The plaintiff's second argument was that Evid. Code § 669(a) provided him with a cause of action in that (1) the defendant violated an ordinance, (2) the violation caused his injury, (3) the ordinance was designed to prevent his injury, and (4) he was one of the class the ordinance was intended to protect. Relying heavily on Ford v. Gouin, the plaintiff argued that if a plaintiff who is a participant in an active sport is also a member of the class of persons intended to be protected by a statute, then Evid. Code § 669 will in turn transform the statute into a legal duty of due care on the defendant, thus abrogating the assumption of risk defense. In response, the Court determined that there was no legal duty in this case because the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met, specifically, the plaintiff had not demonstrated that he was one of the class of persons the ordinance was intended to protect. By stating that skiers assumed the inherent risks of skiing, including the risk of collision and the risk that others would fail to ski within their own ability, the ordinance made clear that petitioner, who was injured in a collision with a fellow skier, was not one of the class of persons for whose protection the ordinance was adopted. Accordingly, the Court found that Evid. Code § 669(a) did not aid the plaintiff's position (16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1070-1072) .

In its opinion, the California Supreme Court raised two issues of potential significance to an assumption of risk case involving an ordinance or statute, but declined to decide either. The first involved the question of whether an ordinance or statute could impose a higher duty of care on the defendant than Knight established. The Court acknowledged that Knight was a development of the common law of torts, and that the Legislature could, within constitutional limits choose to modify the common law by statute. Whether a local ordinance such as the instant one could modify Knight was, according to the Court, less clear. However, the Court did not decide this question here because it concluded that the ordinance did not modify the Knight standard even if it assumed it could (16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1069) .

The second issue left open by the Court's opinion in Cheong was whether the breach of a statutory duty under Evid. Code § 669(a) would create tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. According to the Court, Justice Arabian's opinion in Ford implicitly assumed, and the opinions of Justice George, joined by Chief Justice Lucas, and Justice Mosk expressly concluded, that if the four elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) were satisfied, that statute creates tort liability between coparticipants in an active sport despite the Knight doctrine of primary assumption of risk. A number of the justices who signed the majority opinion in Cheong questioned whether this conclusion was correct. Three justices were of the opinion that Evid. Code § 669(a) only creates an evidentiary presumption of negligence, while the Knight doctrine, if applicable, provides that negligence alone is insufficient to impose tort liability. However the Court did not resolve the issue because it determined that even if the conclusion was correct, the elements of Evid. Code § 669(a) had not been met in this case (16 Cal. 4th 1063, 1071) .

NOTE:

One subsequent court of appeal decision, Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1272-1274, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 [see § 165.401[4][a]], adopted the approach that a presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669(a) could not overcome the primary assumption of risk defense, because the primary assumption of risk defense protects against liability for conduct that is merely negligent. In that particular case, the court of appeal concluded that the violation of a standard of care provided by Veh. Code §§ 38305 and 38316, statutory provisions governing off-highway driving, did not overcome the primary assumption of risk defense, because negligence was an insufficient basis for tort liability between participants in the sport of off-roading (85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1270-1274) . However, the court of appeal's analysis of the issue was dicta because the court had already held that the plaintiff failed to plead the issue at trial and could not amend his pleading on appeal (85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1266) .

At least one subsequent court of appeal opinion, Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1226, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198 [see § 165.401[4][a]], has adopted the conclusion of the Distefano court as applied in the context of an injury sustained in an organized bicycle ride, based primarily on the fact that a majority of the California Supreme Court appeared to agree with that conclusion.

[e] State Statute Does Not Impose Duty That Abrogates Rule

In Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 , the plaintiff was jet skiing with a friend and turned her jet ski in front of her friend, apparently to try to escape from what she perceived as her friend's dangerous maneuvers, which resulted in a collision. The plaintiff sued her friend for negligence, but the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The plaintiff appealed, arguing that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply because Harb. & Nav. Code § 655(a) and Harb. & Nav. Code § 655.7(c), which created a standard of care when using jet skis, abrogated the doctrine under the facts of the case. In the alternative, the plaintiff also argued that a triable issue of fact existed as to whether the defendant engaged in reckless behavior sufficient to overcome the primary assumption of risk doctrine.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that although the statutes at issue criminalize reckless or negligent operation of watercraft and were enacted after the Supreme Court's decision in Knight v. Jewett, these statutes did not prevent application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine to the active sport of jet skiing, which by its very nature involves dangerous maneuvers, as well as skill and challenges that pose a significant risk of injury (110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1573-1575) . Recognizing that the legislature is free to abrogate the primary assumption of risk doctrine should it so choose, the court held that to abrogate that doctrine, the language of the relevant statutes must demonstrate a clear intent to do so. Harb. & Nav. Code § 655(a) and Harb. & Nav. Code § 655.7(c) are general statutes providing a standard of care applicable to the activity, but they contain no language evidencing an intent to abrogate the primary assumption of risk doctrine (110 Cal. App. 4th 1566,1575) . Therefore, to overcome the primary assumption of risk defense, the plaintiff was required to plead and prove that the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff or engaged in conduct so reckless as to be outside the range of ordinary activity inherent in the sport of jet skiing. Because the plaintiff specifically pleaded only negligent conduct on the part of the defendant, the court rejected the plaintiff's argument that triable issues remained as to whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to be outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in jet skiing (110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575-1576) .

[f] Primary Assumption of Risk Protects Defendant Engaged in Different Activity Than Plaintiff

In Mastro v. Petrick (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185 , the plaintiff was a skier who was injured in a collision with a snowboarder. Both skiing and snowboarding were permitted on the slope where the collision occurred. The plaintiff sued the snowboarder, but the defendant answered that the primary assumption of risk doctrine provided a complete defense because his conduct was not reckless. The plaintiff countered that because the two were not coparticipants in the same sport, the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply. The plaintiff further argued that if the doctrine did apply, the defendant's conduct was reckless. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the parties' focus on whether the parties were properly labeled as "coparticipants" in the same sport. Instead, the court noted that the question of whether the defendant owed a duty to the plaintiff was determined by the nature of the sport or activity in question and the parties' general relationship to the activity (93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 89) . The court then concluded that the primary assumption of risk doctrine may be used to protect a party who is pursuing a sport in an appropriate venue from liability for an injury to another party who is engaged in a different activity in the same venue. The court noted that a plaintiff who knowingly engages in his or her own activity in the same venue assumes the risk of injury caused by a party who is vigorously engaged in a different activity, and that the nature of the defendant's duty is defined with reference to the sport in which the defendant is engaged. Therefore, the question of whether the defendant was liable for the plaintiff's injury depended on whether the defendant's conduct was so reckless as to fall outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the defendant's sport (snowboarding) (93 Cal. App. 4th 83, 90-91) . In the unpublished portion of the opinion, the court concluded that the defendant's conduct was not reckless.

[g] Intentional Conduct Within Ordinary Range of Activity Not Actionable

In Avila v. Citrus Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 299, 131 P.3d 383 , the plaintiff, a baseball player for a community college baseball team, was struck in the head by a pitch thrown during a preseason exhibition game played on the opponent's field. The plaintiff alleged that the pitch was either thrown negligently or intentionally in retaliation because one of the pitcher's teammates was hit by a pitch in the previous inning. The plaintiff staggered, felt dizzy, and was in pain, although his manager made him stay in the game for a few minutes before finally taking him out. No one tended to his injuries, which turned out to be serious. The plaintiff sued both school districts, his manager, and various other entities. As to the opposing school district, the plaintiff alleged that it school was negligent in failing to summon or provide medical care at the time of the injury, failing to supervise and control the opposing pitcher, failing to provide adequate supervisory personnel and officials, and failing to provide adequate equipment. The school district demurred on the grounds that it was immune from liability under Gov. Code § 831.7(a), the public entity immunity statute for injuries occurring during hazardous recreational activities, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action as to the district. The court of appeal reversed, relying on previous court of appeal opinions to rule that Gov. Code § 831.7 does not extend immunity to claims predicated on the negligent supervision of public school athletes and that the school district owed a duty of supervision to plaintiff. The school district appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal. Addressing the issue of immunity under Gov. Code § 831.7, the Court held that school-sponsored and supervised sports activities are not "recreational" in the sense of voluntary unsupervised play as envisioned by the statute. Instead, these sports are a fundamental part of the school's educational mission. Therefore, the statute did not apply to immunize public educational entities from liability for injuries to students sustained during those activities (38 Cal. 4th 148, 158-160) . However, the Court then went on to hold that under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, the school district owed no duty to the plaintiff to protect him from the injury he suffered. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was also inherently part of the game. Players pitch at or near the batter to disrupt a batter's timing or back the batter away from the plate, to retaliate after a teammate has been hit by a pitch, or to punish a batter for having hit a home run (38 Cal. 4th 148, 163-165) . The Court also rejected the other claims asserted by the plaintiff because the undisputed facts of the case did not demonstrate that the defendant violated any duty of care owed to the plaintiff (38 Cal. 4th 148, 166-168) .

[h] Primary Assumption of Risk Applies to Non-Contact Sports

In Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803, 165 P.3d 581 , plaintiff was golfing in a group with two other golfers when he was injured by a tee shot hit by one of the other two. Plaintiff had just finished putting on one hole and was walking toward the next tee when he stopped to get out a bottle of water and check his cell phone for messages. Defendant hit his tee shot, which struck plaintiff in the head and caused serious injury. Plaintiff alleged that he and defendant had made eye contact before defendant had teed off, suggesting that defendant knew where plaintiff was before taking the shot. Defendant alleged, however, that he checked the area in front of the tee, determined that the area was clear, and then focussed on the ball for 15 to 20 seconds before making the shot. The trial court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applied, but that triable issues remained that precluded summary judgment. The court of appeal affirmed, but for different reasons. The court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply, that the case should be tried according to general negligence principles, and that defendant had breached a duty of care owed to plaintiff. Because it concluded that plaintiff's conduct raised issues of comparative negligence, however, the court of appeal remanded for trial on the apportionment of fault. Defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court agreed that summary judgment was properly denied, but disagreed with the analysis of the court of appeal. The Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine may be applied to non-contact sports such as golf (42 Cal. 4th 482, 486) . Thus, so long as the defendant golfer did not intend to injure the other golfer or engage in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport, a golfer who injures another golfer with an errant golf shot may defend against liability on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine (42 Cal. 4th 482, 497). The Court stated that primary assumption of risk may be applied under these circumstances regardless of whether plaintiff and defendant were golfing as part of the same group or merely happened to be on the same course (42 Cal. 4th 482, 494) . The Court also ruled that the violation of a golfing rule of etiquette by the defendant does not in and of itself establish a basis for liability. Thus, while rules of golfing etiquette state that a player should ensure that no one is standing close by or in a position to be hit when making a shot, the risk of being hit with an errant ball is inherent in the sport and whether the defendant acted recklessly when injuring another golfer with an errant shot depends on the totality of circumstances. While a golfer cannot just ignore other players when making a shot, once having checked to see if others are reasonably likely to be struck and having concluded that it is safe to hit, a golfer who then concentrates on the ball in order to make the shot is not required to break his or her concentration in order to check the field again (42 Cal. 4th 482, 497-500) . The Court added that factors that may bear on whether a golfer's conduct was reasonable, negligent, or reckless may include the golfer's skill level, whether topographical conditions obscure the golfer's view, what steps the golfer took to determine whether anyone was within range, and the distance and angle between plaintiff and defendant when the shot was made (42 Cal. 4th 482, 500) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant's Conduct Within Range of Ordinary Activity of Sport

In Towns v. Davidson (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 461, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 , plaintiff was injured while snow skiing at a ski resort when an employee of the resort collided with her. At the time of the collision, the resort employee was practicing giant, slalom-type turns, and was concentrating on holding an edge through the turns. As such, he was looking down and did not look to his left before making a quick left-turn, leading to the collision with plaintiff, who was skiing slowly straight down the hill. The court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine precluded imposing liability on the ski resort or the employee. The court noted first that the fact that the defendant skier was an employee of the resort had no impact on application of the defense, as his employee status did not increase the risk of injury while skiing (147 Cal. App. 4th 461, 470) . The court then held that plaintiff had failed to raise a triable issue as to whether the employee's conduct was so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in skiing. While the employee was skiing quickly and aggressively at the time of the collision, the court concluded that this was an inherent part of the sport. The fact that the employee was concentrating on his technique and may have turned without looking did not establish conduct totally outside the range of ordinary activity for the sport. Moreover, the court concluded that imposing liability for such conduct would chill vigorous participation in the sport (147 Cal. App. 4th 461, 471) .

In Souza v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 262, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 389 , an eight-year-old snow skier lost her balance, veered off course, and collided with a plainly-visible snowmaking hydrant located on a ski run. There was sufficient room for skiers to go around the hydrant on either side. Most of the hydrant was padded, although apparently the nozzle that caused the skier's injury was not. She sued the ski resort, but the resort successfully defended on the basis of primary assumption of risk. The court of appeal held that the risk of colliding with other skiers, with ski lift towers, or with properly marked or plainly visible snowmaking or snow grooming equipment was a danger that was inherent in snow skiing. The court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the defendant increased the risks of the sport by placing the hydrant in the middle of the ski run, noting that it was undisputed that the hydrant was plainly visible and that there was sufficient room for skiers to go around it. The court also rejected the plaintiff's argument that the ski resort had a legal duty to completely pad the plainly-visible hydrant (138 Cal. App. 4th 262, 267) .

In Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198 , the plaintiff was participating in an organized, noncompetitive bicycle ride on a public highway when another rider traveling beside the plaintiff swerved into him. The plaintiff sued the coparticipant for negligence, but the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant based on the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The court of appeal affirmed. After holding that a signed release only applied to release the sponsors and organizers of the event, the court concluded that the bicycle ride was a sport subject to the primary assumption of risk doctrine, even though the ride was noncompetitive. A ride of that kind, with a large number of riders, is an athletic activity done for enjoyment and physical challenge (105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1220-1221) . Furthermore, the risk of injury caused by a negligent coparticipant who swerves into another rider was inherent in the sport (105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1222) . Finally, based on the fact that a majority of the California

Supreme Court appeared to agree with the proposition that the negligence per se doctrine could not be used to impose a duty of care under circumstances in which negligence was not actionable under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, the court rejected the argument that the primary assumption of risk doctrine was abrogated because the defendant allegedly violated various Vehicle Code provisions (105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1226) .

In West v. Sundown Little League of Stockton, Inc. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 351, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 , the plaintiff was a ten-year-old participant on a Little League Baseball team who was hit in the eye during pregame practice by a fly ball that he lost sight of in the glare of the sun. The plaintiff brought suit against the league, its agents, and his coach. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that the possibility of being hit with a ball when it gets lost in the glare of the sun, either in practice or during a game, was an inherent risk of playing baseball. The court rejected the argument that the coach or the league had done anything to increase this risk. The fact that the coach was serving up fly balls from the left field line to center field at the time of the injury was irrelevant, because that was the same trajectory that a ball hit to right field would take during a game. Moreover, the duty of the league and its coaches was not to increase the inherent risks, and they owed no duty to decrease the risks inherent in the game. Therefore, they owed no duty to take affirmative steps to protect the players from fly balls by providing nonstandard equipment, such as protective glasses to reduce the glare (96 Cal. App. 4th 351, 359) . The court also noted that it was irrelevant that the injury occurred during practice, rather than during a game, and rejected the argument that liability could be predicated on the fact that, in hindsight, the coach may have pushed the plaintiff beyond his skill level (96 Cal. App. 4th 351, 360-361) .

In Distefano v. Forester (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 , the plaintiff was riding his motorcycle at an "off-roading" course when the defendant's dune buggy crested a blind hill and collided with the plaintiff as he ascended the opposite side. The plaintiff sued for negligence, but the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant on the basis of primary assumption of risk. The court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that the risk of inadvertent collision and injury was inherent when engaging in the recreational activity of off-roading at a course provided for those particular activities (85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1262-1264) . The court also concluded that driving fast in the middle of a dirt trail while ascending a blind hill was not so reckless as to be outside the range of ordinary activities involved in the sport (85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1274) . Finally, the court concluded that the defendant owed the plaintiff no duty to use a "spotter" at the top of the hill or equip his buggy with a tall whipper to make the vehicle visible over the crest of the hill, because the plaintiff failed to provide evidence that the lack of these precautions was so reckless as to be outside the range of ordinary activities involved in the sport (85 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1275) .

In American Golf Corp. v. Superior Court (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 30, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683 , the plaintiff was golfing when he was struck by an errant golf ball that ricocheted off a wooden yardage marker after being hit by a companion golfer. The plaintiff brought suit against the golf course, alleging that it was negligent in the design and placement of the yardage marker. The trial court denied the defendant's motion for summary judgment, but the court of appeal held that summary judgment was proper under the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The court of appeal held that the risk of being hit by an errant shot is inherent to the sport of golf, yardage markers are integral to play, and there was no triable issue as to whether the golf course increased the risk of being hit by an errant shot through its design and placement of the yardage marker. In this case, the court noted that the plaintiff's injury was sustained when another golfer hooked his shot and struck an object that was not in the line of play and had not been removed, even though it was removable. In addition, there were no prior reports of injuries caused by the construction or location of any of the fairway yardage markers on the course. Therefore, the golf course had no duty to protect the plaintiff from the inherent risk of being struck by an errant shot under those circumstances. The court also rejected the claim that a triable issue of fact was created by the opinion of the plaintiff's expert that the particular yardage marker should have been farther from the fairway or made of softer material (79 Cal. App. 4th 30, 38-39) .

In Record v. Reason (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 , the plaintiff suffered neck and back injuries from engaging in water "tubing" while being towed by a motorboat driven by the defendant. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant operated the motorboat negligently and at excessive speeds, causing the plaintiff to fall off the tube when the defendant tried to execute a sharp turn. The plaintiff also alleged that he had told the defendant immediately prior to going out on the water that he wanted to "go slow," and that the defendant should "take it easy." The trial court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment on the grounds that water tubing was a sport subject to the primary assumption of risk doctrine, that the purpose of the sport was to "whip around" and feel as if the participant were water skiing, and that the defendant's conduct was not reckless enough to take the defendant's conduct outside the protection of the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The court of appeal affirmed. After determining that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applied to water tubing, the court concluded that even if the plaintiff told the defendant not to drive the motorboat at a fast speed, those statements could not be used to change the inherent nature of the sport of water tubing or to take the defendant's actions out of the normal range of activities for that sport, if they were otherwise within that range (73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 483-484) . The court analyzed whether the defendant's actions increased the risk inherent in water tubing, and concluded that even if the defendant was driving the boat slightly above the recommended speed for the sport and turned too sharply, this activity was merely negligent and therefore protected by the primary assumption of risk doctrine. Holding a boat driver to a duty to ensure that the tube rider does not fall off the tube would inevitably chill participation in the sport of water tubing, the purpose of which was to ride the tube at a rate of speed that would cause the tube to whip through the water (73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 484-485) . However, as pointed out by the dissent in this case, the court of appeal's decision is subject to criticism on the grounds that the plaintiff's words to the defendant should have created a factual dispute as to whether the plaintiff actually assumed the risk of water tubing or merely assumed the risks of a less vigorous activity (73 Cal. App. 4th 472, 490-491) .

In Shelly v. Stepp (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 323 , the plaintiff was injured when a racehorse he was exercising at a racetrack collided with another horse also being exercised at the track. The plaintiff argued that the other horse was too young and too easily spooked, and thus should not have been exercising on the track when other, more mature horses were exercising, absent a second horse and rider to control the young horse. Holding that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applied, the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants, the owners of the horse that caused the injury and employers of the rider of that horse. The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the primary assumption of risk doctrine does not apply to practice activities in preparation for competitive events. The court concluded that because racehorses are by nature difficult to control, a rider traveling on a track at high speeds in close proximity to others engaged in similar activity assumes the risk of injury caused by another unruly horse, even though the injury may have been caused through the ordinary negligence of the person in charge of the other horse (62 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294-1295) .

In Balthazor v. Little League Baseball, Inc. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 47, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 , an 11-year-old boy who was struck in the face by a wild pitch during a Little League baseball game sued the League for his injuries. The trial court granted the Leagues' request for summary judgment, concluding recovery was barred by the doctrine of primary assumption of risk. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the plaintiff failed to assert any basis for finding that the League breached a duty to protect him from the injury sustained, because the injury resulted from an errant pitch, a risk inherent in the sport (62 Cal. App. 4th 47, 53) . The court rejected all three of the plaintiff's arguments that attempted to show that the League increased the risks inherent in baseball: that the League negligently supervised the game by failing to end it as sunset approached; that the League was negligent in failing to remove the "wild pitcher" from the game because he had earlier struck two other players; and that the League had a duty to reduce the risk of injury from being struck by a baseball by providing helmets with face guards. The court found that each factor was in reality a normal aspect of Little League baseball as played by youngsters everywhere. As to the face guard argument the court stated that under the doctrine of primary assumption of risk, the defendant has a duty not to increase the risks inherent in a sport, not to decrease the risks. Here, the face guard which the plaintiff argued should have been required was not a part of the normal safety equipment used by the League. The League's failure to require additional equipment did not increase the risk inherent in the sport, that a player might be struck by a carelessly thrown ball [62 Cal. App. 4th 47, 52] .

In Dilger v. Moyles (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591 , the plaintiff, while golfing, was struck by a ball hit by another golfer. Whether or not the defendant yelled "fore" while hitting his errant shot was disputed. The plaintiff sued the other golfer. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant finding that primary assumption of the risk barred the plaintiff's lawsuit. The appellate court affirmed. First, the court ruled that the doctrine of assumption of the risk applied to the sport of golf (54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1454) . The court determined that the failure to yell "fore", while possibly negligent, was not that reckless or intentional conduct contemplated by the Knight Court. Whether or not the golfer yells "fore" does not alter the inherent risk of the sport, being struck by a golf ball (54 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1456) .

In Staten v. Superior Court (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , the plaintiff was a figure skater who was injured when she collided with another figure skater during a group skating session. The plaintiff brought a personal injury action against the other skater, her parents, the skating club she belonged to as well as the ice rink. The defendants moved for summary judgment on the ground of primary assumption of the risk. The trial court denied the motion, specifically ruling there was a triable issue of material fact on the question whether such an injury as suffered by the plaintiff was an inherent risk in figure skating. The court of appeal reversed, relying on the case of Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (discussed in § 165.400[3][a]). The plaintiff argued that Knight only applied to contact sports, and not to "solo" figure skating. The court agreed with the defendants that collisions with other skaters in group skating sessions, and the injuries that may result therefrom, were inherent risks of the sport of figure skating. Further, the court ruled that this would be true regardless of whether the group skating was practice for skating competition or merely recreational (45 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1634) .

In Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 , the widow of a man killed during a rock climbing class brought a wrongful death action against the sponsor of the class. The defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground that the action was barred by the doctrine of primary assumption of risk. The trial court denied the motion, holding that the defendant owed the decedent a duty of care as a matter of law. The court of appeal noted that in the context of sporting activities, the overriding consideration in the application of primary assumption of risk is to avoid imposing a duty that might chill vigorous participation in the implicated activity and thereby alter its fundamental nature. In student/instructor cases, the determination of duty turns on the facts surrounding their levels of experience and their relationships to one another in the activity. As the moving party on the motion for summary judgment, the defendant had the burden of establishing that the decedent was not taken beyond his level of experience and capability, and that the risk was not beyond that inherent in any top rope climbing activity. The court concluded that the defendant met its burden, because falling is the very risk inherent in the sport of rock climbing and cannot be completely eliminated without destroying the sport itself (41 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1046) .

In Stimson v. Carlson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 , the plaintiff sued for damages based on injuries that he suffered when he was hit by the mainsheets of the defendant's sailboat, on which the plaintiff was sailing recreationally as one of a six-person crew. The plaintiff was an experienced sailor and had sailed on the defendant's boat a number of times. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant, based on the defense of assumption of risk. The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that a swinging boom is a risk inherent in the sport of sailing. The defendant's failure to give an audible warning of a course change--the boom having swung and hit the plaintiff in the execution of a course change--may have been unexpected but was not reckless and did not alter the fundamental risk of a swinging boom on a sailboat (11 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1205-1206) . The court concluded, "Particularly in the area of athletics and recreation, the doctrine of primary assumption of risk prevents lawsuits among participants who are knowingly engaged in the normal activities, and inherent risks, of an active sport. By eliminating liability for unintended accidents, the doctrine ensures that the fervor of athletic competition will not be chilled by the constant threat of litigation from every misstep, sharp turn and sudden stop. ... On a larger scale, participation in amateur athletics is a socially desirable activity that improves the mental and physical well-being of its participants. The freedom to enjoy such activity is preserved through application of the doctrine of primary assumption of risk" (11 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1206) .

[b] Rule Applies to Student-Teacher Relationship

In Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 , the plaintiff was employed as a probation officer at a youth detention facility. The plaintiff was injured by her trainer while engaging in a self-defense maneuver at a required training session, and the injury left her unable to work as a correctional officer or peace officer. The plaintiff sued the training course business and its owner for negligence and intentional tort. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on the grounds that the claims were barred by the primary assumption of risk doctrine, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal reviewed the primary assumption of risk doctrine in the context of physical sports and training, noting its application in the student-teacher context and the fact that liability is not imposed on an instructor simply because, in hindsight, the instructor may have pushed the student beyond the student's capabilities. Liability can only be imposed if the instructor intentionally injured the student, acted recklessly, or otherwise increased the risks inherent in the activity. Because the plaintiff presented no evidence that the instructor had done anything to increase the risks inherent in the training activity, and because the injury suffered by the plaintiff was an inherent risk of the training maneuver and comparable to the risks associated with her job, the primary assumption of risk doctrine barred the plaintiff's claims (110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1022-1024) .

In Kane v. National Ski Patrol Sys., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 204, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 , a married couple, both experienced skiers, were engaged in an instruction course in preparation for joining a volunteer ski patrol at a ski resort. After being led by an instructor to an ungroomed, icy part of the most difficult trail at the resort, the husband lost his skis and poles and slid over a cliff. The same then happened to the wife as she went to look for her husband. The wife sustained a severely broken leg, and the husband was killed. The wife and her two sons then brought a suit for personal injuries and wrongful death against the resort and the organization that conducted the training. After the resort settled, the trial court ruled for the plaintiffs, and the remaining defendant appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that liability was precluded by the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The court held that as a matter of law, the ski instructor's assessment errors in evaluating either the skill level of his students or the difficulty of the conditions of the terrain did not rise to the level of recklessness sufficient to overcome the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The court noted that the risks of falling and being injured or even killed are inherent in skiing and that instructors must make subjective judgments about a student's skill level to sufficiently challenge the student so that the student will improve those skills. The court also concluded that holding the ski patrol instructor liable under the circumstances would discourage the provision of ski patrol training, which would in turn endanger all skiers (88 Cal. App. 4th 204, 214) .

In Lupash v. City of Seal Beach (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920 , the plaintiff was severely injured while participating in a junior lifeguard competition when he allegedly tripped over a natural depression in the shallow ocean bottom and fell forward into the water. He brought suit against the city that sponsored the event, alleging that the city had assumed a special obligation to protect the participants when selecting the particular beach, which was unduly risky; that the instructors in the competition had negligently failed to instruct the participants regarding safe entry into the ocean and checking the ocean floor first; and that the instructors had been negligent in cajoling or verbally pushing him into continuing with the competition when they knew that he was tired and upset. The trial court entered a judgment of nonsuit, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal reiterated the rule that public entities do not owe the general public a duty to provide safe beaches or warn of concealed dangers, regardless of whether lifeguards are present. The court then rejected the plaintiff's claim that the particular beach selected was unduly risky compared to other beaches in the area (75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1434-1436) . As to the negligence allegations based on the actions of the instructors in guiding the junior lifeguards, the court applied established primary assumption of risk principles. In doing so, the court concluded that given the nature of a lifeguard's work, the instructors did nothing to increase the inherent risks, and had no duty to decrease the risk of injuries by instructing the junior lifeguards to walk down the beach and check the ocean floor for uneven terrain before swimming, especially in light of the fact that in the earlier parts of the competition, the plaintiff had already familiarized himself with the area (75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1436-1439) . The court also concluded that the coach's verbally pushing or cajoling of the plaintiff to continue the competition when he was tired and upset was normal in youth sports and did not constitute recklessness or show an intent to cause injury (75 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1439-1441) .

In Lilley v. Elk Grove Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 939, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638 , primary assumption of risk was successfully invoked by a school district and one of its instructors to defend against liability for an arm injury sustained by a student during a supervised wrestling practice while engaged in a maneuver with the instructor. The court of appeal, in affirming the summary judgment granted for the defendants by the trial court, held that the risk of the injury was inherent in the sport of wrestling, and the fact that the injury was sustained while practicing a maneuver with the instructor did not affect application of the doctrine. The court held that an instructor cannot be held liable merely because he or she may have pushed the student beyond his or her capabilities, absent evidence of recklessness or other risk-increasing activity (68 Cal. App. 4th 939, 943-944) . The court also held that Educ. Code § 44807, which imposes a general duty on school authorities to supervise students in order to prevent physical injuries to students caused by disorderly and dangerous practices, did not preclude application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine to injuries sustained during extracurricular sports activities (68 Cal. App. 4th 939, 944-946) .

In Aaris v. Las Virgenes Unified Sch. Dist. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 , the plaintiff was a high school cheerleader injured while practicing a gymnastic stunt during cheerleader practice at school while being supervised by an instructor. In the personal injury action for negligence against the school district, the trial court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment, finding the plaintiff had assumed the risk of the injury, which was inherent to modern cheerleading. The court of appeal affirmed. The court first rejected the plaintiff's claim that the primary assumption of risk doctrine did not apply to instructors or coaches, and held that there was no evidence the instructor took the cheerleading team beyond the scope of their level of experience and capability or did anything to increase the risk inherent in the gymnastic stunt (64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1117-1118) . The court also held that the instructor did not fail adequately to supervise the students such that the district could be liable for violation of its statutory duty under Educ. Code § 44807 (64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1118-1120) . The court also held that summary judgment was proper because the action was barred by an express waiver of liability executed before the injury by the plaintiff's mother that shielded the District from liability absent negligence on the part of the District. Since the District violated no legal duty of care to the student under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, the District could not be liable for negligence (64 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1120) .

In Fortier v. Los Rios Cmty. Coll. Dist. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 430, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 812 , a college student enrolled in an advanced football class brought a negligence action for injuries suffered when he collided with another player during a football practice drill. The defendants argued the injuries suffered by the plaintiff were inherent in the sport of football, and thus the plaintiff's claim was barred by primary assumption of the risk. The trial court granted summary judgment and the court of appeal affirmed, stating that the collision in which the plaintiff was injured was an inherent risk in the sport in which he was participating so that the plaintiff's injury could not result from an increase by the defendants in the inherent risk. The court rejected the plaintiff's arguments that the defendants breached their duty not to increase the inherent risks by encouraging class participants to be aggressive in the practice drills, misleading participants into believing the exercises would be noncontact drills, and failing to inform offensive players that defensive players would try to intercept passes. The plaintiff's injuries were the result of his voluntary participation in a sport in which the risk of injury due to accidental collision was known, acknowledged and accepted (45 Cal. App. 4th 430, 440) .

In Bushnell v. Japanese-Am. Religious & Cultural Ctr. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 , a student in a judo class was injured while attempting to perform an exercise with an instructor. The plaintiff contended that the defense of primary assumption of risk should not apply because he was injured by an instructor rather than an amateur coparticipant. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant judo club. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that application of the doctrine does not depend on whether the defendant is a coparticipant or whether the activity is competitive rather than co-operative. The correct approach is to examine the nature of the activity, the relationship of the defendant to the activity, and the relationship of the defendant to the plaintiff, and to then determine whether the defendant's conduct at issue is an inherent risk of the activity (43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 530) . The plaintiff had been working to improve his skills by repeating an exercise more and more quickly. There was no evidence that the instructor acted recklessly or with an intent to cause injury. The plaintiff's theory was that the instructor moved more quickly than he had expected, but instruction in an activity such as judo necessarily requires pushing a student to move more quickly, attempt a new move, or take some other action that the student previously may not have attempted (43 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532) . Concluding that to impose liability in this situation would chill vigorous participation in the activity, the court affirmed the summary judgment for the defendant.

[c] State Statute Does Not Impose Duty That Abrogates Rule

In Peart v. Ferro (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 , the plaintiff was a 16-year-old who was riding on personal watercraft that collided with another personal watercraft. The plaintiff, who had been riding at a faster rate of speed and attempting riskier maneuvers, attempted a turn approximately 200 feet in front of the other watercraft, which was traveling in a straight line at a moderate speed and unable to evade the plaintiff's maneuver. The plaintiff brought suit for negligence against the riders of the other vehicle. Although the watercraft were not technically jet skis because they were equipped with seats, the court of appeal held that there was no relevant difference between the case at hand and the facts of the case in Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 [see § 165.401[3][e]]. The court of appeal agreed with the court in Whelihan that operation of this type of personal watercraft for recreational purposes came within the primary assumption of risk doctrine (119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 70-78) . The court also agreed with the Whelihan court that Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 655, 655.3, and 655.7, which impose standards for the operation of personal watercraft and criminal sanctions for violations, did not abrogate the primary assumption of risk doctrine in the absence of any legislative intent to do so (119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 78-82) . Finally, the court noted that even if the statutes created a basis for imposing civil liability, the plaintiff failed to show that the defendants were negligent or otherwise violated any of the cited statutes. Instead, the evidence showed that the cause of the accident was the plaintiff's own maneuvers (119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 82-83) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.402

§ 165.402 Plaintiff Expressly Assumed Risk

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR NEGLIGENCE BECAUSE (1) PRIOR TO THE ACCIDENT IN WHICH PLAINTIFF SUSTAINED THE _____ [PERSONAL INJURIES or PROPERTY DAMAGE or PERSONAL INJURIES AND PROPERTY DAMAGE] COMPLAINED OF, PLAINTIFF SIGNED A VALID AGREEMENT BY THE TERMS OF WHICH PLAINTIFF ASSUMED ALL RISKS OF THE ACTIVITY INVOLVED AND EXPRESSLY RELEASED DEFENDANT FROM ANY AND ALL LIABILITY FOR FUTURE NEGLIGENCE RESULTING IN PERSONAL INJURY, PROPERTY DAMAGE, OR DEATH TO PLAINTIFF IN THE COURSE OF THAT ACTIVITY, AND (2) THE _____ [INJURIES or DAMAGE or INJURIES AND DAMAGE] TO PLAINTIFF WERE SUSTAINED IN THE COURSE OF THAT ACTIVITY.

A. Consensual Assumption of Risk Not Subsumed in Doctrine of Comparative Negligence. Only that aspect of the doctrine of assumption of risk referred to as implied unreasonable assumption of the risk, and not that aspect based on express consensual assumption of the risk, has been subsumed into the doctrine of comparative negligence (Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226).

B. Express Assumption of Risk. Assumption of risk applies when the plaintiff, in advance, has given his or her express consent to relieve the defendant of an obligation of conduct towards him or her, and to take his or her chances of injury from a known risk arising from what the defendant is to do or leave undone. The result is that a defendant is relieved of legal duty to the plaintiff, and, being under no duty, the defendant cannot be charged with negligence (Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299 ; Coates v. Newhall Land & Farming, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8, 236 Cal. Rptr. 181).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the defendant is not liable for negligence because the plaintiff expressly assumed the risk of injury [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . It should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.400 -165.401 that are applicable to the particular case.

This argument may arise in several procedural contexts. For example, the defendant may raise this argument in support of a motion for summary judgment, directed verdict, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or new trial. This argument may also arise in a challenge to the propriety of the trial court's decision to give certain jury instructions regarding comparative negligence or express assumption of risk [see Gonzalez v. Garcia (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 874, 875, 142 Cal. Rptr. 503] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that the plaintiff expressly assumed the risk prior to his or her injury by the defendant's allegedly negligent conduct. If a written exculpatory agreement is involved, counsel must show that the agreement does not involve the public interest [see Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 96-97, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441] . An exculpatory agreement, being essentially contractual in nature, is subject to the defenses generally applicable to contracts such as fraud, duress, and lack of consideration. For memoranda of points and authorities relating to these defenses, see Ch. 50, Contracts , and Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of the affirmative defense of assumption of the risk, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.400 -165.401. For points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

For a memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that a valid express assumption of risk by a decedent prior to his or her death is a complete defense to a wrongful death action, see Ch. 66, Death and Survival Actions .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.410- 411 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consensual Assumption of Risk Not Subsumed in Doctrine of Comparative Negligence

The factual and procedural background of Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d

1226 , is discussed in § 165.400[3][a]. In declaring that contributory negligence is no longer a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery and in adopting a system of comparative negligence, the Court discussed the status of the doctrine of assumption of the risk. It stated that assumption of the risk, to the extent that it overlaps contributory negligence, is to be subsumed under the general process of assessing liability in proportion to negligence (13 Cal. 3d 804, 829) . It explained that assumption of the risk is made up of at least two distinct defenses and proceeded to explain the difference between what is commonly referred to as implied unreasonable assumption of the risk and express assumption of the risk. The Court noted that in one form of assumption of the risk, often referred to as implied unreasonable assumption of the risk, the plaintiff unreasonably undertakes to encounter a specific known risk imposed by the defendant's negligence. In this type of assumption of the risk, the plaintiff's conduct, although he or she may encounter that risk in a prudent manner, is in reality a form of contributory negligence. Thus, implied unreasonable assumption of the risk appears to be merged with comparative negligence and liability may be assessed in proportion to fault in situations in which that doctrine arises (13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825) . The Court then proceeded to explain what is commonly referred to as express assumption of the risk. It stated that other situations within the doctrine of assumption of the risk are those, for example, when the plaintiff is held to agree to relieve the defendant of an obligation of reasonable conduct toward him or her. Such a situation would not involve contributory negligence, but rather a reduction of the defendant's duty of care. The court noted that this type of assumption of the risk is not subsumed into the system of comparative negligence (13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825) .

[b] Express Assumption of Risk

In Madison v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 250 Cal. Rptr. 299 , a wrongful death action, the decedent, the plaintiffs' 19-year-old son, drowned while participating in a scuba diving training class make-up dive. During the dive, decedent had run low on air. The defendants' instructor accompanied the decedent to the surface and directed him to swim toward a buoy that had been anchored prior to the commencement of the dive. The instructor then left the decedent alone on the surface to continue the dive with another student (which was a violation of the "buddy system" rule). About ten minutes later, when the instructor and the other student surfaced, the decedent was nowhere to be found. A search was commenced, and the decedent's body was located on the bottom. At the time he enrolled in the class, the decedent had signed a written waiver and release by the terms of which he voluntarily released, discharged, waived, and relinquished any and all actions or causes of action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death arising from his participation in the class and its activities. The defendants' motion for summary judgment was denied, and the defendants petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate.

In ordering issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the defendants' motion for summary judgment and to enter an order granting the motion, the court of appeal stated that assumption of risk means the plaintiff, in advance, has given his or her express consent to relieve the defendant of an obligation of conduct towards him or her, and to take his or her chances of injury from a known risk arising from what the defendant is to do or leave undone. The result is that a defendant is relieved of legal duty to the plaintiff, and, being under no duty, the defendant cannot be charged with negligence (203 Cal. App. 3d 589, 597) .

In Coates v. Newhall Land & Farming, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1, 236 Cal. Rptr. 181 , a wrongful death action, the plaintiffs' decedent was fatally injured while riding a dirt bike in a recreational park that was owned and operated by the defendants and included a trail used for off-road motorcycle (dirt bike) riding by the public. On entering the park and paying his admission, the decedent had signed a waiver and release form by the terms of which he expressly released the defendants from all liability for loss or damage and any claims or demands therefor, on account of injury to the person or property or resulting in the death of the releasor, whether caused by the negligence of the releasees or otherwise, and expressly assumed all risks of such loss, damage, or injury that might be sustained by him. His heirs sued for wrongful death, alleging negligent design and maintenance of the dirt bike trail. The trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment based on the preinjury contractual agreement the decedent had signed before he was injured and in which he had expressly assumed the risk of the activity, and the plaintiffs appealed. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal stated that assumption of risk means the plaintiff, in advance, has given his or her express consent to relieve the defendant of an obligation of conduct towards him or her, and to take his or her chances of injury from a known risk arising from what the defendant is to do or leave undone. The result is that a defendant is relieved of legal duty to the plaintiff, and, being under no duty, the defendant cannot be charged with negligence (191 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Express Assumption of Risk

In Benedek v. PLC Santa Monica (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1358, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 , the plaintiff was a health club member who tried to reposition a television set that normally faced an elliptical training machine. As he attempted to turn the television set, it began to slide off of its rack over his head, and when the plaintiff attempted to support the falling set, he sustained a knee injury. The plaintiff brought suit against the club, but the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant, and the court of appeal affirmed. The plaintiff's health club membership agreement contained a clear, unambiguous, explicit provision releasing the club from liability for all injuries to the member sustained on the premises, whether sustained while using exercise equipment or not. The court of appeal held that this release applied to the plaintiff's injury. The language of the release was clear and unambiguous, the purpose of the release was to allow the plaintiff access to the defendant's services and facilities, and the plaintiff's injury was sustained while in the defendant's facilities (104 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1358) .

In Platzer v. Mammoth Mountain Ski Area (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885 , the plaintiff was a minor who fell from a ski lift during a ski lesson. The trial court granted summary adjudication in favor of the ski resort on a claim for ordinary negligence on the basis of a release signed by the plaintiff's parent before the accident expressly protecting the resort from liability for ordinary negligence, and a jury returned a verdict for the defendant on a claim of gross negligence. The court of appeal affirmed the summary adjudication for the defendant on the ordinary negligence claim. The court held that nothing in Civ. Code § 2174, which allows a carrier to limit its obligations by special contract, or Civ. Code § 2175, which prohibits a carrier from negotiating an advance release for gross negligence, prevents a carrier such as a ski lift operator from negotiating a release from liability for ordinary negligence. The court also concluded that ski lift operations are part of a recreational sports activity that is routinely excluded from application of public policy limitations that might otherwise invalidate an express release from liability for negligence (104 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1257-1260) .

In Lund v. Bally's Aerobic Plus, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 733, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 , the plaintiff was injured when exercising under the supervision of a personal trainer employed by the defendant's health club. Following nonsuit for the defendant, the court of appeal affirmed based on an express assumption of risk and release from liability in the health club membership contract. The court held that the contract clearly and unambiguously covered the injury and that exculpatory agreements in the recreational sports context do not implicate the public interest (78 Cal. App. 4th 733, 738-739) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities §§ 165.403-165.409

[Reserved]

§§ 165.403[Reserved]

115 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.410

§ 165.410 Veterinarian Barred From Recovering for Animal Bite

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [VETERINARIAN or VETERINARY ASSISTANT] BECAUSE VETERINARIANS AND VETERINARY ASSISTANTS ARE BARRED FROM RECOVERING FOR ANIMAL BITES OCCURRING WHILE THEY ARE PROVIDING MEDICAL TREATMENT TO THOSE ANIMALS.

A. No Liability to Veterinarians and Veterinary Assistants. A variant of the firefighter's rule, the veterinarian's rule, bars recovery to veterinarians and their assistants who are bitten by animals while providing medical treatment to those animals (Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714, 211 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; see Cohen v. McIntyre (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 650, 655, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 143 ; see also Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 545, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347).

[Optional] B. No Liability to Kennel Workers. The rationale of the veterinarian rule is equally applicable to an injury suffered by a kennel worker who is bitten while tending to a dog under the kennel's care, thus providing an assumption of risk defense to the strict liability otherwise imposed under Civil Code § 3342, the dog-bite statute (Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1112, 1132, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553, 140 P.3d 848).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the defendant is not liable for injury to a veterinarian or veterinary assistant providing medical treatment to the defendant's animal, on the ground that under the "veterinarian's rule" the defendant had no duty to prevent the injury [see Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d

709, 714, 211 Cal. Rptr. 668] . Optional Paragraph B may be used if the plaintiff is a kennel worker rather than a veterinarian or veterinarian assistant. Issue may arise, for example, in a motion for summary judgment [see, e.g., Baker v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 722, 181 Cal. Rptr. 311] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may discuss the plaintiff's status as a veterinarian or veterinary assistant and the occurrence of the animal bite while the plaintiff was providing medical care to the animal pursuant to some agreement between the defendant and the plaintiff.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of forms of the affirmative defense of assumption of the risk, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires , Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.400 -165.402 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability to Veterinarians and Veterinary Assistants

The factual and procedural background of Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 , is discussed in § 165.430[3][a]. The Supreme Court noted that several decisions have held that the defendants who contract with veterinarians to treat their dogs are not liable under the firefighter's rule to the veterinarians or their assistants for injuries sustained from dog bites occurring during examination or treatment of the animals. In this situation, the defendant's ordinary duty of care is negated because of the nature of the activity and the relationship of the parties. The Court held that the application of the rule may be sound if it is based on the defendant's relationship with the plaintiff and the defendant's conduct in entrusting an animal to the plaintiff's professional care and control. However, decisions applying the rule to veterinarians and their assistants are on shaky ground if they are based on the veterinarian's or veterinary assistant's subjective acceptance of the foreseeable occupational hazard of dog bites (8 Cal. 4th 532, 545) .

The factual and procedural background of Cohen v. McIntyre (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 650, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 143 , is discussed in § 165.400[3][a].

In Nelson v. Hall (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 211 Cal. Rptr. 668 , a veterinary assistant filed suit against the owners of a dog that bit her while she was assisting in the dog's treatment at the animal hospital where she was employed. The plaintiff brought her action under the so-called "Dog Bite Statute" (Civ. Code § 3342), alleging strict liability. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendants, who contended that the plaintiff had assumed the risk of injury, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, ruling that the plaintiff had, by accepting employment involving a known risk, assumed the risk and relieved the defendants of any duty of care and thus any liability for the injuries caused by the dog's bite (165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714) . The court noted that assuming the risks inherent in one's occupation is the basis of the firefighter's rule, which bars recovery in actions based on strict liability as well as negligence, and held therefore that that rule applied to both veterinarians and veterinary assistants (165 Cal. App. 3d 709, 714-715) .

[b] No Liability to Kennel Workers

In Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1112, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 553, 140 P.3d 848 , plaintiff, a technician at a kennel, was bitten on the foot and ankle by a pit bull that was being boarded at the kennel and sustained serious nerve injuries. Plaintiff sued the dog's owner, asserting claims for statutory and common law strict liability, negligence, and tortious misrepresentation. The trial court initially allowed plaintiff to proceed at trial on a claim of statutory strict liability under the dog bite statute, Civ. Code § 3342, which generally makes a dog's owner strictly liable for injury caused when the dog bites another person. At the close of evidence, however, the trial court reversed course and refused to instruct the jury on strict liability under that statute. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. Plaintiff moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the statutory strict liability claim, but the court denied the motion. Plaintiff then moved for a new trial, which the trial court granted after concluding that it was unfair to have required the plaintiff to build a case premised on the applicability of the strict liability statute and then disallow the claim at the close of evidence. Both parties appealed. The court of appeal upheld the grant of a new trial, but agreed with the trial court that plaintiff could not recover under the dog bite statute by virtue of the so-called veterinarian's rule, since as a kennel worker, plaintiff assumed the risk of being bitten by dogs that are boarded at the kennel. Plaintiff appealed this ruling.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the court of appeal. The Court concluded that the assumption of risk doctrine, as embodied in the veterinarian's rule, provided a complete defense to the claim brought under Civ. Code § 3342 (39 Cal. 4th 1112, 1132) . The Court recognized that the dog bite statute generally imposes a duty of care on every dog owner to prevent his or her dog from biting persons while in a public place or while lawfully in a private place. However, the Court saw nothing to suggest that the Legislature intended that this duty of care should apply in those situations in which the care, custody, and control of the dog has been entrusted to trained professionals in exchange for compensation, as is the case when a dog is left with a veterinarian or placed in a commercial kennel (39 Cal. 4th 1112, 1128) . The Court concluded that when kennel operators assume for the care and handling of a dog, they also assume the risk that the dog might bight someone. The kennel operator, rather than the dog's absent owner, is the party in position to take precautions to ensure that the dog does not bite someone, including a kennel employee (39 Cal. 4th 1112, 1129) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.411

§ 165.411 Tow Truck Driver Barred From Recovering for Injuries Due to Risk Necessitating Presence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS BARRED FROM RECOVERY FROM DEFENDANT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF, AS A TOW TRUCK DRIVER, WAS INJURED WHILE PERFORMING HIS/HER DUTIES IN THAT CAPACITY, IN A SITUATION THAT REQUIRED HIS/HER PRESENCE FOR THAT PURPOSE. PLAINTIFF'S NEGLIGENCE CLAIM IS THEREFORE BARRED BY THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE.

A. Motorist Owes No Duty to Tow Truck Driver to Keep Vehicle in Good Mechanical Condition. A tow truck driver's contract-based obligation, through a motorist's membership in an organization providing help to the motorist in case of mechanical breakdown, along with compelling policy considerations, warrant the conclusion that the motorist owes no duty to the tow truck driver to keep his or her car in good mechanical condition (Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 69, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85).

B. Firefighter's Rule Applies to Private as Well as Public Safety Employees. The assumption of risk doctrine, and more specifically, the firefighter's rule, applies to some private workers, including auto club tow truck drivers (Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 72-73, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule bars recovery for injury, on the ground that a motorist owes no duty to a tow truck driver to keep his or her car in good mechanical order [see Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 69, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] .

This issue may arise, for example, in a motion for summary judgment [see, e.g., Dyer v. Superior Court 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 65, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may provide facts showing the plaintiff's contract-based obligation to the defendant motorist to render assistance in the event of a mechanical breakdown, and the nature of the injury-causing activity, and argue that the plaintiff should not be entitled to recover because the particular risk of harm that caused the injury was the very risk inherent in the plaintiff's contractual obligation.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of the affirmative defense of assumption of the risk, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms an discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires , Ch. 380, Negligence and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.400 -165.402 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motorist Owes No Duty to Tow Truck Driver to Keep Vehicle in Good Mechanical Condition

In Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 69, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 , a driver experienced mechanical problems while driving on the freeway. The driver, an auto club member, pulled his car completely off the freeway onto the right shoulder and called for a tow truck. An auto club tow truck driver arrived and parked his truck completely off the freeway on the right shoulder, in front of the driver's car. After obtaining the driver's membership information, the tow truck driver walked towards the truck. When he was between the car and the tow truck, another car struck the parked car, pinning the tow driver between the car and the tow truck. The tow truck driver, the plaintiff, sued the driver of the broken down car, the defendant, for negligence, alleging that the defendant had a duty to maintain his car, and his failure to do so caused the mechanical breakdown that brought the plaintiff to the freeway location where he suffered injury. The defendant filed a motion for summary judgment contending that the doctrine of assumption of risk and the firefighter's rule barred the plaintiff's action against him. The trial court denied summary judgment and the court of appeal granted the defendant's petition for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal ruled that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for summary judgment and entered a new order granting summary judgment in the defendants favor. The court concluded that on the facts of this case, the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff to maintain his car in running order, and hence that the assumption of risk doctrine barred the plaintiff's negligence claim (56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 72) . The court first determined the extent to which a footnote in another case controlled the resolution of the substantive legal issues presented by the defendant's motion. At the trial court level the plaintiff opposed the defendant's summary judgment motion on the basis of a footnote in Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 (discussed in § 165.430[3][a]), in which the Supreme Court rejected the reasoning by which a Court of Appeal applied the firefighter's rule to claims by private tow truck operators [see Holland v. Crumb (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366] . The trial court had concluded that the Neighbarger footnote was dispositive and on that basis denied summary judgment. The court of appeal ruled that this footnote, viewed in context, did not overrule the holding in Holland, nor was the footnote a persuasive dictum that Holland was wrongly decided. Although the court found that the Neighbarger footnote left the holding in Holland intact, it declined to treat Holland as persuasive precedent. According to the court, the footnote's clear import was that the question decided in Holland should be analyzed afresh under the principles stated in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 .

The court then analyzed this case under the principles stated in Knight. It said that under Knight the key question concerning the application of assumption of risk doctrine was whether by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, the defendant owed a legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury. It applied this rule to the plaintiff's contention that the defendant breached his duty to maintain his car and thereby prevent the call for assistance that brought him to the freeway shoulder and determined that (1) the "nature of the activity" was taking responsibility for the defendant's car in the case of breakdown, even at hazardous locations such as freeway shoulders, (2) the "parties relationship to the activity" was the plaintiff's contractual obligation to provide his service, and (3) the "particular risk of harm that caused the injury" was the very risk inherent in working on the defendant's car on a freeway shoulder. The court's conclusion that the assumption of the risk doctrine precluded imposing liability on the defendant was also supported by an analysis of the factors in Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 (discussed in § 165.30[3][d]). Under this analysis the court found that the plaintiff's injuries were not a foreseeable result of the defendant's negligence in maintaining his car because this negligence only brought the plaintiff to the freeway shoulder, but did not make it more probable that a negligent third party would harm him at that location, and that it was good social policy to encourage motorists like the defendant to rely on their contractual arrangements for aid from private towing services, rather than to discourage them by imposing on them potential liability for asking for help (56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 72) .

[b] Firefighter's Rule Applies to Private as Well as Public Safety Employees

The facts and procedural background of Dyer v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 are discussed in § 165.411[3][a]. The court concluded, on the facts of the case, that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff to maintain his car in running order, and that the assumption of risk doctrine, specifically, the firefighter's rule, barred the plaintiff's claim for negligence against the defendant. The plaintiff contended that this doctrine was inapplicable to him because he was not a public safety employee, and thus he did not receive the "special public compensation for confronting the dangers posed by the defendant's negligence" that the Neighbarger court identified as one of the policy bases for the firefighter's rule. In Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 542, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 (discussed in § 165.410[3][a]), the Supreme Court stated that the firefighter's rule was intended to eliminate the duty of care to a limited class of workers, the need for whose employment arises from certain inevitable risks that threaten the public welfare. That Court identified three policy considerations warranting elimination of duty. First, it said that it was unfair to charge the defendant with a duty of care to prevent injury to the plaintiff arising from the very condition or hazard the defendant had contracted with the plaintiff to remedy or confront. Second, it said that public safety employees receive special public compensation for confronting dangers posed by the defendant's negligence. Third, abolition of the firefighter's rule would embroil the courts in relatively pointless litigation over rights of indemnification among the employer, the retirement system and the defendant's insurer. The court of appeal in Dyer ruled that Neighbarger did not support the plaintiff's contention. According to the court, Neighbarger discussedin dicta applications of the assumption of risk doctrine to private workers, but did not decide the viability of these applications. Moreover, the Neighbarger court acknowledged that the firefighter's rule has been applied to some safety workers despite the absence of "special public compensation," and stated that in these cases, the crucial question was the relationship between the public and the safety workers. The court in this case held that the defendant's relationship with the plaintiff, together with compelling policy considerations, warranted the conclusion that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff (56 Cal. App. 4th 61, 73) . Lastly, the court noted that the post-Neighbarger case of Herrle v. Estate of Marshall (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1761, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 demonstrated that the doctrine applies to some private workers, such as certified nurse's aides.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities §§ 165.412-165.419

[Reserved]

§§ 165.412[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.420

§ 165.420 Primary Assumption of Risk Does Not Bar Recovery if Imposition of Duty Would Not Fundamentally Alter Nature of Sporting Activity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION IS NOT BARRED BY THE PRIMARY ASSUMPTION OF RISK DOCTRINE BECAUSE IMPOSITION OF A DUTY OF CARE ON THE DEFENDANT WOULD NOT FUNDAMENTALLY ALTER THE NATURE OF, OR CHILL VIGOROUS PARTICIPATION IN, THE SPORTING ACTIVITY.

Duty of Care Would Not Fundamentally Alter Nature of Activity. If imposition of a duty of care on the defendant would not fundamentally alter the nature of the sporting activity, or chill vigorous participation in that activity, the primary assumption of risk defense does not apply (Hemady v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted by a plaintiff in opposition to the defense that the primary assumption of risk bars recovery in the action. The grounds for the opposition are that under the circumstances of the case, imposition of a duty of care on the defendant would not fundamentally alter the nature of the activity in which the parties were engaged at the time of the injury.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing the circumstances of the injury, describing the nature of the injury-causing activity, and argue that imposition of a duty of care on the defendant would not fundamentally alter the nature of that activity or chill vigorous participation.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of complaint for negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities provided in §§ 165.400-165.401 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities provided in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Care Would Not Fundamentally Alter Nature of Activity

In Hemady v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 , plaintiff was a seventh-grade student in a physical education golf class who was injured when inadvertently hit in the face by a golf club swung by another student. The student sued the instructor and the school district, alleging negligent supervision. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine. The trial court concluded that plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue of material fact as to whether defendants increased the risks inherent in the sporting activity of golf.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the primary assumption of risk was not a defense under the circumstances of the case and that the defendants' potential liability should be determined under a prudent person standard of care. The court noted that application of the primary assumption of risk defense is justified in order to avoid fundamentally altering, or chilling vigorous participation in, activities that by their very nature pose certain risks, such as sporting activities (143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 573-574) . However, imposing a duty of care can be appropriate if such a duty would not fundamentally alter the inherent nature of the activity. The court concluded that being hit in the head by a golf club was not an inherent risk of the game of golf. The court also concluded that imposing a prudent person duty of care on the defendants in order to prevent an injury such as that sustained by the plaintiff would not fundamentally alter the game of golf, chill vigorous participation in the sport, or chill a coach's ability to challenge student athletes to push themselves in order to hone their skills (143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576-579) . The court also noted that the prudent person standard of care had historically been used to determine the liability of school districts and their instructors for injuries to students sustained during school hours, and nothing in the primary assumption of risk cases had overruled this principle (143 Cal. App. 4th 566, 579-583) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Duty of Care Would Not Fundamentally Alter Nature of Activity

In Kindrich v. Long Beach Yacht Club (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 824 , a yacht club loaned one of its boats to the family of a deceased member of the club for use during a ceremonial spreading of the deceased's ashes at sea. While returning to the club after the ceremony, the deceased's son broke his leg when he jumped off of the boat in an attempt to help in tying off the boat as it was docking. He brought suit for negligence against the yacht club, alleging that the steps that had been provided when boarding had been removed. The trial court granted judgment for the yacht club on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, but the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal held that primary assumption of risk did not apply to plaintiff's activities while a passenger on the boat and that imposition of a duty of care on the yacht club under the facts of the case would not fundamentally alter the nature of the activity of riding as a passenger on a boat. The court concluded that plaintiff passenger was not engaged in an active sport when he was injured and any comparison of the negligence of the respective parties was a question of fact still to be resolved under secondary assumption of risk principles (167 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1262) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.421

§ 165.421 Plaintiff's Express Assumption of Risk Does Not Extend to Defendant's Gross Negligence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S PRE-INJURY AGREEMENT TO EXCUSE DEFENDANT FROM LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE DOES NOT EXCUSE DEFENDANT FROM LIABILITY FOR GROSS NEGLIGENCE.

Clause Excusing Defendant From Liability for Negligence Inapplicable to Gross Negligence Claim. While a pre-injury agreement shielding a party from liability for negligence may be justified in order to create an incentive for that party to provide a valuable service for the public, such an agreement does not excuse the party from liability for gross negligence, because exculpation from liability for gross negligence removes any obligation to adhere to even a minimal standard of care (City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 776-777, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a plaintiff's pre-injury agreement to excuse the defendant from liability for the defendant's own negligence does not shield the defendant from liability for gross negligence. For these purposes, "gross negligence" would include the failure to exercise even slight care, or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct [City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 766, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should include argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, counsel could include facts showing the language of the pre-injury agreement, showing the type of activity or services provided by the defendant, and argue that public policy would not be served by allowing the agreement to shield the defendant from liability for gross negligence.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities provided in § 165.402 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities provided in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Clause Excusing Defendant From Liability for Negligence Inapplicable to Gross Negligence Claim

In City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527, 161 P.3d 1095 , plaintiffs were the parents of a 14-year-old girl who drowned while swimming in a pool during a city's recreational activities program designed for children who were developmentally disabled. Plaintiff's daughter suffered from cerebral palsy, epilepsy, and other disabilities. Prior to allowing a child to participate in the program, the city required parents to sign release agreements excusing the city from liability for any injuries that might occur while participating in the program, including injuries caused by the city's own negligence and that of its employees. On the day of the decedent's accident, she had suffered a mild seizure about 45 minutes before being allowed to swim in the water. Supervisors were watching the decedent and several hundred other children in the pool area, but the supervisor who had been monitoring the decedent turned away momentarily while the decedent was swimming after a successful dive. When she turned back, she did not see the decedent. Five minutes later, lifeguards pulled the girl from the bottom of the pool and she died the next day. Plaintiffs sued the city and its employee for wrongful death, but the defendants argued that the pre-injury release excused them from liability. However, the trial court denied the defendant's motion for summary judgment upon concluding that there were issues of fact concerning whether the release was valid and whether the defendants acted with gross negligence. Defendants sought a writ of mandate to set aside the trial court's order denying the motion. The court of appeal denied the writ, holding that while the release was enforceable as to any claim of ordinary negligence on the part of the city or its employees, the release was unenforceable as to any claim of gross negligence. The court then reviewed the facts in the record and concluded that a triable issue of fact existed as to potential gross negligence on the part of the city and its employees, precluding summary judgment. Defendants appealed.

The California Supreme Court granted review solely on the issue of whether the release extended to claims of gross negligence and agreed with the court of appeal that it did not. While the city argued that the language of the release covered all degrees of negligence, the Court disagreed and held that the release did not excuse the city from liability for gross negligence, which would include the failure to exercise even slight care or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct (41 Cal. 4th 747, 766). The Court recognized that public interest restraints on the enforcement of exculpatory clauses can limit the enforceability of such clauses even when mere negligence is alleged and noted that most other states that had considered the issue had concluded that comparable exculpatory clauses did not extend to gross negligence (41 Cal. 4th 747, 755-760) . Unlike the "public interest" factors to be considered when analyzing a release for mere negligence, however, the Court based its conclusion that a release purporting to cover gross negligence is generally invalid on the public policy that a contrary rule would remove any incentive to adhere to even a minimal standard of care. The Court also noted that the distinction between ordinary and gross negligence reflects an established rule of policy that harsher legal consequences should result when negligence is aggravated rather than merely ordinary (41 Cal. 4th 747, 764, 776-777) . While the city had a legitimate interest in protecting itself from the risk of unlimited liability when offering recreational programs, neither the defendants nor amicus curiae were able to provide the Court with any data from other states showing that a rule in which exculpatory releases are not extended to gross negligence has a actual negative impact on the availability of recreational opportunities (41 Cal. 4th 747, 768-776) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
2. Assumption of Risk

16-165 California Points & Authorities §§ 165.422-165.429

[Reserved]

§§ 165.422[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.430

§ 165.430 Firefighter's Rule Bars Recovery for Injuries Due to Risk Necessitating Presence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] BECAUSE A MEMBER OF THE PUBLIC OWES NO DUTY OF CARE TO PROTECT A _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] FROM THE VERY RISK NECESSITATING THE PRESENCE OF THE _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER]. THEREFORE A _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] CANNOT RECOVER FOR INJURY RESULTING FROM NEGLIGENCE OR WILLFUL MISCONDUCT IF THAT INJURY IS DUE TO THE SPECIFIC RISK THAT NECESSITATED HIS/HER PRESENCE.

No Liability for Injury Due to Risk Necessitating Presence. A publicly employed police officer or firefighter cannot recover for injury resulting from negligence or willful misconduct, if the injury was due to the specific risk that necessitated his or her presence on the scene (see Walters v. Sloan (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 199, 202, 142 Cal. Rptr. 152, 571 P.2d 609 ; Baker v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 713, 181 Cal. Rptr. 311); see also Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 538, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the defendant is not liable for injury to a police officer or firefighter called to the scene, on the ground that under the firefighter's rule there is no liability to the police officer or firefighter for injuries resulting from any original negligence that caused the officer's intervention [see Walters v. Sloan (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 199, 202, 142 Cal. Rptr. 152, 571 P.2d 609] . It should be combined with the form in § 165.431 if applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may discuss the relationship between the risk necessitating the presence of the police officer or firefighter, and the cause of the plaintiff's injury. Counsel may properly raise the issue, for example, in a motion for summary judgment [see, e.g., Baker v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 722, 181 Cal. Rptr. 311] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of answer to a cause of action for negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires , Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 165.431. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.450 -165.455 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability for Injury Due to Risk Necessitating Presence

Walters v. Sloan (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 199, 142 Cal. Rptr. 152, 571 P.2d 609 , was an action brought by a police officer against the defendants who left their home in the charge of their teenage daughter. Acting with their knowledge, she hosted a large party at which alcohol and drugs were available and disorder eventually developed. The plaintiff, who was on duty, was sent to the defendants' residence where he was attacked while trying to arrest various guests for being drunk in public. The trial court entered a judgment of dismissal, and the plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Court affirmed, rejecting the argument that the firefighter's rule, which applies to police officers as well as firefighters, should be abolished (20 Cal. 3d 199, 202) . The Court noted that the rule, which precludes firefighters and police officers from "complain[ing] of negligence in the creation of the very occasion for [their] engagement," is based not only on fundamental tort principles denying recovery to anyone who knowingly and voluntarily confronts a hazard, but also on modern public policy (20 Cal. 3d 199, 204-205) . Because most fires are attributable to negligence, it would be too burdensome to impose liability for firefighters' injuries on everyone who carelessly caused or failed to prevent a fire. The Court also pointed out that firefighters and police officers are paid to face the hazards of their professions and are provided special benefits for being injured on duty that are in addition to the usual workers' compensation benefits (20 Cal. 3d 199, 205-206) .

In Baker v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 181 Cal. Rptr. 311 , the plaintiffs were two paid-call members of a fire department who were injured while fighting a fire at a ranch. As paid-call firefighters, the plaintiffs were volunteers who could choose to respond to fires and, if they responded, were paid $5 per fire. One of the plaintiffs was a full-time cook and the other was a homemaker. The injuries occurred when the plaintiffs jumped from a truck and the truck rolled over on them. The plaintiffs sued the ranch owners and some of their employees, alleging negligence, willful misconduct, and violations of statutes, ordinances, and regulations, in setting the fire and failing to control it. The defendants petitioned for mandate after the trial court denied their motion for summary judgment, apparently on the ground that the firefighter's rule did not apply to volunteer firefighters.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to vacate is order denying the motion and enter an order granting the motion and dismissing the action. The court held that the firefighter's rule that precluded recovery for injuries suffered by firefighters in attempting to put out a fire was applicable to volunteer firefighters. In doing so, the court observed that the primary basis for the rule was the fundamental principle that one who has knowingly and voluntarily confronted a hazard cannot recover for injuries sustained thereby (129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 713-714) . The court held that the type of assumption of risk underlying the firefighter's rule continued to be viable as a separate defense negating a defendant's duty of care after comparative negligence replaced the contributory negligence doctrine pursuant to Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 826, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , discussed in § 165.380[3][a] (129 Cal. App. 3d 710, 720-721) .

Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 , was an action for personal injuries brought by two safety employees of an oil company. The plaintiffs were injured by liquid petroleum that ignited and burned when employees of the defendant, a company that contracted to provide maintenance services to the oil company, negligently unplugged a valve on the oil company's premises. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant on the ground that the firefighter's rule applied and precluded the existence of a cause of action. The court of appeal upheld the order, ruling that private safety employees assume the risk of injury that may occur when they respond to emergencies on the job, as the defendants did not owe the plaintiffs a duty of care to eliminate those risks. The plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed.

The Court distinguished between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees, holding that the firefighter's rule does not preclude a private safety employee from stating a cause of action against a third party who is not his or her employer for injuries caused by that third party's negligence in starting a fire (8 Cal. 4th 532, 546-547) . The Court reasoned that by establishing fire departments and taxing themselves to pay for their services, the public in effect has purchased exoneration from the duty of care and does not have to pay twice, through taxation and individual liability, for those services (8 Cal. 4th 532, 542-543) . Because of this relationship between the public, the firefighter, and the individual members of the public who require the firefighter's services, the individual's duty of care towards the firefighter is replaced by the individual's contribution to tax-supported compensation for the firefighter (8 Cal. 4th 532, 546) . In contrast, a defendant whose negligence injures private safety employees employed by another does not have the same relationship with those private safety employees as a member of the public has with publicly employed firefighters, because the defendant has not paid in any way to be relieved of the duty of care owed toward the private employees (8 Cal. 4th 532, 543) . Another consideration supporting the distinction between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees is that actions by publicly employed firefighters would involve costly litigation over subrogation that would ultimately be financed by the public and that would not benefit the firefighter, who receives retirement or workers' compensation benefits, whereas actions by private safety employees shift the loss from the innocent employees and their employer to the third party whose negligence caused the injuries (8 Cal. 4th 532, 543) . A third distinction is that the public good is best served by a quick response to fires without questions about the fire's cause, which warrants eliminating the public's duty of care to publicly employed firefighters, but no similar concern justifies eliminating the duty of care owed by third parties to private safety employees (8 Cal. 4th 532, 544) .

The Court observed that the firefighter's rule is not actually a separate concept, but rather is an example of the application of the primary versus secondary assumption of risk doctrine set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (discussed in § 165.400[3][a]): a legal determination of whether, based on the nature of the activity involved and the relationship of the parties to that activity, the defendant owed the plaintiff a duty of care (8 Cal. 4th 532, 541) . The Court held that the proper basis for the rule is not, as had been held before Knight, a plaintiff's voluntary acceptance of a known risk of injury in the course of employment, but rather a public policy determination that a person who negligently starts a fire does not owe a duty of care to protect the responding firefighter from the very danger that requires the firefighter's presence (8 Cal. 4th 532, 541) .

NOTE:

In drawing this distinction between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees, the Court rejected the reasoning of a court of appeal decision, Holland v. Crumb (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1852, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 , that applied the firefighter's rule to preclude recovery by a privately employed tow truck driver who was struck by traffic while preparing to tow a disabled vehicle. The Court observed that the court of appeal had based its decision on theory that the driver had assumed the foreseeable risk of his hazardous employment; noting that private employees do not assume all the foreseeable risks of their employment, the Court held, citing Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , that application of the firefighter's rule requires a closer analysis focusing on the relationship of the parties and the defendant's duty of care (8 Cal. 4th 532, 545 n.4).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Liability for Injury Due to Risk Necessitating Presence

In Hamilton v. Martinelli & Assocs. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 , the plaintiff was employed as a probation officer at a youth detention facility. The plaintiff was injured by her trainer while engaging in a self-defense maneuver at a required training session, and the injury left her unable to work as a correctional officer or peace officer. The plaintiff sued the training course business and its owner for negligence and intentional tort. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on the grounds that the claims were barred by the primary assumption of risk doctrine, and the court of appeal affirmed. In addition to holding that recovery was barred by the primary assumption of risk doctrine [see § 165.401[4][b]], the court of appeal also held that the firefighter's rule precluded liability. The court noted that the plaintiff was employed as a peace officer and was injured while training to perform the duties of her job. The court held that the firefighter's rule extended not only to the risk of injury while responding to actual emergency situations, but also to the risks of injury while training to respond to actual emergencies (110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1026) . Moreover, the court rejected the argument that liability could be predicated on the exception to the firefighter's rule for injury-causing conduct that occurs after the person knows or should have known about the officer's presence at the scene, as codified in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1). The court noted that this exception only applies to separate, subsequent acts of negligence other than the conduct that necessitated the officer's presence. The court reasoned that because the training program was the conduct necessitating the plaintiff's presence at the scene, and because the alleged negligence occurred during the training program, the injury-causing conduct was not a separate, subsequent act of misconduct, and the exception did not apply (110 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1027-1028) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.431

§ 165.431 Firefighter's Rule Bars Recovery for Injuries Due to Hazards Encountered by Chance While on Duty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE UNDER THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE FOR THE HARM SUFFERED BY PLAINTIFF _____ [FIREFIGHTER or POLICE OFFICER] BECAUSE A HAZARD THAT A _____ [FIREFIGHTER or POLICE OFFICER] RESPONDS TO IN HIS/HER PROFESSIONAL CAPACITY WHILE ON DUTY IS NOT AN INDEPENDENT ACT OF MISCONDUCT MERELY BECAUSE HE/SHE ENCOUNTERED THAT HAZARD BY CHANCE.

