instruct the jury that, as a matter of law, the plaintiff's former officer owed a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff while serving as an officer of the company (83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 416-426) . As to the claim of tortious interference with existing employment relationships, however, the court of appeal agreed with the trial court. Although courts have allowed tortious interference claims in the specific context of at-will employment relationships, those cases involved claims brought by the employee whose employment had been terminated, and none involved a claim of interference brought by the employer. The court then refused to expand the tort to include such claims, noting that allowing such a claim by an employer would subject employers to liability almost any time they hired away an employee from a competitor. The court also noted the state's strong public policy supporting the mobility of employees, which would be undermined if employers were faced with possible litigation by hiring a competitor's employees. Finally, the court was wary of allowing tort recovery if an employee voluntarily changes employment, noting that any concerns with unfair or unlawful conduct by a competing company can be addressed through an action for unfair competition (83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 426-427) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.41

§ 122.41 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship Exists--Public Policy Precludes Recovery--Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTERFERENCE, BECAUSE THERE IS NO ALLEGATION THAT THE LITIGATION, WHICH WAS ALLEGEDLY INSTITUTED AT DEFENDANT'S INSTIGATION BY THE OTHER PARTY TO THE CONTRACT, WAS BROUGHT WITHOUT PROBABLE CAUSE _____ [AND/OR] WAS TERMINATED IN PLAINTIFF'S FAVOR.

Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another. No cause of action for intentional interference with contract or with prospective economic advantage can be stated on the basis of the defendant's inducing another to undertake litigation relating to the contract unless that litigation was brought without probable cause and was concluded in plaintiff's favor (Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1137, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff has stated a cause of action for intentional interference with economic relations. The ground for the opposition is that public policy bars an action for interference based on the defendant's inducing a party to a contract to undertake litigation relating to that contract unless that litigation was brought without probable cause and was concluded in plaintiff's favor.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific context in which counsel wishes to raise the contention. The argument may arise in a general demurrer or other proceeding. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel may wish to ask the court to take judicial notice of the status or judgment of the other action.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The authorities in §§ 122.42 and 122.45 were relied on as part of the court's reasoning in the case on which this form is based. Thus, counsel may wish to include those authorities if relevant to the particular context.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

Plaintiff in Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 , had a 50-year contract to purchase hydroelectric power from a county water agency. The contract provided that it would terminate in 2013 or at the end of the year in which the agency completed retirement of its related project bonds, whichever occurred first. As energy prices rose, the agency wished it could terminate the contract and sell the hydroelectric power at more favorable rates but never took any action until persuaded by defendant. Defendant induced the water agency to seek a declaratory judgment that it could terminate its contract with plaintiff early by retiring the bonds. That action resulted in a trial court judgment for the agency, which was reversed on appeal and still pending when the action for damages and injunctive relief based on intentional interference with contract and with prospective economic advantage reached the Supreme Court. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the action based on intentional interference with contract and with prospective economic advantage, and that action was dismissed. The court of appeal reversed, and defendant sought review.

The Supreme Court reversed, stating that to allow either cause of action to be stated when the only interference alleged is that defendant induced the bringing of potentially meritorious litigation would be an unwarranted expansion of the scope of these torts and a pernicious barrier to free access to the courts (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1123) . The Court based its decision on several considerations, including the public policy to allow free access to the courts to provide for peaceful, judicial resolution of differences (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1131-1133) . Other considerations were the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1133-1135) , and the fact that the interference torts themselves have been criticized as favoring secure enjoyment of contractual and economic relations at the expense of a freely competitive economy, and thus have been limited accordingly in other cases (citing cases discussed in § 122.39) (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1136-1137) . The Court concluded that the appropriate balance between the right to free access to the courts and the interest in being free from the financial and emotional cost of defending litigation is already struck by the tort of malicious prosecution (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1131-1133, 1137) . The Court acknowledged that the right to petition for redress of grievances has previously been applied only to protect the litigants but held that in order to assure free access to the courts and to prevent a flood of oppressive derivative litigation, third parties should be similarly protected (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1135-1136) .

The Court concluded that a plaintiff seeking to state a cause of action for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation was concluded in plaintiff's favor (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1137) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Induce Litigation on Contract of Another

Golden W. Baseball Co. v. City of Anaheim (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 11, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 , arose out of a complex contractual dispute involving a city, a major league baseball team, and a real estate developer as a result of the city's plans to allow the developer to build an office complex on a portion of the parking lot of a city-owned stadium where the baseball team played its home games. The agreement between the city and the team required the city to provide a minimum number of parking spaces for the team's games. The team contended that it had exclusive right to use the land on which the parking lot was located (thereby precluding any office development without its consent) and that the specified parking spaces had to be ground-level spaces. The city contended that it retained the right to develop the parking lot land as long as it provided the requisite minimum number of spaces and that those spaces could be in a parking garage. When negotiations failed to resolve the dispute, the team sued the city for specific performance of the agreement, the city and the developer for various forms of equitable relief, and the developer for damages for interference with its contract with the city. The trial court entered judgment for the team on its specific performance and equitable relief claims, but entered judgment for the developer on the interference claim.

The court of appeal modified the judgment and affirmed. The court concluded that the city did not cede exclusive control over the entire parking lot, but was obligated to provide the minimum number of parking spaces (with adequate access) and that the parties had intended those parking spaces to be ground-level spaces (25 Cal. App. 4th 11, 37-42) . With regard to the interference claim, the court noted that the situation in this case was analogous to that in Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 . The court observed that there was no breach of the contract. At most, the developer's conduct prompted the team to file its lawsuit to determine its rights under the agreement with the city. The court held that the apt question is whether the team's position was indisputably correct. The court noted that, given the contract's ambiguity, the team's position was not indisputably correct. Although the city wrongly concluded that it could place the required parking spaces anywhere on the property, including in parking structures, the city's construction of the contract was arguable because the contract did not expressly require gound-level spaces. Moreover, the team's position, which prompted the litigation, that the city could not build anywhere on the premises was as least as far off the mark. The court concluded that a business relationship with a party to a contract that merely brings to head the contracting parties' good faith dispute about the interpretation of the contract is not tortious (25 Cal. App. 4th 11, 51) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.42

§ 122.42 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Fair Competition

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] WAS JUSTIFIED, AND DEFENDANT IS THEREFORE NOT LIABLE, BECAUSE THE RELATIONSHIP INVOLVED A _____ [PROSPECTIVE CONTRACT or CONTRACT TERMINABLE AT WILL] AND CONCERNED A MATTER WITHIN DEFENDANT'S COMPETITION WITH PLAINTIFF, DEFENDANT EMPLOYED ONLY LAWFUL MEANS AND DID NOT CREATE OR CONTINUE AN ILLEGAL RESTRAINT OF COMPETITION, AND DEFENDANT'S PURPOSE WAS AT LEAST IN PART TO ADVANCE HIS/HER INTEREST IN COMPETING WITH PLAINTIFF.

A. Fair Competition Is Justified. One who intentionally causes a third person not to enter into a prospective contractual relation with his or her competitor or not to continue an existing contract terminable at will does not interfere improperly with the competitor's relation if (1) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and his or her competitor, (2) the actor does not employ wrongful means, (3) his or her action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade, and (4) his or her purpose is at least in part to advance his or her interest in competing with the other (A-Mark Coin Co. v. General Mills, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 323, 195 Cal. Rptr. 859 ; Charles C. Chapman Bldg. Co. v. California Mart (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 855-856, 82 Cal. Rptr. 830).

B. Noncontractual Interference Enjoys More Extensive Privilege. The law distinguishes between interference with a contract and interference with relationships without a contract; in the latter situation the law recognizes more extensive privileges to interfere for the sake of competition (Charles C. Chapman Bldg. Co. v. California Mart (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 856, 82 Cal. Rptr. 830 ; Shida v. Japan Food Corp. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 864, 866, 60 Cal. Rptr. 43).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged as fair competition.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that show each element of the defense of fair competition.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fair Competition Is Justified

The factual and procedural background of A-Mark Coin Co. v. General Mills, Inc. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 322, 195 Cal. Rptr. 859 , is discussed in § 122.28[3][b]. The plaintiff alleged at trial that defendants intentionally interfered with a contractual relationship and with an advantageous business relationship to which plaintiff was a party. The trial court found for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal found that plaintiff could not posit liability for tortious interference with a contractual relationship because the contractual relationship in question was void (148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 322) . In addition, the court found that defendants' actions clearly came within the privilege of competition. The court quoted from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 768, which provides that one who intentionally causes a third person not to enter into a prospective contractual relation with another who is his or her competitor or not to continue an existing contract terminable at will does not interfere improperly with the other's relation if (1) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and the other, (2) the actor does not employ wrongful means, (3) his or her action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade, and (4) his or her purpose is at least in part to advance his or her interest in competing with the other (148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 323) . The court stated that the policy of the common law has always been in favor of free competition. So long as the plaintiff's contractual relations are merely contemplated or potential, it is considered to be in the public interest that any competitor should be free to divert them to himself or herself by all fair and reasonable means. In short, it is no tort to beat a business rival to prospective customers. Thus, in the absence of prohibition by statute, illegitimate means, or some other unlawful element, a defendant seeking to increase his or her own business may cut rates or prices, allow discounts or rebates, enter into secret negotiations behind the plaintiff's back, refuse to deal with him or her or threaten to discharge employees who do, or even refuse to deal with third parties unless they cease dealing with the plaintiff, all without incurring liability. In this case, the court found that defendants were free to petition lawfully the Nevada probate court seeking a chance to bid on the coin collection. The court found no evidence that defendants' motives were other than to advance their own economic interests in competition with plaintiff (148 Cal. App. 3d 312, 323-324) .

In Charles C. Chapman Bldg. Co. v. California Mart (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 82 Cal. Rptr. 830 , plaintiff was the owner of an office building. Eight of the building's 12 floors were occupied by representatives of children's wear wholesalers and manufacturers. Defendants built a new building to cater to the apparel industry, and solicited away a large number of tenants from plaintiff. Some of these tenants moved before their written leases expired. Plaintiff brought an action for declaratory relief, for damages based on contractual interference, and for an injunction. The trial court granted defendants' motion for judgment. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that unjustified interference with an advantageous business relationship is actionable even though no breach of contract is involved. The justification advanced, the court said, is generally the right to conduct a business in competition with that of another. The court set out the requirements for justification as given in Restatement of Torts § 768: one is privileged purposely to cause a third person not to enter into or continue a business relation with a competitor of the actor if (1) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the actor and the competitor, (2) the actor does not employ improper means, (3) the actor does not intend thereby to create or continue an illegal restraint of competition, and (4) the actor's purpose is at least in part to advance his or her interest in his or her competition with the other. The court noted that the Restatement states the California rule (2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 855-856) . The court found that the requirements for justification were met in this case. First, the court indicated that in soliciting tenants of plaintiff's building and entering into leases with them, defendants acted without malice or intent to injure the plaintiff, but solely to further their own economic interests as competitors of the plaintiff. Second, the court noted that defendants did not use improper methods in connection with such solicitation, and that they employed no coercive measures, nor did they make any false statements or representations to any person concerning plaintiff corporation or its building or concerning defendants, the new building, or its tenants. The court concluded that the findings of the trial court established that defendants' acts in soliciting plaintiff's tenants were not unlawful and were done to advance defendants' interests as competitors of plaintiff (2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 856) .

[b] Noncontractual Interference Enjoys More Extensive Privilege

The facts and procedural background of Charles C. Chapman Bldg. Co. v. California Mart (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 82 Cal. Rptr. 830 , are discussed in § 122.42[3][a]. The court of appeal accepted the trial court's finding that defendants' interference with plaintiff's economic relations did not involve a contractual breach. Holding that defendants' interference was privileged under the theory of fair competition, the court of appeal noted that when no breach of contract is shown, the law recognizes a more extensive privilege to interfere with business relations than where a breach appears (2 Cal. App. 3d 846, 856) .

In Shida v. Japan Food Corp. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 864, 60 Cal. Rptr. 43 , plaintiff alleged that defendant tortiously induced a manufacturer to discontinue business with plaintiff. Over several years, plaintiff had contracted annually with the manufacturer to be the exclusive distributor of manufacturer's food product in the continental United States. Defendant allegedly caused manufacturer not to renew its agreement with plaintiff. Instead, the manufacturer entered into an exclusive distributorship agreement with defendant. The trial court, finding that but for defendant's conduct the manufacturer would have continued its business relationship with plaintiff, entered judgment in favor of plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed. The critical question, according to the court, was whether the interference was unjustified. The court noted the importance of the distinction between interference with a contract and interference with a noncontractual relationship; in the latter situation the law recognizes more extensive privileges to interfere for the sake of competition (251 Cal. App. 2d 864, 866) . Here, defendant caused a failure to renew a contract, not a breach of contract. The court found that this would not be an actionable wrong, stating that there was no finding that defendant used any improper means to persuade the manufacturer, or that any illegal restraint of competition was created, or that defendant had any purpose beyond the obvious objective of advancing its own interest as a competitor (251 Cal. App. 2d 864, 867) .

NOTE:

Although concluding that public policy prevented the plaintiff from stating a cause of action for interference with contract or prospective economic advantage, the Supreme Court in has stated that the chief practical distinction between interference with contract and with prospective economic advantage is that a broader range of privilege to interfere is recognized when the relationship or economic advantage interfered with is only prospective [Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1126, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; see § 122.41[3][a]].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fair Competition Is Justified

In Los Angeles Land Co. v. Brunswick Corp. (9th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 1422 , defendant, a manufacturer of bowling equipment, also owned and operated bowling centers. Plaintiff, a land developer, wished to build a bowling center in a region in which defendant also had planned to build a bowling center. Timberlake Construction Co. (Timberlake), a major builder of bowling centers, had built centers for both plaintiff and defendant in the past. When plaintiff contacted Timberlake about building plaintiff's proposed new bowling center, Timberlake declined to do so, apparently as the result of influence exerted by defendant. Defendant also allegedly interfered with plaintiff's efforts to get financing for its new bowling center, and plaintiff ultimately was forced to abandon the project. Plaintiff land sued defendant for federal antitrust violations and for intentional interference with economic relationships.

The Ninth Circuit reversed a trial court judgment for the plaintiff. Regarding defendant's alleged interference with plaintiff's relationship with Timberlake, the appellate court noted that under California law a firm's interference with another firm's prospective economic relation falls within the privilege of competition if (1) the relation concerns a matter involved in the competition between the two firms; (2) the firm does not employ wrongful means; (3) the firm's action does not create or continue an unlawful restraint of trade; and (4) the firm's purpose is at least in part to advance its interests in competing with the other firm (6 F.3d 1422, 1431) . The court observed that plaintiff and defendant were competitors for the services of bowling center builders and that plaintiff had pointed to no evidence in the record that shows that defendant's sole motive in wedging itself between plaintiff and Timberlake (if it did so at all) was other than to advance its own economic interests (6 F.3d 1422, 1430, 1431) . Furthermore, there was no evidence to suggest that the conditions for the privilege did not exist, since the court had concluded that there was no antitrust violation and hence no unlawful restraint of trade (6 F.3d 1422, 1431 & n.9). The court held, therefore, that defendant's conduct with respect to Timberlake was justified (6 F.3d 1422, 1431) .

The factual and procedural background of Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 867, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 , is discussed in § 122.28[3][e]. In an additional claim, plaintiff contended that the trial court erred in ruling that the "fair competition" privilege was a complete defense to plaintiff's action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. The court of appeal noted that in order to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful and was thus not privileged. Thus, it is not the defendant's burden to prove, as an affirmative defense, that it's conduct was privileged (52 Cal. App. 4th 867, 881) . Since plaintiff neither showed, nor even contended, that defendant engaged in conduct which was wrongful beyond the fact of the interference itself, the trial court did not err in granting defendant's motion for summary adjudication.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness

TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.43

§ 122.43 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Director's, Manager's, and Agent's Privilege

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT WAS PRIVILEGED TO INTERFERE WITH THE CONTRACT BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND _____ [name] BECAUSE DEFENDANT WAS ACTING IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF _____ [name], AS ITS _____ [DIRECTOR and/or MANAGER and/or AGENT], AND THE INTERFERENCE WAS WITHIN DEFENDANT'S DUTY UNDER THE CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP.