Hazard Encountered by Chance Not Independent Act of Misconduct. Firefighters or police officers who have not been called to the scene of a fire or other emergency, but who have been injured while responding to a hazard that they encounter by chance while on duty, are barred from recovery by the firefighter's rule, because their presence at a particular location for reasons unrelated to the hazard to which they responded does not make the hazard an independent act of misconduct (Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1158-1160, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; see Seibert Sec. Serv., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 411, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule bars a firefighter or police officer from recovering for injuries suffered due to a hazard that he or she encountered by chance while on duty, because this type of hazard is not an independent act of misconduct that would permit recovery [see Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1158-1160, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182] . It should be combined with the form in § 165.430 if applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may discuss the hazard that the firefighter or police officer encountered by chance while on duty, the firefighter's or police officer's response to that hazard in his or her professional capacity, and the relationship between that hazard and the cause of the injury complained of by the firefighter or police officer.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of answer in a cause of action for negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires Ch. 380, Negligence, and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 165.430. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.450 -165.455 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hazard Encountered by Chance Not Independent Act of Misconduct

In Kelhi v. Fitzpatrick (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 , the plaintiff was a highway patrol officer in uniform who was driving to work on his official motorcycle when he saw tires break off a pickup truck on the highway ahead of him. The plaintiff responded by turning on his flashers, checking traffic behind him to ensure that no vehicles ran into the tires, and asking the truck's driver to move onto the shoulder; after the plaintiff moved around the truck to look for the tires, which were rolling down the highway, they veered, bounced off a retaining wall, and hit him. The plaintiff brought an action for personal injury against the driver and owner of the truck and several other the defendants. The trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, which was based on the firefighter's rule, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting the plaintiff's argument that the firefighter's rule did not apply to bar his recovery because his presence at the accident scene was fortuitous and unrelated to the hazard that injured him. The court acknowledged that the plaintiff's situation was unlike the classic scenario in which the risk that causes injury is the very reason a police officer or firefighter is summoned to the scene (25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1158) . The risk that caused the plaintiff's injuries, the runaway tires, was not the conduct that brought him to that highway at that moment. However, the runaway tires were the risk that prompted his response as a police officer. His actions were the same as those he would have taken had he been summoned to the scene, and an officer called to the scene would have been barred from recovery by the firefighter's rule for a similar injury; therefore, the exception for unrelated or independent acts did not apply to allow his recovery for any negligence that caused the tires to come off the truck (25 Cal. App. 4th 1149, 1158-1160) .

In Seibert Sec. Serv., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 , the plaintiff was a police officer who brought an arrested suspect to a hospital for examination of possible injuries. While he was at the hospital completing paperwork on the suspect, a mental patient became abusive and tried to grab a baton held by a hospital security guard employed by the defendant security company. The plaintiff helped the guard subdue the patient, who was handcuffed and put in an isolation cell, and the plaintiff returned to his paperwork. Sometime later, another hospital security guard also employed by the defendant decided to remove the patient's handcuffs, and the patient then attacked this guard. The plaintiff responded to the guard's call for help and was injured while subduing the patient. During the struggle, the guard who had been attacked dropped back and did not assist the plaintiff, but another of the defendant's employees also attempted to subdue the patient. The plaintiff sued the defendant security company for the negligence of its employee in removing the patient's handcuffs. The defendant moved for summary judgment on the basis of the firefighter's rule. The trial court denied the motion, and the defendant sought a writ in the court of appeal.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to vacate its order denying the defendant's motion for summary judgment and to enter a new order granting the motion. The court held that the firefighter's rule barred the plaintiff's recovery, and that the statutory exception under Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) did not apply despite the defendant's employee's knowledge of the plaintiff's presence when he removed the patient's handcuffs. Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) establishes liability for negligent injury-causing conduct occurring after the defendant knows or has reason to know of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel (see § 165.451). The court ruled that this exception applies only to conduct occurring after peace officers, firefighters, or emergency medical personnel have undertaken their duties. In this case, the plaintiff was not performing any duties as a police officer when the guard removed the patient's handcuffs. The court noted that ruling otherwise and permitting the exception to apply merely because a police officer was present would lead to absurd results (18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 408-409) . For example, a person standing on a city street may observe a patrolling police officer nearby. The person, feeling safe due to the officer's presence, allows a valuable camera to hang loosely from his or her arm, and a passing thief is thereby encouraged to grab it. If the officer responds and is injured in a struggle with the thief, the victim was no doubt negligent but should not be liable in tort to the officer (18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 409) . The court held that applying the statutory exception to conduct occurring before peace officers, firefighters, or emergency medical personnel had undertaken their duties would lead to inequitable distinctions by allowing recovery to officers, such as the plaintiff, who happened to be at the scene when a negligently caused incident occurred, but denying recovery to officers who responded to a radio call (18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 410) . One basis for the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for summary judgment was that a triable issue of fact existed as to whether the negligence of the defendant's employees was an independent act of misconduct. The court held that no independent act of misconduct occurred as a matter of law. Although the conduct of the defendant's employees may have been independent of and unrelated to the conduct that originally brought the plaintiff to the hospital, that conduct was the immediate cause of the plaintiff's being asked to respond and assist in subduing the violent patient (18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 410-411) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.432

§ 165.432 Firefighter's Rule Bars Recovery For Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Safety Agency

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

IF PLAINTIFF'S NEGLIGENCE CLAIM WOULD OTHERWISE BE BARRED BY THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE, DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE UNDER _____ [CIVIL CODE SECTION 1714.9(a)(1) or THE COMMON LAW EXCEPTION FOR INDEPENDENT ACTS OF MISCONDUCT] FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF BECAUSE THAT EXCEPTION TO THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE DOES NOT APPLY IF DEFENDANT IS A _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] EMPLOYED BY A DIFFERENT PUBLIC SAFETY AGENCY AND PLAINTIFF'S INJURIES WERE CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S NEGLIGENCE WHILE BOTH PARTIES WERE JOINTLY ENGAGED IN THE DISCHARGE OF THEIR PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITIES.

A. Firefighter's Rule Applicable to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Agency While Responding to Same Public Hazard. The firefighter's rule applies if one public safety officer is negligently injured by another public safety officer while both officers were engaged in their professional duties responding to the same public hazard or condition (see Farnam v. State of California (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1455, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642).

B. Statutory Exception to Firefighter's Rule Under Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) Does Not Apply to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Agency. The liability in Civil Code Section 1714.9(a)(1) for injury-causing conduct occurring after a person knows or has reason to know of the presence of a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel, does not apply if the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel is negligently injured by another peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel who is employed by a different public safety agency and if both parties were jointly engaged in the discharge of their public safety responsibilities (Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1072, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 ; see Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1)).

[AND/OR]

C. Common Law Exception to Firefighter's Rule for Independent Acts of Misconduct Inapplicable to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Entity. The common law exception to the firefighter's rule for acts of misconduct that are independent of the conduct that necessitates the presence of a public safety employee and that occur after the arrival of the public safety employee does not apply to actions based on conduct between public safety employees who have different public employers but who were engaged in a joint public safety operation when plaintiff's injuries were sustained (City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 280-283, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the firefighter's rule applies if one public safety officer seeks recovery for an injury negligently caused by another public safety officer employed by a different public entity while both were jointly engaged in the discharge of their professional duties. These points and authorities also support the contention that neither the liability in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) for injury-causing conduct occurring after the person knows or has reason to know of the presence of a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel, nor the common law exception to the firefighter's rule for independent acts of misconduct, apply under those circumstances. This form should be combined with the form in § 165.430, if applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the fact that both the plaintiff and the defendant were firefighters, peace officers or emergency medical personnel, and that although they were employed by different public safety agencies, the plaintiff's injuries were caused by the defendant's negligence while both parties were jointly engaged in carrying out their public responsibilities. Counsel should then argue that under those facts, the firefighter's rule bars recovery under the authorities discussed in this form.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of answer in a cause of action for negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires , Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 165.430. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Firefighter's Rule Applicable to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Agency While Responding to Same Public Hazard

In Farnam v. State of California (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 , the plaintiff was a city police officer who was holding a suspected felon at gunpoint when he was attacked by a police dog under the control of the defendant, a California Highway Patrol (CHP) officer who was attempting to aid in the arrest of the suspect. In the plaintiff's suit against the CHP officer and the state for negligence, the trial court granted summary judgment on the grounds that public safety officers were shielded from liability under Gov. Code § 821.6, which provides immunity for instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding. The plaintiff appealed. After the appeal had been briefed, the California Supreme Court decided Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 [see § 165.432[3][b]], and the court of appeal required and received supplemental briefing on the effect of that case.

The court of appeal affirmed the summary judgment, but through application of the firefighter's rule rather than on the grounds relied on by the trial court. First, the court recognized that the firefighter's rule is merely one application of the assumption of risk doctrine (84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1451) . Next, although recognizing that the firefighter's rule is often described as applying only to conduct that necessitates summoning an officer to the scene, the court noted that the veterinarian's rule, discussed in § 165.410, is an application of the same basic assumption of risk principles as the firefighter's rule and is not limited to conduct necessitating the veterinarian's presence. Therefore, the court concluded that the firefighter's rule is not actually limited to the original conduct that necessitates the officer's presence but may apply to conduct occurring after the officer's arrival on the scene (84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1452) . The court of appeal then concluded that the Calatayud decision, as well as the subsequent court of appeal decision in City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621 [see § 165.432[3][c]], implicitly require application of the firefighter's rule in a case in which one public safety officer is negligently injured by another public safety officer while both are jointly engaged in carrying out their professional duties. The court concluded that the rationale used in both those cases, supporting the conclusion that exceptions to the firefighter's rule for negligent conduct occurring after the officer arrives on the scene do not apply if one public safety officer is injured by another officer employed by a different agency, apply with equal force to the determination that the firefighter's rule applies in the first place (84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1452-1455) . In the case before the court, the plaintiff and the defendant were both engaged in their official duties, those duties included facing hazards that they were paid to confront, and the hazard posed by the police dog was just such an inherent hazard. Concluding that the circumstances precluded the officers from owing a duty to each other that might compromise the duties they owed to the public, the court of appeal held that the assumption of risk principles of the firefighter's rule barred the plaintiff's claim against the CHP officer (84 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1455) .

[b] Statutory Exception to Firefighter's Rule Under Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) Does Not Apply to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Agency

In Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 , the plaintiff was a Pasadena police officer who had received an "officer needs assistance" call in the early morning hours and proceeded to a parking structure where California Highway Patrol (CHP) officers holding shotguns were attempting to subdue a highly agitated professional football player. When the plaintiff approached the CHP officers to assist them in subduing and arresting the man, one of the CHP officers fell, accidentally causing his shotgun to discharge and injuring the plaintiff. In the plaintiff's suit against the State of California and the CHP officer, the defendants unsuccessfully sought to invoke the firefighter's rule as a bar to liability. At trial, a jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in excess of $700,000, apportioning fault between the man who was being subdued and the two CHP officers. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court found the firefighter's rule applicable based on "evidence establish[ing] that [the plaintiff's] immediate presence at the scene of the struggle ... was necessitated by [the man's] resistance, and by the conduct of the [CHP] officers in attempting to subdue [the man] while holding their shotguns." However, the court of appeal also determined that the circumstances came within the exception set forth in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1), which establishes liability for negligent injury-causing conduct occurring after the defendant knows or has reason to know of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel. The Supreme Court granted the defendants' petition for review to decide the sole issue of whether § 1714.9(a)(1) applied to injuries caused by the negligence of other public safety personnel.

The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal, holding that the legislature in enacting the statute did not intend for it to apply to public safety members who are jointly engaged in the discharge of their responsibilities. The Court first reviewed the firefighter's rule and its rationale, including (1) the basis of the rule in assumption of the risk and the legal conclusion that no one owes a duty to public safety personnel to exercise care so as not to require the special services for which they are trained and paid; (2) public policy considerations for the rule, including the availability to public safety employees of special public compensation for confronting the dangers posed by their occupations and the public policy decision to spread the cost of the public's own negligence through tax-supported compensation rather than through individual tort recoveries; and (3) the policy of efficient judicial administration furthered by eliminating claims that would burden the courts with litigation among the public agency employing the public safety employee, the retirement system, and the negligence insurer, even though the cost for compensating the injured employee would eventually be passed on to the public in any event (18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1061-1063) .

The Court then considered the statutory exception to the firefighter's rule embodied in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1), which if read literally applies to "any person" negligently causing an injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel when the person knows or should have known of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel. Applying principles of statutory construction, the Court noted that the statute was intended to overrule the holding of the Supreme Court in Hubbard v. Boelt (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 480, 169 Cal. Rptr. 706, 620 P.2d 156 , which had held that an officer was barred by the firefighter's rule from recovering for an injury caused while seeking to avoid the debris from a collision with a third party caused by the defendant, a speeding motorist who fled from the officer at a high speed. The Court also noted the dissent of Justice Tobriner in Hubbard, which was adopted as the rationale for the subsequent legislative activity that became Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1). Justice Tobriner had argued that the firefighter's rule provides no shelter for a defendant who, after the officer arrives, commits subsequent negligent acts that cause the officer' s injury. From this genesis, the Court concluded that the legislature did not intend that § 1714.9(a)(1) would impose liability for injuries caused by other officers jointly engaged in the discharge of public safety responsibilities, noting the absence in Hubbard and the subsequent legislative debates of any discussion of injuries caused by other officers (18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1063-1068, 1072) .

Finally, the Court noted the practical problems that would accompany a contrary holding. The Court reasoned that public safety members have a primary responsibility for the protection of the public, that sound policy mandates that the discharge of these duties takes precedence over avoiding injury to other officers, particularly when responding to a rapidly developing emergency or crisis, and that the potential for conflicting duties would be substantial given the size of the class of possible defendants and the scope of liability. Although the Court had no occasion to rule on the issue, the Court expressed concern that imposing liability under the circumstances presented might arguably override existing statutory immunities conferred on public safety personnel and their employers. Addressing the cost-spreading rationale of the firefighter's rule and the possibility for increased litigation of liability issues, the Court thought it unlikely the legislature intended to encourage costly litigation, including the possibility of derivative actions, when the public has already financed statutory compensation of injured public safety members. Similarly, addressing the argument for efficient judicial administration supporting the firefighter's rule, the Court reasoned that extending liability under Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) to other officers jointly discharging their duties would impair efficient judicial administration, noting the problems of determining causation in cases turning on the propriety of police tactics or emergency procedures and the fact that the public would ultimately pay the compensation for the injury and any added expense caused by protracted litigation. The Court also refused to extend Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) to jointly engaged officers employed by different public agencies to avoid the otherwise anomalous result that, because § 1714.9 preserves the exclusivity of the Workers' Compensation Act, an injured officer would be allowed to sue if the negligent officer was employed by another agency but not by his or her own employer (18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1068-1072) .

[c] Common Law Exception to Firefighter's Rule for Independent Acts of Misconduct Does Not Apply to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Entity

In City of Oceanside v. Superior Court (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621 , the plaintiff was a lifeguard employed by Camp Pendleton who had engaged in a joint operation with lifeguards employed by the City of Oceanside to rescue a jet ski collision victim who was stranded in ocean water adjacent to a Camp Pendleton jetty. The plaintiff brought suit against the City and the City lifeguard who had asserted authority over the rescue operation, alleging that the City lifeguard was negligent in directing the plaintiff to follow an unreasonable rescue plan that had resulted in the plaintiff's sustaining back and other injuries when she was pushed against the jetty rocks by a wave. While granting summary adjudication on certain causes of action, the trial court denied summary judgment for the defendants, partly on the basis that the firefighter's rule did not apply to the facts as alleged. The defendants filed a petition for a peremptory writ of mandate, prohibition, or other relief, contending that the firefighter's rule applied as a matter of law and was a complete defense to the action.

The court of appeal granted the defendant's petition, holding that the trial court erred in failing to apply the firefighter's rule as a complete defense to the plaintiff's claims. After reviewing the rationale for the firefighter's rule, the court of appeal noted that there is an established common law exception to the rule for conduct other than the conduct that necessitated the summoning of the public safety employee, and that the rule does not apply to independent acts of misconduct that are committed after the public safety employee has arrived on the scene. However, the California Supreme Court in Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057 [see § 165.432[3][b]], had held that a similar statutory exception to Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) did not apply to injuries sustained by one public safety employee due to the negligence of another public safety employee employed by a different public entity while the two parties were engaged in a joint public safety operation. The court of appeal then concluded that the firefighter's rule extended to publicly-employed lifeguards (81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 279-280) and that the policy rationale of the Calatayud decision applied equally to the common law exception for independent acts of misconduct (81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 282) .

Policy considerations relied on by the Supreme Court in Calatayud and echoed by the court of appeal in City of Oceanside included: allowing public safety personnel to concentrate on public safety responsibilities without an unnecessary fear of lawsuits for injuring another public safety officer; spreading costs via taxpayer-funded compensation and other benefits for injured public safety officers; furthering efficient judicial administration by avoiding issues of causation and the second-guessing of tactical decisions made by public safety officers; and avoiding the anomaly that, due to the exclusive remedy doctrine of the workers' compensation system, an injured public safety officer would be entitled to sue a public safety officer employed by another public agency if the two officers were engaged in a joint enterprise, but would not be entitled to sue a public safety officer who was employed by the same agency (81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 280-283) . In reaching its decision, the court of appeal noted that although the firefighter's rule is normally applied only to the original conduct that necessitated the presence of the public safety personnel, the same policy considerations that would exonerate the person in need of rescue from liability for the original negligent conduct should also exonerate another lifeguard whose presence and actions were in furtherance of a joint rescue operation for that person (81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 282-283) . The court also rejected the argument that the firefighter's rule should not be applied because, as a lifeguard, the plaintiff did not receive the special benefits or compensation that firefighters or police officers receive if they are injured in the performance of their duties. The court instead concluded that allegedly inadequate compensation was not a sufficient reason to preclude application of the firefighter's rule (81 Cal. App. 4th 269, 284-285) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Exception to Firefighter's Rule Under Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1) Does Not Apply to Negligence of Public Safety Personnel Employed by Different Public Agency

In McElroy v. State of California (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 546, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 612 , the plaintiffs were city police officers whose police car collided with the car of the defendants, who were officers of the California Highway Patrol. At the time of the collision, the plaintiffs were engaged in a pursuit, and the defendants had joined the pursuit without being summoned by the plaintiffs or their agency to assist in the chase and without making radio contact with the plaintiff's agency to discover what the chase was about. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for the defendants. The plaintiffs had argued that the rule of Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360 [see § 165.432[3][b]], did not apply because the defendants were not "jointly engaged" with the plaintiffs or their agency. The court of appeal held that for these purposes, joint engagement between public service agencies did not require formal coordination between the agencies, and that under the facts of the case, the public policies supporting the firefighter's rule supported immunity from suit (100 Cal. App. 4th 546, 548-549) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities §§ 165.433-165.449

[Reserved]

§§ 165.433[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.450

§ 165.450 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery for Injuries Caused by Independent Acts of Misconduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] BECAUSE THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE DOES NOT BAR RECOVERY FOR INJURIES DUE TO ACTS OF MISCONDUCT INDEPENDENT FROM THE ACT THAT CREATED THE EMERGENCY TO WHICH THE _____ [POLICE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER] RESPONDED.

Plaintiff May Recover for Injuries Caused by Independent Acts of Misconduct. The firefighter's rule does not prohibit a firefighter or police officer from recovering damages for injuries caused by acts of misconduct independent from the act that created the emergency to which the firefighter or police officer responded (Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 378, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 ; see also Donohue v. San Francisco Hous. Auth. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 663, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not shield a defendant from liability for injuries incurred by a firefighter or police officer, because the injuries were caused by acts of misconduct independent of the risk creating the necessity of the firefighter's or police officer's presence [see Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 378, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 ; see also Civ. Code § 1714.9 (establishing liability for negligent injury-causing conduct occurring after the defendant knows or has reason to know of presence of peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel); § 165.451)]. It should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.451 -165.455 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that the act that caused the plaintiff's injuries was independent of the act that created the emergency to which the firefighter or police officer responded.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability , (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.451 -165.455. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff May Recover for Injuries Caused by Independent Acts of Misconduct

In Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 , the plaintiff firefighter was injured while containing a boilover, caused by the defendants' negligence, at the defendants' chemical plant. The plaintiff alleged that his injury was caused by the defendants' negligent or intentional misrepresentation of the nature of the hazard, because the defendants told him when he arrived at the plant that the boilover did not involve toxic chemicals, which in fact it did. The plaintiff alleged that he suffered injury because of exposure to the toxic chemicals that would not have occurred if he had been warned of their presence; the plaintiff also alleged that his injury was caused by the defendants' maintaining an ultrahazardous activity on their premises. The defendants moved for summary judgment on the ground that the firefighter's rule barred the plaintiff's action. The trial court denied the motion, and the defendants obtained a peremptory writ of mandate from the court of appeal ordering the trial court to grant the motion and dismiss the action. The Supreme Court granted the plaintiff's request for a hearing and held that the trial court was correct in refusing to grant the defendants' motion for summary judgment.

Holding that the firefighter's rule did not bar recovery for the plaintiff's injuries, the Court reaffirmed the continued existence of the rule but held that its narrow parameters do not prohibit a firefighter from recovering damages if the act that results in his or her injury is independent from the act that created the emergency to which he or she responded. Thus, a defendant is liable for failing to warn of a known, hidden danger or for misrepresenting the nature of the hazard, if that failure or misrepresentation caused the injuries (31 Cal. 3d 362, 378) . The Court also held that a firefighter may seek recovery on the basis of strict liability if the maintenance of an ultrahazardous activity produces an injury separate from the injuries caused by the risk creating the emergency to which the firefighter responds (31 Cal. 3d 362, 376-379)

.

Donohue v. San Francisco Hous. Auth. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148 , was an action brought against a public housing authority by a firefighter who fell on wet steps while conducting a fire safety inspection of one of the authority's apartment buildings. The concrete steps did not have skid-resistant treads, which had previously been recommended by the authority's own safety committee, and employees of the authority had washed down the steps with a hose just prior to the plaintiff's arrival.

The court of appeals reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment for the defendant housing authority, holding that the defendant had a duty to tenants and visitors to maintain its premises in reasonably safe condition. Therefore a jury must decide whether the defendant had breached that duty by not installing the treads and by leaving the stairs wet and slippery. The plaintiff's choosing to traverse the wet steps was secondary assumption of risk, which did not automatically bar his recovery, but could be considered by the jury for purposes of determining comparative fault (16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 665-666) . The court also held that the firefighter's rule did not bar recovery in this case because the plaintiff's injuries were caused not by the hazard that required his presence on the premises, but by an entirely independent negligent act. The plaintiff was not on the premises to inspect the slipperiness of the steps on which he fell. Therefore, even though the plaintiff was injured in the regular course of his duties as a fire inspector, and the hazard of slippery steps was one he would normally encounter as part of his job, the plaintiff was not barred from seeking recovery for the injuries he suffered in the fall (16 Cal. App. 4th 658, 663) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff May Recover for Injuries Caused by Independent Acts of Misconduct

In Terry v. Garcia (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 245, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 , the plaintiff was a police officer who was responding at high speed to a call of a domestic disturbance when his vehicle was hit by a truck driven by the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant and his employer for negligence, but the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on the grounds of assumption of risk. The court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal held that the assumption of risk doctrine, in the form of the so-called "firefighter's rule," did not apply to the case. The firefighter's rule only precludes liability if the defendant's alleged negligence was the conduct that necessitated the plaintiff's presence at the scene. The defendant's negligence in causing a collision with plaintiff while the plaintiff was speeding toward a domestic disturbance was an independent act of misconduct, and therefore the defendant could be liable for the plaintiff's injuries (109 Cal. App. 4th 245, 252-253) . The court also rejected the defendants' contention that the proper inquiry is whether the risk causing the injury was inherent in the activity. In the context of applying the firefighter's rule, the only negligence for which the general public cannot be liable is the original negligence that necessitates employing the public officer (109 Cal. App. 4th 245, 252) .

In Boon v. Rivera (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 276 , the plaintiff was a police officer who responded to an emergency call at the defendant's residence, where the defendant's husband had barricaded himself in the house. The defendant advised the plaintiff and other police officers that her husband was not violent. However, she knew, but did not disclose, that there was an M-16 rifle and a gun safe in the house, that her husband had previously been diagnosed as a danger to himself and others, that her husband had threatened to kill her and their child, and that her husband had threatened to kill the first police officer who arrived at the residence. Based on the defendant's information that her husband was not violent, the plaintiff responded with non-lethal force and was shot by the defendant's husband. The plaintiff alleged that if he had known the truth about the husband's violent nature, he would have responded differently. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer, finding that the action against the defendant was barred by the firefighter's rule and that the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, concluding that the facts were analogous to those in Lipson v. Superior Court, discussed in § 165.450[3][a]. The court concluded that the firefighter's rule was not a defense to the action brought against the defendant. Although a police officer may expect to encounter force when responding to an emergency call of a barricaded man, the risk that someone at the scene would deceive the officer as to the nature of the man's violent tendencies was not an inherent risk of the situation. Instead, the defendant's misrepresentation was an independent act of misconduct occurring after the plaintiff arrived on the scene (80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1328-1330) .

In Stapper v. GMI Holdings, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 787, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688 , the plaintiff was a firefighter who was fighting a fire in a house when an automatic garage door failed to open, trapping the plaintiff and another firefighter inside the garage. Although other firefighters were eventually able to open the garage door, the plaintiff suffered brain damage and blindness, and the other firefighter suffered fatal injuries. The plaintiff brought suit against the garage door manufacturer, alleging that the door was defective and did not operate as intended. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for nonsuit on the grounds that the firefighter's rule barred the plaintiff's claim. The court of appeal reversed, concluding that the claim was not barred because the plaintiff alleged that the garage door malfunction was independent of the fire and not caused by the fire. The firefighter's rule was inapplicable because the plaintiff was not complaining of negligence in the creation of the fire or negligence that otherwise made the plaintiff's employment necessary (73 Cal. App. 4th 787, 791-792) . The court went on to discuss the concerns that underlie the firefighter's rule generally, including fairness to the public, the provision of tax-supported compensation, and the desire to avoid creating an incentive not to call firefighters, and concluded that most of those concerns did not apply to the injury caused by the allegedly defective door mechanism (73 Cal. App. 4th 787, 792-793) . However, although the court held that the firefighter's rule did not bar the claim, the procedural posture of the case did not require the court to determine whether a duty of care actually existed under the facts (73 Cal. App. 4th 787, 796-797) .

In Terhell v. American Commonwealth Assoc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 434, 218 Cal. Rptr. 256 , the plaintiff was a firefighter who fell through an unguarded opening in the roof of the defendants' building while fighting a fire on the premises. The plaintiff's complaint alleged that the defendants' negligent maintenance of the roof created a concealed opening that was hazardous to anyone on the roof and that the defendants knew of the opening and its hazard but failed to warn the plaintiff of its existence. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal, holding that it did not appear on the face of the plaintiff's complaint that the firefighter's rule barred his action (172 Cal. App. 3d 434, 437) . The court held that the unguarded hole in the roof was not the cause of the plaintiff's presence at the scene, and that the rule does not apply to negligence that did not cause the fire. Citing Lipson v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 362, 371, 182 Cal. Rptr. 629, 644 P.2d 822 [see 165.450[3][a]], the court noted that the situation most frequently confronted by the courts has been the failure to warn a firefighter of a known hidden danger, and that virtually all jurisdictions have allowed recovery if the failure to warn ultimately resulted in an injury to the firefighter (172 Cal. App. 3d 434, 440) .

In Rose v. City of Los Angeles (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 883, 206 Cal. Rptr. 49 , the plaintiff was a reserve police officer working in plain clothes who was shot by an officer from another police department while both were participating in a joint effort by their respective departments to serve search warrants on a suspected narcotics dealer. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the defendants, the other officer and his employer, holding that the firefighter's rule did not apply in this case to bar the plaintiff's recovery. The court ruled that the other officer's negligence in not recognizing the plaintiff as a police officer was completely independent of the conduct that was the reason for the plaintiff's presence at the scene, namely, the illegal conduct of the suspect on whom the plaintiff was attempting to serve the search warrants (159 Cal. App. 3d 883, 889) .

126 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.451

§ 165.451 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery Because Conduct Causing Injury Occurred After Firefighter's Presence Was Known to Defendant and Firefighter Had Undertaken Duties

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1714.9(a)(1) FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY] BECAUSE THE CONDUCT CAUSING PLAINTIFF'S INJURY OCCURRED AFTER DEFENDANT KNEW OR SHOULD HAVE KNOWN OF PLAINTIFF'S PRESENCE AND AFTER PLAINTIFF HAD UNDERTAKEN HIS/HER DUTIES AS _____ [A PEACE OFFICER or A FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY].

A. Conduct Causing Injury Occurred After Plaintiff's Presence Was Known to Defendant. A defendant is liable for willful and negligent conduct causing injury to a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, if the conduct causing the injury occurs after the defendant knows or should have known of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1)).

B. Conduct Causing Injury Occurred After Plaintiff Had Undertaken Duties. A defendant is liable under Civil Code Section 1714.9(a)(1) only for conduct that occurs after the plaintiff has undertaken his or her duties as a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity (Seibert Sec. Serv., Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 408-409, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not shield

a defendant from liability for injuries incurred by a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity. This form is based on Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1), which applies if the willful or negligent conduct causing the injuries occurred after the defendant knew or should have known of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel, and after the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel had undertaken his or her duties. This form should be combined with any of the forms in § 165.450 and §§ 165.452 -165.455 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may state facts showing the plaintiff's status as a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity. Counsel may also discuss the conduct causing the plaintiff's injury, and argue that the conduct occurred after the defendant knew or should have known of the plaintiff's presence and after the plaintiff had undertaken his or her duties.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 165.450 and §§ 165.452 -165.455. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conduct Causing Injury Occurred After Plaintiff Had Undertaken Duties

The factual and procedural background of Seibert Sec. Serv. Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 394, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 , is discussed in § 165.431[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Conduct Causing Injury Occurred After Plaintiff's Presence Was Known to Defendant

The facts and procedural background of Boon v. Rivera (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 276 , are described in § 165.381[4][a]. In addition to ruling that the action against the defendant was not barred by the firefighter's rule, the court also held that under the facts of that particular case, Civ. Code § 1714.9(a) established a duty by those present at the scene of the emergency to refrain from misstating material facts concerning the nature of the emergency to those public safety officials called to the scene. Therefore, the defendant (the wife of the man who shot the plaintiff) had a duty under that statute not to misrepresent affirmatively the nature of the hazard faced by the plaintiff (80 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330-1333) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.452

§ 165.452 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery Because Conduct Causing Injury Violated Statute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1714.9(a)(2) FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY] BECAUSE THE CONDUCT CAUSING PLAINTIFF'S INJURY VIOLATED A _____ [STATUTE or ORDINANCE or REGULATION], AND THAT CONDUCT WAS NOT ITSELF THE EVENT THAT PRECIPITATED EITHER THE RESPONSE OR THE PRESENCE OF PLAINTIFF _____ [PEACE OFFICER, FIREFIGHTER, OR EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY].

Conduct Causing Injury Violated Statute. A defendant is liable for willful and negligent conduct causing injury to a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity if the conduct causing the injury violates a statute, ordinance, or regulation, and if the conduct causing injury was not itself the event that precipitated either the response or presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not shield a defendant from liability for injuries incurred by a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity. This form is based on Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(2) (see § 165.451), which applies if: (1) the willful or negligent conduct causing the injuries violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation; and (3) that conduct was not itself the event that precipitated either the response or presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(2)]. This form should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.450 -165.451 and §§ 165.453 -165.455 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may show that the plaintiff was a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, and argue that the conduct violated the particular statute, ordinance, or regulation, and that the conduct causing injury was not itself the event that precipitated either the response or the presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(2)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.450 -165.451 and §§ 165.453 -165.455.

For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.453

§ 165.453 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery Because Conduct Causing Injury Was Intended to Injure Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1714.9(a)(3) FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY] BECAUSE THE CONDUCT CAUSING PLAINTIFF'S INJURY WAS INTENDED TO INJURE PLAINTIFF.

Conduct Causing Injury Was Intended to Injure Plaintiff. A defendant is liable for willful and negligent conduct causing injury to a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, if the conduct causing the injury was intended to injure the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not shield a defendant from liability for injuries incurred by a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, because the defendant willfully or negligently caused the injuries in a manner intended to injure the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(3)]. It should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.450 -165.452 and §§ 165.454 -165.455 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that the plaintiff was a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, and that the defendant intentionally injured the plaintiff.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.450 -165.452 and §§ 165.454 -165.455. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.454

§ 165.454 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery Because Conduct Causing Injury Was Arson

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1714.9(a)(4) FOR THE HARM TO PLAINTIFF _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY] BECAUSE THE CONDUCT CAUSING PLAINTIFF'S INJURY WAS ARSON AS DEFINED IN PENAL CODE SECTION 451.

Conduct Causing Injury Was Arson. A defendant is liable for willful and negligent conduct causing injury to a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, if the conduct causing the injury was arson as defined in Penal Code Section 451 (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(4)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not shield a defendant from liability for injuries incurred by a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity. This form is based on Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(4), which applies when willful or negligent conduct causing the injuries was arson as defined in Penal Code § 451 [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(4)]. This form should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.450 -165.453 and § 165.455 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that the plaintiff was a peace officer, a firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, and that the defendant's conduct was arson as defined by Penal Code § 451.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.450 -165.453 and § 165.455. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.455

§ 165.455 Firefighter's Rule Does Not Bar Recovery by Private Safety Employee for Injuries Caused by Negligent Third Party

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR HARM TO PLAINTIFF BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS A PRIVATE SAFETY EMPLOYEE, NOT A PUBLICLY EMPLOYED FIREFIGHTER, AND THE FIREFIGHTER'S RULE DOES NOT BAR RECOVERY BY A PRIVATE SAFETY EMPLOYEE FOR INJURIES CAUSED BY THE NEGLIGENCE OF A THIRD PARTY, WHO IS NOT PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYER, IN STARTING A FIRE.

Private Safety Employee May Recover for Injuries Caused by Negligent Third Parties. The firefighter's rule does not preclude a private safety employee from stating a cause of action against a third party, not the employer, for injuries caused by the third party's negligence in starting a fire (Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 547, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the firefighter's rule does not apply to private safety employees and does not preclude such a person from stating a cause of action against a third party, not the employer, for injuries caused by the third party's negligence in starting a fire [see Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 547, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347] . It should be combined with any of the forms in §§ 165.450 -165.454 that are applicable to the particular case.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may discuss the status of the plaintiff as a private safety employee, rather than a publicly employed firefighter, the defendant's status as a third party and not the plaintiff's employer, and the negligence of the defendant in starting the fire that resulted in the plaintiff's injuries, and argue that the exception set forth above applies.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see §§ 165.450 -165.454. For forms and discussion relating to the firefighter's rule in cases involving negligence of the defendants who are owners or possessors of property, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 165.430 -165.431 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Safety Employee May Recover for Injuries Caused by Negligent Third Party

The factual and procedural background of Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 , is discussed in § 165.430[3][a]. In Neighbarger, the California Supreme Court distinguished between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees and held that the firefighter's rule does not preclude a private safety employee from stating a cause of action against a third party who is not his or her employer for injuries caused by that third party's negligence in starting a fire (8 Cal. 4th 532, 546-547) . The Court reasoned that by establishing fire departments and taxing themselves to pay for their services, the public in effect has purchased exoneration from the duty of care and does not have to pay twice, through taxation and individual liability, for those services (8 Cal. 4th 532, 542-543) . Because of this relationship between the public, the firefighter, and the individual members of the public who require the firefighter's services, the individual's duty of care towards the firefighter is replaced by the individual's contribution to tax-supported compensation for the firefighter (8 Cal. 4th 532, 546) . In contrast, a defendant whose negligence injures private safety employees employed by another does not have the same relationship with those private safety employees as a member of the public has with publicly employed firefighters, because the defendant has not paid in any way to be relieved of the duty of care owed toward the private employees (8 Cal. 4th 532, 543) . Another consideration supporting the distinction between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees is that actions by publicly employed firefighters would involve costly litigation over subrogation that would ultimately be financed by the public and that would not benefit the firefighter, who receives retirement or workers' compensation benefits, whereas actions by private safety employees shift the loss from te innocent employees and their employer to the third party whose negligence caused the injuries (8 Cal. 4th 532, 543) . A third distinction is that the public good is best served by a quick response to fires without questions about the fire's cause, which warrants eliminating the public's duty of care to publicly employed firefighters, but no similar concern justifies eliminating the duty of care owed by third parties to private safety employees (8 Cal. 4th 532, 544) .

The Court observed that the firefighter's rule is not actually a separate concept, but rather is an example of the application of the primary versus secondary assumption of risk doctrine set forth in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 : a legal determination of whether, based on the nature of the activity involved and the relationship of the parties to that activity, the defendant owed the plaintiff a duty of care (8 Cal. 4th 532, 541) . [Knight v. Jewett is discussed in § 165.400[3][a].] The Court held that the proper basis for the rule is not, as had been held before Knight, a plaintiff's voluntary acceptance of a known risk of injury in the course of employment, but rather a public policy determination that a person who negligently starts a fire does not owe a duty of care to protect the responding firefighter from the very danger that requires the firefighter's presence (8 Cal. 4th 532, 541) .

NOTE:

In drawing this distinction between publicly employed firefighters and private safety employees, the Court rejected the reasoning of a court of appeal decision, Holland v. Crumb (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1852, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 , that applied the firefighter's rule to preclude recovery by a privately employed tow truck driver who was struck by traffic while preparing to tow a disabled vehicle. The Court observed that the court of appeal had based its decision on theory that the driver had assumed the foreseeable risk of his hazardous employment; noting that private employees do not assume all the foreseeable risks of their employment, the Court held, citing Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 , that application of the firefighter's rule requires a closer analysis focusing on the relationship of the parties and the defendant's duty of care (8 Cal. 4th 532, 545 n.4).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Safety Employee May Recover for Injuries Caused by Negligent Third Party

In Marquez v. Mainframe (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 881, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , a private security guard slipped and fell while patrolling a building operated and maintained by the defendants. In his action for personal injury, the trial court granted a summary judgment for the defendants on the basis that the claim was barred by the firefighter's rule of the doctrine of assumption of the risk, as stated in Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (discussed in § 165.400[3][a]). The court of appeal reversed, following the analysis of Neighbarger v. Irwin Indus., Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347 (discussed in § 165.430[3][a]). The court began with the general principle that an owner or occupier of property owes a duty of reasonable care to maintain the premises in a safe condition (42 Cal. App. 4th 881, 886) . With regard to the "firefighter's rule," the court noted that the plaintiff was not a public employee; there was no special relationship between the parties suggesting that the normal duty of care was waived, particularly since the plaintiff was not hired by the defendants but by a private company; and the security guard received no special financial reward for engaging in hazardous work. The court concluded that application of the key Neighbarger factors showed that the plaintiff, as a private security guard, should not be barred from recovery by the "firefighter's rule" (42 Cal. App. 4th 881, 886) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
3. Firefighter's Rule

16-165 California Points & Authorities §§ 165.456-165.479

[Reserved]

§§ 165.456[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
4. Third Party Liability

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.480

§ 165.480 Under Civ. Code § 1431.2(a), Defendant Only Liable for Proportionate Share of Plaintiff's Noneconomic Damages Because Third Party Was Partially at Fault

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S NONECONOMIC DAMAGES IN ANY AMOUNT ABOVE DEFENDANT'S PROPORTIONATE SHARE BASED ON DEFENDANT'S PERCENTAGE OF FAULT IN A PERSONAL INJURY ACTION BASED ON COMPARATIVE FAULT.

A. Defendant Severally Liable for Plaintiff's Noneconomic Damages. In actions for personal injury, wrongful death, or property damage that are based on principles of comparative fault, the liability of a tortfeasor for the plaintiff's noneconomic damages is several only and is not joint (Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)).

B. Defendant Liable Only for Proportionate Share of Plaintiff's Noneconomic Damages. The defendant's share of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages is his/her/its proportionate share of those damages based on the percentage of fault allocated to the defendant under the principles of comparative fault (Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the defendant is not liable for the full extent of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages. Its use is limited to actions for personal injury, wrongful death, or property damage that are based on principles of comparative fault [see Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. This issue may arise, for example, on appeal or when challenging the propriety of the trial court's decisions regarding the admissibility of evidence, jury instructions, or the form of judgment.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may argue that the case in one for personal injury, wrongful death, or property damage based on principles of comparative fault, and therefore that the defendant is not liable for the full extent of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms regarding negligence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Severally Liable for Plaintiff's Noneconomic Damages

In 1986, the people of California, through Proposition 51, enacted the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986. The act added Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5, which significantly changed the doctrine of joint and several liability. The stated purpose of the initiative was to rectify the perceived injustices of the "deep pocket rule," under which a defendant whose fault was minimal was required to shoulder the entire liability when the other more culpable tortfeasors were judgment proof [see Civ. Code § 1431.1]. Proposition 51 has been found to be constitutional [Evangelatos v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1188, 1200-1205, 246 Cal. Rptr. 629, 753 P.2d 585] . However, it does not apply retroactively, that is, it does not apply to causes of action accruing prior to its effective date (June 4, 1986) [Evangelatos v. Superior Court (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1188, 1206-1225, 246 Cal. Rptr. 629, 753 P.2d 585] . Under Civ. Code § 1431.2, the substantive provision of the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986, in actions for personal injury, property damages, or wrongful death based on principles of comparative fault, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is proportionate to his or her share of fault and is several only and not joint.

"Economic damages" under Civ. Code § 1431.2 means objectively verifiable monetary losses, including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, costs of repair or replacement, costs of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment, and loss of business or employment opportunities. "Noneconomic damages" means subjective, nonmonetary losses, including, but not limited to, pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation, and humiliation [Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)].

[b] Defendant Liable Only for Proportionate Share of Plaintiff's Noneconomic Damages

Under Civ. Code § 1431.2(a), in a suit involving multiple tortfeasors, a defendant's share of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages is his or her proportionate share of those damages based on the percentage of fault allocated to the defendant under the principles of comparative fault [see § 165.380].

Under Civ. Code § 1431.2(a), in actions for personal injury, property damages, or wrongful death, based on principles of comparative fault, judgments for noneconomic losses must be made separately.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 165 NEGLIGENCE
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses
4. Third Party Liability

16-165 California Points & Authorities § 165.481

§ 165.481 Federal Communications Decency Act Immunizes Internet Site Operator From Liability When Third Party Sexually Assaults Minor After Communicating With and Meeting Victim Through Defendant's Site [47 U.S.C.S. § 230]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT INTERNET SITE OPERATOR IS IMMUNE FROM LIABILITY PURSUANT TO THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS DECENCY ACT OF 1996 FOR COMMUNICATIONS MADE BY THIRD PARTIES ON THE SITE AND FOR ANY ALLEGED FAILURE TO IMPLEMENT SAFETY MEASURES ON THE SITE THAT WOULD LIMIT COMMUNICATIONS.

Communications Decency Act Immunizes Web Site Operators From Liability. The federal Communications Decency Act of 1996 provides a broad immunity from liability to web site operators for communications that they did not create, and this immunity extends to claims that they failed to implement measures that would have prevented sexual predators from using the site to communicate with minors (Doe II v. MySpace Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 561, 572-573, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 ; see 47 U.S.C.S. § 230).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted as an affirmative defense under the federal Communications Decency Act of 1996 when an Internet site operator is sued in negligence for failing to implement measures on the site that would have prevented sexual predators from communicating with minors.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defendant's immunity. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that plaintiff is seeking damages for sexual assaults committed by third persons and that defendant's only role was to create an Internet forum for communication between users and failed to block certain communications that facilitated those sexual assaults.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Communications Decency Act Immunizes Web Site Operators From Liability

In Doe II v. MySpace Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 561, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 , plaintiffs were teenage girls who were sexually assaulted by men that they met after communicating with them on defendant's Internet site, MySpace.com, a popular social networking site. Plaintiffs sued the site operators for negligence, gross negligence, and strict products liability for failing to implement reasonable safety measures that they allege would have prevented sexual predators form communicating with underage girls. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend, concluding that plaintiffs had failed to allege facts sufficient to defeat the broad immunity provided to Internet site operators under the federal Communications Decency Act of 1996, 47 U.S.C.S. § 230. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that, as a consensus of federal and state case law concludes, the Communications Decency Act provides a broad immunity from liability to web site operators for communications that they did not create, and that this immunity also extends to claims that defendant failed to implement measures that would have curtailed certain types of communications. The court noted that under existing case law, immunity under the Act required proof that (1) MySpace.com is an interactive computer services provider, (2) MySpace.com is not an information content provider with respect to the disputed activity, and (3) plaintiffs seek to hold MySpace.com liable for information originating from a third-party user of its service. The court concluded that MySpace.com was not an information content provider merely by providing a framework through which users could provide their own profiles detailing their personal information, which could include name, gender, location, date of birth, and background interests, among other categories. The site did not require that this information be provided to use the site, but rather left to the user to decide what information to provide, even though it then provided tools to allow users to find and communicate with other users based on information provided in these profiles (175 Cal. App. 4th 561, 574-575) . The court also held that the site was not liable for content provided by third parties, or more specifically in this case, for communications between the sexual predators and the minor girls, nor for failing to implement measures that would block such communications, as the Act expressly provided immunity to site operators for decisions on whether to restrict or make available certain third-party information on a site (175 Cal. App. 4th 561, 572-573) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

16-166 California Points & Authorities 166.syn

§ 166.syn Synopsis to Chapter 166: NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS

§ 166.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 166.02 Governing Law

[1] Division 3 of Commercial Code

[2] Negotiability

[3] Negotiable Instruments

[4] Promissory Notes

[5] Negotiation

[6] Holders in Due Course

[7] Statute of Limitations

§ 166.03 Use of Forms in Chapter

§ 166.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.05 Other Related Publications

§§ 166.06-166.19 [Reserved]

§ 166.20 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Requirements of Negotiability [Com. Code §§

3103, 3104]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Money Orders

[c] Related Publications

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Deposit

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Draft

[b] Cashier's Check

[c] Certificate of Deposit

§ 166.21 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Writing Contains Unconditional Promise or Order to Pay Money [Com. Code §§ 3104(a), 3106]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Separate Agreement, Not Referred to in Instrument, That Does Not Create Contingency

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconditional Nature of Promise or Order Not Affected

§ 166.22 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Specifies Payment of Fixed Amount of Money [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24), 3104(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Fixed Amount of Money

[c] Variable Interest Rates Permitted in Negotiable Instruments

[d] Related Publications

§ 166.23 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable to Bearer [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.24 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable to Order [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109, 3110]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.25 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable on Demand [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payable on Demand

[b] Check Is Payable on Demand

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Payable on Demand

[b] Check Is Payable on Demand

§ 166.26 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable at Definite Time [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Payable at Fixed Date

[b] Payable at Definite Time Subject to Certain Rights

§ 166.27 Opposing Contention That Writing Is Negotiable Instrument [Com. Code § 3104]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Savings Bank Passbook

[b] Conditional Sales Contract

[c] County Warrant

[d] Money Order Not Requiring Signature of Drawer

[e] Parties May Not Stipulate Negotiability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Savings Bank Passbook

[b] Conditional Sales Contract

[c] County Warrant

[d] Parties Cannot Stipulate Negotiability

§ 166.28 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Conditional Promise or Order [Com. Code §§ 3104(a), 3106]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise or Order Subject to Another Writing

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise or Order Subject to Another Writng

§ 166.29 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Does Not Specify Payment of Fixed Amount of Money [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24), 3104(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.30 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Not Payable to Order or Bearer [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Purpose of Payable to Bearer or Order Requirement

[c] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.31 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Instrument Is Not Payable on Demand or at Definite Time [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 166.32-166.49 [Reserved]

§ 166.50 Supporting Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code § 3201]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Note Payable to Order of Maker and Endorsed Is Payable to Bearer

[b] Transfer Presumed From Possession

[c] Statute Not Definitive

[d] Bank-Payee's Deposit of Check to Account of Creditor of Maker, Pursuant to Written Agreement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer Presumed From Possession

§ 166.51 Opposing Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code §§ 3201, 3204]--Instrument Not Endorsed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument

[b] Endorsement Must Convey Entire Instrument

[c] Presentation of Check to Drawee Does Not Constitute an Endorsement That Transfers Check

[d] Exchanging Check for Cashier's Check Is Not Endorsement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Negotiation of Instrument Payable to Identified Person

[b] Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument

[c] Endorsement Must Convey Entire Instrument

§ 166.52 Opposing Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code §§ 3201, 3203]--Instrument Not Transferred

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Transfer of Instrument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Condition Precedent to Transfer Not Met

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Condition Precedent to Transfer Not Met

§§ 166.53-166.69 [Reserved]

§ 166.70 Supporting Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Took Instrument for Value [Com. Code §§ 3302(a), 3303]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Distinction Between Value and Consideration

[c] Related Publications

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

[b] Antecedent Claim

[c] Bank's Applying Funds From Deposit of Instruments to Checks Drawn Against Insufficient Funds

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

[b] Bank's Applying Funds From Deposit of Instruments to Checks Drawn Against Insufficient Funds

§ 166.71 Supporting Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Did Not Have Notice of Claim or Defense or Knowledge That Instrument Was Overdue [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(20), 3302(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Filing or Recording of Document

[b] Mere Fact of Discounted Price Is Insufficient to Evidence Notice

[c] Endorsement Made Within Reasonable Time After Maturity

[d] Endorsement During Business Hours on Day After Maturity Date Is Within Reasonable Time

[e] Knowledge Acquired After Purchasing Instrument

[f] No Duty to Inquire Absent Circumstances Justifying Suspicion

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

[b] Default in Payment of Interest

[c] Mere Fact of Discounted Price Is Insufficient to Evidence Notice

[d] No Duty to Inquire Absent Circumstances Justifying Suspicion

§ 166.72 Opposing Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Did Not Take Instrument for Value [Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(A), 3303]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise Not Performed

[b] Instrument Taken in Exchange for Preexisting Debt Must Be Under Express Agreement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Instrument Taken in Exchange for Preexisting Debt Must Be Under Express Agreement

§ 166.73 Opposing Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Instrument Is Irregular or Incomplete or Holder Had Notice of Claim or Defense or Knowledge That Instrument Was Overdue [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(20), 3302(a), 3304]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Notice of Claim or Defense

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Notice Determined by Actual Knowledge, Notice, or Reason to Know

[b] Failure to Make Inquiry Arising From Suspicion

[c] Close Connection Between Financial Institution Holder and Underlying Transaction

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Notice Determined by Actual Knowledge, Notice, or Reason to Know

[b] Failure to Make Inquiry Arising From Suspicion

[c] Close Connection Between Financial Institution Holder and Underlying Transaction

§§ 166.74-166.89 [Reserved]

§ 166.90 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Signature Obligates Party [Com. Code §§ 3401-3403]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Signer on Face of Instrument Is Maker Despite Relative Location of Signature

[b] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature

[c] Repudiation of Unauthorized Execution Must Be Timely

[d] Location of Signature Not Controlling

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representative's Signature Binding on Prinicpal/Principal's Liability

[b] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature

§ 166.91 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Party Cannot Claim Status of Accommodation Party [Com. Code § 3419(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Limitation on Accommodation Party's Liability

[c] Related Publications

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party Who Signs as Maker Has Same Liability as Co-maker

[b] Presumption That Multiple Signers Are Co-makers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability in Capacity Shown on Instrument

[b] Accommodation Party Who Signs as Maker Has Same Liability as Co-maker

[c] Presumption That Multiple Signers Are Co-makers

§ 166.92 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Purported Accommodated Party Is Not Party on Instrument [Com. Code § 3419(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Purported Accommodated Party and Accommodation Party Must Be Parties to Instrument

§ 166.93 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Holder [Com. Code §§ 3407, 3115], Including Authorized Completion of Instrument and Enforceable Alterations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Liability of Maker Is Primary

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration Defined

[b] Material Alteration Made by Stranger Who Acts Without Authority

[c] Related Agreement Does Not Modify Obligation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Related Agreement Does Not Modify Obligation

§ 166.94 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Transferee [Com. Code § 3203(a), (b)]--"Shelter" Doctrine

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Shelter" Doctrine

[b] Purpose and Effect of "Shelter" Doctrine

§ 166.95 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Accommodation Party [Com. Code § 3419(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payor of Note Succeeds to Rights of Holder

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party May Recover From Accommodated Party

[b] Payor of Note Succeeds to Rights of Holder

§ 166.96 Supporting Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3415,

3502(a)]--Scope of Liability, Dishonor, and Special Endorsements

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Liability of Endorser Is Secondary or Conditional

[c] Federal Law Governs Liability for Endorsement of Checks and Money Orders Between Banks and Customers

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Endorsee Is Not Sole Obligee of Special Endorser

§ 166.97 Supporting Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3415, 3502(a)]--Presentment, Notice of Dishonor, or Delay in Notice Excused [Com. Code § 3504]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presentment Excused by Waiver

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presentment Excused by Waiver

§ 166.98 Supporting Contention That Accommodation Endorser Is Liable to Joint Endorser for Contribution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accommodation Endorser Entitled to Contribution From Joint Endorsers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Endorser Entitled to Contribution From Joint Endorsers

§ 166.99 Supporting Contention That Guarantor of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code § 3419(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Guarantors Under Revised Article 3

[c] Obligation of Guarantor Identical to That of Surety

[d] Related Publications

[e] Related Points and Authorities

§ 166.100 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--No Discharge by Conditional or Partial Tender [Civ. Code §§ 1486, 1494; Com. Code § 3603(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Tender Must Be Unconditional

[b] Tender Must Be of Full Performance

§ 166.101 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Creditor's Objections to Tender [Civ. Code § 1501; Code Civ. Proc. § 2076] Were Sufficient

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creditor Must Specify Objections to Tender

[b] Purpose for Requiring Objections to Tender

[c] Reasonable Compliance Is Sufficient

§ 166.102 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Payee Not Barred by Its Unintentional Mistake in Failing to Demand Proper Tender [Civ. Code § 1501; Code Civ. Proc. § 2076]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Objections Not Required in Case of Creditor's Unintentional Mistake

§ 166.103 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Equitable Estoppel [Evid. Code § 623] Not Applicable to Payee--Maker Knew or Should Have Known True Facts and Suffered No Detriment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel

[b] Equitable Estoppel Is Not Applicable to Maker Who Knew True Facts and Suffered No Detriment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel

§ 166.104 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--No Signature [Com. Code § 3401]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Liability on Underlying Obligation

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Principal Not Liable

[b] Language Purporting to Include Other Obligors Not Controlling

[c] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature/Mere Silence Does Not Constitute Ratification

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Liability Without Signature

[b] Undisclosed Principal Not Liable

§ 166.105 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument in Capacity in Which Party Signed--Party Is Accommodation Party Although Did Not Sign Expressly in That Capacity [Com. Code § 3419(a), (c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Between Parties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party Signs Instrument to Incur Liability

§ 166.106 Opposing Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Payee Equitably Estopped to Assert Maker's Liability [Evid. Code § 623]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payee's Assertion to Maker That Obligation Was Extinguished Defeats Right to Recover

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Estopped From Contradicting Prior Conduct Relied on by Other Party

§ 166.107 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable as Endorser of Promissory Note--Signature Not Placed on Instrument or Attached Document [Com. Code § 3204(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Endorser Attaches Only if Signature Is Properly Placed

§ 166.108 Opposing Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--No Dishonor, Presentment, and/or Notice of Dishonor [Com. Code §§ 3415(a), (c), 3501(b)(3), 3502(a)(1), (2), 3503]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Excused if Corporate Director-Endorser Had Knowledge of Corporate Payee's Affairs

[b] Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Waived Because Waiver Must Be Clear and Unequivocal

[c] Presentment Not Excused if Insufficient Attempt to Locate Maker

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Notice of Dishonor Required

§ 166.109 Opposing Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Endorsement Disclaims Liability [Com. Code § 3415(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Endorsement Without Recourse

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Endorser Not Liable Under Qualified Endorsement

[b] Manifested Intent Not to Assume Responsibility Constitutes Qualified Endorsement

[c] Transfer of Right, Title, and Interest Is Equivalent to Endorsement Without Recourse

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer of Right, Title, and Interest Is Equivalent to Endorsement Without Recourse

§ 166.110 Opposing Contention That Accommodation Party of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party [Com. Code § 3419(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party

[b] Accommodated Party Has No Right of Recourse to or Contribution From Accommodation Party

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party

§ 166.111 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable as Guarantor of Promissory Note [Civ. Code §§ 2787, 2819]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Agreement Cannot Transform Written General Endorsement Into Guaranty

[b] Original Obligation Altered

[c] Extension of Time for Definite Time, Without Surety's Consent, Exonerates Surety

[d] Contract Not Within Terms of Guaranty

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Original Obligation Altered

[b] Contract Not Within Terms of Guaranty

§ 166.112 Supporting Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Treble Damages After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages Mandatory

§ 166.113 Opposing Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Treble Damages After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]--Stop Payment Based on Good-Faith Dispute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Notice of Payee to Maker Regarding Stop Payment

§ 166.114 Opposing Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Prejudgment Interest After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Publications

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Relief Under Civil Code Section 1719 Precludes Recovery of Prejudgment Interest

§§ 166.115-166.129 [Reserved]

§ 166.130 Supporting Contention That Holder in Due Course Is Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor [Com. Code § 3305]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Holder in Due Course Is Subject Only to "Real Defenses"

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course Is Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor

§ 166.131 Supporting Contention That Holder May Enforce Interest Provision in Note [Com. Code § 3305]--Note Not Usurious, or Provision Not Usurious on Its Face, and Holder Is Holder in Due Course [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course That Acquired Note Before Maturity

[b] Delay Caused by Borrower in Receiving Proceeds of Maximum Interest Note

[c] Bonus Added to Actual Interest Does Not Exceed Maximum Allowable Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course That Acquired Note Before Maturity

§ 166.132 Opposing Contention That Holder in Due Course Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor [Com. Code § 3305]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Fraud in Execution of Instrument

[c] Related Publications

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Void Instrument Unenforceable by Holder in Due Course

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nullifying Effect on Instrument

[b] Void Instrument Unenforceable by Holder in Due Course

§ 166.133 Opposing Contention That Holder May Enforce Interest Provision in Note [Com. Code § 3305]--Note Is Usurious and Holder Is Not Holder in Due Course [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Usurious Interest Provision

[c] Related Publications

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Usurious Interest Provision Void

[b] Immaterial That Borrower Took Initiative in Transaction

[c] Adding Unpaid Interest to Principal Is Usurious

[d] Actual Transaction, Not Face of Note, Controls

[e] Bonus Added to Actual Interest Exceeds Maximum Allowable Interest

[f] Interest Payments Made on Usurious Note Are Offset Against Principal

§ 166.134 Opposing Contention That Holder Not Subject to Defenses--Action by Nonholder in Due Course--Lack of Consideration [Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Circumstances Under Which Lack of Consideration Not a Defense

[c] Debt Arising From Illegal Transaction

[d] Related Publications

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense Applies to Nonholder in Due Course

[b] Parol Evidence Admissible to Show Lack of Consideration Between Original Parties

[c] Moral Obligation Insufficient

[d] Mere Motive, Inducement, or Hope of Profit

[e] Mere Pledge of Consideration

[f] Cancellation of Prior Debt Without Knowledge of Maker

[g] Purported Maker of Note Did Not Sign Note, Nor Receive Any Benefit

[h] No Intention of Parties Evidencing Forbearance

[i] Note Given in Exchange for Note Lacking Consideration

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Note Given in Exchange for Note Lacking Consideration

§ 166.135 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Loan

Arranged by Licensed Real Estate Broker and Secured by Real Property [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statement of Exemption

[b] Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker

[c] Minimal Broker Involvement Is Sufficient

[d] Broad Definition of Compensation

[e] Existence of Compensation Is Determined by Trier of Fact

[f] Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker Is Determined by Trier of Fact

[g] Loan to Entity of Which Broker Is Member

[h] Anticipated Profit Qualifies as Broker's Compensation

[i] Contribution to Expenses Qualifies as Broker's Compensation

[j] Retroactive Application of Exemption

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker

[b] Retroactive Application of Exemption

§ 166.136 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Loan Made by Licensed Real Estate Broker as Principal [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker as Lender

§ 166.137 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Note Generated in Bona Fide Purchase and Sale Is Not Loan or Forbearance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Credit Sale

§ 166.138 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Modification [Refinance] of Note Initially Generated in Bona Fide Purchase and Sale Continues to Be Exempt

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Modified Note Remains Exempt

§ 166.139 Opposing Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption for Loan Arranged by Licensed Real Estate Broker and Secured by Real Property [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1] Is Not Applicable--Broker Was Borrower

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loan Is Not Made by Broker Who Is Borrower

[b] Loan Is Not Arranged by Broker Who Is Borrower

§ 166.140 Supporting Contention That Usury Law Does Not Apply--Note Was Element of Joint Venture, Instead of

Evidence of Loan, Between Maker and Holder

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promissory Note Can Be Aspect of Joint Venture Between Maker and Holder

[b] Nature of Transaction Is Question of Fact

[c] Several Facts, Considered Together, Support Conclusion That Transaction Was Joint Venture

[d] Usury Law Does Not Apply to Note Between Joint Venturers

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.01

§ 166.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda relating to negotiable instruments, with particular emphasis on promissory notes.

Part II, Subpart A contains memoranda supporting [see §§ 166.20 -166.26] and opposing [see §§ 166.27 -166.31] the contention that an instrument is negotiable.

Part II, Subpart B contains memoranda supporting [see § 166.50] and opposing [see §§ 166.51, 166.52] the contention that an instrument was negotiated.

Part II, Subpart C contains memoranda supporting [see §§ 166.70, 166.71] and opposing [see §§ 166.72, 166.73] the contention that a holder is a holder in due course.

Part II, Subpart D contains memoranda supporting [see § 166.90] and opposing [see § 166.104] the contention that a party is liable on an instrument based on the existence or nature of the party's signature; supporting [see §§ 166.91, 166.92] and opposing [see § 166.105] the contention that a party is liable on an instrument in the capacity of an actual party instead of an accommodation party; supporting [see §§ 166.93 -166.95, 166.100 -166.103] and opposing [see § 166.106] the contention that a maker is liable on a note; supporting [see §§ 166.96, 166.97] and opposing [see §§ 166.107 -166.109] the contention that an endorser is liable on a note; supporting the contention that an accommodation endorser is liable to a joint endorser for contribution [see § 166.98]; opposing the contention that an accommodation party of a note is liable on the instrument [see § 166.110]; supporting [see § 166.99] and opposing [see § 166.111] the contention that a party is liable as a guarantor of a promissory note; supporting [see § 166.112] and opposing [see § 166.113] the contention that a payee of a dishonored check is entitled to treble damages; and opposing the contention that a payee of a dishonored check is entitled to claim and recover prejudgment interest after making a statutory demand for payment [see § 166.114].

Part II, Subpart E contains memoranda supporting [see § 166.130] and opposing [see §§ 166.132, 166.134] the contention that the holder is not subject to the obligor's defenses; supporting [see § 166.131] and opposing [see § 166.133] the contention that the holder may enforce a usurious note or that the note is usurious; supporting [§ 166.135, § 166.136] and opposing [see § 166.139] the contention that a particular note qualifies for the usury exemption available for loans made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers and secured by real property; and supporting the contention that the usury law does not apply because a promissory note, which the maker asserts is evidence of a usurious loan, actually was created to effectuate a joint venture, instead of a loan, between the maker and the holder [see § 166.140].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Commercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsHolders in Due CourseCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsNegotiable & Nonnegotiable InstrumentsContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsEnforcementDuties & Liabilities of PartiesTypes of PartiesIndorsees & IndorsersContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsNegotiationIndorsementGeneral OverviewContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsTypesPromissory Notes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.02

§ 166.02 Governing Law

[1] Division 3 of Commercial Code

Negotiable instruments are generally governed by Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code. The 1990 revision to Article 3 was, for the most part, adopted by California and is set forth in Com. Code § 3101 et seq. (referred to in this chapter as "Division 3 of the Commercial Code"). Definitions relating to the Uniform Commercial Code are set forth in Com. Code § 1201. The Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorsement" or "indorser" [see, e.g., Com. Code § 3204], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorsement" or "endorser." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Usury is governed by Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1; and Civ. Code § 1916.1 et seq.. A payee's cause of action against a maker or drawer of a check, draft, or order, to recover treble damages on the instrument, is governed by Civ. Code § 1719. The creation of a presumption that a check has been paid is set forth in Evid. Code § 670. Equitable estoppel is governed by Evid. Code § 623. Civ. Code § 1485 et seq., relating to offers of performance, and Code Civ. Proc. § 2076, governing objections to tender, are also sometimes relevant to promissory notes.

[2] Negotiability

The basic distinguishing features of negotiability are that (1) intangible rights are transferable, and (2) a good-faith transferee of these rights may take greater rights than the transferor under certain conditions [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1.01 (Matthew Bender)].

[3] Negotiable Instruments

Com. Code § 3101 et seq. apply to negotiable instruments and not to money, payment orders governed by Com. Code § 11101 et seq., or securities governed by Com. Code § 8101 et seq. [Com. Code § 3102(a)]. Except as provided in Com. Code § 3104(c) and (d) (relating to checks and the exclusion of certain qualified writings as negotiable instruments), the term "negotiable instrument" means an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money, with or without interest or other charges described in the promise or order, if it satisfies all the following requirements [Com. Code §

3104(a)]:

- It is payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of a holder [see Com. Code § 3109] (payable to bearer or order defined).

- It is payable on demand or at a definite time [see Com. Code § 3108 (payable on demand or at definite time defined)].

- It does not state any other undertaking or instruction by the person promising or ordering payment to do any act in addition to the payment of money. However, the promise or order may contain (1) an undertaking or power to give, maintain, or protect collateral to secure payment; (2) an authorization or power to the holder to confess judgment or realize on or dispose of collateral; or (3) a waiver of the benefit of any law intended for the advantage or protection of an obligor.

"Promise" is defined as a written undertaking to pay money signed by the person undertaking to pay [Com. Code § 3103(a)(9)]. "Order" means a written instruction to pay money signed by the person giving the instruction [Com. Code § 3103(a)(6)]. Whether a promise or order is "unconditional" is set forth in Com. Code § 3106.

"Instrument" is a synonym for negotiable instrument [Com. Code § 3104(b)], and in most places Division 3 of the Commercial Code uses the term "instrument."

An order that meets all of the requirements of a negotiable instrument, except that it is not payable to either bearer or order, is negotiable if it is a "check" as defined in Com. Code § 3104(f) [Com. Code § 3104(c)]. In addition, a promise or order other than a check is not an instrument if, at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession, it contains a conspicuous statement, however expressed, to the effect that the promise or order is not negotiable or is not an instrument governed by this division [Com. Code § 3104(d)].

[4] Promissory Notes

A promissory note (or simply note) is a formal IOU. The maker (or debtor or borrower) expressly promises to pay the named payee (or creditor) an amount of money in the future at the time or times indicated [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1A.03 (Matthew Bender)]. For purposes of determining the negotiability of an instrument, an instrument is a note if it is a promise [Com. Code § 3104(e); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(9) ("promise" defined)].

[5] Negotiation

"Negotiation" means a transfer of possession, whether voluntary or involuntary, of an instrument by a person other than the issuer to a person who thereby becomes its holder [Com. Code § 3201(a); see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(21) ("holder" defined), 3105 ("issuer" defined)]. Except for negotiation by a remitter, if an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation requires transfer of possession of the instrument and its endorsement by the holder. If an instrument is payable to bearer, it may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone [Com. Code § 3201(b)]. A "bearer" is the person in possession of an instrument, document of title, or certificated security payable to bearer or endorsed in blank [Com. Code § 1201(b)(5)].

[6] Holders in Due Course

A "holder," with regard to a negotiable instrument, is the person in possession if the instrument is payable to bearer or, in the case of an instrument payable to an identified person, if the identified person is in possession. [Com. Code § 1201(b)(21)]. Subject to Com. Code § 3106(c), (d) (relating to specified conditional promises and orders), a "holder in due course" is the holder of an instrument if all of the following apply [Com. Code § 3302(a)]:

- The instrument when issued or negotiated to the holder does not bear such apparent evidence of forgery or alteration or is not otherwise so irregular or incomplete as to call into question its authenticity;

- The holder took the instrument for value and in good faith; and

- The holder took the instrument without notice (1) that the instrument is overdue or has been dishonored or that there is an uncured default with regard to payment of another instrument issued as part of the same series, (2) that the instrument contains an unauthorized signature or has been altered, (3) of any claim to the instrument described in Com. Code § 3306, and (4) that any party has a defense or claim in recoupment described in Com. Code § 3305(a).

Com. Code § 3302(b) sets forth those acts not constituting notice of a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument. Com. Code § 3302(f) provides that for notice to be effective it must be received at a time and in a manner that gives a reasonable opportunity to act on it.

Except to the extent a transferor or predecessor in interest has rights as a holder in due course, a person does not acquire rights of a holder in due course of an instrument by the following methods [Com. Code § 3302(c)]:

- Through legal process or by purchase in an execution, bankruptcy, or creditor's sale or similar proceeding;

- Through purchase as part of a bulk transaction not in ordinary course of business of the transferor; or

- As the successor in interest to an estate or other organization.

If, under Com. Code § 3303(a)(1), the promise of performance that is the consideration for an instrument has been partially performed, the holder may assert rights as a holder in due course of the instrument only to the fraction of the amount payable under the instrument equal to the value of the partial performance divided by the value of the promised performance [Com. Code § 3302(d)]. If (1) the person entitled to enforce an instrument has only a security interest in the instrument and (2) the person obliged to pay the instrument has a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument that may be asserted against the person who granted the security interest, the person entitled to enforce the instrument may assert rights as a holder in due course only to an amount payable under the instrument which, at the time of enforcement of the instrument, does not exceed the amount of the unpaid obligation secured [Com. Code § 3302(e)].

Com. Code § 3302 is subject to any law limiting status as a holder in due course in particular classes of transactions [Com. Code § 3302(g)].

[7] Statute of Limitations

Generally, an action to enforce a party's obligation to pay a note payable at a definite time must be commenced within six years after the due date or dates stated in the note, or if a due date is accelerated, within six years after the accelerated due date [Com. Code § 3118(a)]. Similarly, if demand for payment is made to the maker of a note payable on demand, an action to enforce a party's obligation to pay must be commenced within six years after the demand [Com. Code § 3118(b)]. The times within which other actions must be commenced, such as actions for conversion or breach of warranty, are set forth in Com. Code § 3118(c)-(g).

The purpose of Com. Code § 3118 is to define the time within which an action to enforce an obligation, duty, or right arising under Division 3 of the Commercial Code must be commenced. Thus, Com. Code § 3118 should not be confused with other provisions relating to when a cause of action accrues on an instrument. Accrual of a cause of action is governed by other sections such as those that state the various obligations of parties to an instrument [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-118 (1990)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Commercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsHolders in Due CourseCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsNegotiable & Nonnegotiable InstrumentsCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Negotiation, Transfer & IndorsementIndorsementContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsEnforcementDefensesStatutes of LimitationsContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsTypesPromissory Notes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.03

§ 166.03 Use of Forms in Chapter

The forms in this chapter are in the form of contentions based on substantive points of the law of negotiable instruments. The contentions may be combined with each other, as appropriate, according to the facts of the case. Many of the supporting contentions have corresponding opposing contentions on the same point. However, a supporting contention that does not have a corresponding opposing form may itself be adapted for use in opposing the supporting contention, depending on the facts of the case. For example, although § 166.97 supports the contention that an endorser of a note is liable because presentment or notice is excused, the same authorities may be used with distinguishing factual evidence in an argument that those requirements were not excused.

When appropriate under the circumstances of the particular case, the contentions in this chapter may be used to support or oppose a specific pleading, motion, or request. For example, the contentions in Subpart C of the Forms in this chapter [§ 166.70 et seq.] may be used to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment, contending that a triable issue of fact does not remain with regard to whether the holder is a holder in due course. The contentions in this chapter should be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities from other chapters supporting or opposing the use of specific procedures, such as demurrers or motions for summary judgment [see, e.g., Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 90, Dismissal , Ch. 155, Motions After Trial , Ch. 160, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments]. Finally, the contentions may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum of points or authorities or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsGeneral OverviewCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsHolders in Due CourseCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsNegotiable & Nonnegotiable InstrumentsCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Negotiation, Transfer & IndorsementIndorsementContracts LawNegotiable

InstrumentsTypesPromissory Notes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.04

§ 166.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to commercial paper generally, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to banks, see Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks in that set. For discussion and forms relating to contract issues generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts . For discussion and forms relating to usury, see Ch. 568, Usury .