A. Managers' Privilege. A _____ [director and/or manager and/or agent] enjoys a qualified privilege to induce his or her _____ [principal and/or employer and/or the entity he or she manages or by which he or she is employed] to breach a contract that he or she reasonably believes to be harmful to the entity's best interests (Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 24-25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 576, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 ; Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890).

[Optional] B. Attorney for Breaching Party. An attorney is privileged to induce the breach of his or her client's contract by lawful means, so long as the inducement is intended to protect the interests of the client and the inducement is within the scope of the duty owed by the attorney to the client under the confidential relationship (Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 576, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 ; Schick v. Lerner (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1321, 1329, 238 Cal. Rptr. 902).

[Optional] C. Predominant Motive Is Sufficient. A manager need not be acting solely in his or her employer's best interests in order to claim the privilege; all that is required is proof that the principal's interest was one of the factors motivating his or her conduct or advice (Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522, 281

Cal. Rptr. 890).

[Optional] D. Privilege Is Absolute When Applied to Termination of At-Will Employee. The manager's privilege is absolute and does not require evidence of the manager's motives when an at-will employee is terminated (Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1396, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's contract with a third party was justified or privileged under the so-called "manager's privilege." Optional Paragraph B is for use when the particular principal-agent relationship involved is the attorney-client relationship. Optional Paragraph C is for use when the defendant may have had other motives, but the principal's best interests were predominant. Optional Paragraph D is for use by a managing agent of an employer to assert that the privilege is absolute when making decisions leading to the termination of an at-will employee.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts showing that defendant's interference was by lawful means and was intended to protect the principal's, client's, or employer's interests. The facts should demonstrate that the interference was predominantly motivated by defendant's belief that he or she was acting in accordance with his or her duties under the relationship existing between defendant and the third party.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in actions involving wrongful termination of employees, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion and forms for use in actions involving wrongful termination of employees, see Ch. 100A, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Managers' Privilege

Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 , was an action by an employee of the California Department of Health Services for wrongful termination, and included a cause of action against several of plaintiff's supervisors and other department staff for wrongful interference with a business relationship and inducement of breach of contract. In affirming the sustaining of demurrers to the interference and inducement cause of action, the Supreme Court said that it is well established that corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of a corporation cannot be held liable for inducing breach of the corporation's contract (52 Cal. 3d 1, 24) . Plaintiff's supervisors were agents of the employer and were vested with the power to act for the employer (rightly or wrongly) in terminating plaintiff's employment. For purposes of this cause of action, these defendants stood in the place of the employer, because the employer (the other party to the contract) could not act except through its agents. Thus, there is no viable "inducement of breach of contract" or "interference with economic advantage" that is distinguishable from a cause of action for breach of contract (52 Cal. 3d 1, 25) .

Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , was, in part, an action against three insurance companies for failure to pay plaintiff benefits allegedly due under fire insurance policies. Plaintiff also brought suit against a claims adjuster and an attorney employed by the insurers, and their respective firms, alleging a conspiracy to induce a breach of plaintiff's insurance contract. Plaintiff alleged that defendants had conspired to imply falsely that plaintiff had a motive to burn down his business in order to avoid paying the amounts due to plaintiff under the insurance policies. The trial court granted defendants' general demurrers.

The court affirmed the demurrers as to the insurance adjusting firm, its employee, the defendants' law firm, and its employee. The court held that as agents and employees of defendant insurers, these defendants could not be held accountable on a theory of conspiracy. Citing Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 50, 72-73, 35 Cal. Rptr. 652 , the court noted that ordinarily corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of the corporation cannot be held liable for inducing a breach of the corporation's contract since being in a confidential relationship to the corporation their action in this respect is privileged (9 Cal. 3d 566, 576) . Although Gruenberg did not explicitly discuss the elements of civil conspiracy [see § 122.26], the opinion makes it clear that the requisite element of wrongful acts committed pursuant to a conspiracy did not exist, because defendants' acts of interference were not wrongful, but lawful and privileged (9 Cal. 3d 566, 576) .

Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507 , was a wrongful termination suit that included a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations. At the time of her dismissal, plaintiff was defendant's catering manager. Plaintiff alleged that the lodge manager was inappropriately influenced to fire plaintiff by a coworker with whom the lodge manager was romantically involved. The coworker did not like plaintiff and wanted the position of catering manager. Evidence established that the lodge manager and the coworker were seen leaving and arriving at work together and that they were rumored to be romantically involved. The trial court excluded evidence that the lodge manager and the coworker travelled to Hawaii together six months after plaintiff was fired. A third candidate, not the coworker, replaced plaintiff as catering manager. The court dismissed the cause of action for intentional interference. On other causes of action, the jury awarded plaintiff $150,000 compensatory damages. The jury was instructed as to when they might award punitive damages, but they did not award any punitive damages. Both parties appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of the cause of action for intentional interference. With respect to that cause of action, plaintiff contended that the evidence of the Hawaiian travel should not have been excluded and that its improper exclusion prejudicially foreclosed her proof of the interference claim. The court recited the elements one must prove to prevail on a cause of action for intentional interference: (1) a valid and existing contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of the contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage (230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522) .

Ownership and control of an entity do not by themselves relieve a defendant from tort liability for interfering with the entities contracts. Rather, the tort liability of an owner, director, or manager depends on whether he or she was acting to protect the interests of the entity. Thus, the owner of an entity enjoys a qualified privilege to terminate a contract to which the entity is a party, provided that the owner's predominant purpose in inducing the breach is to further the entity's interests. A manager likewise enjoys a qualified privilege to induce the entity to breach a contract that he or she reasonably believes to be harmful to the entity's best interests. A manager need not be acting solely in his or her employer's best interests in order to claim the privilege; all that is required is proof that the employer's interest was one of the factors motivating his or her conduct or advice (230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522) .

With regard to the evidence of the Hawaiian travel, the court said it was properly excluded because it in no way supported an inference that the manager acted under the coworker's influence in removing plaintiff from the position of catering manager. That evidence is thus irrelevant to the claim of intentional interference with plaintiff's employment relationship. That the manager may have been a close friend of the coworker and may have travelled to Hawaii with the coworker some six months after plaintiff's termination simply does not add up to interference with plaintiff's employment contract. Plaintiff's argument might have had greater force if the coworker had replaced plaintiff as catering manager, but that was not the case. The court found no evidence in the record that tended to defeat the qualified privilege held by the lodge managers, and affirmed the trial court's dismissal of the cause of action for intentional interference (230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1523) .

[b] Attorney for Breaching Party

Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 , is discussed in § 122.43[4][a].

Schick v. Lerner (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1321 , was an action by a psychotherapy patient against the therapist's attorney. Plaintiff alleged that the attorney had induced the therapist to breach a contractual relationship with plaintiff by advising the therapist to execute a declaration, to be filed in a family law matter, that contained confidential information about plaintiff. In affirming summary judgment for the attorney, the court of appeal said that absent extraordinary circumstances, an attorney may not be held liable for urging a client to breach a contract with a third party. Public policy dictates that attorney's remain free to counsel their clients without fear of subjecting themselves to liability as a result of the proper discharge of their professional obligations. The confidential attorney-client relationship constitutes justification for an attorney's advice to a client to breach a contract with a third party. Clients also must feel free to seek out an attorney's advice on any issue at any time. Any rule to the contrary would constitute a serious impairment to the attorney-client relationship and would have a resulting deleterious effect on the administration of justice (193 Cal. App. 3d 1321, 1329) .

[c] Predominant Motive Is Sufficient

Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507 , is discussed in § 122.43[4][a].

[d] Privilege is Absolute When Applied to Termination of At-Will Employee

In Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 , plaintiff was a terminated employee who brought an action for breach of the employment contract against the employer and an action against his manager for intentional interference with the employment contract. Suit against the manager was based on his actions in inducing the employee's termination following a dispute about whether a bad business decision made by the employee had been approved by the manager. The trial court granted summary judgment for the employer and granted the manager's demurrer. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the judgment. As to the action brought against the employer, the court of appeal agreed that the employment had been at-will pursuant to an explicit written agreement and could not be modified by an implied promise to fire only for good cause. In upholding the granting of the manager's demurrer, the court of appeal agreed with the trial court that the manager's alleged actions in inducing the plaintiff's termination were privileged under the manager's privilege. The court of appeal noted that there were three different formulations of the privilege: (1) an absolute privilege that applies regardless of the manager's motives, (2) a qualified privilege that applies as long as the manager was motivated at least in part by a proper motive, and (3) a qualified privilege that applies as long as the manager's predominant motive was proper (65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1391-1393) . Failing to see a consistent application in the California cases, the court analyzed the privilege in the context of an employer's decision to terminate an at-will employee and decided that, in that context, the privilege was absolute. In reaching this holding, the court noted the uniquely confidential relationship between an employer and management and the need for open communication, and concluded that there was little justification for allowing judicial inquiry into the motives of either when reaching a decision to discharge an at-will employee (65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1394-1396) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Manager's Privilege

The court of appeal in Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat'l Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 , affirmed a judgment in favor of defendants, a bank and its individual directors. Plaintiff's causes of action were for wrongful discharge, age discrimination, conspiracy to interfere with contractual relations, and intentional interference. The wrongful discharge claim and the age discrimination claim were preempted by 12 U.S.C.S. § 24, which gives the directors of a national bank the right to dismiss officers at their pleasure (224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 692) . The interference claims were not preempted (224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 683) . Nevertheless, the court did not find it necessary to discuss whether the "manager's privilege" is absolute or qualified, because uncontradicted evidence showed that the defendants acted not in self-interest, but in the bank's interest, in attempting to reduce the bank's costs through elimination of a highly paid employee and replacement with lower-paid workers (224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 684-686) .

Becket v. Welton Becket & Assocs. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 815, 114 Cal. Rptr. 531 , was an action by an employee of a corporation against the corporation and its officers for interference with contractual relations. Plaintiff alleged that the president and two directors of the corporation conspired together to effect the discharge of plaintiff in retaliation for plaintiff instituting litigation against the corporation and themselves and to coerce plaintiff into dismissing the action. As a result of this alleged conspiracy, the directors authorized the president to discharge plaintiff. Plaintiff alleged that, in discharging him, the president tortiously interfered with the employment contract between plaintiff and the corporation. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal found that the president would be immune from liability for the tort of inducing a breach of contract because of his relationship with the corporation (39 Cal. App. 3d 815, 823) .

The court of appeal in Mallard v. Boring (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 6 Cal. Rptr. 171 , affirmed a judgment entered for defendant after sustaining of a demurrer to plaintiff's first amended complaint and plaintiff's refusal to amend. The complaint in part attempted to state a cause of action against her former employer for damages for wrongful discharge based on plaintiff's alleged arbitrary dismissal. Defendant, the business manager for plaintiff's employer, adopted a rule that tended to control or direct the political activities or affiliation of plaintiff by prohibiting plaintiff from serving as a trial juror [but see Lab. Code § 230(a) (employer now prohibited from discharging or in any manner discriminating against employee for taking time off for service as required by law on any trial jury, if employee gives reasonable notice to employer that he or she is required to serve)]. The court noted the general rule that unlawful inducement to breach a contract is actionable and that the rule applies to a contract that is terminable at will. The inducement must be wrongful and unprivileged. One who is in a confidential relationship with a party to a contract is privileged to induce the breach of that contract, and a servant may induce his or her master to breach a contract with a third person (182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 393) . Plaintiff did not allege that defendant did not have the authority to discharge her; this being the case, defendant could not induce a breach of contract, and if there was a breach, defendant breached the contract for and on behalf of his employer (182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 393-394) .

[b] Predominant Motive is Sufficient

In Huynh v. Vu (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595 , the plaintiff was a real estate broker who sued a seller of commercial property and her husband, who was allegedly acting as the seller's agent, to recover the commission lost by the plaintiff from the transaction. The plaintiff, who asserted a cause of action for intentional interference with contract against the seller's husband, alleged that the husband's actions in delaying the closing on the sale caused the transaction to be closed under a contract with a higher sales price that provided no commission to the plaintiff, rather than under the original sales contract, which would have provided the plaintiff with a substantial commission. At trial, judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff and against the husband, but the trial court had not allowed the husband to argue the manager's privilege. The court of appeal reversed and remanded, holding that the trial court erred in refusing to instruct on this privilege. After reviewing case law on the manager's privilege in various contexts, the court held that if a manager has some personal financial interest in the transaction, so that it is reasonably possible that the manager acted at least in part out of self-interest, a manager's desire to advance his or her personal interests does not vitiate the privilege as long as the manager's predominant motive is advancing the principal's interests (111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1198-1200) . The court also rejected the plaintiff's argument that the manager's privilege is limited to cases in which a manager has allegedly induced a principal that is an entity to breach a contract, concluding instead that the privilege may be asserted even if the principal is a natural person (111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1195) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsDuties & LiabilitiesGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionTortious Interference With Business RelationsTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.44

§ 122.44 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Owner's Privilege

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT WAS JUSTIFIED IN CAUSING _____ [name] NOT TO ENTER A PROSPECTIVE CONTRACTUAL RELATION WITH PLAINTIFF BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAD A FINANCIAL INTEREST IN THE BUSINESS OF _____ [name] AND DEFENDANT DID NOT EMPLOY WRONGFUL MEANS TO PROTECT THAT INTEREST FROM BEING PREJUDICED BY THE RELATION.

Owner's Privilege. One with a financial interest in the business of another is privileged, so long as he or she does not employ improper means but acts merely to protect his or her financial interest or promote the other's welfare, to induce the other not to enter a business relationship with a third party (Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great W. Fin. Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 305, 319, 70 Cal. Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged because he or she had a financial interest in the business of a third party and because defendant did not employ wrongful means to protect defendant's interest from being prejudiced by the relation.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts demonstrating defendant's financial interest in the business of the third party, and that defendant did not employ wrongful or illegal means to protect the defendant's interests from being prejudiced by the prospective relation.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities that can be used to support the contention that an owner of real property enjoys a qualified privilege to protect his or her interest in that property, see §§ 122.42 and 122.50.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Owner's Privilege

Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Great W. Fin. Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 305, 70 Cal. Rptr. 849, 444 P.2d 481 , was an action for interference with prospective business advantage. The complaint contained allegations to the general effect that an escrow company had formed a title company corporation, at the insistence of another title company, to divert business from plaintiffs. The complaint also alleged that a financial holding company had prevailed on two of its corporations to deal only with a title company that purchased all of its title insurance policies from a competitor of the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's order of dismissal entered after it sustained without leave to amend demurrers to plaintiff's fourth amended complaint.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the interference allegations of the complaint were insufficient. The court found that plaintiffs failed to state an action for interference with prospective business advantage, noting that one with a financial interest in the business of another is privileged, so long as he or she does not employ improper means but acts merely to protect his or her financial interest or promote the other's welfare, to induce the other not to enter a business relationship with a third party. Based on the face of the complaint, the court found defendants' conduct was patently justified (69 Cal. 2d 305, 319) . The court remarked that owners of a corporate escrow company are authorized by Ins. Code § 12396 [now see Ins. Code § 12389] to incorporate a separate title company which may then receive from the title insurer with which it does business a portion of the posted premium in exchange for its search and abstract services (69 Cal. 2d 305, 319-320) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

101 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.45

§ 122.45 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Publication or Broadcast During Legislative, Judicial, or Other Official Proceeding [Civ. Code § 47(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [PUBLICATION or BROADCAST] IS ABSOLUTELY PRIVILEGED UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 47(b).

A. Interference Is Absolutely Privileged Publication or Broadcast. A publication or broadcast made by a defendant in any legislative, judicial, or other official proceeding, that interferes with a plaintiff's economic relations with a third party is absolutely privileged by Civil Code Section 47(b) (Rosenthal v. Irell & Manella (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 125-128, 185 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; Asia Inv. Co. v. Borowski (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 832, 841-842, 184 Cal. Rptr. 317).

B. Privilege Extends to Quasi-Judicial Proceedings. The privilege of Civil Code Section 47(b) extends to quasi-judicial as well as judicial proceedings (Ojavan Investors, Inc. v. California Coastal Comm'n (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 516, 528, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged because the interference was accomplished by means of a publication or broadcast absolutely protected under Civ. Code § 47(b). Note, however, that the privilege does not apply to any communication made in furtherance of an act of intentional destruction or alteration of physical evidence undertaken for purpose of depriving a party to litigation of the use of that evidence, whether or not the content of the communication is the subject of a subsequent publication or broadcast that is privileged pursuant to Civ. Code § 47 [

Civ. Code § 47(b)(2)]. The privilege for communications in judicial proceedings is also inapplicable to a communication that knowingly conceals the existence of an insurance policy [Civ. Code § 47(b)(3)].

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] . The immunity from liability offered by Civ. Code § 47(b) is also properly raised by demurrer [see Ojavan Investors, Inc. v. California Coastal Comm'n (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 516, 529, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103 ; Wilton v. Mountain Wood Homeowners Assn., Inc. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 565, 569] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should thus allege facts establishing the context of the communication, demonstrating that the communication was made in the course of a legislative, judicial, or other official proceeding.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the application of Civ. Code § 47(b) in defamation actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to the application of Civ. Code § 47(b) in defamation actions, see Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 122.54 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Absolutely Privileged Publication or Broadcast

Rosenthal v. Irell & Manella (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 185 Cal. Rptr. 92 , was an action by an attorney for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. One of the attorney's former clients had obtained a judgment against him in a prior action for negligence. Pending appeal of this judgment, the former client's attorneys in the negligence action (defendants) entered into discussions with five of the plaintiff's insurance carriers. These discussions culminated in a settlement whereby the judgment against the attorney would be satisfied. Following the settlement, plaintiff's counsel, who had been furnished by the insurers, withdrew from the case. Plaintiff's complaint alleged that his former client's new lawyers induced his insurance carriers to breach their contract with him by settling his financial liability and withdrawing from their representation of him in the appeal without his consent. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and the dismissed the action.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court found that Civ. Code § 47 would bar plaintiff's action against the lawyer defendants. The privilege created by Civ. Code § 47, the court explained, is part of the statutory law dealing with defamation; however, the privilege has evolved through case law application into a rather broad protective device which attaches to various classes of persons and applies to types of publications and in types of actions not traditionally identified with the field of defamation. The court indicated that the privilege has been applied to defeat tort actions based on publications in protected proceedings but grounded on different theories of liability, such as inducing breach of contracts and interference with prospective economic advantage (135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 125) . The court also pointed out that the privilege has been applied to publications which were private communications between parties and which communications were related not only to actual but potential court actions (135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 126) . Rejecting plaintiff's suggestion that the privilege applies only to false statements of fact, the court found that the privilege applies to an injurious publication (rather than falsehood) of whatever nature, in a protected proceeding (135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 127-128) . Concluding that defendants' publications were privileged under Civ. Code § 47, the court found that the privilege defeated plaintiff's action against defendants (135 Cal. App. 3d 121, 128) .

In Asia Inv. Co. v. Borowski (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 832, 184 Cal. Rptr. 317 , plaintiff alleged that defendants' filing of a California Environmental Quality Act action against it with respect to its proposed real estate development interfered with city approval of the development, and constituted intentional interference with prospective business advantage. The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment and denied plaintiff's motion to amend its complaint. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court found that defendants' allegedly tortious conduct was privileged under former Civ. Code § 47(2) [now see Civ. Code § 47(b)]. Citing Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 375, 381, 295 P.2d 405 , the court noted that the filing of a complaint or petition is in itself a publication which is privileged because it is required by law to initiate the judicial proceeding. Such a conclusion is mandated, said the court, by the policy behind Civ. Code § 47 which is to afford litigants the utmost freedom of access to the courts to secure their rights and defend themselves without fear of being harassed by retaliatory lawsuits (133 Cal. App. 3d 832, 841) . The court remarked that although the application of the privilege usually arises in the context of a defamation action, it has been applied to other allegedly tortious conduct such as intentional interference with prospective business advantage (133 Cal. App. 3d 832, 841-842). According to the court, the facts stated in plaintiff's proposed amended complaint revealed that the only tortious conduct alleged was the filing of a petition for a writ of mandate; this conduct was privileged pursuant to former Civ. Code § 47(2). The court concluded that no cause of action for intentional interference with prospective advantage could be stated on the facts (133 Cal. App. 3d 832, 842).

[b] Privilege Extends to Quasi-Judicial Proceedings

In Ojavan Investors, Inc. v. California Coastal Comm'n (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 516, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103 , real estate developers filed a complaint against the California Coastal Commission alleging among other things intentional interference with prospective economic advantage stemming from the Commission's issuance of a cease-and-desist order prohibiting the developers from attempting to convey property in violation of a declarations of restrictions which the Commission required to be recorded prior to issuance of development permits. The trial court sustained the Commission's demurrers to plaintiff's complaint on the ground that the cease and desist order was a privileged publication under Civ. Code § 47 which constituted a defense to the interference cause of action.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court began by stating that Civ. Code § 47(b) provides that a privileged publication or broadcast is one made in any judicial proceeding, or in any other official proceeding authorized by law. It then cited Lebbos v. State Bar (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 656, 667, 211 Cal. Rptr. 847 for the proposition that the immunity from liability afforded by a privileged communication applies to actions for defamation as well as to bar other tort actions based on publications in protected proceedings, including a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage. Lastly, the court found that this privilege extended to quasi-judicial as well as judicial proceedings, and that the California Coastal Commission's hearings in this case were quasi-judicial (26 Cal. App. 4th 516, 528) . Accordingly, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court that the interference action was barred by Civ. Code § 47(b) (26 Cal. App. 4th 516, 529) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference Is Absolutely Privileged Publication or Broadcast

In Caesar Elecs. Inc. v. Andrews (9th Cir. 1990) 905 F.2d 287 , a federal diversity case that did not involve any cause of action for interference, the false information given by a manufacturer to a purchaser in the course of the manufacturer's participation in a government investigation involving violation of export laws was held privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b), and thus rescission or recovery of damages for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty was barred (905 F.2d 287, 289-290) .

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 is discussed in § 122.41[3][a]. The Supreme Court's reasoning included consideration of the public policy to allow free access to the courts to provide for peaceful, judicial resolution of differences, as evidenced by the privilege for statements in the course of or related to judicial proceedings (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1131-1133) .

The court of appeal in Kupiec v. American Int'l Adjustment Co. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1326, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 371 , affirmed a judgment for defendants, an insurer and its adjuster, whose counsel and employees had misrepresented and concealed information from plaintiff regarding the whereabouts of her artwork during her action against the insured. Defendants also had instructed the insured to falsely deny knowledge of the whereabouts of the painting. The court of appeal said the privilege only applies to communications, not to tortious courses of conduct. The purpose of the privilege is to afford litigants freedom of access to the courts and open channels of communication by absolutely protecting them from derivative litigation based on communicative acts during judicial proceedings (235 Cal. App. 3d 1326, 1331) . While the communications complained of might be ethically unacceptable, the interference claims were derivative causes of action based on communicative acts done in a judicial proceeding by litigants, to achieve the objects of litigation, and had a logical relation to the action (235 Cal. App. 3d 1326, 1331-1332) . All the acts complained of were communicative in nature; there was no allegation of physical destruction of evidence. Defendants merely carried out a plan to delay the prior lawsuit and to avoid liability, and their communicative conduct was therefore within the privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b)(2) (235 Cal. App. 3d 1326, 1333) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefenses

102 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.46

§ 122.46 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Prevention of Illegal Public Fund Expenditure [U.S. Const. Amends. I, XIV; Cal. Const. art. I, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. § 526a]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] IS JUSTIFIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S INTERFERING CONDUCT IS PROTECTED BY PUBLIC POLICY EXPRESSED IN CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 526a, CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION, ARTICLE I, SECTION 10, AND THE FIRST AND FOURTEENTH AMENDMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Prevent Illegal Public Fund Expenditure. Interference with contractual relations is justifiable when, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 526a, California Constitution, Article I, Section 10, and to the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution, a person seeks to prevent an illegal expenditure of public funds (Bledsoe v. Watson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 105, 108-110, 106 Cal. Rptr. 197).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged because the interference was made in an attempt to prevent an illegal expenditure of public funds.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts demonstrating that the purpose of defendant's interference was to prevent the illegal expenditure of public funds.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 526a, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 466, Public Entities and Officers: Taxpayers' Actions , and Ch. 469, Public Entities and Officers: Conflicts of Interest (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Prevent Illegal Public Fund Expenditure

In Bledsoe v. Watson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 105, 106 Cal. Rptr. 197 , plaintiff attorney filed an action for interference with contractual relations. Plaintiff alleged that he entered into a written contract for legal services with the City of Seal Beach to investigate irregularities in certain recall petitions and represent the city and individual members of the city council in a mandate proceeding brought by others to compel the city to hold an election to recall members of the city council. The complaint charged that defendant, acting as attorney for the other defendants, by written fraudulent representations of law, maliciously persuaded the city treasurer to repudiate the contract and refuse to disburse city funds to plaintiff. The trial court sustained defendants' general demurrer to the complaint and dismissed the action, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of dismissal. The court noted the general rule that interference with contractual relations is justifiable when a person seeks to protect an interest of greater social value than that attached to the stability of the con tract involved. The court found that Califonia's public policy was made explicit by statute. Code Civ. Proc. § 526a provides that an action to obtain a judgment, restraining and preventing any illegal expenditure of funds of a county or city may be maintained against any officer thereof, either by a citizen resident therein, or by a corporation who has paid a tax therein (30 Cal. App. 3d 105, 108) . The purpose of this section, according to the court, is to enable a citizen-resident taxpayer to question public expenditures of local governments that might otherwise pass unchallenged. The court found that since defendants were specifically authorized to initiate a lawsuit to prevent an alleged illegal expenditure of funds by the city treasurer, their less drastic act in writing the treasurer to persuade him not to make an illegal expenditure of funds was likewise justified, since the social interest attached to both acts is identical. The court concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 526a provided a complete defense to the action on the face of the complaint (30 Cal. App. 3d 105, 109) . The court also found that even if defendants' conduct was not privileged under Code Civ. Proc. § 526a, the conduct would be justifiable under the general right of a citizen to protest a public expenditure by petition and instruction. This right is found in both the state and federal constitutions, in Cal. Const. art. I, § 10, and U.S. Const. Amends. I and XIV, respectively. The court noted that the citizen-resident taxpayer who prevents an illegal expenditure of public funds not only safeguards his or her private interest in the amount of taxes he or she pays, but upholds the general public interest in the fiscal integrity of his or her local government. Correspondence with the public officer responsible for the disbursement of the funds under question appeared to court an appropriate means of petition and instruction. In the court's view, protection of the means appropriate to prevent an illegal expenditre of public funds and to achieve fiscal integrity in local government would carry a greater social value than protection from challenge of plaintiff's employment contract with the city and its council members (30 Cal. App. 3d 105, 109) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness

TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceContractsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.47

§ 122.47 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Politically Motivated Boycott [U.S. Const. Amend. I]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONS WITH _____ [name] IS PRIVILEGED BECAUSE IT CONSTITUTES POLITICALLY MOTIVATED CONDUCT THAT IS PROTECTED UNDER THE FIRST AMENDMENT OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

Interference Is Privileged as Politically Motivated Boycott. The First Amendment of the United States Constitution places outer limits on the category of conduct that may be subject to liability on the basis of tortious interference; a politically motivated secondary boycott, regardless of its objective, is constitutionally protected (Environmental Planning & Info. Council v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 188, 195-197, 203 Cal. Rptr. 127, 680 P.2d 1086).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged as a politically motivated boycott.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts demonstrating that defendant's interference was committed in the context of an politically motivated economic boycott.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Politically Motivated Boycott

In Environmental Planning & Info. Council v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 188, 203 Cal. Rptr. 127, 680 P.2d 1086 , plaintiff newspaper publisher brought an action against an environmental group and several of the group's officers for intentional interference with economic advantage. Plaintiff alleged in its complaint that defendants published a newsletter criticizing the editorial policies of plaintiff's newspaper, and calling on readers of the newsletter not to patronize businesses that advertised in the newspaper. Defendants moved for summary judgment with supporting affadivits, and when their motion was denied, filed a petition in mandate to compel reversal of the trial court's order of denial.

The Supreme Court determined that, because there was no triable issue of material fact, defendants were entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law 36 Cal. 3d 188, 190) . The Court noted that the very nature of the activities complained of would invite constitutional analysis. In a case such as this one, the Court stated, constitutional principles impose outer limits on the category of conduct that may be subject to liability on the basis of common law doctrine, and thus serve to shape the doctrine itself (36 Cal. 3d 188, 195) . The Court pointed to NAACP v. Claiborne Hardware Co. (1982) 458 U.S. 886, 914, 102 S. Ct. 3409 , a case involving a boycott by black citizens against white merchants which was intended to pressure white elected officials to accede to the citizens' demands for racial equality and integration. In Claiborne, the United States Supreme Court held that the right of the states to regulate economic activity could not justify a complete prohibition against a nonviolent, politically motivated boycott designed to force governmental and economic change and to effectuate rights guaranteed by the federal constitution. The Supreme Court in Claiborne drew a crucial distinction between solely economic boycott activity and political boycotts. The Court found that the distinction set forth in Claiborne was present in this case (36 Cal. 3d 188, 195-196) . Plaintiff contended that Claiborne was distinguishable because the objective sought by the boycott in that case was the vindication of Fourteenth Amendment rights of freedom and equality. Plaintiff said that, in contrast, defendants merely sought to further their private views on environmental matters. The Court disagreed with this distinction, noting that it was precluded by the First Amendment from gauging the degree of constitutional protection by the content or subject matter of the speech (36 Cal. 3d 188, 195-196) . Plaintiff also sought to distinguish Claiborne on the ground that the boycott in the case at hand was directed at changing the editorial policies of a newspaper. Disagreeing, the Court noted that the boycott in Claiborne sought to influence political expression and behavior by public citizens and that consequently Claiborne was not distinguishable. The Court found that the newspaper was not in a position to claim infringement of its own constitutional rights by defendants' conduct, since no governmental action was implicated, and the degree of economic coercion that existed may have been no greater than that which might have been lawfully exerted by an advertiser who, on his or her own, sought to influence editorial policy by withdrawing or threatening to withdraw its patronage (36 Cal. 3d 188, 197) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.48

§ 122.48 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Right of Free Speech or Press Limits Liability for Allegedly False Statements [U.S. Const. Amend. I; Cal. Const. art. 1, § 2]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT CANNOT BE HELD LIABLE FOR INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONS BASED ON ALLEGEDLY FALSE STATEMENTS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT SATISFIED THE REQUIREMENTS FOR IMPOSITION OF SUCH LIABILITY IMPOSED BY THE GUARANTEES OF FREE _____ [SPEECH and/or PRESS] UNDER THE FIRST AMENDMENT OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

A. First Amendment Protections Apply to Interference Claim Based on Alleged Injurious Falsehood. First Amendment limitations are applicable to claims for intentional or negligent interference with economic relations in which the gravamen is an allegedly injurious falsehood (Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1045-1048, 232 Cal. Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 ; Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 696, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547).