[2] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda applicable to a bank's duties regarding checks, see Ch. 166, Negotiable Instruments . For memoranda regarding contract issues generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts . For points and authorities concerning interest on obligations and judgments, see Ch. 121, Interest . For memoranda addressing various aspects of notes secured by deeds of trust, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Commercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsHolders in Due CourseCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsNegotiable & Nonnegotiable InstrumentsCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Negotiation, Transfer & IndorsementIndorsementContracts LawDefensesUsuryContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsTypesPromissory Notes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.05

§ 166.05 Other Related Publications

For discussion of negotiable instruments generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code (Matthew Bender). Chapter 1C of that publication discusses the 1990 revision of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code which, for the most part, has been adopted by California. That chapter emphasizes how the revised article differs from former Article 3.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Commercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General OverviewCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)General Provisions & DefinitionsDefinitionsHolders in Due CourseCommercial Law (UCC)Negotiable Instruments (Article 3)Negotiation, Transfer & IndorsementIndorsementContracts LawNegotiable InstrumentsTypesPromissory Notes

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-166 California Points & Authorities §§ 166.06-166.19

[Reserved]

§§ 166.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.20

§ 166.20 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Requirements of Negotiability [Com. Code §§ 3103, 3104]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE IT IS A _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] AS DEFINED IN COMMERCIAL CODE SECTION 3103 THAT COMPLIES WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF NEGOTIABILITY IN COMMERCIAL CODE SECTION 3104(a).

A. Requirements of Negotiability. An instrument is either a promise or order. A promise is a written undertaking to pay money signed by the person undertaking to pay and an order is a written instruction to pay money signed by the person giving the instrument (Com. Code § 3103(a)(6), (9)). To be a negotiable instrument, the promise or order must also (1) be unconditional; (2) pay a fixed amount of money, with or without interest or other charges described in the promise or order; (3) be payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of a holder; (4) be payable on demand or at a definite time; and (5) not state any other undertaking or instruction by the person promising or ordering payment to do any act in addition to the payment of money (Com. Code § 3104(a)).

[EITHER]

B. Note. An instrument is a "note" if it is a promise (Com. Code § 3104(e)).

[OR]

B. Draft. An instrument is a "draft" if it is an order (Com. Code § 3104(e)).

[Add, as appropriate, EITHER]

C. Check. A "check" is a (1) draft, other than a documentary draft, payable on demand and drawn on a bank, (2) a cashier's check or teller's check, or (3) a demand draft (Com. Code § 3104(f)).

[OR]

C. Cashier's Check. A "cashier's check" is a draft with regard to which the drawer and drawee are the same bank or branches of the same bank (Com. Code § 3104(g)).

[OR]

C. Teller's Check. A "teller's check" is a draft drawn by a bank (1) on another bank, or (2) payable at or through a bank (Com. Code § 3104(h)).

[OR]

C. Traveler's Check. A "traveler's check" is an instrument that (1) is payable on demand; (2) is drawn on or payable at or through a bank; (3) is designated by the term "traveler's check" or by a substantially similar term; and (4) requires, as a condition to payment, a countersignature by a person whose specimen signature appears on the instrument (Com. Code § 3104(i)).

[OR]

C. Certificate of Deposit. A "certificate of deposit" is an instrument containing an acknowledgment by a bank that a sum of money has been received by the bank and a promise by the bank to repay the sum of money (Com. Code § 3104(j); McCully v. Cooper (1896) 114 Cal. 258, 262, 46 P. 82).

[OR]

C. Demand Draft. A demand draft is a writing not signed by a customer that is created by a third party under the purported authority of the customer for the purpose of charging the customer's account with a bank. A demand draft must contain the customer's account number and may contain the customer's printed or typewritten name, a notation that the customer authorized the draft, or the statement "No Signature Required" or words to that effect. The term "demand draft" does not include a check purportedly drawn by and bearing the signature of a fiduciary (Com. Code § 3104(k); see Com. Code § 3307(a)(1)).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with forms supporting particular elements of negotiability (see, e.g., §§ 166.21 -166.26).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable because it complies with Com. Code §§ 3103 and 3104. Paragraph A sets forth the statutory requirements applicable to negotiable instruments. The alternatives in Paragraph B establish the two general categories of instruments, and the Paragraph C options define particular instruments that fall within the categories specified in Paragraph B.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the instrument, establish that the instrument satisfies all the requirements of negotiability, and show how one of the foregoing descriptions applies to it.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the writing is a negotiable instrument.

[b] Money Orders

Money orders may or may not be negotiable instruments. For example, an instrument may be a check even though it is described on its face by the term "money order" [Com. Code § 3104(f)]. If the issuance of a money order requires a signature of the drawer, and that requirement is strictly enforced by the drawee bank, the money order should be treated as a negotiable instrument, similar to a check [see Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 197-202, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262 (construing former version of Com. Code § 3104; money orders were not negotiable instruments under the circumstances; discussed in § 166.27[3][d]); see also Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-104 (1990) (form of money order determines how they are treated for purposes of Article 3)].

[c] Related Publications

For discussion regarding types of negotiable instruments, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, Chapter 1C, § 1C.04 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.27 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Deposit

In McCully v. Cooper (1896) 114 Cal. 258, 46 P. 82 , an action by the administratrix of an estate to recover possession of a certificate of deposit, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's order refusing plaintiff's motion for new trial, on grounds concerning jurisdiction over the property of the deceased's estate. In discussing the nature of the instrument, the Court noted that a certificate of deposit is a negotiable security, and to that extent is similar to a promissory note (114 Cal. 258, 262) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Draft

In People v. McNear (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 541, 12 Cal. Rptr. 124 , a criminal action for issuance of drafts without sufficient funds, the court of appeal determined that the instruments in question constituted drafts. A draft is an open letter of request from, and an order by, one person on another to pay a sum of money stated in the letter to a third person on demand or at a specified future time; and the word "draft" is commonly used for a bill of exchange (190 Cal. App.

2d 541, 546) .

[b] Cashier's Check

In Bank of America v. Cranston (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 208, 60 Cal. Rptr. 336 , the court found that a cashier's check has the same legal effect as a certificate of deposit, certified check, or draft. The legal result of certifying a check at the request of the payee is the same as though the cash for which the check called had been paid over the counter to the payee, redeposited to the payee's own credit, and a certificate of deposit issued for it. Thus, the substance of a certificate of deposit, cashier's check, and certified check are the same. Each is a negotiable instrument pledging the credit of the bank to the holder (252 Cal. App. 2d 208, 217) .

[c] Certificate of Deposit

In Mills v. Barney (1863) 22 Cal. 240 , an unsuccessful action to recover on a forged certificate of deposit, the Supreme Court held that an agent's erroneous endorsement of the certificate constituted the payee-principal's warranty of title. The Court noted that with regard to that point, certificates of deposits are similar to promissory notes [citing Welton et al. v. Adams & Co. (1854) 4 Cal. 37] (22 Cal. 240, 248) .

In Welton et al. v. Adams & Co. (1854) 4 Cal. 37 , an action to recover on a certificate of deposit that was destroyed in a fire, the Supreme Court held that the bank was required to indemnify the loss, noting that the certificate is a negotiable security, and is similar to a promissory note (4 Cal. 37, 40) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.21

§ 166.21 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Writing Contains Unconditional Promise or Order to Pay Money [Com. Code §§ 3104(a), 3106]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE IT CONTAINS AN UNCONDITIONAL _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] TO PAY MONEY, AND THE UNCONDITIONAL OBLIGATION TO PAY THE STATED AMOUNT IS NOT MADE CONDITIONAL _____ [specify, e.g., BY A REFERENCE TO ANOTHER WRITING FOR RIGHTS REGARDING PREPAYMENT].

A. Promise or Order Unconditional Unless Includes Specified Statement. A promise or order is unconditional unless it states (1) an express condition to payment, (2) that the promise or order is subject to or governed by another writing, or (3) that rights or obligations with regard to the promise or order are stated in another writing (Com. Code § 3106(a)).

B. Unconditional Nature of Promise or Order Not Affected.

[EITHER]

A reference to another writing does not of itself make the promise or order conditional (Com. Code § 3106(a)).

[OR]

A promise or order is not made conditional by reference to another writing for a statement of rights with regard to _____ [specify e.g., collateral or prepayment or acceleration] (Com. Code § 3106(b)(1))

[OR]

A promise or order is not made conditional because payment is limited to resort to a particular fund or source (Com. Code § 3106(b)(2)).

[OR]

A promise or order is not made conditional because it requires, as a condition to payment, a countersignature by a person whose specimen signature appears on the promise or order (Com. Code § 3106(c)).

[OR]

A promise or order is not made conditional because it contains a statement, required by applicable statutory or administrative law, to the effect that the rights of a holder or transferee are subject to claims or defenses that the issuer could assert against the original payee (Com. Code § 3106(d)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Separate Agreement, Not Referred to in Instrument, That Does Not Create Contingency. A note and a separate agreement that constitute one transaction do not render the note nonnegotiable if there is no intent to make the payment dependent on any contingency, and the agreement is in no way incompatible with the terms of the note, and does not purport to change, limit, or modify its provisions (Williams v. Silverstein (1931) 213 Cal. 269, 275-276, 2 P.2d 165).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it contain an unconditional promise or order to pay money [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a) ("negotiable instrument" defined as unconditional promise or order to pay fixed amount of money), 3106 (unconditional or conditional promises or orders)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts regarding the nature of the promise or order to pay money, and apply the descriptions in this form to those facts. For example, if a note was executed in conjunction with another writing regarding prepayment rights, counsel should describe the agreement, and show that the note nevertheless remains negotiable under Com. Code § 3106(b).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument contains an unconditional promise or order to pay money.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding the attribute of an unconditional promise, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.28 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Separate Agreement, Not Referred to in Instrument, That Does Not Create Contingency

In Williams v. Silverstein (1931) 213 Cal. 269, 2 P.2d 165 , the seller of real property accepted as partial payment two promissory notes in which he was named as the payee. One of the two purchasers signed the note, and two other persons acting as brokers signed on the back of the notes. The notes were executed in conjunction with an escrow agreement, but did not refer to the agreement. The escrow agent held all the documents, with instructions to deliver the property lease to the purchasers after they had paid the notes in full with interest. The purchasers defaulted on the notes, and the payee brought suit against the two persons who signed on the back. The action primarily concerned issues regarding whether those two signatories were endorsers or makers of the notes [see discussion in § 166.104[3][b]]. The trial court found in the payee's favor, and the court of appeal reversed. The payee appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court upheld the court of appeal's decision, reversing the trial court's judgment for the payee. With regard to the issue of the negotiability of the notes, the Court rejected the payee's contention that the notes were not negotiable by reason of the separate escrow agreement. Although a negotiable instrument may be rendered nonnegotiable when it purports to incorporate the terms of a separate and incompatible agreement, the notes in question did not refer to the escrow agreement. Moreover, they contained an absolute and unconditional promise to pay at a certain time, and together with the agreement did not evidence an intention to make the payment dependent on any contingency (213 Cal. 269, 275) . The escrow agreement was in no way incompatible with the terms of the notes, nor did it purport to change, limit, or modify the provisions of the notes. Consequently, the notes remained negotiable (213 Cal. 269, 275-276) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconditional Nature of Promise or Order Not Affected

The facts and procedural background of Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 214 P.2d 819 , are discussed in § 166.73[3][c]. In Coml. Credit, the Supreme Court held that a finance company that is closely connected to the underlying transaction cannot be regarded as a holder in due course of a note given in the transaction. The Court also held that the concurrent execution of a note and a conditional sales contract does not defeat the negotiability of an otherwise negotiable instrument (34 Cal. 2d 766, 770) .

In Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124 , an action to enforce collection of a note and to foreclose a lien on real property given as security for it, the court of appeal held that contemporaneous execution and transfer of a promissory note and a nonnegotiable contract securing performance by a lien on real property does not, in and of itself, impair the negotiability of the note (179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 696) .

In Martin v. Ajax Construction Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 425, 269 P.2d 132 , a usury action, the court of appeal held that although parties indicate by a contemporary writing the fund from which repayment should be made, and thereby set forth the circumstances that give rise to the instrument, the underlying note is still an unconditional promise to pay (124 Cal. App. 2d 425, 430) .

For an additional case in which an instrument that referred to another agreement was nevertheless found to be negotiable, see Johnston v. Wolf (1931) 118 Cal. App. 388, 390, 5 P.2d 673 .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.22

§ 166.22 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Specifies Payment of Fixed Amount of Money [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24), 3104(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE IT SPECIFIES PAYMENT OF A FIXED AMOUNT OF MONEY [AND THE INCLUSION OF A VARIABLE RATE OF INTEREST IN THE INSTRUMENT DOES NOT DESTROY THE INSTRUMENT'S NEGOTIABILITY].

A. Fixed Amount of Money. To be negotiable, an instrument must be an unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money, with or without interest or other charges described in the promise or order (Com. Code § 3104(a)). An instrument specifies the payment of money if it involves a medium of exchange authorized or adopted by a domestic or foreign government, including a monetary unit of account established by an intergovernmental organization or by agreement between two or more nations (Com. Code § 1201(b)(24)).

[Optional] B. Variable Interest. Interest may be stated in an instrument as a fixed or variable amount of money or it may be expressed as a fixed or variable rate or rates. The amount or rate of interest may be stated or described in the instrument in any manner and may require reference to information not contained in the instrument (Com. Code § 3112(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it is pays a fixed amount of money [see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24) ("money" defined), 3104(a) (amount of money must be "fixed amount")]. Paragraph B sets forth the applicable law that the inclusion in the instrument of a provision for a variable rate of interest does not destroy the instrument's negotiability [see Com. Code § 3112].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the instrument involves payment of money as that term is defined by Com. Code § 1201(b)(24).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument specifies payment of a fixed amount of money.

[b] Fixed Amount of Money

The requirement that the amount of money payable must be a "fixed amount" replaces the former requirement that the writing specify payment of a "sum certain" [compare Com. Code § 3104(a) with former Com. Code §§ 3104(1)(b), 3106]. Unfortunately, "fixed amount" is not defined in Division 3 of the Commercial Code or in the 1990 version of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code. The only guiding authority is set forth in Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-112 (1990), which states that "the requirement of a 'fixed amount' applies only to principal."

[c] Variable Interest Rates Permitted in Negotiable Instruments

Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code, as it existed before its 1990 revision, took the position that a variable interest rate in an instrument destroyed its negotiability [see U.C.C. §§ 3-106, 3-118 (pre-1990 version); see also Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.09[3] (Matthew Bender)]. However, the 1990 revision to Article 3, adopted for the most part by California [see Com. Code § 3101 et seq.] specifically allows variable interest rates in negotiable instruments [see Com. Code § 3112(b)]. The purpose of these provisions is to clarify the meaning of "interest" in the introductory clause of U.C.C. § 3-104(a) [Com. Code § 3104(a)]. They are not intended to validate an interest provision that violates other law [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-112 (1990)].

[d] Related Publications

For discussion regarding the attribute of paying a fixed amount, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.09 (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.23

§ 166.23 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable to Bearer [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE IN THAT IT IS PAYABLE TO BEARER, BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] _____ [specify, e.g., IS PAYABLE TO THE ORDER OF CASH].

A. Payable to Bearer. A promise or order is payable to bearer if it: (1) is payable to bearer; (2) is payable to the order of bearer; (3) indicates that the person in possession is entitled to payment; (4) does not state a payee; (5) is payable to or to the order of cash; or (6) indicates that it is not payable to an identified person (Com. Code § 3109(a)).

[Optional] B. Payable to Identified Person and Endorsed in Blank. An instrument payable to an identified person may become payable to bearer if it is endorsed in blank, and may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone until specially endorsed (Com. Code §§ 3109(c), 3205(b)).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it is payable to bearer or to order, on the ground that it is payable to bearer [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1)

(negotiable instrument must be payable to order or bearer), 3109 ("payable to bearer" defined); but see Com. Code § 3104(c) (order that meets all requirements of negotiable instrument, except that it is not payable to bearer or order, is negotiable if it is a check)]. To qualify as negotiable, the instrument must be payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1); see Com. Code § 3105 ("issue" defined)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts regarding the payee, and apply one of the foregoing provisions to it. For example, if the promise or order does not state a payee or states that it is payable to cash, counsel should show that it is negotiable under Com. Code § 3109(a)(2) or (3).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the promise or order is payable to bearer.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding the attribute of being payable to bearer, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, §§ 1C.12 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.30 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.24

§ 166.24 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable to Order [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109, 3110]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE IN THAT IT IS PAYABLE TO ORDER, BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] IS PAYABLE TO _____ [specify, e.g., THE ORDER OF AN IDENTIFIED PERSON].

A. Payable to Order. A promise or order that is not payable to bearer is payable to order if it is payable (1) to the order of an identified person or (2) to an identified person or order (Com. Code § 3109(b)).

[Optional] B. Identification of Person to Whom Instrument Is Payable. The person to whom an instrument is initially payable is determined by the intent of the person signing as, or in the name or behalf of, the issuer of the instrument. The instrument is payable to the person intended by the signer even if that person is identified in the instrument by name or other identification that is not that of the intended person. If more than one person signs in the name or behalf of the issuer of an instrument and all the signers do not intend the same person as payee, the instrument is payable to any person intended by one or more of the signers (Com. Code § 3110(a)). A person to whom an instrument is payable may be identified in any way, including by name, identifying number, office, or account number (Com. Code § 3110(c)). An instrument may be payable to an account identified only by number, in which case it is payable to the person to whom the account is payable (Com.

[EITHER]

Code § 3110(c)(1)).

[OR]

an account identified by number and by a person's name, in which case it is payable to the named person (Com. Code § 3110(c)(1)).

[OR]

a trust, an estate, or a person described as trustee or representative of a trust or estate, in which case it is payable to the trustee, the representative, or a successor of either (Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(A)).

[OR]

a person described as agent or similar representative of a named or identified person, in which case it is payable to the represented person, the representative, or a successor of the representative (Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(B)).

[OR]

a fund or organization that is not a legal entity, in which case it is payable to a representative of the members of the fund or organization (Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(C)).

[OR]

an office or to a person described as holding an office, in which case it is payable to the named person, the incumbent of the office, or a successor to the incumbent (Com. Code § 3110(c)(2)(D)).

[OR]

to two or more persons alternatively, in which case it is payable to any of them (Com. Code § 3110(d)).

[OR]

to two or more persons not alternatively, in which case it is payable to all of them (Com. Code § 3110(d)).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it is payable to bearer or to order, on the ground that it is payable to order [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1) (negotiable instrument must be payable to order or bearer), 3109 ("payable to order" defined), 3110 (rules determining identity of person); but see Com. Code § 3104(c) (order that meets all requirements of negotiable instrument, except that it is not payable to bearer or order, is negotiable if it is a check)]. To qualify as negotiable, the instrument must be payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into a holder's possession [Com. Code § 3104(a)(1); see Com. Code § 3105 ("issue" defined)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts regarding the payee, and apply the foregoing provisions to it. For example, if the promise or order states that it is payable to an identified person, as that term is defined and described in Com. Code § 3110, counsel should show that it is negotiable under Com. Code § 3109(b).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is payable to order.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion of the attribute of being payable to order, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, §§ 1C.12 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.30 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.25

§ 166.25 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable on Demand [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE IN THAT IT IS PAYABLE ON DEMAND, BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] _____ [specify, e.g., STATES THAT IT IS PAYABLE AT SIGHT].

A. Payable on Demand. A promise or order is payable on demand if it (1) states that it is payable on demand or at sight, or otherwise indicates that it is payable at the will of the holder, or (2) does not state any time of payment (Com. Code § 3108(a); Holmes v. West (1861) 17 Cal. 623, 624-625) .

[Optional] B. Check Is Payable on Demand. A check regular on its face is payable on demand (Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 470, 209 P.2d 44 (construing prior law)).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it is payable at a definite time or on demand, on the ground that it is payable on demand [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2) (negotiable instrument must be payable at definite time or on demand), 3108 ("payable on demand" defined)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts regarding the provision or lack of provision for time of payment and show why it is payable on demand.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is payable on demand.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding the attribute of being payable on demand or at a definite time, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.11 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.31 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payable on Demand

In Holmes v. West (1861) 17 Cal. 623 , an action to recover on a promissory note and to enforce a mortgage given to secure it, the maker demurred to the complaint on the ground that the note was not due at the time of the suit. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the holder. A note that does not state any particular time within which it is payable is payable on demand, and is due immediately (17 Cal. 623, 624-625) .

[b] Check Is Payable on Demand

In Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 209 P.2d 44 , construing former provisions of the Negotiable Instrument Law, a payee brought an action against the maker of several checks. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the maker, discussing holder-in-due-course issues and other grounds. With regard to whether the checks were negotiated within a reasonable length of time, the court noted that each check was regular and complete on its face, and that a check regular on its face is payable on demand (93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 470) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Payable on Demand

In Keyes v. Fenstermaker et al. (1864) 24 Cal. 329 , an action on a promissory note, the Supreme Court held that if no day or time of payment is specified in the note, it is payable on demand, and an endorser's liability is the same as that on a demand note (24 Cal. 329, 331-332) .

In Rottman v. Hevener (1921) 54 Cal. App. 485, 202 P. 334 , construing prior law, an action on a promissory note, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment in favor of the maker of the note. The court held that a purported oral agreement conditioning maturity of the note on a demand for payment did not alter the terms of the written instrument, which stated that it is payable "on demand, after date, without grace." When an obligation for the payment of money is payable "on demand" or "on call," the debt is payable presently, and due immediately (54 Cal. App. 485, 487-488) .

[b] Check Is Payable on Demand

In Wright v. Bank of America (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 176, 1 Cal. Rptr. 202 , decided under former provisions of the Negotiable Instrument Law, an action by makers of a check against the drawee bank, the court of appeal ultimately held that the maker's negligence, and not the drawee bank's honoring of a postdated check, proximately caused the makers' loss. In discussing the legitimacy of a postdated check, the court noted that an essential characteristic of a check is that it is payable on demand (176 Cal. App. 2d 176, 180) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.26

§ 166.26 Supporting Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Is Payable at Definite Time [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable (see, e.g., § 166.20).]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NEGOTIABLE IN THAT IT IS PAYABLE AT A DEFINITE TIME, BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] IS [specify, e.g., PAYABLE AT A FIXED DATE].

[EITHER]

A. Payable on Elapse of Time. A promise or order is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable on elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance (Com. Code § 3108(b)).

[OR]

A. Payable at Fixed Date. A promise or order is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable at a fixed date or dates (Com. Code § 3108(b)).

[OR]

A. Payable at Readily Ascertainable Time. A promise or order is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable at a time or times readily ascertainable at the time the promise or order is issued (Com. Code § 3108(b)).

[CONTINUE]

B. Payable at Definite Time Subject to Certain Rights. A promise or order payable at a definite time is subject to rights of (1) prepayment, (2) acceleration, (3) extension at the holder's option, or (4) extension to a further definite time at the option of the maker or acceptor or automatically on or after a specified act or event (Com. Code § 3108(b)).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument is negotiable with regard to the requirement that it is payable at a definite time or on demand, on the ground that it is payable at a definite time [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2) (negotiable instrument must be payable at definite time or on demand), 3108(b) ("payable at a definite time" defined)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts regarding the time provisions, and apply one of the descriptions in this form to those facts. For example, if the instrument provides for payment at a fixed date, counsel should show that the note is negotiable under Com. Code § 3108(b).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is payable at a definite time.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding the attribute of being payable on demand or at a definite time, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.11 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.31 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Payable at Fixed Date

In Bank of America v. Agles (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 527, 340 P.2d 643 , the court of appeal held that a note payable "on or before five years from date" was payable at a "fixed or determinable future time," within the meaning of former Civ. Code §§ 3082, 3085 [now see Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108], rather than payable "on demand" (concluding that the complaint had been filed within the appropriate limitations period) (171 Cal. App. 2d 527, 528) .

[b] Payable at Definite Time Subject to Certain Rights

People's F. & T. Co. v. Shaw-Leahy Co. (1931) 214 Cal. 108, 3 P.2d 1012 , was an action to recover on a trade acceptance. The Supreme Court held that a provision in the instrument accelerating its maturity date on the occurrence of any of five stated events did not destroy the negotiability of the instrument. However, negotiability may be destroyed if acceleration is placed entirely under the holder's control, or made dependent on the holder's whim or caprice regardless of any act of the acceptor (214 Cal. 108, 111-113) .

In Pugh v. Dawson (1928) 95 Cal. App. 505, 273 P. 39 , the maker of a promissory note contended that the note was nonnegotiable because it contained a provision, inter alia, in which the makers, sureties, guarantors, and endorsers consented to extensions of time at or after the date of maturity. The court of appeal held that the fact that the holder and maker had the right at any time to agree on an extension did not affect the negotiability of the paper. The obvious purpose of the provision was to relieve the holder from the burdens of securing the continued liability of the sureties and endorsers on the paper in the event of an extension. Consequently, the effect of the provision was that if the holder and maker agree on an extension, the sureties and endorsers were not discharged (95 Cal. App. 505, 509-510) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.27

§ 166.27 Opposing Contention That Writing Is Negotiable Instrument [Com. Code § 3104]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE WRITING THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT A NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT BECAUSE IT IS _____ [specify, e.g., A MONEY ORDER THAT DOES NOT REQUIRE A SIGNATURE OF THE DRAWER].

[EITHER]

A. Savings Bank Passbook. A savings bank passbook is not a negotiable instrument (Ornbaun v. First Nat. Bank (1932) 215 Cal. 72, 77-78, 8 P.2d 470).

[OR]

A. Conditional Sales Contract. A conditional sales contract is not a negotiable instrument (American Nat. Bk. v. A.G. Sommerville (1923) 191 Cal. 364, 370, 216 P. 376) (construing prior law).

[OR]

A. County Warrant. A warrant by which the county auditor draws money from the county treasury is not a negotiable instrument because it is not intended to constitute a new debt, or evidence of a new debt, against the county (Dana v. San Francisco (1861) 19 Cal. 486, 491) .

[OR]

A. Money Order Not Requiring Signature of Drawer. A money order that does not require the signature of the drawer is not a negotiable instrument (Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 202, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262) (construing prior law).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Parties May Not Stipulate Negotiability. Parties may not stipulate to the negotiability of an otherwise nonnegotiable instrument (American Nat. Bk. v. A.G. Sommerville (1923) 191 Cal. 364, 370, 216 P. 376).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a particular type of instrument is negotiable [see Com. Code § 3104].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. For example, if the instrument is a money order, counsel should show that it is nonnegotiable in that the drawee bank does not require the signature of the drawer on the instrument [see Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 197-202, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262 (construing former Com. Code § 3104)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the writing is not a negotiable instrument.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Savings Bank Passbook

In Ornbaun v. First Nat. Bank (1932) 215 Cal. 72, 8 P.2d 470 , an action by the administrator of an estate to quiet title and recover money on a passbook bank account, the Supreme Court held that a bank is not entitled to indemnification for liability from paying the money over to the administrator of an estate, because no liability can arise from that transaction. In discussing the nature of the passbook as an instrument, the Court noted that a holder of the passbook cannot assert an exclusive right to obtain the deposit in the account. The holder of a passbook is relegated to the position of the assignee of a chose in action that the debtor pays, before notice of the assignment, to the creditor. Consequently, a passbook is a nonnegotiable instrument, governed by the same rules applicable to nonnegotiable instruments generally (215 Cal. 72, 77-78) .

[b] Conditional Sales Contract

In American Nat. Bk. v. A.G. Sommerville (1923) 191 Cal. 364, 216 P. 376 (construing former Civ. Code § 3082, now see Com. Code § 3104), an action to recover money due on conditional sales contracts, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff-assignee on general contract principles of estoppel and illegality. In discussing the nature of the instruments (with regard to defenses of an assignee), the Court noted that conditional contracts of sale are nonnegotiable instruments in California. Moreover, parties may not impart the character of negotiability to any writing that is not otherwise a negotiable instrument under the applicable laws. The negotiability of an instrument cannot be stipulated by the parties, but must be implied by law as the result of the form and effect of the instrument itself (191 Cal. 364, 370) .

[c] County Warrant

In Dana v. San Francisco (1861) 19 Cal. 486 , the payee on several county warrants endorsed and delivered them in exchange for valuable consideration. After demand for payment was refused, the endorsee brought an action against the county. The trial court found for the county on the ground that the warrants were not negotiable, and plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that county warrants are not negotiable. The county auditor has no authority to draw a bill of exchange, but only, in certain instances, the authority to issue warrants on the order of the county supervisors, which is chargeable as a debt on the county. The warrant is not intended to constitute a new debt, or evidence of a new debt, against the county, but is the prescribed means the law has devised for drawing money from the county treasury. The fact that the warrant may possibly be assigned, and the assignee protected as the holder of a claim against the county, does not give the endorsement the effect of carrying with it the legal title of the scrip to the assignee. The county auditor does not have the power to give the warrant the form and qualities of a negotiable instrument (19 Cal. 486, 491) .

[d] Money Order Not Requiring Signature of Drawer

In Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262 (construing former Com. Code § 3104, now see Com. Code § 3104), an agent selling a bank's money orders failed to carefully safeguard the money orders, several of which were stolen and paid by the bank. The bank brought an action against the agent to recover the money paid out on the forged money orders. The agent defended on the ground that the money orders were negotiable instruments, and therefore the bank could not recover on money paid out on a forged instrument. The trial court found that there was no valid signature card required by the bank or between the parties, and further that there was no necessity for anyone to sign the money orders at the time of the sale. The agent's employees who issued the money orders did not routinely sign them, and the bank paid them without regard to whether they had been signed. The trial court found in the bank's favor, and the agent appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that those particular money orders were not negotiable instruments (191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 197-202) . Under former Com. Code § 3104(1)(a) a negotiable instrument was required, inter alia, to be signed by the maker or drawer. The court rejected the agent's contention that the signature line on the money order was intended for the signature of its employee, without which the bank was not authorized to pay, because the facts supported the finding that signatures were not required. Money orders on which a signature is not required are not negotiable. Consequently, those money orders cannot qualify as negotiable instruments (191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 197-198) .

The current version of Com. Code § 3104 no longer includes the words "signed by the maker or drawer" [compare Com. Code § 3104(a) with former Com. Code 3104(1)]. However, the requirement that a negotiable instrument must be signed still exists; it has simply been moved to the definition of order and promise. An "order" is a signed written instruction and a "promise" is a signed written undertaking [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(6), (9)].

[e] Parties May Not Stipulate Negotiability

In American Nat. Bk. v. A. G. Sommerville (1923) 191 Cal. 364, 216 P. 376 (construing former Civ. Code § 3082, now see Com. Code § 3104; discussed under § 166.27[3][b]), the court held that parties may not stipulate to the negotiability of an otherwise nonnegotiable instrument (191 Cal. 364, 370) . It should be noted, however, that the immediate parties to an order or promise that is not an instrument may agree that one or more of the provisions of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code determine their rights and obligations under the writing [see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-104 (1990)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Savings Bank Passbook

In Witte v. Vincenot (1872) 43 Cal. 325 , plaintiff obtained judgment against defendant and attached all money in defendant's name in a bank. The seized property included a passbook attached to bylaws authorizing it to be transferred "to order." The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's holding that a passbook, otherwise nonnegotiable, is not rendered negotiable by bylaws that purport to allow transfer "to order." It is clear that a negotiable instrument may be transferred "to order;" however, it does not follow that every transferable instrument necessarily becomes negotiable (43 Cal. 325, 329-331) .

For additional cases holding that a passbook is not a negotiable instrument, see Bryson v. Security Trust etc. Bank. (1916) 29 Cal. App. 596, 599-600, 156 P. 987 , and First National Bank v. Golden (1912) 19 Cal. App. 501, 505, 126 P. 498 (payment of draft must be accompanied by passbook).

[b] Conditional Sales Contract

Hollywood State Bk. v. Wilde (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 103, 160 P.2d 846 , consolidated several actions concerning recovery of money due on a promissory note given in conjunction with certain contracts. Contracts are not rendered negotiable by reason of a stipulation asserting that they constitute the entire agreement. Moreover, the parties to a contract may not render the instrument negotiable by stipulation, because negotiability must be implied by law under the instrument itself (citing American Nat. Bk. v. A. G. Sommerville (1923) 191 Cal. 364, 216 P. 376 , discussed under § 166.27[3][b]) (70 Cal. App. 2d 103, 113) .

For additional cases holding that particular writings are not instruments, see Commercial Discount Co. v. Los Angeles (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 158, 161, 105 P.2d 115 (trust receipts), and American Security Bank v. Clarno (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 874, 881, 199 Cal. Rptr. 127 (unconditional guaranties).

[c] County Warrant

People v. Gray (1863) 23 Cal. 125 , was an action to recover money from the county treasurer by the purchaser of a warrant that had been lost by the payee. The Supreme Court held that county warrants do not possess the qualities of negotiable paper. The fact that the warrant is payable to bearer does not make it transferable by delivery like a promissory note payable to bearer (23 Cal. 125, 126-127) .

[d] Parties Cannot Stipulate Negotiability

Hollywood State Bk. v. Wilde (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 103, 160 P.2d 846 , is discussed under § 166.27[4][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.28

§ 166.28 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Conditional Promise or Order [Com. Code §§ 3104(a), 3106]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE IT CONTAINS A CONDITIONAL _____ [PROMISE or ORDER].

A. Promise or Order Must Be Unconditional. A promise or order must be unconditional to be a negotiable instrument (Com. Code § 3104(a)).

[Optional] B. Promise or Order Includes Express Condition to Payment. A promise or order is conditional if it states an express condition to payment (Com. Code § 3106(a)(1)).

[Optional] C. Promise or Order Subject to Another Writing. A promise or order is conditional if it states that it is subject to or governed by another writing (Com. Code § 3106(a)(2); see Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-511, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848) (construing prior law).

[Optional] D. Rights or Obligations Stated in Another Writing. A promise or order is conditional if it states that rights or obligations with regard to the promise or order are stated in another writing (Com. Code § 3106(a)(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument is negotiable, on the ground that it contains a conditional promise or order [see Com. Code §§ 3104(a) (promise or order must be unconditional), 3106 (unconditional or conditional promises or orders)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the terms of the instrument and explain why the promise or order is conditional. For example, if a promissory note states an express condition to payment, counsel should show that that provision renders the note nonnegotiable under Com. Code § 3106(a)(1).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the writing is not negotiable because of a conditional promise or order.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise or Order Subject to Another Writing

Plaintiff in Growth Equities Corp. v. Freed (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 277 Cal. Rptr. 848 (construing prior law), loaned money to a limited partnership of which defendants were limited partners. As security for the loan, the partnership assigned to plaintiff two promissory notes, each made by one of the defendants, and payable to the order of the partnership or to bearer. Each note provided that it was "secured by and subject to the provisions of the partnership debt assumption agreement between maker and payee hereof which is incorporated herein." The Partnership Debt Assumption Agreement (referred to below as "PDAA") listed several conditions precedent to payment on the note, and provided that the agreement was not assignable without the limited partner's written consent. The partnership filed for bankruptcy, and plaintiff obtained relief from the automatic stay to proceed against the defendants on the notes. Defendants demurred, and when it became clear that plaintiff could not amend to truthfully allege that defendants had given their written consent to assignment of the notes, the demurrer to the third amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court set forth former Com. Code §§ 3104(1) and 3105 (now see Com. Code §§ 3104(a), 3106), and concluded that the fact that the note was secured by the PDAA did not undermine its negotiability [see former Com. Code § 3105(1)(e)], but the "subject to" language on the face of the notes did [see former Com. Code § 3105(2)(a), now see Com. Code § 3106(a)(2)] (227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509) . Plaintiff contended that "subject to" language was redundant and meant the same thing as "secured by." The court did not agree, and distinguished Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124 (which involved a note that was secured by a lien contract but did not recite that it was subject to the lien), saying that nothing in Leasko supports the contention that the unequivocal statement that a note is "subject to" another agreement should be disregarded if the note also states that the same agreement secures performance of the maker's obligations (227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510) . Plaintiff could not be a holder in due course because the nonnegotiability of the notes is apparent on their faces (227 Cal. App. 3d 506, 511) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise or Order Subject to Another Writng

Harrison v. Turner (1915) 27 Cal. App. 423, 150 P. 395 , was an action on a contract that incorporated a promissory note. The court of appeal held that a note that is inseparable from other necessary parts of a related contract is nonnegotiable because it is conditional on the performance of the terms of the contract as a whole (27 Cal. App. 423, 424) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.29

§ 166.29 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Does Not Specify Payment of Fixed Amount of Money [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24), 3104(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] DOES NOT SPECIFY PAYMENT OF A FIXED AMOUNT OF MONEY.

A. Promise or Order Must Be to Pay Fixed Amount of Money. A promise or order must pay a fixed amount of money to be included in the definition of negotiable instrument (Com. Code § 3104(a)).

B. Money. Money is defined as a medium of exchange authorized or adopted by a domestic or foreign government, and includes a monetary unit of account established by an intergovernmental organization or by agreement between two or more nations (Com. Code § 1201(b)(24)).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with the form in § 166.133 (opposing contention that holder may enforce usurious provision).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument is negotiable, on the ground that it does not specify payment of a fixed amount of money [see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(24) ("money" defined), 3104(a) (promise or order must be to pay fixed amount of money)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Although the term "fixed amount" is not defined, counsel should presumably discuss facts showing that the amount payable is unascertained or not specified in the promise or order. In addition, counsel should make sure that an opposition based on failure to pay a fixed amount relates to principal [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-112 (1990) (requirement of fixed amount applies only to principal)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the writing is not negotiable because it does not specify payment of a fixed amount of money.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.22.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.30

§ 166.30 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Promise or Order Not Payable to Order or Bearer [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(1), 3109]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] IS NOT PAYABLE TO BEARER OR TO ORDER.

Payable to Bearer or to Order. A promise or order must be payable to bearer or to order at the time it is issued or first comes into possession of a holder to be a negotiable instrument (Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)). A promise or order is payable to bearer if it (1) is payable to bearer, (2) is payable to the order of bearer, (3) indicates that the person in possession is entitled to payment, (4) does not state a payee, (5) is payable to the order of cash, or (6) indicates that it is not payable to an identified person (Com. Code § 3109(a)). A promise or order that is not payable to bearer is payable to order if it is payable (1) to the order of an identified person or (2) to an identified person or order (Com. Code § 3109(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument is negotiable, on the ground that it is not payable to bearer or order [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(1)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the payee and show that it is not payable to bearer or to order under Com. Code § 3109. However, in opposing the negotiability of an instrument on this ground, counsel should recognize an exception to the requirement that the promise or order must be payable to bearer or to order. An order that meets all of the requirements of a negotiable instrument, except that it is not payable to bearer or order, is negotiable if it is a check [Com. Code § 3104(c); see Com. Code § 3104(f) ("check" defined].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is not payable to order or bearer.

[b] Purpose of Payable to Bearer or Order Requirement

In opposing a contention that a promise or order is a negotiable instrument on the ground that it is not payable to bearer or order, counsel may find it useful to emphasize the purpose of the payable to bearer or order requirement. The requirement provides a simple device to clearly exclude a writing from the definition of negotiable instrument that does not fit the pattern of typical negotiable instruments and that is not intended to be a negotiable instrument. If a writing could be an instrument despite the absence of "to order" or "to bearer" language and a dispute arises with regard to the writing, it might be argued that the writing is a negotiable instrument because the other requirements of negotiability are met. Even if the argument is eventually found to be without merit it can be used as a litigation ploy. Words making a promise or order payable to bearer or to order are the most distinguishing feature of a negotiable instrument and are frequently referred to as "words of negotiability." The absence of these words in other writings that may resemble negotiable instruments because they contain a promise to pay money, such as contracts for the sale of goods or services or the sale or lease of real property, precludes any argument that the writings might be negotiable instruments [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-104 (1990)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 166.23 or 166.24.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.31

§ 166.31 Opposing Contention That Instrument Is Negotiable--Instrument Is Not Payable on Demand or at Definite Time [Com. Code §§ 3104(a)(2), 3108]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT NEGOTIABLE BECAUSE THE _____ [PROMISE or ORDER] IS NOT PAYABLE ON DEMAND OR AT A DEFINITE TIME.

Payable on Demand or at Definite Time. A promise or order must be payable on demand or at a definite time to be a negotiable instrument (Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)). A promise or order is payable on demand if it (1) states that it is payable on demand or at sight, or otherwise indicates that it is payable at the will of the holder, or (2) does not state any time of payment (Com. Code § 3108(a)). A promise or order is "payable at a definite time" if it is payable on elapse of a definite period of time after sight or acceptance or at a fixed date or dates or at a time or times readily ascertainable at the time the promise or order is issued, subject to rights of (1) prepayment, (2) acceleration, (3) extension at the holder's option, or (4) extension to a further definite time at the option of the maker or acceptor or automatically on or after a specified act or event (Com. Code § 3108(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument is negotiable, on the ground that it is not payable on demand or at a definite time [see Com. Code § 3104(a)(2)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the terms of the instrument applicable to when payment is due and explain why the promise or order is not payable on demand or at a definite time as described in Com. Code § 3108.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is not payable on demand or at a definite time.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 166.25 or 166.26.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Attributes Of Negotiable Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities §§ 166.32-166.49

[Reserved]

§§ 166.32[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Negotiation And Transfer

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.50

§ 166.50 Supporting Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code § 3201]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION WAS NEGOTIATED BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., IT WAS PAYABLE TO BEARER, AND POSSESSION WAS TRANSFERRED].

A. Negotiation by Transfer of Possession or by Transfer of Possession and Endorsement. Negotiation means a transfer of possession, whether voluntary or involuntary, of an instrument by a person other than the issuer to a person who thereby becomes its holder (Com. Code § 3201(a)). Except for negotiation by a remitter, if an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation requires transfer of possession and its endorsement by the holder. If an instrument is payable to bearer, it may be negotiated by transfer of possession alone (Com. Code § 3201(b)).

[Optional] B. Note Payable to Order of Maker and Endorsed Is Payable to Bearer. A promissory note payable to the order of the maker, and endorsed by the maker and a third party, is payable to bearer (Meyer v. Foster (1905) 147 Cal. 166, 170-171, 81 P. 402).

[Optional] C. Transfer Presumed From Possession. The holder or owner of a negotiable instrument is presumed to have acquired it in due course; the rebuttable presumption of ownership and transfer of the instrument duly endorsed arises from its possession (California S.F. Corp. v. J.D. Millar R. Co. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 185, 188, 5 P.2d 41 (construing prior law)).

[Optional] D. Statute Not Definitive. Commercial Code Section 3201 is illustrative, but not definitive, of the manners in which an instrument may be negotiated (see Flores v. Woodspecialties, Inc. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 770, 292 P.2d 626 (construing prior law)).

[Optional] E. Bank-Payee's Deposit of Check to Account of Creditor of Maker, Pursuant to Written Agreement. Pursuant to an agreement between the relevant parties, if a bank deposits a check payable to it to a creditor of the maker, and in consideration of the deposit indicates that the creditor's debt to the bank is satisfied, and if the bank and the creditor had no knowledge of a defect in the check, the check is thereby negotiated, and the creditor may recover from the maker of the check (Flores v. Woodspecialties, Inc. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 771, 292 P.2d 626 (construing prior law)).

[Optional] F. Endorsement on Affixed Paper Valid Despite Space on Instrument. An endorsement on a separate paper that is affixed to the instrument is valid even though there is sufficient space on the instrument for an endorsement (Com. Code § 3204(a)).

[This form may be combined with §§ 166.70 and 166.71 (contending that a holder is a holder in due course), and/or with §§ 166.90-166.103 (contending that a party is liable on an instrument).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an instrument was negotiated [see Com. Code § 3201].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the relevant transactions, and either show that the conduct is expressly set forth in Com. Code § 3201, or contend that the statute is not exhaustive, and that the instrument was negotiated under the facts.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument was negotiated.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding negotiation generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.20 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 166.51 or 166.52 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Note Payable to Order of Maker and Endorsed Is Payable to Bearer

In Meyer v. Foster (1905) 147 Cal. 166, 81 P. 402 , a promissory note made payable to the order of the maker, and endorsed by the maker and a third party, was delivered to the maker's creditor, then transferred twice. The holder brought an action against the maker and the endorser, and the case was decided on endorsement issues. In discussing the effect of the transfer of the note, and the timeliness of the notice of dishonor, the Supreme Court observed that a note payable to the maker and endorsed is payable to the bearer (147 Cal. 166, 170-171) .

[b] Transfer Presumed From Possession

In California S.F. Corp. v. J.D. Millar R. Co. (1931) 118 Cal. App. 185, 5 P.2d 41 (construing prior law), the maker of a note delivered it to the payee, who endorsed the note and assigned and transferred it to the holder. After default, the holder brought an action against the maker and payee-endorser to recover the amount due. At trial, the note was introduced into evidence over the objection that there was no proof of delivery. The trial court found in favor of the holder, and the maker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the note itself was competent prima facie evidence of the instrument's delivery, the ownership of that instrument by the holder, and the authority of the corporate officer-payee to endorsee it. The holder or owner of a negotiable instrument is presumed to have acquired it in due course. The presumption of ownership and delivery of an instrument duly endorsed arises from its possession, although the presumption is rebuttable (118 Cal. App. 185, 188) . Although this decision was reached under prior law, the substance of the law does not appear to have changed. The former statutory provisions used the terms "transfer" and "delivery" in defining negotiation. The current version of the statute simply replaces these terms with the term "transfer of possession" [compare former Civ. Code § 3133 and former Com. Code § 3202 with Com. Code § 3201].

[c] Statute Not Definitive

In Flores v. Woodspecialties, Inc. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 292 P.2d 626 (construing prior law), the maker of a check delivered it to the bank that was the payee. The bank, according to previous agreements with the parties involved, deposited the check in the account of the maker's creditor. The creditor drew the amount in favor of the bank, to which it was indebted under a promissory note, in exchange for which the bank returned the creditor's note. The maker of the check stopped payment, and notified the bank, which then charged the creditor's account with the amount of the check. The creditor delivered additional notes for the amount due, which it later paid in full. The creditor then brought an action against the maker of the check, and the trial court found in the creditor's favor. The maker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding essentially that both the bank and the creditor were holders in due course of the check (138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 771) . The court rejected the maker's contention that the check was not negotiated because it had not been placed in the hands of the holder, then delivered by the holder to another, with proper endorsement. Under the former statute, negotiation meant the transfer of an instrument in such form that the transferee become a holder. If the instrument was payable to order, it was negotiated by delivery with any necessary endorsement. If payable to bearer, it was negotiated by delivery [former Civ. Code § 3111; now see Com. Code § 3201]. However, the statute is not definitive of the only manners in which an instrument may be negotiated, but is rather merely illustrative. It was not intended to include all the ways in which an instrument might be negotiated, nor to restrict the comprehensive terms of its first sentence (138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 770) . Consequently, there was no sound reason to hold that the bank should not be held to be a holder in due course. When a bank deposits a check into the account of a creditor of the maker, the creditor becomes a holder of the check through transfer from the bank, and if the bank is a holder in due course, the creditor has the same rights as the bank (138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 771) .

The court's reasoning appears to be sound in light of Com. Code § 3201, which, although worded differently from former Civ. Code § 3111, has the same effect as the prior law. For example, negotiation still entails the transfer of possession of an instrument by one person to another who becomes the holder [see Com. Code § 3201(a)].

[d] Bank-Payee's Deposit of Check to Account of Creditor of Maker, Pursuant to Written Agreement

Flores v. Woodspecialties, Inc. (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 763, 292 P.2d 626 , is discussed under § 166.50[3][c].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer Presumed From Possession

In Sipe v. W.I. Hollingsworth & Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 391, 221 P.2d 991 (construing prior law), a real property action that centered on the title to a bond, the court of appeal held that possession of commercial paper, with endorsement, makes a prima facie case of delivery by the endorser to the holder, and of the holder's ownership (99 Cal. App. 2d 391, 392) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Negotiation And Transfer

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.51

§ 166.51 Opposing Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code §§ 3201, 3204]--Instrument Not Endorsed

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION WAS NOT NEGOTIATED IN THAT IT WAS NOT ENDORSED, BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE ENDORSEMENT PURPORTED TO CONVEY LESS THAN THE INSTRUMENT'S ENTIRE AMOUNT].

A. Negotiation of Instrument Payable to Identified Person. Except for negotiation by a remitter, if an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation requires transfer of possession of the instrument and its endorsement by the holder (Com. Code § 3201(b)).

[Optional] B. Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument. Endorsement means a signature, other than that of a signer as maker, drawer, or acceptor, that alone or accompanied by other words is made on the instrument for the purpose of (1) negotiating the instrument, (2) restricting payment of the instrument, or (3) incurring endorser's liability on the instrument. For the purpose of determining whether a signature is made on an instrument, a paper affixed to the instrument is a part of the instrument (Com. Code § 3204(a); see Security Pacific Nat. Bank v. Chess (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 555, 561-562, 129 Cal. Rptr. 852) (construing prior law).

[Optional] C. Endorsement Not Valid. A signature and its accompanying words is not an endorsement if the accompanying words, terms of the instrument, place of the signature, or other circumstances unambiguously indicate that the signature was made for a purpose other than endorsement (Com. Code § 3204(a)).

[Optional] D. Endorsement Must Convey Entire Instrument. If a transferor purports to transfer less than the entire instrument, negotiation of the instrument does not occur (Com. Code § 3203(d); see Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-203 (1990)).

[Optional] E. Presentation of Check to Drawee Does Not Constitute an Endorsement That Transfers Check. The presentation of a check to a drawee is not a negotiation and involves no warranties, because the drawee is not a holder in due course. A drawee who pays the instrument is not a transferee of title, because the last holder's endorsement does not transfer the check, but rather converts what was a check into a voucher (Wells Fargo Bank etc. Co. v. Bank of Italy (1931) 214 Cal. 156, 164, 4 P.2d 781) (construing prior law).

[Optional] F. Exchanging Check for Cashier's Check Is Not Endorsement. A bank's exchanging an original unendorsed check for issuance of its own cashier's check is not a negotiation of the check; endorsement of a depositor's check is necessary for the negotiation of the check (Wright v. Bank of California (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 485, 488, 81 Cal. Rptr. 11).

[This form may be combined with § 166.107 (relating to lack of signature on instrument or attached document).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument was negotiated, on the ground that it was not endorsed [see Com. Code §§ 3201(b), 3204(a)]. Note that the Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorse" [see Com. Code § 3204], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorse." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts describing the transactions that took place, and show that they did not constitute endorsement. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the purported endorser did not sign the instrument, but signed a document that was not affixed to the instrument itself.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument was not endorsed.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.50.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument

In Security Pacific Nat. Bank v. Chess (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 555, 129 Cal. Rptr. 852 (construing prior law), the payee of 13 promissory notes endorsed them by executing an "assignment" on the back of each, in favor of the transferee. The transferee pledged the notes to a bank as security for loans, executing a series of separate written assignments describing the notes as collateral security. One note was endorsed in the name of the transferee corporation. Eight were endorsed in the name of the president of the transferee corporation. Four were not endorsed at all, except for the original endorsement ("assignment") of the payee. After default of the underlying loans, and after cessation of payments on the notes, the holder, or bank-transferee, brought an action to recover on the amounts due. The trial court found in favor of the bank-transferee, and against the makers for unpaid balances due on the notes. The makers appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with regard to the four notes lacking the endorsement of the penultimate transferee, holding that former Com. Code § 3202(2) required the endorsement to be written by or on behalf of the holder and on the instrument or a paper so firmly affixed to it as to become a part of it [now see Com. Code § 3204(a) (endorsement must be made on instrument or paper affixed to instrument)]. The court rejected the bank's contention that the payee's endorsement, together with the separate written assignments of the initial transferee, should be read together, making the bank the holder by endorsement. That argument confuses transfer with negotiation. The separate assignment is effective evidence that the notes were transferred to the bank, and the bank became the transferee and owner, at least for security purposes. However, a transferee is not a holder under the negotiation requirements of former Com. Code § 3202(2) [now see Com. Code § 3204(a)], if no endorsement is written on the note itself or on a document affixed to it (58 Cal. App. 3d 555, 560-562) .

[b] Endorsement Must Convey Entire Instrument

Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-203 (1990) provides that the cause of action on an instrument cannot be split and that any endorsement purporting to convey to any party less than the instrument's entire amount is not effective for negotiation. However, the Comment also states that an endorsement conveying less than the entire instrument operates as a partial assignment of the cause of action.

[c] Presentation of Check to Drawee Does Not Constitute an Endorsement That Transfers Check

In Wells Fargo Bank etc. Co. v. Bank of Italy (1931) 214 Cal. 156, 4 P.2d 781 (construing prior law), the name of the payee on a check was erased, and another name was skillfully substituted. The person whose name was substituted as payee appeared at the drawee bank, and the drawee bank certified the check. The payee endorsed the check. His creditor also endorsed the check, and presented it to a bank with which he was a depositor. The bank cashed the check, and presented it to the drawee bank, which paid it. Subsequently, the maker of the check notified the bank that the payee's name had been altered, and demanded repayment. The drawee bank brought an action against the bank that cashed the check. The trial court found that the bank that cashed the check was a holder in due course by virtue of the drawee bank's certification of the check, and entered judgment for defendant. The drawee bank appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the drawee bank had authenticated the check in a certain form, and that commercial policy favors the protection of anyone who, in due course, changes position on the faith of that authentication (214 Cal. 156, 166) . In discussing the issue of warranties by the drawee bank, the Court noted that the presentation of a check to a drawee for payment is not a negotiation, and involves no warranties, because the drawee is not a holder in due course. The warranties of a general endorser are based on a transfer of title and run only to holders in due course [discussing former Civ. Code § 3147, now see Com. Code § 3415; for forms regarding holders in due course, see § 166.70 et seq.]. Consequently, a drawee who has paid the instrument is not a transferee of title, because the last holder's endorsement does not transfer the check, but rather converts what was a check into a voucher (214 Cal. 156, 164) .

[d] Exchanging Check for Cashier's Check Is Not Endorsement

Wright v. Bank of California (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 485, 81 Cal. Rptr. 11 , involved a joint checking account maintained by two depositors for certain commercial purposes. Both signatures were required on the checks. One depositor fraudulently induced the other to sign a check payable to a creditor, and, in collusion with another person, forged the signature of the creditor's agent on the check and exchanged it for a cashier's check of the drawee bank. An agent of the creditor endorsed the cashier's check (purportedly for redeposit in the makers' account), which the defrauding co-maker presented to a different bank. That bank issued its own cashier's check, which the defrauding co-maker negotiated, later diverting the funds to his own use. The defrauded co-maker of the original check brought an action against the other co-maker, the colluding forger, the drawee bank, and the bank that issued the ultimate cashier's check for negligence, conversion, and related causes of action. The drawee bank filed a demurrer to the complaint, which the trial court sustained, without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal partially reversed, holding that a cause of action was stated in negligence, on the theory that issuance of a cashier's check in place of the original check under the circumstances constituted negligence (276 Cal. App. 2d 485, 488-492) . The court rejected the drawee's contention that the Commercial Code protects it from liability for accepting the original check and application for a cashier's check. The taking of the original unendorsed check in exchange for issuance of its own cashier's check was not a negotiation of the depositor's check, but only a payment. Endorsement of a depositor's check is necessary for the negotiation of the check, pursuant to former Com. Code § 3202 [now see Com. Code § 3201]. However, presentation of a check to the drawee for payment is not a negotiation of the check, because the drawee is not a holder in due course. Presentation of an unnegotiated check calls merely for payment of the check (276 Cal. App. 2d 485, 488) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Negotiation of Instrument Payable to Identified Person

In Cassetta v. Baima (1930) 106 Cal. App. 196 , the court of appeal held that a promissory note payable to order is not rendered nontransferable by reason of not being endorsed. In clarifying the issue of endorsement, the court noted that the endorsement is necessary in order to carry the qualities and incidents of negotiable paper to the endorsee (106 Cal. App. 196, 201) .

[b] Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument

In Lopez v. Puzina (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 49 Cal. Rptr. 122 , the payee of a promissory note payable to order, and secured by a deed of trust, assigned the note by a separate attached document. The transferees executed an "assignment of deed of trust" completely separate from the note, and delivered it, along with the note and the deed of trust, to the holders. After default on the note, the holders brought an action against the transferees, as alleged endorsers, to recover the amount due. The trial court granted the transferees' motion for nonsuit. The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting the holders' contention that defendants were endorsers, thereby giving the holders the right to recover on refusal of the makers to pay. A promissory note cannot be endorsed by an instrument that is separate from the note (239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 711-714) .

[c] Endorsement Must Convey Entire Instrument

In D'Orazi v. Bank of Canton (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 901, 62 Cal. Rptr. 704 , the payee of a promissory note signed the back of a note that contained an assignment of a portion of the interest to another. The payee also fraudulently pledged the note in connection with a loan from a bank. The assignee brought an action against the bank to determine the ownership of the note. The trial court found in the bank's favor, and the assignee appealed. The court of appeal reversed to the extent that the judgment was appealed, and ordered the trial court to modify the findings consistent with its opinion. In rejecting the transferee's contention that the assignment was not valid because it did not convey the payee's complete interest, the court noted that the transferee confused effective assignment with negotiation. Under former Com. Code § 3202(3), an assignment conveying part of the instrument is not effective for negotiation purposes (254 Cal. App. 2d 901, 904-905) [now see Com. Code § 3203(d) (negotiation does not occur if transferor purports to transfer less than entire instrument) and Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-203 (1990)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Negotiation And Transfer

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.52

§ 166.52 Opposing Contention That Instrument Was Negotiated [Com. Code §§ 3201, 3203]--Instrument Not Transferred

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION WAS NOT NEGOTIATED IN THAT POSSESSION WAS NOT TRANSFERRED.

[EITHER]

A. Instrument Payable to Identified Person. If an instrument is payable to an identified person, negotiation requires transfer of the instrument's possession and endorsement by the holder (Com. Code § 3201(b)).

[OR]

A. Instrument Payable to Bearer. If an instrument is payable to bearer, transfer of possession is required for its negotiation (Com. Code § 3201(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Condition Precedent to Transfer Not Met. An instrument is not transferred if conditions precedent to transfer are not met (see Borgonovo v. Henderson (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 220, 226-227, 6 Cal. Rptr. 236) (construing prior law).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an instrument was negotiated, on the ground that it was not transferred [see Com. Code § 3201].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should set forth facts describing the transactions that took place, and show that there was no transfer of the instrument. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that conditions precedent to transfer were not met.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument was not transferred.

[b] Transfer of Instrument

Transfer of an instrument occurs when the instrument is delivered by a person other than its issuer for the purpose of giving to the person receiving delivery the right to enforce the instrument (Com. Code § 3203(a)).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.50.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Condition Precedent to Transfer Not Met

In Borgonovo v. Henderson (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 220, 6 Cal. Rptr. 236 (construing prior law), the instigator of a fraudulent construction scheme induced investors to tender cash and a promissory note, and obtain a construction loan, in exchange for a long-term lease on a motel that he agreed to construct. He then fabricated sham corporations through which to transact the financing. The investors executed the note, secured by a deed of trust on the leasehold interest, and deposited both documents in escrow with a title company, with instructions to hold them until it received a certain sum from one of the sham corporations, at which time the title company was authorized to release the documents on demand of the makers. While the note was still in possession of the title company, however, the sham corporation endorsed the note without tendering any money. It executed an assignment of the note and the deed of trust to the construction company with which it had contracted, and deposited the documents in escrow. Subsequently, the parties obtained the construction loan, and the title insurance company recorded the second deed of trust, the assignment of the deed of trust, and the promissory note. The contractors constructed the motel, spending more than the amount of the construction loan, and failed to receive additional amounts as promised from the sham corporation. The contractors assigned the note and deed of trust for valuable consideration. After completion of the motel, various creditors who were to have been paid by the sham corporation sought reimbursement from the makers of the note, who brought an action against the sham corporation and the defrauding individual. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the makers of the note and against the sham corporation and the defrauding individual, awarding damages in a certain amount for failure to pay creditors. It also found in favor of certain creditors and against the makers in a certain amount, on the ground that he makers had no right to a setoff against the note because the contractor-assignee was a holder in due course of the note. The court granted the title company's motion for nonsuit, rejecting the maker's contention that if the note and deed had been transferred, the makers were entitled to damages for violation of escrow instructions. The makers appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment with regard to the title company, the ultimate assignee of the note, and the creditors who prevailed in the trial court (182 Cal. App. 2d 220, 226-235) . With regard to the promissory note, the court held that there was no delivery of the note. If conditions precedent to delivery are not met, there is no delivery. Hence, the first assignee was not a holder in due course of the note [discussing former Civ. Code § 3097, now repealed, which necessitated delivery; now see Com. Code §§ 3305 (enforcement of obligations and defenses), 3306 (claims to instruments), 8202 (rights regarding investment securities)]. The makers in the instant case clearly specified that compliance with its instructions to the title company be a condition precedent to delivery. Moreover, delivery or recordation by or on behalf of the escrow holder before full performance of escrow terms is a nullity; no title passes. Until the escrow holder received the specified amount, it did not occupy the status of an agent for the payee so that it could effectuate a constructive delivery (182 Cal. App. 2d 220, 226-227) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Condition Precedent to Transfer Not Met

In Doria v. International Union (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 22, 16 Cal. Rptr. 429 (construing prior law), involving two promissory notes made on behalf of a labor union, but not approved by the union's board as required by its internal laws, the court of appeal held that there is no delivery if conditions precedent to delivery are not met. Because board approval was an unmet condition precedent to delivery, the payee in the instant case could not recover (discussing former Civ. Code § 3097 [erroneously cited as Civ. Code § 3079), now repealed, which necessitated delivery; now see Com. Code §§ 3305 (enforcement of obligations and defenses), 3306 (claims to instruments), 8202 (rights regarding investment securities)] (196 Cal. App. 2d 22, 36-37) .

157 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Negotiation And Transfer

16-166 California Points & Authorities §§ 166.53-166.69

[Reserved]

§§ 166.53[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
C. Enforcement Of Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.70

§ 166.70 Supporting Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Took Instrument for Value [Com. Code §§ 3302(a), 3303]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE HOLDER OF THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE WITH REGARD TO TAKING THE INSTRUMENT FOR VALUE BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE INSTRUMENT WAS ISSUED IN EXCHANGE FOR A NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT].

A. Holder in Due Course. To be a holder in due course, the instrument when issued or negotiated to the holder must not bear such apparent evidence of forgery or alteration or must not be so irregular or incomplete as to call into question its authenticity. In addition, the holder must take the instrument for value, in good faith, and without the following notices: (1) that the instrument is overdue or has been dishonored or that there is an uncured default with regard to payment of another instrument issued as part of the same series; (2) that the instrument contains an unauthorized signature or has been altered; (3) of any claim to the instrument described in Com. Code § 3306; and (4) that any party has a defense or claim in recoupment described in Commercial Code Section 3305(a) (Com. Code § 3302(a); see Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1176, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904).

[EITHER]

B. Promise Performed. An instrument is issued or transferred for value if it is issued or transferred for a promise of performance, to the extent the promise has been performed (Com. Code § 3303(a)(1)).

[OR]

B. Acquisition of Security Interest or Lien. An instrument is issued or transferred for value if the transferee acquires a security interest or other lien in the instrument other than a lien obtained by judicial proceeding (Com. Code § 3303(a)(2)).

[OR]

B. Antecedent Claim. An instrument is issued or transferred for value if it is issued or transferred as payment of, or as security for, an antecedent claim against any person whether or not the claim is due (Com. Code § 3303(a)(3); see Adolph Ramish, Inc. v. Woodruff (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 190, 203, 40 P.2d 509).

[Optional] C. Bank's Applying Funds From Deposit of Instruments to Checks Drawn Against Insufficient Funds. A bank's applying the funds from the deposit of instruments to checks drawn against insufficient funds constitutes a taking for value under Commercial Code Section 3303(a)(3) (Tokai Bank of California v. First Pacific Bank (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1664, 1668-1669, 231 Cal. Rptr. 503 (construing prior law)).

[OR]

B. Tender of Negotiable Instrument. An instrument is issued or transferred for value if it is issued or transferred in exchange for a negotiable instrument (Com. Code § 3303(a)(4)).

[OR]

B. Irrevocable Obligation to Third Party. An instrument is issued or transferred for value if it is issued or transferred in exchange for the incurring of an irrevocable obligation to a third party by the person taking the instrument (Com. Code § 3303(a)(5)).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with §§ 166.71 (holder's lack of notice or knowledge) and 166.130 (holder in due course not subject to defenses of obligor).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a holder of an instrument took it for value, in order to support an underlying contention that the holder is a holder in due course [see Com. Code §§ 3302(a) (definition of "holder in due course"), 3303 (taking for value)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the what the instrument was issued or transferred for and apply one of these descriptions to the transaction.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder took the instrument for value.

[b] Distinction Between Value and Consideration

The 1990 version of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code, which has been adopted for the most part by California, distinguishes value from consideration. Whether an instrument is taken for value is a requirement applicable to whether the holder is a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3302(a)]. If an instrument is not issued for consideration the drawer or maker has a defense to the obligation to pay the instrument [see Com. Code § 3303(b); see also Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-303 (1990)]. Consideration is defined as any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract [Com. Code § 3303(b)]. Because "value" is defined in Com. Code § 3303(a), the definition of value applicable to other transactions in the Commercial Code does not apply [see Com. Code § 1204 (definition of value includes consideration sufficient to support simple contract)]. Thus, outside the provisions governing negotiable instruments, anything that is consideration is also value [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-303 (1990)]. However, for transactions involving negotiable instruments, a different rule applies; that is, if an instrument is issued for value, it is also issued for consideration [Com. Code § 3303(b)].

[c] Related Publications

For discussion regarding holders in due course generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.40 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of consideration generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.72 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For memoranda regarding consideration issues relating to contracts generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

For memoranda supporting the contention that a transferee from a holder in due course also takes free of claims and defenses, see § 166.94.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

In Gentner v. Wells Fargo Bank (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 , a Wells Fargo customer paid a consulting firm for services by check, on which it later stopped payment. When the firm presented the check to Wells Fargo, however, the bank paid it by issuing a cashier's check to the firm. Later, Wells Fargo issued a stop payment on the cashier's check. When the firm tried to deposit it at another bank, the cashier's check was not honored. The firm brought suit against Wells Fargo for wrongful dishonor of the cashier's check. The trial court found that the firm was a holder in due course of the cashier's check and entered judgment in the amount of the check plus interest (76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1166-1167) .

The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that as between a bank and a payee who acts in good faith, the Commercial Code clearly requires the bank to suffer the loss occasioned by its error in accepting or paying a check covered by a stop payment order. The result is the same whether the check is paid in cash or exchanged for a cashier's check. The court first stated that the firm was entitled to holder-in-due-course status under Com. Code § 3302. It noted that the payee of an instrument can be a holder in due course, even though this is not the usual situation. The firm was acting in complete good faith and had no knowledge of any potential defenses held by Wells Fargo as drawer of the instrument. Specifically, it did not know that the check which it submitted was subject to a stop notice (76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1168-1170) . The court then held that the provisions of Com. Code § 3418 precluded the bank from recovering its mistaken payment as long as the payee took the instrument in good faith (76 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1175-1176) .

[b] Antecedent Claim

In Adolph Ramish, Inc. v. Woodruff (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 190, 40 P.2d 509 , the maker of a promissory note delivered the note to the payee, who endorsed the note and extended the time for payment, and then delivered it to the holder. The holder also held a note executed by the payee of the endorsed note. After default on the endorsed note, the holder brought an action against the maker. Whether the endorsed note was extended as collateral security for the indebtedness of the payee to the holder, and therefore constituted consideration, was one of many issues in the cases, which also concerned issues of negotiability and whether the holder was a holder in due course. The trial court found in favor of the holder, and the maker appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, after first reversing the trial court judgment, then granting a rehearing for the purpose of taking additional evidence. With regard to consideration, the Court noted that the trial court was justified in concluding that the holder took the note as collateral security, and therefore for value. An antecedent debt constitutes a valuable consideration for a transfer as security, and the holder of the security is a purchaser for value in regard to third persons (2 Cal. 2d 190, 203) .

[c] Bank's Applying Funds From Deposit of Instruments to Checks Drawn Against Insufficient Funds

In Tokai Bank of California v. First Pacific Bank (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1664, 231 Cal. Rptr. 503 (construing prior law), a customer of a bank (the depositary bank) deposited two cashiers' checks into his checking account. The checks were issued by another bank (the payor or drawee bank), payable to the depositary bank. The depositor's account was credited immediately, and the total deposit applied to personal checks that had been drawn against insufficient funds in his account. The payor bank refused to honor the cashiers' checks because the government checks that the depositor had used to purchase them bore forged endorsements. The depositary bank had no previous notice of any defense to payment on the cashiers' checks. The depositary bank brought an action against the payor bank for wrongful dishonor of the checks, and the trial court granted the depositary bank's motion for summary judgment, and the payor bank appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding ultimately that the depositary bank was a holder in due course (186 Cal. App. 3d 1664, 1667-1669) . A holder in due course is one who takes the instrument for value, in good faith and without notice that it has been dishonored, or of any defense against it [former Com. Code § 3302(1); now see Com. Code § 3302(a)]. The court rejected the payor bank's contention that the depositary bank gave the depositor nothing of value in return for the cashiers' checks, except perhaps a provisional credit to his account, which it could have later reversed. In fact, the depositary bank gave the depositor immediate credit, whose funds were used to pay checks written on the account against insufficient funds. Consequently, the depositor received final, not provisional, credit. Further, applying a deposit to checks drawn against insufficient funds constitutes a taking for value under former Com. Code § 3303(b) [now see Com. Code § 3303(a)(3)], which states that a holder takes the instrument for value by taking the instrument in payment of or as security for an antecedent claim against any person whether or not the claim is due. The trial court correctly determined there were no triable issues of fact regarding the depositary bank's status as a holder in due course, and none of the defenses against a holder in due course applied in this case (186 Cal. App. 3d 1664, 1668-1669) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

In Sharpe v. F.D.I.C. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1997) 126 F.3d 1147 , appellants and a bank entered into a settlement agreement which required the bank to pay appellants an amount by wire transfer to a trust account. The bank tendered cashier's checks in lieu of a wire fund transfer. Appellants brought an action against the FDIC as the bank's receiver, seeking to enjoin it from recording the instrument they had given the bank pursuant to their agreement and requesting enforcement or rescission of the agreement. The transferees moved for summary judgment, and the FDIC sought dismissal or summary judgment. The district court dismissed the action and the transferees appealed. The court of appeals held that appellants were neither "depositors" of the bank under California law nor "creditors" of bank subject to the FIRREA claims process (126 F.3d 1147, 1156-1157) . It found that appellants were holders in due course of the cashier's checks because they took the instrument for value, in good faith and without notice that it had been dishonored or of any defense against it (citing Tokai Bank of California v. First Pacific Bank (1996) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1664 , discussed in § 166.70[3][c]). As such, they were entitled to enforce the obligation imposed on the FDIC by the failed bank's issuance of the cashier's checks (126 F.3d 1147, 1153-1154) .

[b] Bank's Applying Funds From Deposit of Instruments to Checks Drawn Against Insufficient Funds

In Bank of Costa Mesa v. Losack (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 287, 141 Cal. Rptr. 550 (construing prior law), a bank received three checks from the depositor, which it immediately credited to checks held for insufficient funds, and on which the depositor then placed stop-payment orders. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the bank in its action against the drawer for damages, holding, inter alia, that the bank obtained a security interest by cashing checks in reliance on the deposit, thus giving value (interpreting former Com. Code § 3302, defining "holder in due course" [now see Com. Code § 3302, as revised in 1992] as well as former Com. Code §§ 4208, 4209, regarding security interests [now see Com. Code §§ 4210, 4211)] (74 Cal. App. 3d 287, 293-294) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
C. Enforcement Of Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.71

§ 166.71 Supporting Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Did Not Have Notice of Claim or Defense or Knowledge That Instrument Was Overdue [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(20), 3302(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE HOLDER OF THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE WITH REGARD TO LACK OF NOTICE OF A CLAIM TO THE INSTRUMENT OR A DEFENSE TO IT, OR THAT THE INSTRUMENT WAS OVERDUE, BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE ENDORSEMENT WAS MADE WITHIN A REASONABLE TIME AFTER MATURITY].

A. Holder in Due Course. [See § 166.70, Paragraph A.]

B. Good Faith Defined. "Good faith" is honesty in fact and the observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing (Com. Code § 1201(b)(20)).

[EITHER]

C. Notice of Discharge. Notice of discharge of a party, other than discharge in an insolvency proceeding, is not notice of a defense (Com. Code § 3302(b)).

[OR]

C. Filing or Recording of Document. The public filing or recording of a document does not of itself constitute notice of a defense, claim in recoupment, or claim to the instrument (Com. Code § 3302(b); see Ross v. Title Guarantee etc.

Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 393, 398, 29 P.2d 236).

[OR add the following Paragraph C and one of the optional versions of Paragraph D immediately following]

C. Breach of Fiduciary Duty. If (1) an instrument is taken from a fiduciary for payment or collection or for value, (2) the taker has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary, and (3) the represented person makes a claim to the instrument or its proceeds on the basis that the transaction of the fiduciary is a breach of fiduciary duty, then notice of breach of fiduciary duty by the fiduciary is notice of the claim of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(1)).