[Optional] B. Statement Must Be False and Defamatory. Because of First Amendment concerns, an allegedly false statement cannot be the basis of an action for intentional interference with economic relations unless it is defamatory (Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 696, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant is not liable for interference with plaintiff's economic relations when the interference consists of allegedly false statements and plaintiff has not satisfied the First Amendment requirements for imposition of liability for injurious falsehoods. Counsel should add points and authorities pertaining to the specific First Amendment requirements that are relevant to the particular case. For examples of such points and authorities, see Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).

Optional Paragraph B should be used if defendant contends that the allegedly false statements were not defamatory and were therefore constitutionally protected. In that case, counsel may wish to add points and authorities supporting the contention that the statements were not defamatory, such as those contained in Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should refer to facts demonstrating that defendant's interference was committed in the exercise of free speech or press rights. Counsel should describe the context of the speech. If the plaintiff contends that the interference was defamatory, and thus not within constitutional protection, counsel should also set forth facts demonstrating that the speech was not defamatory.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to defamation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to defamation actions and constitutional limitations on such actions, see Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Amendment Protections Apply to Interference Claim Based on Alleged Injurious Falsehood

In Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1033, 232 Cal. Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 , plaintiff author brought an action against defendant newspaper publisher for intentional and negligent interference with noncontractual economic relations. Plaintiff alleged that defendant failed to include plaintiff's novel on its best-seller list, and that defendant falsely represented that the list was based on actual sales. Plaintiff also alleged that by failing to include the book on its list, defendant falsely represented that the novel did not meet its stated criteria for inclusion. By these alleged misrepresentations, plaintiff alleged that defendant adversely affected the volume of sales of the hardback edition and consequently the value of the paperback and film rights, thereby subjecting plaintiff to injury. Defendant demurred on the ground that plaintiff's complaint was barred by U.S. Const. Amend. I, and by Cal. Const. art. I, § 2. The trial court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend and dismissed the action. The court of appeal reversed the dismissal as to the intentional interference action, stating that the facts alleged were legally sufficient to support plaintiff's claim, but affirmed as to the dismissal on the negligent interference claim. Plaintiff and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed as to the intentional interference claim and affirmed as to the negligent interference claim. The Court noted that in order to advance society's interest in free and open discussion on matters of public concern and to avoid undue self-censorship by the press, the First Amendment establishes a broad zone of protection within which the press may publish without fear of incurring liability on the basis of injurious falsehood. The California Constitution, added the Court, independently establishes an even broader zone of protection (42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1041) . The Court noted that although the constitutional limitations defining the zone of protection for the press were established in defamation actions, they are not peculiar to such actions, but apply to all claims whose gravamen is the alleged injurious falsehood of a statement, including actions for interference (42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1042, 1045) . One constitutional limitation, applicable in actions based on injurious falsehood, is that the statement on which the claim is based must specifically refer to, or be of and concerning the plaintiff in some way (42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1042) . Here, the Court found the requirement lacking, since the list did not expressly refer to the author or his novel and the list could not be reasonably understood to refer to the author or his novel by implication (42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1046) . The court concluded that plaintiff's interference actions were barred on First Amendment grounds (42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1045, 1048) .

In Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 , defendant had published a commentary in its newsletter in which it criticized plaintiff's newspaper advertisements for its mutual funds. The commentary stated that the advertisements, although not containing any untrue statements, had manipulated financial ratings to make it appear that plaintiff's mutual funds were more successful than they really were, relative to other mutual funds. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant for libel and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage based on the statements in the commentary. Although not challenging the truth of the commentary itself, plaintiff alleged that the title of the commentary ("Lies, Damned Lies, and Fund Advertisements") implied that the plaintiff had lied in its advertisements and that the commentary itself had disparaged the performance of plaintiff's funds and questioned the validity of the rankings relied on in the advertisements. The trial court overruled defendant's demurrer to the complaint, and defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate. The court of appeal initially denied the writ summarily, but the Supreme Court granted review and directed the court of appeal to grant an alternative writ to be heard before the court of appeal. The court of appeal then granted a peremptory writ directing the trial court to sustain the demurrer without leave to amend.

The court of appeal first held that neither the title to the commentary nor the statements in the commentary could be held libelous under constitutional standards. The title was merely "loose, figurative, or hyperbolic" speech (a wordplay on a famous quote by Mark Twain that did not necessarily imply that plaintiff was actually lying) that was protected by the First Amendment (23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 690-691) . Furthermore, because the commentary itself did not actually accuse plaintiff of making false statements, it could not lend a defamatory meaning to the title (23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 692) . Moreover, the disparaging statements made in the commentary itself were not alleged to be false and therefore could not be the basis for a defamation action (23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 694-695) .

The court noted that the plaintiff's cause of action for intentional interference for prospective economic advantage was based on the same publication as the libel cause of action (23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 695) . Relying on Blatty, the court stated that because plaintiff's intentional interference claim has as its gravamen the alleged injurious falsehood of a statement, First Amendment doctrines apply. The court observed that it is important to an informed consumer public that those expert in analyzing products, and the advertising claims made in behalf of those products, publish their analyses and opinions. The court held that unless those analyses or opinions are defamatory, the fact that they may be critical of a product or an advertisement and thus harm the producer economically cannot be the basis of a cause of action for intentional infliction of economic injury. Since the court had concluded that plaintiff's libel cause of action failed to satisfy First Amendment standards, the demurrer to the intentional interference cause of action should also have been sustained (23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 696) .

[b] Statement Must Be False and Defamatory

Morningstar, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 676, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 , is discussed in § 122.48[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statement Must Be False and Defamatory

In Savage v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305 , plaintiff had sued defendant utility company for libel, slander, and intentional interference with contract and prospective economic advantage based in part on statements made by defendant's officials to plaintiff's employer, a newspaper that reported on the energy industry, which ultimately caused the employer to terminate plaintiff's employment. The statements, which pertained to plaintiff's previous volunteer work for an environmental organization, implied that plaintiff had a conflict of interest that would compromise her objectivity as a reporter and consisted of records of plaintiff's previous appearance in a Public Utilities Commission proceeding on behalf of the organization and an account of a conversation concerning plaintiff allegedly held between one of defendant's officials and a representative of the organization, the truth of which was disputed by plaintiff. In reversing a summary judgment for defendant on the causes of action for intentional interference with economic relations, the court of appeal observed that in connection with such causes of action, the courts have recognized a rule directly analogous to the defense of truth in causes of action for defamation: a person cannot incur liability for interfering with contractual or economic relations by giving truthful information to a third party (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 449-450) . In the case before it, the court concluded that there was a triable issue of fact concerning the interference causes of action. While defendant could not be liable for conveying to plaintiff's employer truthful copies of government documents or an accurate account of its official's conversation with the environmental organization's representative, defendant could be held liable on a finding that it had defamed plaintiff by conveying a false account of that conversation (21 Cal. App. 4th 434, 450) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of SpeechGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsIntentional TortsDefamationDefensesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.49

§ 122.49 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Interference Is Protected by Statute or Constitution--Petitioning Government for Redress of Grievance (Noerr-Pennington Doctrine)

[1] FORM

[The following may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR INTERFERENCE WITH ECONOMIC RELATIONS IS BARRED BY THE NOERR-PENNINGTON DOCTRINE BECAUSE THE ALLEGED ACTS OF INTERFERENCE CONSIST OF _____ [specify nature of privileged activity, e.g., DEFENDANT'S EFFORTS TO PERSUADE THE LEGISLATURE TO ENACT LEGISLATION THAT DEFENDANT SUPPORTS], AND SUCH CONDUCT IS PROTECTED BY THE FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHT TO PETITION THE GOVERNMENT FOR REDRESS OF GRIEVANCES.

A. Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Doctrine. The Noerr-Pennington doctrine provides that there is no antitrust liability under the Sherman Act for efforts to influence government that are protected by the First Amendment right to petition for redress of grievances, even when the motive behind such actions is anticompetitive (Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 56-58, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1133, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 574, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646).

B. Application of Noerr-Pennington Doctrine to Tort Actions for Interference. Although the Noerr-Pennington doctrine originated in the context of federal antitrust litigation, courts have also applied the doctrine to actions for intentional interference with economic relations under California law. Thus, the scope of interference claims is limited by the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances (Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1133-1137, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 577-578, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 ; see Matossian v. Fahmie (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 138-139, 161 Cal. Rptr. 532 ; Sierra Club v. Butz (N.D. Cal. 1972) 349 F. Supp. 934, 937-938) .

C. Types of Proceedings to Which Doctrine Applies. The Noerr-Pennington doctrine applies to judicial and administrative, as well as legislative, proceedings (California Transp. v. Trucking Unlimited (1972) 404 U.S. 508, 510-511, 92 S. Ct. 609, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642 ; see Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 56-58, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611).

[Optional] D. Litigation Protected by Doctrine Unless Objectively Baseless. Litigation will not be deemed a "sham," so as to lose its protection under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, unless the lawsuit is so objectively baseless that no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits. If an objective litigant could reasonably conclude that the suit is reasonably calculated to elicit a favorable outcome, then the suit is immunized under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, regardless of the defendant's subjective intent in bringing the suit (Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 56-58, 60-61, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's contention that its alleged interference with plaintiff's economic relationship was protected by the constitutional right to petition the government for redress of grievances and that liability is therefore barred by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.

Optional Paragraph D should be used when the alleged interference consisted of litigation that the defendant contends was a "sham" and therefore not protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine. For points and authorities supporting application of the "sham" exception, see § 122.55.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, to the extent that the alleged acts of interference consist of lobbying activities, participation in administrative proceedings, or the commencement of litigation, counsel should argue that such activities are protected by the right to petition for redress of grievances and therefore cannot be the basis for a tort action for interference. Counsel may also wish to combine these points and authorities with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue arises.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set forth in § 122.55 may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, including the application of the Noerr-Pennington doctrine to such actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Unfair Competition, (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conduct Protected by Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

In Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 , the operators of a resort hotel (PRE) had installed videodisc players in the hotel's guest rooms and assembled a library of over 200 motion pictures on videodisc. PRE rented videodiscs from its library to guests for in-room viewing. PRE had also sought to develop a market for the sale of videodisc rental systems to other hotels. A group of motion picture studios that held the copyrights to the motion pictures recorded on the videodiscs sued PRE for copyright infringement. PRE counterclaimed against the plaintiffs, alleging antitrust violations under the Sherman Act. The parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment on the copyright claims. The district court granted summary judgment to PRE on the ground that the rental of the videodiscs did not constitute a "public performance" of the copyrighted material, and the Ninth Circuit affirmed. On remand, the plaintiffs sought summary judgment on the antitrust counterclaim, arguing that the copyright infringement action was no sham and therefore was entitled to protection under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine. The district court granted summary judgment, and the Ninth Circuit affirmed. PRE petitioned the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari.

On certiorari, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court observed that those who petition the government for redress are generally immune from antitrust liabililty. The Court noted that it had first recognized in Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. (1961) 365 U.S. 127, 136-137, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 , that the Sherman Act does not prohibit persons from associating together in an attempt to persuade the legislature or the executive to take particular action with respect to a law that would produce a restraint or a monopoly, reasoning that the Sherman Act does not punish political activity through which the people freely inform the government of their wishes, nor does it invade the First Amendment right to petition (508 U.S. 49, 56-57) . The Court further observed that the Noerr decision rejected the contention that an attempt to influence the passage and enforcement of laws might lose immunity merely because the lobbyists' sole purpose was to destroy their competitors. As restated in United Mine Workers v. Pennington (1965) 381 U.S. 657, 657-660, 85 S. Ct. 1585, 14 L. Ed. 2d 626 , the doctrine shields from the Sherman Act a concerted effort to influence public officials, regardless of intent or purpose (508 U.S. 49, 58) . The Court also noted that its previous decisions had extended the Noerr-Pennington doctrine to citizens' attempts to get redress from administrative agencies and from the courts (508 U.S. 49, 56-57) . The Court concluded that the plaintiffs' copyright infringement claim was not a sham and was therefore protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine from antitrust liability (508 U.S. 49, 60-66) .

The factual and procedural background of Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 , is discussed in § 122.41[3][a]. The California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff seeking to state a cause of action for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because the defendant induced another to undertake litigation must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and was terminated in the plaintiff's favor (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1137) . The Court based its holding in part on the concern that to permit plaintiff to bring such an action without showing lack of probable cause and favorable termination would impair free access to the courts. The Court noted that this concern has led other courts to establish that the scope of interference torts is limited by the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances. The Court observed that, beginning with Sierra Club v. Butz (N.D. Cal. 1972) 349 F. Supp. 934 [see § 122.49[3][b]], courts have applied the Noerr-Pennington doctrine to shield good-faith litigants from tort liability for bringing a lawsuit. The Court explained that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine relies on the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances to establish that there is no antitrust liability for petitioning any branch of government, even if the motive is anticompetitive (50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1133) .

Plaintiffs in Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , sued defendants for intentional interference with economic relations and related torts, based on false and groundless statements allegedly made by the defendants to the public and to public officials for the purpose of interfering with plaintiffs' plans to build a metal shredding plant that would compete with defendants' planned facility. The defendants' alleged plan was to delay plaintiffs from entering into the automobile body shredding business and to disrupt plaintiffs' business by saddling them with onerous regulatory and administrative costs and burdens. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the plaintiffs' claims were barred by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.

On appeal, the court of appeal observed that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine provides that there is no antitrust liability under the Sherman Act for efforts to influence the government that are protected by the First Amendment right to petition for redress of grievances, even if the motive behind the efforts is anticompetitive (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 574) . After tracing the development of the doctrine in decisions by the United States Supreme Court, the court of appeal observed that while the doctrine was formulated in the context of antitrust cases, it has been applied or discussed in cases involving other types of civil liability, including liability for interference with contractual relations or prospective economic advantage (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 577-578) . The court noted that the principle of law that bars litigation from injuries received as a consequence of First Amendment petitioning activity should be applied regardless of the underlying cause of action asserted by the plaintiffs; to hold otherwise would effectively chill the exercise of defendants' First Amendment rights (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 578) . However, the court concluded that plaintiffs had stated a cause of action under the "sham" exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine and therefore reversed the judgment for defendants (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 578-583) .

[b] Application of Noerr-Pennington Doctrine to Tort Actions for Interference

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][a].

Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][a].

In Matossian v. Fahmie (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 161 Cal. Rptr. 532 , plaintiffs, who held a license to sell alcoholic beverages, sought to transfer their license to a new location. Defendants, who also held alcoholic beverage licenses for competing establishments, unsuccessfully protested the plaintiffs' license transfer to the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control. After the protests were denied and the transfer was granted, plaintiffs sued defendants for "tortious interference with a business," malicious prosecution, antitrust violations, and other causes of action, alleging that defendants had filed meritless protests for the purpose of destroying competition. After sustaining defendant's demurrer on the tort claims and entering summary judgment on the antitrust claim, the trial court dismissed the action.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court observed that the right of petition to government agencies has a paramount place in our democratic system and is included in both the state and federal constitutions (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 135) . The court noted that the right is not confined to religious or political matters, but also extends to persons who petition the government for resolution of their business and economic interests vis-a-vis their competitors (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 136) . The court further noted that the right of the people to petition government does not depend on motivation or purpose. The defendants' motive, even if malicious, is unimportant if legal ground existed on which to predicate their appeal and protest (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 136-137) . Nor does the right of petition or protest to a governmental agency depend on a successful outcome. The court concluded based on these considerations that when, as here, a statute expressly invites or allows interested persons to protest, or give their view or opinions concerning, proposed or requested governmental administrative action, such persons singly or in combination have a lawful right to do so. In such cases, the law will not permit judicial inquiry into the person' purpose or motivation. Furthermore, such a right may not be defeated, abridged, or "chilled" by the threat or fear of civil action for exercising it (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 137) . The court therefore held that the trial court did not err in sustaining defendants' demurrer to the causes of action for malicious prosecution and tortious interference with a business. With respect to the state antitrust claim, the court regarded Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. (1961) 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 , as dispositive and noted that under Noerr, joint efforts to influence public officials do not violate the antitrust laws even though intended to eliminate competition (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 138-139) . The court therefore concluded that the trial court properly entered the order granting summary judgment as to the antitrust count (101 Cal. App. 3d 128, 139) .

In Sierra Club v. Butz (N.D. Cal. 1972) 349 F. Supp. 934 , the plaintiffs, an environmental group and others, sought to enjoin a lumber company from logging in an area under consideration for wilderness area status. The defendant company brought a counterclaim against plaintiffs for intentional interference with "advantageous relationship," alleging that by their complaint and by other actions, the plaintiffs sought to induce the United States government to breach its agreement with the company, under which the company was permitted to log in the proposed wilderness area. Plaintiffs moved to dismiss the counterclaim for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted, and the district court granted the motion.

The court noted that the basis of plaintiffs' defense against the counterclaim was the First Amendment provision guaranteeing the right of the people to petition the government for redress of grievances, which is a basic freedom in a participatory government, closely related to freedom of speech and press. The court noted that, prior to that time, the United States Supreme Court had never had occasion to decide what effect the right to petition the government had on common-law tort actions that might be brought against those who damage the interests of others in the exercise of that right. However, the court opined that the Supreme Court had outlined applicable principles in its decisions dealing with the relationship between the First Amendment and defamation and in its decisions interpreting the Sherman Act as inapplicable to those who conspire to bring about governmental action (349 F. Supp. 934, 936) . After discussing the Supreme Court's decision in Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. (1961) 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 , the court concluded that when a suit based on interference with advantageous relationship is brought against a party whose "interference" consisted of petitioning a governmental body to alter its previous policy, a privilege is created by the guarantee of the First Amendment. The court held that, for the reasons given by the Supreme Court in Noerr, all persons, regardless of motive, are guaranteed by the First Amendment the right to seek to influence the government or its officials to adopt a new policy and that they cannot be required to compensate another for loss occasioned by a change in policy should they succeed (349 F. Supp. 934, 938) . The court further held that the "malice standard" applicable to defamation actions (imposing liability if the speaker knew his or her statements were false or acted with reckless disregard for the truth) is not the proper standard for imposing liability on persons who seek redress of grievance. Instead, the court held, the applicable standard is that set forth in Noerr--namely, that liability can be imposed for activities ostensibly consisting of petitioning the government for redress of grievances only if the petitioning is a "sham" and the real purpose is not to obtain governmental action, but to otherwise injure the plaintiff (349 F. Supp. 934, 938-939) . Applying these standards to the defendant's counterclaim, the court concluded that it must be dismissed, noting that it alleged nothing more than that the plaintiffs intentionally exercised their right to petition the government (349 F. Supp. 934, 939) .

[c] Types of Proceedings to Which Doctrine Applies

In California Transp. v. Trucking Unlimited (1972) 404 U.S. 508, 92 S. Ct. 609, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642 , the plaintiffs, who were truck carriers, sued other truck carriers for federal antitrust violations consisting of an alleged conspiracy to monopolize trade in commerce in the transportation of goods. Plaintiffs alleged concerted action by the defendants to institute state and federal administrative and judicial proceedings to resist and defeat applications by the plaintiffs to acquire operating rights or to transfer or register those rights. The district court dismissed the complaint for failure to state a cause of action, but the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed.

On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court noted that this case was "akin" to Eastern R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. (1961) 365 U.S. 127, 81 S. Ct. 523, 5 L. Ed. 2d 464 , in which a group of trucking companies had sued a group of railroads to restrain them from an alleged conspiracy to monopolize the long-distance freight business (404 U.S. 508, 509-510) . The Court noted that in Noerr it had held that the no cause of action was alleged insofar as it was predicated on mere attempts to influence the legislative branch for the passage of laws or the executive branch for their enforcement. The Court noted that the holding in Noerr was based on the lack of a perceived intent by Congress to apply the Sherman Act to "political activity" or to restrain activity protected by the constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances. The Court held that the same philosophy governs the approach of citizens or groups of citizens to administrative agencies and to the courts. The Court reasoned that the right to petition extends to all departments of the government and that the right of access to the courts is but one aspect of the right of petition (404 U.S. 508, 510) . The Court concluded that it would be destructive of rights of association and of petition to hold that groups with common interests may not, without violating antitrust laws, use the channels and procedures of state and federal agencies and courts to advocate their causes and points of view respecting resolution of their business and economic interests vis-a-vis their competitors (404 U.S. 508, 510-511) . The Court concluded, however, that the complaint in this action involved specific allegations that potentially came within the "sham" exception to the Noerr rule, as adapted to the adjudicatory process. Therefore, the Court affirmed the Court of Appeals decision and remanded the case for trial (404 U.S. 508, 511-516) .

Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][a].

[d] Litigation Protected by Doctrine Unless Objectively Baseless

The factual and procedural background of Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][a]. The Court noted that, under its previous decisions, antitrust immunity under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine was withheld from "sham" activities, but that those decisions had not addressed the question of whether litigation may be a sham merely because a subjective expectation of success does not motivate the litigant. The Court answered this question in the negative, holding that an objectively reasonable effort to litigate cannot be a sham, regardless of subjective intent (508 U.S. 49, 56) . The Court noted its original formulation of the antitrust petitioning immunity in Noerr required that unprotected activity lack objective reasonableness; that is, Noerr rejected the contention that an attempt to influence the passage and enforcement of laws might lose immunity merely because the lobbyists' sole purpose was to destroy competitors (508 U.S. 49, 57) . The Court interpreted its subsequent decisions as also assuming that the sham exception contains an indispensable objective component (508 U.S. 49, 57-58) .

The Court then set forth a two-part definition of "sham" litigation: First, the lawsuit must be objectively baseless in the sense that no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits. If an objective litigant could conclude that the suit is reasonably calculated to elicit a favorable outcome, then the suit is immunized under Noerr, and an antitrust claim premised on the sham exception must fail. Only if the challenged litigation is objectively meritless may a court examine the litigant's subjective motivation. Under this second part of the definition, the court must focus on whether the baseless lawsuit conceals an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor through the use of the governmental process (as opposed to the outcome of that process) as an anticompetitive weapon (508 U.S. 49, 60-61) . The Court further observed that the existence of probable cause to institute legal proceedings precludes a finding that an antitrust defendant has engaged in sham litigation, since a probable cause determination demonstrates that the antitrust defendant could realistically expect success on the merits of the challenged lawsuit (508 U.S. 49, 62) . Applying these tests to the underlying copyright infringement claim, the Court concluded that any reasonable copyright owner in the plaintiff's position could have believed that it had some chance of winning an infringement suit against PRE. Even though its copyright claim did not survive summary judgment, the action was arguably warranted by existing law or at the very least based on an objectively good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law. Accordingly, the Court held that PRE failed to establish the objective prong of the sham exception (508 U.S. 49, 65) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawExemptions & ImmunitiesNoerr-Pennington DoctrineGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.50

§ 122.50 Supporting Contention That Interference Is Justified or Privileged--Bona Fide Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] IS PRIVILEGED BECAUSE, AT THE TIME OF THE INTERFERENCE, DEFENDANT BELIEVED THAT HIS/HER LEGALLY PROTECTED INTEREST WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPAIRED OR DESTROYED BY THE PERFORMANCE OF THE CONTRACT.

Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Protect Bona Fide Claim. Conduct by a defendant that interferes with the performance of a contractual agreement may be privileged when the defendant has acted in good faith to protect his or her own property interest (Bridges v. Cal-Pac. Leasing Co. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 118, 131-132, 93 Cal. Rptr. 796).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that defendant's interference with plaintiff's economic relations was justified or privileged because defendant acted in good faith to protect his or her own property interest.

Justification or privilege is an affirmative defense that usually must be raised by way of allegation in the answer. It may be considered as a ground for demurrer only when it is apparent on the face of the complaint [see Lowell v. Mother's Cake & Cookie Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18-19, 144 Cal. Rptr. 664] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should thus show the nature of defendant's property interest and demonstrate how the interfered-with contractual agreement threatened that interest. In addition, counsel should allege facts showing that defendant's interference was in good faith.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference Is Privileged as Attempt to Protect Bona Fide Claim

In Bridges v. Cal-Pac. Leasing Co. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 118, 93 Cal. Rptr. 796 , defendant landlord allegedly induced its tenants, operators of a restaurant, to breach their contract with cross-complainant, a lessor of restaurant equipment. Several months before these tenants had begun to occupy the restaurant, the landlord had evicted other tenants for defaulting on rental payments. Under the prior tenants' lease, all improvements and fixtures were to belong to the landlord on termination of the lease for breach of any of the covenants contained therein. These prior tenants had made payments to cross-complainant for the rental of restaurant equipment, and had installed the equipment on the restaurant premises. After the new tenants moved in, they also made payments to cross-complainant to continue the rental of this equipment. When the landlord learned of the new tenant's payments, it sent an employee to inform the tenants that the landlord owned the equipment (pursuant to the lease provisions entered into by the preceding tenants), and that no further equipment rental payments should be made.

The trial court found that the advice was given on good faith belief, based on opinion of legal counsel, that the landlord owned the equipment and that the equipment lessor had no right to further payments. Also, the trial court found that the landlord gave this advice for the purpose of protecting its interest in the real property lease and to avoid a default thereon by the tenants. The trial court denied the cross-complainant any recovery on the interference action asserted in its cross complaint against the landlord. The cross-complainant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment as it pertained to the cross-complainant. The court found that the landlord made a sufficient showing of justification to justify the trial court's determinations. Citing Show Management v. Hearst Publishing Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 606 , the court noted that if a defendant does not act in a bona fide attempt to protect his or her own interest or the interest of others involved in the situation, he or she forfeits the immunity of the privilege (16 Cal. App. 3d 118) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.51

§ 122.51 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege for Fair Competition--Privilege Not Applicable to Competition by Unlawful or Illegitimate Means

[1] FORM

[The following may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ACTS OF INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONS ARE NOT PROTECTED BY THE PRIVILEGE FOR FAIR COMPETITION BECAUSE DEFENDANT USED _____[UNLAWFUL and/or ILLEGITIMATE] MEANS TO INTERFERE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONS.

Privilege for Fair Competition Is Inapplicable if Defendant Uses Unlawful or Illegitimate Means. The privilege for fair competition is defeated if the defendant engages in unlawful or illegitimate means of competition (Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 843, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention that its alleged interference with plaintiff's economic relationship was justified by the privilege for fair competition. The ground of opposition is that the fair competition privilege does not apply when the defendant uses unlawful or illegitimate means of competition.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the specific conduct of the defendant that interfered with plaintiff's economic relations and show how that conduct was unlawful or otherwise illegitimate. Counsel should also cite any specific statutes, case law, or other authority supporting its contention that the defendant's conduct was unlawful.

Counsel may also wish to combine these points and authorities with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue arises.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 122.42.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, including the privilege for fair competition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privilege for Fair Competition Is Inapplicable if Defendant Uses Unlawful or Illegitimate Means

In Saunders v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 , plaintiffs, who were certified shorthand reporters, brought suit against another group of certified shorthand reporters and two insurance companies for unfair business practices and for interference with contract and with prospective economic advantage. The suit arose out of the practice of "direct contracting," under which the defendant group of reporters entered into a contract with the insurance companies for the exclusive right to report depositions taken by the attorneys who represented the insurance companies. The trial court sustained demurrers to all causes of action, but the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to overrule the demurrers.

The appellate court first ruled that plaintiffs had stated a cause of action for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 because the court could not say, as a matter of law, that direct contracting, as practiced by the defendants, did not violate professional standards of impartiality, as mandated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 8025. Whether the practice did in fact violate those professional standards could not be determined at the demurrer stage, but would require expert testimony at trial (27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 840) . Regarding the cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, the court found no merit in the defendants' demurrer based on the privilege of competition. The court noted that the mere fact that the defendant reporters are competitors of plaintiffs did not give rise to an absolute privilege on the part of the plaintiffs to interfere with plaintiffs' prospective economic advantage. If it did, the court observed, no cause of action could ever be stated by one competitor against another, but this is clearly not the law. Instead, the court explained, justification based on privilege is an affirmative defense. Furthermore, the competition privilege is defeated if the defendant engages in unlawful or illegitimate means. In this case, the court observed, plaintiffs pled that the reporter defendants were interfering with plaintiffs' economic advantage by unlawful and illegitimate means (27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 843) . The court noted that while defendants may be able to show at trial that their interference with plaintiffs' prospective business advantage is justified, this was not a ground for sustaining a demurrer. Whether or not the interference was justified required a balancing of the importance, social and private, of the objective advanced by the interference against the importance of the interest interfered with, considering all the circumstances of the case, and that this could not be determined at the demurrer stage (27 Cal. App. 4th 832, 844-845) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.52

§ 122.52 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege Based on Confidential Relationship--Privilege Not Applicable When Purpose of Interference Is Solely to Further Personal Economic Advantage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT WAS NOT PRIVILEGED TO INTERFERE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name of third party], BECAUSE, NOTWITHSTANDING DEFENDANT'S CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name of third party], DEFENDANT'S SOLE PURPOSE IN INTERFERING WITH THE RELATIONSHIP WAS TO ENJOY PERSONAL ECONOMIC BENEFIT.

Privilege Based on Confidential Relationship Does Not Justify Interference for Purpose of Personal Economic Advantage. The privilege of a manager or agent to interfere with an economic relationship between his or her principal and a third party, arising from his or her confidential relationship with the principal, does not apply when the manager or agent acts solely with the purpose of obtaining personal advantage, as opposed to when he or she acts solely to protect the principal's interests in accordance with the confidential relationship (Olivet v. Frischling (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 840-841, 164 Cal. Rptr. 87).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention that he or she was privileged to interfere with plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party, because of his or her confidential relationship with the third party. The ground for opposition is that the privilege based on a confidential relationship does not apply when the defendant does not act in accordance with that relationship, to protect the interest of the third party, but acts solely for the purpose of obtaining personal benefit.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should state facts indicating that defendant acted solely for the purpose of obtaining personal advantage.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 122.43.

[b] Related Pleading and Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms for use in actions involving interference in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in actions involving employment relationships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion and forms for use in actions involving employment relationships, see Ch. 100A, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Privilege Based on Confidential Relationship Does Not Justify Interference for Purpose of Personal Economic Advantage

The facts and procedural background of Olivet v. Frischling (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 164 Cal. Rptr. 87 , are discussed in § 122.26[3][a]. The court of appeal held that plaintiffs stated a cause of action against defendants for conspiracy to interfere with an economic relationship.