[Add one of the following Optional Paragraph D's to be used with the preceding version of Paragraph C, above, as appropriate]

[Optional] D. Instrument Payable to Represented Person or Fiduciary. When an instrument is payable to the represented person or the fiduciary as such, the taker has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is (1) taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary, (2) taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, or (3) deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary, as such, or an account of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)).

[Optional] D. Instrument Issued by Represented Person or Fiduciary and Made Payable to Fiduciary. If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such, and made payable to the fiduciary personally, the taker does not have notice of the breach of fiduciary duty unless the taker knows of the breach of fiduciary duty (Com. Code § 3307(b)(3)).

[Optional] D. Instrument Issued by Represented Person or Fiduciary to Taker as Payee. If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such, to the taker as payee, the taker has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is (1) taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary, (2) taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, or (3) deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary, as such, or an account of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(4)).

[OR]

C. Default in Payment of Interest. Unless the due date of principal has been accelerated, an instrument does not become overdue if there is default in payment of interest by no default in payment of principal (Com. Code § 3304(c)).

[OR]

C. Mere Fact of Discounted Price Is Insufficient to Evidence Notice. The mere fact that an unusually large discount is accepted is not of itself sufficient to charge the purchaser with notice of existing equities, unless the consideration is merely nominal or the rate of discount so great as to compel the inference that the negotiation is fraudulent or in some way illegal or unauthorized (Szczotka v. Idelson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 399, 405, 39 Cal. Rptr. 466).

[OR add the following Paragraphs C and D]

C. Endorsement Made Within Reasonable Time After Maturity. If an instrument payable on demand is endorsed before a reasonable time after the maturity date of the instrument, the endorsee and holder for value takes the instrument relieved of all equities existing between the original parties to it (Poorman v. Mills & Co. (1870) 39 Cal. 345, 351-352) .

[Optional] D. Endorsement During Business Hours on Day After Maturity Date Is Within Reasonable Time. Endorsement and transfer of an instrument at any time during the business hours of the next day after its maturity date is within a reasonable time, and the holder has all the protections of an endorsee before maturity or presumptive dishonor (Poorman v. Mills & Co. (1870) 39 Cal. 345, 351-352) .

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] E. Notice in Reasonable Time. To be effective, notice must be received at a time and in a manner that gives a reasonable opportunity to act on it (Com. Code § 3302(f)).

[Optional] F. Knowledge Acquired After Purchasing Instrument. The acquisition of knowledge of infirmities after purchase of an instrument does not affect the holder-in-due-course status of the purchaser (Mann v. Andrus (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 455, 459, 337 P.2d 473).

[Optional] G. No Duty to Inquire Absent Circumstances Justifying Suspicion. When there are no circumstances to justify suspicions regarding the instrument or transaction, the holder is under no duty to inquire regarding any possible infirmities in the instrument or transaction, and failure to inquire will not negate the holder's status as holder in due course (Witty v. Clinch (1929) 207 Cal. 779, 783-785, 279 P. 797).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with the forms in §§ 166.70 (holder took instrument for value) and 166.130 (holder in due course not subject to defenses of obligor).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that the holder of an instrument is a holder in due course with regard to the requirement of lack of notice of a claim or defense, or that the instrument was overdue [see Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(20) ("good faith" defined), 3302(a) ("holder in due course" defined), 3304 (overdue instruments)]. Optional Paragraphs E-G may need to be relettered depending on which alternative paragraphs are selected for the preceding paragraphs of the form.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss facts relating to notice, and show why one or more of the provisions in this form precludes a finding of notice by the purchaser of the instrument. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the only ground for contending that the purchaser had notice is the public filing of a document, and that, therefore, there was no notice under Com. Code § 3302(b).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder did not have notice or knowledge.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.73 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For a memorandum supporting the contention that a transferee from a holder in due course also takes free of claims and defenses, see § 166.94.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Filing or Recording of Document

In Ross v. Title Guarantee etc. Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 393, 29 P.2d 236 , the maker of a promissory note sought cancellation of the note and a related trust deed, on grounds of lack of consideration and fraud. The trial court found in favor of the maker, ordering cancellation of the note, and finding the trust deed void. The court of appeal reversed, finding that the holder of the note was a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration before the note's maturity, and that he had no actual notice of any defect or infirmity in the instrument. The filing of a lis pendens does not effect constructive notice of infirmities of a related note (136 Cal. App. 393, 398) .

[b] Mere Fact of Discounted Price Is Insufficient to Evidence Notice

In Szczotka v. Idelson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 399, 39 Cal. Rptr. 466 , a complicated action to declare a note void on the ground of usury, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment, and ruled in favor of the note's holder. The court held, inter alia, that the mere fact that an unusually large discount is accepted is not of itself sufficient to charge the purchaser with notice of existing equities, unless the consideration is merely nominal or the rate of discount so great as to compel the inference that the negotiation is fraudulent or in some way illegal or unauthorized (228 Cal. App. 2d 399, 405) .

[c] Endorsement Made Within Reasonable Time After Maturity

In Poorman v. Mills & Co. (1870) 39 Cal. 345 , the makers of a certificate of deposit mistakenly entered on the face of the instrument an amount double its true value. The payee transferred the certificate in a gambling environment to an endorsee who routinely gambled, in exchange for cash and other instruments. The certificate was transferred on the evening of the maturity date, and delivered to the ultimate holder the next morning. The ultimate holder brought an action against the makers after they failed to honor the certificate on demand. The trial court entered judgment for the holder for half the amount on the face of the certificate, and denied the holder's motion for new trial. The holder appealed, asserting entitlement to the entire face value of the note.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding, inter alia, that if an instrument payable on demand is endorsed before a reasonable time after the maturity date of the instrument, the endorsee and holder for value takes the instrument relieved of all equities existing between the original parties to it. Endorsement and transfer of an instrument at any time during the business hours of the next day after its maturity date is within a reasonable time, giving the holder all the protections of an endorsee before maturity or presumptive dishonor (39 Cal. 345, 351-352) . (With regard to consideration, the Court noted that there was no evidence that the transfer to the first endorsee was for gambling purposes (39 Cal. 345, 352-353) .)

[d] Endorsement During Business Hours on Day After Maturity Date Is Within Reasonable Time

Poorman v. Mills & Co. (1870) 39 Cal. 345 , is discussed under § 166.71[3][c].

[e] Knowledge Acquired After Purchasing Instrument

In Mann v. Andrus (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 455, 337 P.2d 473 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment in favor of the maker of a promissory note in an action by the holder against the maker on the note. The court held, inter alia, that the acquisition by the purchaser of information concerning infirmities in the instrument after the time of purchase did not affect the purchaser's status as a holder in due course (169 Cal. App. 2d 455, 459) .

[f] No Duty to Inquire Absent Circumstances Justifying Suspicion

In Witty v. Clinch (1929) 207 Cal. 779, 279 P. 797 , one of the co-makers of a note agreed to build a house on the property securing the note. The payee sold the note for approximately one quarter of its value. Before purchasing the note, the transferee investigated the value of the property, and determined that it was worth more than the price she paid, but less than the value of the note. Moreover, under a collateral agreement, the transferee agreed to resell the note and mortgage to the makers within a certain time after purchase, for slightly more than her purchase price. After default on the note, the transferee brought an action to recover on it. The trustees under the trust deed answered the complaint, asserting that the maker failed to build the house, that the transferee paid no consideration, and that the transferee took with knowledge of the various transactions underlying the note. The trial court found in the transferee's favor, and the trustees appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding, inter alia, that when circumstances surrounding a transaction are insufficient to arouse the purchaser's suspicions, there is no duty to inquire regarding a possible infirmity in the note. In the instant case, the difference between the value of the note and the price paid by the transferee was not sufficient, in itself, to arouse the suspicions that the note was not what it purported to be. As a result of the agreements made, the transferee acquired only an interest in the security to the extent of the resale price, with a possibility of becoming the owner of the security itself. Under all the circumstances of the sale, there was no evidence that the transferee had any knowledge of the note maker's solvency, nor that she made any inquiry in that regard (207 Cal. 779, 784) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course

In Appel v. Morford (1943) 62 Cal. App. 2d 36, 144 P.2d 95 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling in favor of the holder of a note. If, under the circumstances, a holder acted in good faith in taking the instrument, the holder is a holder in due course, even though at some previous time the holder may have had notice of the defect (62 Cal. App. 2d 36, 40) .

In Drukker v. Howe & Haun Invest. Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 437 , an action to declare a note and trust deed void on the ground that the payee failed to perform the underlying obligation on an executory contract, the court of appeal modified the amount due under the note. Knowledge by an endorsee that the note was given in consideration of an executory contract by the payee does not deprive the endorsee of holder-in-due-course status, if the holder had no notice of a previous breach of the contract (136 Cal. App. 437, 442) .

For an additional case holding that knowledge that a note was given in consideration of an executory agreement does not nullify an endorsee's status as holder in due course absent further knowledge of breach, see Flood v. Petry (1913) 165 Cal. 309, 316, 132 P. 256 . For a case holding that recordation of a document does not constitute constructive notice, see Haulman v. Crumal (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 612, 619-621, 57 P.2d 179 .

[b] Default in Payment of Interest

In Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851 (construing prior law), an action by a decedent's estate to cancel a note and deed of trust made by decedent's niece under a power of attorney, the court of appeal reversed a judgment for defendants, holders in due course, and remanded for further findings regarding whether the purpose of the loan evidenced by the note was to pay for construction done by an unlicensed contractor. The note called for monthly payments of principal and interest of $131.72 or more. That entire amount would have gone towards interest. The payee/seller told defendants that no interest payments had been made because the makers were friends of his and he didn't want to cause any problems. The court of appeal said that defendants were protected by former Com.

Code § 3304(4)(f) [now see Com. Code § 3304(c)]: the default in payment of interest did not put them on notice or deprive them of their status as holders in due course (211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1064-1065) .

[c] Mere Fact of Discounted Price Is Insufficient to Evidence Notice

In Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851 (construing prior law; discussed under § 166.71[4][b]), plaintiffs contended that defendants were not holders in due course because they had purchased an $11,064 note for $7,000. The court of appeal said that although an offer to sell a note for two thirds of its value is not itself sufficient to raise an inference that the instrument is tainted, it is a circumstance to be considered in determining the question of a buyer's good faith. However, when the trial court found that the buyer acted in good faith, the fact that the buyer acquired a note with a value of $11,064 for $7,000 does not defeat his or her status as a holder in due course (211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1065) .

In Mann v. Leasko (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 4 Cal. Rptr. 124 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment against the holders of a note. The mere fact that a note is purchased for an amount less than its face, or that an unusually large discount is accepted, is never of itself sufficient to charge the purchaser with notice of existing equities, unless the consideration is merely nominal or the rate of discount so great as to compel the inference that the negotiation is fraudulent or is some way illegal or unauthorized (179 Cal. App. 2d 692, 698) .

[d] No Duty to Inquire Absent Circumstances Justifying Suspicion

In Nuckolls v. Bank of California (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 278, 74 P.2d 271 , the holder of a usurious note apparently acted innocently and in good faith in accepting the note as a part of her share of a community property division. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's holding that notice to a spouse is not imputed to the other spouse solely because a note is community property, if there is no basis to put the holder on inquiry as to whether the note was usurious or that the holder took the note in bad faith (10 Cal. 2d 278, 283-284) .

In Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851 (construing prior law; discussed under § 166.71[4][b]), the payee on the note was a finance company, but the beneficiary on the deed of trust was the contractor's daughter. Plaintiffs contended that this was an infirmity that precluded defendants from attaining the status of holders in due course. The court said that the fact that the payee of the note and the beneficiary of the deed of trust securing it are different people does not constitute such an irregularity as to preclude the buyer from becoming a holder in due course, at least when it gives no notice of the actual defect to which that particular note is subject [p. 1065, citing former West's Ann. Com. Code § 3304, Cal. Code Comment, P 3, pp. 190-191; now see Com. Code § 3302(a)(1)].

In Ross v. Title Guarantee etc. Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 393, 29 P.2d 236 (discussed under § 166.71[3][a]), the court of appeal held that there is no duty to inquire about possible infirmities of the instrument, if under the circumstances of the case, the holder is a holder in due course (136 Cal. App. 393, 404) .

For additional cases holding that the purchaser had no ground for suspicion regarding the validity of the instrument, see Condor Corp. v. Cunningham (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 25, 33, 162 P.2d 21 ; Robb v. Cardoza (1930) 110 Cal. App. 116, 122-123, 293 P. 851 ; and Kopperud v. Cookson (1920) 50 Cal. App. 180, 182-183, 194 P. 748 .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
C. Enforcement Of Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.72

§ 166.72 Opposing Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Holder Did Not Take Instrument for Value [Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(A), 3303]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE HOLDER OF THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE BECAUSE HE/SHE DID NOT TAKE THE INSTRUMENT FOR VALUE, IN THAT _____ [specify, e.g., THE INSTRUMENT WAS TAKEN IN EXCHANGE FOR AN EXECUTORY PROMISE AND THE PROMISE HAS NOT BEEN PERFORMED].

A. Requirement of Taking for Value. A holder of an instrument must take the instrument for value to be a holder in due course (Com. Code § 3302(a)(2)(A)).

[EITHER]

B. Promise Not Performed. An instrument issued or transferred for a promise of performance is not issued or transferred for value if the promise has not been performed (Com. Code § 3303(a)(1); see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-303, Case #2 (1990)).

[OR]

B. Acquisition of Judicial Lien. An instrument is not issued or transferred for value if the transferee acquires a lien in the instrument through a judicial proceeding (Com. Code § 3303(a)(2)).

[OR]

B. Instrument Taken in Exchange for Preexisting Debt Must Be Under Express Agreement. The taking of an instrument, either of the debtor or of a third person, for a prior existing debt is no payment, unless it is expressly agreed to take the note as payment; and on failure to pay the note, the creditor may ignore it and sue on the original debt (Roth v. Guardian Thrift & Loan (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 320, 322, 327 P.2d 945).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with §§ 166.73 (holder had notice of defense) and 166.134 (lack of consideration).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a holder of an instrument is a holder in due course, on the ground that the holder did not take it for value [see Com. Code §§ 3302(a)(2)(A) (holder in due course takes for value), 3303 (definition of taking for value)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the circumstances under which the instrument was given and explain why it was not taken for value. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the instrument's holder took the instrument on the basis of an executory promise that was not performed, that was not a negotiable instrument, and that was not an irrevocable commitment to a third party.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder did not take the instrument for value.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding holders in due course generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.40 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.70.

For a memorandum regarding lack of consideration as a defense to an action by a nonholder in due course, see § 166.134 . For a discussion regarding the distinction between value and consideration under Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code see § 166.70[2][b].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise Not Performed

Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-303, Case # 2 (1990) provides an example of the distinction between value and consideration under Article 3. The example states that although an executory promise may constitute consideration for the issuance of a check, the promise constitutes value for purposes of determining holder in due course status only to the extent the promise is performed.

[b] Instrument Taken in Exchange for Preexisting Debt Must Be Under Express Agreement

In Roth v. Guardian Thrift & Loan (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 320, 327 P.2d 945 , a customer of a car dealer returned the car for repairs. When the car was not returned promptly, she demanded either return of the car or a refund. The dealer gave her an amount of cash, and an endorsed check drawn by a finance company in favor of the endorser, the total amount of which equaled the purchase price of the car. The drawee bank refused to pay her the amount of the check because the maker had stopped payment on it. The holder brought an action against the maker, the endorser, and an agent of the endorser who had personally guaranteed the endorsement. The maker and the agent of the endorser defended on the ground that the check was originally obtained on the basis of forged documents. The trial court granted plaintiff-holder's motion for summary judgment with regard to the maker and the agent, and judgment was so entered for plaintiff. The maker and agent appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding, inter alia, that a question of fact remained regarding whether the holder was a holder in due course. The taking of a note, either of the debtor or of a third person, for a prior existing debt is not payment, unless it is expressly agreed to take the note as payment. On failure to pay the note, the creditor may ignore it and sue on the original debt. Under the facts of the instant case, taking from the holder's debtor a third-party check to the debtor did not operate as payment of the debt to the holder unless the holder agreed to take the check as payment. If the payee's title to the check is defective, the holder must prove that she took the check for value, that is, that she took the check under an express agreement that it constituted payment of the payee's antecedent debt to her (162 Cal. App. 2d 320, 322) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Instrument Taken in Exchange for Preexisting Debt Must Be Under Express Agreement

The facts and procedural background of Merchants Nat. Bank v. Bentel (1913) 166 Cal. 473, 137 P. 25 , are discussed in § 166.111[3][a]. In Merchants, the Supreme Court held that a written general endorsement on a promissory note is a contract between the parties, and cannot be changed into a guaranty by an oral agreement (166 Cal. 473, 476) . Merchants also held that taking a note either of the debtor or of a third person for a prior existing debt is not payment, unless the parties expressly agree that the transaction has that effect. On failure to pay that type of note, the creditor may ignore it and sue on the original debt. (The Court held ultimately that although the holder stated a cause of action on the original debt, it was barred by the statute of limitations (166 Cal. 473, 477-478) .)

In Bramante v. Krug (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 771, 300 P.2d 71 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the maker of a check on the ground that the holder was not a holder in due course. The court held that taking from the holder's debtor a check of a third person to the debtor does not operate as payment of the debt to the holder unless the holder agreed to take the check as payment (143 Cal. App. 2d 771, 773) .

For an additional case holding that an instrument taken in exchange for a preexisting debt must be under an express agreement, see Williams v. Walker (1924) 66 Cal. App. 672, 676-677, 226 P. 939 , discussed in § 166.95[4][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
C. Enforcement Of Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.73

§ 166.73 Opposing Contention That Holder of Instrument Is Holder in Due Course--Instrument Is Irregular or Incomplete or Holder Had Notice of Claim or Defense or Knowledge That Instrument Was Overdue [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(20), 3302(a), 3304]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

THE HOLDER OF THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION IS NOT A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE BECAUSE _____ [THE INSTRUMENT WHEN ISSUED WAS SO IRREGULAR OR INCOMPLETE AS TO CALL INTO QUESTION ITS AUTHENTICITY or HE/SHE HAD NOTICE THAT THE INSTRUMENT WAS OVERDUE, OF A CLAIM ON THE INSTRUMENT, OR OF A DEFENSE TO THE INSTRUMENT], IN THAT _____ [specify, e.g., if opposition is based on notice of claim on instrument, HE/SHE HAD NOTICE OF A BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY BY THE AGENT TO THE INSTRUMENT].

A. Holder in Due Course. [See § 166.70, Paragraph A.]

B. Good Faith Defined. [See § 166.71, Paragraph B.]

[ADD, If opposition is based on notice that instrument is overdue or notice of claim on or defense to instrument]

C. Notice Determined by Actual Knowledge, Notice, or Reason to Know. A person has "notice" of a fact when any of the following occurs: (a) the person has actual knowledge of it; (b) the person has received a notice or notification of it; or (c) from all the facts and circumstances known to the person at the time in question, the person has reason to know that it exists. A person "knows" or has "knowledge" of a fact when the person has actual knowledge of it (Com. Code § 1202(a); see California Bank v. Diamond (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392, 301 P.2d 60 (actual notice)).

[CONTINUE, EITHER]

D. Party Discharged. Notice of discharge of a party in an insolvency proceeding is notice of a defense (see Com. Code §§ 3302(b), 3305(a)(1)).

[OR]

D. Instruments Payable on Demand--When Overdue. An instrument payable on demand becomes overdue at the earliest of the following times: (1) on the day after the day demand for payment is duly made; (2) if the instrument is a check, within 90 days after its date; (3) if the instrument is not a check, when the instrument has been outstanding for a period of time after its date which is unreasonably long under the circumstances of the particular case in light of the nature of the instrument and usage of the trade (Com. Code § 3304(a)).

[OR]

D. Instruments Payable at Definite Time/Principal Payable in Installments--When Overdue. If an instrument is payable at a definite time and the principal is payable in installments and a due date has not been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on default under the instrument for nonpayment of an installment, and the instrument remains overdue until the default is cured (Com. Code § 3304(b)(1)).

[OR]

D. Instruments Payable at Definite Time/Principal Not Payable in Installments--When Overdue. If an instrument is payable at a definite time and the principal is not payable in installments and the due date has not been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on the day after the due date (Com. Code § 3304(b)(2)).

[OR]

D. Instruments Payable at Definite Time/Due Date Accelerated--When Overdue. If an instrument is payable at a definite time and a due date with regard to principal has been accelerated, the instrument becomes overdue on the day after the accelerated due date (Com. Code § 3304(b)(3)).

[OR]

D. Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Notice of Claim of Represented Party. If (1) an instrument is taken from a fiduciary for payment or collection or for value, (2) the taker has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary, and (3) the represented person makes a claim to the instrument or its proceeds on the basis that the transaction of the fiduciary is a breach of fiduciary duty, then notice of breach of fiduciary duty by the fiduciary is notice of the claim of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(1)).

[Add one of the following Optional Paragraph E's to be used with the preceding version of Paragraph D, above, as appropriate]

[Optional] E. Notice of Claim--Instrument Payable to Represented Person or Fiduciary. When an instrument is payable to the represented person or the fiduciary as such, the taker has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is (1) taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary, (2) taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, or (3) deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary, as such, or an account of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)).

[Optional] E. Notice of Claim--Instrument Issued by Represented Person or Fiduciary and Made Payable to Fiduciary. If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such, and made payable to the fiduciary personally, the taker does not have notice of the breach of fiduciary duty unless the taker knows of the breach of fiduciary duty (Com. Code § 3307(b)(3)).

[Optional] E. Notice of Claim--Instrument Issued by Represented Person or Fiduciary to Taker as Payee. If an instrument is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such, to the taker as payee, the taker has notice of the breach of fiduciary duty if the instrument is (1) taken in payment of or as security for a debt known by the taker to be the personal debt of the fiduciary, (2) taken in a transaction known by the taker to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary, or (3) deposited to an account other than an account of the fiduciary, as such, or an account of the represented person (Com. Code § 3307(b)(4)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] F. Failure to Make Inquiry Arising From Suspicion. When failure to make inquiry arose from a suspicion that inquiry would disclose a defect in the instrument or transaction, the endorsee is charged with knowledge of the defect (Christian v. California Bank (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 421, 425, 182 P.2d 554).

[Optional] G. Close Connection Between Financial Institution Holder and Underlying Transaction. A finance company that is closely connected to the underlying transaction cannot be regarded as a holder in due course of a note given in the transaction (King v. Central Bank (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 840, 846, 135 Cal. Rptr. 771, 558 P.2d 857 ; Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 771, 214 P.2d 819).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with the forms in §§ 166.72 (holder did not take instrument for value) and 166.134 (lack of consideration).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a holder of an instrument is a holder in due course, on the ground that the instrument was irregular or incomplete or that the holder had notice of a claim or defense, or that the instrument was overdue [see Com. Code §§ 3302(a) ("holder in due course" defined), 3304 (overdue instruments)]. Optional Paragraphs F and G may need to be relettered depending on which alternative paragraphs are selected for the preceding paragraphs of the form.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss facts relating to either the irregularity or incompleteness of the instrument or notice, and apply the pertinent foregoing provisions to explain why the instrument was irregular or incomplete or why the purchaser had actual or constructive notice of the claim, defense, or overdue nature of the instrument. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that although the holder had no actual notice of a defect in the instrument, it is apparent from the circumstances that the holder failed to investigate because of a suspicion that a defect existed.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder had notice or knowledge.

[b] Notice of Claim or Defense

Note that a section comparable to former Com. Code § 3304 (which defined what is meant by notice in the context of whether one is a holder in due course) does not exist in the provisions governing negotiable instruments as amended effective January 1, 1993. Most of the rules of that section, however, are repeated in various places. For example, a new section deals with the issue of when an instrument becomes overdue [see Com. Code § 3304], another describes adverse claims [see Com. Code § 3306], and another specifies when a transferee has notice that a fiduciary duty has been breached [see Com. Code § 3307]. In light of the lack of a comparable section specifying when the purchaser has notice of a claim or defense, the basic definition of notice takes on greater importance under the revised law [see Com. Code § 1202(a)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.71.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Notice Determined by Actual Knowledge, Notice, or Reason to Know

In California Bank v. Diamond (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 387, 301 P.2d 60 , an action for declaratory relief brought by a drawee bank regarding a cashed check, the maker had postdated the check and given it to the payee, and later delivered a stop-payment notice to the drawee bank. The check, with the date altered, was endorsed and presented to the drawee bank over two years later, and the bank paid the amount to the endorsee. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the drawee bank, holding that the endorsee had actual notice of an infirmity in the payee's title, and consequently did not become a holder in due course of the check (144 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392) .

[b] Failure to Make Inquiry Arising From Suspicion

Christian v. California Bank (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 421, 182 P.2d 554 , was an action to recover on a wrongfully paid cashier's check. Plaintiff and the individual defendant had formed a partnership, under which they agreed that both their signatures were required to sign or endorse negotiable paper or draw a check or voucher. Plaintiff purchased a cashier's check from the first defendant bank, payable to himself. He executed a restrictive endorsement, payable to another bank, and delivered the check to his partner, with instructions to deliver it to the endorsee bank. The partner, however, took the check to the second defendant bank, with which he had an account. The partner and an agent of the bank blocked out the restrictive endorsement. The partner signed his own name to the check, and deposited it in his personal account. At that time, the second bank had knowledge that defendant partner's account was overdrawn, and was holding several checks chargeable against his account, pending deposit of sufficient funds. The second bank then charged defendant partner's personal obligations against the funds provided by the altered cashier's check. The first defendant bank paid the amount of the check to the second bank. Plaintiff brought an action against his partner, the bank that issued the cashier's check, and the bank that deposited the check to the partner's account. The trial court sustained demurrers by both defendant banks, and entered dismissals in their favor. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed with regard to the first defendant bank, but reversed with regard to the second bank (30 Cal. 2d 421, 423-425) . The second bank knew that the partner had overdrawn his personal account at that bank, and that it would be advantageous to deposit the altered check, in order to cover his outstanding indebtedness. The information that the bank necessarily acquired from the partner when the check was altered may have constituted knowledge of facts sufficient to put it on inquiry, and to raise an issue regarding its good faith in accepting the instrument. Mere knowledge of facts sufficient to put a prudent person on inquiry, without actual knowledge, or mere suspicion of an infirmity or defect of title, does not preclude the transferee from being a holder in due course, unless the circumstances or suspicions are so cogent and obvious that to remain passive would amount to bad faith [based on former Civ. Code § 3137, which included "badfaith" provision; now see Com. Code § 1202(a), which omits "bad faith" from notice definition; cf. Com. Code § 3302(a), which defines holder in due course in terms of "good faith"]. However, when circumstances justify the conclusion that the failure to inquire arose from a suspicion that inquiry would disclose a vice or defect in the instrument or transaction, the endorsee is charged with knowledge (30 Cal. 2d 421, 425) .

[c] Close Connection Between Financial Institution Holder and Underlying Transaction

In King v. Central Bank (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 840, 135 Cal. Rptr. 771, 558 P.2d 857 , the purchasers of automobile insurance brought an action against the bank that financed the purchase, and the insurance broker who sold the insurance. The complaint alleged causes of action under the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq., regarding retail installment sales contracts) and the federal Truth-in-Lending Act (TILA) (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.). Defendants demurred generally on the ground that neither the Unruh Act nor TILA applied to the insurance transactions. The trial court overruled the broker's demurrer, sustained the bank's demurrer without leave to amend, and entered a dismissal in the bank's favor. The bank appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that plaintiff stated causes of action under the Unruh Act and TILA (18 Cal. 3d 840, 843-849) . In discussing application of the Unruh Act, the Court noted that the complaint allegations, if proved, would support a finding that the broker and bank were jointly engaged in the business of "providing" automobile insurance within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1802.2. The legislative policy under the Act is to protect retail consumers from the documented abuses that plagued the consumer credit field. The Act's provisions should be liberally construed to protect consumers, with a view toward expanding, rather than limiting, its coverage (18 Cal. 3d 840, 845-846) . A "close connection" between the seller of goods and the finance company to which the installment contract is assigned may result in treating the finance company as a party to the original transaction, subject to those statutory restrictions applicable to those parties (emphasis provided by the Court). It has long been settled in California that a financial institution may be denied the status of a holder in due course because of its close connection with the seller. Moreover, a finance company cannot shed the duties and responsibilities of a lender by accepting the assignment of contracts from a seller with which it is intimately connected (citing Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 214 P.2d 819 , discussed below) (18 Cal. 3d 840, 846) .

In Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 214 P.2d 819 , two companies entered into a conditional sales contract, under which the vendor company agreed to procure for the purchaser company a particular machine. The vendor company consulted with a finance company regarding the terms of the installment provisions. The finance company knew all of the details of the transaction, and provided financing because the vendor company did not have the money to procure the promised machinery. The vendor company used the finance company's blank forms for the contract and promissory note, which were printed on the same paper and separated by perforations. The payee-vendor company immediately assigned the contract to the finance company, and endorsed the note, without perforating the documents. The vendor company sent its own check to the machine company, which refused to deliver the machine because the check was dishonored on presentation. The endorsee-finance company brought an action against the maker-purchasing company and the payee-vendor company of the note. The maker cross complained against the payee. The trial court found in favor of the endorsee only against the payee of the note, on default judgment. It found in favor of the maker of the note with regard to both its cross complaint and the complaint brought by the endorsee. The endorsee appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the endorsee was so closely connected with the entire transaction that it was not an innocent purchaser of the instrument for value before maturity. Rather than being a purchaser of the instrument after its execution, it was for all purposes a party to the agreement and instrument from the beginning (34 Cal. 2d 766, 770) . Throughout the transaction, the endorsee negotiated with the future payee, rather than the future maker, and advanced money with the understanding that the agreement and note would be assigned or endorsed to it immediately. The endorsee was a moving force in the transaction from its inception, and acted as a party to it. Moreover, it knew the financial status of the future payee. When a finance company actively participates in a transaction from its inception, counseling and aiding the future vendor-payee, it cannot be regarded as a holder in due course of the note given in the transaction (34 Cal. 2d 766, 771) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Notice Determined by Actual Knowledge, Notice, or Reason to Know

In Berger v. Steiner (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 208, 164 P.2d 559 an attorney, who was subsequently disbarred, advised an elderly client to execute a note and trust deed to the client's relative. The payee, on the attorney's advise, left the documents with him. The documents were forged and assigned to a friend of the attorney's, with whom he had previously engaged in questionable financial transactions. The court of appeal held that the purported assignee's conduct regarding the loan evidenced that party's notice of an irregularity in the transaction (72 Cal. App. 2d 208, 217) .

In Bishop v. Morrow (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 720, 55 P.2d 1216 , an action to cancel a note and trust deed, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the note's maker, holding that notice of a defect in the title of the person negotiating an instrument may be actual or based on knowledge of facts evidencing bad faith (12 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724) .

For additional cases holding that the purchaser took an instrument with notice of an infirmity, see Burke v. Mission Bay Yacht Sales (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 723, 730-731, 29 Cal. Rptr. 685 (constructive notice); Sasner v. Ornsten (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 467, 471-472, 209 P.2d 44 (notice evidenced by surrounding circumstances); and Barthelmess v. Cavalier (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 477, 492-493, 38 P.2d 484 (lack of good faith inferred by circumstances, in action regarding nonnegotiable stock certificates).

Cases construing statutes effective before January 1, 1965, were governed by former Civ. Code § 3137, defining notice as actual knowledge or knowledge amounting to "bad faith." The superseding statute defining notice, Com. Code § 1202(a), omits any reference to "bad faith."

[b] Failure to Make Inquiry Arising From Suspicion

In Anderson v. Lee (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 24, 228 P.2d 613 , an action to reform a promissory note, the court of appeal held that an endorsee is charged with knowledge of a vice or defect in the instrument when the circumstances justify the conclusion that the failure to make inquiry arose from a suspicion of the defect (103 Cal. App. 2d 24, 27) .

In Imperial Gypsum & Oil Corp. v. Chaplin (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 109, 40 P.2d 596 , an action to recover on a defaulted promissory note, the court of appeal held that a purchaser of a note who has a suspicion that further inquiry would disclose true facts regarding the execution is not a holder in due course (4 Cal. App. 2d 109, 113) .

[c] Close Connection Between Financial Institution Holder and Underlying Transaction

In Morgan v. Reasor Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 881 , an action under the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq., regarding retail installment sales contracts), the Supreme Court reiterated the holding in Coml. Credit Corp. v. Orange Co. Mach. Works (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 766, 214 P.2d 819 (discussed under § 166.73[3][c]), that a financing institution may be denied the status of a holder in due course because it is too closely connected with the seller or the particular sale at issue. The Court applied that principle to a contract for the construction of residential housing to which the Unruh Act applied (69 Cal. 2d 881, 894-895) .

For an additional case reiterating the holding in Coml. Credit, see Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 822-823, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 (applying the principle to the Unruh Act).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
C. Enforcement Of Instruments

16-166 California Points & Authorities §§ 166.74-166.89

[Reserved]

§§ 166.74[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.90

§ 166.90 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Signature Obligates Party [Com. Code §§ 3401-3403]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE AS A _____ [specify, e.g., MAKER] ON THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., ALTHOUGH HIS/HER SIGNATURE WAS INITIALLY PLACED ON THE FACE OF THE INSTRUMENT WITHOUT AUTHORIZATION, HE/SHE HAS SUBSEQUENTLY RATIFIED IT].

A. No Liability Without Signature. A person is not liable on an instrument unless (1) the person signed the instrument, or (2) the person is represented by an agent or representative who signed the instrument and the signature is binding on the represented person under Commercial Code § 3402 (Com. Code § 3401(a)).

B. How Signature May Be Made. A signature may be made (1) manually or by means of a device or machine, and (2) by the use of any name, including a trade or assumed name, or by a word, mark, or symbol executed or adopted by a person with present intention to authenticate a writing (Com. Code § 3401(b)).

[EITHER]

C. Representative's Signature Binding on Principal/Principal's Liability. If a person acting, or purporting to act, as a representative signs an instrument by signing either the name of the represented person or the name of the signer, the represented person is bound by the signature to the same extent the represented person would be bound if the signature were on a simple contract. If the represented person is bound, the signature of the representative is the "authorized signature of the represented person" and the represented person is liable on the instrument, whether or not identified in the instrument (Com. Code § 3402(a)).

[AND/OR]

D. Personal Liability of Representative. If a representative signs the name of a representative to an instrument, the signature is an authorized signature of the represented person, and the form of the signature shows unambiguously that the signature is made on behalf of the represented person who is identified in the instrument, the representative is not liable on the instrument (Com. Code § 3402(b)(1)). However, if the form of the signature does not show unambiguously that the signature is made in a representative capacity or the represented person is not identified in the instrument, the representative is liable on the instrument to a holder in due course that took the instrument without notice that the representative was not intended to be liable on the instrument. With regard to any other person, the representative is liable on the instrument unless the representative proves that the original parties did not intend the representative to be liable on the instrument (Com. Code § 3402(b)(2)).

[AND/OR]

E. Signer on Face of Instrument Is Maker Despite Relative Location of Signature. The location of additional signatures in the space intended for makers' signatures on the face of the instrument does not render questionable another maker's signature placed in another acceptable location on the face of the instrument (Schaeffle v. Nolan (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 651, 653, 252 P.2d 732).

[AND/OR]

F. Unauthorized Signer Liable to Taker for Value. Unless otherwise provided by Division 3 or 4 (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.), an unauthorized signature is ineffective except as the signature of the unauthorized signer in favor of a person who in good faith pays the instrument or takes it for value (Com. Code § 3403(a)).

[AND/OR]

G. Ratification of Unauthorized Signature. Any unauthorized signature may be ratified for all purposes of Division 3 (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.) (Com. Code § 3403(a); Volandri v. Hlobil (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659-660, 339 P.2d 218).

[AND/OR]

H. Repudiation of Unauthorized Execution Must Be Timely. Repudiation of an obligation based on an unauthorized signature must occur before ratification (see Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 67, 75, 104 Cal. Rptr. 57, 500 P.2d 1401).

[AND/OR]

I. Ambiguous Signature Constitutes Endorsement. A signature and its accompanying words is an endorsement unless the accompanying words, terms of the instrument, place of the signature, or other circumstances unambiguously indicate that the signature was made for a purpose other than endorsement (Com. Code § 3204(a)).

[AND/OR]

J. Location of Signature Not Controlling. Although there is a customary place for the signature of parties to an instrument according to whether they are makers, drawers, or endorsers, the place of signature does not determine the character of the signer, which is determined by the purpose of signing (Engelman v. Gordon (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 517, 51 Cal. Rptr. 627).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with forms regarding the nature and extent of a particular party's liability (see, e.g., §§ 166.93 -166.103).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a party is liable on an instrument, on the ground that that party's or another's signature on the instrument obligates that party [Com. Code §§ 3401 (signature required), 3402 (representative's signature), 3403 (unauthorized signature and ratification); see Com. Code § 3204(a) (ambiguous signature)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. For example, if the party's signature was originally forged, but later ratified in an affirmative manner, counsel should show that the party is obligated under the instrument [see Com. Code § 3403(a)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the signature is binding.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion and forms relating to principal-agency liability generally, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.104 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For memoranda of points and authorities regarding principal-agency liability generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Signer on Face of Instrument Is Maker Despite Relative Location of Signature

In Schaeffle v. Nolan (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 651, 252 P.2d 732 , two signers of a promissory note signed the note in the usual place provided, on lines above their typed names in the right-hand portion of the space below the text of the note. A third signer signed below the others, with no line nor typed name. In an action against all the signers to enforce the note, the third signer contended that he was merely an endorser and therefore, under the facts of the case, was not liable on the note. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment that he was a maker of the note, not an endorser, and therefore liable. The court rejected the signer's contention that former Civ. Code § 3098 [now see Com.

Code § 3204, ambiguous signature renders signer an endorser] controlled. The mere fact that the signatures of the other makers appeared in a space specially provided did not render the location of his signature inappropriate as that of a maker. Com. Code § 3204 is inapplicable when the signer quite clearly signs as a maker (115 Cal. App. 2d 651, 653) .

[b] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature

In Volandri v. Hlobil (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 656, 339 P.2d 218 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the payee of a forged promissory note, and against the party whose name was forged as maker. The evidence supported the finding that the individual whose name was forged did not deny the existence of his execution of the instrument when contacted by the payee, and further asked the payee to be patient in waiting for the money. A party whose name has been forged as maker and who affirms the existence of the obligation ratifies the obligation and becomes liable under it (170 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659-660) .

[c] Repudiation of Unauthorized Execution Must Be Timely

In Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 67, 104 Cal. Rptr. 57, 500 P.2d 1401 , an individual forged his wife's name on a promissory note and a deed of trust to obtain funds for a business venture. After discovering the forgeries, the wife sought no remedy, but rather initially attempted to obtain control over the underlying business, with no success. Several years later, the payees on the note brought an action against her, among others, to recover money due. The trial court found in favor of the payees, and the wife appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed with regard to a business associate-defendant, but affirmed with regard to the wife, holding that a repudiation of an unauthorized signature must be timely. As a matter of law, the wife affirmatively endorsed the fraudulent acts of the forgers in anticipation of benefits to be gained, and sought to negate her endorsement only when benefits failed to materialize as anticipated. If she had repudiated the forgeries before ratifying the transaction, her failure to seek restitution of the proceeds of the loan would not have validated the forged signatures (8 Cal. 3d 67, 74-75) .

[d] Location of Signature Not Controlling

In Engelman v. Gordon (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 51 Cal. Rptr. 627 , an individual signed a promissory note on the left-hand side of the bottom of the face of the note. In an action to recover on the note, testimony showed that the payees would not have entered into the transaction without that individual's participation. The trial court found in favor of the signer, and the payees appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the individual signed in the capacity of an endorser (242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 517-519) . Under the facts of the case, his signature added nothing of value unless he thereby undertook an independent obligation with regard to the debt that was represented by the notes. There is a customary place for the signature of parties to an instrument according to whether they are makers or drawers or endorsers; makers or drawers sign to the right at the bottom of the face of the instrument, and endorsers sign on the back. However, the place of signature does not determine the character of the signer, which is determined by the purpose of signing (242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 517) . Signing in an unusual place requires proof to disclose the capacity in which the instrument was signed, but has no other effect. Therefore, an endorser may sign on the face of the instrument when that party labels the signature as such, or makes the intent clear (242 Cal. App. 2d 510, 517-518) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representative's Signature Binding on Prinicpal/Principal's Liability

The court of appeal in White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 , affirmed a judgment against the maker and in favor of the assignee of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as receiver of the payee of a note. The maker's signature on note was "MM by CA, Attny in fact." The court held that the maker's signature was authorized even though the power of attorney was not signed until two days after the note was signed. The power of attorney specified that it "ratified and confirmed" all things attorney in fact "shall cause to be done" in furtherance of the specific transaction involved (15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1295-1296) .

[b] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature

See White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 , discussed under § 166.90[4][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.91

§ 166.91 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Party Cannot Claim Status of Accommodation Party [Com. Code § 3419(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party is liable on an instrument because of the signature on it (see, e.g., § 166.90).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE AS A _____ [specify, e.g., MAKER], AND NOT AS AN ACCOMMODATION PARTY, ON THE _____ [specify, e.g., NOTE] THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE FACE OF THE NOTE INDICATES THAT HE/SHE IS A PRINCIPAL].

A. Liability in Capacity Shown on Instrument. An accommodation party may sign the instrument as maker, drawer, acceptor, or endorser and is obliged to pay the instrument in the capacity in which the accommodation party signs. The obligation of an accommodation party may be enforced notwithstanding any statute of frauds and whether or not the accommodation party receives consideration for the accommodation (Com. Code § 3419(b)).

[Optional] B. Accommodation Party Who Signs as Maker Has Same Liability as Co-maker. If one who is in fact an accommodation party nevertheless signs as maker of the note, that party is bound on the instrument to the same extent as the co-maker (Caito v. United California Bank (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 694, 701, 144 Cal. Rptr. 751, 576 P.2d 466 (construing prior law)).

[Optional] C. Presumption That Multiple Signers Are Co-makers. If an instrument is signed by two or more makers, it will be presumed that they are co-makers, and liable as such, and not as principal and surety, regardless of whether the payee knew that some the signers agreed among themselves to act in surety capacities only (Estate of Chamberlain (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 200, 112 P.2d 53).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with forms regarding the nature and extent of a particular party's liability (see, e.g., §§ 166.93 -166.103).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a party is liable on an instrument and cannot claim the status of an accommodation party [see Com. Code § 3419].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the nature of the signature of the party to be charged. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the face of the instrument indicates that the party is a maker, and that that party is therefore held to the liability of a principal, even though the payee knew at the time that the party was treated as an accommodation party as between co-makers.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not an accommodation party on the instrument.

[b] Limitation on Accommodation Party's Liability

Subject to Com. Code § 3419(d), an accommodation party is liable on the instrument in the capacity in which the party signed [Com. Code § 3419(b)]. However, if the signature of the accommodation party is accompanied by words indicating unambiguously that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the instrument, liability is limited to paying the amount due on the instrument only if (1) execution of judgment against the other party has been returned unsatisfied, (2) the other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding, (3) the other party cannot be served with process, or (4) it is otherwise apparent that payment cannot be obtained from the other party [Com. Code § 3419(d)]. For a form supporting the contention that a guarantor of a promissory note is liable on the instrument [see § 166.99].

[c] Related Publications

For discussion of a surety's defenses and rights generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 13.15 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms regarding suretyship issues generally, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in California Forms of Pleading and Practice(Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.105 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to suretyship generally, see Ch. 222, Suretyship .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party Who Signs as Maker Has Same Liability as Co-maker

In Caito v. United California Bank (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 694, 144 Cal. Rptr. 751, 576 P.2d 466 (construing prior law), the co-tenants of real property signed a promissory note in favor of a bank, which loaned a sum of money that was used by one of the co-tenants. The other co-tenant signed for the purpose of accommodation, but signed as a principal on the note. After default on the note, the purported accommodation makers brought an action for petition against the cosigners, the payee-bank (and holder of a first trust deed), and a second bank, which had also loaned money to the cosigners and therefore held a second trust deed on the same property. The bank that held the first trust deed caused the property to be sold pursuant to foreclosure, and deposited with the court the proceeds remaining from its share to satisfy the balance on its note. That bank was then dismissed from the action. Issues in trial concerned allocation of the remaining proceeds of the sale. The trial court found that plaintiffs acted only as accommodation makers, and therefore were entitled to their portion of the proceeds without reduction of one half the amount due under the note. The bank appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that one who is in fact an accommodation party but nevertheless signs as maker of a note and security instruments is bound on the instruments to the same extent as the co-maker. Pursuant to former Com. Code § 3415 [now see Com. Code § 3419], an accommodation party is one who signs an instrument in any capacity for the purpose of lending that person's name for the benefit of another. An accommodation party is a surety and the accommodated party a principal (20 Cal. 3d 694, 700) . However, one who appears to be a principal cannot be characterized as a surety against persons who have acted on the faith of the signer's apparent character of principal [see Civ. Code § 2832]. Inasmuch as the bank under the first trust deed was a bona fide encumbrancer for value, the purported accommodation makers, as well as the purported sole principals, were all liable as principal obligors, and the entire value of the property was thus subject to the satisfaction of the note (20 Cal. 3d 694, 701) .

[b] Presumption That Multiple Signers Are Co-makers

In Estate of Chamberlain (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 112 P.2d 53 , a promissory note executed by a father and son remained unpaid and due after the death of the father. The son and widow, as administrators of the estate, executed a new note so that the estate would not be charged with the debt. Consequently, both of them took from the estate a share greater than they would have if the estate proceeds had been used to satisfy the original note. After the mother's death, the son who had signed the note became coexecutor of the estate. In his executor capacity, he filed a petition to permit the estate to borrow sufficient money to pay the note. The court granted the petition, and the claim was paid in full from the borrowed funds. The court then charged his distributive share of the estate with that amount, and he appealed, contending that the decedent's estate was primarily liable for the debt.

The court of appeal reversed with regard to the amount chargeable against the appellant's distributive share, holding that the decedent was a maker, and not an accommodation party, on the note; but that the estate was entitled to contribution from appellant, as co-maker of the note (44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 200-205) . The court rejected the contention of the respondent (the coexecutor) that the decedent's estate was not obligated on the note because the decedent was merely an accommodation party, and not a maker (44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 200-202) . The parties were severally liable on the note, and under those conditions, each is bound to performance. If one dies, the obligation may be enforced against that maker's estate. If a note is signed by two or more makers, they are presumed to be co-makers, and not principal and surety, notwithstanding the fact that the creditor knew that one party was acting only as surety in an agreement between the two signers. Consequently, the burden of proving that the decedent signed in a capacity other than that shown on the face of the instrument lies on the respondent, which burden he failed to meet (44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 200) . The court decided the contribution issue after petition on rehearing (44 Cal. App. 2d 193, 203-205) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability in Capacity Shown on Instrument

In First Nat. Bank v. Kinslow (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 456, 38 P.2d 163 , an action against the accommodation maker of a renewal note, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff, holding that between the accommodation maker and the payee, the accommodation maker is held as a principal, even if the payee knew that the accommodation maker was, in fact, only a surety with regard to the relationship among all the makers (2 Cal. App. 2d 456, 457-458) .

For additional cases holding that a person who signs a note as a maker is responsible as a principal, despite the fact that the payee knew that that party was an accommodation maker with regard to other co-makers, see Schaeffle v. Nolan (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 651, 657, 252 P.2d 732 , discussed in § 166.90[3][a], and People's Fin. & Thrift Co. v. Moon (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 223, 224, 112 P.2d 24 .

[b] Accommodation Party Who Signs as Maker Has Same Liability as Co-maker

In California Nat. Bank v. Ginty (1895) 108 Cal. 148, 41 P. 38 , two individual signers of a promissory note executed the note with the understanding that they were sureties only, with regard to the third signer, a corporation. The payee knew of the agreement among the co-makers, but treated all three signers as principals. The payee released the corporation from liability on the note, with the consent of the individual signers. In an action on the note, the Supreme Court held that a party who signs as principal is held as such, notwithstanding the fact that the creditor knew that party was only a surety in relation to a co-maker under an agreement between themselves (108 Cal. 148, 150-151) .

For additional cases holding that a party who signs as a maker is liable in that capacity, despite an intention to be a mere accommodation maker, see Shriver v. Lovejoy (1867) 32 Cal. 574, 577 ; and Casner v. San Diego T. & Sav. Bank (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 524, 533-534, 94 P.2d 65 .

[c] Presumption That Multiple Signers Are Co-makers

In Common Wealth Ins. Systems, Inc. v. Kersten (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 1014, 115 Cal. Rptr. 653 , a consolidation action to recover the proceeds of a loan involving corporate shareholders, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's finding that two of the shareholders who signed the notes were not accommodation makers, but were, rather, principals on the note, and therefore were unable to claim the defenses of a surety. Evidence showing that signers represented themselves in their individual capacities, that they were among the principal stockholders of the corporation for whose benefit a loan was made, and that the loan was essential to their own financial interests supported the finding that the signers were principals rather than accommodation makers (40 Cal. App. 3d 1014, 1029) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.92

§ 166.92 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--Purported Accommodated Party Is Not Party on Instrument [Com. Code § 3419(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a purported accommodation party is, in fact, a principal on the note (see, e.g., § 166.91).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE AS A _____ [specify, e.g., MAKER], AND NOT AS AN ACCOMMODATION PARTY, ON THE _____ [specify, e.g., NOTE] THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE PURPORTED ACCOMMODATED PARTY IS NOT A PARTY TO THE INSTRUMENT.

Purported Accommodated Party and Accommodation Party Must Be Parties to Instrument. If an instrument is issued for value given for the benefit of a party to the instrument ("accommodated party") and another party to the instrument ("accommodation party") signs the instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument, the instrument is signed by the accommodation party "for accommodation" (Com. Code § 3419(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a party is liable on an instrument in a capacity other than as an accommodation party, on the ground that the purported accommodated party is not a party to the instrument [see Com. Code § 3419(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss facts regarding the signatures on the instrument, and show that the party purported to be the accommodated party is not a party to the instrument.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not an accommodation party on the instrument.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.105.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Purported Accommodated Party and Accommodation Party Must Be Parties to Instrument

In Bank of America v. Superior Court (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 435, 84 Cal. Rptr. 421 (construing prior law), an individual induced a bank to lend a corporation a certain sum of money, and in connection with that transaction executed a promissory note on which he was the sole maker, payable to the bank. He was not an officer of the corporation that received the funds. After default on the note, the bank brought an action against the individual, who answered specially, contending that he was merely an accommodation maker on behalf of the corporation that received the funds, and was therefore entitled to raise certain defenses under the laws of suretyship. The trial court denied the bank's motion for summary judgment, and the bank filed a petition for writ of mandamus to set aside the order denying the motion.

The court of appeal let the writ issue, finding that summary judgment for plaintiff was proper, and holding that an accommodation party must be a party to the instrument. Former Com. Code § 3415 [now see Com. Code § 3419] defined an accommodation party as one who signs the instrument in any capacity for the purpose of lending that party's name to another party to it. The only parties to the instrument in the instant case were the individual who signed the note and the bank. Although there have been cases in which the maker of a note has acted for the accommodation of the payee, defendant did not make that contention. Defendant claimed that the person accommodated was a person who was not a party to the instrument. Consequently, pursuant to former Com. Code § 3415 [now see Com. Code § 3419], the maker of the note was not an accommodation party (4 Cal. App. 3d 435, 439) . Any defenses arguably available to an accommodation party arising under the law of suretyship are based on the fact that the accommodation party is not the principal obligor. Evidence that the proceeds of a loan were wholly paid to another party to a note is evidence bearing on the question of whether a signer is an accommodation party. Although former Civ. Code § 3110, the predecessor statute to former Com. Code § 3415 [now see Com. Code § 3419], omitted the requirement that an accommodation party be a party to the instrument, former Com. Code § 3415 (as well as the current statute) contains that limitation [see Com. Code § 3419(a)]. Logic favors the limitation. A written promise to pay made by only one signer, which is intended only as a contract of suretyship or guaranty with regard to a separate contract with another person containing an obligation possibly different in many crucial regards, should so state on the face of the instrument (4 Cal. App. 3d 435, 440) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.93

§ 166.93 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Holder [Com. Code §§ 3407, 3115], Including Authorized Completion of Instrument and Enforceable Alterations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party is liable on an instrument because of the signature on it (see, e.g., § 166.90).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], THE MAKER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS LIABLE ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., IT WAS COMPLETED AFTER HE/SHE SIGNED IT, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THE NOTE, AND HE/SHE IS THEREFORE LIABLE ON THE INSTRUMENT AS COMPLETED].

A. Issuer Includes Maker. "Issuer" means a maker or drawer of an instrument (Com. Code § 3105(c)).

B. Maker Held to Instrument According to its Terms or as Later Completed. The issuer of a note is obliged to pay the instrument (a) according to its terms at the time it was issued or, if not issued, at the time it first came into possession of a holder, or (b) if the issuer signed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Commercial Code Sections 3115 and 3407. The obligation is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to an endorser who paid the instrument under Commercial Code Section 3415 (Com. Code § 3412).

[EITHER]

[Optional] C. Authorized Completion of Incomplete Instrument--Incomplete Instrument Is Instrument Under Commercial Code Section 3104. If a signed writing the contents of which show at the time of signing that it is incomplete but that the signer intended it to be completed by the addition of words or numbers is an instrument under Commercial Code Section 3104, it may be enforced according to its terms if it is not completed, or according to its terms as augmented by completion (Com. Code § 3115(a), (b)).

[OR]

[Optional] C. Authorized Completion of Incomplete Instrument--Incomplete Instrument Is Not Instrument Under Commercial Code Section 3104. If a signed writing the contents of which show at the time of signing that it is incomplete but that the signer intended it to be completed by the addition of words or numbers is not an instrument under Commercial Code Section 3104, but, after completion, the requirements of Commercial Code Section 3104 are met, the instrument may be enforced according to its terms as augmented by completion (Com. Code § 3115(a), (b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Alterations Enforceable by Nonholder in Due Course. A party whose obligation is affected by an alteration fraudulently made is liable on the obligation if that party assents to or is precluded from asserting the alteration. [No other alteration discharges a party, and the instrument may be enforced according to its original terms] (Com. Code § 3407(b)).

[Optional] E. Alteration Defined. "Alteration" means (1) an unauthorized change in an instrument that purports to modify in any regard the obligation of a party, or (2) an unauthorized addition of words or numbers or other change to an incomplete instrument relating to the obligation of a party (Com. Code § 3407(a)). The term means physical alteration of the instrument, for example, erasure or interlineation, not acts done that are unconnected with or beyond the instrument affecting the rights of the parties (Borden v. Berg (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 169, 172, 42 Cal. Rptr. 664).

[Optional] F. Material Alteration Made by Stranger Who Acts Without Authority. A material alteration in a note, made in accordance with an agreement between the maker and payee, does not avoid the note (American Trust Co. v. Greuner (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 279, 283, 56 P.2d 967).

[Optional] G. Alterations Enforceable by Holder in Due Course. A person taking a fraudulently altered instrument for value, in good faith, and without notice of the alteration, may enforce rights with regard to the instrument (1) according to its original terms, or (2) in the case of an incomplete instrument altered by unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed (Com. Code § 3407(c)).

[Optional] H. Alteration of Instrument Occurs if Unauthorized Completion of Incomplete Instrument. If words or numbers are added to an incomplete instrument without the signer's authority, there is an alteration of the incomplete instrument under Commercial Code Section 3407 (Com. Code § 3115(c)).

[Optional] I. Related Agreement Does Not Modify Obligation. An agreement executed contemporaneous with an instrument does not modify the obligation to pay the instrument (Kent v. Lampman (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411, 139 P.2d 57).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a maker of a note is liable on the instrument [see Com. Code §§ 3115 (incomplete instruments), 3407 (alterations), 3412 (maker's obligation)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the signatures on the note, and show that the defendant is a maker. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that although the party sought to be charged signed an incomplete instrument, it was later completed according to the terms of the agreement, and consequently that party is liable on it under Com. Code §§ 3115(b) and 3407(c).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the maker is liable on the instrument.

[b] Liability of Maker Is Primary

The maker's liability is "primary," in the contractual (as opposed to the suretyship) sense, which means that there are no conditions precedent to the maker's liability. At the time stated in the instrument, the maker must seek out and pay the holder. The holder has the right to bring an action as soon as the note becomes due, but will first usually make a demand on the maker, for the following reasons: (1) the maker may not have knowledge of the identity and whereabouts of a subsequent holder; and (2) the holder may wish to preserve enforcement rights against endorsers, which generally includes making a presentment to the maker [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1B.05[2] (Matthew Bender)]. For discussion of endorsers' liability [see § 166.96[2]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.106 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration Defined

In Borden v. Berg (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 169, 42 Cal. Rptr. 664 , a bank loaned two business associates money in connection with their business concern. One of the associates signed a promissory note as maker, payable to the second associate, who endorsed the note in the form of an endorsement and guaranty of payment. Subsequently, a second note was executed in the same form. The notes were unsecured, but the payee-endorser told a bank official that his money in a savings account in that bank would "stand good" for his obligation. The payee-endorser died, at which time nothing had been paid on either note. After paying the interest due, at the request of the bank, the maker executed a third note. In the following year, the bank took the funds remaining in the decedent's account and applied it on the note. The executrix of the decedent's estate brought an action against the bank to recover the savings account money. The trial court found in favor of the bank, and plaintiff filed a motion to vacate and set aside the judgment, which the court denied. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was no alternation of any instrument within the meaning of former Civ. Code §§ 3205 and 3206 [now see Com. Code § 3407]. The court rejected plaintiff's contention that the maker's execution of the third note discharged the obligation of the deceased because it constituted a novation of the prior notes (232 Cal. App. 2d 169, 171) . Rather, the intent of both the maker and the bank in executing the third note was to extend the time for payment. Neither party intended to release the guarantor nor to discharge or pay or alter in any way the guaranteed obligation on the first two notes. The court also rejected plaintiff's argument that the instrument was avoided by reason of "material alteration." The term "alteration," as used in relation to negotiable instruments, means physical alteration of the instrument, for example, erasure or interlineation, not acts done unconnected with or outside the instrument affecting the rights of the parties (232 Cal. App. 2d 169, 172) .

[b] Material Alteration Made by Stranger Who Acts Without Authority

In American Trust Co. v. Greuner (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 279, 56 P.2d 967 , the maker of a promissory note that was secured by several other notes, which were in turn secured by a deed of trust, failed to pay on the note. Concerned that the bank-payee would take action against him, the maker spoke to a bank representative, who told him that he could obtain an extension on the note, but would have to pay increased interest. A bank teller who had charge of the note pencilled in the new rate of interest on the face of the note as a notation to himself. There was a conflict in evidence regarding whether the maker expressly agreed to the increase. In an action by the bank against the maker, the trial court found in the bank's favor, and denied the maker's motion for new trial. The maker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the rule that a material alteration of an instrument avoids it has no application when the alteration has been made by a stranger who acts without authority. The mere placing of the notation on the instrument by the note teller for the purpose of his information in computing the interest did not constitute a material alteration of the instrument (13 Cal. App. 2d 279, 282) .

[c] Related Agreement Does Not Modify Obligation

In Kent v. Lampman (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 407, 139 P.2d 57 , the payee of a promissory note entered into several related transactions with the makers of the note, who were three individuals and a corporation. One of the agreements, executed contemporaneously with the note, purported to promise a bonus from profits to the payee, and to set forth a condition precedent for the payment of the note. In an action by the payee against the makers, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's holding that the agreement did not modify the obligation to pay the note. The condition precedent under the related agreement was therefore inapplicable as a defense. The makers of a note engage to pay it according to the tenor of the instrument [interpreting former Civ. Code § 3141, now see Com. Code § 3412] (59 Cal. App. 2d 407, 411) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Related Agreement Does Not Modify Obligation

In Sapin v. Security First National Bank (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 201, 52 Cal. Rptr. 254 , the maker of several promissory notes brought an action for declaratory and injunctive relief, and for reformation, against the holders of the note. The court of appeal affirmed with regard to the causes of action that concerned whether the terms of the note could be supplemented by proof of an oral promise. A note may not be varied or supplemented by evidence of the parties' contemporaneous oral agreements (243 Cal. App. 2d 201, 204) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.94

§ 166.94 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Transferee [Com. Code § 3203(a), (b)]--"Shelter" Doctrine

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], THE MAKER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE, IS LIABLE ON THE NOTE BECAUSE _____ [name of plaintiff] TOOK AS TRANFEREE AND IS ENTITLED TO THE PROTECTION OF THE SHELTER DOCTRINE, COMMERCIAL CODE SECTION 3203(b).

A. "Transfer" Defined. An instrument is transferred when it is delivered by a person other than its issuer for the purpose of giving it to the person receiving delivery the right to enforce the instrument (Com. Code § 3203(a)).

B. "Shelter" Doctrine. Transfer of an instrument, whether or not the transfer is a negotiation, vests in the transferee any rights of the transferor to enforce the instrument, including any right as holder in due course, but the transferee cannot acquire rights of a holder in due course by a transfer, directly or indirectly, from a holder in due course if the transferee engaged in fraud or illegality affecting the instrument (Com. Code § 3203(b); see Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1306).

C. Purpose and Effect of "Shelter" Doctrine. The purpose of the "shelter" policy of Commercial Code Section 3203(b) is to assure the holder in due course a free market for its paper. Thus, when a transferee takes an instrument from a holder in due course, the transferee takes free from all claims and defenses to the same extent as did the holder in due course even if the transferee is aware of those claims and defenses (Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305 ; see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-203 (1990)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that the maker is liable to a transferee from a holder in due course [see Com. Code § 3203(a), (b)], even if the transferee knew of certain claims and defenses at the time it acquired the instrument.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts and the points of law stated. For instance, it will be important to establish that the transferee was not a party to any fraud or illegality affecting the instrument.

These points and authorities may be adapted for use in another procedural context, such as a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Shelter" Doctrine

The note in Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301 , originated as part of a private offering of tax shelter units in computer equipment and related equipment leases. The defendant/maker purchased units and theoretically did not have to make any payments on the notes given as part of the purchase price because the projected lease payments were supposed to cover the payments on the notes. The original equipment owner assigned purchaser's note to the defendant, the equipment lessee, which endorsed it to a bank. After the purchaser stopped making payments on the notes, the lessee commenced suit for collection. The purchaser defended and cross complained on the ground that the original offering was fraudulent and in violation of securities laws and that the lessee and the original owner of the equipment conspired in the fraud and offering. The evidence did not establish any conspiracy between the lessee and the original owner/issuer. The lessee reacquired the note from the bank several months before trial. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff/lessee on the complaint and on the cross complaint. Defendant/maker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court said the "shelter" policy of former Com. Code § 3201(1) [now see Com. Code § 3203(b)] is to assure the holder in due course a free market for its paper. Thus, when a transferee takes an instrument from a holder in due course, the transferee takes free from all claims and defenses to the same extent as did the holder in due course even if the transferee is aware of those claims and defenses (235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305) . If this was not the rule, a holder in due course could be deprived of a market for the instrument if the obligor widely disseminated notice of a claim or defense (235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305-1306) . In construing the former statute, the court stated that the issue of whether the plaintiff/lessee "had notice of any claim or defense against it" when it reacquired the note from the bank was apparently never raised because the opinion did not discuss application of that exception to the shelter doctrine to the record before it, except to make clear that the lessee had no notice of the default when it endorsed the note to the bank (235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1305) . The court said it was irrelevant that the lessee could not reacquire the note as a holder in due course. Former Com. Code § 3201(1) [now see Com. Code § 3203(b)] does not make the transferee a holder in due course; it transfers the freedom from claims and defenses of the original holder in due course to each succeeding transferee. The lessee was merely another transferee in the chain of transfers of the note. If the transferee happens to have been a prior holder in due course, it takes back from its transferor the same rights it transferred. Thus, the lessee was in no better or worse position vis-a-vis the purchaser's claims and defenses against the issuer than if it had originally retained possession of the note (235 Cal. App. 3d 1301, 1306) .

[b] Purpose and Effect of "Shelter" Doctrine

Finalco, Inc. v. Roosevelt (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1301 , is discussed under § 166.94[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.95

§ 166.95 Supporting Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3105, 3412]--Action by Accommodation Party [Com. Code § 3419(e)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], THE MAKER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS _____ [specify, e.g., AN ACCOMMODATION PARTY WHO WAS COMPELLED TO PAY THE FULL AMOUNT OF THE NOTE].

A. Accommodation Party Signs Instrument to Incur Liability. An accommodation party is a party to the instrument who signs the instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument (Com. Code § 3419(a)).

B. Accommodation Party May Recover From Accommodated Party. An accommodation party who pays the instrument is entitled to reimbursement from the accommodated party and is entitled to enforce the instrument against the accommodated party (Com. Code § 3419(e)).

C. Payor of Note Succeeds to Rights of Holder. On payment and surrender of the paper, the payor succeeds to the rights of the holder (Collection Control Bureau v. Weiss (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 865, 870, 123 Cal. Rptr. 625).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a maker of a note is liable on the instrument in an action brought by an accommodation party [see Com. Code § 3419(e) (accommodation party)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the capacity of the person bringing the action, for example, that of accommodation party, on the instrument.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the maker is liable on the instrument.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payor of Note Succeeds to Rights of Holder

In Collection Control Bureau v. Weiss (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 865, 123 Cal. Rptr. 625 , the payee of a promissory note made demand on the maker after default, the guarantor paid the amount of the note, and the payee assigned the note to the guarantor. The note was not marked paid on its face. The guarantor assigned the note to a collection agency, which brought an action against the maker to recover the amount due. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on the ground that payment of the note by the guarantor extinguished the note. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding ultimately that a note assigned to a guarantor after payment is not thereby extinguished (discussing various factors regarding the parties' intent, and the fact that the note was not marked paid on its face) (50 Cal. App. 3d 865, 868-871) . One of the inconsistencies eliminated by the adoption of the Uniform Commercial Code is the denial of the guarantor's right to collect on a note that the guarantor has paid. Under former Com. Code § 3415(5) [now see Com. Code § 3419(e)], an accommodation party is not liable to the party accommodated, and an accommodation party who pays the instrument has a right of recourse on the instrument against that party. Former Com. Code § 3415(5) [now see Com. Code § 3419(e)] is intended to supersede decisions that held that an accommodation endorser who paid the instrument could not maintain an action on it against the accommodated party, because the endorser had no former rights to which the endorser was remitted. Under ordinary principles of suretyship, the accommodation party who pays is subrogated to the rights of the holder paid, and should have recourse on the instrument [citing former Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-415, now see Official Comment 5 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)] (50 Cal. App. 3d 865, 870) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party May Recover From Accommodated Party

In Williams v. Walker (1924) 66 Cal. App. 672, 226 P. 939 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment in favor of accommodation endorsers of a note in an action against the payee and makers, on the ground that there was insufficient consideration for the note. In discussing the standing of the endorsers, however, the court noted that the maker of a negotiable promissory note is liable to one who, before maturity, in good faith, and without notice or knowledge of fraud or lack of original consideration, endorses the note for the accommodation of the payee, and without the maker's request, if the endorser is compelled to pay it on default of the maker (66 Cal. App. 672, 674) .

[b] Payor of Note Succeeds to Rights of Holder

The court of appeal in Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 , reversed the trial court's denial of attorney's fees and calculation of interest to an accommodation maker. Cross defendant was the assignee of the guarantor or accommodation maker who paid plaintiff corporation's note. The payee assigned the note after payment to the guarantor or accommodation maker, who in turn assigned it to his son, the cross defendant. The trial court allowed cross defendant to recover the principal amount of the note and interest at the legal rate from the date of payment, but cross defendant sought attorney's fees and interest at the note rate, which was two percent above the payee's prime rate, increasing to four percent over prime after default. The corporate maker argued that the guarantor could not be an "accommodation maker" as defined by former Com. Code § 3415(1) [now see Com. Code § 3419(a) ("accommodation party")], because the guaranty was not on the note itself but on a separate piece of paper. The court said the distinction did not matter. Whether considered an accommodation maker whose rights are determined by former Com. Code § 3415(5) [now see Com. Code § 3419(e)] or a guarantor whose rights are determined by Civ. Code § 2848, cross defendant was entitled to enforce the note against the principal (or "party accommodated") in accordance with its terms, which included the right to recover attorney's fees and interest at the note rate rather than the legal rate. The court cited Collection Control Bureau v. Weiss (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 865, 869, 123 Cal. Rptr. 625 (discussed under § 166.95[3][a]), for the rule that payment extinguishes the note and only leaves the accommodation maker or guarantor its equitable remedies does not apply when the note is assigned rather than marked "paid" on its face (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721-723) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.96

§ 166.96 Supporting Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3415, 3502(a)]--Scope of Liability, Dishonor, and Special Endorsements

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party is liable on an instrument because of the signature on it (see, e.g., § 166.90).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], AN/THE ENDORSER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS LIABLE ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., TIMELY PRESENTMENT WAS MADE TO THE MAKER, AND NOTICE OF DISHONOR GIVEN].

[EITHER]

A. Endorser's Liability/Endorsement of Complete Instrument. If an instrument is dishonored and the endorsement does not disclaim the endorser's liability, the endorser is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument according to the instrument's terms at the time it was endorsed. The endorser's obligation is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to a subsequent endorser who paid the instrument under Commercial Code Section 3415 (Com. Code § 3415(a), (b)).

[OR]

A. Endorser's Liability/Endorsement of Incomplete Instrument. If an instrument is dishonored and the endorsement does not disclaim the endorser's liability, the endorser is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Commercial Code Sections 3115 and 3407. The endorser's obligation is owed to a person entitled to enforce the instrument or to a subsequent endorser who paid the instrument under Commercial Code Section 3415 (Com. Code § 3415(a), (b)).

[CONTINUE, EITHER]

B. Note Payable on Demand/Dishonor After Presentment. If the note is payable on demand, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made to the maker and the note is not paid on the day of presentment (Com. Code § 3502(a)(1)).

[OR]

B. Note Not Payable on Demand/Dishonor After Presentment. If the note is not payable on demand and is payable at or through a bank or the terms of the note require presentment, the note is dishonored if presentment is duly made and the note is not paid on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later (Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)).

[OR]

B. Note Not Payable on Demand/Dishonor When Not Paid When Due. If the note is not payable on demand and is not payable at or through a bank or the terms of the note do not require presentment, the note is dishonored if it is not paid on the day it becomes payable (Com. Code § 3502(a)(3)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Special Endorsee Is Not Sole Obligee of Special Endorser. A special endorsement does not limit liability by the special endorser to the person to whom the endorsement is expressly payable; the endorser's obligation under a special endorsement runs to all subsequent endorsees whose title is derived from the special endorsement (Kingsbury v. Whitacre (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 100, 103-105, 36 P.2d 241 ; see Com. Code § 3205(a) (definition of "special endorsement")).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with contention relating to excuse of presentment or notice (see, e.g., § 166.97).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an endorser of a promissory note is liable on the instrument [see Com. Code §§ 3415 (endorser's obligation), 3501 (presentment), 3502 (when dishonor occurs), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3505 (evidence of dishonor)]. Note that the Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorser" [see Com. Code § 3415], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorser." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the endorsement signatures on the note, and show that defendant is an endorser with regard to the note's contents at the time of the signing.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the endorser is liable on the instrument.

[b] Liability of Endorser Is Secondary or Conditional

The endorser's liability is "secondary," in that the endorser's promise is conditional. Before the endorser's duty to pay the holder or subsequent endorser arises, certain events must occur or acts must be performed by the holder or subsequent holder. The three conditions to the liability of an endorser of either a draft or a note are the following [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 8.01 (Matthew Bender)]:

- Unless excused, presentment for payment must be made to the drawee or acceptor of a draft, the maker of a note, or any other payor of an instrument. This is required because each endorser takes the instrument relying primarily on the promise or credit of the party who issues the instrument. Thus, payment should be looked to first and must be sought first from the maker or the person whom the maker has ordered to pay on its behalf [see Com. Code §§ 3501 (presentment), 3502 (dishonor generally requires presentment), 3504(a) (excused presentment)];

- The drawee, acceptor, or maker must dishonor the instrument [see Com. Code §§ 3415(a) (endorser's obligation exists only if instrument is dishonored), 3502 (when instrument dishonored), 3505 (evidence of dishonor)]; and

- Unless excused, notice of that dishonor must be given to the endorser against whom recovery is sought [see Com. Code §§ 3415(c) (failure to give notice of dishonor as required discharges endorser's liability), 3503].

For a memorandum of points and authorities regarding excuse of presentment and notice, see § 166.97.