Defendants asserted that even if plaintiffs' cause of action for interference with a business relationship were sufficiently pleaded, it would still be defective because it revealed on its face a complete defense of justification. Defendants based their argument on the fact that the named defendants constituted the hospital's board of directors, and that by virtue of this confidential relationship, the board members were absolutely privileged to induce the hospital to break off its relationship with plaintiffs' company at any time. This argument, the court of appeal found, severely misinterpreted the purpose and scope of the so-called "manager's privilege" (104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 840) . The court stated that the privilege to induce an otherwise apparently tortious breach of contract is extended by law to further certain social interests deemed of sufficient importance to merit protection from liability. Thus, a manager or agent may, with impersonal or disinterested motive, properly endeavor to protect the interests of his or her principal by counseling the breach of a contract with a third party which he or she reasonably believes to be harmful to his or her employer's best interests. The court noted that, on the other hand, a person is not justified in inducing a breach of contract simply because he or she is in competition with one of the parties to the contract and seeks to further his or her own economic advantage at the expense of the other. The court concluded that it was reasonably inferable from plaintiffs' allegations that defendants were acting solely for the purpose of obtaining for themselves the advantages formerly enjoyed by plaintiffs' company, and that they were therefore acting as naked competitors rather than in accordance with their confidential relationship. The court found this sufficient to refute defendants' contention that their acts were privileged (104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 841) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.53

§ 122.53 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Privilege Based on Financial Interest--Privilege Not Applicable When Interference Is Malicious or When Requisite Interest in Third Party's Business Is Absent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT WAS NOT PRIVILEGED TO INTERFERE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF HIS/HER FINANCIAL INTEREST IN _____ [name], BECAUSE _____ [DEFENDANT HAS NOT SUFFICIENTLY ESTABLISHED THE REQUISITE FINANCIAL INTEREST IN _____ [name] or DEFENDANT'S INTERFERENCE WAS MALICIOUS OR OTHERWISE MOTIVATED BY AN IMPROPER MOTIVE].

[EITHER, if opposition based on lack of financial interest]

Lack of Proprietary or Creditor's Interest. The privilege protecting interference with the economic relations of a business in which the interferer has a financial interest does not apply when the defendant lacks a proprietary or creditor's financial interest in the business (Culcal Stylco, Inc. v. Vornado, Inc. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 882, 103 Cal. Rptr. 419).

[AND/OR, if opposition based on improper motive]

Interference Based on Improper Motive. The privilege protecting interference with the economic relations of a business in which the interferer has a financial interest does not apply when the interference is made maliciously or for an improper purpose (Culcal Stylco, Inc. v. Vornado, Inc. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 883, 103 Cal. Rptr. 419).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention that he or she was privileged to interfere with plaintiff's economic relationship with a third party, because of his or her financial interest in the third party. The grounds for opposition are that the privilege based on a financial relationship does not apply when the defendant lacks a proprietary or creditor's financial interest in the third party, or interferes without justification or with malice.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should state facts indicating that defendant acted solely out of malice towards the plaintiff.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 122.44.

[b] Related Pleading and Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms for use in actions involving interference in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Proprietary or Creditor's Interest

In Culcal Stylco, Inc. v. Vornado, Inc. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 103 Cal. Rptr. 419 , an action for intentional interference with economic relationship, plaintiffs had entered into a contract with Food Giant under which Food Giant granted each plaintiff a license to operate a retail shoe department in a portion of a Unimart store. Plaintiffs alleged that three corporations affiliated with Food Giant, Unimart, Del Amo, and Vornado, tortiously induced Food Giant to terminate the license agreements. Unimart and Del Amo were alleged to be subsidiaries of either Food Giant or Vornado; Vornado was alleged to be the parent corporation of Food Giant. After sustaining defendants' general demurrer, the trial court dismissed plaintiffs' action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court rejected defendants' contention that the interference was justified due to defendants' membership in the same business family as Food Giant. The court quoted from Restatement of Torts § 769 (as proposed for revision in tentative draft No. 14 (1969)), stating that one who has a financial interest in the business of another is privileged purposely to cause him or her not to perform a contract with a third person if the actor does not employ improper means and acts to protect his or her interest from being prejudiced by the contract. The court also quoted from comment (a) of Restatement of Torts § 769, which states that the financial interest in another's business requisite for the privilege is an interest in the nature of an investment. The comment also stated that a part owner of the business such as a partner or stockholder has the requisite interest for the privilege, and that a bondholder or other creditor may also have such interest. The court found that neither Unimart nor Del Amo, as subsidiaries of Food Giant, had the requisite proprietary or creditor's financial interest in Food Giant to render their alleged interference with Food Giant's license agreements with plaintiffs privileged as a matter of law. The court noted that a subsidiary probably possesses an economic interest in the success of its parent, particularly in the parent's operation of the subsidiary as a division, but an interest of this character could not constitute a justification for intentional interference with contractual relations under the Section 769 privilege (26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 882) .

[b] Interference Based on Improper Motive

The facts and procedural background of Culcal Stylco, Inc. v. Vornado, Inc. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 103 Cal. Rptr. 419 , are discussed in § 122.53[3][a]. The trial court sustained a demurrer to an interference complaint and dismissed the action on the basis that the complaint showed on its face that defendants' interference was privileged due to their business and corporate relationships with a third party, Food Giant.

The court of appeal found that Vornado, as the parent corporation of Food Giant, would ordinarily come within the privilege based on Restatement of Torts § 769. The court, however, reversed the dismissal as to Vornado. The court cited Tye v. Finkelstein (1958) 160 F. Supp. 666, 668 , a Massachusetts federal district court case, for the proposition that the privilege expressed in Restatement of Torts § 769 is at most a qualified one, turning on defendant's predominant purpose for interfering. The court found that plaintiffs' allegations that defendants acted "without justification," and "willfully, wantonly, and maliciously," suggested an absence of privilege and warranted reversal of the dismissal as to Vornado (26 Cal. App. 3d 879, 882-883) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

110 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.54

§ 122.54 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Publication or Broadcast During Legislative, Judicial, or Other Official Proceeding [Civ. Code § 47(b)]--Privilege Not Applicable to Publication Unrelated to Judicial Proceeding Contemplated in Good Faith

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [PUBLICATION or BROADCAST] WAS NOT PRIVILEGED UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 47(b), BECAUSE IT WAS NOT RELATED TO A POTENTIAL JUDICIAL ACTION CONTEMPLATED FOR LEGITIMATE PURPOSES.

Communication Not Protected When Unrelated to Potential Action Contemplated in Good Faith. A communication not related to a potential judicial action contemplated for legitimate purposes is not protected by the privilege in Section 47(b) of the Civil Code (Herzog v. "A" Co., Inc. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 188 Cal. Rptr. 155).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention that his or her communication that interfered with plaintiff's economic relation with a third party was absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b). The ground for opposition is that this statutory privilege does not protect a communication that is unrelated to a potential judicial proceeding contemplated for legitimate purposes.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should allege facts showing that the communication at issue was not related to a potential judicial proceeding.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 122.45.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the application of Civ. Code § 47(b) in defamation actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to the application of Civ. Code § 47(b) in defamation actions, see Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Communication Not Protected When Unrelated to Potential Action Contemplated in Good Faith

In Herzog v. "A" Co., Inc. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 188 Cal. Rptr. 155 , plaintiff claimed his previous employer, defendant, tortiously barred him from employment within his career field. Prior to leaving his job with defendant, plaintiff had signed an agreement prohibiting disclosure of confidential aspects of defendant's business. After plaintiff left defendant's employ, defendant circulated a letter that threatened to sue plaintiff and any of its competitors who employed him. Plaintiff's complaint alleged that the letter was sent for the sole purpose of unlawfully depriving him of an opportunity to work within his area of professional expertise. The trial court found that the complaint stated no cause of action, apparently accepting defendant's argument that the letter was absolutely privileged under former Civ. Code § 47(2) [now see Civ. Code § 47(b)]. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. First, the court noted that former Civ. Code § 47(2) [now see Civ. Code § 47(b)] provides absolute privilege for documents in judicial proceedings. Citing several California cases, the court noted that the privilege has been judicially extended to any communication related to litigation or proposed litigation other than defamation, including intentional interference with economic advantage (138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 660) . The court, quoting from Larmour v. Campanale (1982) 96 Cal. App. 3d 566, 568, 158 Cal. Rptr. 143 , stated that the purpose of the privilege under former Civ. Code § 47 [now see Civ. Code § 47(b)] is to afford litigants the utmost freedom of access to the courts, to preserve and defend their rights and to protect attorneys during the course of their representation of their clients (138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661) . The court also noted the rule, set forth in Restatement (Second) of Torts § 586, comment e, that, with respect to the privilege afforded to judicial communications, communications preliminary to a judicial proceeding are privileged only when the communication has some relation to a proceeding that is contemplated in good faith and is under serious consideration. Applying this rule, the court concluded that the communication was not privileged under former Civ. Code § 47(2) because it did not relate to a potential judicial action contemplated for legitimate purposes (138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 661-662) . Defendant's letter facially exceeded any legitimate purpose when it threatened plaintiff and his future employers with suit based merely on the fact of employment. Also, the confidentiality agreement to restrain or sue plaintiff was not binding on nonparties (138 Cal. App. 3d 656, 662) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Communication Not Protected When Unrelated to Potential Action Contemplated in Good Faith

In LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539 , the factual and procedural background of which is discussed in § 122.42[3][a], defendant contended that his conduct in securing trust company's lien rights was privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b) because it related to the subsequent interpleader action. Defendant relied on Rubin v. Green (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1187, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 , in which the California Supreme Court reaffirmed the principle that communications with some relation to an anticipated lawsuit are within the litigation privilege. According to the court, Rubin was distinguishable in that the communications involved, attorney's communications to prospective plaintiffs, were directly related to the anticipated litigation and therefore absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b). In contrast, defendant counsel was charged with a course of largely noncommunicative conduct unrelated to any anticipated litigation. That defendant's actions resulted in an interpleader action did not, according to the court, mean they were undertaken in anticipation of such litigation. On that basis, the court held that the allegations of plaintiff's complaint did not establish that the interpleader action was a proceeding contemplated in good faith or under serious consideration by defendant when he interfered with plaintiff's contractual relations (52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 348) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsDefenses

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.55

§ 122.55 Opposing Contention That Interference Is Privileged--Petitioning Government for Redress of Grievance (Noerr-Pennington Doctrine)--Exception for "Sham" Activity

[1] FORM

[The following may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ACTS OF INTERFERENCE WITH PLAINTIFF'S ECONOMIC RELATIONS ARE NOT IMMUNIZED FROM LIABILITY UNDER THE NOERR-PENNINGTON DOCTRINE BECAUSE THOSE ACTIVITIES CONSTITUTED A "SHAM" AND NOT A BONA FIDE EXERCISE OF DEFENDANT'S RIGHT TO PETITION THE GOVERNMENT FOR REDRESS OF GRIEVANCES.

A. "Sham" Exception to Noerr-Pennington Doctrine. Efforts to influence government that are merely a "sham" are not protected by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine and are subject to antitrust liability (see California Transp. v. Trucking Unlimited (1972) 404 U.S. 508, 512-513, 92 S. Ct. 609, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642 ; Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 575, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646). The sham exception encompasses situations in which persons use the governmental process, as opposed to the outcome of that process, as an anticompetitive weapon (Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Adver. (1991) 499 U.S. 365, 380, 111 S. Ct. 1344, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382).

B. "Sham" Exception Applies to Tort Actions for Interference. The sham exception applies to California tort actions for intentional interference with economic relations (see Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 579, 581-583, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646).

[Optional] C. Test for "Sham" Litigation. Litigation constitutes a "sham," thereby losing its immunity under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, if (1) the lawsuit is objectively baseless in the sense that no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits, and (2) the baseless lawsuit conceals an attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor through the use of the governmental process (as opposed to the outcome of that process) as an anticompetitive weapon (Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 60-61, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention that its alleged interference with plaintiff's economic relationship was protected by the constitutional right to petition the government for redress of grievances and that liability is therefore barred by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine. These points and authorities are based on the "sham" exception to that doctrine.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, to the extent that the alleged acts of interference consist of lobbying activities, participation in administrative proceedings, or the commencement of litigation, counsel should argue that such activities are not protected by the right to petition for redress of grievances because they were an attempt to use the governmental process, as distinguished from the outcome of that process, to interfere with competition and therefore come within the "sham" exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine. In the case of alleged sham litigation, counsel should also point to any facts and legal authorities establishing that the litigation was "objectively baseless," since the "sham exception" will not apply in the absence of such a showing [see Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 56-58, 60-61, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; see also § 122.55, Optional Paragraph C].

Counsel may also wish to combine these points and authorities with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue arises.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 122.49.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to interference with economic relations, including the application of the Noerr-Pennington doctrine to such actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Sham" Exception to Noerr-Pennington Doctrine

The factual and procedural background of California Transp. v. Trucking Unlimited (1972) 404 U.S. 508, 92 S. Ct. 609, 30 L. Ed. 2d 642 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][c]. The United States Supreme Court held that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine extended to the use by citizens of state and federal agencies and courts to advocate their causes and points of view, but noted that under Noerr there may be instances in which the otherwise protected activity is nothing more than a "sham" to attempt to interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor and application of the Sherman Act would be justified. Examining plaintiffs' complaint, the Court noted that plaintiffs alleged that defendants had used their power, strategy, and resources to harass and deter plaintiffs in their use of administrative and judicial proceedings so as to deny them "free and unlimited access" to those tribunals. The alleged result was that the machinery of the agencies and courts was effectively closed to plaintiffs, thereby making defendants "the regulators of the grants of rights, transfers, and registrations" to plaintiffs and diminishing the value of plaintiffs' businesses (404 U.S. 508, 511) .

The Court noted that the plaintiffs alleged not merely that defendants attempted to influence public officials, but that they sought to bar their competitors from meaningful access to adjudicatory tribunals so as to usurp the decisionmaking process by a pattern of instituting proceedings and actions with or without probable cause and regardless of the merits of the cases (404 U.S. 508, 512) . The Court noted that a pattern of baseless, repetitive claims may emerge to lead the factfinder to conclude that the administrative and judicial processes have been abused. Once that conclusion is drawn, a case is established that abuse of those processes produced an illegal result, i.e., effectively barring plaintiffs from access to the agencies and courts. The Court stated that actions of that kind cannot acquire immunity by seeking refuge under the umbrella of "political expression" (404 U.S. 508, 513) . The Court concluded that on their face, the allegations of plaintiffs' complaint came within the "sham" exception to the Noerr case and therefore remanded the case for trial (404 U.S. 508, 515-516) .

The factual and procedural background of Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , is discussed in § 122.49[3][a]. The court of appeal noted that an exception to Noerr-Pennington doctrine applies when efforts to influence the government are merely a sham; such efforts are not protected by the doctrine and are subject to antitrust liability (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 575) . The court discussed the United States Supreme Court's analysis of the sham exception, as set forth in California Transport,, and noted that in a later case, Omni Outdoor Advertising, the Supreme Court had explained that the sham exception encompasses situations in which persons use the governmental process, as opposed to the outcome of that process, as an anticompetitive weapon (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 577) .

The court of appeal observed that in this case, the trial court seemed to accept the Noerr-Pennington doctrine, or at least the principles underlying the doctrine, and its application to causes of action for interference with contractual relations and prospective economic advantage, but had expressed concern that California courts had never actually applied the sham exception but only discussed it in dicta (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 578) . The court of appeal acknowledged that the California Supreme Court had, in two previous cases, set forth the sham exception but had not directly applied it. However, the court noted, in neither case did the Supreme Court question the sham exception or suggest that it would not apply or should not be applied in California; the sham exception was simply inapplicable to those cases. The court saw no impediment to applying the sham exception in California and further ruled that it applied to efforts to influence legislation as well as to the adjudicatory process (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 579-580) .

Examining the complaint in this case, the court noted that the allegations showed that defendants made false statements to the public and to public officials regarding plaintiffs' proposed automobile body shredding facility and that they knew their statements about the increased environmental impacts of plaintiffs' proposed facility were groundless, based on their own plans to install a shredder. Defendants also allegedly instituted a baseless appeal of plaintiffs' precise design plan for the facility, prosecuting it without regard to its merits. Defendants allegedly undertook these actions for their own benefit to delay plaintiffs' entrance into the automobile body shredding business and to disrupt their business by saddling them with onerous regulatory and administrative costs and burdens (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 582) . The court held that these allegations showed that defendants undertook petitioning activity solely to delay or prevent plaintiff's entry into the market through use of the governmental process, as opposed to the outcome of that process. Thus, the court held, plaintiffs had stated a cause of action under the sham exception, and the trial court erred in granting defendants judgment on the pleadings (24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 582-583) .

In Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Adver. (1991) 499 U.S. 365, 380, 111 S. Ct. 1344, 113 L. Ed. 2d 382 , plaintiff billboard operator sued a competing billboard operator and a city under the Sherman Act for allegedly conspiring to enact zoning ordinances and billboard regulations that had the effect of severely restricting the plaintiff's ability to compete in the billboard market in that city. The jury entered a verdict for the plaintiff, but the district court granted defendants' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the ground that defendants' activities were outside the scope of the antitrust laws. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reversed the judgment and reinstated the jury verdict.

On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court reversed the decision of the Court of Appeals. The Court first held that the city was immune from antitrust liability under the Court's previous decision in Parker v. Brown (1943) 317 U.S. 341, 63 S. Ct. 307, 87 L. Ed. 315 , because the city's regulation of billboards was authorized by state law (499 U.S. 365, 370-373) , and rejected the plaintiff's argument that the city lost its immunity by "conspiring" with private parties to restrict competition (499 U.S. 365, 374-379) . Regarding the defendant billboard operator, the Court noted that

Parker did not purport to immunize from antitrust liability the private parties who urge the state to engage in anticompetitive regulation (499 U.S. 365, 379) . However, the Court noted that, beginning with the Noerr case, the Court has developed a corollary to Parker: the federal antitrust laws also do not regulate the conduct of private individuals in seeking anticompetitive action from the government. Furthermore, under Noerr, the fact that a private party's motives are selfish is irrelevant: Noerr shields from the Sherman Act a concerted effort to influence public officials, regardless of intent or purpose (499 U.S. 365, 379-380) . The Court noted, however, that a "sham" exception to the Noerr rule has been recognized. The Court stated that the "sham" exception encompasses situations in which persons use the governmental process--as opposed to the outcome of that process--as an anticompetitve weapon. Citing California Transport, the Court stated that a classic example is the filing of frivolous objections to the license application of a competitor, with no expectation of achieving denial of the license but simply in order to impose expense and delay (499 U.S. 365, 380) . Turning the facts of the case before it, the Court concluded that plaintiff had not established facts justifying application of the "sham" exception because the defendant sought to disrupt plaintiff's business not through the lobbying process, but rather through the ultimate product of that process, that is, the enactment of the zoning ordinances (499 U.S. 365, 381) . The Court also rejected plaintiff's suggestion that the Court recognize a "conspiracy" exception to the Noerr rule, which would apply when government officials conspire with a private party to employ government action as a means of stifling competition (499 U.S. 365, 382-384) .

[b] "Sham" Exception Applies to Tort Actions for Interference

Hi-Top Steel Corp. v. Lehrer (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 570, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , is discussed in § 122.55[3][a].

[c] Test for "Sham" Litigation

Professional Real Estate Investors v. Columbia Pictures Indus. (1993) 508 U.S. 49, 113 S. Ct. 1920, 123 L. Ed. 2d 611 , is discussed in §§ 122.49[3][a] and 122.49[3][d].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawExemptions & ImmunitiesNoerr-Pennington DoctrineGeneral OverviewAntitrust & Trade LawExemptions & ImmunitiesNoerr-Pennington DoctrineSham ExceptionTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Intentional Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities §§ 122.56-122.69

[Reserved]

§§ 122.56[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.70

§ 122.70 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship--Negligent Contractual Performance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR HIS/HER NEGLIGENT PERFORMANCE OF HIS/HER CONTRACT WITH _____ [name of third party] BECAUSE THIS PERFORMANCE CREATED A FORESEEABLE AND UNREASONABLE RISK OF ECONOMIC HARM TO PLAINTIFF AND CAUSED DAMAGE TO PLAINTIFF.

A. Criteria for Determining Duty of Care. The existence of a duty of care in an action for negligent interference with economic relations depends on six criteria: (1) the extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff, (2) the foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff, (3) the degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury, (4) the closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered, (5) the moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct and (6) the policy of preventing future harm (J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 804, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60).

B. Negligent Performance of Contract as Basis for Action. When the negligent performance of a contract creates an unreasonable and foreseeable risk of interference with a third party's economic relations and the negligent performance does in fact proximately cause injury to the third party's economic relations, the negligent party may be liable to the third party in tort (see J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 804-808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; Chameleon Eng'g Corp. v. Air Dynamics Inc. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 418, 420-423, 161 Cal. Rptr. 463).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in an action for negligent interference with economic relations in support of the contention that negligent performance of a contract created an unreasonable and foreseeable risk of economic harm to plaintiff, causing economic injury to plaintiff, and entitling plaintiff to recovery in tort against the defendant for the defendant's negligence.

These points and authorities may be combined with a memorandum or points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issues set forth in this form.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts demonstrating that defendant owed plaintiff a duty of care in light of the criteria set forth in J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 , and that defendant's breach of that duty proximately caused economic loss to plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Criteria for Determining Duty of Care

In J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 , plaintiff operated a restaurant in premises leased from the County of Sonoma. The county entered into a contract with defendant to renovate the restaurant premises. As the contract did not specify a date for completion of the work, plaintiff alleged the work was to have been completed within a reasonable time as defined by custom and usage under Civ. Code § 1657. Despite requests that defendant complete the construction promptly, the work was not completed within a reasonable time. Because the restaurant could not operate during part of the construction and was without heat and air conditioning for a longer period, plaintiff suffered loss of business and resulting loss of profits. Plaintiff brought a cause of action based on negligence in completing the work within a reasonable time. Defendant demurred on the ground that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and the complaint was dismissed. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court noted that a plaintiff's interest in prospective economic advantage may be protected against injury occasioned by negligent as well as intentional conduct (24 Cal. 3d 799, 803) . The Court pointed to three California cases, including Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 320 P.2d 16 , in which it was held that intended beneficiaries of wills could sue to recover legacies lost through the negligent preparation of the will. In each of the cases, the Court had applied six criteria to determine whether or not defendants owed plaintiffs a duty of care. The Court stated that when dealing with a contract in which the parties to the immediate action are not in privity, these criteria should also be applied. The criteria are: (1) the extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff; (2) the foreseeability of harm to plaintiff; (3) the degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury; (4) the closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered; (5) the moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered; and (6) the policy of preventing future harm. Applying these criteria to the facts as pleaded, the Court stated that it was evident that a duty was owed by defendant to plaintiff in the present case (24 Cal. 3d 799, 804) . The Court noted that it has repeatedly avoided overly rigid common law formulations of duty in favor of allowing compensation for foreseeable injuries caused by a defendant's want of ordinary care (24 Cal. 3d 799, 805) . Rather than traditional notions of duty, the Court has focused on foreseeability as the key component necessary to establish liability. Thus, defendant would be liable if his lack of ordinary care caused foreseeable injury to the economic interests of the plaintiff. The Court noted that its holding was consistent with Civ. Code § 1714(a), which holds every person responsible for injuries caused by his or her lack of ordinary care (24 Cal. 3d 799, 806) . Addressing the possible dangers of imposing liability for negligent interference, the Court noted that the six duty factors and ordinary principles of tort law would be fully adequate to limit recovery; recovery would be limited to instances where the risk of harm is foreseeable and is closely connected with the defendant's conduct, where damages are not wholly speculative and the injury is not part of the plaintiff's ordinary business risk (24 Cal. 3d 799, 808) .

[b] Negligent Performance of Contract as Basis for Action

The facts and procedural background of J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 , are discussed in § 122.70[3][a]. The Court stated that when a special relationship exists between the parties, a plaintiff may recover for loss of expected economic advantage through the negligent performance of a contract although the parties were not in contractual privity (24 Cal. 3d 799, 804) . The Court then examined the criteria first set out in Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 , and in effect concluded that in this case, the alleged facts were sufficient to establish that a special relationship did exist, such that defendant owed a duty of due care to plaintiff in his performance of a contract with a third party, and that defendant's breach of that duty proximately caused ascertainable economic loss to plaintiff (24 Cal. 3d 799, 804) . (1) The contract entered into between the defendant and the county was for the renovation of the premises in which plaintiff maintained his business. The contract could not have been performed without impinging on that business, and consequently, the defendant's performance was intended to, and did, directly affect plaintiff. (2) It was clearly foreseeable that any significant delay in completing the construction would adversely affect plaintiff's business beyond the normal disruption associated with such construction. (3) The plaintiff's complaint indicated that plaintiff suffered harm since it was unable to operate its business for one month and suffered additional loss of business while the premises were without heat and air conditioning. (4) Plaintiff alleged that delays occasioned by defendant's conduct were closely connected to and directly caused its injury. (5) Defendant's lack of diligence in the present case was particularly blameworthy since it continued after the probability of damage was drawn directly to defendant's attention. (6) Finally, public policy would support a finding of duty of care because under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7119 (willful failure or refusal of contractor to prosecute construction project with diligence is ground for disciplining licensed contractor), the legislature has indicated the seriousness with which it views unnecessary delays in the completion of construction (24 Cal. 3d 799, 804-805) . The Court found, in light of these factors, that respondent had a duty to complete construction in a manner that would have avoided unnecessary injury to plaintiff's business (24 Cal. 3d 799, 805) . Accordingly, the Court concluded that the demurrer to plaintiff's cause of action should not have been sustained by the trial court (24 Cal. 3d 799, 808) .

In Chameleon Eng'g Corp. v. Air Dynamics Inc. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 418, 161 Cal. Rptr. 463 , plaintiff, a general contractor, brought an action against defendant for negligent interference with economic relations. Plaintiff had entered into a construction contract with the United States Army Corps of Engineers for the construction of military facilities. The contract required the work of construction to be completed within certain time limits and contained liquidated damages provisions to be triggered upon plaintiff's failure to finish the construction on time. Defendant, a supplier to one of plaintiff's subcontractors, failed to supply essential components necessary to the timely completion of the contract. As a result of this failure, plaintiff was delayed in completion of the project. Plaintiff thus incurred excess costs beyond the contract price and liquidated damages. Plaintiff alleged that defendant knew that failure to perform the terms of its purchase order properly would foreseeably affect and impact upon plaintiff's ability to perform the terms of its contract with the Corps of Engineers. Plaintiff also alleged that defendant failed to perform its obligations responsibly, and proximately caused it to sustain monetary damages. The trial court sustained defendant's general demurrer with leave to amend. Plaintiff did not amend its complaint within the time allowed and the court dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the dismissal. It found that the case was controlled by J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 . The court applied the J'Aire criteria for determining duty. The court found (1) defendant's performance was intended to and did directly affect plaintiff; (2) the harm to plaintiff was clearly foreseeable; (3) plaintiff suffered injury; (4) the close connection between defendant's acts and the damages suffered was patent; (5) the moral blame attached to defendant's conduct was apparently not a factor one way or the other; and (6) imposing liability would promote the prevention of future harm. The court concluded that plaintiff clearly stated a cause of action for negligently caused economic damage (101 Cal. App. 3d 418, 423) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Negligent Performance of Contract as Basis for Action

Ales-Peratis Foods Int'l, Inc. v. American Can Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 277, 209 Cal. Rptr. 917 was an action for negligent interference with economic relations. Plaintiff had been offered a contract to buy, pack, and sell a quantity of abalone. To fill this contract, plaintiff needed cans lined with "C" enamel, a compound designed to prevent acid corrosion. Plaintiff contracted with defendant can manufacturers to purchase a quantity of such cans. The cans actually delivered lacked the "C" enamel. Plaintiff was left with deficient cans, was unable to can the abalone, and lost the contract for the sale of the abalone. Plaintiff brought suit for negligent interference with economic relations. The trial court granted defendant's summary judgment motion, and plaintiff appealed. Reversing, the court of appeal evaluated the six criteria for duty found in J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 and found that all of the criteria favored a finding that defendant owed a duty to plaintiff. The court noted that (1) defendant's performance was intended to, and did directly affect plaintiff; (2) the result of defendant's conduct was clearly foreseeable; (3) plaintiff suffered economic harm; (4) there was a close connection between defendant's acts and the damages suffered; (5) defendant's acts were morally blameworthy; and (6) policy considerations warranted the imposition of liability (164 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289-290) . The court concluded that plaintiff stated a cause of action for negligent interference (164 Cal. App. 3d 277, 290) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceActionsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.71

§ 122.71 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship--Injury Is Ordinary Business Risk

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR NEGLIGENT INTERFERENCE WITH HIS/HER NONCONTRACTUAL ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP WITH _____ [name], BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S INJURY IS NO MORE THAN A PART OF HIS/HER ORDINARY RISK IN DOING BUSINESS.

No Recovery for Injury Resulting From Ordinary Business Risk. Recovery for negligent interference with a noncontractual economic relationship will be denied where the injury is part of plaintiff's ordinary business risk (Worldvision Enters., Inc. v. American Broad. Cos., Inc. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 191 Cal. Rptr. 148).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a plaintiff may recover for negligent interference with economic relations. The ground for opposition is that the plaintiff's injury was part of his or her ordinary business risk.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that the plaintiff's injury resulted from an ordinary risk of doing business.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery for Injury Resulting From Ordinary Business Risk

Worldvision Enters., Inc. v. American Broad. Cos., Inc. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 589, 191 Cal. Rptr. 148 , was an action for negligent interference with a noncontractual economic relationship. Plaintiff, a television syndicator, claimed that defendant network disparaged a program to which plaintiff had owned future distribution rights. The program in question was in the network's weekly schedule. The disparagement occurred when the network's president implied in a speech to network affiliates that the program was unsuitable for general family audiences. Plaintiff claimed that after these remarks were made, plaintiff's customers were no longer interested in purchasing the program and that the value of plaintiff's syndication rights was destroyed. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Applying the six criteria for finding a duty of care stated in J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 , the court rejected plaintiff's contention that defendant owed plaintiff a general duty of due care not to damage plaintiff's prospective economic interests. The court stated that recovery for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage will be denied when the injury is part of the plaintiff's ordinary business risk. The court noted that, in this case, plaintiff must have known or assumed, when it purchased the syndication rights while the series was still being broadcast initially on the network, that the value of the program in syndication could be either enhanced or diminished by defendant's decisions on how to promote the program (142 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsDefensesTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceProspective AdvantageDefensesTortsNegligenceActionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 122 INTERFERENCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Negligent Interference With Economic Relationship

12-122 California Points & Authorities § 122.72

§ 122.72 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Negligent Interference with Economic Relationship--Defendant Owes No Duty of Care

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR NEGLIGENT INTERFERENCE WITH HIS/HER ECONOMIC RELATIONSHIP, BECAUSE DEFENDANT OWED PLAINTIFF NO DUTY OF CARE.