[c] Federal Law Governs Liability for Endorsement of Checks and Money Orders Between Banks and Customers

Although the authority in this form is applied in the context of a promissory note, counsel should be aware that, as related to endorsements on checks and postal money orders, Com. Code §§ 3414, 3415, and 3503 no longer apply between banks or between a depositary bank and its customer. They have been superseded by 12 C.F.R. § 229.35 to the extent they are inconsistent with that regulation [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.35; 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.35; see also 12 U.S.C. § 4007(b) (authority for regulations that supersede Com. Code)]. Similarly, Com. Code § 3501(b)(1) has been superseded by 12 C.F.R. § 229.36(b) with regard to the place at which a paying bank must accept presentment [12 C.F.R. § 229.36(b); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.36(b)].

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 166.107 -166.109 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Endorsee Is Not Sole Obligee of Special Endorser

In Kingsbury v. Whitacre (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 100, 36 P.2d 241 , the payees of a promissory note endorsed the note. The first endorsee signed the note with a special endorsement. The person to whom the note was payable under the special endorsement endorsed the note and delivered it to the ultimate holder, who brought suit against the makers and the first endorsee (who had specially endorsed the note). (The payees, as general endorsers, had been released from liability, an issue not raised at trial.) The trial court found in the holder's favor and against the party who specially endorsed the note. The special endorsee appealed, contending that by virtue of the special endorsement, her liability ran only to the party expressly named in that endorsement, and not to subsequent endorsees.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there is no liability limitation regarding special endorsements. The special endorsee must sign the note in order to render the note negotiable, but the special endorsement per se does not affect the endorser's liability to subsequent endorsees [discussing former Civ. Code § 3115, now see Com. Code § 3205]. The court contrasted the effect of a qualified endorsement with that of a special endorsement. A qualified endorsement may be made by adding to the endorser's signature the words "without recourse," or similar words, which limits the endorser's liability [discussing former Civ. Code § 3119, now see Com. Code § 3415]. Because the endorser in the instant case did not include a qualified endorsement, her liability was unaffected, and ran to the ultimate holder whose title derived through the special endorsement (1 Cal. App. 2d 100, 103-105) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.97

§ 166.97 Supporting Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code §§ 3415, 3502(a)]--Presentment, Notice of Dishonor, or Delay in Notice Excused [Com. Code § 3504]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party is liable on an instrument because of the signature on it (see, e.g., § 166.90), or with a general contention that an endorser of a note is liable on an instrument (see, e.g., § 166.96).]

[THE DELAY IN] _____ [PRESENTMENT AND/OR NOTICE OF DISHONOR] OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION _____ IS/ARE EXCUSED BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., PLAINTIFF EXPRESSLY WAIVED PRESENTMENT AND NOTICE OF DISHONOR].

[EITHER]

A. Presentment Excused by Reasonable Diligence. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the person entitled to present the instrument cannot with reasonable diligence make presentment (Com. Code § 3504(a)(1)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused by Repudiation. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the maker or acceptor has repudiated an obligation to pay the instrument (Com. Code § 3504(a)(2)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused by Death or Insolvency. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the maker or acceptor is dead or in insolvency proceedings (Com. Code § 3504(a)(2)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused by Terms of Instrument. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if by the terms of the instrument presentment is not necessary to enforce the obligation of endorsers or the drawer (Com. Code § 3504(a)(3)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused by Waiver. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the drawer or endorser whose obligation is being enforced has waived presentment (Com. Code § 3504(a)(4)); Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761 ; Moore v. Trinity Oil & Gas Co. (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 221, 223-224, 308 P.2d 31).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused Because Party to Be Charged Does Not Expect Payment. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the drawer or endorser whose obligation is being enforced has no reason to expect or right to require that the instrument be paid or accepted (Com. Code § 3504(a)(4)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused Because of Instruction Not to Pay. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the drawer instructed the drawee not to pay or accept the draft (Com. Code § 3504(a)(5)).

[OR]

A. Presentment Excused Because of No Obligation to Pay. Presentment for payment or acceptance of an instrument is excused if the drawee was not obligated to the drawer to pay the draft (Com. Code § 3504(a)(5)).

[OR]

A. Notice Excused by Terms of Instrument. Notice of dishonor is excused if by the terms of the instrument notice of dishonor is not necessary to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument (Com. Code § 3504(b)(1)).

[OR]

A. Notice Excused By Waiver. Notice of dishonor is excused if the party whose obligation is being enforced waived notice of dishonor (Com. Code § 3504(b)(2)).

[OR]

A. Delay in Notice of Dishonor Excused. Delay in giving notice of dishonor is excused if the delay was caused by circumstances beyond the control of the person giving notice and the person giving the notice exercised reasonable diligence after the cause of the delay ceased to operate (Com. Code § 3504(c)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Waiver of Presentment Also Waiver of Notice. A waiver of presentment is also a waiver of notice of dishonor (Com. Code § 3504(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an endorser of a promissory note is liable on the instrument, if presentment or notice of dishonor was not made, or was delayed, and the omission or delay was excused [see Com. Code § 3504].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the delay or failure of presentment and/or notice of dishonor. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the endorser expressly waived entitlement thereto by language incorporated in the instrument itself.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the endorser is liable on the instrument.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.108 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presentment Excused by Waiver

In Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761 , the makers of a promissory note requested extensions on two occasions; the requests were denied because the holders feared an extension would jeopardize their rights against the endorsers and guarantors. The endorsers and guarantors also requested an extension, but did not agree with the proposed conditions. After default on the note, the holders brought an action against the endorsers and guarantors. The trial court found in favor of the holders, and the endorsers and guarantors appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that presentment may be excused if waived expressly or by implication. Requesting an extension on a note constitutes a waiver of any defect in presentment (273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785) .

In Moore v. Trinity Oil & Gas Co. (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 221, 308 P.2d 31 , an action on two promissory notes, the endorser promised to pay the amount due, even though the holder made a late presentment to the maker. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment in the endorser's favor, holding that a failure to make a timely presentation or give a timely notice of dishonor may be waived by the endorser (149 Cal. App. 2d 221, 223) . In the instant case, the facts showed the endorser's implied waiver by virtue of his promise to pay (149 Cal. App. 2d 221, 223-224) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presentment Excused by Waiver

The facts and procedural background of Hurlbut v. Quigley (1919) 180 Cal. 265, 180 P. 613 , are discussed in § 166.98[3][a]. In Hurlbut, the Supreme Court held that an accommodation endorser has a right of contribution against joint endorsers to recover their proportional share of a note. The signatures of the joint endorsers were preceded by the words, "For value received I hereby waive presentment, demand and notice of protest on the within note." The Court affirmed the trial court's finding in plaintiff's favor on the issue that all the endorsers were bound jointly. The Court held that when an endorser precedes a signature by a statement waiving presentment, demand, and notice, it constitutes a valid endorsement with an enlarged liability, and is a waiver of some of the conditions imposed by law on the payee in the endorser's favor (180 Cal. 265, 269) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.98

§ 166.98 Supporting Contention That Accommodation Endorser Is Liable to Joint Endorser for Contribution

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], AN ACCOMMODATION ENDORSER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF FOR HIS/HER PROPORTIONAL OBLIGATION ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS A JOINT ENDORSER WHO WAS COMPELLED TO PAY THE NOTE ON THE MAKER'S DEFAULT.

Accommodation Endorser Entitled to Contribution From Joint Endorsers. An accommodation endorser who paid more than that endorser's proportional share of a note is entitled to contribution from the joint endorsers (Hurlbut v. Quigley (1919) 180 Cal. 265, 270, 180 P. 613).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that an accommodation endorser is liable to a joint endorser who paid the full amount of a note for contribution in the amount of the proportional share owed under the note.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts showing that the endorser paid the full amount of a note when that note was due, and set forth the proportional amounts owed by the remaining joint endorsers.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that an accommodation endorser is liable to a joint endorser.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Accommodation Endorser Entitled to Contribution From Joint Endorsers

In Hurlbut v. Quigley (1919) 180 Cal. 265, 180 P. 613 , one of three accommodation endorsers of a note paid the full amount due on the note, under a judgment on the note against him, and brought an action for contribution to recover one-third of the amount from one of the other endorsers. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's finding in plaintiff's favor on the issue that all the endorsers were bound jointly, and held that the right of contribution exists in favor of any of the joint accommodation endorsers who paid more than that endorser's proportional share of the debt (180 Cal. 265, 270) . (This case is discussed for the issue of waiver of notice in § 166.97[4][a].)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Endorser Entitled to Contribution From Joint Endorsers

In Machado v. Fernandez (1887) 74 Cal. 362, 16 P. 19 , the payee on a promissory note made demand on the maker and gave notice of dishonor to the joint accommodation endorsers, one of whom paid the note in full, then brought an action against the co-endorser for contribution. The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's order that sustained defendant's demurrer on grounds that the payee's delay in making a demand exonerated the endorsers from liability. The Court also held that an accommodation endorser who pays the full amount of a note has a right of contribution against a joint endorser (74 Cal. 362, 365) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.99

§ 166.99 Supporting Contention That Guarantor of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument [Com. Code § 3419(d)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party is liable on an instrument because of the signature on it (see, e.g., § 166.90).]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE AS A GUARANTOR ON THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., HE/SHE SIGNED THE NOTE WITH THE WORDS "COLLECTION GUARANTEED" AND IT IS APPARENT THAT PAYMENT CANNOT BE OBTAINED FROM THE OTHER PARTY].

Obligation to Pay. If the signature of a party to an instrument is accompanied by words indicating unambiguously that the party is guaranteeing collection rather than payment of the obligation of another party to the instrument, the signer is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument to a person entitled to enforce the instrument only if (1) execution of judgment against the other party has been returned unsatisfied, (2) the other party is insolvent or in an insolvency proceeding, (3) the other party cannot be served with process, or (4) it is otherwise apparent that payment cannot be obtained from the other party (Com. Code § 3419(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a guarantor of a promissory note is liable on the instrument [see Com. Code § 3419(d)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the words added to the signature, and show why the language constitutes a guaranty, and specify to what extent the guaranty applies.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a guarantor is liable on the instrument.

[b] Guarantors Under Revised Article 3

The 1990 version of Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code, adopted for the most part by California in 1992 (effective January 1, 1993), omitted pre-1990 U.C.C. § 3-416 [see former Com. Code § 3416], which defined and determined the rights of persons who signed using the words "payment guaranteed" or "collection guaranteed." The reason for and the effect of the omission is stated to be as follows: "Former Article 3 was confusing because the obligation of a guarantor was covered both in Section 3-415 and in Section 3-416. The latter section suggested that a signature accompanied by words of guaranty created an obligation distinct from that of an accommodation party. Revised Article 3 eliminates that confusion by stating in Section 3-419 the obligation of a person who uses words of guaranty" [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)]. Although Subsection (2) of the pre-1990 version of Section 3-416 is carried over to Section 3-419 with no substantial change [compare former Com. Code § 3416(2) with Com. Code § 3419(d)], there is no provision in the revised Article 3 (or the revised California Commercial Code) comparable to the pre-1990 Section 3-416(1) [see former Com. Code § 3416(1)]. That section stated, in effect, that if an endorser signs with the words "payment guaranteed" the endorser waives presentment, dishonor, and notice of dishonor. Since the law generally protects sureties, it would appear that omission of the provision in the 1990 version (and the revised California Commercial Code) means that one signing "payment guaranteed" is now entitled to a dishonor of the instrument, and presentment and notice of dishonor if these are required [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 1C.34[5] (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Obligation of Guarantor Identical to That of Surety

The former distinction between guarantors and sureties was abolished by Civ. Code § 2787, which provides that a surety or guarantor is one who promises to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, or hypothecates property as security for such an obligation. Guaranties of collection and continuing guaranties are forms of suretyship obligations, and except insofar as necessary to give effect to provisions specially relating thereto, are subject to all provisions of law relating to suretyships in general [Civ. Code § 2787; see Civ. Code §§ 2787-2855 (governing sureties generally)]. A letter of credit, however, is not a form of suretyship obligation. The term "letter of credit" means a "letter of credit" as defined in Com. Code § 5102(a)(10), whether or not the engagement is governed by Com. Code § 5101 et seq. (letters of credit) [Civ. Code § 2787].

[d] Related Publications

For discussion regarding guarantors generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, §§ 13.12-13.14 (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms regarding suretyship issues generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[e] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.111 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to suretyship generally, see Ch. 222, Suretyship .

173 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.100

§ 166.100 Supporting Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--No Discharge by Conditional or Partial Tender [Civ. Code §§ 1486, 1494; Com. Code § 3603(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE NOTE HAS NOT BEEN DISCHARGED BY DEFENDANT'S ALLEGED TENDER BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S OFFER WAS PARTIAL AND IMPOSED AN UNWARRANTED CONDITION.

A. Effect of Tender. If tender of payment of an obligation to pay an instrument is made to a person entitled to enforce the instrument, the effect of tender is governed by principles of law applicable to tender of payment under a simple contract (Com. Code § 3603(a)).

B. Tender Must Be Unconditional. To constitute a valid tender, the offer of performance must be unconditional (Civ. Code § 1494; Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385 ; Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 782, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761).

C. Tender Must Be of Full Performance. To constitute a valid tender, the offer must be of full performance (Civ. Code § 1486; Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385 ; Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 783, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a maker, endorser, or guarantor remains liable on a note after an offer of performance that failed to qualify as a tender because is was not unconditional or was not an offer of full performance [see Com. Code § 3603 (effect of tender)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a maker, endorser, or guarantor remains liable on the instrument.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

Other aspects of tender and objections to tender are addressed by the points and authorities in §§ 166.101 and 166.102. Points and authorities addressing the related doctrine of equitable estoppel are included in §§ 166.103 (opposing application of the doctrine) and 166.106 (supporting application of the doctrine to prohibit collection by the payee of the remaining balance).

For points and authorities concerning tender and other acts that stop the accrual of interest on an obligation, see Ch. 121, Interest .

For additional points and authorities addressing other issues relating to tender in the context of notes secured by deed of trust, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Tender Must Be Unconditional

Civ. Code § 1494 provides that an offer of performance must be free from any conditions that the creditor is not bound to perform.

Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378 , commenced suit to collect a $326,000 note taken as part of the down payment for land sold to defendant. The note contained a provision for attorney's fees; plaintiffs alleged, in an affidavit supporting their attachment of the real property, that the amount of attorney's fees for which defendant was obligated was $100,000. Defendant's undertaking for release of the attachment was set at $400,000. Defendant's answer denied that it was necessary for plaintiffs to employ an attorney, but admitted the genuineness of the note, that it was overdue, and the amount owed. Defendant also interposed a defense and counterclaim of partial failure of consideration in the sum of $30,000 based on the value of land not conveyed to defendant at the time of the sale. At the same time defendant filed its answer and counterclaim, it filed a "Tender of Payment," which stated that defendant tendered to plaintiffs the sum of $326,000 principal, accrued interest, and costs of suit properly incurred, and which included an offer to pay $1,000 as attorney's fees. The tender provided that if plaintiffs refused to accept the sum offered as attorney's fees, defendant continued to offer the principal amount, interest, and costs, without prejudice to the right of plaintiffs to litigate the amount of attorney's fees. After unsuccessfully trying to have the tender and the counterclaim stricken, plaintiffs filed a response to the tender, in which plaintiffs stated they would accept the $326,000 principal, together with all interest through the date of tender of payment, costs of suit allowed by the court, and attorney's fees of 10 percent of the principal amount. No money was ever paid. Judgment was awarded for plaintiffs in the principal amount of $324,000, which reflected a $2,000 offset for the land defendant had not received, plus interest and costs and attorney's fees of $27,500. Defendant appealed, contending, among other things, that the tender stopped the running of interest and additional attorney's fees beyond the sum of $1,000.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first described a tender as an offer of performance made with the intent to extinguish an obligation [see Civ. Code § 1485]. When properly made, it has the effect of putting the other party in default if he or she refuses to accept it. The court cited former Com. Code § 3604 [now see Com. Code § 3603] and Civ.

Code § 1504 for the proposition that when a party makes a tender of full payment to the holder of a promissory note when or after it is due, he or she is discharged to the extent of all subsequent liability for interest, costs, and attorney's fees (21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385) . However, to be valid, a tender must be of full performance [Civ. Code § 1486] and it must be unconditional [Civ. Code § 1494]. The court said there was substantial evidence in the record before it to support an implied finding that the so-called tender was not an offer of full payment of the note and was qualified and conditional by reason of the counterclaim. At the hearing on the motion to strike, defendant's counsel explained the reason for filing the counterclaim and the tender simultaneously, saying defendant was willing to pay the amount of the tender. Then, if it turned out after trial that defendant was entitled to a setoff, defendant would collect that as a separate matter. Defendant's counsel viewed it, in effect, as two separate law suits. The court of appeal disagreed, noting that the counterclaim arose out of the very transaction for which the promissory note was given and that defendant claimed a partial failure of consideration for the note (21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385) . Defendant's argument was further weakened by its contention that the tender constituted a waiver of the counterclaim (21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 385-386) . The court said the facts were contrary; defendant continually asserted the counterclaim from the time of filing through the trial and to judgment (21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386) .

Plaintiffs in Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761 , were assignees of a note and deed of trust and sought to impose liability on defendants as guarantors and endorsers. Defendants were the original payees and had endorsed the note and guaranteed it as part of the transfer to plaintiffs. After the suit was commenced, the attorney for the makers contacted plaintiffs' attorney in an attempt to settle the matter. Plaintiffs' attorney included $1,900 for attorney's fees in their demands. That was the amount that was provided for by the default schedule established in the local rules of court. The makers objected to paying attorney's fees. Plaintiffs' attorney countered by saying that plaintiffs would accept the full amount of principal and interest owing, would assign the note and deed of trust back to defendants (it appears at this point that plaintiffs thought the makers' attorney was acting for defendants), and that the matter of attorney's fees and costs could be left for the court to decide. That offer was rejected, and no unconditional offer or tender was ever made. Judgment was entered for plaintiffs for the difference between the amount of the note and the proceeds of the foreclosure sale plus interest from the date of the sale to the date of judgment, but plaintiffs were denied attorney's fees. Both parties appealed.

Except for reversing the denial of attorney's fees, the court of appeal affirmed. One of defendants' contentions was that they had been discharged from any liability by the makers' offer on the ground that that offer constituted a tender. The trial court had found that the offer by the makers was not free from an improper condition and therefore failed as a tender. The court of appeal held that the record supported that finding. The court cited Civ. Code §§ 1494 and 1498, saying it is well established that a tender must be unconditional and that an unwarranted condition annexed to an offer to pay is in effect a refusal to perform. The demand that plaintiffs eliminate or reduce their claim for attorney's fees was such an unwarranted condition (273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 782) .

[b] Tender Must Be of Full Performance

Civ. Code § 1486 provides that an offer of partial performance is of no effect.

Still v. Plaza Marine Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378 , is discussed under § 166.100[3][a].

The facts and procedural background of Wiener v. Van Winkle (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 78 Cal. Rptr. 761 , are discussed under § 166.100[3][a]. Defendants also claimed to have made a tender of their own, although the only evidence of it that was introduced was the reply letter from plaintiffs' attorney. Defendants characterized that letter as an admission of their tender. The so-called "admission" letter referred to the fact that defendants did not have the cash to be able to pay any stipulated judgment and so had offered to enter into a confession of judgment if plaintiffs would immediately reassign the beneficial interest under the deed of trust. The court of appeal said that the letter referred to an offer less than a full tender, and thus was not a tender (273 Cal. App. 2d 774, 783) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.101

§ 166.101 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Creditor's Objections to Tender [Civ. Code § 1501; Code Civ. Proc. § 2076] Were Sufficient

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT'S LIABILITY ON THE NOTE HAS NOT BEEN DISCHARGED BY DEFENDANT'S [ALLEGED] TENDER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S OBJECTIONS TO THAT OFFER WERE SUFFICIENT TO INFORM DEFENDANT WHAT WOULD BE REQUIRED FOR DISCHARGE.

A. Creditor Must Specify Objections to Tender. A person to whom tender is made must, at the time, specify any objection he or she may have to the money, instrument, or property, or be deemed to have waived the objection. If the objection is to the amount of money, the terms of the instrument, or the amount or kind of property, he or she must specify the amount, terms, or kind that he or she requires or be precluded from objecting afterwards (Code Civ. Proc. § 2076; see Civ. Code § 1501).

B. Purpose for Requiring Objections to Tender. The purpose of Code of Civil Procedure Section 2076 [and Civil Code Section 1501] in requiring a creditor to specify his or her objections to a tender from the debtor is to inform a debtor who is willing and able to pay his or her debt what the creditor demands so the debtor may, if he or she wishes, make a conforming tender (Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 115, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 ; see Still v. Plaza Marine Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386).

C. Reasonable Compliance Is Sufficient. A creditor's reasonable compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2076 is sufficient not to constitute a waiver if the creditor has made known to the debtor what will be required for full performance (see Still v. Plaza Marine Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a payee or holder has not waived full performance by failing to object to an insufficient tender, and that the maker remains liable on a note when the payee's or holder's objections to the tendered performance were sufficient under the circumstances to make known what would be required as full performance [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2076].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that objections to the tendered performance were sufficient under the circumstances.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 166.102 may be combined with those in this form to make the additional argument that compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 was not even required in the particular situation. Those in § 166.103 may be included to negate any contention that the payee is equitably estopped from collecting the remaining balance. The points and authorities in § 166.100 address the insufficiency of tender.

For additional points and authorities addressing other issues relating to tender in the context of notes secured by deed of trust, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creditor Must Specify Objections to Tender

Civ. Code § 1501 provides that all objections to the mode of an offer of performance, which the creditor has an opportunity to state at the time to the person making the offer, and which could be then obviated by him or her, are waived by the creditor if not then stated.

[b] Purpose for Requiring Objections to Tender

Plaintiff in Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 , was the maker of a promissory note that was executed by plaintiff's attorney-in-fact and secured by a deed of trust. Defendant was the payee. The note provided for a prepayment penalty equal to six month's interest on any amount paid in excess of 20 percent of the principal in any 12-month period. The attorney-in-fact had been assisted by an attorney at law in procuring the loan. On February 4, 1983, plaintiff's attorney-in-fact went to a branch of defendant's collection agent with a $60,000 cashier's check to prepay the note. The agent's employee forgot the prepayment penalty, which would have been $4,104, and calculated the amount owing as $57,085.50. The employee accepted the cashier's check and gave the attorney-in-fact the agent's check for the difference. Thereafter, the agent sent three notices to the attorney-in-fact: one on February 10 indicating a zero balance owed; one on February 17 indicating a balance owing of $4,104; and another on March 3 showing the $4,104 balance. The attorney-in-fact had moved and the notices were not forwarded or received. Eventually, defendant commenced foreclosure proceedings and plaintiff commenced an action to restrain the foreclosure sale.

During the trial of the action, the attorney-in-fact testified that the maker had another account from which the penalty could possibly have been paid if it had been assessed on February 4. By October, however, when the foreclosure sale was scheduled, plaintiff no longer had sufficient funds to pay the penalty. Judgment was entered for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff contended that acceptance of the tender without objection precluded defendant from raising any objection to the sufficiency of the tender. The court of appeal disagreed. The court first set forth Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 and Civ. Code § 1501, and noted that those two sections should be read together. The purpose of both sections is to allow a debtor who is willing and able to pay his or her debt to know what the creditor demands so the debtor, if he or she wishes, may make a conforming tender. The court commented that most of the decisions applying Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 and Civ. Code § 1501 rely on the doctrine of estoppel, and that the cases generally arise either from the creditor's refusal of a tender without specifying the reason for the refusal or from the creditor's acceptance of a tender without informing the debtor that the tender is nonconforming (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 115) .

The facts and procedural background of Still v. Plaza Marine Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414 , are discussed in § 166.100[3][a]. After concluding that defendant's offer did not constitute a valid tender, the court said that even if the tender was assumed to be valid, substantial evidence to support a finding of plaintiffs' objection to the amount offered for attorney's fees existed in the declaration attached to plaintiffs' motion to strike, statements of plaintiffs' counsel at the hearing on the motion to strike, and the response to the tender. Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 requires a person to whom tender is made to specify, at that time, any objection he or she may have "to the money" or be deemed to have waived the objection. If the objection is to the amount of money, he or she must specify the amount required or be precluded from objecting afterwards. The purpose of these requirements is to inform a debtor who is willing and able to pay his or her debt what the creditor demands so the debtor may make his or her offer conform. The court concluded that under the circumstances, which included the confusion caused by defendant's counterclaim and the time required to hear and decide plaintiffs' motion to strike, plaintiffs' response to the tender was a reasonable compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 (21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 386) .

[c] Reasonable Compliance Is Sufficient

See discussion of Still v. Plaza Marine Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414 , under § 166.101[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.102

§ 166.102 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Payee Not Barred by Its Unintentional Mistake in Failing to Demand Proper Tender [Civ. Code § 1501; Code Civ. Proc. § 2076]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE NOTE HAS NOT BEEN DISCHARGED BY OPERATION OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2076 ON THE GROUND OF PLAINTIFF'S FAILURE TO OBJECT TO THE INSUFFICIENCY OF A TENDER BECAUSE THAT SECTION DOES NOT APPLY TO AN UNINTENTIONAL MISTAKE BY A PAYEE.

Objections Not Required in Case of Creditor's Unintentional Mistake. The requirements of Code of Civil Procedure Section 2076 [and Civil Code Section 1501], that a creditor specify his or her objections to an insufficient tender from the debtor, do not apply to, and thus the creditor's right to full performance is not waived by, a creditor's unintentional failure to demand proper tender (see Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 116-117, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 and Civ. Code § 1501 are not applicable and thus do not result in waiver of the right to full performance because of a payee's unintentional mistake in failing to demand proper tender.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that objections to the tendered performance were not waived.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 166.101 may be combined with those in this form to make the additional argument that objections sufficient under Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 have been made in the particular situation. The points and authorities in § 166.100 address the insufficiency of tender.

For additional points and authorities addressing other issues relating to tender and objections to tender in the context of notes secured by deed of trust, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Objections Not Required in Case of Creditor's Unintentional Mistake

The facts and procedural background of Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 , are set forth in § 166.101[3][b]. The court of appeal concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 2076 and Civ. Code § 1501 were not applicable to the case because application of those sections is limited to debtors who perform or tender performance in good faith to creditors who refuse to accept or intentionally fail to demand proper tender (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 116-117) . This situation involved neither of the foregoing criteria. The agent's failure to obtain the prepayment penalty was the result of a mistake, which it attempted to correct by immediately sending the notice. Defendant was not responsible for the fact that the notices were never received. In addition, the court said that plaintiff, through the attorney-in-fact, was, or should have been, aware of the prepayment charge because the provision was clearly stated in the note (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.103

§ 166.103 Supporting Contention That Maker Remains Liable on Instrument--Equitable Estoppel [Evid. Code § 623] Not Applicable to Payee--Maker Knew or Should Have Known True Facts and Suffered No Detriment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT EQUITABLY ESTOPPED TO REQUIRE PAYMENT OF THE BALANCE OWING ON THE NOTE BECAUSE [THE FAILURE TO INCLUDE THAT AMOUNT IN ITS INITIAL DEMAND WAS AN UNINTENTIONAL OVERSIGHT AND] DEFENDANT KNEW, OR SHOULD HAVE KNOWN, THE CORRECT BALANCE OWING AND SUFFERED NO DETRIMENT FROM PLAINTIFF'S ERRONEOUS CALCULATION.

[EITHER]

A. Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel. The doctrine of equitable estoppel provides that when a creditor is apprised of the facts and misrepresents those facts to a debtor who is ignorant of the true facts, with the intention that the debtor act on the representation or in a way that would lead the debtor to believe his or her reliance was intended by the creditor, and the debtor relies on the creditor's misstatement or conduct, the creditor is estopped to deny that the facts are other than as represented (Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117-118, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 ; San Diego Mun. Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-923, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467).

[AND/OR]

B. Party Estopped From Contradicting Prior Conduct Relied on by Other Party. [See § 166.106, Paragraph A.]

[CONTINUE]

C. Equitable Estoppel Is Not Applicable to Maker Who Knew True Facts and Suffered No Detriment. The doctrine of equitable estoppel does not apply to prevent a payee from collecting the full amount it is owed when the maker knows or should know the true amount owing[, for instance, when the amount in dispute relates to a prepayment charge provision shown clearly on the face of the note], and has not suffered any detriment by the time the payee notifies him or her of the correct amount owing (Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 118, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that the doctrine of equitable estoppel does not bar a payee from collecting the full balance owing on a note after the payee's incorrect statement of the final balance owing when the maker was, or should have been, aware of the true balance and suffered no detriment [see Evid. Code § 623].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that equitable estoppel does not apply.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 166.106 may be used to oppose those in this form when the maker did not know the true facts and relied, to his or her detriment, on the payee's statement. The points and authorities in §§ 166.100 -166.102 address related issues of tender and objections to tender.

For additional points and authorities addressing other related issues in the context of notes secured by deed of trust, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel

The facts and procedural background of Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 , are discussed in § 166.101[3][b]. Concerning plaintiff's contention that defendant was equitably estopped from relying on the prepayment charge as a basis for instituting foreclosure proceedings, the court of appeal noted that the doctrine of equitable estoppel is founded on concepts of equity and fair dealing, and provides that a person may not deny the existence of a state of facts if he or she has intentionally led another to believe a particular circumstance to be true and to rely on that belief to his or her detriment (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117) . There are four elements that must be present in order for the doctrine to apply: (1) the party to be estopped must be apprised of the facts; (2) the party to be estopped must intend that his or her conduct be acted on, or must so act that the party asserting estoppel has the right to believe it was so intended; (3) the other party must be ignorant of the true state of the facts; and (4) the party asserting estoppel must rely on the other party's conduct to his or her detriment (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 117-118) .

San Diego Mun. Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467 , is discussed in § 166.106[3][a].

[b] Equitable Estoppel Is Not Applicable to Maker Who Knew True Facts and Suffered No Detriment

The facts and procedural background of Sanguansak v. Myers (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 223 Cal. Rptr. 490 , are discussed in § 166.101[3][b]. The portion of the opinion discussing the basis and elements of the doctrine of equitable estoppel is set forth under § 166.103[3][a]. Considering the application of the doctrine to the facts before it, the court of appeal said it was clear that plaintiff was not "ignorant of the true state of the facts." The attorney-in-fact, acting on behalf of plaintiff, executed the note with the advice of legal counsel, and made payment. The terms of the prepayment penalty were clearly set forth in the promissory note. Thus, plaintiff could not claim to be ignorant of the prepayment penalty. In addition, plaintiff had not suffered any detriment when the collection agent sent the correct information to the attorney-in-fact. The obligation could have been satisfied at that time by the payment of the same amount that was properly due when the attorney-in-fact tendered payment at the collection agent's office. Thus, the court concluded, defendant was not equitably estopped from relying on this debt as the basis for instituting foreclosure proceedings (178 Cal. App. 3d 110, 118) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel

Although holding the doctrine of equitable estoppel inapplicable, the court of appeal in Hair v. State of California (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 , affirmed a judgment for the State of California, saying that the elements of the doctrine were: (1) the party to be estopped must be apprised of the true facts; (2) that party must intend that his or her conduct be acted on, or must act so that the party asserting the estoppel had a right to believe that was the intent; (3) the party asserting the estoppel must be ignorant of the true facts; and (4) that party must rely on the conduct or statement to his or her injury. If any one of the elements is missing, there is no estoppel (2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 328) . The case was brought by the assignee of the purchaser of a winning lottery ticket. The ticket was purchased by plaintiff's spouse, who did not rely on an outdated sign where the ticket was purchased stating that the payout would be over 10 years. Because there was no reliance, the regular 18-year payout mandated by the lottery rule actually in effect governed (2 Cal. App. 4th 321, 329) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.104

§ 166.104 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument--No Signature [Com. Code § 3401]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE ON THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE HIS/HER SIGNATURE IS NOT ON THE INSTRUMENT.

A. No Liability Without Signature. [See § 166.90, Paragraph A.]

B. Undisclosed Principal Not Liable. An undisclosed principal is not liable on an instrument because each party who takes a negotiable instrument makes a contract with the parties who appear on the face of the instrument to be bound for its payment; a person chargeable on an instrument must be disclosed by name on the instrument itself (Pratt v. Hopper (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 291, 294, 55 P.2d 517).

C. Language Purporting to Include Other Obligors Not Controlling. An instrument that contains language purporting to include other obligors does not extend the obligation beyond the actual signer of instrument (Williams v. Silverstein (1931) 213 Cal. 269, 276, 2 P.2d 165).

[Optional] D. Unauthorized Signature Ineffective/Liability Limited to Parties Taking or Paying In Good Faith. Unless otherwise provided by Division 3 or 4 (Commercial Code Section 3101 et seq.), an unauthorized signature is ineffective except as the signature of the unauthorized signer in favor of a person who in good faith pays the instrument or takes it for value (Com. Code § 3403(a)).

[Optional] E. Ratification of Unauthorized Signature/Mere Silence Does Not Constitute Ratification. An unauthorized signature may be ratified for all purposes of Division 3 (Commercial Code Section 3101 et seq.) (Com. Code § 3403(a)). However, mere silence of a party does not constitute ratification (California Bank v. Sayre (1890) 85 Cal. 102, 105, 24 P. 713).

[This form may be combined, when appropriate, with a contention that a signature was not placed on the instrument (see, e.g., § 166.107).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a party is liable on an instrument, on the ground that that party's signature is not on the instrument [see Com. Code § 3401].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. For example, if the client is an undisclosed principal, counsel should discuss the fact that the client did not sign the note.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a party is not liable because he or she did not sign the instrument.

[b] Liability on Underlying Obligation

Notwithstanding Com. Code § 3401(a), a party who does not sign an instrument may still be liable on the original obligation for which the instrument was given, or liable based on other facts and circumstances relating to the same transaction [Potts v. First City Bank (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 341, 344, 86 Cal. Rptr. 552 ; McClung v. Saito (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 143, 151, 84 Cal. Rptr. 44] . The law distinguishes between an action on a promissory note and an action to recover the consideration given for the note [McClung v. Saito (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 143, 151, 84 Cal. Rptr. 44] .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.90.

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to issues regarding the liability of an undisclosed principal generally, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Principal Not Liable

In Pratt v. Hopper (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 291, 55 P.2d 517 , an individual signed a promissory note on behalf of undisclosed principals with whom he conducted related real estate transactions. In an action by the payee of the note against the signer and the undisclosed principals, the trial court sustained demurrers of the undisclosed principals, and the payee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that an undisclosed principal on a negotiable instrument is not liable because of the character of the instrument. When a negotiable instrument is executed by an agent without sufficiently indicating on its face who the principal is, parol evidence cannot be introduced to charge the principal, although the agent executed the instrument as an agent. This is an exception to the general contract rule holding an undisclosed principal liable, because each party who takes a negotiable instrument makes a contract with the parties who appear on its face to be bound for its payment. In suits on negotiable instruments, no evidence is admissible to charge any person as principal unless that name is in some way disclosed on the instrument itself (12 Cal. App. 2d 291, 293-294) . Regardless of the nature of the cause of action, an attempt to hold an undisclosed principal to a negotiable instrument must fail (interpreting former Civ. Code § 3099, now see Com. Code § 3401(a)) (12 Cal. App. 2d 291, 297) .

[b] Language Purporting to Include Other Obligors Not Controlling

The facts and procedural background of Williams v. Silverstein (1931) 213 Cal. 269, 2 P.2d 165 , are discussed in § 166.21[3][a]. In Williams, the Supreme Court held that a separate agreement does not render a related note nonnegotiable if the note contains an absolute and unconditional promise to pay at a certain time, and together with the agreement does not evidence an intention to make the payment dependent on any contingency (213 Cal. 269, 275) . The issues in Williams primarily concerned the parties' obligation on a note with regard to the locations of the various signatures. The note included the clause "we promise to pay," and was signed by one maker, whose signature was followed by two blank lines. Two additional signatures were placed on the back of the note. The holder of the note brought an action against all the signers as makers of the note. The Court upheld the appellate court ruling that the signatures on the back of the note rendered the signers endorsers and not original makers or guarantors (213 Cal. 269, 271) . The mere fact that the notes contained the words "we promise to pay" had no significance, even though signed by only one maker. The words "we promise to pay" cannot be held to include endorsers or other parties whose names are not signed as makers (213 Cal. 269, 276) .

[c] Ratification of Unauthorized Signature/Mere Silence Does Not Constitute Ratification

In California Bank v. Sayre (1890) 85 Cal. 102, 24 P. 713 , a person discovered that her name had been forged on a promissory note, and immediately notified the payee's agent of the forgery. The agent told her that the note had been deposited with the principal as collateral. The person whose name was forged did nothing further, and the payee brought an action against her. In affirming the trial court's judgment against the payee, the Supreme Court held that mere silence does not amount to a ratification (85 Cal. 102, 104-105) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Liability Without Signature

In Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. First Nat. Finance (9th Cir. 1978) 587 F.2d 1009 , the federal court of appeals affirmed the granting of summary judgments in favor of the holder of certain promissory notes. The notes were signed by an individual as president of a corporation, and the funds obtained in exchange for the notes were transferred to a different corporation. The court rejected the makers' contention that they were exonerated because the primary obligor was the corporation to which the funds were transferred, and that corporation was dismissed from the suit. A person whose name does not appear on an instrument is not a party to it (587 F.2d 1009, 1013) .

[b] Undisclosed Principal Not Liable

In First Western Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657 , an action to recover on a corporate promissory note, the court of appeal affirmed the sustaining of a demurrer by an officer of the corporation who was neither an obligor nor a signing officer. Under former Com. Code § 3401(1) [now see Com. Code § 3401(a)], no person is liable on an instrument unless that person's signature appears on it (267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 913-914) .

In Lady v. Thomas (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 688, 102 P.2d 396 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying relief against an undisclosed principal of a promissory note secured by a trust deed. A suit may not be maintained on a promissory note against an undisclosed principal whose signature does not appear on the note, unless the note is signed by use of the trade or other assumed name of the undisclosed principal (interpreting former Civ. Code § 3099, now see Com. Code § 3401(a)) (38 Cal. App. 2d 688, 689-690) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.105

§ 166.105 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable on Instrument in Capacity in Which Party Signed--Party Is Accommodation Party Although Did Not Sign Expressly in That Capacity [Com. Code § 3419(a), (c)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

_____ [Specify party opposing liability, e.g., DEFENDANT] IS NOT LIABLE ON THE _____ [specify instrument, e.g., NOTE] AS _____ [specify, e.g., A MAKER] BECAUSE HE/SHE IS IN FACT _____ [specify, e.g., AN ACCOMMODATION PARTY] TO THAT INSTRUMENT. HE/SHE SIGNED THE _____ [specify instrument, e.g., NOTE] FOR THE PURPOSE OF INCURRING LIABILITY ON THE INSTRUMENT WITHOUT BEING A DIRECT BENEFICIARY OF THE VALUE GIVEN FOR THE INSTRUMENT[, AND _____ (specify, e.g., PAROL EVIDENCE IS ADMISSIBLE TO SUPPORT THE ACCOMMODATION CHARACTER OF HIS/HER SIGNATURE BECAUSE THE ACTION IS BETWEEN THE PARTIES TO THE INSTRUMENT)].

A. Accommodation Party Signs Instrument to Incur Liability. If an instrument is issued for value given for the benefit of a party to the instrument ("accommodated party") and another party to the instrument ("accommodation party") signs the instrument for the purpose of incurring liability on the instrument without being a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument, the instrument is signed by the accommodation party "for accommodation" (Com. Code § 3419(a)).

[Optional] B. Presumption of Accommodation Party. A person signing an instrument is presumed to be an accommodation party (Com. Code § 3419(c); see Com. Code § 1206 (presumption affects burden of producing evidence)). A party challenging accommodation-party status must rebut the presumption by producing evidence that the signer was in fact a direct beneficiary of the value given for the instrument (Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-419 (1990)).

[Optional] C. Notice That Instrument Is Signed for Accommodation. There is notice that the instrument is signed for accommodation if the signature is an anomalous endorsement or is accompanied by words indicating that the signer is acting as surety or guarantor with regard to the obligation of another party to the instrument (Com. Code § 3419(c)).

[Optional] D. Discharge of Accommodation Party. An accommodation party is discharged under Commercial Code Section 3605(c), (d), or (e) if the person entitled to enforce the instrument knows of the accommodation or has notice under Commercial Code Section 3419(c) that the instrument was signed for accommodation (Com. Code § 3605(h)).

[Optional] E. Action Between Parties. As between the parties, parol evidence is admissible to show that the maker of a note is, in fact, an accommodation maker (Brown v. Volz (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799, 204 P.2d 110 (construing prior law)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a party is liable on an instrument in the capacity in which that party signed, if the party did not expressly sign in an accommodation capacity but may nevertheless claim that status [see Com. Code § 3419].

The contention would likely arise either in an action against the purported accommodation party charging that party as a maker to the instrument [see, e.g., Com. Code § 3419(b)] or in an action between the parties, in which the purported accommodation party would wish to assert rights against another party [see, e.g., Brown v. Volz (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 204 P.2d 110 (construing prior law; discussed in § 166.105[3][a])]. Consequently, this contention would most likely be made by the person purporting to be an accommodation party.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the facts regarding the character of the signature. If parol evidence is sought to be introduced, counsel should show that the action is of a type in which parol evidence is admissible, for example, an action between the parties.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a party is an accommodation party to the instrument.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion regarding accommodation makers generally, see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 13.10 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.91.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Between Parties

In Brown v. Volz (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 204 P.2d 110 (construing prior law), the vendors of real property required a cosigner on the promissory note for the balance due, because of the purchaser's age and financial condition.

The purchaser obtained the cosignature of a friend on the note, who was also named in the deed as joint tenant. The purchaser of the property occupied the property herself, and was solely responsible for the payments on the note. After unsuccessfully requesting the cosigner to execute a quit claim deed to the property, she brought an action to quiet title to the property. The trial court found that plaintiff had included the cosigner's name on the deed under the mistaken impression that the cosigner was subject to a deficiency obligation on default of the note. The court ordered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that, as between the parties, parol evidence is admissible to show that the maker of a note is, in fact, an accommodation maker (90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799) . Under the facts, it was clear that the sole purpose and intent of defendant in signing the promissory note and trust deed was the loan of her name and credit to make the transaction acceptable to the sellers (construing former Civ. Code § 3110; now see Com. Code § 3419(a)). She wanted to further the transactions, not by paying any portion of the purchase price of the property, or any expenses incurred or to be incurred therewith, or by making the monthly payments on the note, all of which were to be paid by plaintiff, but by merely lending her name and credit to that of plaintiff (90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 798) . As between the parties, the status of defendant on the note was that of an accommodation maker. Under former Civ. Code § 3110, which required that the accommodation party not take for value, the court noted that the application of the rule was limited to those cases in which there is no consideration passing [now see Com. Code § 3419(a), (b)] (90 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Accommodation Party Signs Instrument to Incur Liability

In Quality Wash Group v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 , the purchaser of a car wash business located on leased property sued the sellers for breach of contract and negligent misrepresentation after improvements and fixtures were found to encroach on adjoining property. The purchaser also sought to hold the sellers liable as joint and several co-obligors on a promissory note that the purchasers had assumed from the sellers as part of the purchase price of the car wash and eventually paid off in settlement of a collection action brought by the holders of the note against the seller and purchaser. The purchaser also cross-complained against the seller seeking to collect on a separate promissory noted executed by the purchaser in favor of the seller, also as part of the purchase price of the car wash. The superior court entered judgment for the sellers.

The appellate court found that as guarantors of the purchaser's obligation to pay the note assumed by the purchasers, the sellers were exonerated by the purchaser's satisfaction of that obligation under Civ. Code § 2839. Correspondingly, the court found that the purchaser, as principal obligor under the note, had no right to seek reimbursement or contribution from the sellers as guarantors (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687) . The court also found that as guarantors of the note, the sellers came within the definition of "accommodation party" under Com. Code § 3419(a).

Having assumed the note as part of the purchase price of the car wash, the purchaser was the direct beneficiary of the value given for the note and, therefore, was the "accommodated party" under Com. Code § 3419(a) (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702) . The court held that as an accommodated party to the note who paid the note, the purchaser had no right of recourse against and was not entitled to contribution from the sellers, who were accommodation parties under the note (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702 ; see § 166.110).

179 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.106

§ 166.106 Opposing Contention That Maker of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Payee Equitably Estopped to Assert Maker's Liability [Evid. Code § 623]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], THE MAKER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS NOT LIABLE ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF _____ [name] DELIBERATELY LED DEFENDANT TO BELIEVE HIS/HER OBLIGATION HAD BEEN EXTINGUISHED, AND CAUSED DEFENDANT TO RELY ON THAT BELIEF, AND IS THEREFORE EQUITABLY ESTOPPED FROM CONTRADICTING THAT ASSERTION.

A. Party Estopped From Contradicting Prior Conduct Relied on by Other Party. Whenever a party has, by that party's own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true and to act on that belief, that party is not, in any litigation arising out of that statement or conduct, permitted to contradict it (Evid. Code § 623).

B. Payee's Assertion to Maker That Obligation Was Extinguished Defeats Right to Recover. A payee on a promissory note who leads a maker to believe that the maker's obligation under the instrument has been extinguished is equitably estopped from recovering from the maker on the note (San Diego Mun. Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-925, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a maker of a note is liable on the instrument, on the ground that the payee is estopped from asserting the maker's liability [see Evid. Code § 623].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss facts regarding the maker's assertions to the payee to the effect that the note was paid, and show that the maker relied on the payee's conduct.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the payee is estopped from asserting the maker's liability.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.103.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payee's Assertion to Maker That Obligation Was Extinguished Defeats Right to Recover

In San Diego Mun. Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 222 Cal. Rptr. 467 , a person wishing to buy an automobile obtained a loan from a credit union, for which he signed a promissory note and security agreement. Shortly thereafter, he sold the automobile, and brought the buyer to the payee's office. An employee of the payee accepted the buyer's check for the balance of the note, and induced the note's maker to sign over documents of title to the buyer. The employee stamped the note and security agreement "Paid." The buyer sold the automobile to a third party. The buyer's check to the payee was returned for insufficient funds. The payee declared the balance due, and presented the note's maker with an "extension agreement" to pay interest only, which the maker signed. The payee brought an action against the note's maker to recover damages for the balance due. The maker asserted the affirmative defenses of negligence and equitable estoppel. The trial court found in the maker's favor on the ground of equitable estoppel, and the payee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that, under Evid. Code § 623, whenever a party has, by that party's own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true and to act on that belief, that party is not, in any litigation arising out of that statement or conduct, permitted to contradict it (176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 922-923) . The elements of estoppel are (1) a representation or concealment of material facts (2) made with knowledge, actual or virtual, of the facts (3) to a party ignorant, actually and permissibly, of the truth (4) with the intent, actual or virtual, that the latter act on it (5) and the party must have been induced to act on it. In the instant case, the payee's employee told the maker of the note to sign off the pink slip. He relinquished both title to and possession of the automobile, based on the payee's representations, to his detriment (176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 923) . The court rejected the payee's contention that the extension agreement was enforceable on the ground that it was without consideration (176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 924) . The trial court's ruling on equitable estoppel was not based on any notice of express agreement to accept the buyer's check as payment, nor any contention that the payee was bound because it marked the note "Paid." Rather, the estoppel arose because the payee led the maker to believe it was accepting the buyer's check as payment of his debt, and instructed him that he could safely part with title to and possession of the automobile (176 Cal. App. 3d 919, 924-925) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Estopped From Contradicting Prior Conduct Relied on by Other Party

The court of appeal in Alling v. Universal Manufacturing Corp. (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 , reversed a judgment in favor of a licensor/owner of patents and related technology and its successor corporation for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the licensing agreement. Defendant, a manufacturer, had purchased the exclusive licensee. The primary cause of action was for breach of that purchase agreement. When plaintiffs sought to introduce claims related to the licensing agreement, plaintiffs represented to the court that the license agreement was not being sued on in the action and that claims of the licensor/owner and its successor were based entirely on the purchase agreement. Again, in response to defendant's motion for summary judgment in which defendant contended that any litigation under the license agreement was barred by its arbitration clause, plaintiffs told the court that it was the purchase agreement that was the subject of the alleged breach. Nevertheless, the trial court permitted the claims for breach of the covenant in the licensing agreement to go to the jury. In reversing, the court of appeal set forth Evid. Code § 623, and said the principle is well established that once a party has gained an advantage on the basis of specific representations to the trial court, it is not thereafter permitted to disavow its previous representations (5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1442) . Here, plaintiffs' actions and statements clearly lead both the court and defendant to believe they were waiving any claims they might have under the licensing agreements (5 Cal. App. 4th 1412, 1443) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.107

§ 166.107 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable as Endorser of Promissory Note--Signature Not Placed on Instrument or Attached Document [Com. Code § 3204(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a party whose signature is not on an instrument is not liable on it (see, e.g., § 166.104).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE AS AN ENDORSER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., HE/SHE DID NOT SIGN HIS/HER NAME ON THE INSTRUMENT ITSELF OR ON A DOCUMENT AFFIXED TO IT].

A. Endorsement Must Be on Instrument or Paper Affixed to Instrument. [See § 166.51, Paragraph B.].

B. Liability of Endorser Attaches Only if Signature Is Properly Placed. An endorsement must be written on the instrument itself or on a paper attached or annexed to the instrument in order to effectively charge one with the liability of an endorser, or give rights of an endorsee (Lopez v. Puzina (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 712, 49 Cal. Rptr. 122).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose the contention that a purported endorser of a promissory note is liable on the note, on the ground that the signature of the party sought to be charged was not placed on the document itself, nor on an affixed document [see Com. Code § 3204(a)]. The Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorse" [see Com. Code § 3204], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorse." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should show that the signature was absent from the document, and, if appropriate, that the document on which the signature was placed was not affixed to the note.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not liable on the instrument as an endorser.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities opposing the contention that an instrument was not negotiated because it was not endorsed, see § 166.51.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.96.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Endorser Attaches Only if Signature Is Properly Placed

In Lopez v. Puzina (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 49 Cal. Rptr. 122 , the payee of a promissory note assigned the note without recourse to a transferee, who tendered the note, along with the deed of trust securing it, to the ultimate holders. As evidence of the transaction, the persons transferring the note signed an "Assignment of Deed of Trust," which purported to "endorse, assign, and transfer" the deed of trust and the underlying note. The assignment was not attached to the note. After maturity of the note, the holders presented it to the makers, and on their failure to pay brought suit against the makers and their transferors (the persons who signed the assignment). The trial court granted the transferors' motion for nonsuit, and the holders appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the transferors of the note were not endorsers because their signatures were not on the instrument, or a document affixed to it, as required by former Com. Code § 3202 [now see Com. Code § 3204]. In order to hold defendants liable on the promissory note as endorsers, the holders were required to establish that defendants endorsed the note. The endorsement must be written on the instrument itself or on a paper attached to it [see former Civ. Code § 3112, now see Com. Code § 3204(a)] (239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 712) . A signature on a separate agreement cannot be considered an endorsement. Because defendants did not effectively endorse the note, they were, by the terms of the separate agreement, merely assignors of the note. Consequently, they were not liable on the note on the obligor's failure to pay, because an assignor of a promissory note does not by the mere fact of assignment warrant that the obligor is solvent or that the assignor will perform the obligor's obligations (239 Cal. App. 2d 708, 714-715) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.108

§ 166.108 Opposing Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--No Dishonor, Presentment, and/or Notice of Dishonor [Com. Code §§ 3415(a), (c), 3501(b)(3), 3502(a)(1), (2), 3503]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name], AN/THE ENDORSER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, IS NOT LIABLE ON THAT INSTRUMENT BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE HOLDER FAILED TO PROVIDE NOTICE OF DISHONOR AS REQUIRED].

A. Endorser's Liability/Dishonor Required. If an instrument is dishonored, an endorser is obliged to pay the amount due on the instrument according to the terms of the instrument at the time it was endorsed or, if the endorser endorsed an incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to the extent stated in Commercial Code Sections 3115 and 3407 (Com. Code § 3415(a)).

[EITHER, if note is payable on demand]

B. Presentment Required. For notes payable on demand, dishonor occurs if presentment is duly made to the maker and the note is not paid on the day of presentment (Com. Code § 3502(a)(1)).

[OR, if note is payable at definite time and at or through a bank]

B. Presentment Required. For notes not payable on demand and payable at or through a bank, dishonor occurs if presentment is duly made and the note is not paid on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later (Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)).

[OR, if note is payable at definite time and terms of note require presentment]

B. Presentment Required. For notes not payable on demand and the notes terms require presentment, dishonor occurs if presentment is duly made and the note is not paid on the day it becomes payable or the day of presentment, whichever is later (Com. Code § 3502(a)(2)).

[CONTINUE]

C. Notice of Dishonor Required. An endorser's obligation to pay the required amount is not enforceable unless (1) the endorser is given notice of the instrument's dishonor that complies with Commercial Code Section 3503 or (2) notice of dishonor is excused under Commercial Code Section 3504(b) (Com. Code § 3503(a); see Com. Code § 3415(c) (failure to give notice of dishonor when required discharges endorser's liability)).

[Optional] D. Return for Lack of Endorsement Will Not Dishonor Instrument. Without dishonoring the instrument, the party to whom presentment is made may return the instrument for lack of a necessary endorsement (Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)(A)).

[Optional] E. Refusing Payment or Acceptance Will Not Dishonor Instrument Under Certain Circumstances. Without dishonoring the instrument, the party to whom presentment is made may refuse payment or acceptance for failure of the presentment to comply with the terms of the instrument, an agreement of the parties, or other applicable law or rule (Com. Code § 3501(b)(3)(B)).

[Optional] F. Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Excused if Corporate Director-Endorser Had Knowledge of Corporate Payee's Affairs. The fact that an endorser on a note of a corporation is also a director, with full knowledge of the corporate affairs, does not excuse the lack of notice of presentment and dishonor (Keiser v. Butte Creek Consol. D. Co. (1920) 48 Cal. App. 38, 39-40, 191 P. 552).

[Optional] G. Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Waived Because Waiver Must Be Clear and Unequivocal. Statements constituting a waiver of presentment and notice of dishonor must be clear and unequivocal (Keiser v. Butte Creek Consol. D. Co. (1920) 48 Cal. App. 38, 40-41, 191 P. 552).

[Optional] H. Presentment Not Excused if Insufficient Attempt to Locate Maker. Presentment for payment is not excused by virtue of the inability to locate the maker, unless the maker has no place of business or residence within the state, or the maker's place of business or residence cannot be ascertained with reasonable diligence (Haber v. Brown (1894) 101 Cal. 445, 451, 35 P. 1035).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an endorser of a promissory note is liable on the note, on the ground that there was no dishonor, presentment (since dishonor of a note likely requires presentment), notice of dishonor, or any of the above [see Com. Code §§ 3415 (endorser's obligation to pay on notice of dishonor), 3501 (requirements of presentment), 3502 (when dishonor occurs), 3503 (notice of dishonor), 3505 (evidence of dishonor and of any notice of dishonor)]. The Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorser" [see Com. Code § 3415], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorser." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Although the authority in this form is applied in the context of a promissory note, counsel should be aware that, as applied to endorsements on checks and postal money orders, Com. Code §§ 3414, 3415, and 3503 no longer govern transactions between banks or between a depositary bank and its customer. They have been superseded by 12 C.F.R. § 229.35 to the extent they are inconsistent with that regulation [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.35; 12 C.F.R. § 229, app. E, Commentary to § 229.35; see also 12 U.S.C. § 4007(b) (authority for regulations that supersede Com. Code)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that the note's holder failed to fulfill the requirements of presentment, or notice of dishonor, or both. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the holder's excuse for failure to present the note is insufficient for lack of due diligence in locating the maker.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not liable on the instrument as an endorser.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 166.96 or 166.97.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Excused if Corporate Director-Endorser Had Knowledge of Corporate Payee's Affairs

Keiser v. Butte Creek Consol. D. Co. (1920) 48 Cal. App. 38, 191 P. 552 , is discussed under § 166.108[3][b].

[b] Presentment and Notice of Dishonor Not Waived Because Waiver Must Be Clear and Unequivocal

In Keiser v. Butte Creek Consol. D. Co. (1920) 48 Cal. App. 38, 191 P. 552 , several directors and an officer of a corporate payee on a promissory note endorsed the note after maturity in favor of another director of the corporation. The endorsee brought an action on the note against the endorsers without first making a presentment to the maker, nor giving notice of dishonor. The endorsee contended that presentment and notice were unnecessary because they were waived by virtue of a statement made by one of the endorsers. Allegedly, the endorser said to the endorsee in the presence of the other endorsers and without objection from them, "You are taking no risk whatever; we are all responsible on that note--on those notes." Contradictory evidence was introduced refuting the substance of the statement. The trial court found in favor of the endorsers on grounds of lack of presentment and notice, and the endorsee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a waiver of presentment and notice of dishonor requires strict proof, and clear and unequivocal statements (48 Cal. App. 38, 40-41) . Preliminarily, the court rejected the endorsee's contention that no presentment or notice was required because at all times the endorsers had full knowledge of the fact that the corporation had not satisfied its obligations to the endorsee. The fact that an endorser on a note of a corporation is also a director, with full knowledge of the corporate affairs, does not excuse the lack of notice of presentment and dishonor (48 Cal. App. 38, 39-40) . With regard to whether those requirements were waived, even if the words, "we are all responsible," were used by the endorser, that statement is of insufficient positive scope to constitute a waiver of the presentment and notice of dishonor. An endorser's promise to pay, made after maturity with full knowledge of the payee's neglect to make demand and give notice, must be established by clear and distinct evidence (48 Cal. App. 38, 40-41) .

[c] Presentment Not Excused if Insufficient Attempt to Locate Maker

In Haber v. Brown (1894) 101 Cal. 445, 35 P. 1035 , an action for foreclosure of a mortgage and deficiency judgment on the underlying promissory note, the payee endorsed the note, then assigned it to the ultimate holder. The holder failed to make presentment to the maker before bringing suit against the endorser. The holder alleged that she unsuccessfully attempted to locate the maker in the city in which the note was dated, and presentment was thereby excused. The trial court found in the holder's favor, and the endorser appealed.

The Supreme Court remanded the matter for modification. With regard to the issue of presentment, the Court found that presentment was not excused under the facts of the case by virtue of the holder's inability to locate the maker (101 Cal. 445, 451-452) . The note was not by its terms payable in the city in which the maker dated it. A note not payable at any particular place is payable and should be presented for payment at the residence or place of business of the maker, or wherever the maker may be found, at the option of the presentor. Presentment for payment is excused only when the maker has no place of business or residence within the state, or when those addresses cannot be ascertained with reasonable diligence. Merely looking for the payor at the place where the instrument is dated is not of itself due diligence. Presentment must be shown to have been made at the promisor's last-known place of residence or business; and if the endorsee knew of any subsequent address, the endorsee must make demand there. Consequently, the holder had no sufficient excuse for nonpresentment (101 Cal. 445, 451) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Notice of Dishonor Required

In Navajo County Bank v. Dolson (1912) 163 Cal. 485, 126 P. 153 , the Supreme Court affirmed judgment in favor of the note's endorser, holding that notice of dishonor or nonpayment is essential to an endorser's liability, in the absence of waiver (which was not an issue under the facts) (163 Cal. 485, 488) .

In Farmers' & Mech. Bk. v. Colby (1883) 64 Cal. 352, 28 P. 118 , the note's holder contended that individuals who signed the face of the note, and designated themselves thereon as officers of a particular corporation, and who also endorsed the note, were makers of the note, and therefore not entitled to notice of dishonor before incurring liability. The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the endorsers, finding that the form of their signatures evidenced an intent to bind only the corporation as maker, and holding that endorsers are not liable in the absence of notice of the maker's failure to pay (64 Cal. 352, 353-354) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.109

§ 166.109 Opposing Contention That Endorser of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Endorsement Disclaims Liability [Com. Code § 3415(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE AS AN ENDORSER OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE HE/SHE SIGNED THE NOTE WITHOUT RECOURSE.

A. Endorser Not Liable Under Qualified Endorsement. If an endorsement states that it is made "without recourse" or otherwise disclaims the endorser's liability, the endorser is not liable under Commercial Code Section 3415(a) to pay the amount due on the instrument (Com. Code § 3415(b); see Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 799, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737).

[Optional] B. Manifested Intent Not to Assume Responsibility Constitutes Qualified Endorsement. Words clearly indicating the endorser's intent not to assume responsibility for payment of the note on maturity, but rather to become no more than a mere assignor of the title to the instrument, constitute an endorsement without recourse (Mathes v. Bangs (1932) 128 Cal. App. 171, 172-173, 16 P.2d 749).

[Optional] C. Transfer of Right, Title, and Interest Is Equivalent to Endorsement Without Recourse. The transfer and assignment of the endorser's right, title, and interest in a promissory note is the equivalent of an endorsement without recourse, and constitutes a qualified endorsement (Kern v. Henry (1934) 138 Cal. App. 46, 49-51, 31 P.2d 454).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that an endorser of a promissory note is liable on the note, on the ground that the endorsement was "without recourse," either expressly or impliedly [see Com. Code § 3415(b) (endorser not liable if endorsement is made "without recourse" or otherwise disclaims liability)]. The Commercial Code uses the spelling "indorser" [see Com. Code § 3415], but this chapter uses the more commonly accepted spelling "endorser." Counsel may prefer to use the former spelling when quoting the code in a memorandum.

Note also that Com. Code § 3415 has been superseded by 12 C.F.R. § 229.35 with regard to endorsement of checks in the context of interbank transactions or between a depositary bank and its customer [12 C.F.R. § 229.35; 12 C.F.R. § 229, app. E, Commentary to § 229.35; see 12 U.S.C. § 4007(b) (authority for regulations that supersede Commercial Code)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should show that the endorsement contains the language "without recourse," or similar words to that effect.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not liable on the instrument as an endorser.

[b] Effect of Endorsement Without Recourse

An endorsement "without recourse" limits the endorser's liability on the note in that it simply transfers the endorser's rights in the instrument. The endorser does not thereby contract to perform in any way. However, it reduces, rather than completely negates, the endorser's warranty liability, which is limited to defenses known to the endorser [see Hart & Willier, Negotiable Instruments Under the Uniform Commercial Code, § 8.01 (Matthew Bender)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.96.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Endorser Not Liable Under Qualified Endorsement

In Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 , the perpetrators of a construction fraud obtained a maker's signature on a promissory note and trust deed under false pretenses. After fraudulently assuring the makers that the promissory note had been paid, they sold the note at a discount. The party endorsing the note did so "without recourse." In an action brought by the makers to cancel the note, and for related relief, the trial court found in the maker's favor and against the note's endorsee. The endorsee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the endorsee's claim to damages on the theory of unjust enrichment, basing its reasoning on the liability limitations of an endorser of a qualified endorsement. An endorsement transfers title to the instrument, and subjects the endorser to a contractual liability. A note endorsed "without recourse" is a qualified endorsement, by which an endorser warrants to have no knowledge of any fact that would render the instrument valueless, but does not warrant that the obligor will pay. Even when the note is executed under terms of an agreement, one who takes by that type of endorsement has no recourse against the endorser if the maker fails to pay. It therefore follows that the endorsee should have no greater right to a lien on benefits that may revert to the payee under the contract pursuant to which the note was executed (189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 799) .

[b] Manifested Intent Not to Assume Responsibility Constitutes Qualified Endorsement

In Mathes v. Bangs (1932) 128 Cal. App. 171, 16 P.2d 749 , the payee of a promissory note signed an endorsement that stated, "For value received, I hereby assign to (endorsee) all of my right, title and interest in and to the within note, together with all right accrued or to accrue under deed of trust securing same, so far as the same relates to this note." In an action by the holder against the maker and endorser of the note, the trial court refused to allow the admission of evidence regarding the endorser's purported oral promise to guarantee the note. The trial court entered a default judgment against the maker, but found in the endorser's favor, on the ground that her liability was limited by the qualified endorsement. The holder appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the use of restrictive phraseology constitutes a qualified endorsement. A qualified endorsement may be made by adding to the endorser's signature the words "without recourse," or any words of similar import. An endorsement evidencing an intent by the signer not to assume responsibility for payment, and to become no more than a mere assignor of the title to the instrument, is the equivalent of an endorsement "without recourse." Consequently, evidence tending to show that the endorser verbally guaranteed payment was inadmissible (128 Cal. App. 171, 172-173) .

[c] Transfer of Right, Title, and Interest Is Equivalent to Endorsement Without Recourse

In Kern v. Henry (1934) 138 Cal. App. 46, 31 P.2d 454 , the vendees of real property endorsed a promissory note with the words, "For value received, I hereby transfer, grant and assign to (transferees) all my right, title, and interest in the within note ... without recourse." At the transferees' insistence, the endorsers struck out the words "without recourse," and otherwise executed and delivered the note. In an action by the transferees against the endorsers on the note, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the endorsers, holding that language transferring and assigning all right, title, and interest in a note constitutes a qualified endorsement, even if the endorsers struck out the words "without recourse" before signature (138 Cal. App. 46, 49-51) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer of Right, Title, and Interest Is Equivalent to Endorsement Without Recourse

In Hammond Lumber Co. v. Kearsley (1918) 36 Cal. App. 431, 172 P. 404 , the payees and another individual endorsed the back of a promissory note with the words, "For value received we hereby assign all of our interest in the promissory note. ..." The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the endorsers, holding that a transfer by endorsement of the "right and title" of the payee or endorser to a negotiable note is equivalent to an endorsement "without recourse," and that words similar in meaning have the same effect (36 Cal. App. 431, 432) .

In Gaetani v. Goss-Golden West Sheet Metal (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432 , a purchaser took a promissory note indorsed to him by the noteholder with the words: "assigns and transfers all right, title and interest." The words "without recourse" were not included. The trial court found the language of assignment used was equivalent to "without recourse" language. The court of appeal affirmed. It held that former Com. Code § 3414(1), applicable to this case, preserved the rule under long-standing case law (the Hammond Lumber cases, discussed above) that the words assigning all of one's right, title and interest in a note is equivalent to indorsing it without recourse (84 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 1133) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.110

§ 166.110 Opposing Contention That Accommodation Party of Promissory Note Is Liable on Instrument--Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party [Com. Code § 3419(e)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE AS AN ACCOMMODATION PARTY ON THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS THE ACCOMMODATED PARTY ON THE NOTE.

Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party. An accommodation party who pays the instrument is entitled to reimbursement from the accommodated party and is entitled to enforce the instrument against the accommodated party (Com. Code § 3419(e); see First Nat. Bank v. Reed (1926) 198 Cal. 252, 258-259, 244 P. 368).

Accommodated Party Has No Right of Recourse to or Contribution From Accommodation Party. An accommodated party who pays the instrument has no right of recourse against, and is not entitled to contribution from, an accommodation party (Com. Code § 3419(e); Quality Wash Group v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose the contention that an accommodating party is liable on an instrument, on the ground that the party seeking to recover is the accommodated party [see Com. Code § 3419(e)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the person seeking to recover is the accommodated party on the note.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the party seeking to recover is the accommodated party.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.90.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party

In First Nat. Bank v. Reed (1926) 198 Cal. 252, 244 P. 368 , an action by a bank against a party that had signed a promissory note as an accommodation to the bank, the Supreme Court affirmed judgment against plaintiff, holding that the party for whose accommodation a negotiable note is signed may not sue the accommodation party (198 Cal. 252, 258-259) .

[b] Accommodated Party Has No Right of Recourse to or Contribution From Accommodation Party

Quality Wash Group v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 , is discussed in § 166.105[4][a]. The court of appeals held that the purchaser was the "accommodated party" under Com. Code § 3419(a). As the accommodated party, after paying the note at issue, the purchaser had no right of recourse against and was not entitled to contribution from the accommodation parties under the note pursuant to Com. Code § 3419(e) (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1701-1702) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Reimbursement From and Enforcement of Instrument Against Accommodated Party

In Western H. Lbr. Co. v. Superior F. Mfrs. (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 287, 63 P.2d 828 , two persons endorsed the back of several promissory notes at the payee's request to enable the payee to obtain discounts on the notes from a bank. After the corporate maker's bankruptcy, the payee brought an action against the endorsers, and the court of appeal upheld the trial court's judgment against the payee. An accommodation endorser is not liable to the accommodated party (18 Cal. App. 2d 287, 289) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.111

§ 166.111 Opposing Contention That Party Is Liable as Guarantor of Promissory Note [Civ. Code §§ 2787, 2819]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE AS A GUARANTOR OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., HE/SHE EXECUTED A GENERAL ENDORSEMENT, AND HIS/HER CHARACTER AS ENDORSER CANNOT BE TRANSFORMED TO A GUARANTOR BY REASON OF A PURPORTED ORAL AGREEMENT].

[EITHER]

Oral Agreement Cannot Transform Written General Endorsement Into Guaranty. The written general endorsement on a promissory note is a contract between the parties, and cannot be changed into a guaranty by an oral agreement (Merchants Nat. Bank v. Bentel (1913) 166 Cal. 473, 476, 137 P. 25).

[OR]

A. Original Obligation Altered. A surety is exonerated, except insofar as the surety may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor, without the consent of the surety, the original obligation of the principal is altered in any respect, or the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal, in respect thereto, is in any way impaired or suspended (Civ. Code § 2819; Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161-162, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453).

B. Guarantor Is Surety. The terms "surety" and "guarantor" have the same meaning (Civ. Code § 2787).

[Optional] C. Extension of Time for Definite Time, Without Surety's Consent, Exonerates Surety. An agreement to extend time, without the surety's consent, exonerates a surety if the extension is for a definite period (Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774-775, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231).

[OR]

Contract Not Within Terms of Guaranty. A guarantor is not liable on any contract that is not within the terms of the guaranty (see Ralston-Purina Co. v. Carter (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 378, 26 Cal. Rptr. 690).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a party is liable on a promissory note as a guarantor [see Civ. Code §§ 2787 (guarantor is surety), 2819 (surety exonerated if obligation altered); Com. Code § 3419(d) (obligation of person using words of guaranty)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should discuss the language accompanying the signature, or the circumstances surrounding it. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the instrument itself does not contain language evidencing an intent to create a guaranty.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not liable on the instrument as a guarantor.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.99.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Agreement Cannot Transform Written General Endorsement Into Guaranty

In Merchants Nat. Bank v. Bentel (1913) 166 Cal. 473, 137 P. 25 , the maker of a promissory note paid a portion of the note after it became overdue. At the same time, he endorsed a second note payable to him by merely signing his name on the back of it. He delivered the second note to the payee of the first note. The holder of the second note brought an action on that note, against the endorser, alleging that the endorser intended to guarantee payment of the note in satisfaction of the preexisting debt based on the first note. He also averred that he had made a demand on the maker, and notified the endorser that the note was not paid. The trial court sustained the endorser's demurrer, and the holder appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that an oral agreement to guarantee a note is ineffective to vary the terms of a written general endorsement. Consequently, the extent of the endorser's liability is determined by the instrument itself. A general endorsement renders the endorser liable only on presentment to the maker, accompanied by demand for payment. In doing so, the holder must present the actual instrument to the maker at the time of the demand. In the instant case, inasmuch as the holder did not aver in his complaint that the note was presented to the maker at the time of the demand, or at all, the "presentment" as such was not valid. Consequently, the complaint fails on either a cause of action on the endorsement, or on the alleged guaranty (166 Cal. 473, 476) . (The Court proceeded to reject the holder's cause of action based on the original debt; see discussion in § 166.72[3][b].)

[b] Original Obligation Altered

In Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 , an action on a written document entitled "Unconditional and Absolute Guaranty," the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's finding that the document was a true guaranty, as opposed to a new and primary obligation. Moreover, the guarantor's obligation was exonerated on the guaranty, because under Civ. Code § 2819 a guarantor is released if the original obligation is altered (17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161-162) . Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2922 were amended, codifying as declarative of existing law [Stats 1993, ch. 149, § 3], the rule that if the creditor agrees with the principal debtor to accept a lesser sum in full satisfaction of the obligation, the surety (endorser, accommodation party) is not exonerated, but remains liable to the extent of that lesser sum [Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2922(b)].

[c] Extension of Time for Definite Time, Without Surety's Consent, Exonerates Surety

In Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231 , the holder of a promissory note granted the maker an extension of time for payment, without the guarantor's knowledge or consent. In an action by the holder against the maker and guarantors, the trial court found in the guarantor's favor, on the ground that the time extension exonerated them. The holder appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that an extension of time for payment on a note exonerates the guarantor if it is made without the guarantor's consent, but only if the extension is for a definite period of time (257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774-775) . Inasmuch as the trial court made no findings with regard to whether the extended time period was definite, the case was remanded for the purpose of obtaining those findings (257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 777) .