No Recovery If There Is No Duty of Care. The tort of negligent interference with economic relationship arises only when the defendant owes the plaintiff a duty of care (LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 348, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a plaintiff may recover for negligent interference with economic relations. The ground for opposition is that the defendant owed the plaintiff no duty of care.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that the allegations of the complaint failed to establish that defendant owed plaintiff a duty of care.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery If There Is No Duty of Care

In LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539 , the plaintiff was an attorney representing a client in environmental litigation in both state and federal court. While the state action was pending, the plaintiff was contacted by the defendant, who was counsel for a trust company that had extended a loan to the plaintiff's client. In that conversation, the defendant asked the plaintiff about the status and settlement value of the pending action, but did not tell the plaintiff that the client had granted the trust company a lien against the client's share of any judgment or settlement proceeds obtained in the action. The defendant then filed a notice of lien on behalf of the trust company in the state court action. A judgment was subsequently entered in the state court action in favor of the client. Sometime later, the parties entered into a settlement agreement that settled both state and federal actions. As a result of trust company's lien, the settlement agreement was amended to require the defendant in the environmental litigation to bring an interpleader action in federal district court and deposit the client's share of the settlement funds with the court without prior payment of the client's share of attorney fees. The interpleader action tied up fees owing to the plaintiff for over seven months and caused him to incur extraordinary fees and costs. As a result, the plaintiff filed an action against the defendant for negligent interference with economic relationship. The trial court sustained defendant's general demurrer without leave to amend and denied plaintiff's subsequent motion for reconsideration of that ruling.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's negligent interference causes of action on the ground that plaintiff's complaint failed to allege a duty of care owed by defendant to plaintiff. The court began by stating the rule that the tort of negligent interference with economic relationship arises only when a defendant owes a plaintiff a duty of care. It then found that while defendant owed plaintiff a general duty to refrain from committing intentionally tortious conduct, the duty of undivided loyalty defendant owed to his client, trust company, precluded the imposition of a negligence duty of care owed to plaintiff in connection with defendant's representation of trust company in the loan transaction (52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 348-349) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Recovery If There Is No Duty of Care

In Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1187-1189, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 39 , two independent insurance brokers filed cross-complaints against a liability insurer in its declaratory relief action, alleging promissory estoppel and negligent interference with prospective economic advantage. The brokers' claims were based on the insurer's termination of an agreement between the insurer and an insurance brokerage firm with whom the independent brokers worked in procuring insurance for an association of building contractors. After a jury trial, judgment was entered for the brokers on both causes of action, but the court of appeal reversed. As to the cause of action for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, the court held that wrongfulness independent of the fact of interference is an element of an action for negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, and cited with seeming approval language from another court opinion suggesting that wrongful conduct is subsumed within a finding that a legal duty of care was owed (68 Cal. App. 803, 1187-1189) . The court held that the insurer's exercise of a contractual right to terminate the agreement with the brokerage firm for cause was not wrongful, and thus, the insurer owed no duty to the independent brokers (68 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1187-1188) . The court also rejected the brokers' claims that the insurer's failure to provide longer notice to them before terminating the agreement was wrongful, as well as the argument that the insurer was required to prove that it had cause to terminate the agreement with the brokerage (68 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1188) .

In Colome v. State Athletic Comm'n (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 , a boxer was denied a boxing license by the State Athletic Commission after failing a neurological examination. The boxer's manager sued the doctor and assistant who administered the examination, for interference with prospective economic advantage. A jury found defendants liable, and the defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed, finding that the six criteria for finding a duty of care stated in J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 favored a finding that neither defendant was liable because neither owed the boxer's manager a duty (47 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1460) . The court noted that (1) the neurological examination was not intended to affect the manager; (2) there was little foreseeability of harm to the manager since he was not the issue; (3) the degree of certainty that the manager suffered any injury was in grave doubt since all the damages asserted were highly speculative; (4) the connection between the physician's conduct and any injury suffered by the manager had to be filtered through the actions of the Commission; (5) there was no moral blame ascribed to the physician who determined that the boxer might be at risk; and (6) the policy of preventing future harm was not an issue under the circumstances of this case (47 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1460) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceActionsGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDutyGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER

12-123 California Points & Authorities 123.syn

§ 123.syn Synopsis to Chapter 123: INTERPLEADER

§ 123.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 123.02 Governing Law

§ 123.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 123.04 Deposit in Court Distinguished

§ 123.05 Sufficiency of Pleading

§ 123.06 Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§§ 123.07-123.19 [Reserved]

§ 123.20 Supporting Defendant's Motion Before Answer for Order Substituting Nonparty Claimant as Defendant and Discharging Defendant From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Nature and Availability of Remedy

[c] Filing of Answer

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Purpose of Statutory Procedure

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Substitution and Discharge Authorized

§ 123.21 Supporting Motion by Plaintiff in Interpleader for Order Discharging Plaintiff From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)] and, If Appropriate, for Order to Deposit Money or Deliver Property in Question

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action in Interpleader Authorized

[b] Discharge of Interpleading Party From Liability

[c] Use of Motion Procedure

[d] Deposit in Court

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action in Interpleader Authorized

[b] Deposit in Court

§ 123.22 Supporting Motion by Cross Complainant in Interpleader for Order Discharging Cross Complainant From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)] and, If Appropriate, for Order to Deposit Money or Deliver Property Sued For

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 123.23 Supporting Motion for Order for Discharge From Liability to Conflicting Claimants--Conflicting Claims Are Not Identical or Are Independent [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Effect of Nonidentical or Independent Claims

§ 123.24 Supporting Defendant Stakeholder's Motion for Order Discharging Stakeholder From Liability and Dismissing Stakeholder From Action on Stakeholder's Deposit With Court Clerk of Amount in Dispute [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 123.25 Supporting Motion of Defendant or Interpleading Party for Order Awarding Costs and Attorney Fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Request Award of Costs and Attorney Fees

[b] Award of Costs and Attorney Fees From Funds Deposited With Court

[c] Award May Be Made From Future Deposits

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award of Costs and Attorney Fees From Funds Deposited With Court

§ 123.26 Supporting Application of Plaintiff or Cross Complainant in Interpleader for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)] Enjoining Other Parties to Action From Prosecuting or Instituting Actions Affecting Rights and Obligations of Parties to Action or Cross Action in Interpleader [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(f)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial of Application for Preliminary Injunction as Abuse of Discretion

[b] Court May Restrain Collection of Judgment

§ 123.27 Supporting Respondent's Motion for Order Dismissing Appeal--Judgment or Order Discharging Defendant or Interpleading Party From Liability on Deposit of Fund or Delivery of Property as Interlocutory and Nonappealable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonappealability of Judgment of Interpleader

[b] Nonappealability of Order Discharging Defendant

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nonappealability of Order Discharging Defendant

§ 123.28 Opposing Motion of Plaintiff or Cross Complainant in Interpleader for Order Discharging Moving Party From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)]--Future Periodic Deposits Into Court Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Future Periodic Deposits Into Court Required

§ 123.29 Opposing Motion of Plaintiff or Cross Complainant in Interpleader for Order Discharging Moving Party

From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a), (b)]; Claims Do Not Relate to Same Thing, Debt, or Duty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Required That Claimant Seek the Same Thing, Debt, or Duty

§ 123.30 Opposing Motion of Defendant or Interpleading Party for Order Awarding Costs and Attorney Fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6]--Moving Party Failed to Follow Procedure Specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 386 or 386.5

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Follow Specified Procedure as Defeating Award

[b] Failure to Deposit Funds With Court as Defeating Award

§ 123.31 Opposing Interpleading Party's Motion for Order Awarding Costs and Attorney Fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6]--Interpleading Party Waived Right to Attorney Fees From Amount Deposited in Court and Sought Recovery From Amount Which Was Not Deposited

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deposit Was of Undisputed Amount Only as to Which Interpleading Party Waived Right to Attorney Fees

§ 123.32 Opposing Interpleading Party's Motion for Order Awarding Costs and Attorney Fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6]--Award Under Interpleader Statutes as Limited to Expenses Incurred in Pursuit of Stakeholder's Remedy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Award

§ 123.33 Opposing Respondent's Motion for Order Dismissing Appeal--Judgment or Order Discharging Defendant or Interpleading Party From Liability and Awarding Attorney Fees and Costs out of Fund Deposited in Court as Appealable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Case Title in Caption

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Appealability of Judgment or Order in Interpleader Awarding Attorney Fees

§ 123.34 Opposing Interpleading Party's Motion for Order Awarding Costs and Attorney Fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6] From Interest Accrued on Interpleaded Funds--No Original Funds Allocated to Interpleading Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest Accrued on Interpleaded Funds Must Be Allocated in Same Proportion as Original Funds.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.01

§ 123.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use in interpleader proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 386(a), (b), (f), 386.5, and 386.6. It includes:

- Memoranda supporting [see §§ 123.20-123.22] and opposing [see §§ 123.28, 123.29] motions for discharge of the defendant or interpleading party under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a), (b).

- A memorandum supporting a defendant's motion for discharge and dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 386.5 [see § 123.24].

- Memoranda supporting [see § 123.25] and opposing [see §§ 123.30-123.32 and 123.34] a motion for an award of costs and attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6.

- A memorandum supporting an application for a preliminary injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(f) [see § 123.26].

- Memoranda supporting [see § 123.27] and opposing [see § 123.33] a motion to dismiss an appeal from an order discharging the defendant or interpleading party from liability.

Also included is a memorandum that may be combined with any of the memoranda set forth in §§ 123.20-123.22 if the conflicting claims are not identical or are independent [see § 123.23].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.02

§ 123.02 Governing Law

Interpleader is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 386-386.6, which set forth the circumstances in which an interpleader will lie and procedure for pursuing it.

In addition, a number of specific statutes in the various codes expressly authorize interpleader to determine the rights of conflicting claimants to money or property [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 3175, 3214 (money withheld under stop notices); Com. Code § 7603 (adverse claims under bill of lading or warehouse receipt to property in possession of bailee or warehouseman)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPartiesInterpleadersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.03

§ 123.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, an opening or responding memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.04

§ 123.04 Deposit in Court Distinguished

The provisional remedy of deposit in court is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 572-574, which authorize the court, on motion, to order that property be deposited in court or delivered to a party [Code Civ. Proc. § 572]. The sections apparently contemplate a motion by the claimant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 574 (sanctions for refusal to comply with order)], but otherwise contain no restriction on the actions in which the remedy is available. For a discussion of this remedy and forms for use in pursuing it, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 211, Deposit in Court .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesDeposits in Court

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.05

§ 123.05 Sufficiency of Pleading

The sufficiency of a complaint or cross complaint in interpleader may be challenged by demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(a), 430.70; see also Hancock Oil Co. v. Hopkins (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 497, 511-512, 150 P.2d 463 ; Los Angeles v. Amidor (1903) 140 Cal. 400, 401, 73 P. 1049] . A pleading under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a) is, however, sufficient if it alleges that the defendants or cross defendants make adverse claims on plaintiff or cross complainant for the same thing and if it alleges facts showing a reasonable probability of double vexation [see Hancock Oil Co. v. Hopkins (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 497, 510, 150 P.2d 463] . If the pleading is sufficient, the propriety of the remedy may still be challenged by appropriate denials or affirmative averments in the answer. A failure to attack the propriety of the remedy by demurrer, motion to strike, or answer is, however, a waiver of that objection, and a defendant cannot, on a subsequent appeal from the judgment adjudicating the claims of the adverse claimants after the interpleading party has been discharged, raise the issue of the right to interplead [Continental Nat. Bank v. Stoltz (1920) 46 Cal. App. 532, 535-536, 189 P. 712] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPartiesInterpleadersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.06

§ 123.06 Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion of, and forms of complaints, answers, cross complaints, and other papers for use in interpleader actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 314, Interpleader . For forms of complaints in interpleader involving bank deposits, stop notices, surety bonds, and warehousemen, see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks , Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens , Ch. 481, Public Works , Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings and Ch. 213, Documents of Title in that publication.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterpleadersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-123 California Points & Authorities §§ 123.07-123.19

[Reserved]

§§ 123.07[Reserved]

124 of 172 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 123 INTERPLEADER
PART II. FORMS

12-123 California Points & Authorities § 123.20

§ 123.20 Supporting Defendant's Motion Before Answer for Order Substituting Nonparty Claimant as Defendant and Discharging Defendant From Liability [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	ORDER FOR SUBSTITUTION OF PARTIES DE-
vs.	)	FENDANT AND DISCHARGE OF DEFENDANT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUBSTITUTION OF PARTIES DEFENDANT AND DISCHARGE OF DEFENDANT FROM LIABILITY ON DEFENDANT'S _____ [DEPOSITING IN COURT THE AMOUNT CLAIMED ON THE CONTRACT or DELIVERING THE PROPERTY OR ITS VALUE TO SUCH PERSON AS THE COURT MAY DIRECT] SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE, AS SHOWN BY THE PAPERS SUBMITTED IN SUPPORT OF THE MOTION, _____ [name of person sought to be substituted as defendant] IS NOT A PARTY TO THIS ACTION AND HAS, WITHOUT ANY COLLUSION WITH DEFENDANT, MADE A DEMAND AGAINST DEFENDANT _____ [ON THE CONTRACT or FOR THE PROPERTY].

A. Substitution and Discharge Authorized. In an action on a contract or for specific personal property, defendant may, at any time before answer, on a showing, by affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury, that a person who is not a party to the action, has, without any collusion with defendant, made a demand against defendant on the contract or for the property, apply to the court for an order substituting the person in defendant's place and discharging defendant from liability to either party on defendant's depositing in court the amount claimed on the contract, or delivering the property or its value to such person as the court may direct, and the court may, in its discretion, make the order (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 386(a), 2015.5).

B. Purpose of Statutory Procedure. The purpose of Section 386(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure is to enable defendant to show that a third party not named in the action claims some right to the subject of the action, either by way of complete ownership or by virtue of a lien against it, and, on so showing, to deposit the money due in court or to deliver the property or its value as the court may direct and have the third party made a defendant in his or her stead, thus placing the real parties in interest in the position of adversaries in the action (see Youtz v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank (1916) 31 Cal. App. 370, 371-372, 160 P. 855).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by defendant, in an action on a contract or for specific personal property, in support of a motion for an order substituting a nonparty in defendant's place and discharging defendant from liability to either party on defendant's depositing in court the amount claimed on the contract or delivering the property or its value to such person as the court may direct.

The grounds of the motion are: (1) the person sought to be substituted as defendant is not a party to the action and has, without any collusion with defendant, made a demand against defendant on the contract or for the property; and (2) the order of substitution is authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a).

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 386(a), 2009] or declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] setting forth evidentiary facts showing that the nonparty has, without any collusion with defendant, made against defendant a demand on the contract or for the property that is adverse to plaintiff's claim, defendant's lack of interest in the money or property, and defendant's offer to deposit the money or deliver the property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a); DeCoe v. Johnson (1921) 54 Cal. App. 592, 595, 202 P. 362] .

For additional points and authorities that may be added to the foregoing form if there is no privity between the conflicting claimants, or if an award of costs and attorney fees is sought pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6, see §§ 123.23 and 123.25, respectively.

[b] Nature and Availability of Remedy

Strictly speaking, the proceeding set forth in the foregoing form is not an action of interpleader, but is in the nature of interpleader [Hellman Commercial T. & S. Bk. v. Alden (1929) 206 Cal. 592, 600, 275 P. 794] . Moreover, the motion is authorized only if the action is on a contract or for specific personal property, and the remedy is not available if the defendant claims any interest in the money or property sued for. This is implicit in (1) the requirement that defendant deposit in court the amount claimed on the contract or deliver the property or its value to such person as the court may direct, and (2) the fact that the order made is one substituting parties defendant and discharging the original defendant from liability to either party. Obviously, if the defendant claims any interest in the money or property sued for, he or she cannot be discharged from liability to the adverse claimants at this stage of the proceedings. A defendant who claims an interest in a portion of the money or property sued for may, however, proceed by way of cross complaint [see § 123.22]. This is the alternative remedy provided by the second part of the first sentence of Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a) which permits a defendant who claims some portion of the money or property to file a cross complaint for partial interpleader.

The remedy of substitution of parties defendant is also not available in an interpleader action or cross action under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b). On the other hand, an action or cross action in interpleader under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b) is authorized even though the interpleading party denies liability in whole or in part to the adverse claimants, and the right to interplead under this latter subdivision is not limited to cases involving conflicting claims to personal property or to the performance of an obligation, as is the case of an interpleader under Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a) [compare Code Civ. Proc. § 386(a) with Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b)].

[c] Filing of Answer