[d] Contract Not Within Terms of Guaranty

In Ralston-Purina Co. v. Carter (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 26 Cal. Rptr. 690 , the guarantor on a promissory note guaranteed payment for merchandise to be selected by the maker in future commercial transactions with the payee. Subsequently, the note's maker and the payee entered into a contract in which the maker agreed to execute delivery receipts and promissory notes regarding merchandise sold thereunder. In accordance with the contract, the maker signed 20 notes and receipts. In an action brought by the payee against the maker and guarantor to recover the balance due on the notes after default, the trial court found in the payee's favor, and the guarantor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed with regard to the guarantor's liability for items expressly stated in the note, holding that the guarantor's liability of an absolute and unconditional guaranty is fixed when the principal obligation matures. It is not predicated on the exhaustion by the creditor of the creditor's remedies against the principal debtor, or the exhaustion of other security for the debt. It is immaterial whether or not the debtor can pay the debt (210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 380) . The court rejected the guarantor's contention that the terms of the note were altered, and consequently he was released. The alteration was purportedly the maker's receipt of cash from the payee for the maker's personal use. Although a guarantor is released if the original obligation is altered, under Civ. Code § 2819, and a guarantor is not liable on any contract not within the terms of the guaranty, there was no alteration under the facts. The recipient of the cash merely attempted to charge the guarantor with items under the guaranty for which he was not liable, and that attempt did not constitute an alteration (210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 378) . However, although the defendant was found liable on the note in the capacity of a guarantor, the court also found that his obligation did not extend to certain amounts of money given to the maker. Thus, the court modified the judgment with regard to attorney's fees charged to the guarantor, because they were not included within the guaranty (210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 379-380) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Original Obligation Altered

In Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4 , a party had signed a continuing guaranty of indebtedness without knowledge of the effect of the document. The party was found by the trial court not to be liable on a related note because the note had been altered after the party's guaranty, and the guarantor's timely revocation exonerated any further obligation. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that an increase in the rate of interest on an obligation constitutes an alteration within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2819. The court did find that under the facts the guarantor's contract included obligation on a changed rate of interest, but the guarantor was exonerated due to his revocation, in accordance with the guaranty's terms (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240-241) .

In Nissen v. Ehrenpfort (1919) 42 Cal. App. 593, 183 P. 956 , an assignee brought an action against the maker and guarantor of a promissory note that was altered after execution without the guarantor's knowledge. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the guarantor, holding that a guarantor is exonerated, except insofar as the guarantor may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor, without the guarantor's consent, the original obligation of the principal is altered in any regard, or the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal, in regard thereto, are in any way impaired or suspended (42 Cal. App. 593, 595) .

[b] Contract Not Within Terms of Guaranty

In Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 (discussed under § 166.111[3][b]), the court also held that a subsequent compromise agreement between the maker and payee exonerated the guarantor's obligation. A guarantor is not liable on any contract not within the terms of the guaranty (17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.112

§ 166.112 Supporting Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Treble Damages After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE FOR DAMAGES OF TREBLE THE AMOUNT OWING ON THE _____ [CHECK or DRAFT or ORDER] THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION AND A SERVICE CHARGE BECAUSE HE/SHE IS THE MAKER; THE INSTRUMENT WAS DISHONORED BY THE DRAWEE BECAUSE OF _____ [LACK OF FUNDS or LACK OF CREDIT TO PAY or LACK OF AN ACCOUNT WITH THE DRAWEE or A STOP PAYMENT ORDER]; PLAINTIFF, WHO IS THE PAYEE, MADE A WRITTEN DEMAND BY CERTIFIED MAIL FOR THE AMOUNT DUE MORE THAN THIRTY DAYS AGO; THERE IS NO GOOD FAITH DISPUTE ABOUT THE MONEY OWING; AND DEFENDANT HAS FAILED TO PAY.

A. Treble Damages Due. Any person who passes a check on insufficient funds is liable to the payee for the amount of the check, and a service charge in an amount not to exceed $25 for the first check passed on insufficient funds and an amount not to exceed $35 for each subsequent check passed on insufficient funds [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1)]. Furthermore, the person passing such a check is liable to the payee for damages equal to treble the amount of the check if a written demand for payment is made. The person who passed the check has 30 days from the demand to pay the amount of the check, service charge, and costs to mail the written demand. If those amounts are not paid within the 30-day period, the person instead will be liable for the amount of the check, less any partial payments made toward the check or service charge within 30 days of the demand, and damages equal to treble that amount, but not less that $100 nor more than $1,500 [Civ. Code § 1719(a)(2)].

B. Treble Damages Mandatory. Civil Code Section 1719 imposes a mandatory obligation on the trial court to award treble damages when the statutory conditions are met (Civ. Code § 1719(h); see Mughrabi v. Suzuki (1988) 197 Cal.

App. 3d 1212, 1215-1216, 243 Cal. Rptr. 438).

C. Service Charges. Civ. Code § 1719(a) imposes a service charge but provides that a person will not be liable for the service charge if, at any time, he or she presents the payee with written confirmation by his or her financial institution that the check was returned to the payee by the financial institution because of an error on its part. Furthermore, a person will not be liable for the service charge if he or she presents the payee with written confirmation that his or her account had insufficient funds as a result of a delay in the regularly scheduled transfer of, or the posting of, a direct deposit of a social security or government benefit assistance payment (Civ. Code § 1719(a)(4), (5)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to support the contention that a maker or drawer of a check, draft, or order is liable for treble damages in an action brought by the payee [see Civ. Code § 1719].

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case; for example, discuss the facts regarding the instrument's dishonor by the drawee, and lack of a good faith dispute regarding the maker's reasonable belief of a legal right to withhold payment. Counsel should also discuss the written demand sent by certified mail, and show that 30 days have elapsed without payment by the maker.

This form may be combined with memoranda pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is liable for treble damages on the instrument.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion and forms regarding Civ. Code § 1719, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages Mandatory

In Mughrabi v. Suzuki (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 243 Cal. Rptr. 438 , many payroll checks were cashed at a store. The drawee bank returned all the checks, stamped either "Refer to Maker" or "Account Closed." The store owner sent demand letters to the makers, but received no payment. The makers filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition. The store owner brought an action to recover the principal amount of the checks, as well as treble damages under Civ. Code § 1719. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment with regard to the principal amount, but not treble damages. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with regard to the award of treble damages, holding that Civ. Code § 1719 imposes a mandatory obligation on the trial court to award treble damages when the statutory conditions are met. The statute's language is unambiguous. The manifest purpose of Civ. Code § 1719 is to discourage the issuance of bank checks, drafts, or orders when the maker's funds are insufficient. By increasing the stakes for a defendant, it serves as a statutory incentive to refrain from the writing of bad checks. Moreover, the use of both "shall" and "may" in close proximity in a particular context manifests a legislative intent to provide mandatory and discretionary meanings, respectively. The court concluded that this particular case lacks any factors supporting a contrary interpretation (197 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1215-1216) .

186 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.113

§ 166.113 Opposing Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Treble Damages After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]--Stop Payment Based on Good-Faith Dispute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE FOR DAMAGES OF TREBLE THE AMOUNT OWING ON THE _____ [CHECK or DRAFT or ORDER] THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE DRAWEE'S DISHONOR OF THE INSTRUMENT AROSE FROM DEFENDANT'S STOP PAYMENT ORDER UNDER A GOOD-FAITH DISPUTE WITH THE PAYEE.

A. Stop Payment Under Good Faith Dispute. There is no cause of action under Civil Code Section 1719 if a maker stops payments in order to resolve a good-faith dispute with the payee. The payee is entitled to damages only on proving by clear and convincing evidence that there was no good-faith dispute, as defined in Civil Code Section 1719(b) (Civ. Code § 1719(a)(3)).

B. Good Faith Determination. In the case of a stop payment, the existence of a "good-faith dispute" is to be determined by the trier of fact. A "good-faith dispute" is one in which the court finds that the maker reasonably believed in legal entitlement to withhold payment, on grounds including, but not limited to, the following: services were not rendered, goods were not delivered, goods or services purchased are faulty, not as promised, or otherwise unsatisfactory, or there was an overcharge (Civ. Code § 1719(b)).

[Optional] C. Proof of Demand Required. In the case of a stop payment, a court may not award damages or costs under Civil Code Section 1719 unless the court receives into evidence a copy of the written demand which, in that case, must have been sent to the drawer, and a signed certified mail receipt showing delivery, or attempted delivery if refused, of the written demand to the maker's address (Civ. Code § 1719(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose the contention that a maker or drawer of a check, draft, or order is liable for treble damages in an action brought by the payee, on the ground that the drawee dishonored the instrument because of a stop-payment order that was based on a good faith dispute with the payee [see Civ. Code § 1719].

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case; for example, discuss the facts regarding the transaction between the maker and the payee, the good-faith basis of the stop-payment order, and, if appropriate, the payee's noncompliance with the required notice to the maker, or lack of evidence of the notice.

This form may be combined with memoranda pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that defendant is not liable for treble damages on the instrument.

[b] Notice of Payee to Maker Regarding Stop Payment

To recover under Civ. Code § 1719 in the case of a stop-payment order, the payee must give notice to the maker in a form that substantially complies with Civ. Code § 1719(c), which sets out a sample form of notice.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.114

§ 166.114 Opposing Contention That Maker or Drawer Is Liable on Check, Draft, or Order for Prejudgment Interest After Dishonor and Demand--Action by Payee [Civ. Code § 1719]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT _____[name] IS NOT LIABLE FOR PREJUDGMENT INTEREST ON THE AMOUNT OF THE [CHECK or DRAFT or ORDER] THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE PLAINTIFF SEEKS STATUTORY RELIEF UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1719.

A. Statutory Relief Under Civil Code Section 1719 Precludes Recovery of Prejudgment Interest. The statutory damages prescribed in Civil Code Section 1719 are exclusive. A payee who recovers pursuant to Section 1719 may not also recover prejudgment interest under Civil Code Section 3287 (Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 393, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose the contention that a maker or drawer of a check, draft, or order is liable for prejudgment interest after dishonor and demand in an action brought by the payee [see Civ. Code § 1719].

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case; for example, if the instrument was taken as payment of an obligation, discuss the fact that the plaintiff elected to pursue relief under Civ. Code § 1719 whereas the plaintiff could have instead sued on the underlying obligation and in that case could have claimed prejudgment interest [see Com. Code §§ 3302, 3310(b)(3)].

This form may be combined with memoranda pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the defendant is not liable for prejudgment interest on the instrument.

[b] Related Publications

For discussion and forms regarding Civ. Code § 1719, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Relief Under Civil Code Section 1719 Precludes Recovery of Prejudgment Interest

In Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 212 P.3d 736 , the California Supreme Court answered the question, certified to it by the Ninth Circuit, whether a debt collector recovering on a dishonored check may recover both a service charge under Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1) and prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. The court held that the statutory damages prescribed in section 1719 are exclusive; therefore, a payee who recovers a service charge pursuant to section 1719 may not also recover prejudgment interest under section 3287 (47 Cal. 4th 381, 393) . In discussing the consequences of proceeding under section 1719, the court further stated that if, after a proper demand, the service charge is not paid (together with the amount of the check and the cost of mailing the demand), and the payee or an assignee sues for treble damages instead, then in that case as well, prejudgment interest may not be recovered (47 Cal. 4th 381, 398) . The court also made the observation that in lieu of pursuing the statutory relief authorized in section 1719, if the check was taken as payment of an obligation, the payee or an assignee could seek damages for breach of the underlying obligation [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(3)], and in that case, prejudgment interest could be claimed pursuant to Com. Code § 3302 (47 Cal. 4th 381, 390) .

188 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
D. Liability Of Parties

16-166 California Points & Authorities §§ 166.115-166.129

[Reserved]

§§ 166.115[Reserved]

189 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.130

§ 166.130 Supporting Contention That Holder in Due Course Is Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor [Com. Code § 3305]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions. It may also be combined with a general contention that a holder is a holder in due course (see, e.g., §§ 166.70, 166.71).]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE ON THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE AND THE DEFENSE OF _____ [specify, e.g., FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION] IS THEREFORE INAPPLICABLE TO HIM/HER.

Holder in Due Course Is Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor. The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is not subject to defenses of the obligor that are specifically stated in Division 3 of the Commercial Code or those defenses based on common law contract principles (Com. Code § 3305(b); see Com. Code § 3305(a)(2); see also Gribble v. Mauerhan (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 221, 225, 10 Cal. Rptr. 296). Other defenses available to the obligor that are stated in Commercial Code Section 3305(a)(1), which may be asserted against any person entitled to enforce an instrument, are not applicable because they are not supported by the facts of this case.

[This form may be combined with contentions that a party is liable on an instrument (see, e.g., §§ 166.90 -166.103), and/or with a contention that a holder may enforce an interest provision in a note (see, e.g., § 166.131).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a party is liable on an instrument, on the ground that the holder is a holder in due course, and therefore is not subject to defenses of the obligor, with the exception of enumerated defenses [see Com. Code § 3305(a), (b)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should show that the holder is a holder in due course, and that the defense propounded is not among those enumerated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(1).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a party is a holder in due course and thus is not subject to an obligor's defenses.

[b] Holder in Due Course Is Subject Only to "Real Defenses"

The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to the defenses of the obligor stated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(1) [Com. Code § 3305(b)]. These "real defenses" may be asserted against any person entitled to enforce the instrument. They are infancy, duress, lack of capacity, illegality, fraud that induced the obligor to sign the instrument without knowledge or reasonable opportunity to learn of its character or essential terms, and discharge in insolvency [see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)]. However, those defenses specifically stated in Division 3 of the Commercial Code and those based on common law contract principles are cut off by a holder in due course [Com. Code § 3305(b); Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990); see Com. Code § 3305(a)(2)]. Division 3 defenses include nonissuance and conditional issuance of the instrument [see Com. Code § 3105(b)], modification of the obligation by a separate agreement [see Com. Code § 3117], and instruments issued without consideration [see Com. Code § 3303(b)]. The most prevalent common law defenses are fraud, misrepresentation, and mistake in the instrument's issuance [see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.132 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course Is Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor

Gribble v. Mauerhan (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 221, 10 Cal. Rptr. 296 , was a complicated real estate case in which various parties, in individual and alter-ego corporate capacities, engaged in overlapping transactions and nonsequential recordation. In one transaction, the payee of a note secured by a trust deed assigned the note to the holder, who paid a sum for the note that was less than its face value. In resulting lawsuits among all the parties to the transactions, involving title to and foreclosure of deeds of trust against the real property, the payee-assignor of the note in question was a plaintiff in one action and a defendant in the other. The trial court found, inter alia, that the holder of the note in question held a first encumbrance against the property in the amount of the note's face value. (The trial court also ordered foreclosure on both the trust deeds that were found to constitute encumbrances.) The party that was found to be the owner of the property appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, supporting the trial court's finding on all issues, including those involving equitable estoppel, good faith, and notice (188 Cal. App. 2d 221, 225-228) . With regard to the holder of the note in question, the court rejected the property owner's contention that the note was void and of no effect for any amount in excess of the amount paid for it, because it originally was issued for no consideration and was given effect by the subsequent assignment only to the extent of the amount paid for it. The contention was without merit for two reasons. First, under the evidence, the payee-assignor executed a demand note in exchange for the note, which constituted sufficient consideration. Second, the evidence supported the conclusion that the holder was a holder in due course of the note, which was a negotiable instrument. Consequently, he took free of any defense of lack of consideration. Moreover, the fact that the holder purchased the note at a substantial discount, although a circumstance material to a determination whether the purchase was in good faith, was insufficient to charge him with notice of any defense to the note (188 Cal. App. 2d 221, 225) .

190 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.131

§ 166.131 Supporting Contention That Holder May Enforce Interest Provision in Note [Com. Code § 3305]--Note Not Usurious, or Provision Not Usurious on Its Face, and Holder Is Holder in Due Course [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS LIABLE ON THE INTEREST PROVISIONS OF THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE INTEREST IS NOT USURIOUS [WITH REGARD TO PLAINTIFF], IN THAT _____ [specify, e.g., PLAINTIFF IS A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE WITH NO NOTICE OF THE USURIOUS NATURE OF THE OBLIGATION].

[EITHER]

Holder in Due Course That Acquired Note Before Maturity. A negotiable promissory note that does not show its usurious nature on its face is enforceable in the hands of a bona fide holder who became such before maturity, even though the contract was usurious in its inception (Brown v. Guaranty Mortgage Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 532, 534, 31 P.2d 788).

[OR]

Delay Caused by Borrower in Receiving Proceeds of Maximum Interest Note. A delay in receiving the proceeds of a note, when the note provides for maximum interest, does not render the interest provision usurious, if the borrower caused the delay (First American Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Cook (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 597, 90 Cal. Rptr. 645).

[OR]

Bonus Added to Actual Interest Does Not Exceed Maximum Allowable Interest. A bonus extracted by a lender in addition to the interest provided in a note does not render the interest provision usurious if the sum of the interest and bonus does not exceed the maximum allowable interest (Brown v. Cardoza (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 187, 192, 153 P.2d 767).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting the contention that a party is liable for the interest provisions of a note, on the ground that the provision is not usurious, or that it is not unlawfully usurious with regard to a particular party who is a holder in due course [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1, uncodified provisions published in most codes on the pages containing Civ. Code § 1916.1 et seq. (definitions regarding interest, real estate provisions, and variable interest rate provisions)]. For discussion of the effect of usury provisions, see § 166.133[2].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the rate of interest of the note, and apply the appropriate options in this form to the facts. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that the note is not usurious on its face, and that the holder took with no knowledge of any usurious aspect of the underlying transaction.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder may enforce the interest provision in a note.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 166.133 may be used to oppose the contention supported by this form.

For points and authorities supporting the contention that a provision for a variable rate of interest will not destroy the instrument's negotiability, see § 166.22.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course That Acquired Note Before Maturity

Brown v. Guaranty Mortgage Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 532, 31 P.2d 788 , involved two promissory notes given in exchange for a loan, secured by the real property that was the subject of the loan. The financial institution lender, and payee on the notes, deducted from the principal of one note the amount of a bonus for the entire transaction. The notes were transferred before maturity to another financial institution, which became a holder of them. The makers of the notes paid a certain amount of the interest, but paid no principal. The holder of the notes brought an action to foreclose on the real property. The makers brought an action against the payee and the holder institutions and others to declare the notes usurious, and to obtain an injunction against foreclosure. The cases were consolidated for trial, which resulted in the findings that the loans were usurious, but that the holder could enforce them because it was a bona fide holder of them, with no notice of their usurious nature. The makers appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that usurious notes are enforceable by a bona fide holder who became such before maturity, even though the contract was usurious in its inception. The Court rejected the makers' contention that an agreement to pay interest in violation of the usury law is void and that the invalidity continues throughout the existence of the agreement regardless of status of the transferee (220 Cal. 532, 534) .

[b] Delay Caused by Borrower in Receiving Proceeds of Maximum Interest Note

The facts and procedural background of First American Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Cook (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 90 Cal. Rptr. 645 , are discussed in § 166.133[3][c]. In Cook, the court of appeal held that a note providing for the monthly payment of interest at the maximum legal rate is usurious if it includes a provision that the interest not so paid be added to the principal and thereafter bear like interest as the principal. Cook also discussed the maker's contention that the interest on the note was usurious because it provided for maximum interest to accrue on a particular date, but the maker did not receive the proceeds until some months later. When a loan provides for maximum legal interest, delay in paying over the proceeds to the borrower may result in the borrower paying excessive interest and render the loan usurious. However, a good-faith delay in paying over the proceeds does not require that result, and when the delay is caused by a contingency under the borrower's control, the loan is not usurious even though it results in excessive interest. In the instant case, the delay was caused by the borrower's failure to provide title to the land that he had agreed would secure the loan. In determining whether the loan was usurious, the borrower was considered to have received the money on the date that the agreement was signed, and the money deposited to his account (12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 597) .

[c] Bonus Added to Actual Interest Does Not Exceed Maximum Allowable Interest

Brown v. Cardoza (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 187, 153 P.2d 767 , involved several promissory notes between various parties in conjunction with a sale of real property, in which the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's holding that a note was not usurious because the total amount of money chargeable as interest did not exceed the maximum allowable amount (67 Cal. App. 2d 187, 191-194) . In one transaction, money was loaned in exchange for an interest rate lower than the allowed maximum, as well as a "splitting of profits." Any device is prohibited whereby the lender, by charging a fee, bonus, commission, discount, or other compensation, will receive more than ten percent per annum for any loan of money [former Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22; now see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1]. A plan in which the lender refuses to make a loan unless the borrower will "split" profits is obviously a device whereby the lender demands for the loan a consideration in addition to interest. It constitutes a bonus for the loan. However, the transaction is not usurious if, as in the instant case, the bonus in addition to the interest is less than lawfully could have been charged for interest (67 Cal. App. 2d 187, 191-192) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Holder in Due Course That Acquired Note Before Maturity

Nuckolls v. Bank of California (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 278, 74 P.2d 271 , is discussed in § 166.71[4][d].

For an additional case holding that the defense of usury is not available against a holder in due course, see Szczotka v. Idelson (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 399, 406-407, 39 Cal. Rptr. 466 , discussed in § 166.71[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.132

§ 166.132 Opposing Contention That Holder in Due Course Not Subject to Defenses of Obligor [Com. Code § 3305]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

PLAINTIFF DOES NOT TAKE THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION FREE FROM THE DEFENSE OF _____ [specify, e.g., FRAUD IN THE EXECUTION] BECAUSE THAT DEFENSE IS EFFECTIVE AS AGAINST A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE.

[EITHER]

A. Infancy. The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to a defense based on infancy of the obligor to the extent it is a defense to a simple contract (Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(A), (b)).

[AND/OR]

B. Nullifying Effect on Instrument. The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to a defense based on duress, lack of legal capacity, or illegality of the transaction which, under other law, nullifies the obligation of the obligor (Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B), (b)).

[AND/OR]

C. Fraud in the Execution. The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to a defense based on fraud that induced the obligor to sign the instrument with neither knowledge nor reasonable opportunity to learn of its character or its essential terms (Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(C), (b)).

[AND/OR]

D. Discharge in Insolvency. The right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to a defense based on discharge of the obligor in insolvency proceedings (Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(D), (b)).

[AND/OR]

E. Void Instrument Unenforceable by Holder in Due Course. An instrument that is void because the maker signed it with the reasonable belief that it was some other document is not enforceable by a holder in due course in the absence of negligence on the part of the maker (C.I.T. Corporation v. Panac (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 547, 549-550, 154 P.2d 710).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a holder in due course is not subject to defenses of the obligor, on the ground that the defense asserted is among those enumerated in Com. Code § 3305(a)(1) that are available against holders in due course [see Com. Code § 3305(b)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the defense asserted, and show that it is a defense that is not cut off by a holder in due course under Com. Code § 3305(a)(1) and (b).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a holder in due course is subject to certain defenses.

[b] Fraud in Execution of Instrument

The type of fraud that provides a defense against the rights of a holder in due course is variously described as "real" or "essential" fraud, or "fraud in the essence" or "fraud in the factum." Commonly, the maker of an instrument is tricked into signing a note in the belief that it is merely a receipt or some other document. The theory of the defense is that the signature on the instrument is ineffective because the signer did not intend to sign the instrument at all. Under Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(C), the defense extends to an instrument signed with knowledge that it is a negotiable instrument, but without knowledge of its essential terms [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305 (1990)].

Fraud in the execution renders the instrument void. In contrast, a merely voidable instrument would not provide a maker with a defense under Com. Code § 3305, that is, the maker of a voidable instrument could not defend against a holder in due course on that ground. Facts underlying a voidable instrument would concern issues regarding whether the holder was in fact a holder in due course. For a discussion regarding the distinction between instruments void and voidable by reason of fraud, see C.I.T. Corporation v. Panac (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 547, 548-550, 154 P.2d 710 , discussed under § 166.132[3][a].

[c] Related Publications

For discussion and forms regarding void and voidable contracts generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms regarding fraudulent misrepresentation generally, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit in that publication.

For discussion of fraudulent misrepresentation generally, see Levy, Golden, Sacks CALIFORNIA TORTS, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by § 166.130.

For memoranda of points and authorities regarding fraudulent misrepresentation generally, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For memoranda of points and authorities regarding dischargeability of debts generally, see Ch. 30, Bankruptcy .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Void Instrument Unenforceable by Holder in Due Course

In C.I.T. Corporation v. Panac (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 547, 154 P.2d 710 , an illiterate married couple was fraudulently persuaded by the payee's agent to sign a promissory note with the understanding that the document was merely a contract to repair their house. Ultimately, a holder in due course of the note brought an action against the makers to enforce the note. The trial court found in favor of the makers, holding that they were not negligent in signing the note, and that their defense of fraud was valid against the holder in due course. The holder appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that when a person is fraudulently induced to sign or endorse a bill or note in the reasonable belief that the document is something else, that person cannot be said to have made or endorsed the bill or note, absent the maker's negligence in doing so. The resulting negotiable instrument is void, and is not enforceable by a holder in due course absent negligence on the part of the maker (25 Cal. 2d 547, 549-550) . The Court distinguished a voidable instrument from a void one, holding that an instrument signed through fraud in the inducement, that is, signed on the basis of misrepresentations but with full knowledge of the nature of the instrument, is voidable rather than void. By contrast, when a maker signs an instrument, understanding it to be some other document, there is no contract whatsoever. A mistake regarding the instrument's character may relate to its existence as a contract or legally operative document of any kind, or to whether it is the kind of contract or legal document that it purports or is represented to be (25 Cal. 2d 547, 548-549) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nullifying Effect on Instrument

Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851 , was an action by decedent's administrator to cancel a note and deed of trust made by decedent's niece with power of attorney. Judgment was for defendants, holders in due course of the note. The court of appeal reversed and remanded for findings regarding whether the purpose of the note and loan was to pay for construction work by an unlicensed contractor. If that was the case, the fact that defendants were holders in due course would be irrelevant. The illegality defense of former Com. Code § 3305(2) [now see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)] would render the note void (211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1063-1064) .

[b] Void Instrument Unenforceable by Holder in Due Course

In Millrose Corporation v. Brent (D.C. Cir. 1959) 271 F.2d 508 , the federal court of appeals held that instruments procured by fraud amounted to forgeries, and the purported obligation under them could be terminated, notwithstanding that the notes had come into the ownership of a holder in due course (citing C.I.T. Corporation v. Panac (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 547, 154 P.2d 710 , discussed under § 166.132[3][a]) (271 F.2d 508, 509) .

In Danning v. Bank of America (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 199 Cal. Rptr. 163 (disapproved on another ground in In re Marriage of Arceneaux (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1130, 1137-1138, 275 Cal. Rptr. 797, 800 P.2d 1227), a trustee in bankruptcy of a bankrupt corporation sued the corporation's bank for negligence and breach of contract for charging the corporate account for payment of a $250,000 check drawn on the corporate account with only one of two required signatures. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff on the complaint and for defendant on its cross complaint against the payee and certain officers of both corporations. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. Among other issues, the court discussed the defenses that the drawer's trustee in bankruptcy could assert against the payee and the collecting bank. The court set forth former Com. Code § 3305(2)(b) [now see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)(B)] and said that the California Commercial Code comments explain that if under local law the effect is to render the obligation on the instrument entirely null and void, the defense may be asserted against a holder in due course [now see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-305]. Thus, even a holder in due course may not recover when the underlying debt is illegal, unenforceable, and otherwise null and void. Here, two courts had found that the options issuance scheme operated by the corporate drawer and the payee-broker was fraudulent (151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 978) . The court of appeal said the trial court was not bound by the stipulation of the drawer and the payee that a debt was owed (151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 978 n.3). The conclusion in the trial court's statement of decision that the check was not used to pay a valid outstanding obligation was sufficient finding of illegality of the underlying claim (151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 978-979) .

In Gardner v. Rubin (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 368, 308 P.2d 892 , an action to cancel a note and trust deed on the ground of fraud in the execution, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the makers. The facts were similar to those under C.I.T. Corporation v. Panac (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 547, 154 P.2d 710 , discussed under § 166.100[3][d]. Citing C.I.T., the court of appeal held that when one is fraudulently induced to sign a negotiable instrument, believing it to be a different type of document, the instrument is not enforceable, even by a holder in due course, in the absence of negligence on the part of the maker (149 Cal. App. 2d 368, 372) .

For an additional case based on facts similar to C.I.T., but applying the holding to a nonholder in due course, see Fleming v. Kagan (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 791, 11 Cal. Rptr. 737 discussed in § 166.109[3][a].

192 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.133

§ 166.133 Opposing Contention That Holder May Enforce Interest Provision in Note [Com. Code § 3305]--Note Is Usurious and Holder Is Not Holder in Due Course [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE ON THE PROMISSORY NOTE THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE INTEREST PROVISION IN THE NOTE IS USURIOUS [IN THAT _____ (specify, e.g., THE BONUS PAID TO THE LENDER IN ADDITION TO THE INTEREST EXPRESSLY SET FORTH IN THE NOTE RENDERS THE INTEREST RATE USURIOUS)], AND PLAINTIFF IS NOT A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE.

A. Usurious Interest Provision Void. Any agreement or contract of any nature in conflict with the provisions for maximum interest allowed by law shall be null and void with regard to any agreement or stipulation therein contained to pay interest, and no action at law to recover interest in any sum shall be maintained and the debt cannot be declared due until the full period of time it was contracted for has elapsed (Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, § 2, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1; Epstein v. Frank (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 122-123, 177 Cal. Rptr. 831).

[Optional] B. Immaterial That Borrower Took Initiative in Transaction. If the transaction violates the usury law, it is not material that the borrower rather than the lender took the initiative in the transaction (Williams v. Reed (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 57, 68, 307 P.2d 353).

[Optional] C. Adding Unpaid Interest to Principal Is Usurious. When a note provides for the monthly payment of interest at the maximum legal rate, a provision adding interest not so paid to the principal, thereafter bearing like interest as the principal, renders the note usurious (First American Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Cook (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 597, 90 Cal. Rptr. 645).

[Optional] D. Actual Transaction, Not Face of Note, Controls. A note must be tested for usury with reference to the actual sum given by the lender to the borrower, and not by the mere face of the note (Taylor v. Budd (1933) 217 Cal. 262, 265, 18 P.2d 333).

[Optional] E. Bonus Added to Actual Interest Exceeds Maximum Allowable Interest. A bonus extracted by a lender in addition to the interest provided in a note renders the interest provision usurious if the sum of the interest and bonus exceeds the maximum allowable interest (Moore v. Russell (1931) 114 Cal. App. 634, 641, 300 P. 479).

[Optional] F. Interest Payments Made on Usurious Note Are Offset Against Principal. If an interest provision of a note is usurious, no interest is collectible; therefore, all payments made on a note must necessarily be credited as payments on the principal (Moore v. Russell (1931) 114 Cal. App. 634, 641, 300 P. 479).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a party is liable for the interest provision in a note in an action by a nonholder in due course, on the ground that the note is usurious [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1 (uncodified provisions published in most annotated codes on pages containing Civ. Code § 1916.1 et seq., regarding interest, real estate provisions, and variable interest rate provisions)].

The issue of usury would commonly arise either in defense of an action against the maker of a note to recover interest on the note, or in an action by a maker to recover treble damages against the payee on the ground that the interest rate was usurious [see Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, §§ 2 (interest provision void), 3(a) (treble damages), as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1; see also Civ. Code § 1916.1 et seq.].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the rate of interest of the note and, if the usurious nature does not appear on the face of the note, show why the transaction as a whole renders the note usurious.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the holder may not enforce a usurious interest provision in a note.

[b] Effect of Usurious Interest Provision

Generally, when a note provides for usurious interest, the payee is entitled to no interest [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Stats. 1919, p. lxxxiii, § 2, as amended by Stats. 1970, ch. 784, § 1; Paillet v. Vroman (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 297, 305, 126 P.2d 419] . The usurious provision voids only the portion of the instrument that is relevant to the interest charge [Campbell v. Realty Title Co. (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 195, 197, 124 P.2d 810 ; Forte v. Nolfi (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 656, 691, 102 Cal. Rptr. 455] .

Consequently, the inclusion of an usurious interest provision results, in effect, in a note payable at maturity without interest [Epstein v. Frank (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 123, 177 Cal. Rptr. 831] . Inasmuch as the payee of a noninterest-bearing note is entitled to interest at the legal rate from the date the note matures until the date of judgment (in the nature of damages), the payee of an usurious note is similarly entitled to post maturity interest on the note [Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 744, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 ; Epstein v. Frank (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 123, 177 Cal. Rptr. 831] .

[c] Related Publications

For discussion of usury provisions generally, see Ch. 568, Usury in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 166.131.

Note that even an interest rate exempted from the usury law may be unenforceable on the ground of unconscionability [see Civ. Code § 1670.5; Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 81-85, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 (affirming allowance of enforcement of note and deed of trust written with 200 percent interest at 24 per cent)]. For memoranda of points and authorities addressing unconscionability, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Usurious Interest Provision Void

In Epstein v. Frank (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 177 Cal. Rptr. 831 , the payees of 15 promissory notes brought an action to enforce the notes. The trial court found, inter alia, that four of the notes were usurious, and denied recovery of any interest on them. The payees appealed the judgment, contending, inter alia, an entitlement to post maturity legal interest rate on the four usurious notes (although not contesting the usury finding).

The court of appeal reversed with regard to allowance of post maturity legal interest on the usurious notes. The attempt to exact the usurious rate of interest renders the interest provisions of a note void (125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 122) . The usurious provisions, however, do not affect the payee's right to recover the principal amount of the note when due; the inclusion of a usurious interest provision results essentially in a note payable at maturity without interest (125 Cal. App. 3d 111, 123) .

[b] Immaterial That Borrower Took Initiative in Transaction

Williams v. Reed (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 57, 307 P.2d 353 , was an action on a promissory note. After trial, appeal, and subsequent trial, judgment was rendered against the makers, who appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed, except with regard to the award of interest on the note (48 Cal. 2d 57, 68) . The $10,000 note, given as a "bonus" or "finder's fee" for a loan of $30,000 under the remaining note, was part of the entire loan transaction and therefore constituted usurious interest, under former Cal. Const., art. XX, § 22 [now see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1] (48 Cal. 2d 57, 67) . When the transaction violates the usury law, the intent of neither of the parties is material, nor is it material that the borrower rather than the lender took the initiative in the transaction (48 Cal. 2d 57, 68) .

Counsel should note the discussion in Buck v. Dahlgren (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 779, 787-788, 100 Cal. Rptr. 462 , an action in which the issue of usury arose not in defense to recovery on a note, but in a cause of action by the maker of a note to recover usurious interest paid as well as treble damages. In Buck, the court noted that court decisions have given the trial court discretion to disallow treble damages to a borrower who was the moving force in the transaction. The maker in Buck was entitled to neither treble damages nor the recovery of the actual interest paid, due to his own conduct and the equities of underlying circumstances.

[c] Adding Unpaid Interest to Principal Is Usurious

In First American Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Cook (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 90 Cal. Rptr. 645 , two parties experienced in real estate transactions, and represented by brokers, executed a promissory note providing for the legal rate of interest. The note was prepared on a printed form by the title company, which inadvertently let stand the provision "should the interest not be so paid, it shall be added to the principal and thereafter bear like interest as the principal." After the parties discovered the usurious clause, the title company brought an action to reform the note on the ground of mutual mistake. The payee cross complained, requesting the same reformation as well as damages against the title company for negligence. The maker counterclaimed against the payee on the ground of usury, and sought to recover treble damages. The trial court found that both parties intended the interest should not exceed the maximum legal rate, entered judgment for reformation, and declared the note nonusurious. The maker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that reformation of the note was proper because the error was caused by mutual mistake (12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 597-599) . All parties conceded that the note as originally drafted was usurious on its face. The note, providing for the monthly payment of interest at the maximum legal rate, was usurious by reason of the provision that the interest not so paid be added to the principal and thereafter bear like interest as the principal. When interest is compounded annually at the maximum rate after default, the sum charged as interest for any one year will not exceed the maximum rate on the amount of money owed at the commencement of the year, but the sum charged will exceed that rate if the interest is compounded at shorter intervals (12 Cal. App. 3d 592, 597) . (For additional discussion of Cook, see § 166.131[3][b].)

[d] Actual Transaction, Not Face of Note, Controls

In Taylor v. Budd (1933) 217 Cal. 262, 18 P.2d 333 , a promissory note secured by a trust deed provided for monthly payment of interest in advance. When the makers of the note received the amount of the loan, attorney's fees as well as the first month's interest had been deducted. After a decisional holding that advance interest is usurious, the trustee struck the provision from the note and notified the makers not to pay advance interest in the future. Ultimately, the makers defaulted, and the trustee instituted proceedings to sell the property under the deed of trust. The makers brought an action against the trustee to declare the loan usurious and the interest provisions void, and for related relief, including an injunction on the sale of the property. The trial court found that although the original note was usurious, the change had eliminated the defect, and constituted a compromise and settlement of any claim for prior usurious payments. The makers appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding, inter alia, that no compromise or waiver resulted from the modification of the note (217 Cal. 262, 266) . The original note was usurious in two regards. The requirement of the maximum monthly interest in advance was a violation of the pertinent statute, regardless of whether there was any criminal intent. Moreover, a note must be tested for usury with reference to the actual sum given by the lender to the borrower, and not by the mere face of the note. When the first month's interest has been collected in advance, the principal sum loaned will be held to be the amount of the loan less the interest or commission deducted in advance (217 Cal. 262, 265) . Consequently, the makers continually paid interest on the amount of principal evidenced by the face of the note, although they received less than that amount (217 Cal. 262, 265-266) . Therefore, the interest was usurious during the entire period of the loan (217 Cal. 262, 266) .

[e] Bonus Added to Actual Interest Exceeds Maximum Allowable Interest

Moore v. Russell (1931) 114 Cal. App. 634, 300 P. 479 , is discussed under § 166.133[3][f].

[f] Interest Payments Made on Usurious Note Are Offset Against Principal

In Moore v. Russell (1931) 114 Cal. App. 634, 300 P. 479 , the payee on a promissory note paid the makers $4,250, in exchange for a note to repay $5,000 as principal in addition to interest at the rate of seven percent per annum. After default on the renewal note, the holder brought an action against the makers. The makers defended on the grounds that the original note was knowingly given to advance an illegal scheme (and was therefore void), and that the note was usurious because the principal exceeded the amount given by an usurious percentage. The trial court found in the holder's favor in the amount of $4,250, and one of the makers appealed.

The court of appeal modified the judgment with regard to the amount of the award, and affirmed with regard to all other issues (114 Cal. App. 634, 644) . The $750 difference between the amount of money given for the note and the amount of principal on the note constituted a bonus, rendering the note usurious. Interest on an usurious note is not collectible. Inasmuch as there was no interest collectible, all payments made on the note necessarily had to be credited as payments on the principal. Consequently, the judgment was reduced to reflect an offset of the principal in the amount of the "interest" paid (114 Cal. App. 634, 641-642) .

193 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.134

§ 166.134 Opposing Contention That Holder Not Subject to Defenses--Action by Nonholder in Due Course--Lack of Consideration [Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

DEFENDANT _____ [name] IS NOT LIABLE ON THE INSTRUMENT THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE THERE WAS NO VALID CONSIDERATION FOR THE NOTE, AND PLAINTIFF IS NOT A HOLDER IN DUE COURSE.

A. Lack of Consideration Defense. The drawer or maker of an instrument has a defense if the instrument is issued without consideration (Com. Code § 3303(b)).

B. Defense Applies to Nonholder in Due Course. Unless the holder is a holder in due course, the right to enforce a party's obligation to pay an instrument is subject to a defense of the obligor stated in another section of Division 3 of the Commercial Code or a defense of the obligor that would be available if the person entitled to enforce the instrument were enforcing a right to payment under a simple contract (Com. Code § 3305(a)(2); see Com. Code § 3305(b); see also Bargioni v. Hill (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 21, 22, 27 Cal. Rptr. 142).

[Optional] C. Parol Evidence Admissible to Show Lack of Consideration Between Original Parties. As between original parties to a promissory note, parol evidence is admissible to show lack or failure of consideration (Coast Bank v. Holmes (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 581, 590, 97 Cal. Rptr. 30).

[Add, as applicable, EITHER]

D. Moral Obligation Insufficient. Unless a moral obligation was preceded by a good and valuable consideration, it is insufficient to support an obligation of indebtedness, which requires an existing legal obligation owed by instrument's maker (Civ. Code § 1606; Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 493, 498, 58 P.2d 639).

[AND/OR]

E. Mere Motive, Inducement, or Hope of Profit. Mere motive, inducement, or hope of profit is not consideration (Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 390, 137 P. 9).

[AND/OR]

F. Mere Pledge of Consideration. The mere pledge of consideration to the instrument's maker does not constitute consideration for the instrument (Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 389, 137 P. 9).

[AND/OR]

G. Cancellation of Prior Debt Without Knowledge of Maker. The cancellation of a prior debt does not constitute consideration if the instrument's maker had no knowledge of the prior debt's existence (Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 390, 137 P. 9).

[AND/OR]

H. Purported Maker of Note Did Not Sign Note, Nor Receive Any Benefit. An instrument is given without consideration if the purported maker did not sign the note, was not a party to the underlying agreement, and neither received nor was promised anything of benefit in consideration for the instrument (Nakagawa v. Okamoto (1913) 164 Cal. 718, 721-722, 130 P. 707).

[AND/OR]

I. No Intention of Parties Evidencing Forbearance. There is no consideration for an instrument based on forbearance to sue, when there is no showing that the parties intended forbearance (Parrino v. Rallis (1931) 116 Cal. App. 364, 366, 2 P.2d 515).

[AND/OR]

J. Note Given in Exchange for Note Lacking Consideration. When a note is executed to a payee only in renewal of a prior note given to that payee, the real consideration for which it is given is that for which the prior note was given, and the failure of the consideration of the first note may be pleaded in an action on the subsequent note (Newark Trust Co. v. Kriebel (1920) 49 Cal. App. 614, 620-621, 193 P. 962).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in opposing the contention that a party is liable on an instrument in an action by a nonholder in due course, on the ground that there was no valid consideration for the instrument [see Com. Code §§ 3303(b), 3305].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated. Therefore, counsel should describe the transaction, show that the holder is not a holder in due course, and establish the failure of consideration.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a holder is not liable because there was no valid consideration for the instrument.

[b] Circumstances Under Which Lack of Consideration Not a Defense

Lack of consideration is not a defense as against a holder in due course. Although the right of a holder in due course to enforce the obligation of a party to pay the instrument is subject to the "real defenses" of an obligor (such as infancy, illegality, and fraud) [see Com. Code § 3305(a)(1)], the right to enforce payment is not subject to any defenses of the obligor set forth in another section of Division 3 of the Commercial Code (such as consideration) [Com. Code § 3305(b); see Com. Code § 3305(a)(2); see also Official Comments 1 and 2 to U.C.C § 3-305 (1990)].

Moreover, an instrument issued for value is also issued for consideration [Com. Code § 3303(b)]. Thus, whether or not under contract law adequate consideration was given for an instrument, if the instrument is deemed issued for value under Com. Code § 3303(a), it is also issued for consideration [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-303, Case # 1 (1990)].

[c] Debt Arising From Illegal Transaction

The consideration for a promissory note given solely to evidence an alleged indebtedness arising from an illegal transaction is unlawful, and a holder with full notice of the nature of the debt cannot recover on the note [see Union Collection Co. v. Buckman (1907) 150 Cal. 159, 161, 88 P. 708] .

For cases holding that a gambling debt does not constitute consideration for an instrument (and the payee cannot recover on the instrument), see Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 49, 51, 179 P.2d 804 ; Lane & Pyron, Inc. v. Gibbs (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-64, 71 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; Leite v. Dietz (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 41, 42-43, 212 P.2d 265 ; Braverman v. Horn (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 379, 381, 198 P.2d 948 ; and Lavick v. Nitzberg (1948) 83 Cal. App. 2d 381, 383, 188 P.2d 758 .

[d] Related Publications

For discussion of consideration generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[e] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposing the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 166.90, 166.93, 166.96, and 166.99.

For points and authorities regarding consideration issues relating to contracts generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense Applies to Nonholder in Due Course

In Bargioni v. Hill (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 21, 27 Cal. Rptr. 142 , the maker of a promissory note gave the note as partial payment for real property, secured by a junior trust deed on the property in the same amount. The maker defaulted on the first installment due, then executed a second note for the amount due under the first two installment payments, before the time that the second payment was due. In an action by the payee against the maker for the amount due on the second note, the trial court found in the payee's favor. The maker appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that absence of consideration is a defense against any person not a holder in due course. Although a note is deemed to have been issued for a valuable consideration, that is a disputable presumption. It is essential to the existence of any contract that there be sufficient consideration. In the instant case, the payee did not introduce any testimony regarding any new consideration of the note, but rather relied on the presumption of consideration. The maker should be permitted to introduce evidence regarding consideration (211 Cal. App. 2d 21, 22) .

[b] Parol Evidence Admissible to Show Lack of Consideration Between Original Parties

In Coast Bank v. Holmes (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 581, 97 Cal. Rptr. 30 , a bank-creditor induced a third party to assume the debtor's obligations by executing his own promissory note, in exchange for the bank's oral promise to obtain a third trust deed on the related real property, not to demand payment until the property was sold, to protect the maker's trust deed by preventing foreclosure by senior lien holders, and to cancel the note in the event of any foreclosure. In an action by the bank against the maker, the trial court found for the maker, holding, inter alia, that the bank's promises constituted consideration for the note, and that the consideration failed because conditions precedent to the obligation did not occur. The bank appealed.

The court of appeal modified the judgment with regard to a reformation decree, but affirmed with regard to the issue of consideration. Evidence of the bank's oral promises was properly admissible to show lack or failure of consideration. As between the original parties to a promissory note, parol evidence is admissible to show lack or failure of consideration. Failure of consideration is the failure to execute a promise, the performance of which has been exchanged for performance by the other party. Among other situations, the failure may arise from the willful breach of the promise (19 Cal. App. 3d 581, 590) .

[c] Moral Obligation Insufficient

In Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 493, 58 P.2d 639 , the deceased executed a promissory note in favor of his former business partner, apparently in appreciation of work he had done to further the partnership, and possibly to repay him for certain advice given after the partnership had dissolved. The deceased told the payee that he had left him the same amount of money in previous wills, but had revoked those wills and executed the note in lieu of a testamentary gift to him. The payee assigned and transferred the note to a religious organization, and on an action for account of the estate, the trial court allowed the assignee's claim on the note.

The Supreme Court reversed with regard to the allowance of the claim, holding that there was no valuable consideration for the note. Under Civ. Code § 1606, an existing legal obligation resting on the promisor, or a moral obligation originating in some benefit conferred on the promisor, or prejudice suffered by the promisee, is a good consideration for a promise, to an extent corresponding with the extent of the obligation, but no further or otherwise. A moral obligation is sufficient to support an express promise when good and valuable consideration once existed. However, a moral, as distinguished from a legal, consideration is not sufficient to form a valid and binding contract (6 Cal. 2d 493, 498) .

[d] Mere Motive, Inducement, or Hope of Profit

In Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 137 P. 9 , an elderly woman was induced by her son to execute a promissory note in favor of a financial institution of which he was an officer. In exchange for her note, the institution canceled several notes executed by the son and other officers. The maker was ignorant of the existence and cancellation of the notes, and received nothing in return for her note. The institution became insolvent, and its agent brought an action to recover from the maker. The trial court found in the maker's favor, and the note's holder appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that there was no valuable consideration for the note (166 Cal. 386, 388-393) . The canceled notes did not constitute consideration because the maker had no knowledge of them. Consequently, there was no meeting of the minds of the parties before the contract in that regard. Promises to the maker that she would be "reimbursed" did not constitute consideration. In the absence of fraud, they might have amounted to an assurance that she was making an accommodation note for the payee and that she would not be required to pay it. The party for whose accommodation the paper was made may not sue the accommodation party. Moreover, her hope that her son might profit by the use of the note in the purchase of stock from another bank did not constitute consideration. Mere motive, inducement, or hope of profit is not consideration (166 Cal. 386, 390) . The holder asserted that the bank's stock that had been pledged as collateral security for the canceled notes was transferred to the new note's maker, and constituted consideration. However, there was no evidence that the stock was consideration. The mere pledge of its stock to the note's maker did not constitute consideration for the note (166 Cal. 386, 389) .

[e] Mere Pledge of Consideration

Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 137 P. 9 , is discussed under § 166.134[3][d].

[f] Cancellation of Prior Debt Without Knowledge of Maker

Williams v. Hasshagen (1913) 166 Cal. 386, 137 P. 9 , is discussed under § 166.134[3][d].

[g] Purported Maker of Note Did Not Sign Note, Nor Receive Any Benefit

In Nakagawa v. Okamoto (1913) 164 Cal. 718, 130 P. 707 , a consolidated action concerning several promissory notes, a group of businesspeople executed "promissory notes" payable to a business association, and attempted to set forth an "agreement" establishing the purpose of the notes. However, the purported maker in question did not sign any of the notes, was not a party to the agreement, and received no consideration for the notes. The Supreme Court held, inter alia, that with regard to that party, the notes were given with no consideration (164 Cal. 718, 721-722) . (The "notes" were found to be attempts to establish a contract provision for liquidated damages) (164 Cal. 718, 722-724) .

[h] No Intention of Parties Evidencing Forbearance

In Parrino v. Rallis (1931) 116 Cal. App. 364, 2 P.2d 515 , a husband and wife executed a promissory note for the amount due the payee by the husband for previous sums owed for a loan and other services. In an action by the payee to recover the amount of the note, the court of appeal upheld judgment in the wife's favor on the ground that there was no consideration for the note with regard to her (116 Cal. App. 364, 366-367) . Although forbearance is sufficient to constitute a valid consideration, it must be under an agreement to forbear, which the evidence did not support. Mere forbearance alone is not sufficient (116 Cal. App. 364, 366) .

[i] Note Given in Exchange for Note Lacking Consideration

Newark Trust Co. v. Kriebel (1920) 49 Cal. App. 614, 193 P. 962 , concerned a note given in exchange for renewal on a previous note. The maker executed the original note in partial payment for a certain number of preincorporation shares of the company represented by the payee, as agent and trustee. Contemporaneous with the note, the payee executed a promise to sell all the maker's stock after incorporation, at a certain price. At the time of the transaction, the company had full knowledge of the terms of the agreement, and acquiesced in the payee's authority to represent the company. At that time the maker was an incompetent. The stock was worthless, and the only consideration for the note was the payee's promise to sell the stock. Following the company's incorporation, the payee failed to sell or attempt to sell the maker's stock. Subsequently, the payee executed a second note given as a renewal of the first note. The note was transferred and then assigned for collection. The assignee brought an action to recover the amount of the note. The trial court found in the maker's favor and the assignee appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding, inter alia, that the payee's failure to perform his agreement rendered the first note without consideration. Consequently, the second note was without consideration. When a note is executed to a payee only in renewal of a prior note, the real consideration for the note is that for which the prior note was given, and the failure of consideration for the prior note may be pleaded in an action on the subsequent note (49 Cal. App. 614, 620-621) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Note Given in Exchange for Note Lacking Consideration

In Saks v. Charity Mission Baptist Church (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 45 , an investor brought an action for breach of contract and fraud against a church, attempting to hold the church liable for promissory notes signed by its pastor. The pastor had been involved with a developer in various real estate schemes, and had signed two promissory notes made payable to plaintiff after he advanced money to purchase property in the church's name. The church contended in its defense that it was being used by the other parties as a conduit to obtain a loan or grant from a city agency, and that as soon as the anticipated loan was received, the parties planned to use the city's funds to repay plaintiff and immediately transfer the property to a partnership owned by the developer, the investor, and the pastor. The jury found that the church was liable on the promissory notes and the trial court entered judgment for plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the jury verdicts in favor of plaintiff were unsupported by the evidence. It stated that when an officer of a corporation is openly using the corporation to obtain a benefit for himself and his cohorts in a transaction in which the corporation will ultimately not benefit, the other parties to the transaction cannot later seek to hold the corporation liable for its actions. The evidence established that the pastor and developer, in their discussions with the plaintiff, made no secret of their plan to use the church as a front to obtain a loan or grant from a governmental agency. Plaintiff at no time expressed any disapproval of the plan or unwillingness to participate in the proposed subterfuge (90 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1120-1121) . The court noted that negotiable instruments are subject to the defense of failure of consideration, citing Com. Code § 3303(b). No consideration was given to the church in exchange for the promise to pay contained in the notes, and all expected benefits flowed to the developer, the pastor, and plaintiff. It was undisputed that the church would end up with no interest in either the property or the partnership. The court concluded that the uncontradicted evidence established the church's defense to the breach of contract action that the notes lacked consideration (90 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1133-1137) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.135

§ 166.135 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Loan Arranged by Licensed Real Estate Broker and Secured by Real Property [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE NOTE IS NOT USURIOUS BECAUSE IT QUALIFIES FOR THE EXEMPTION FOR LOANS ARRANGED BY LICENSED REAL ESTATE BROKERS AND SECURED BY REAL PROPERTY.

A. Statement of Exemption. Any loan or forbearance made or arranged by any person licensed as a real estate broker by the State of California, and secured, directly or collaterally, in whole or in part by liens on real property is exempt from all interest limitations (Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1).

B. Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker. In considering whether a loan qualifies as one "arranged by a real estate broker" for purposes of the exemption provided by Civil Code Section 1916.1, two things are necessary: (1) the broker must have acted for another or for others, not for himself or herself, and (2) the broker must have received or expected to receive compensation (Civ. Code § 1916.1; Park Terrace Ltd. v. Teasdale (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 802, 806-807, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 ; Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 583, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 ; Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742-743, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3).

[Optional] C. Minimal Broker Involvement Is Sufficient. In order to qualify for the usury exemption provided by Civil Code Section 1916.1, it is not necessary that the broker be actively involved in arranging the loan. Minimal involvement[, such as being the contact with the borrower's primary broker, advising the lender regarding terms, and checking documents prepared by a salesperson in his or her office], is sufficient.

It is sufficient that the real estate broker have engaged in some conduct as a third party intermediary that actually causes the loan to be obtained or procured. (Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Gibbo v. Berger (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 396, 403-404).

[Optional] D. Broad Definition of Compensation. Compensation within the meaning of the usury exemption provided by Civil Code Section 1916.1 is a concept that has an extremely broad definition sufficient to encompass the receipt of just about any form of monetary or tangible benefit that is not self-bestowed (Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] E. Existence of Compensation Is Determined by Trier of Fact. Whether payment, advantage, benefit, or other form of consideration amounts to compensation has traditionally been regarded as an issue to be decided by the trier of fact (Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] F. Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker Is Determined by Trier of Fact. The issue of whether a licensed broker "arranged" a nonusurious loan within the meaning of Civil Code Section 1916.1 is committed to the trier of fact unless, as a matter of law, a given transaction failed to meet the two-prong test previously cited above. [The only task for the appellate court is to decide whether the trial court's determination (that the loan was exempt) can claim the support of substantial evidence] (Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 ; Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] G. Loan to Entity of Which Broker Is Member. In arranging a loan to a partnership or joint venture in which he or she is a partner or venturer, a broker who receives compensation for arranging the loan is acting for another so as to qualify for the usury exemption provided by Civil Code Section 1916.1. [The fact that the loan is made before the partnership or venture is formed does not prevent the loan from qualifying for the exemption] (Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584-585, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] H. Anticipated Profit Qualifies as Broker's Compensation. The fact that the broker's compensation is deferred is irrelevant, because anticipated profits qualify as compensation (Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 585, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88).

[Optional] I. Contribution to Expenses Qualifies as Broker's Compensation. When a licensed real estate broker and the salesperson who receives the entire commission for arranging a loan have a business relationship pursuant to which a portion of the commission is placed in the company account from which expenses are paid, the broker reaps sufficient benefits in the form of future profitability to satisfy the compensation requirement of the usury exemption (Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135-136, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609).

[Optional] J. Retroactive Application of Exemption. The usury exemption provided by California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1 for loans secured by real property and made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers is applied retroactively to transactions that occurred before its adoption (Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096, 206 Cal. Rptr. 251 ; Chapman v. Farr (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 1023-1024, 183 Cal. Rptr. 606).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a loan is not usurious because it qualifies for the exemption allowed for loans secured by real property and arranged by licensed real estate brokers [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]. Paragraphs A and B set forth the statutory authority and general statement of the criteria for the exemption. The other paragraphs relate to particular applications of the exemption criteria and may or may not be appropriate in a particular situation. The bracketed text in Paragraph F is appropriate in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that a loan is not usurious.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

These points and authorities may be combined, as appropriate in a particular situation, with those in § 166.131, which address additional aspects of usury and its application to a situation involving a holder in due course.

Note that even an interest rate exempted from the usury law may be unenforceable on the ground of unconscionability [see Civ. Code § 1670.5; Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 81-85, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845] . For memoranda of points and authorities addressing unconscionability, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statement of Exemption

Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 exempts from all interest limitations any loans made by building and loan associations, credit unions, banks, pawnbrokers, and other specified lending institutions. It also exempts loans made or arranged by any person licensed by California as a real estate broker and secured in whole or in part by liens on real property. The exemption for loans made or arranged by any licensed real estate broker was added by Proposition 2, which was enacted at special election on November 6, 1979.

Civ. Code § 1916.1 provides that the restrictions on rate of interest contained in Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 do not apply to any loan or forbearance made or arranged by any person licensed by California as a real estate broker and secured, directly or collaterally, in whole or in part by liens on real property. For purposes of Civ. Code § 1916.1, a loan or forbearance is arranged by any person licensed as a real estate broker when the broker does any of the following [Civ. Code § 1916.1]:

- Acts for compensation or in expectation of compensation for soliciting, negotiating, or arranging the loan for another.

- Acts for compensation or in expectation of compensation for selling, buying, leasing, exchanging, or negotiating the sale, purchase, lease, or exchange of real property or a business for another and (1) arranges a loan to pay all or any portion of the purchase price of, or an improvement to, that property or business, or (2) arranges a forbearance, extension, or refinancing of any loan in connection with that sale, purchase, lease, or exchange of, or of an improvement to, real property or a business.

- Arranges or negotiates for another a forbearance, extension, or refinancing of any loan secured by real property in connection with a past transaction in which the broker had acted for compensation or in expectation of compensation for selling, buying, leasing, exchanging, or negotiating the sale, purchase, lease, or exchange of real property or a business.

For purposes of Civ. Code § 1916.1, the term "made or arranged" includes any loan made by a person licensed as a real estate broker as a principal or as an agent for others, and whether or not the person is acting within the course and scope of his or her license.

[b] Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker

In Park Terrace Ltd. v. Teasdale (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 802 , 122 Cal. Rtpr. 2d 797, five real estate partnerships sought damages from and declaratory relief against a lender for loaning them money at allegedly usurious interest rates. One of the partnerships wanted to refinance debts secured by its property, including a note held by defendants. Ultimately, this partnership paid off defendants with proceeds from a new loan secured by property owned by another of the partnerships. The note evidencing this loan provided for an initial annual interest rate of 10 percent, later increasing to 13.5 percent. As part of this transaction, the partners of this second partnership signed a certificate designating its general partner, who was a licensed real estate broker, to act on the partnership's behalf in soliciting, negotiating and arranging the loan. In accordance with that designation, this person initiated discussions with the lender. In return, he was to receive compensation as a general partner under the terms of the partnership agreement. On this basis, the partners signed a certificate stating that in accordance with Civ. Code § 1916.1, the loan was not usurious. Defendants also made secured loans to four other plaintiff partnerships with interest exceeding the maximum legal rate. Each note provided that the loan was arranged through the same individual as a licensed real estate person (100 Cal. App. 4th. 802, 804-805) .

Subsequently, the five real estate partnerships sued the lender for loaning them money at allegedly usurious rates. Defendants moved for summary judgment, claiming the usury limitations did not apply because the loans were arranged by a real estate broker for compensation. The trial court granted summary judgment in all five actions, based on the exemption for loans arranged by a licensed real estate broker (100 Cal. App. 4th. 802, 804-805) .

The appellate court agreed that the exemption applied and affirmed the judgment. The plaintiffs argued that the exemption did not apply because the general partner neither "arranged" the loans nor performed acts requiring him to have a license. The appellate court found that both arguments lacked merit. Citing Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , discussed below, the court stated that a licensed real estate broker arranges a loan if he or she acts for another and receives or expects to receive compensation for it. The general partner negotiated the loans for each partnership's benefit, not merely for his own. Further, his right to participate in partnership profits satisfied the requirement that he expect compensation for his efforts (100 Cal. App. 4th 802, 806-808) . With respect to the plaintiffs' argument that the exemption did not apply because it was limited to brokers who engage in an activity requiring a license, and a license was not required unless the broker acts in expectation of special compensation, the court stated that the usury exemption is not so limited. Civ. Code § 1916.1 expressly provides that the phrase "made or arranged" applies even if the broker is not acting within the course and scope of the license. Again citing Stickel v. Harris, discussed below, the court held that the exemption applied even though the law did not require the general partner to be licensed when he arranged the loans (100 Cal. App. 4th 802, 808-810) .

The plaintiff in Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , was approached by one of the defendants, who was a licensed real estate broker, and asked to invest in a joint venture project to purchase real estate and build condominiums on the property. The broker first offered to pay 25 percent and then offered 30 percent on any amount loaned, and assured plaintiff that neither rate was usurious. The broker was one of the venture partners. The first loan was executed by two of the partners, bore interest at 30 percent per annum, and was to be repaid by October 15, 1981. It was secured by deeds of trust on the property. The partners made one interest payment, and asked plaintiff to consider extending the loan and advancing additional funds so they could acquire two new lots for another construction project. That note also bore interest at 30 percent per annum, was executed by three of the partners, and was to be repaid in six months. It was initially secured by deeds of trust on the original property, but those deeds of trust were substituted for a subordinate deed of trust on the new lots. The second loan was extended. The last extension was for an additional year and provided for the interest rate to be increased to 32.5 percent per annum. The partners experienced financial difficulties. After the holder of the first deed of trust foreclosed, plaintiff sued the partners to recover the interest arrearages and principal. Judgment was entered for plaintiff, and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Even though the transaction arose before Civ. Code § 1916.1 was enacted, the parties agreed that Civ. Code § 1916.1, as originally adopted and as amended, was entitled to retroactive application to this case (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 582 n.5). The court noted that Civ. Code § 1916.1 is construed to mean that a loan is "arranged by a person licensed as a real estate broker" only if two things occur: (1) the broker acts for another or others, not for himself or herself; and (2) the broker receives or expects to receive compensation (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 583) .

The facts and procedural background of Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 , are discussed in § 166.139[3][a]. In discussing whether the loan in question had been arranged by the partner who was licensed as a real estate broker, the court of appeal said that Civ. Code § 1916.1 clarifies Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742) , and provides that a loan is arranged by a person licensed as a real estate broker only if two things occur: (1) the broker acts for another or others, not for himself or herself; and (2) the broker receives or expects to receive compensation (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 743) .

[c] Minimal Broker Involvement Is Sufficient

Plaintiff in Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 , was transferred about the time a second trust deed loan matured. Plaintiff gave a power of attorney to a licensed real estate broker so the broker could arrange to have the loan refinanced. The broker could not arrange a refinance, so the broker contacted a second broker, who was a co-owner of a real estate brokerage firm. The second broker turned the transaction over to a licensed real estate salesperson who was the other co-owner of the brokerage firm. The salesperson found a lender who was willing to refinance for one year at 21 percent interest, plus 10 points. The first broker, who had power of attorney, accepted those terms. Under the second broker's supervision, the salesperson drafted the loan documents and opened the escrow. Plaintiff signed the note and second deed of trust. The entire commission was paid to the salesperson. Before the refinance note became due, the broker with the power of attorney negotiated an extension from the lender for another year, this time at 18 percent interest. Again, the salesperson drafted the loan documents and was paid the entire commission. Plaintiff made all interest payments due on the notes, paid the principal balance, received a reconveyance, and sued the lender and the salesperson, claiming the notes were usurious. The trial court gave judgment for defendants, holding that the loans were exempt under Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, and Civ. Code § 1916.1. Plaintiff appealed, contending that only transactions in which the broker is actively involved and receives compensation qualify for the exemption.

The court of appeal affirmed. The trial court found that the second broker was the first broker's contact, advising the lender in setting the terms and reviewing the documents, and that such participation, while minimal, was sufficient to qualify the loan as "broker arranged" (199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135) . The court of appeal said that factual findings on those issues are peculiarly the province of the trial court, and noted that in usury cases, the trier of fact is vested with the power to resolve many issues, including the ultimate question of whether a particular transaction is usurious. Therefore, appellate review is limited to deciding whether the trial court's findings are supported by substantial evidence. After reviewing the testimony of the second broker and the lender, the court concluded that the record supported the trial court's findings regarding participation (199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135) .

In Gibbo v. Berger (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 396, 403-404, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 629 , the lender sued to foreclose on a note, and in defense of the borrower's usury claim asserted that the loan was exempt because it had been arranged by a real estate broker. The trial court agreed, but in this case, because the facts at trial had been undisputed, the court of appeal reviewed the question de novo. The court of appeal concluded that the broker's conduct in this case was not sufficient to constitute "arrangement" of the loan. The broker had merely prepared documentation of loan terms already agreed upon by the lender and the borrower, and then ordered title insurance and disbursed funds in accordance with the lender and borrower's instructions. The court held that the broker must engage in some conduct as a third party intermediary that actually causes the loan to be obtained or procured (123 Cal. App. 4th 396, 403-404) .

In reaching this result, the court criticized the broad definition of "arranged" used in Del Mar v. Caspe (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 272 Cal. Rptr. 446 , discussed in § 166.135[4][a] as dicta that would lead to absurd results. Gibbo v.

Berger noted that the broad interpretation used in Del Mar v. Caspe was unnecessary because in that case the broker "arranged" the loan even under narrowest interpretation, and that such a broad interpretation would allow otherwise usurious loans when the real estate broker had done nothing more than photocopy and collate pages of a loan document for a nominal fee (123 Cal. App. 4th 396, 401-402) .

[d] Broad Definition of Compensation

The facts and procedural background of Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 , are discussed under § 166.135[3][c]. Regarding the question of the broker's compensation, although the broker received no specific benefit as recompense for the brokerage services rendered in connection with the loans, the trial court alluded to the business relationship between the broker and the salesperson. The court of appeal said that the trial court impliedly must have found that the broker was compensated through the commissions paid to his partner. The partnership agreement provided that each partner would keep commissions earned by him, while nonpartner salespersons split their commissions with the broker (199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135) . A portion of each commission earned by the partners was placed in the company account from which expenses were paid (199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135) . The court of appeal quoted Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 (discussed below), for the propositions that compensation is a concept that has received an extremely broad definition sufficient to encompass the receipt of just about any form of monetary or tangible benefit that is not self-bestowed, and that the issue of whether a payment, advantage, benefit, or other form of consideration amounts to compensation has traditionally been regarded as an issue to be decided by the trier of fact. The court of appeal said the trial court must have reasoned that the partners' practice of putting a portion of each commission back into the business ultimately enhanced the partnership operation, and both partners expected to reap the benefits of this particular contribution through future profitability. Although this form of compensation may be unorthodox, the court concluded that it was sufficient (199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136) .

The facts and procedural background of Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , are discussed under § 166.135[3][b]. The court said that precisely what constitutes "compensation" for purposes of Civ. Code § 1916.1 was a question of first impression. Within the context of other statutes, compensation is a concept that has received an extremely broad definition sufficient to encompass the receipt of just about any form of monetary or tangible benefit that is not self-bestowed. The nature of compensation is as variable as the particular facts involved. The court also noted that the term "interest" has been treated with a similar expansiveness. Further, whether a payment, advantage, benefit, or other form of consideration amounts to compensation traditionally has been regarded as an issue to be decided by the trier of fact (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584) .

[e] Existence of Compensation Is Determined by Trier of Fact

See the discussion of Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 , and Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , under § 166.135[3][d].

[f] Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker Is Determined by Trier of Fact

Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 , is discussed under § 166.135[3][c].

The facts and procedural background of Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , are discussed under § 166.135[3][b]. The court also noted that in usury cases, the trier of fact is vested with the power to resolve many issues attending and including the ultimate question of whether a particular transaction is usurious. Thus, the issue of whether the second broker "arranged" a nonusurious loan within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1916.1 is committed to the trier of fact unless, as a matter of law, a given transaction failed to meet the two-prong test previously cited. The only task for the appellate court is to decide whether the trial court's determination that the loan was exempt is supported by substantial evidence (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 584) .

[g] Loan to Entity of Which Broker Is Member

The facts and procedural background of Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , are discussed under § 166.135[3][b]. The court of appeal said the broker clearly was not soliciting the loans for himself, but as an intermediary for the partnership and joint venture. Further, that status was not forfeited when the broker became a member of those entities (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 585) . The joint venture that purchased the second parcel was not formed until after the second note had been executed (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 580 n.2). Thus, defendants argued that the broker could not have been acting for the venture in arranging the loan. The court of appeal analogized to preincorporation contracts entered into by corporate promoters, saying that if the corporation is subsequently formed and accepts the benefits of the contract, the promoter's contract becomes enforceable against the corporation (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 586) . The court found no reason in law or logic not to extend the same reasoning to this situation, noting that the venture ratified the loan by making interest payments (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 586-587) .

[h] Anticipated Profit Qualifies as Broker's Compensation

The facts and procedural background of Stickel v. Harris (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 242 Cal. Rptr. 88 , are discussed under § 166.135[3][b]. Other portions of the opinion relating to the compensation issue are discussed under § 166.135[3][d]. The only compensation the broker expected to receive was his share of the profits generated by the sale of condominiums, the profits of which would be paid to the partners at the conclusion of the project. That was sufficient to qualify for the exemption. The fact that the broker's recompense would be deferred until the completion of the project was irrelevant, because anticipated profits qualify as compensation (196 Cal. App. 3d 575, 585) .

[i] Contribution to Expenses Qualifies as Broker's Compensation

See the discussion of Jones v. Kallman (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 131, 244 Cal. Rptr. 609 , in § 166.135[3][d].

[j] Retroactive Application of Exemption

The facts and procedural background of Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 206 Cal. Rptr. 251 , are discussed in § 166.136[3][a]. The court of appeal noted that the exemption of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, for loans made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers is applied retroactively to transactions that occurred before enactment of the exemption. Retroactive application is based on the rationale that remedies previously provided for allegedly usurious contracts are in the nature of penalty, and that no person has a vested right in an unenforced penalty or forfeiture (159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096) .

The trial court in Chapman v. Farr (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 183 Cal. Rptr. 606 , awarded damages, and injunctive and declaratory relief based on a finding that a loan arranged by a licensed real estate broker was usurious. Three months after entry of that judgment, Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 was amended by referendum to exempt such loans. The sole question on appeal was whether that amendment should be applied retroactively. The court of appeal concluded that it should be so applied, based on the rule that statutes that repeal or modify usury laws are to be given retrospective effect to determine the scope of liability with regard to transactions entered into before the repeal or modification. That rule is an application of another well-established principle that no person nor the state has a vested right in an unenforced statutory penalty or forfeiture (132 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 1023) . The remedies previously provided for allegedly usurious contracts are in the nature of a penalty. Thus the foregoing rules are applicable to exempt all broker-arranged loans made before November 6, 1979, whether or not any action on the loan was reduced to judgment (132 Cal. App. 3d 1021, 1024) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker

In Stoneridge Parkway Partners, LLC v. MW Housing Partners III, L.P. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 64 Cal. Rptr.

3d 61 , the issue for the court was whether a broker who negotiates a loan on behalf of the lender, and who is an officer and employee of an affiliate of the lender but is not employed by the lender itself, negotiates the loan "for another" as Civ. Code § 1916.1 provides. The court concluded that the broker in this case did negotiate the loan for another and that, therefore, the usury prohibition did not apply (153 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1379-1380) .

The court of appeal in Del Mar v. Caspe (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 272 Cal. Rptr. 446 , affirmed the trial court's holding in regard to two of the three notes that were at issue in the case. The court declared that they were not usurious, because they fell within the exemption for loans arranged by licensed real estate brokers. The third note was executed at a time when the party who arranged them was a licensed attorney, but not a licensed real estate broker. Thus, judgment was reversed regarding the third note. The attorney/real estate broker's involvement on behalf of the payee of the three notes consisted of title searches on the real property that secured the notes, document reviews, consultations and advisement, calculation of principal and interest (all three notes were consolidations and renewals of prior notes and additional advances), preparation of loan documents, discussion of documents and terms with the lender and the borrower, and securing execution of the documents (222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 1328) .

The court of appeal reviewed the legislative analysis to the ballot proposition that enacted the constitutional exemption and to the legislative history of Civ. Code § 1916.1, and determined that a broad rather than narrow construction of the exemption is appropriate and most apt to realize its purpose (222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 1326) . The court found that the broker's services were within the common understanding of the term "arrange," and were not nominal or ostensibly pretext, that is, there was no evidence that the broker merely lent his license to the payee to avoid the 10 percent interest limitation (222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 1328-1329) . The fact that the notes were all renewals and consolidations was irrelevant to the question of whether the broker's services constituted sufficient involvement in the transactions to come within the meaning of the term "arrange" (222 Cal. App. 3d 1316, 1329) .

[b] Retroactive Application of Exemption

The court of appeal in Orden v. Crawshaw Mortgage & Investment Co. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 141, 167 Cal. Rptr. 62 , affirmed a judgment in favor of a licensed real estate broker holding a loan made by the broker at a variable rate often in excess of 10 percent per annum was not usurious. The loan originated in 1974 and judgment was entered after passage of Proposition 2 in 1979, which added the exemption for loans secured by real property and made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers. The court said it is a generally recognized principal of law that the right to recover a penalty imposed under a usury statute terminates with the repeal or modification of the statute unless the repealing statue contains a savings clause (109 Cal. App. 3d 141, 144) . Since no person nor the state has a vested right in an unenforced penalty or forfeiture, the court applied the rule that statutes that repeal or modify usury laws are to be given retrospective effect to determine the scope of liability with regard to transactions entered into before the repeal or modification (109 Cal. App. 3d 141, 145-146) .

195 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.136

§ 166.136 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Loan Made by Licensed Real Estate Broker as Principal [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE NOTE IS NOT USURIOUS BECAUSE IT QUALIFIES FOR THE EXEMPTION FOR LOANS MADE BY LICENSED REAL ESTATE BROKERS, EVEN THOUGH PLAINTIFF BROKER ACTED AS PRINCIPAL IN THE TRANSACTION.

A. Statement of Exemption. [See § 166.135, Paragraph A.]

B. Broker as Lender. A loan made by a licensed real estate broker, as principal rather than as agent for others, is within the usury exemption provided by California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1 and Civil Code Section 1916.1 (Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1097-1098, 206 Cal. Rptr. 251).

[Optional] C. Retroactive Application of Exemption. [See § 166.135, Paragraph J.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in supporting the contention that a loan made by a licensed real estate broker as principal may qualify for the usury exemption provided by Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, and Civ. Code § 1916.1. Additional points from § 166.135 may also be added as appropriate in a particular case.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the loan is not usurious.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

These points and authorities may be combined, as appropriate, with those in § 166.131, which address additional aspects of usury and its application to a situation involving a holder in due course.

Note that even an interest rate exempted from the usury law may be unenforceable on the ground of unconscionability [see Civ. Code § 1670.5; Carboni v. Arrospide (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 76, 81-85, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845] . For memoranda of points and authorities addressing unconscionability, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker as Lender

Plaintiffs in Garcia v. Wetzel (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 206 Cal. Rptr. 251 , were about to have their real property sold at foreclosure when defendant, a licensed real estate broker, offered to lend them the sum required to redeem the property and to assume their existing loan on the property. This was done by deed from plaintiffs to defendant and by a written deposit receipt agreement, which granted plaintiffs a 30-day option to repurchase the property at approximately $4,000 more than defendant paid to redeem the loan. Plaintiffs exercised the repurchase option, paid the full amount, received reconveyance, and sued for a determination that the $4,000 represented usurious interest in violation of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1. Judgment was entered in favor of defendant, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Although defendant claimed that the transaction was secured by the real property, the court disagreed (159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096 n.3). Defendant admitted that he was not acting as broker, but was acting as a principal, for his own benefit. The court pointed out that defendant was not acting within the scope of his real estate broker's license and that defendant was not required to be licensed as a broker to make this loan. The court noted the 1983 enactment of Civ. Code § 1916.1 and focused on the last sentence of that section, which states that the term "made or arranged" includes any loan made by a person licensed as a real estate broker as a principal or as an agent for others, and whether or not the person is acting within the course and scope of his or her license. The court considered the enactment of Civ. Code § 1916.1 as the Legislature's interpretation of the constitutional provision, and said it was bound by that interpretation provided it was not unreasonable (159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1097) . Without addressing any further the unsecured nature of the transaction, the court affirmed the judgment in favor of the defendant (159 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1098) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.137

§ 166.137 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Note Generated in Bona Fide Purchase and Sale Is Not Loan or Forbearance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE NOTE IS NOT USURIOUS BECAUSE IT IS PART OF A BONA FIDE CREDIT SALE.

Bona Fide Credit Sale. The owner of property may offer to sell at a designated price for cash or at a much higher price on credit. A bona fide credit sale is not a "loan or forbearance" and will not constitute usury, however great the difference between the two prices, unless the buying and selling was a mere pretense (Ghirardo v. Antoniolo (1995) 8 Cal. 4th 791, 803-804, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418, 883 P.2d 960 ; Verbeck v. Clymer (1927) 202 Cal. 557, 563, 261 P. 1017 ; DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 733, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a negotiable instrument is not usurious because it is part of a bona fide credit sale.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the particular case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should insert facts, or refer to findings, establishing that the transaction is a bone fide sale.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the instrument is not usurious.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

Ch. 121, Interest, contains points and authorities that address the related concept of "time price" differentials as not being loans or forbearances and therefore outside the usury law.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bona Fide Credit Sale

Ghirardo v. Antoniolo (1995) 8 Cal. 4th 791, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418, 883 P.2d 960 , involved a debt restructuring agreed to between plaintiff, a buyer of real property, and defendant, who had sold the property to an intermediate owner from whom plaintiff purchased it. In buying the property, plaintiff had executed a promissory note and deed of trust, and also had taken the property subject to a previous deed of trust executed by the intermediate owner in favor of defendant. A dispute arose over payment under these notes, and after defendant instituted nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings, a settlement was reached in which plaintiff agreed to pay a sum of cash, execute two new notes, and pay an additional fee. That additional fee made the effective rate of interest on the larger of the two notes higher than the maximum permissible rate of interest. After a further dispute arose between the parties, plaintiff instituted an action for damages, treble interest, prejudgment interest, and attorney's fees, claiming that the restructured notes were was usurious. The trial court found that the settlement notes were usurious. The court of appeal affirmed, and the defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that the transaction was not usurious. The Court reviewed the essential elements of usury (8 Cal. 4th 791, 798) , noting that the first element requires that the transaction be a loan or forbearance, but that the creation of a debtor-creditor relationship does not, without more, constitute a loan (8 Cal. 4th 791, 802) . In this case, the Court reasoned that the defendant's transfer of an interest in real property to the intermediate owner (and then to the plaintiff buyer) in exchange for promissory notes and a deed of trust was not a loan, but a sale (8 Cal. 4th 791, 802) . Citing Verbeck v. Clymer (1927) 202 Cal. 557, 563, 261 P. 1017 (discussed below), the Court reiterated that such sales were exempt from the usury doctrine under the credit-sale doctrine. This doctrine applies, the Court wrote, when the seller finances the purchase of property by extending payments over time and charging a higher price for carrying the financing (8 Cal. 4th 791, 803) . In response to the plaintiff's contention that the restructuring (the execution of the two notes) constituted a loan, to which the credit-sale exemption should not apply, the Court noted the substantial similarity between the settlement and resulting notes in this case and the credit-sale modification approved in DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778 (discussed below) and concluded that the rule stated in DCM Partners v. Smith was sound: since a credit sale is exempt from the usury law, so is a modification of a credit sale (8 Cal. 4th 791, 807) . The Court further held that the exemption is applicable even though the interest rate on the modification was greater than that on the original transaction (8 Cal. 4th 791, 805-806) . The Court reasoned that it would be impractical and unfair to both buyer and seller if the only alternative to foreclosure for a seller who had suffered a default was the extension of credit to the buyer on new terms favorable only to the buyer (8 Cal. 4th 791, 804-806) .

Verbeck v. Clymer (1927) 202 Cal. 557, 261 P. 1017 , was an ejectment action in which defendant cross complained, claiming to be entitled to possession of the property without making payments on the note because the note provided for interest that was usurious. The transaction of the parties called for sale to defendant of premises owned by plaintiff for $20,000. The initial payment was $5,000. The remaining $15,000 was payable over fifteen years with payments of $200 per month. Judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court said the contract was admittedly a bona fide sale and purchase of real property in which the vendor retained title. There is no element in the transaction that is a loan. The transaction was not a subterfuge devised to conceal what was in fact a loan. In view of this conclusion, there is no support for the contention that the usury law will intervene to give equitable relief to defendants or to penalize plaintiffs. Clearly, any person owning property may sell it at whatever price and on whatever terms as to time and mode of payment he or she sees fit.

Such a sale cannot be usurious, however unconscionable it may be. The first element of a usurious transaction is that there be a loan or forbearance of money; if there is neither, there is no usury. The owner of property has a perfect right to name the price for which he or she is willing to sell, and to refuse to accede to any other. The seller may offer to sell at a designated price for cash or at a much higher price on credit; and unless the buying and selling was a mere pretense, such a credit sale will not constitute usury however great the difference between the two prices. It is not material that the agreement for the purchase price in the future does not specify the whole sum then to be paid, but rather names a particular sum as principal and declares that it shall draw interest at a rate which, were the transaction a borrowing and lending, would clearly be usurious (202 Cal. 557, 563) .

Plaintiff in DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778 , purchased real property from defendant and her former spouse in 1979. As part of the transaction, plaintiff made a note payable to sellers for $160,000. It was secured and bore interest at 10 percent per annum. Before the initial due date in 1984, plaintiff asked sellers to extend the due date, which sellers agreed to do in consideration of increasing the interest rate to 15 percent. The "legal rate" at the time under Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, was 14 percent. After the modified note was fully paid, plaintiff instituted an action to recover what it alleged to be usurious interest. Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court recited the relevant portions of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, which provide that the interest rate for a loan or forbearance of money not primarily for personal, family, or household purposes is limited to the higher of (1) 10 percent per annum, or (2) 5 percent plus the rate of interest prevailing on the 25th day of the month preceding the earlier of the date of the extension of the contract to make the loan or forbearance or the date of making the loan or forbearance, established by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco on advances to member banks under Sections 13 and 13(1) of the Federal Reserve Act. Thus, if the federal reserve rate was nine percent at the time in question, then 15 percent would be a usurious rate, if the transaction was a loan or forbearance. Sensitive to the ingenuity and creativity of those entrepreneurs willing to engage in legal brinkmanship to maximize profits, courts have carefully scrutinized the form of seemingly innocuous commercial transactions to determine whether the substance amounts to a usurious arrangement. A bona fide credit sale is not a loan or forbearance. The articulated rationale for this distinction is that the owner of property may offer to sell at a designated price for cash or at a much higher price on credit, and a credit sale will not constitute usury however great the difference between the two prices, unless the buying and selling was a mere pretense. It is not material that the agreement for the purchase price in the future does not specify the whole sum then to be paid, but rather names a particular sum as principal and declares that it shall draw interest at a rate which, were the transaction a borrowing and lending, would clearly be usurious (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 733) . Based on this principle, the initial transaction between the sellers and plaintiff was not usurious (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 734) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.138

§ 166.138 Supporting Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption Applicable--Modification [Refinance] of Note Initially Generated in Bona Fide Purchase and Sale Continues to Be Exempt

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

THE MODIFIED NOTE IS NOT USURIOUS BECAUSE IT RETAINS ITS EXEMPT CHARACTER AS PART OF A BONA FIDE CREDIT SALE.

A. Bona Fide Credit Sale. [See § 166.137.]

B. Modified Note Remains Exempt. When a note that is part of a bone fide credit sale is modified at the request of the buyer/maker, the modified note remains exempt from usury law (Ghirardo v. Antoniolo (1995) 8 Cal. 4th 791, 806-807, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418, 883 P.2d 960 ; DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 734-738, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a renewal, extension, or modification note is not usurious because it retains its exempt character as part of a bona fide credit sale.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the particular case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should insert facts, or refer to findings, establishing that the initial transaction is a bone fide sale and that the modification was initiated by the maker.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the modified note is not usurious.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Modified Note Remains Exempt

The facts and procedural background of Ghirardo v. Antoniolo (1995) 8 Cal. 4th 791, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418, 883 P.2d 960 , are discussed in § 166.137[3][a]. In Ghirardo, the Supreme Court upheld the court of appeal's ruling in DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778 , discussed below, and specifically approved the credit-sale modification rule approved in that case (8 Cal. 4th 791, 806-807) . The Supreme Court held that the settlement notes at issue in Ghirardo were the functional equivalents of a modification to an originally exempt credit sale, and that such a modification is not subject to the usury laws (8 Cal. 4th 791, 807) .

The facts and procedural background of DCM Partners v. Smith (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 278 Cal. Rptr. 778 , are discussed in § 166.137[3][a]. The court did not agree with the theory, advanced by defendant, that the crucial determinant was the fact that the extension and modification occurred before the original note became due (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 734-735) . The court considered it unfair to conclude that the modification was usurious when the original transaction was not. Powerful reasons should exist before the law transmutes a legal transaction into an illegal one, particularly when the illegality places the entire financial burden on one party with the other seemingly unjustly enriched having the benefit of an interest-free loan (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 735) . This situation in part is governed by the general principle that a debtor by voluntary act cannot render an otherwise valid transaction usurious. If the sellers had foreclosed when plaintiff could not meet the balloon payment, the sellers could have sold the property back to plaintiff again and any new note that was part of the second sale would be exempt. The general principle that precludes a debtor's voluntary act from making a nonusurious transaction usurious applied in light of plaintiff's implied request to avoid the time, risk, and expense of the more complicated process of reacquisition and sale (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 736) . In addition, treating the modified note as usurious would be anomalous when a modified note retains its character as a purchase money mortgage for purposes of depriving the lender/seller of any right to seek a deficiency judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 580b] (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 737) . Thus, treating this transaction as remaining nonusurious is consistent with the law's unwillingness to change the modified secured note into a nonpurchse money obligation. When the law insists the legal effect of the bargain continues for one purpose, absent valid reasons that same bargain should continue for other purposes (228 Cal. App. 3d 729, 738) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.139

§ 166.139 Opposing Contention That Maker Is Liable for Interest on Note--Usury Exemption for Loan Arranged by Licensed Real Estate Broker and Secured by Real Property [Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1] Is Not Applicable--Broker Was Borrower

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.]

_____ [Name of maker] IS NOT LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF ANY INTEREST ON THE NOTE PRIOR TO ITS MATURITY BECAUSE THE NOTE WAS NEITHER MADE NOR ARRANGED BY A LICENSED REAL ESTATE BROKER WITHIN THE MEANING OF THE USURY EXEMPTION.

A. Statement of Exemption. [See § 166.135, Paragraph A.]

[Optional] B. Test to Determine Whether Loan Was Arranged by Broker. [See § 166.135, Paragraph B.]

[EITHER]

C. Loan Is Not Made by Broker Who Is Borrower. The usury exemption provided by California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1 and Civil Code Section 1916.1 for loans secured by real property and made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers does not apply to a loan made to a broker as the borrower. [As a matter of law, neither lending nor borrowing necessarily involves arranging] (Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742-743, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 ; see Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 917, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 (dicta)).

[AND/OR]

D. Loan Is Not Arranged by Broker Who Is Borrower. When a transaction is between a borrower and a lender, each acting on his or her own behalf, and there is no third-party licensed real estate broker acting for compensation as an intermediary, the loan is not "arranged" by a broker within the meaning of the usury exemption provided by California Constitution, Article XV, Section 1 and Civil Code Section 1916.1 (Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 917, 920, 921, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 ; Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 743, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3).

[CONTINUE]

E. Usurious Interest Provision Void. [See § 166.133, Paragraph A.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention that a loan to a licensed real estate broker qualifies for the usury exemption allowed to loans secured by real property and made or arranged by licensed real estate brokers [see Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1; Civ. Code § 1916.1]. Paragraphs A and B set forth the statutory authority and general statement of the criteria for the exemption. Paragraphs C and/or D establish that the exemption does not apply when the broker is the borrower and no third party is acting as an intermediary in arranging the loan.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that usury exemption does not apply.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

These points and authorities may be combined, as appropriate in a particular situation, with those in §§ 166.132 and 166.133, which address additional aspects of usury and its application to a situation involving a holder in due course. The points and authorities in §§ 166.135 -166.136 generally oppose those in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loan Is Not Made by Broker Who Is Borrower

Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 , was a foreclosure action by payees of a promissory note secured by a deed of trust on real property owned by the general partnership "Future Two." When the partnership sought to refinance the existing loan on its property, one of the general partners, who was a licensed real estate broker, contacted a friend. The friend arranged a meeting between plaintiffs and the partners. Defendant executed a note for $156,000, and received that amount from plaintiffs, although $26,000 was paid immediately to plaintiffs as "points." The note called for interest at the rate of 10 percent per annum until maturity (one year) and 25 percent after that. The trial court granted judgment allowing plaintiffs to foreclose, but found the note usurious and denied any interest prior to maturity. The sums previously paid as interest, which included the $26,000 paid as points, were credited to principal. Interest at seven percent per annum was awarded on that reduced principal from the maturity of the note to the date of judgment. Plaintiffs appealed, contending that the note was not usurious because it had been made or arranged by a broker and that interest should have been allowed at the rate of 10 percent per annum rather than seven percent per annum from maturity to the date of the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed. First the court discussed the language of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1. The court concluded that the loan was not made by the partner who was a broker and that thus the exemption for loans made by real estate brokers was inapplicable. The broker was one of the borrowers. A borrower does not make a loan; he or she receives or obtains a loan from a lender. Also, the court noted that the exemption for loans made or arranged by brokers was contained in the same sentence of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, that exempted loans made by other types of lenders, all of which were in the business of lending money (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742) .

The facts and procedural background of Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 , are discussed under § 166.139[3][b]. The court of appeal pointed out that the meaning of the term "made" was not in issue. In the language of the constitutional and statutory provisions, as well as in common parlance, an exempt loan is "made" under the real estate broker exemption when the broker acts as principal in the transaction by lending his or her own money. When, as here, the only participant in the transaction who is licensed as a real estate broker is the borrower, the loan has not been "made" by the broker within the meaning of the exemption. Defendants did not contend to the contrary (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 917) .

[b] Loan Is Not Arranged by Broker Who Is Borrower

Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 , was initiated as an action by a borrower-trustor to have a threatened private foreclosure sale enjoined on the ground that the note was usurious. The note provided for interest at the rate of 40 percent per annum. The borrower was a licensed real estate broker, and the trial court refused to grant a preliminary injunction, concluding that plaintiff had arranged the loan within the meaning of the exemption provided by Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, and Civ. Code § 1916.1. After the foreclosure sale, the borrower amended the complaint to seek to have the sale set aside. The trial court granted judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The disagreement concerned precisely what activities on the part of a licensed real estate broker constitute arrangement of a loan. Defendants contended that the identity of the arranger turns on the relative involvement of the borrower and lender in the necessary and formal steps culminating in the loan. The court disagreed, saying such a mechanical approach rendered the term "arranged" almost meaningless because every borrower participates in arranging a loan, if only by signing the note and holding out his or her hand to receive the money, and every lender participates, if only by securing the necessary funds and tendering the money (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 918) . The court discussed various rules of constitutional and statutory interpretation and considered the statement of the Legislative Analyst in the ballot pamphlet for the proposition that led to enactment of the exemption for broker arranged loans (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 918-920) . The court also considered the statement of legislative findings declaring the justification for this exemption [see Stats. 1983, ch. 307, § 2], which, it said, was not applicable when the borrower was a licensed real estate broker (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 920) . The court concluded that when a transaction is between a borrower and lender, each acting on his or her own behalf, and there is no third-party licensed real estate broker acting for compensation as an intermediary, the loan is not "arranged" by a broker within the meaning of the usury law (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 920, 921) .

The facts and procedural background of Green v. Future Two (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 225 Cal. Rptr. 3 , are discussed under § 166.139[3][b]. Discussing whether the loan had been arranged by the partner who was a licensed real estate broker, the court of appeal noted the trial court's finding that the loan was arranged by the friend who brought the parties together (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742) . The court said this narrowed the issue to whether, as a matter of law, a secured loan to a real estate broker acting on his or her own behalf is "arranged" by the broker and therefore exempt from the usury restrictions. To so hold, the court would have to find that a borrower is necessarily an arranger. Such a finding, the court said, is not justified. A loan set up or shaped by an intermediary may be said to be arranged by the intermediary, but neither lending nor borrowing necessarily involves arranging (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742) . The court set forth the two-part test for determining whether a loan is arranged by a broker within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1916.1 (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742-743) [see discussion in § 166.135[3][b]]. Excluded from the exemption under this test is a broker who, as in this case, acts for himself or herself. Also excluded is a broker who, as in this case, does not receive or expect to receive compensation (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 743) . The court said they were not unmindful of the final sentence of Civ. Code § 1916.1, which reads, "The term 'made or arranged' includes any loan made by a person licensed as a real estate broker as a principal or as an agent for others, whether or not the person is acting within the course and scope of his or her license." This literally excepts from the usury restriction loans made by licensed brokers whether or not they are acting as brokers. Although the legislative policy of exempting loans made by brokers although they are not acting as brokers, while not exempting loans received by brokers who are not acting as brokers, is not readily apparent, it is entirely consistent with the basic approach of Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, which exempts loans made by various types of lenders but does not in any manner deal with the type of borrower (179 Cal. App. 3d 738, 743) .

199 of 199 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 166 NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS
PART II. FORMS
E. Defenses

16-166 California Points & Authorities § 166.140

§ 166.140 Supporting Contention That Usury Law Does Not Apply--Note Was Element of Joint Venture, Instead of Evidence of Loan, Between Maker and Holder

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions]

THE USURY LAW DOES NOT APPLY WHEN A PROMISSORY NOTE WAS MADE TO EFFECTUATE A JOINT VENTURE, INSTEAD OF TO MEMORIALIZE A LOAN, BETWEEN THE MAKER AND THE HOLDER. THE HOLDER MAY ENFORCE THE NOTE WITHOUT REGARD TO WHETHER THE TERMS WOULD VIOLATE THE USURY LAW.

A. Promissory Note Can Be Aspect of Joint Venture Between Maker and Holder. A promissory note can be an aspect of a joint venture, instead of evidence of a loan, between the maker and the holder (Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582).

B. Nature of Transaction Is Question of Fact. Whether a transaction is a joint venture or a loan is a question of fact (Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582).

C. Several Facts, Considered Together, Support Conclusion That Transaction Was Joint Venture. The conclusion that the transaction in this case was a joint venture, not a loan, is supported by the following facts, considered together:

[Delete any of the following that are inapplicable to the particular case at issue:]

(1) The purpose of the transaction was to purchase a parcel of real estate from a third person.

(2) The purchase was financed by a loan from a third person, and both the maker and the holder of the note in question were jointly obligated to repay the purchase money loan.

(3) The note in question covered the holder's contribution of cash to make up the difference between the purchase price and the purchase money loan.

(4) The vendor's deed named both the maker and the holder of the note in question as grantees.

(5) The holder of the note in question assumed the risk of loss of capital in the transaction.

(6) The maker and the holder of the note in question both testified that they considered themselves to be partners in the transaction.

(Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156-1157, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582)

D. Usury Law Does Not Apply to Note Between Joint Venturers. When all of the facts, considered together, show that a promissory note was made to effectuate a joint venture, not to memorialize a loan, between the maker and the holder, the usury law does not apply. The holder may enforce the note without regard to whether its terms would violate the usury law (Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1157-1158, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support the contention that the usury law does not apply because a promissory note, which the maker asserts is evidence of a usurious loan, actually was created to effectuate a joint venture, instead of a loan, between the maker and the holder.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The facts listed in Paragraph C as evidencing a joint venture rather than a loan are based on those in Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156-1157, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , which is cited as authority for that paragraph. If those facts exist in a particular case, they should be cited in support of the argument. If not all of those factors exist in a particular case, or if other factors do exist to support the existence of a joint venture, Paragraph C should be modified as appropriate.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the usury law does not apply.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promissory Note Can Be Aspect of Joint Venture Between Maker and Holder

In Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , the maker of a promissory note resisted the holder's efforts to enforce the note. The maker asserted that the note was unenforceable because it provided for usurious interest. The holder asserted that the usury law did not apply because the note was made to effectuate a joint venture in which the parties undertook to invest in a parcel of real property, which they jointly purchased from a third person. The trial court found that the evidence showed a joint venture; therefore, the court concluded, the usury law did not apply. Judgment was rendered in favor of the holder of the note.

The court of appeal affirmed. One of the key points in the court's analysis was that, while the existence of the note "would tend to undermine the conclusion that a joint venture existed," in fact "the note was not executed in isolation. It was simply one aspect of a larger transaction under which [the maker and the holder] invested jointly" in the parcel of real property. Therefore, in context, the existence of the note was "only slightly" indicative of a loan (180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156) . Other facts overwhelmingly indicated a joint venture [see § 166.140[3][b] -[d]].

[b] Nature of Transaction Is Question of Fact

Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , is described in § 166.140[3][a]. The court observed that whether a transaction is a joint venture or a loan is a question of fact, and the answer depends on resolving several factual issues. "One is whether there is an absolute obligation of repayment [by the maker of the note in question]. Another is whether the investor [who holds the note] may suffer a risk of loss. Another factor courts consider is whether the investor has any right to participate in management. The identity of the seller is also a factor. If the venture between the parties involves the acquisition of property from a third party, the courts tend to conclude that the arrangement between the parties was a risk capital venture and not a loan. The presence or absence of any one factor is not conclusive when characterizing a transaction" (180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1155-1156) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

[c] Several Facts, Considered Together, Support Conclusion That Transaction Was Joint Venture

Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , is described in § 166.140[3][a]. The court reviewed the evidence and concluded that the parties' transaction was a joint venture, not a loan (180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1156-1157) :

> In this case, [the maker of the note in question] and [the holder] both testified that they considered themselves to be partners in this venture. We view this as strong evidence that the joint venture existed.
>
> [The maker] and [the holder] were both on the title to the property and both were jointly obligated on the [purchase-money] loan. Again, we view this as strong evidence that the joint venture existed.
>
> * * *
>
> This leads us to another factor: whether [the holder] assumed a risk of the loss of capital. The answer is clearly yes. [The holder] was on the title to this property and under his agreement with [the maker] he owned 10 percent of the property. If the venture failed, [the holder]'s investment could be worth nothing. Clearly, [the holder] assumed a risk that he might suffer a loss.
>
> There is no evidence that [the holder] participated in the management of this venture. Indeed, the evidence showed [the maker] was the motivating force behind the purchase. He selected the property, arranged the financing, and even drafted the note that he signed in favor of [the holder]. On the other hand, there is no evidence that [the holder] was precluded from participating in the management of the venture. Rather, it appears [the holder] voluntarily ceded control to his partner. We view this factor as neutral.
>
> Finally, [the maker] and [the holder] purchased this property from third parties. This tends to support the conclusion that a joint venture existed.
>
> Weighing these factors de novo we agree with the trial court. The joint venture exception to the usury rules applied.

[d] Usury Law Does Not Apply to Note Between Joint Venturers

Junkin v. Golden West Foreclosure Serv., Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 582 , is described in § 166.140[3][a]. After reviewing the evidence, the court rejected several arguments by the maker of the note in question. The existence of the note, entitling the holder to unconditional payment, was not dispositive, especially since the holder had in fact put capital at risk [see § 166.140[3][a], [c]]. The fact that the holder of the note did not exercise any control of the investment transaction was not determinative; he could have exercised some control but simply did not, and, in any event, both parties testified that they were partners [see § 166.140[3][c]]. The holder's failure to provide additional funding after the purchase of the property was irrelevant because there was no contractual obligation to do that. Finally, there was no equitable ground for refusing to enforce the note. The maker was "a highly experienced real estate investor who saw an opportunity to make money on a well-located piece of land. Now that the deal has soured, he seeks to use the courts to evade the consequences of the transaction that he himself structured. We decline to apply the equitable doctrine of estoppel here. We conclude the trial court correctly ruled that the joint venture exception to the usury rules applied." (180 Cal. App. 4th 1150, 1157-1158) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE

16-167 California Points & Authorities 167.syn

§ 167.syn Synopsis to Chapter 167: NUISANCE

§ 167.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 167.02 Governing Statutes

§ 167.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 167.04-167.19 [Reserved]

§ 167.20 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Private Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3481, 3501; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Interference With Use or Enjoyment of Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Interferes With Use or Enjoyment of Property Interest

[b] Sufficiency of Property Interest

[c] Tenancy for Term as Property Interest

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Property Interest

[b] Tenancy for Term as Property Interest

§ 167.21 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Special Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Different in Kind and Not Just in Degree

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Specific Injury to Plaintiff Alleged

[b] Injury Different in Kind and Not Just in Degree

§ 167.22 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance Without Showing of Special Injury [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Nuisance Both Private and Public

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Both Public and Private

[b] Plaintiff Need Not Show Damage Different in Kind From That Suffered by General Public

[c] Number of Persons Affected Not Conclusive

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Need Not Show Damage Different in Kind to That Suffered by General Public

§ 167.23 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition Is Broad

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Definition Is Broad

§ 167.24 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Unreasonable Use of Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Use

[b] Existence of Nuisance Is Matter of Degree and Depends on Circumstances

[c] Factors Considered

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Use

§ 167.25 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Fire Hazards

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fire Hazard as Nuisance

[b] Construction in Accord With Previous Standards Not a Defense

§ 167.26 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow as Nuisance

[b] Single Flood Constitutes Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow as Nuisance

§ 167.27 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Water and Air Pollution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pollution as Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pollution as Nuisance

§ 167.28 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obstruction of Streets

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obstruction of Streets as Nuisance

[b] Chemical Fog as Obstruction

§ 167.29 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Noise

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Noise as Nuisance

[b] Airport as Nuisance

[c] Airport Proprietor-Landlord Liable for Damages

§ 167.30 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Odors

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Odors as Nuisance

§ 167.31 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obscenity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obscenity as Nuisance

[b] Clear and Convincing Proof of Obscenity for Abatement

§ 167.32 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Places Used for Unlawfully Selling Controlled Substances ("Drug Houses") [Health & Safety Code § 11570 et seq.]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Use

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable in Lieu of Action for Abatement

§ 167.33 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Unnecessary Use and Injurious Method of Operation in Area Zoned for Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unnecessary and Injurious Method of Operation in Area Zoned for Purpose

§ 167.34 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Nuisance May Be Created On Plaintiff's Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery for Nuisance Is Not Limited to Offensive Use of Neighboring Lands

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery for Nuisance Is Not Limited to Offensive Use of Neighboring Lands

§ 167.35 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479]--Activity or Conduct Is Within Statutory Definition of Public Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3480]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

[b] Gang Activity Constitutes Public Nuisance

[c] Use of Lead for Interior Paint Can Constitute Public Nuisance

§ 167.36 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance Per Se--Proof of Injury Not Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legislative Declaration of Nuisance

[b] Municipal Declaration of Nuisance

[c] Interference With Flow of Water

[d] Proof of Injury Not Required for Injuntive Relief From Nuisance Per Se

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legislative Declaration of Nuisance

[b] Municipal Declaration of Nuisance

[c] Proof of Injury Not Required for Injunctive Relief from Nuisance Per Se

§ 167.37 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Consent Not a Defense--Violation of Ordinance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Ordinance Negates Consent

§ 167.38 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Consent Not a Defense--Consent by Plaintiff's Grantor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acquiescence of Plaintiff's Grantor or Predecessor Not Defense

§ 167.39 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Adoption of Most Approved Appliances and Methods of Production Not Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Adoption of Most Approved Appliances and Methods of Production Not Defense

§ 167.40 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

§ 167.41 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Nuisance Created to Relieve Its Creator From Injury Caused by Third Party Not a Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creation of Nuisance to Abate Injury

§ 167.42 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defendant Successor With Actual or

Constructive Knowledge of Nuisance Who Neglected to Abate Continuing Nuisance on Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Actual or Constructive Knowledge

§ 167.43 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defense of Statutory Authorization [Civ. Code § 3482] Inapplicable--Activity or Conduct Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nuisance Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

§ 167.44 Supporting Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Continuing Nuisance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Apply to Continuing Nuisance

[b] Continuing Nuisance Defined

[c] Plaintiff's Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent

[d] Toxic Contamination as Continuing Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Apply to Continuing Nuisance

[b] Continuing Nuisance Defined

[c] Plaintiff's Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent

§ 167.45 Supporting Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Obstruction of Public Right

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obstruction of Public Right

§ 167.46 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Injurious Effect on Property or Lessening of Personal Enjoyment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Available

[b] Preliminary Injunction to Abate Nuisance

[c] Contributory Negligence Not a Bar

[d] Criminal Statute Is Not Exclusive Remedy for Abating Public Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction to Abate Nuisance

§ 167.47 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test Favors Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test

[b] Doubtful Cases Resolved in Plaintiff's Favor

[c] Irreparable Injury

[d] Responsibility for Nuisance

[e] Disproportionate Hardships

[f] Private Right of Eminent Domain

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Irreparable Injury

[b] Responsibility for Nuisance

[c] Disproportionate Hardships

§ 167.48 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3484; Code Civ.

Proc. § 731]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable

[b] Damages Without Injunction

[c] Punitive Damages With Proof of Oppression or Malice

§ 167.49 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Private Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3481, 3501; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Interference With Purely Personal Right or Lack of Present Property Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Purely Personal Right

[b] Insufficient Property Interest

§ 167.50 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--No Special Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Merely Different in Degree and Not in Kind From Injury Suffered by General Public

§ 167.51 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--No Public Nuisance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Which Does Not Injure General Public Is Not Public Nuisance

§ 167.52 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Award Would Interfere with Policies of a Public Commission

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Superior Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Issue Judgment Which Would Interfere with Policies of a Public Commission

§ 167.53 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Activity or Conduct Not Within Statutory Definition of Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

[b] Every Annoyance or Disturbance Is Not Nuisance

[c] Defective Product Is Not Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

§ 167.54 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Actitivity or Conduct Authorized by Statute [Civ. Code § 3482]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity or Conduct Expressly Authorized by Statute

[b] Contemplation by Legislature of Act Causing Injury

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Activity or Conduct Expressly Authorized by Statute

§ 167.55 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obstruction of Light and Air

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Obstruction of Light and Air Is Not Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Obstruction of Light and Air Is Not Nuisance

§ 167.56 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Preexisting Agricultural Activity [Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense Applies to Actions Between Commercial Agricultural Entities

[b] Defense Applies to Actions Alleging Physical Invasion of Neighboring Property

[c] Change of Ownership of Land on Which Activity Occurs Is Irrelevant

§ 167.57 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Activity of District Agricultural Association [Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

§ 167.58 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Preexisting Agricultural Processing Activity [Civ. Code § 3482.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 167.59 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

§ 167.60 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Fact That Plaintiff's Own Acts Constitute Same Type of Nuisance Considered in Determination

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Own Acts Constitute Same Type of Nuisance

§ 167.61 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Area Expressly Zoned for Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 167.62 Opposing Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Permanent Nuisance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitations Period as Commencing to Run at Creation of Permanent Nuisance

[b] Plaintiff Is Required to Bring One Action for All Damages

[c] Limitation Period for Injury to Real Property

[d] Opportunity for Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent Is Limited

[e] Permissible Election Allowed Only in "Close" Cases

[f] Plaintiff Cannot Have Both Remedies

[g] Abatement Alone Does Not Transform Permanent Nuisance Into Continuing Nuisance or Close Case

[h] Solid Structures Are Permanent in Nature

[i] Structure Is Necessary Part of Public Utility Operations

[j] No Continuing Nuisance Without Proof That Injury Is Capable of Being Abated and That Cost of Abatement Is Reasonable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Structure Is Necessary Part of Public Utility Operations

[b] No Continuing Nuisance Without Proof That Injury Is Capable of Being Abated and That Cost of Abatement Is Reasonable

§ 167.63 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defendant Did Not Create Nuisance, and Notice of Nuisance or Request for Abatement Not Given to Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Successor Not Liable in Absence of Notice of Nuisance

§ 167.64 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Plaintiff Consented to Activity or Conduct Complained of

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Consent to Defendant's Activity or Conduct as Defense to Action for Nuisance

[b] Successor Owner Bound by Predecessor's Consent to Conduct of Predecessor's Lessee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Consent to Defendant's Activity or Conduct as Defense to Action for Nuisance

§ 167.65 Opposing Contention That Nuisance Can Be Enjoined--Prospective Injury Not Probable and Imminent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prospective Injury Must Be Probable and Imminent

§ 167.66 Opposing Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test Favors Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Irreparable Injury

[b] Responsibility for Nuisance

[c] Disproportionate Hardships

[d] Consideration of Public Interest

§ 167.67 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Full Recovery Barred by Comparative Negligence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Negligence Can Bar Full Recovery for Damages for Nuisance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Negligence as Bar to Full Recovery for Damages for Nuisance

§ 167.68 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Injury Not Present, Real, or Ascertainable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Only Recoverable for Present, Real, or Ascertainable Injuries

§ 167.69 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Plaintiff May Not Obtain Both Injunctive Relief and Depreciation or Other Future Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Should Not Receive Both Abatement and Future Damages

[b] Plaintiff Should Not Be Unjustly Enriched

[c] Presumption That Defendant Will Comply With Valid Order

§ 167.70 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Damages Not Recoverable for Diminution in Value for Continuing and Abatable Nuisance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Not Recoverable for Diminution in Value Caused by Continuing and Abatable Nuisance

[b] Interest Rate Differential Damages Caused by Inability to Refinance Not Permitted

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.01

§ 167.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses and presents memoranda of points and authorities relating to the law of nuisance. It includes memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 167.20 -167.22] and opposing [see §§ 167.49 -167.53] the contention that plaintiff has stated a cause of action for nuisance; supporting [see §§ 167.23 -167.36] and opposing [see §§ 167.53 -167.61] the contention that the act or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance; and supporting [see §§ 167.37 -167.43] and opposing [see §§ 167.63, 167.64] the contention that the defendant is liable for the nuisance. Also included are memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 167.44, 167.45] and opposing § 167.62 the contention that an action is barred by the statute of limitations; supporting [see §§ 167.46, 167.47] and opposing [see §§ 167.65, 167.66] the contention that the nuisance can be enjoined; and supporting § 167.48 and opposing [see §§ 167.67 -167.69] the contention that plaintiff is entitled to damages for the nuisance.

This chapter does not discuss the law of trespass, negligence, ultrahazardous activity, or inverse condemnation.

For points and authorities relating to negligence, see Ch. 165, Negligence . For points and authorities relating to trespass, see Ch. 225, Trespass . For points and authorities relating to strict liability for ultrahazardous activities, see Ch. 234, Ultrahazardous Activities . For points and authorities pertaining to inverse condemnation actions, see Ch. 95, Eminent Domain .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsReal Property LawTortsNuisanceGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsNuisanceElementsReal Property LawTortsNuisanceTypesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.02

§ 167.02 Governing Statutes

Nuisance is governed generally by Civ. Code § 3479 et seq., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 731-731c, and Penal Code §§ 370-372. The right to bring an action to abate a nuisance or receive damages is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 731.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.03

§ 167.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms for use in actions between adjoining landowners, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners (Matthew Bender). For general forms relating to temporary restraining orders and preliminary and permanent injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in nuisance actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to pollution as a nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters (Matthew Bender). For forms for use in nuisance actions against public entities, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act (Matthew Bender). For forms for use in trespass actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For points and authorities for use in trespass actions, see Ch. 225, Trespass . For points and authorities pertaining to strict liability for damages caused by ultrahazardous activities, see Ch. 234, Ultrahazardous Activities . For points and authorities pertaining to nuisance actions against public entities, see Ch. 196, Public Entities .

For discussion of the format and content requirements governing memoranda generally, discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a complete memorandum or brief, and a form of skeletal complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsReal Property LawAdjoining LandownersGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsNuisanceGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsNuisanceElementsReal Property LawTortsNuisanceRemediesInjunctionsTemporary InjunctionsReal Property LawTortsNuisanceTypesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-167 California Points & Authorities §§ 167.04-167.19

[Reserved]

§§ 167.04[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.20

§ 167.20 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Private Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3481, 3501; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Interference With Use or Enjoyment of Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY BRING AN ACTION FOR A PRIVATE NUISANCE BECAUSE THE ACTS OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF INTERFERED WITH PLAINTIFF'S USE OR ENJOYMENT OF A PROPERTY INTEREST.

A. Private Nuisance Defined. Every nuisance not included in the definition of public nuisance under Section 3480 of the Civil Code is private (Civ. Code § 3481).

B. Civil Action for Private Nuisance. The remedies against a private nuisance are a civil action or abatement (Civ. Code § 3501).

C. Activity Interferes With Use or Enjoyment of Property Interest. The essence of a private nuisance is an interference with the use and enjoyment of a property right (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

D. Sufficiency of Property Interest. Any interest sufficient to be dignified as a property right is sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[Optional] E. Tenancy for Term as Property Interest. A property right sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance includes a tenancy for a term (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[Optional] F. Apprehension of Injury Sufficient. Mere apprehension of injury from a dangerous condition may constitute a nuisance when it interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of property (McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co.

(1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254, 172 P.2d 758).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that the plaintiff may bring an action for private nuisance because the conduct or activity complained of interferes with plaintiff's use or enjoyment of his or her property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue concerning plaintiff's right to bring an action for private nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should insert discussion showing that the activities complained of interfere with a property interest of plaintiff. If there has been no direct injury to the property itself, counsel should discuss facts showing that defendant's activities or conduct nevertheless interfere with a private right incidental to such property, such as plaintiff's use or enjoyment of his or her property.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

When appropriate, the points and authorities in §§ 167.49 and 167.50 may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff may bring a private action for private nuisance, supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Interferes With Use or Enjoyment of Property Interest

In Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , four plaintiffs seeking injunctive relief and damages alleged that emissions from defendant's plant severely polluted the air in the county, obstructed the public view of the surrounding hills, and injured the health of the citizens of the county. Three of the plaintiffs alleged that their allergies and respiratory disorders were aggravated as a result of the alleged nuisance. The fourth plaintiff claimed injury by reason of obstruction to his view. The trial court entered judgment for defendant after the sustaining of a general demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal held that the facts alleged did not support an action based on public nuisance nor did they support an action based on private nuisance. As to the plaintiff who claimed injury by reason of obstruction to his view, the court stated that the essence of a private nuisance is an interference with the use and enjoyment of a property right and any interest sufficient to be dignified as a property right is sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance, including a tenancy for a term, but not that of a licensee, lodger, or employee (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125) . The court found that, although plaintiff had a property interest that was interfered with, the interference in this case was not encompassed within the definition of nuisance in Civ. Code § 3479 (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 126-127) .

[b] Sufficiency of Property Interest

Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , is discussed in § 167.20[3][a].

[c] Tenancy for Term as Property Interest

Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , is discussed in § 167.20[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Property Interest

The facts and procedural background of Granone v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 34 , are discussed in § 167.26[3][b]. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff. The court stated that where private property is taken or damaged as a result of a plan of construction or maintenance adopted by a county or flood control district for a storm drainage or flood control project, then a taking or a damaging for a public use occurs and the fact that the interest affected is a leasehold, as distinguished from an ownership in fee simple, is immaterial. The court stated that a tenant whose leasehold interest has been damaged is as much entitled to recover for his or her loss or injury as is the owner of the land (231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 646) . The court held that the acts complained of did interfere with an existing property right in the plaintiffs, and that such acts did not benefit plaintiffs but on the contrary, caused the damage of which plaintiffs complained (231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 650) .

[b] Tenancy for Term as Property Interest

In Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1540, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 602 , suit for public nuisance was brought against an apartment complex owner on behalf of a minor child in a family that was renting an apartment in the complex. The complaint alleged that the owner had created a nuisance by allowing persons to smoke in the complex's outdoor common areas, which included areas around the swimming pools and other recreational areas, and that the secondhand smoke was pervasive enough in these areas that it had an adverse effect on the child's asthma and allergies. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer, but the court of appeal reversed. Noting that plaintiff had also alleged that the conditions constituted a private nuisance, the court concluded that plaintiff had sufficiently alleged that the secondhand smoke interfered with her use and enjoyment of the complex's outdoor facilities. The court rejected defendant's argument that the child did not have a property interest in the apartment area because she was not a tenant, but merely a lodger. The court held that a child residing with her family in a rented apartment had standing to bring a private nuisance claim based on interference with her right to enjoy the rented premises (169 Cal. App. 4th 1540, 1551) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.21

§ 167.21 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Special Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY BRING A PRIVATE ACTION ON ACCOUNT OF A PUBLIC NUISANCE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF SUFFERED INJURY THAT IS DIFFERENT IN KIND, AND NOT MERELY DIFFERENT IN DEGREE, FROM THAT SUFFERED BY THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

A. Public Nuisance Defined. A public nuisance is one which affects an entire community, neighborhood, or any considerable number of persons at the same time, although the extent of the annoyance or damage inflicted on individuals may be unequal (Civ. Code § 3480).

B. Civil Action for Public Nuisance. Remedies against a public nuisance are indictment or information, civil action, or abatement (Civ. Code § 3491).

C. Specific Injury to Plaintiff Alleged. A private person may maintain an action for a public nuisance, if it is specially injurious to himself or herself, but not otherwise (Civ. Code § 3493).

D. Injury Different in Kind and Not Just in Degree. If the nuisance alleged is not also a private nuisance as to a private individual, that individual does not have a cause of action on account of a public nuisance unless he or she alleges facts showing special injury to his or her person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public. Under this rule, plaintiff's damage must be different in kind, rather than in degree, from that shared by the general public (Brown v. Petrolane, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 720, 726-727, 162 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; see Hitch v. Scholle (1919) 180 Cal. 467, 469, 181 P. 657 ; Brown v. Rea (1907) 150 Cal. 171, 174, 88 P. 713).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the plaintiff may bring a private action on account of a public nuisance because the condition or activity complained of is specially injurious to him or her and the injury is different in kind, not just in degree, from that suffered by the general public.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue concerning plaintiff's right to bring a private action for a public nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts indicating that, although the nuisance alleged is public, plaintiff has suffered an injury that is different in kind, not merely in degree, from that suffered by the general public.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Formsof Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.50 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Different in Kind and Not Just in Degree

Brown v. Petrolane, Inc. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 720, 162 Cal. Rptr. 551 , was an action for public and private nuisance. Plaintiffs claimed that defendant's maintenance and continued operation of its liquified petroleum gas facilities within 2,000 feet of plaintiffs' homes constituted a nuisance within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3479 because it was offensive to the senses and interfered with plaintiffs' comfortable enjoyment of life and property. The trial court sustained defendant's general demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal, finding that plaintiffs purported to plead a cause of action predicated on claim that defendant was conducting and maintaining a business that constituted a public nuisance, held that they must allege sufficient facts to show that the operation of defendant's business constituted a public nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code §§ 3479 and 3480. The court found that plaintiffs had pleaded facts stating a public nuisance but that the action was not one also for private nuisance. The court held that when an alleged public nuisance is not also a private nuisance, a private individual plaintiff does not have a cause of action unless he or she alleges facts showing special injury to himself or herself in person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public. The court found that the fear plaintiffs alleged to be caused by the presence of defendant's facility was common to the general community of which they were a part and differed between individuals within that community, if at all, in degree rather than in kind. Since no other special damages to plaintiffs were alleged, the court of appeal sustained the trial court's conclusion that plaintiffs could not maintain a cause of action for public nuisance (102 Cal. App. 3d 720, 726) .

In Hitch v. Scholle (1919) 180 Cal. 467, 181 P. 657 , plaintiff sought and secured a judgment decreeing the existence of a public highway over the lands of defendant. As an incident of the judgment, defendant was enjoined from obstructing the highway. Defendant appealed, contending that the action was one for abatement of a public nuisance by a private person and therefore the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action because plaintiff did not allege any special injury. The Supreme Court reversed.

The Court found that the complaint did attempt to state a cause of action to abate a public nuisance; therefore, it held that the complaint was defective because it failed to allege that the highway constituted the only mode of ingress and egress to and from plaintiff's land, showing that injury was different in kind from the injury that was suffered by the public in general, as well as irreparable (180 Cal. 467, 469) .

Brown v. Rea (1907) 150 Cal. 171, 88 P. 713 , was an action for an injunction and damages arising from construction and intended operation of a four-track railroad by defendant on the public street in front of the plaintiff's business premises. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer with leave to amend. Plaintiff failed to amend, and judgment was entered for defendant. The Supreme Court affirmed.

Holding that the general demurrers were properly sustained, the Supreme Court found that plaintiff attempted to allege facts showing a threatened nuisance, the maintenance of which would be especially injurious to him. In making this finding, the court noted that a public nuisance does not furnish ground for action by a private person unless the public nuisance inflicts on an individual such peculiar injury as to entitle him or her to maintain a separate action for its abatement, or to recover damages, and that the injury to the individual must be different in kind and not merely in degree from that suffered by the general public. The Court stated that ordinarily an obstruction to a highway, if unauthorized and illegal, is a public nuisance but may constitute a private nuisance as well. The Court stated that every owner of land abutting on a highway has a right of access from his land to the highway and from the highway to his land. It found this right of access to be an easement and held that an obstruction to the highway that obstructs this easement constitutes a peculiar injury to the abutting landowner and gives him a cause of action. The Court, however, found that plaintiff did not set forth any facts showing that his right of access had been obstructed by the work done or impaired by the work to be done by defendant, and that the facts merely alleged that defendants were constructing and intended to operate a four-track railroad on the street in front of plaintiff's premises (150 Cal. 171, 174) . The Court held that these facts alone did not show that plaintiff's right of passage between street and premises will be, or has been in any degree affected (150 Cal. 171, 174-175) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Specific Injury to Plaintiff Alleged

In Kempton v. City of Los Angeles (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 , plaintiff homeowners filed a claim with the city because their neighbors had built fences on city property that obstructed the sight lines for drivers emerging from plaintiffs' garage. When the city declined plaintiffs' claim and refused to have the fences removed, plaintiffs filed suit seeking monetary damages and injunctive relief. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of the city, but the court of appeal reversed. The court noted that a private individual may bring an action against a city to abate a public nuisance if the individual suffers harm that is specially injurious to himself or herself, that is, damage that is different in kind, not merely in degree, from that suffered by other members of the public. The court concluded that plaintiffs' allegations that the fences blocked the sight lines upon entering or exiting their garage, thereby causing fear of being in a vehicle collision or of hitting a pedestrian, could constitute a special injury sufficient to support a cause of action for public nuisance. Because plaintiffs alleged facts sufficient to support a cause of action for public nuisance, but did not specifically plead that cause of action, the court reversed with directions to grant leave to amend the complaint to state a cause of action for nuisance (165 Cal. App. 4th 1344, 1349-1350) .

[b] Injury Different in Kind and Not Just in Degree

The facts and procedural background of Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 , are discussed in § 167.26[3][a]. The court of appeal found that plaintiff had not stated a cause of action for nuisance (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) . The court held that a party does not have a cause of action on account of a public nuisance unless he alleges facts showingspecial injury to himself in person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public. The court found that plaintiff had not stated facts showing that the threatened flooding was different in kind than that suffered by the general public (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.22

§ 167.22 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance Without Showing of Special Injury [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Nuisance Both Private and Public

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY BRING A PRIVATE ACTION FOR PUBLIC NUISANCE WITHOUT SHOWING THAT THE NUISANCE WAS SPECIALLY INJURIOUS TO THE PLAINTIFF BECAUSE THE NUISANCE IS BOTH PUBLIC AND PRIVATE.

A. Nuisance Both Public and Private. A nuisance that interferes with the use and enjoyment of plaintiff's land and is a danger to the neighborhood is both public and private (Buchanan v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 757, 768, 128 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; see Lane v. San Diego Elec. Ry. Co. (1929) 208 Cal. 29, 34, 280 P. 109).

B. Plaintiff Need Not Show Damage Different in Kind From That Suffered by General Public. If the nuisance is a private as well as a public one, there is no requirement that the plaintiff suffer damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public, and the plaintiff does not lose rights as a landowner merely because others suffer damage of the same kind or even of the same degree (Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 873, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 ; see also Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[Optional] C. Number of Persons Affected Not Conclusive. The fact that a nuisance affects a great number of persons in the same way does not conclusively establish that the nuisance is public and not also private (see Fisher v. Zumwalt (1900) 128 Cal. 493, 496, 61 P. 82).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that a private action can be brought for a public nuisance without a showing of special injury to the plaintiff because the nuisance is also private in that it interferes with plaintiff's use or enjoyment of his or her property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a private action can be brought for a public nuisance without a showing of special injury to the plaintiff because the nuisance is also private. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that, although the alleged nuisance is public, it also interferes with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property and therefore, constitutes an actionable private nuisance.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Both Public and Private

Buchanan v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 757, 128 Cal. Rptr. 770 , was an action for injunctive relief to abate a nuisance. The trial court granted a motion by defendant for nonsuit. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal found that plaintiffs' pleadings and opening statement disclosed both erosion of land occupied by them through improper activity of defendant and hence, an interference with enjoyment of their property as well as a condition maintained by defendant that was a danger to the neighborhood. The court concluded that the nuisance was both public and private and that plaintiff had standing to sue to abate the nuisance whether it was treated as public or private because plaintiffs' pleadings disclosed special injury to them not shared by others as well as injury to their land (56 Cal. App. 3d 757, 768) .

In Lane v. San Diego Elec. Ry. Co. (1929) 208 Cal. 29, 280 P. 109 , plaintiffs applied for permanent injunction restraining defendant from maintaining its electric streetcar tracks and operating its electric streetcars across the sidewalk and street immediately adjacent to and in front of plaintiffs' building. The trial court denied the application; plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed, directing trial court to enter judgment in favor of plaintiffs. The Supreme Court granted a hearing and adopted the court of appeals' judgment in part.

The Court found that evidence demonstrated that an auto or truck could not be parked in front of plaintiffs' lot while a streetcar passed and held that plaintiff'saccess to the property was substantially and seriously interfered with by the operation of the electric streetcars. The Court further found that the maintenance of a loop track for bringing the streetcars around defendant's depot in its present location and the operation of cars thereover would substantially depreciate the market value of plaintiffs' property (208 Cal. 29, 32) . The Court noted that an abutting owner has two kinds of rights in a highway: (1) a public right that he or she enjoys in common with all other citizens, and (2) certain private rights that arise from his or her ownership of property contiguous to the highway, which are not common to the public generally. It held that an abutting landowner on a public highway has a special right of easement and use in the public road for access purposes, and this is a property right that cannot be damaged or taken away from him or her without due compensation, and that he or she has by reason of such ownership a special easement in such street for the purpose of ingress and egress, which is property as fully as the lot itself (208 Cal. 29, 33) . The Court, therefore, held that the obstruction of an abutting owner's access to a public street constitutes a private as well as a public nuisance and that any injury to the use of the street that impairs plaintiff's private easement in the street in front of and adjacent to his lot amounts to an injury giving plaintiff, as an abutting owner, the right to maintain an action for damages or for an injunction (208 Cal. 29, 34) . The Court also found plaintiffs' right to be neither technical nor unsubstantial but a valuable property right (208 Cal. 29, 34-35) .

[b] Plaintiff Need Not Show Damage Different in Kind From That Suffered by General Public

The facts and procedural background of Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 , are discussed in § 167.32[3][a]. In denying defendants' petition for a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to set aside its judgment awarding damages to plaintiffs, the court of appeal rejected defendants' argument that plaintiffs were not entitled to recover because the injury suffered by plaintiffs differed only in degree and not in kind from the injury suffered by the general public at large. The court held that this distinction is inapplicable if a nuisance, such as the nuisance claimed by plaintiffs, is private as well as public because it obstructs plaintiffs' free use and enjoyment of their private property (20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 873) .

The facts and procedural background of Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , are discussed in § 167.20[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal noted that when the nuisance is a private as well as a public one, there is no requirement that the plaintiff suffer damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public, and the plaintiff does not lose rights as a landowner merely because others suffer damage of the same kind or even of the same degree. The court, however, held that, although the plaintiff who claimed injury by reason of obstruction to his view had alleged a sufficient property right to support an action based on a private nuisance, this interference was not encompassed within the definition of nuisance in Civ. Code § 3479 (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124) .

[c] Number of Persons Affected Not Conclusive

Fisher v. Zumwalt (1900) 128 Cal. 493, 61 P. 82 , was an action to abate a nuisance and for damages. Plaintiff contended that the accumulated refuse from defendant's creamery threw off vile and noxious odors and gases that were offensive to the senses and dangerous to the health of plaintiff and his family and all others living in the immediate vicinity. Defendant claimed that the creamery constituted a public nuisance because it affected all the people of the neighborhood and therefore, since the nuisance was not especially injurious to plaintiff and the damage was not different in kind or character from that suffered by the general public, plaintiff could not in his private capacity maintain the action. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court held that plaintiff was entitled to sustain his action because defendant's acts interfered with the comfortable enjoyment of plaintiff's property and the nuisance was private as to him, regardless of whether or not it was a private or public nuisance in other respects (128 Cal. 493, 494) . The Court noted that there are nuisances that would require a showing of special injury different in kind or character from that suffered by the general public, but stated that this class of nuisances was confined to instances where there has been an invasion of a right that is common to every person in the community and not where the wrong has been done to private property or the rights of private individuals, although many individuals may have been injured in the same manner and by the same means (128 Cal. 493, 495-496) . The Court held that the fact that a nuisance affects a great number of persons in the same way does not conclusively establish that the nuisance is public and not also private (128 Cal. 493, 496) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Need Not Show Damage Different in Kind to That Suffered by General Public

Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1540, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 602 , is described in § 167.20[4][b]. In that case, although plaintiff tenant had alleged that the secondhand smoke that allegedly permeated the outdoor common areas of the apartment complex aggravated her asthma and allergies, and that this was an injury that was different in kind from the increased risks of heart disease and lung cancer faced by general public, plaintiff had also alleged both a public and private nuisance. Because both private and public nuisances were alleged, the court of appeal held that the tenant could bring suit against the apartment owner for harm caused by the secondhand cigarette smoke without a showing that the tenant suffered damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public, so long as plaintiff alleged that the presence of the secondhand smoke interfered with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of the common area outdoor facilities (169 Cal. App. 4th 1540, 1551) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.23

§ 167.23 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINED OF ACT OR COURSE OF CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE WITHIN THE DEFINITION SET FORTH IN SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE IT _____ [IS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH or INVOLVES THE ILLEGAL SALE OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES or IS INDECENT AND OFFENSIVE TO THE SENSES or OBSTRUCTS PLAINTIFF'S FREE USE OF HIS/HER PROPERTY, SO AS TO INTERFERE WITH PLAINTIFF'S COMFORTABLE ENJOYMENT OF LIFE AND PROPERTY or UNLAWFULLY OBSTRUCTS FREE PASSAGE OR USE, IN THE CUSTOMARY MANNER, OF A _____ (NAVIGABLE LAKE or RIVER or BAY or STREAM or CANAL or BASIN or PUBLIC _____ (PARK or SQUARE or STREET or HIGHWAY))].

A. Definition of Nuisance Under Civ. Code § 3479. Anything that is injurious to health, including but not limited to the illegal sale of controlled substances, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, or unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, or highway, is a nuisance (Civ. Code § 3479).

B. Definition Is Broad. The statutory definition of nuisance is broad enough to encompass almost every conceivable type of interference with the enjoyment or use of land or property (Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1136, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827).

[If appropriate, add points and authorities pertaining to specific types of activities that are alleged to constitute a nuisance (see, e.g., §§ 167.24 -167.34).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that the condition or activity complained of constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the condition or activity complained of constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479. This form may also be combined with forms setting out points and authorities pertaining to specific types of activities that are alleged to constitute a nuisance [see, e.g., §§ 167.24 -167.33]. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the definition of nuisance set out in the form.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition Is Broad

The facts and procedural background of Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 , are discussed in § 167.34[3][a]. The court of appeal held that the California nuisance statutes do not limit recovery for nuisance to instances involving an offensive use of neighboring lands, but that the broad language of Civ. Code § 3479 sanctions recovery for direct injury to a plaintiff's property. Hence, a plaintiff was permitted to sue a party who had leased the plaintiff's property from prior owners, and who allegedly contaminated the property with hazardous waste during the leasehold. The court, quoting Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 919, 162 Cal. Rptr. 194 [see § 167.23[4][a]], stated that more modern California cases have recognized that the statutory definition of nuisance appears to be broad enough to encompass almost every conceivable type of interference with the enjoyment or use of land or property (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1136) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Definition Is Broad

Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 162 Cal. Rptr. 194 , involved an action by a tenant against property owners and managers for damages resulting from the dilapidated and unsafe condition of the premises. The trial court sustained various demurrers and granted defense motions for judgment on the pleadings, striking several causes of action including a cause of action for nuisance. The court of appeal reversed, stating that the statutory definition of nuisance appears to be broad enough to encompass almost any conceivable type of interference with the enjoyment or use of land or property, and holding that nuisance liability was not precluded by the existence of a contractual relationship between the tenant and landlord (101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 919) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.24

§ 167.24 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Unreasonable Use of Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE BECAUSE THE USE TO WHICH DEFENDANT HAS PUT HIS/HER PROPERTY IS UNREASONABLE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES AND HAS CAUSED MATERIAL INJURY TO PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY.

A. Unreasonable Use. One may not make an unreasonable use of one's own premises to the material injury of his neighbor's property (McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App 770, 776-777, 230 P. 203 ; see Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 164, 13 P.2d 733).

B. Existence of Nuisance Is Matter of Degree and Depends on Circumstances. What is or is not a nuisance is ultimately a matter of degree, varying with the particular circumstances of each individual case (Hassell v. San Francisco (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 168, 170, 78 P.2d 1021 ; County of San Diego v. Carlstrom (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 489, 16 Cal. Rptr. 667).

C. Factors Considered. Whether or not a use, which in itself is lawful, is a nuisance depends on a number of circumstances: locality and surroundings, the number of people living there, the prior use, whether it is continual or occasional, and the nature and extent of the nuisance and of the injury caused thereby. No hard-and-fast rule controls (McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App 770, 777, 230 P. 203).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that the defendant's use of property constitutes a nuisance because the use is unreasonable under the circumstances.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the contention that the specific activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see, e.g., §§ 167.25 -167.33]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's use of his or her property constitutes a nuisance because the use is unreasonable under the circumstances. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel may argue that the locality and surroundings, the number of people living nearby, the prior use, the continuousness of the activity, or the nature and extent of the nuisance and of the injury caused thereby, make defendant's use of his or her property unreasonable and therefore a nuisance.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Use

McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App 770, 230 P. 203 , was an action to abate a nuisance by enjoining defendants from continuing to conduct their chicken corrals in such a manner that the dust therefrom would injure plaintiff's trees, vines, and grapes, and to recover damages for past injuries. Trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

Defendants contended that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the pleading failed to show that defendants were maintaining an actionable nuisance. The court held that the complaint stated all the facts necessary to entitle plaintiff to the relief granted. The court held that the maintenance of the chicken ranch in the manner described in the complaint was a nuisance. The court based its decision on the well-established rule that no one may make an unreasonable use of his or own premises to the material injury of his neighbor's property (68 Cal. App 770, 776) .

Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 13 P.2d 733 , was an action for damages and to enjoin defendant's operation of its factory on the grounds of nuisance. Defendant's business involved manufacturing sewer-pipe, tile, pottery, and stoneware in an area zoned for industrial use and was located within a partly industrial, partly residential section of the city. Defendant's factory had eighteen kilns, nine of which were placed along and about 20 feet from the fence dividing plaintiff's and defendant's properties. Plaintiff alleged injuries to, and continued discomfort and interference with, the peaceable enjoyment of his property by reason of the discharge of large quantities of noxious soot, smoke, and malodorous and injurious gaseous substances; vibrations and noise caused by the operations of the kilns and furnaces and of freight cars; and light disturbances or flares at night caused by successive combustions in furnaces and danger by reason of fire hazard. The trial court found the allegations of emission of filthy and noxious smoke, soot, and gas, the maintenance of the railway switch and the injuries resulting to the plaintiff thereby untrue; however, it found that the manner of operation of the kilns and furnaces and the combustion of the fuel therein caused great vibration and noise disturbing to the peace and quiet of plaintiff and, together with the flares, prevented plaintiff from the comfortable use and enjoyment of his property, were offensive to the senses of persons living on plaintiff's property, and constituted a fire hazard. The judgment decreed that defendant be enjoined from operating the four southernmost kilns and furnaces on the west side of its property entirely and from operating the remaining kilns and furnaces on the west side of its property unless it erected a substantial fireproof wall or fence at least 15 feet high between the furnaces and plaintiff's property. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court held that the fact that the factory's operations were conducted with the consent of the municipality, that defendant was doing a legal act, that its operations were conducted in a district zoned for industry, and that defendant was first in the field could not avail defendant. The Court stated that a person may not use his or her own property, even in and about a business in itself lawful, if it be used in such a manner as to seriously interfere with another in the enjoyment of his or her right in the use of his or her property (216 Cal. 156, 164) .

[b] Existence of Nuisance Is Matter of Degree and Depends on Circumstances

In Hassell v. San Francisco (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 168, 78 P.2d 1021 , defendant city and county was enjoined from constructing a public convenience station in a park according to the plans of its park commission. Its charter granted to the park commission the exclusive control and management of parks, including the exclusive right to erect and to superintend the erection of buildings. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed.

Defendant contended that the trial court's finding that the building would constitute a nuisance was not supported by the evidence. In evaluating the trial court's finding, the Supreme Court stated that in determining whether a present or proposed use of property is a nuisance, many factors must be considered because the law relating to private nuisances is one of degree, and a use that would be reasonable under one set of facts might be unreasonable under another. The Court found that defendant's proposed building would constitute a nuisance under the circumstances (11 Cal. 2d 168, 170) .

County of San Diego v. Carlstrom (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 16 Cal. Rptr. 667 , was an action for an injunction to abate a public nuisance caused by defendant's maintenance of extremely dilapidated, unsightly, dangerous, and fire-hazardous condition of temporarily stored structures. The trial issued a mandatory injunction, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal, finding that the storage of the structures constituted a fire hazard amounting to a public nuisance, stated that what is or is not a nuisance was ultimately a matter of degree, varying with the particular circumstances of each individual case (196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 489) . The court noted that while people have the right to use their property, within certain limits as they see fit even if it annoys the neighbors or depreciates the value of adjoining property, they have no legal right to put their land to an unnatural use and to create thereon an unnecessary hazard to other property. The court stated that there must be a balancing of conveniences and of rights. The court also stated that when danger to an entire neighborhood is demonstrated and when the condition created is unnecessary and can be remedied, prudence, common sense, fair play, and justice require that the danger to the entire neighborhood be eliminated (196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 490) . On this basis, the court found that the evidence showed that a fire hazard existed and under the conditions was a public nuisance subject to abatement (196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491) .

[c] Factors Considered

The facts and procedural background of McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App 770, 230 P. 203 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal found that the complaint stated all the facts necessary to entitle plaintiff to the relief granted. The court held that the maintenance of the chicken ranch in the manner described in the complaint was unreasonable and therefore a nuisance. In making its decision, the court found that no hard-and-fast rule controlled whether or not a use, which in itself is lawful, is a nuisance, but that it depended on a number of circumstances: locality and surroundings, prior use, the number of people living there, whether it is continual or occasional, and the nature and extent of the nuisance and of the injury caused thereby (68 Cal. App. 770, 777) . The court stated that the law relating to private nuisances is one of degree and that a use that would be reasonable under one set of facts might be unreasonable under another. Although matters to be considered, location, priority of occupation, and the fact that the injury is only occasional were held not to be conclusive but only to be considered in connection with all the circumstances in a particular case; the court stated that whether the use is unreasonable or not was an inference to be drawn from all the facts (68 Cal. App. 770, 777) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Use

In Booska v. Patel (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1786, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241 , the plaintiff and the defendant were owners of neighboring property. The roots of a large tree in the plaintiff's yard extended into the defendant's yard. The defendant hired a contractor to sever these roots. Because this work was negligently performed, the tree became unsafe, and was removed at the plaintiff's expense. The plaintiff sued the defendant for negligence, destruction of timber, and nuisance. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant on the basis of his "absolute right" to sever the tree roots on his property, and the plaintiff appealed. In reversing and remanding the matter to the trial court, the court of appeal held that no one has the absolute right to do whatever he or she wishes on his or her property regardless of the consequences to others. The right to use one's property is qualified by the requirement that one must use one's property reasonably, so as not to harm others in the vicinity (24 Cal. App. 4th 1786, 1791) .

In Schild v. Rubin (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 283 Cal. Rptr. 533 , the plaintiff obtained an injunction to prohibit his neighbors from playing basketball in their back yard except during specified hours of the day. Although the plaintiff sought the injunction pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6, which authorizes injunctive relief from willful harassment, the plaintiff characterized the basketball playing as a nuisance, claiming that it was excessively noisy. The court dissolved the injunction, holding that the basketball playing was not a nuisance, despite the annoyance and disturbance suffered by the plaintiff from the noise, because it was a reasonable use of the defendants' property. The court held that the plaintiff had suffered no injury to his legal rights because people who live in organized communities must expect to suffer some inconvenience and annoyance from their neighbors (232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 760) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.25

§ 167.25 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Fire Hazards

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT CREATED A FIRE HAZARD THAT INTERFERED WITH PLAINTIFF'S USE AND ENJOYMENT OF PROPERTY.

A. Fire Hazard as Nuisance. The presence in a settled residential community of an unnecessarily extreme fire hazard can create and maintain, in the lives of the people of that community, a fear that will destroy all happiness in life and property and render the hazard a public nuisance (City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1017-1018, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507 ; see also County of San Diego v. Carlstrom (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 16 Cal. Rptr. 667).

[Optional] B. Construction in Accord With Previous Standards Not a Defense. The fact that a building was constructed in accordance with all existing statutes does not immunize it from subsequent abatement as a public nuisance when judged to be a fire hazard using standards from statutes enacted subsequent to the erection of the building (City of Bakersfield v. Miller (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 93, 101, 48 Cal. Rptr. 889, 410 P.2d 393).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that a fire hazard constitutes a nuisance within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3479.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see §§ 167.24, 167.26 -167.33]. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a fire hazard constitutes a nuisance within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3479. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to liability for fire damage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 267, Fires (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fire Hazard as Nuisance

City of Los Angeles v. Shpegel-Dimsey, Inc. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 244 Cal. Rptr. 507 was an action by a city to recover fire abatement costs and property damages from a defendant who operated a plastic conversion business that violated numerous fire code requirements regarding the storage of combustible materials. Burning of these materials produces smoke, fumes, and gases that can adversely affect human health, resulting in some cases in death. Eventually, an extremely serious fire broke out on defendant's property that released large amounts of these fumes, gases, and smoke, and that also obstructed the free use of adjacent property and the free passage of surrounding streets. The fire escaped defendant's property and damaged utility poles and other fixtures owned by plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed judgment for defendant to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the maintenance of a fire hazard sufficiently extreme to menace public health and safety is unquestionably a public nuisance. Because the fire would have been confined to a small area within defendant's premises if defendant had complied with the fire code requirements, defendant's failure to do so created a threat sufficiently extreme to constitute a nuisance subject to abatement (198 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1017-1018) .

The facts and procedural background of County of San Diego v. Carlstrom (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 16 Cal. Rptr. 667 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][b]. The court of appeal, in holding that defendant's temporary storage of the extremely dilapidated, unsightly, dangerous, and fire-hazardous structures constituted a nuisance, stated that the presence of an unnecessarily extreme fire hazard in a settled residential community can well create and maintain a fear, in the lives of the people of the community, that often destroys all happiness in life and property and renders the hazard a public nuisance (196 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491) .

[b] Construction in Accord With Previous Standards Not a Defense

In City of Bakersfield v. Miller (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 93, 48 Cal. Rptr. 889, 410 P.2d 393 , a complaint filed by the city alleged that defendant's hotel constituted a fire hazard and a public nuisance because it violated a city building ordinance. The ordinance declared that any building not conforming with the building code contained in the ordinance constituted a fire hazard and a public nuisance. Violations of the building code adopted by such ordinance were shown by undisputed evidence. Concluding that the hotel constituted both a fire hazard and a public nuisance under the city's ordinance, the trial court ordered that the nuisance be abated. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment.

On appeal, defendant challenged the power of a municipality to declare as a matter of law that the violation of an ordinance will constitute a public nuisance and maintained that the trial court erred in failing to make an independent finding as to whether the building was in fact a nuisance under general state law. The Supreme Court stated that although "nuisance" is a term for the Legislature to define, the semantics of Civ. Code § 3479 provide little guide in ascertaining the degree of danger that must be present for a condition or an activity to be considered a nuisance (64 Cal. 2d 93, 99) . The Court noted that in certain areas of law the term "nuisance" had been defined with more particularity and held that city legislative bodies are empowered to declare what constitutes a nuisance. The Court, however, did not reach the question of whether the city was empowered to declare as nuisances only specific conditions within the general areas of regulation enumerated in Civ. Code § 3479, since they held that a fire hazard clearly constitutes a nuisance within the provisions of Civ. Code § 3479 (64 Cal. 2d 93, 100) . The fact that a building was constructed in accordance with all existing statutes does not immunize it from subsequent abatement as a public nuisance when judged to be a fire hazard using standards from statutes enacted subsequent to the erection of the building (64 Cal. 2d 93, 101) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.26

§ 167.26 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE UNDER SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE A DIVERSION OR OBSTRUCTION OF WATER FLOW RESULTED.

A. Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow as Nuisance. An act of obstruction or diversion of water constitutes a nuisance under Section 3479 of the Civil Code (Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683).

[Optional] B. Single Flood Constitutes Nuisance. A single act of flooding resulting in the destruction of crops constitutes a nuisance (Granone v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 650, 42 Cal. Rptr. 34 ; Ambrosini v. Alisal Sanitary Dist. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 720, 727, 317 P.2d 33).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that the diversion or obstruction of water flow constitutes a nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see §§ 167.24 -167.35] or a nuisance per se [see § 167.36]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the diversion or obstruction of water flow constitutes a nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow as Nuisance

In Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 , plaintiffs sued the city of San Diego and the state of California for damages and injunctive relief. Plaintiffs contended that the United States and Mexico agreed to build a flood control channel. Plaintiffs further alleged that after Mexico built its portion, the original design was altered and that, due to actions and inactions on the part of the city and state, construction of the United States' portion had been prevented. As a result, plaintiffs' property was subject to a greater threat of flooding and to discharge of raw and untreated sewage and other chemicals and substances injurious to plaintiffs' health and to their lands. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended that defendants introduced a condition that proximately caused a public and private nuisance. The court holding that plaintiffs had not stated a cause of action for nuisance because sufficient facts were not alleged from which the court could conclude that a nuisance existed within the statutory provisions, acknowledged that an act of pollution, obstruction, or diversion of water constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) .

[b] Single Flood Constitutes Nuisance

Granone v. County of Los Angeles (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 34 , was an action for damages caused by a city's maintenance of a nuisance. Plaintiff contended that defendant city designed defective culverts and negligently maintained a channel, allowing tremendous accumulation of debris, thereby blocking the flow of water in the channel and causing the water to overflow the levees, flood plaintiffs' land, and damage and destroy their crops. Defendants contended that no property right of plaintiffs was invaded and that they were not liable to plaintiffs on any theory of law. The trial court issued an order denying defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and entered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal stated that when private property is taken or damaged as a result of a plan of construction or maintenance adopted by a county or flood control district for a storm drainage or flood control project, then a taking or a damaging for a public use occurs (231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 646) . The court held that the acts complained of did interfere with an existing property right in the plaintiffs and that such acts did not benefit plaintiffs but, on the contrary, caused the damage of which plaintiffs complained. Noting that Ambrosini v. Alisal Sanitary Dist. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 720, 317 P.2d 33 , seemed to be authority for the proposition that a single act of flooding resulting in the destruction of crops constitutes a nuisance, the court found defendant's acts to constitute a nuisance (231 Cal. App. 2d 629, 650) .

Ambrosini v. Alisal Sanitary Dist. (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 720, 317 P.2d 33 , was an action for damages to celery crop on the grounds of nuisance and inverse condemnation. Plaintiff's celery field bordered a highway and was adjacent to a portion of a sewage outfall line installed, maintained, and operated by defendant district. Water containing sewage came out of the sewer and entered plaintiff's celery field. This resulted in a quarantine of the field. Plaintiff contended that defendant's construction of nonpressurized manholes constituted a nuisance, causing the damage to the celery field.

The trial court entered judgment on a jury verdict for plaintiffs on both counts. Defendant appealed. The court of appeal, holding that defendant's acts constituted a nuisance, affirmed the trial court's judgment and found that the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motions.

On appeal, defendant contended that it could not be held liable for nuisance because the property was used entirely for governmental purposes and was authorized by statute. The court of appeal held that in California a municipality may be held liable for creating and maintaining a nuisance notwithstanding the fact that a governmental activity is involved and that the statute did not authorize a defective outfall line (154 Cal. App. 2d 720, 726-727) . As to defendant's contention that a single act does not constitute a nuisance, the court held it had no merit because the duration or recurrence of the interference is not necessarily a conclusive factor in determining whether the damage is so substantial as to amount to a nuisance (154 Cal. App. 2d 720, 727) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Diversion or Obstruction of Water Flow as Nuisance

Learned v. Castle (1889) 78 Cal. 454, 18 P. 872 , was an action for damages for a nuisance and for mandatory injunction to prevent its continuance. Plaintiff contended that by tapping a stream north of plaintiff's land and placing obstructions in the stream, defendants caused water, which would ordinarily run away from plaintiff's land, to flow onto the land. Plaintiff further contended that defendants wrongfully entered plaintiff's land to remove a protective embankment. The trial court gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court reversed and ordered a new trial.

In reversing the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court stated that there can be no more marked interference with a man's free enjoyment of his property than to wrongfully cause water to flow onto his land that would not flow there naturally (78 Cal. 454, 460) . The Court found that the waters diverted by the canal flow onto plaintiffs' land but would not flow there if allowed to take their natural course. The Court held that to thus wrongfully cause water to flow upon another's land, which would not flow there naturally, is a nuisance because it is an injury to property right and it cannot be continued even though other persons might have a low estimate of the damage that it causes, especially when the continuance of the wrongful act might ripen into a right in the nature of an easement or servitude (78 Cal. 454, 461) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.27

§ 167.27 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Water and Air Pollution

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE UNDER SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE IT RESULTED IN POLLUTION.

Pollution as Nuisance. An act of pollution constitutes a nuisance under Section 3479 of the Civil Code (see Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 ; City of Turlock v. Bristow (1930) 103 Cal. App 750, 754, 284 P. 962).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it resulted in pollution.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see §§ 167.24 -167.26, 167.28 -167.33]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it resulted in pollution. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in actions involving pollution generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pollution as Nuisance

In Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 , plaintiffs sued the City of San Diego and the State of California for damages and injunctive relief. Plaintiffs contended that the United States and Mexico agreed to build a flood control channel. Plaintiffs further alleged that after Mexico built its portion, the original design was altered and that due to actions and inactions on the part of the city and state, construction of the United States' portion had been prevented. As a result, plaintiffs' property was subject to a greater threat of flooding and to discharge of raw and untreated sewage and other chemicals and substances injurious to plaintiffs' health and to their lands. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended that defendants introduced a condition that proximately caused a public and private nuisance. Although holding that plaintiffs had not stated a cause of action for nuisance because sufficient facts were not alleged from which the court could conclude that a nuisance existed within the statutory provisions, the court acknowledged that an act of pollution, obstruction, or diversion of water constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) .

City of Turlock v. Bristow (1930) 103 Cal. App 750, 284 P. 962 , was an action for relief from a public nuisance caused by the pollution of the water of an irrigation ditch. The trial court found that the ditch was maintained by the defendants in such a manner as to permit the accumulation of foul and stagnant water, refuse matter, filth and garbage, which became a breeding place for typhoid and other disease germs and permeated the air with noxious, unwholesome and offensive vapors and odors, rendering the ditch unsanitary, causing the neighborhood to become unhealthful, and destroying the comfort and enjoyment of the homes and property of the citizens of the vicinity. The trial court granted plaintiff's request for an injunction. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court held that the condition of the ditch unquestionably constituted a nuisance that affected the entire neighborhood and could be abated by the city (103 Cal. App 750, 754-755) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pollution as Nuisance

Dauberman v. Grant (1926) 198 Cal. 586, 246 P. 319 , was an action, inter alia, to enjoin defendant from maintaining a chimney or smokestack on the premises adjoining plaintiff's in such a manner that smoke therefrom would be conveyed into plaintiff's dwelling. The trial court found that the maintenance and operation of the smokestack constituted a nuisance and granted plaintiff's request for an injunction. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court stated that smoke and soot may constitute a nuisance. The Court found that the trial court was correct in finding that defendant's maintenance of the smokestack at a height low enough to permit pollution of the air of the plaintiff's premises and thereby interfere with her comfortable enjoyment was sufficient to constitute a nuisance (198 Cal. 586, 590) . The trial court's judgment was, however, reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial because the trial court had committed error in not admitting evidence regarding other actions of defendant that were alleged to constitute separate nuisances, and the damages allotted to those nuisances could not be separated from those awarded for the pollution of plaintiff's air (198 Cal. 586, 591-592) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.28

§ 167.28 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obstruction of Streets

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE UNDER SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE IT RESULTED IN THE OBSTRUCTION OF A PUBLIC STREET OR HIGHWAY.

A. Obstruction of Streets as Nuisance. Anything that unlawfully obstructs the free passage or customary use of a public street is a nuisance (Phillips v. City of Pasadena (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 104, 106, 162 P.2d 625).

[Optional] B. Chemical Fog as Obstruction. Release of a chemical fog, when of such density that it obstructs the passage and use of the highway in the customary manner, constitutes a nuisance (Bright v. East Side Mosquito Abatement Dist. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 7, 10, 335 P.2d 527).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's activity or conduct, of which plaintiff complains, constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it unlawfully obstructed a street or highway.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see §§ 167.24 -167.27, 167.29 -167.33]. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct of which plaintiff complains constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because unlawfully obstructed a street or highway. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obstruction of Streets as Nuisance

Phillips v. City of Pasadena (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 104, 162 P.2d 625 , was an action for damages against a city brought by the owner of a mountain resort outside the city. The only safe means of ingress and egress to the resort was by a road partly within the city limits that was used by plaintiff, patrons of plaintiff's resort, and the general public. Defendant closed the road by placing a locked gate across it at an intersection within the city limits. Plaintiff appealed the trial court's sustaining of defendant's demurrer to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the unlawful barricading of a public street is a nuisance, that anyone injured by it may bring an action for nuisance, and that an obstruction cutting off all access is an especially injurious nuisance (27 Cal. 2d 104, 106) .

[b] Chemical Fog as Obstruction

Bright v. East Side Mosquito Abatement Dist. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 7, 335 P.2d 527 , was an action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained in a series of automobile collisions. Plaintiff alleged in one count that the release of a chemical fog impeded and obstructed the free and safe passage and use of the highway and constituted a nuisance. The trial court entered judgment of dismissal after sustaining a demurrer to plaintiff's second amended complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment of dismissal.

The court, in considering whether the facts alleged showed defendants' acts to be within the statutory definition of a nuisance, held that the spray was of such density that it obstructed the passage and use of the highway in the customary manner. The court stated that one of the meanings of the word "obstruct" is to hinder from passing, action, or operation; hence to hinder, impede, or retard, as clouds obstruct the light (168 Cal. App. 2d 7, 10) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.29

§ 167.29 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Noise

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT CAUSED NOISE THAT UNREASONABLY INTERFERED WITH PLAINTIFF'S COMFORTABLE ENJOYMENT OF PROPERTY.

A. Noise as Nuisance. Noise that unreasonably interferes with the neighbors' comfortable enjoyment of life and property is a nuisance (People v. Mason (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 348, 353-354, 177 Cal. Rptr. 284).

[Optional] B. Airport as Nuisance. An airport is not a nuisance per se, but it may become a nuisance because of either unsuitable location or improper operation, or both (Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 838, 243 P.2d 497).

[Optional] C. Airport Proprietor-Landlord Liable for Damages. An airport proprietor-landlord can be held liable for damages, since federal courts and the Federal Aviation Agency have refrained from imposing limitations on the rights and obligations of a proprietor-landlord, and there is no compelling federal interest precluding state imposition of nuisance liability on the proprietor of an airport for damage to the persons of the owners or occupants of the affected property (Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 94-100, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's activity or conduct constituted a nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3479 because it created noise that interfered with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property.

Optional Paragraph B should be used when the noise is created by the operation of an airport. Optional Paragraph C should be used to refute an airport proprietor/landlord's claim that he or she cannot be held liable for damages when defendant contends that such liability is preempted by federal law.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see §§ 167.24 -167.28, 167.30 -167.33]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3479 because it created noise that interfered with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion of governmental regulation of airports, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 16, Airplanes and Airports (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions for inverse condemnation based on airport noise, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 247, Eminent Domain (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Noise as Nuisance

People v. Mason (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 348, 177 Cal. Rptr. 284 , was an action to abate a public nuisance caused by music and noise from defendants' restaurant and bar business. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs, permanently enjoining defendants. Defendants appealed, challenging plaintiffs' standing to bring suit and the sufficiency of evidence to support findings of nuisance as well as the terms of the injunction. The court of appeal held that the evidence presented was sufficient to support the finding that a public nuisance was created because residents testified that the noise caused extreme discomfort and annoyance interfering with the residents' ability to use their outdoor facilities and significantly affecting their ability to sleep, and that the amplified music, foot stomping, and hand clapping created discomfort and obstructed the free use of property so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life and property (124 Cal. App. 3d 348, 353) . The court, however, did find the injunction too broad, holding that the injunction should have been worded so as to permit some noise to be audible, since an audible level of noise is not necessarily a nuisance, and restrict only that noise which unreasonably interferes with the residents' use and enjoyment of their property (124 Cal. App. 3d 348, 354) .

[b] Airport as Nuisance

Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 243 P.2d 497 , was an action for damages and injunctive relief. Plaintiffs contended that defendants' operation of an airport constituted a nuisance because it created such a tremendous noise that it interfered with the lawful use, enjoyment, and occupancy of the dwellings of plaintiffs. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs. Defendants appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed the damage award but reversed the portion of the judgment granting injunctive relief.

The Court stated that an airport is not a nuisance per se, but it may become a nuisance because of either unsuitable location or improper operation, or both (38 Cal. 2d 825, 838) . The Court found the airport, as operated, to be a nuisance, but held that the injunction was too broad because there was no testimony indicating that the runways were too short to allow lawful operation of the field (38 Cal. 2d 825, 844) .

[c] Airport Proprietor-Landlord Liable for Damages

In Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , plaintiffs, as owners and occupants of homes near an airport, sued the city in inverse condemnation for damages and on a nuisance theory, for personal injuries caused by noise, smoke, and vibrations emanating from aircraft using the airport. At trial, the actions were bifurcated. On the nuisance issue, the trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs, holding that plaintiffs had established the existence of an actionable nuisance giving rise to damages for annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort, mental distress, and emotional distress, and that a nuisance recovery was independent of plaintiffs' claim for diminution of their property values. Defendant city appealed. Defendant contended that plaintiffs' nuisance claim must fail because noise control is federally preempted and the operation of the aircraft is expressly sanctioned by statutory law and therefore cannot constitute a nuisance. The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for plaintiffs.

The Court stated that it had previously acknowledged that commercial flights that are conducted in strict compliance with federal regulations may not be enjoined as nuisances because of both the continuing public interest in air transportation and the likelihood of direct conflict with federal law. In so holding, however, the Court said that it had expressly cautioned that the decision did not determine the right of landowners, who suffer from airplane annoyances, to seek damages from the owners or operators of aircraft or to seek compensation from the owners or operators of airports and observed that preemption did not operate per se to preclude the enforcement of private state remedies for aircraft noise damage and that only a compelling federal interest would support a finding that Congress intended to nullify state-created rights (26 Cal. 3d 86, 94) . The Court then held that the nuisance claims did not fail by reason of federal preemption because there was no compelling federal interest precluding state imposition of nuisance liability on the proprietor of an airport for damage to the persons of the owners or occupants of the affected property. The Court pointed out that the federal courts and Federal Aviation Agency have refrained from imposing limitations on the rights and obligations of a proprietor-landlord (26 Cal. 3d 86, 94-100) . The Court also noted that the city, not the federal government, chose the location and built and expanded the airport in the immediate vicinity of a residential area with foreknowledge of the nature and usage of the area and was not rendered powerless to prevent or reduce the damages of which plaintiffs complained (26 Cal. 3d 86, 98-99) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.30

§ 167.30 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Odors

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE UNDER SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE IT CREATED SMELLS AND NOXIOUS ODORS THAT ARE A SOURCE OF DISCOMFORT TO PLAINTIFF AND THAT DIMINISH THE VALUE OF PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY AND UNREASONABLY INTERFERE WITH PLAINTIFF'S COMFORTABLE ENJOYMENT OF HIS/HER PROPERTY.

Odors as Nuisance. Creation of smells and noxious odors that are offensive enough to destroy comfort and enjoyment of one's home or diminish value of property are a nuisance (Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294, 142 Cal. Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it produced noxious odors that interfered with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see, e.g., see §§ 167.24 -167.29, 167.31, 167.33]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that odors constitute a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Odors as Nuisance

Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 285, 142 Cal. Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43 , was an action for damages caused by a city's operation of a sewage treatment plant near plaintiff's property. The action was based in part on a theory of nuisance. Plaintiff sought recovery for permanent diminution in value of property caused by the nuisance as well as compensation for personal discomfort. Defendant moved for judgment on the pleadings; the trial court denied the motion regarding the nuisance cause of action and gave judgment for plaintiff on a jury verdict. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

On appeal, defendant challenged the trial court's instruction regarding plaintiff's compensation for damages to property proximately caused by permanent nuisance, claiming that the plant was authorized by statute and that the awards of damages for loss in value of real property and for the personal discomfort of plaintiffs were unsupported by the evidence. The Supreme Court held that construction of sewage treatment plants by cities is admittedly authorized by statute but found that none of the Government Code statutes under which the city claimed to have acted mentions the possibility of noxious emanations from such facilities, that the odors were not authorized by the plainest and most necessary implication from the general powers conferred by these statutes, and that the Legislature did not contemplate the creation of a malodorous nuisance when it authorized sewage plan construction. Therefore, the Court held that the general authorization of municipal construction of sewage plants did not expressly sanction the production of any particular level of odors (20 Cal. 3d 285, 292) . The Court further held that the record revealed substantial evidence to sustain the verdict that a nuisance existed because the testimony indicated that the odors were offensive enough to destroy the comfort and enjoyment of plaintiffs' homes (20 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.31

§ 167.31 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obscenity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A PUBLIC NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS INDECENT AND OFFENSIVE TO THE SENSES.

A. Obscenity as Nuisance. Any act that is an offense against public decency, or any public exhibition that is offensive to the senses, whether of sight, sound, or smell, or that tends to corrupt public morals or disturb the good order and welfare of society is a public nuisance (People ex rel. Busch v. Projection Room Theater (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 42, 51, 130 Cal. Rptr. 328, 550 P.2d 600 ; Weis v. Superior Court (1916) 30 Cal. App 730, 733, 159 P. 464).

B. Clear and Convincing Proof of Obscenity for Abatement. Both the First Amendment to the United States Constitution and Article I, Section 2, of the California Constitution require that obscenity be proven by clear and convincing evidence in a public nuisance abatement action (People ex rel. Cooper v. Mitchell Bros' Santa Ana Theater (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 937, 940, 180 Cal. Rptr. 728).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's acts or conduct constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it is indecent or offensive to the senses in that it is offensive to a community's moral sensibilities or tends to corrupt public morals. This type of nuisance is a public nuisance for which a private person bringing a private action for damages or injunctive relief would have to show special injury [see People ex rel. Busch v. Projection Room Theater (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 42, 51, 130 Cal. Rptr. 328, 550 P.2d 600 ; Weis v. Superior Court (1916) 30 Cal. App 730, 733, 159 P. 464] .

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance [see, e.g., §§ 167.24 -167.30, 167.33]. If standing is an issue, they should be combined with points and authorities supporting the contention that plaintiff has suffered a special injury different in kind from that suffered by the general public [see § 167.21]. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's acts or conduct constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 because it is indecent or offensive to the senses in that it is offensive to a community's moral sensibilities or tends to corrupt public morals. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obscenity as Nuisance

People ex rel. Busch v. Projection Room Theater (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 42, 130 Cal. Rptr. 328, 550 P.2d 600 , was an action brought by public officials acting on behalf of the public generally to restrain the exhibition of obscene books and films under public nuisance laws. Defendants contended that their operations did not constitute public nuisances that were subject to regulation and abatement. The trial court, sustaining defendants' general demurrers to the complaint, entered judgments of dismissal. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the cause for further proceedings consistent with its opinion.

The Supreme Court held that plaintiffs' complaint was sufficient to state a cause of action based on general nuisance theory (17 Cal. 3d 42, 60) . The Court stated that nuisance as described in Penal Code § 370 and Civ. Code § 3479 could not be limited to conduct that is offensive to the five senses but must also include conduct that is indecent; therefore, conduct offensive to a community's moral sensibilities is subject to regulation under Penal Code § 370 (17 Cal. 3d 42, 50-51) . Finding the exhibition of obscene magazines and films to be a form of activity that may be characterized as indecent or offensive to the senses, interfering with the comfortable enjoyment of life of a considerable number of persons, the Court held that injunctive relief could be granted as long as defendants' constitutional rights are protected (17 Cal. 3d 42, 49, 60) .

Weis v. Superior Court (1916) 30 Cal. App 730, 159 P. 464 , was an application for a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from further proceedings in a nuisance action. In the nuisance action, the district attorney of San Diego County sought to restrain defendants' activities in exhibiting nude women as a public nuisance. A demurrer to the complaint was overruled by the trial court. In the application for the writ, defendants contended that unless restrained, the trial court would grant an injunction that is beyond the jurisdiction of the trial court. The court of appeal denied the application for a peremptory writ and dismissed the proceeding.

The court of appeal held that when the threatened acts will constitute a public nuisance, courts of equity can grant injunctive relief (30 Cal. App. 730, 732) . The court stated that an act displayed before a public audience that is debasing in its character, debauching in its influence on public morals, and brutalizing in its effect on the spectators is a public nuisance. The court, therefore, found that the acts complained of here clearly constituted a public nuisance within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3479 (30 Cal. App. 730, 732) . The court further held that any act that is an offense against public decency, or any public exhibition that is offensive to the senses, whether of sight, sound, or smell, or that tends to corrupt public morals or disturb the good order and welfare of society is a public nuisance (30 Cal. App. 730, 733) .

[b] Clear and Convincing Proof of Obscenity for Abatement

People ex rel. Cooper v. Mitchell Bros' Santa Ana Theater (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 937, 180 Cal. Rptr. 728 , was reversed and remanded from the United States Supreme Court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of that Court. On remand, the court of appeal held that California's law does not require the application of the strictest standard of proof (beyond a reasonable doubt) in obscenity cases (128 Cal. App. 3d 937, 939) . The court, therefore, held that both U.S. Const. amend. I and Cal. Const. art. I, § 2, require that obscenity be proved by clear and convincing evidence in a public nuisance abatement action (128 Cal. App. 3d 937, 940) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.32

§ 167.32 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Places Used for Unlawfully Selling Controlled Substances ("Drug Houses") [Health & Safety Code § 11570 et seq.]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE UNDER SECTION 3479 OF THE CIVIL CODE AND SECTION 11570 OF THE HEALTH AND SAFETY CODE BECAUSE IT IS A BUILDING OR PLACE USED FOR THE PURPOSE OF UNLAWFULLY SELLING, SERVING, STORING, KEEPING, MANUFACTURING, OR GIVING AWAY CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

A. "Drug House" as Nuisance. Every building or place used for the purpose of unlawfully selling, serving, storing, keeping, manufacturing, or giving away any controlled substance, precursor, or analog specified in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act [Civ. Code § 3479; Health & Safety Code § 11000 et seq.], and every building or place where those acts take place, is a nuisance that shall be enjoined, abated, and prevented, and for which damages may be recovered, whether it is a public or private nuisance (Health & Safety Code § 11570).

B. Damages Recoverable in Lieu of Action for Abatement. Plaintiffs injured by the existence of a "drug house" may bring an action for damages and are not limited to the statutory remedy of abatement provided in Health & Safety Code § 11571 et seq. because a "drug house" is specifically defined as a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 and because Health & Safety Code § 11573.5(f) specifically permits other remedies (Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 871-872, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that property owned by defendant constitutes a nuisance because it is a building or place used to sell, store, serve, manufacture, or give away controlled substances (a "drug house") [Civ. Code § 3479; see Health & Safety Code § 11570], and that plaintiff may recover damages for injury caused by this nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting the general contention that the property constitutes a nuisance [see, e.g., §§ 167.23 -167.25, 167.27 -167.31]. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's property is a "drug house" and therefore a nuisance for which plaintiff may recover damages. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Use

The Red Light Abatement Law [Penal Code § 11225 et seq.], which declares that every building used either for the purpose of illegal gambling or prostitution or as a bathhouse that permits AIDS-transmitting conduct is a nuisance, contains provisions substantially similar to those in Health & Safety Code § 11570 et seq. Counsel could conceivably modify these points and authorities and submit them in support of plaintiff's contention that plaintiff is entitled to recover damages from defendant because defendant's property constitutes a nuisance under the Red Light Abatement Law that has injured plaintiff.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable in Lieu of Action for Abatement

In Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 , decided before the amendment of Civ. Code § 3479 to specifically include the illegal sale of controlled substances in the definition of a nuisance, plaintiffs were neighbors of an apartment complex owned by defendants who filed numerous separate actions in small claims court that were consolidated for trial. Plaintiffs claimed that drug dealers, drug customers, and prostitutes frequented or worked in and nearby the building, confronted and threatened plaintiffs, deprived them of sleep, prevented them from using their own front or back yards, and made them fear for their lives and safety. Plaintiffs prevailed in small claims court, and in the trial de novo in superior court. Defendants sought a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to set aside its judgment, which the court of appeal denied.

Holding that defendants' building was a nuisance by legislative definition under the provisions of Health & Safety Code § 11570, the court of appeal rejected defendants' argument that plaintiffs were not entitled to recover damages because the only remedy for a nuisance as defined by that statute is the abatement action described in Health & Safety Code § 11571 et seq., which involves sale of chattels, closure of the premises, and civil penalties. The court held that the definition of a "drug house" under Health & Safety Code § 11570 qualifies as a nuisance under the broader terms of Civ. Code § 3479, the general nuisance statute, because it is injurious to health, indecent or offensive to the senses, an obstruction to the free use of property, and interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property (20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 871-872) . Moreover, the very provisions cited by defendants as limiting plaintiff's remedy to abatement specify, in Health & Safety Code § 11573.5(f), that the remedies set forth in that section are in addition to any other existing remedies for nuisance abatement actions. The court concluded that plaintiffs were entitled to seek damages in small claims court and that the court had the power to consolidate their numerous claims (20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 872) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.33

§ 167.33 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Unnecessary Use and Injurious Method of Operation in Area Zoned for Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE EVEN THOUGH THE AREA WAS ZONED FOR THE PURPOSE BECAUSE THE METHOD OF OPERATION WAS UNNECESSARY AND INJURIOUS.

Unnecessary and Injurious Method of Operation in Area Zoned for Purpose. The rule set out in Section 731a of the Code of Civil Procedure, that whenever any city, county, or city and county has established under authority of law zones or districts wherein certain manufacturing or commercial or airport uses are expressly permitted, such uses may not be deemed a nuisance, does not apply when there is evidence of the employment of unnecessary and injurious methods of operation (see Civ. Code § 731a; Gelfand v. O'Haver (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 218, 220, 200 P.2d 790).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance and that defendant may be enjoined from engaging in the conduct complained of, even though the area is zoned for the specific use to which defendant is putting his or her property, because the method of operation is unnecessary and injurious [see Code Civ. Proc. § 731a].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issues that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance and may be enjoined. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unnecessary and Injurious Method of Operation in Area Zoned for Purpose

Gelfand v. O'Haver (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 218, 200 P.2d 790 , was an action to enjoin defendants from maintaining a nuisance by unreasonable and injurious methods of operating their music studio. There was evidence that nothing was done to soundproof or adapt the residential building to the defendants' business, that windows were left open permitting the free flow of sound, and that noise emanated from the studio day and night. The trial court granted an injunction. Defendants appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Supreme Court held that the evidence was sufficient to support the finding of unnecessary and injurious methods of operation and to satisfy the requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 731a that there be evidence of unnecessary and injurious methods of operation. The Court noted that the manifest purpose of the adoption of Code Civ. Proc. § 731a was to eliminate injunctive relief when the business is operated in its appropriate zone and the only showing is an injury and nuisance to the plaintiff in such operation. The Court stated that plaintiff must show more, namely, that the defendant employed "unnecessary and injurious methods" in the operation of the business. The Court held that this did not mean that the only evidence that would establish an unnecessary and injurious method of operation is a failure to pursue the methods customarily and usually employed in other similar businesses in the vicinity, and that while such evidence may be relevant to that issue, there is no reason why it should be indispensable (33 Cal. 2d 218, 220) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.34

§ 167.34 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Nuisance May Be Created On Plaintiff's Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (see § 167.23).]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE EVEN THOUGH IT WAS CREATED ON THE PLAINTIFF'S OWN PROPERTY.

Recovery for Nuisance Is Not Limited to Offensive Use of Neighboring Lands. The California nuisance statutes have been construed, according to their broad terms, to allow an owner of property to sue for damages caused by a nuisance created on the owner's property. Under California law, it is not necessary that a nuisance have its origin in neighboring property (Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 343, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 ; Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance even though the origin of the nuisance was on plaintiff's own property. For example, a current owner of property may recover for a nuisance caused by a previous possessor who unlawfully contaminated the property with hazardous waste [see Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 (expressing no view whether regulation under federal and state law either authorizes or precludes relief)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issues that defendant's activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance and may be enjoined. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should identify the plaintiff's interest in the property, and state facts supporting the conclusion that the condition constitutes a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 et seq. notwithstanding the fact that the nuisance resulted from acts of defendant committed on the same property.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery for Nuisance Is Not Limited to Offensive Use of Neighboring Lands

In Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 , plaintiff brought an action against prior owners of plaintiff's real property for having discharged hazardous waste onto the property that was continuing to pollute the soil and groundwater. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal reversed, rejecting defendants' argument that nuisance requires an invasion of real property other than one's own, and therefore one cannot be liable for committing a nuisance to one's own property. The court, citing Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 , held that California nuisance law is a creature of statute [see, e.g., Civ. Code § 3479] and that the applicable statutes have been construed broadly to allow an owner of property to sue for damages from a nuisance on his or her own property as well as damages from by nuisances originating on neighboring property (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 343) . Defendants also argued that they were the owners of the property at the inception of the contamination, and therefore no nuisance occurred then because they could not be liable to themselves. Because there was no nuisance then, defendants argued, there could not be a continuing nuisance as claimed by plaintiff. The court held that this argument was fundamentally flawed because defendants had created a condition on their property that was injurious to health, which Civ. Code § 3479 defines as a nuisance (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 344) .

In Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 , owners of real property brought an action against parties who leased the property from prior owners and who allegedly contaminated the property with hazardous waste during the lease. Defendant demurred and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend.

The court of appeal reversed. With regard to plaintiffs' causes of action for nuisance, the defendant argued that the critical fact of the case--that the claim of nuisance is being made by a present owner of property for alleged injury to that property resulting from acts of a defendant committed on that very property--takes the case entirely outside the area of nuisance (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1133) . The court rejected this argument on the ground that defendant failed to recognize that California nuisance law is a creature of statute. The California nuisance statutes have been construed, according to their broad terms, to allow an owner of property to sue for damages caused by a nuisance created on the owner's property, and that under California law, it is not necessary that a nuisance have its origin in neighboring property (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134) . The court stated that modern California cases have recognized that the statutory definition of nuisance appears to be broad enough to encompass almost every conceivable type of interference with the enjoyment or use of land or property (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1136) . The court cited cases finding that various conditions on plaintiffs' property constituted nuisances, including obstruction of a plaintiff's private road with a gate, obstruction of a private alley, and the defective condition of a tenant's rented premises caused by the landlord (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1136-1137) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery for Nuisance Is Not Limited to Offensive Use of Neighboring Lands

In KFC W., Inc. v. Meghrig (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 , plaintiffs brought a nuisance action against defendants, the former owners of plaintiffs' real property, seeking reimbursement for costs of cleaning up contamination of the property, which plaintiffs claimed was caused by defendants' negligent operation of a gasoline station on the property. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed and remanded, rejecting defendants' argument that a cause of action for nuisance requires an invasion of property other than one's own, citing the holding of Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 344, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 [see § 167.34[3][a]], that the statutes governing nuisance permit a property owner to sue for damages resulting from a nuisance on his or her own property (23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1178-1179) .

In Wilshire Westwood Assocs. v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562 , defendants operated a gasoline service station on leased property that was eventually sold to plaintiffs, who discovered that the soil was contaminated with gasoline. Plaintiffs filed a nuisance action against defendants to recover the costs of cleaning up the property. The trial court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment. The court held that under Mangini v. Aerojet Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 [see § 167.34[3][a]], which the court described as well-reasoned and fully applicable to the case in question, a party can maintain a nuisance action for activity occurring on the party's own land against a prior occupier of that land (20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 745-746) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.35

§ 167.35 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479]--Activity or Conduct Is Within Statutory Definition of Public Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3480]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the general statutory definition of nuisance (See § 167.23).]

THE _____ [specify activity or conduct complained of]
IS A PUBLIC NUISANCE WITHIN THE DEFINITION OF PUBLIC NUISANCE IN CIVIL CODE SECTIONS 3480.

A. Definition of Public Nuisance Under Civil Code Section 3480 . A public nuisance is one which affects at the same time an entire community or neighborhood, or any considerable number of persons (Civ. Code § 3480).

B. Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance. The basis of a nuisance action must be found in the statute (People v. Lim (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 872, 880-881, 118 P.2d 472).

[Optional] C. Gang Activity Constitutes Public Nuisance. Gang activity which obstructs residents' use of their own property, obstructs the free passage or use of public streets, and is indecent or offensive to the senses, meets the statutory standard for public nuisance (People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1120, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277).

[Optional] D. Use of Lead for Interior Paint Can Constitute Public Nuisance. The use of lead in paint designed for the interior of buildings, which creates a public health hazard and interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of life and property, can constitute a public nuisance subject to abatement in an action brought against manufacturers of lead that promoted use of their product in paint with knowledge of the harm that it could cause (County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 305-311, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 , review granted, depublished, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 629, 188 P.3d 579, 2008 Cal. LEXIS 9073).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that the condition or activity complained of constitutes a public nuisance under Civ. Code § 3480. Optional Paragraph C may be used if the activity cited as a nuisance by plaintiff is gang related. Optional Paragraph D may be used in certain circumstances if the activity cited as a nuisance is the use of lead in interior paint.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the existence of a nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the definition of nuisance set out in the form. Thus, counsel should cite facts from supporting declarations, or the record, showing that the conduct of opposing party satisfies the requirements of Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

The facts and procedural background of People v. Lim (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 872, 118 P.2d 472 , are discussed in § 167.53[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the basis of a nuisance action must be found in the statutes rather than by reference to the common law definitions of public nuisance (18 Cal. 2d 872, 880-881) .

[b] Gang Activity Constitutes Public Nuisance

In People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1120, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , the Supreme Court granted review to resolve challenges to a preliminary injunction entered by the superior court against individual members of a criminal street gang. The petition sought review of two specific provisions within the injunction, paragraph (a) which effectively forbid gang members from engaging in any form of social intercourse with anyone known to them to be a gang member anywhere in public view within a four block area, and paragraph (b) which forbid those subject to the injunction from confronting, intimidating or similarly challenging (including assaulting and battering) residents of the area or any other persons who gang members know have complained about their conduct within the neighborhood. In the underlying action, a City Attorney attempted to enjoin specific gang behavior under Code Civ. Proc. § 731 as a public nuisance under Civ. Code § 3480. The trial court granted an ex parte temporary restraining order and then a preliminary injunction against defendant gang members. Defendants appealed. The court of appeal upheld only those provisions of the preliminary injunction which enjoined acts or conduct defined as crimes under the Penal Code, and concluded that many of the provisions of the preliminary injunction were void and unenforceable under the First and Fifth Amendments to the federal Constitution as unconstitutionally vague or overbroad.

The Supreme Court held that the two challenged provisions fell within the superior court's equitable power to abate a public nuisance and neither ran afoul of rights secured to defendants by the federal Constitution (14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1102) . Specifically, the Court found that the conduct enjoined by the trial court clearly met the statutory definition of public nuisance in Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480. In support of this holding the Court looked to the declarations filed in support of the City's request for injunctive relief. These declarations detailed the fact that gang members routinely obstructed area residents' use of their own property by dealing drugs from apartment houses, lawns, carports and even residents' cars, as well as habitually obstructed the free passage or use of the neighborhood's public streets. According to the Court, the following conduct of gang members qualified as indecent or offensive to the senses of reasonable area residents, easily meeting the statutory standard: drinking, consumption of illegal drugs, loud talk, loud music, vulgarity, profanity, brutality, fistfights and gunfire. In addition, the Court felt that it was easy to see how threats of violence to individual residents, murder, attempted murder, drive-by shootings, assault and battery, vandalism, arson and associated crimes obstructed the free use of property and interfered with the enjoyment of life of the entire community (14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1102) .

[c] Use of Lead for Interior Paint Can Constitute Public Nuisance

In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 , review granted, depublished, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 629, 188 P.3d 579, 2008 Cal. LEXIS 9073 , several California counties and related local entities brought a lawsuit against lead manufacturers that, prior to 1978, promoted lead for use in paint to be used in building interiors. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants had promoted lead as safe for that use, even though they had known for years of lead's harmful health effects on humans, had actively concealed these known dangers, and even had campaigned against the regulation of lead. The plaintiffs' lawsuit, which was based on the presence of lead-based paint in public buildings, included a cause of action for abatement of a public nuisance brought on behalf of the People of the State of California, as well as a public nuisance cause of action on the plaintiffs' own behalf to recover damages for the costs of testing and remediation. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer to the public nuisance causes of action. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to the representative public nuisance action seeking abatement, but affirmed as to the nuisance action seeking damages. The court held that the plaintiffs had pleaded the elements of a public nuisance sufficient to withstand a demurrer. The plaintiffs had alleged that lead causes grave harm, is injurious to health, and interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of life and property (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 305-306) . The plaintiffs had also alleged that the defendants assisted in the creation of this nuisance by concealing the dangers of lead, mounting a campaign against the regulation of lead, and promoting lead paint for interior use, even though the defendants had known for nearly a century that the use of lead paint was hazardous to humans. Based on these allegations, the plaintiffs were entitled to seek abatement, despite the defendants' argument that the plaintiffs' claim was essentially a products liability claim, and under existing case law, a nuisance action was an inappropriate remedy for what is essentially a products liability claim. The court noted that the plaintiffs, who were suing on behalf of the People, unlike the plaintiffs in earlier cases, were seeking abatement of a public health hazard, rather than damages. The plaintiffs were entitled to seek a remedy for a public health hazard before that hazard causes any physical injury or damage to property. Moreover, the court noted that the plaintiffs' representative cause of action was not premised on a defect in the product or merely a failure to warn of a danger presented by a product. Instead, the cause of action was predicated on the defendants' active participation in creating the public hazard (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 306, 309-311) . However, the court agreed with the defendants that under existing case law, the demurrer was properly sustained as to the nuisance action brought to recover the plaintiffs' own damages, because the plaintiffs were seeking to pursue a claim for past damages suffered, which is properly brought as a products liability action (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 311-313) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.36

§ 167.36 Supporting Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance Per Se--Proof of Injury Not Required

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE PER SE IN THAT _____ [(THE LEGISLATURE or A MUNICIPALITY) HAS DECLARED IT TO BE A PUBLIC NUISANCE or IT RESULTED IN A DIVERSION OF WATER FROM ITS NATURAL COURSE] AND THEREFORE PLAINTIFF NEED NOT SHOW INJURY OR DAMAGE.

[EITHER]

A. Legislative Declaration of Nuisance. An action or condition that has been declared by the Legislature to be a public nuisance is a nuisance per se (McClatchy v. Laguna Lands Ltd. (1917) 32 Cal. App 718, 725, 164 P. 41).

[OR]

A. Municipal Declaration of Nuisance. An action or condition within a municipality that has been declared by ordinance to be a public nuisance, when the ordinance does not conflict with state laws and the Legislature has not preempted the field, is a nuisance per se (City of Costa Mesa v. Soffer (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 378, 382-385, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 735).

[OR]

A. Interference With Flow of Water. To wrongfully cause water to flow upon another's land, which would not flow there naturally is to create a nuisance per se (Allen v. Stowell (1905) 145 Cal. 666, 669, 79 P. 371).

[Optional] B. Proof of Injury Not Required for Injunctive Relief From Nuisance Per Se. When an action or condition is a nuisance per se, no proof is required beyond the actual fact of the prescribed actions or conditions to establish them as for the purpose of obtaining injunctive relief; no ill effects need be proved (see McClatchy v. Laguna Lands Ltd. (1917) 32 Cal. App 718, 725, 164 P. 41).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant's acts or conduct constitutes a nuisance per se and no proof is required to obtain injunctive relief beyond the actual fact of the prescribed actions or conditions.

These points and authorities may be combined with forms supporting the contention that plaintiff may bring an action for public or private nuisance [see §§ 167.20 -167.22]. If alternate Paragraph A is used, this form can be combined with the form supporting the contention that diversion or obstruction of water flow constitutes a nuisance [see § 167.26].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's acts or conduct constitutes a nuisance per se. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To establish the act or conduct as a nuisance per se, counsel should cite the specific legislation or ordinance that makes the act or conduct a nuisance per se or show that defendant wrongfully caused water to flow onto plaintiff's land, which would not flow there naturally.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legislative Declaration of Nuisance

In McClatchy v. Laguna Lands Ltd. (1917) 32 Cal. App 718, 164 P. 41 , an action for abatement of a public nuisance brought under provisions of an act of the Legislature, defendants moved for a change of place of trial, which was denied. On appeal of this motion, the court of appeal affirmed.

The court found that the act under which the action was brought provided for creation of a drainage district, gave the district board power to restrain diversion of waters, and declared such diversion to be a public nuisance. Defendants contended that there was no allegation in the complaint to show that there was any present interference with the rights or enjoyment of property in the county in which the action was brought. The court of appeal noted that within reasonable limits the Legislature has the power to declare certain uses of property to be a nuisance and such use thereon becomes a nuisance per se. The court held that the Legislature had declared the acts complained of here to be a public nuisance and that such acts constituted a nuisance per se. The court stated that nuisances per se are so regarded because no proof is required, beyond the actual fact of their existence, to establish the nuisance, that no ill effects need be proved, and that all parties to a nuisance per se are responsible for its effect without limitations of condition or time (32 Cal. App 718, 725) .

[b] Municipal Declaration of Nuisance

In City of Costa Mesa v. Soffer (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 378, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 735 , the city had ordained that the presence of an abandoned, wrecked, dismantled, or inoperative vehicle, or parts of such a vehicle, on private or public property constituted a public nuisance. Exceptions covered vehicles and parts inside buildings or stored pursuant to permits and vehicles and parts held by licensed dismantlers, dealers, and junkyards. The city sought to apply the ordinance in an abatement action for injunctive relief against the defendant, who was not subject to one of the exceptions and on whose residential property eight vehicles were allegedly kept, in the conditions described in the ordinance. The trial court entered judgment for the city. The defendant did not deny being in violation of the ordinance but challenged the ordinance on the grounds of lack of authority for the city to adopt the ordinance and contravention of constitutional standards. The court of appeal concluded that the city had authority to adopt the ordinance, and the court rejected the constitutional arguments. The court noted the California constitutional authority of a city to adopt ordinances not in conflict with general laws, as well as Gov. Code § 38771, which provides, "By ordinance the city legislative body may declare what constitutes a nuisance." More specifically, Veh. Code § 22660 provides that a city "may adopt an ordinance establishing procedures for the abatement and removal, as public nuisances, of abandoned, wrecked, dismantled, or inoperative vehicles or parts thereof from private or public property." The court also concluded that the Legislature has not preempted the field of public nuisance law by enacting a general penal statute regarding public nuisances [see Penal Code § 372] (11 Cal. App. 4th 378, 382-385) .

[c] Interference With Flow of Water

Allen v. Stowell (1905) 145 Cal. 666, 79 P. 371 , was an action for an injunction compelling defendants to remove certain dams erected by defendants. Plaintiff contended that the dams caused the flow of water to be diverted from its natural course and to flow through a railroad culvert onto plaintiff's land. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff, granting a mandatory injunction. Defendants appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court found that the water diverted onto plaintiff's land by the dams erected by defendant would not flow there if allowed to take its natural course (145 Cal. 666, 668-669) . The Court held that to thus wrongfully cause water for flow upon another's land which would not flow there naturally is to create a nuisance per se (145 Cal. 666, 669) .

[d] Proof of Injury Not Required for Injuntive Relief From Nuisance Per Se

McClatchy v. Laguna Lands Ltd. (1917) 32 Cal. App 718, 164 P. 41 , is discussed in § 167.36[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legislative Declaration of Nuisance

Smith v. David (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 101, 176 Cal. Rptr. 112 , was an action for nuisance. The jury was instructed that if the dwelling in question was found to constitute a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479, they could award damages to plaintiffs only if it was found that the nuisance was specially injurious to them as opposed to the community in general. The jury was not instructed that the dwelling was a nuisance as a matter of law under pertinent provisions of the California Code of Regulations. Under 25 Cal. Code Reg § 122, buildings that meet the definition of substandard (that is, any building in which exist any of the conditions listed in Chapter 10 of the Uniform Housing Code, to an extent that endangers life, limb, health, property, safety, or welfare of the public or the occupants thereof) are public nuisances per se that may be enjoined by appropriate procedures (120 Cal. App. 3d 101, 113) . Defendants contended that failure to instruct the jury on 25 Cal. Code Reg § 122 constituted prejudicial error. The court of appeal found that had the jury been given such instructions there was a strong probability they would have found the dwelling to be substandard and consequently a nuisance. The court held that if the jury determined that the housing code violations in the dwelling endangered life, limb, health, property, safety or welfare of the occupants thereof, then the jury would have had to find that the building was a nuisance; thus, the failure to give the instructions constituted prejudicial error (120 Cal. App. 3d 101, 114) .

[b] Municipal Declaration of Nuisance

In City of Claremont v. Kruse (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , defendant opened a medical marijuana dispensary within city limits. Prior to opening the business, defendant had informed city personnel that he intended to do so and applied for a business permit and business license. The city denied the application, concluding that the proposed business was not a permitted business under the city's land use laws, but informed defendant that he could apply for a discretionary amendment to the land use code. Defendant chose not to do so, but continued operating his business. The city adopted an ordinance prohibiting the establishment of medical marijuana clinics in the city, and fined defendant for each day he was in violation. The city also filed a civil suit seeking an injunction against defendant. The trial court issued the injunction, which the court of appeal upheld. The court of appeal concluded that the city had the authority to seek an injunction to shut down defendant's dispensary as a nuisance per se because defendant's dispensary was being operated without a local business license and in violation of the city's zoning laws (177 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1164-1166) . The court also concluded that the city's action was not preempted by the Compassionate Use Act, Health & Safety Code § 11362.5, which legalizes the use of medical marijuana in California (177 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1169-1176) .

[c] Proof of Injury Not Required for Injunctive Relief from Nuisance Per Se

City of Claremont v. Kruse (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , is described in [4][b], above. The court of appeal rejected defendant's claim that the city had failed to establish a public nuisance because the city made no showing the defendant's business operations caused any actual harm. The court noted that for a cause of action alleging a nuisance per se, no proof of harm is required beyond the actual fact of the existence of the activity that constitutes the nuisance (177 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1166) .

23 of 105 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.37

§ 167.37 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Consent Not a Defense--Violation of Ordinance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT TO THE ACTS OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF IS NO DEFENSE TO AN ACTION FOR NUISANCE BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT VIOLATED AN ORDINANCE.

Violation of Ordinance Negates Consent. Consent is not a defense when violation of an ordinance is involved (Friedman v. Pacific Outdoor Adver. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 946, 952, 170 P.2d 67 ; see Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 345, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for a nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct, even though plaintiff consented, because defendant violated an ordinance.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for a nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct, even though plaintiff consented, because defendant violated an ordinance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.54.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Ordinance Negates Consent

Friedman v. Pacific Outdoor Adver. Co. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 946, 170 P.2d 67 , was an action for damages to plaintiff's building, which was destroyed by defendants' unlawful burning of rubbish on a vacant lot adjacent to plaintiff's building. Plaintiff contended that defendants' acts constituted a nuisance. The trial court denied recovery to plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

On appeal, defendants contended that plaintiff had knowledge of defendants' acts on the vacant lot and therefore was precluded from recovery. The court of appeal found that storing of combustible litter was a violation of a municipal code to which plaintiff could not consent. The court stated that the doctrine of "volenti non fit injuria" (one who, knowing and comprehending the danger, voluntarily exposes himself to it, though not negligent in so doing, is deemed to have assumed the risk and is precluded from recovery) is not applicable when injury arises from violation of an ordinance (74 Cal. App. 2d 946, 952) .

The facts and procedural background of Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 , are discussed in § 167.34[3][a]. The trial court had relied on Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen.Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 [see § 167.64[3][a]], as providing a "consent defense" for a property owner that had discharged hazardous waste on its own property before selling it. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal distinguished this case from Mangini because Mangini involved a defendant lessee whose use of the property was both lawful and authorized by its lease with the property's former owner. In this case, the defendant was a property owner whose conduct violated several California statutes in effect at the time (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 344-345) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.38

§ 167.38 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Consent Not a Defense--Consent by Plaintiff's Grantor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

CONSENT BY PLAINTIFF'S GRANTOR OR PREDECESSOR TO THE ACTS OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF IS NOT A DEFENSE TO PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR NUISANCE

Acquiescence of Plaintiff's Grantor or Predecessor Not Defense. Acquiescence of plaintiff's grantor to the nuisance does not constitute a defense to plaintiff's cause of action for nuisance (Learned v. Castle (1889) 78 Cal. 454, 457, 18 P. 872 ; see Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 344-345, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that defendant is liable for nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct because the consent by plaintiff's grantor or predecessor is not a defense.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct because the consent by plaintiff's grantor is not a defense. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.64.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acquiescence of Plaintiff's Grantor or Predecessor Not Defense

Learned v. Castle (1889) 78 Cal. 454, 18 P. 872 (also discussed in § 167.26[4][a]), was an action for damages for a nuisance and for mandatory injunction to prevent its continuance. Plaintiffs contended that by tapping a stream north of plaintiffs' land and placing obstructions in the stream, defendants caused water, which would ordinarily run away from plaintiffs' land, to flow onto the land. Plaintiffs further contended that defendants wrongfully entered plaintiffs' land to remove a protective embankment. The trial court gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed. The case was heard by the court of appeal, and the judgment was affirmed. The Supreme Court accepted the case for hearing, reversed, and ordered a new trial.

The Supreme Court upheld the portion of the court of appeal's holding that found that the complaint was sufficient and that the alleged acquiescence of plaintiffs' grantor did not constitute a defense to plaintiffs' action. The Court, however, found the findings of the trial court to be fatally conflicting and contradictory, that they did not support the judgment, and that they were not supported by the evidence (78 Cal. 454, 457) .

The facts and procedural background of Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 , are discussed in § 167.34[3][a]. The trial court had relied on Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1134, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 [see § 167.64[3][a]], as providing a "consent defense" for a property owner that had discharged hazardous waste on its own property before selling it. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal noted that the Mangini court was discussing the conduct of a lessee, not an owner, and the absurdity that could result by not permitting lessees to claim consent as a defense. For example, if an owner leased property for the purpose of operating a quarry, it would be ludicrous to permit the owner to sue the lessee at the end of the lease term for creating the inevitable hole that was the object of the lease. The court ruled that it made no sense to extend this rule and thereby hold that an owner was not liable to a successor owner of the property because the original owner had consented to his or her own use of the property (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 344-345) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.39

§ 167.39 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Adoption of Most Approved Appliances and Methods of Production Not Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ADOPTION OF THE MOST APPROVED APPLIANCES AND METHODS OF PRODUCTION CANNOT JUSTIFY ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT THAT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE AND IS NO DEFENSE TO THIS ACTION.

Adoption of Most Approved Appliances and Methods of Production Not Defense. The adoption of the most approved appliances and methods of production will not justify the continuance of that which in spite of them remains a nuisance (Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 164, 13 P.2d 733).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for a nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct and that defendant's adoption of the most approved appliances and methods of production does not constitute a defense.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for a nuisance created by defendant's acts or conduct and that defendant's adoption of the most approved appliances and methods of production does not constitute a defense. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Adoption of Most Approved Appliances and Methods of Production Not Defense

The facts and procedural background of Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 13 P.2d 733 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court held that the adoption of the most approved appliances and methods of production will not justify the continuance of that which in spite of them remains a nuisance (216 Cal. 156, 164) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.40

§ 167.40 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FACT THAT OTHER SOURCES OF PERSONAL DISCOMFORT TO PLAINTIFF EXIST IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD IS NOT A DEFENSE TO PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR NUISANCE.

Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense. The fact that other sources of personal discomfort to the plaintiff exist in the neighborhood is not a defense to the existence of a nuisance (Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 164, 13 P.2d 733).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance and the existence of other sources of personal discomfort in the neighborhood is not a defense.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance and the existence of other sources of personal discomfort in the neighborhood is not a defense. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

The facts and procedural background of Vowinckel v. N. Clark & Sons (1932) 216 Cal. 156, 13 P.2d 733 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court stated that the fact that the plaintiff has also for his neighbors an airport on the north and busy railroad right-of-way on the south may not control and held that the fact that other sources of possible discomfort to plaintiff existed in the neighborhood of his property is no defense to an action of this kind (216 Cal. 156, 164) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Other Sources of Personal Discomfort in Neighborhood Not a Defense

Carter v. Chotiner (1930) 210 Cal. 288, 291 P. 577 , was an action to restrain and enjoin defendants from using land adjacent to plaintiffs for cemetery purposes. Plaintiffs contended that such use would constitute a nuisance because it would pollute water in wells plaintiffs used for domestic and stock purposes. The trial court, finding that maintenance of a cemetery did not constitute a nuisance, denied plaintiffs' application for an injunction prohibiting defendants from operating a cemetery. The trial court, however, did enjoin defendants from interring any bodies within a strip 40 feet wide encircling the cemetery grounds. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed.

On appeal, plaintiffs claimed that the cemetery would pollute their water and violate ordinances against establishing a cemetery in the area without a permit. The Court stated that there is no doubt that pollution of water constitutes a nuisance and in a proper case would be enjoined (210 Cal. 288, 291) , but here the Court found a conflict in the evidence, which on appeal was resolved in favor of the defendants. The Court found that the testimony showed no actual danger to plaintiffs, that plaintiffs themselves maintained cesspools and toilet vaults on their own property in close proximity to the wells used for domestic purposes, and that these constituted a greater danger than the cemetery (210 Cal. 288, 291) . The Court stated that the mere fact that others in the neighborhood are likewise maintaining a nuisance would in no way excuse the defendants for their maintenance of a nuisance, but when plaintiffs' own acts create the same type of danger of which they are complaining, those acts may certainly be considered in determining whether or not defendants' acts actually constitute a nuisance under all the circumstances (210 Cal. 288, 291-292) . The Court held that plaintiffs' maintenance of cesspools and toilet vaults was not controlling in this case but merely one of the circumstances to be considered and found that here there was ample evidence to sustain the trial court's finding that no nuisance in fact existed (210 Cal. 288, 292) .

Judson v. Los Angeles Suburban Gas Co. (1910) 157 Cal. 168, 106 P. 581 , was an action for damages and injunctive relief from a nuisance. Defendants managed, conducted, and operated gasworks in such a manner as to precipitate about and above plaintiff's property dense smoke and noxious, offensive gases, as well as to produce loud, disturbing noises and roaring and rumbling sounds that reached and penetrated plaintiff's house, making the house and studio places devoid of quiet, peace, and rest. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff and enjoined defendants from maintaining the nuisance. Defendants appealed from the judgment and from the order denying a motion for a new trial.

On appeal, defendants contended that the evidence was not sufficient to justify a judgment in favor of plaintiff. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that considered as a whole, the evidence on behalf of plaintiff was amply sufficient to sustain the judgment. In regard to the evidence presented, that an electric railroad passed near plaintiff's studio and that there was a wagon road nearby, the Court stated that the fact that other sources of possible discomfort to plaintiff existed in the neighborhood of his property is no defense to an action of this kind (157 Cal. 168, 171) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.41

§ 167.41 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Nuisance Created to Relieve Its Creator From Injury Caused by Third Party Not a Defense

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR NUISANCE AND THE FACT THAT DEFENDANT CREATED THE NUISANCE TO ABATE INJURY CAUSED BY A THIRD PARTY IS NOT A DEFENSE.

Creation of Nuisance to Abate Injury. Defendant cannot justify or defend acts constituting a nuisance on the ground that the nuisance was created to obviate the mistakes of a third party (Allen v. Stowell (1905) 145 Cal. 666, 670, 79 P. 371).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance, and the fact that the nuisance was created to relieve defendant from injury caused by a third party is not a defense.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance, and the fact that the nuisance was created to relieve defendant from injury caused by a third party is not a defense. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creation of Nuisance to Abate Injury

The facts and procedural background of Allen v. Stowell (1905) 145 Cal. 666, 79 P. 371 , are discussed in § 167.36[3][c]. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment and issuance of an injunction for plaintiffs. Defendants contended that they had a right to build the dams to correct a mistake of the railroad company in locating its culverts. The Court held that defendants could not justify or defend their acts on the ground that they were endeavoring to obviate the mistakes of a third party. The Court found that the dams did not merely reinstate natural conditions but created new conditions; therefore, an injunction could issue (145 Cal. 666, 670) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.42

§ 167.42 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defendant Successor With Actual or Constructive Knowledge of Nuisance Who Neglected to Abate Continuing Nuisance on Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR NUISANCE BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS A SUCCESSOR WITH ACTUAL OR CONSTRUCTIVE KNOWLEDGE OF A CONTINUING NUISANCE ON OR IN THE USE OF HIS/HER PROPERTY WHO NEGLECTED TO ABATE THAT NUISANCE.

A. Successor Liability. Every successive owner of property that neglects to abate a continuing nuisance, which was created by a former owner, on or in the use of that property is liable for the nuisance in the same manner as whoever first created it (Civ. Code § 3483).

B. Requirement of Actual or Constructive Knowledge. A successive owner that did not create a nuisance is not liable unless he or she had actual or constructive knowledge of the nuisance (Reinhard v. Lawrence Warehouse Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746-749, 107 P.2d 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the defendant is liable as a successor for a continuing nuisance created by a former owner of the defendant's property, if the defendant had actual or constructive notice of the nuisance but neglected to abate it. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of liability of a successor for an unabated nuisance. For example, these points and authorities may be used to support the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should assert facts establishing the defendant's ownership of the property, the creation of the nuisance by a former owner of the property, the continuing nature of the nuisance, the defendant's actual or constructive knowledge of the nuisance, and the defendant's failure to abate it.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.63 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Actual or Constructive Knowledge

Reinhard v. Lawrence Warehouse Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 107 P.2d 501 , was an action for damages brought by a construction worker against the owner and lessee of the building he was repairing. The owner had purchased the building from the heirs of the man who had contracted for its construction over 25 years earlier. Plaintiff was injured when the skylight he was working on collapsed beneath his weight. Plaintiff claimed that the skylight had been constructed defectively because its cross bars were not safely anchored and extended into the building walls and that this defective skylight was a private nuisance. At trial, plaintiff and other witnesses with extensive experience with skylights of this type testified that it would have been impossible to tell whether the skylight had been properly constructed without taking it apart and tearing out the metal flashing and the brick in which it was embedded. The trial court granted the defendants' motions for a directed verdict, and plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the language of Civ. Code § 3483, which imposes liability on a successive owner who neglects to abate a continuing nuisance, expressed the sound principle that a person who has not created a nuisance is not liable unless he or she knows of its existence. The court held that the word "neglect" is not synonymous with "omit" because "neglect" involves intent, which presupposes knowledge. Although the creator of a nuisance is presumed to have knowledge of his or her own acts, a successor cannot be presumed to have knowledge of the acts of his or her predecessor. Plaintiff's own testimony proved that the defendants could not possibly have known whether the skylight was defectively constructed, which was exactly the contrary of that which plaintiff was required to prove (41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746-748) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.43

§ 167.43 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defense of Statutory Authorization [Civ. Code § 3482] Inapplicable--Activity or Conduct Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE AND WAS NOT DONE UNDER AUTHORITY OF A STATUTE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SECTION 3482 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE THE SPECIFIC CONDUCT WAS NOT AUTHORIZED BY THE EXPRESS TERMS OF ANY STATUTE.

Nuisance Not Expressly Authorized by Statute. A statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts otherwise constituting a nuisance unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made, or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred, so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act that occasions the injury (Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 101, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 ; Hassell v. San Francisco (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 168, 171, 78 P.2d 1021).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance and is not expressly authorized by statute.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for a nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance and is not expressly authorized by statute. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.54 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

In Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 , plaintiffs, as owners and occupants of homes near an airport, sued the city for damages under inverse condemnation and nuisance theories, for personal injuries caused by noise, smoke, and vibrations emanating from aircraft using the airport. At trial, the actions were bifurcated. On the nuisance issue, the trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs, holding that plaintiffs had established the existence of an actionable nuisance giving rise to damages for annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort, mental distress, and emotional distress, and that a nuisance recovery was independent of plaintiffs' claim for diminution of their property values. Defendant city appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for plaintiffs.

On appeal, defendant contended that an airport cannot be held liable for nuisance because the noise-generating activity complained of is specifically sanctioned by federal and state statutes. The Court held that the state and federal legislation, after particularized inquiry into each to ascertain whether there existed a legislative intent to sanction a nuisance, preserved both the authority and responsibility of an airport proprietor to acquire adequate noise easements and to institute reasonable noise abatement procedures that do not conflict with federal law and held that the statutes conferred no immunity from traditional nuisance liability (26 Cal. 3d 86, 102) . The Court further held that the city's liability was not precluded by Civ. Code § 3482, which provides that nothing done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance because statutes broadly authorizing or regulating airports and aircraft flights do not create a legislative sanction for their maintenance as a nuisance (26 Cal. 3d 86, 101) .

The facts and procedural background of Hassell v. San Francisco (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 168, 78 P.2d 1021 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][b]. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff, enjoining construction of a convenience station. On appeal, defendant contended that the trial court's finding that construction of the building in the proposed manner would be a nuisance was not supported by the evidence and relied on Civ. Code § 3482, which provides that nothing that is done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance. Affirming the judgment granting the injunction because the authority for the construction of the new building was not express, the Supreme Court stated that a statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts that by the general rules of law constitute a nuisance, unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act that occasions the injury (11 Cal. 2d 168, 171) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nuisance Not Expressly Authorized by Statute

The facts and procedural background of Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 285, 142 Cal. Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43 , are discussed in § 167.30[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court held that construction of sewage treatment plants by cities is admittedly authorized by statute but noted that the exculpatory effect of Civ. Code § 3482 had been circumscribed by decisions of the Court. The Court stated it would adhere to previous interpretations of Civ. Code § 3482, that a requirement of express authorization embodied in the statute itself insures that an unequivocal legislative intent to sanction a nuisance will be effectuated, while avoiding the uncertainty that would result if every generally worded statute were a source of undetermined immunity from nuisance liability (20 Cal. 3d 285, 291) . Applying this standard, the Court found that none of the Government Code statutes, under which the city claimed to have acted mentions the possibility of noxious emanations from such facilities, that the odors were not authorized by the plainest and most necessary implication from the general powers conferred by these statutes, and that the Legislature did not contemplate the creation of a malodorous nuisance when it authorized sewage plan construction. Therefore, the Court held that the general authorization of municipal construction of sewage plants did not expressly sanction the production of any particular level of odors (20 Cal. 3d 285, 292) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.44

§ 167.44 Supporting Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Continuing Nuisance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION FOR NUISANCE IS NOT BARRED BY THE RUNNING OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BASED ON THE ORIGINAL WRONG BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTS CONSTITUTING THE NUISANCE ARE CONTINUING, AND THE DAMAGES SOUGHT WERE SUSTAINED WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD PRECEDING THE COMMENCEMENT OF THIS ACTION.

A. Statute of Limitations Does Not Apply to Continuing Nuisance. If continuing or recurring injury results from a wrongful act or from a condition wrongfully created and maintained, there is not only a cause of action for the original wrong arising when the wrong is committed but also separate and successive causes of action. Because consequential damages arise when the damages are sustained, so long as the cause of the injury continues to exist and the damages continue to occur, plaintiff is not barred from recovery for those damages, based on the original wrong, that have accrued after the statutory period has expired. Although a cause of action based solely on the original wrong may be barred by the running of the statute of limitations, a continuing nuisance and every continuance thereof amounts to a new nuisance for which successive actions will lie (Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 751, 218 P. 753).

B. Continuing Nuisance Defined. Nuisances consisting of acts done or particular uses of property may be properly termed "continuing" if they may continue indefinitely or may be discontinued at any time (Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 751, 218 P. 753 ; Wilshire Westwood Assocs. v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 744, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562).

C. Plaintiff's Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent. In case of doubt as to the permanency of the injury caused by a nuisance, plaintiff may elect to treat the nuisance as either permanent or continuing (Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Auth. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 862, 870, 218 Cal. Rptr. 293, 705 P.2d 866).

[Optional] D. Toxic Contamination as Continuing Nuisance. If the alleged nuisance is the existence of toxic contamination, the strong public policy in favor of cleaning it up as promptly and thoroughly as possible should incline a court to allow the plaintiff to proceed on the theory of continuing nuisance, if there is a reasonable question whether the nuisance is continuing or permanent and the defendant asserts that an action is barred by the statute of limitations (Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 682, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 796).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that an action for nuisance is not barred by the running of the statute of limitations based on the original wrong because the nuisance is a continuing one for which successive actions may be brought, and the damages that are being sought were sustained within the statutory period preceding the commencement of the action. Optional Paragraph D should be used if the nuisance is caused by toxic contamination.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an action for nuisance is not barred by the statute of limitations because the nuisance is a continuing one. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.62 may be used to oppose the contention, supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Apply to Continuing Nuisance

Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 218 P. 753 , was an action for damages and injunctive relief. Defendant and plaintiffs were adjoining landowners and had both built four-story buildings on their properties. Originally the buildings were two inches apart, but due to movement of the foundation wall, defendant's building tipped over plaintiffs' lot, pressing against their building causing damage. Plaintiffs contended that this encroachment constituted a nuisance. The trial court rendered judgment for defendant. Plaintiffs appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed.

On appeal, defendant contended that injunctive relief was barred by the statute of limitations. The Court noted that the maintenance of an encroachment that is not willful but unintentional and abatable, producing temporary injury only, or that may not result in further injury, is a continuing nuisance, and every continuance thereof amounts to a new nuisance for which successive actions will lie. The Court stated that nuisances consisting of acts done or particular uses of property may be properly termed "continuing" when they are of such a character that they may continue indefinitely or may be discontinued at any time. The Court also stated that when continuing or recurring injury results from a wrongful act or from a condition wrongfully created and maintained, there is not only a cause of action for the original wrong arising when the wrong is committed, but separate and successive causes of actions for consequential damages arise as and when such damages are sustained; therefore, so long as the cause of the injury exists and the damages continue to occur, plaintiff is not barred from recovery for such damages as have accrued within the statutory period prior to the action. Although a cause of action based solely on the original wrong may be barred, a continuing nuisance and every continuance thereof amounts to a new nuisance for which successive actions will lie (191 Cal. 746, 751) . The Court then held that when the nuisance consists of a structure of a permanent nature and is intended by the defendant to be so, is of a use or invasion of the plaintiff's property, or is a deprivation of some benefit appurtenant to it for an indefinitely long period in the future, the injured party has an option to complain of it as a permanent injury and recover damages for the whole time, estimating its duration according to the defendant's purpose in creating or continuing it, or to treat it as a temporary wrong to be compensated for while it continues. The Court found that plaintiffs elected to treat the nuisance as a temporary wrong to be abated, providing that an injunction could be issued, and that even if plaintiffs had not elected to treat it thus, the statute of limitations could not be a complete bar because the encroachment had progressively increased up to the time of commencing the action (191 Cal. 746, 752) .

[b] Continuing Nuisance Defined

Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 218 P. 753 , is discussed in § 167.44[3][a].

In Wilshire Westwood Assocs. v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562 , defendants operated a gasoline service station on leased property that was eventually sold to plaintiffs, who discovered that the soil was contaminated with gasoline. Plaintiffs filed a nuisance action against defendants to recover the costs of cleaning up the property. The trial court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed.

Before the court of appeal, defendants argued that plaintiff's claims were barred by the three-year statute of limitations applicable to injuries to real property because the claimed nuisance was permanent and therefore the statute began to run when the claimed nuisance was created. The court of appeal disagreed and reversed the summary judgment, holding that the nuisance in this case was continuing, not permanent, because it could be discontinued or abated at any time. The court noted that a letter from a state agency allowing plaintiffs to proceed with construction because the cleanup of the gasoline was adequate and complete demonstrated that the nuisance was abatable (20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 744-745) .

[c] Plaintiff's Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent

In Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Auth. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 862, 218 Cal. Rptr. 293, 705 P.2d 866 , homeowners living adjacent to an airport brought an action for nuisance against the airport authority based on the noise, smoke, and vibrations from flights over their homes. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer and dismissed the action as barred by the statutes of limitations applicable to permanent nuisances. Plaintiffs appealed to the California Supreme Court, which reversed.

The Court rejected the trial court's conclusion that the nuisance was permanent because commercial flights conducted in strict compliance with federal regulations cannot be enjoined (39 Cal. 3d 862, 868) . Noting that a use that may be discontinued at any time is considered a continuing nuisance, the Court pointed out that vibration, noise, and odors are classic examples of a continuing nuisance (39 Cal. 3d 862, 869) . Moreover, in case of doubt as to whether an injury is permanent, a plaintiff may elect to treat the particular nuisance causing the injury as either permanent or continuing. Otherwise, a plaintiff who was uncertain as to the extent of injury would be forced to bring an action before the statutory period ran and run the risk of being prevented by res judicata from recovering for all injury suffered (39 Cal. 3d 862, 870) . The Court concluded that because plaintiffs had elected to treat defendant's airport operations as a continuing nuisance, the statute of limitations did not bar their action against defendant (39 Cal. 3d 862, 873) .

[d] Toxic Contamination as Continuing Nuisance

In Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 796 , a landowner sued his vendor and the vendor's tenant for damages based on nuisance in the form of toxic contamination of the soil and ground water. The contamination was caused by leakage from underground petroleum storage tanks that had been last used (by the tenant) about three years before the plaintiff purchased the land. The plaintiff did not know about the tanks until more than a year after purchasing the land. The widespread extent of the contamination became known, after extensive sampling and testing, about a year after the plaintiff learned about the tanks. A little more than three years thereafter, the plaintiff filed the complaint. The trial court granted a defense motion for summary adjudication on the ground that the action was barred by the three-year limitation on actions for injury to real property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]. On the plaintiff's petition for an extraordinary writ, the court of appeal directed the trial court to vacate its order and deny the defense motion. The issue was whether the nuisance was permanent (and therefore the action was barred) or continuing (and the action was not barred). The complaint did not reveal whether the plaintiff was proceeding on the theory of permanent nuisance or on the theory of continuing nuisance.

The court of appeal observed that there is a judicial preference for viewing a nuisance as continuing and that when the question is close, the plaintiff should be allowed to elect one or the other characterization of the nuisance (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 678-679) . In the present case the plaintiff expressly made that election, in favor of a continuing nuisance, at the hearing on the defense motion for summary adjudication. The court of appeal concluded that the question was close; therefore, the trial court should have allowed the plaintiff to proceed. This conclusion was influenced primarily by the strong policy consideration that toxic contamination should be cleaned up as promptly and thoroughly as possible. Allowing the plaintiff to proceed would encourage private clean-up of toxic contamination with appropriate financial support from responsible persons. The alternative would be enforcement proceedings by government agencies at public expense (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 682) --at least in this case, since the plaintiff was not actually harmed by the toxic contamination but only had a legal duty to clean it up (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 683) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Apply to Continuing Nuisance

In Lee v. Los Angeles County Metro. Transp. Auth. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 848, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 444 , the plaintiff brought an action for inverse condemnation, continuing nuisance, and other related causes of action against a county transportation authority, claiming that the county's underground transit construction project had damaged the structural integrity of her building. Because the action was not brought within three years after the date that the plaintiff learned from a city inspector that settlement on the sidewalk in front of her building was not caused by anything on her property, the trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer based on the statute of limitations. The court of appeals reversed, holding that the statute of limitations on a claim for inverse condemnation or nuisance involving continuous and repeated property damage incident to a public improvement does not begin to run until the situation has stabilized. Because the plaintiff alleged a continuous and repeated course of conduct that was causing damage to her property, and because the situation had not stabilized at the time that the plaintiff filed her complaint, the causes of action had not yet accrued, and it was error for the trial court to sustain the demurrer (107 Cal. App. 4th 848, 857-858) .

[b] Continuing Nuisance Defined

KFC W., Inc. v. Meghrig (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 , is discussed in § 167.44[3][c].

[c] Plaintiff's Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent

In KFC W., Inc. v. Meghrig (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 , plaintiffs brought a nuisance action against defendants, the former owners of plaintiffs' real property, seeking reimbursement for costs of cleaning up contamination of the property, which plaintiffs claimed was caused by defendants' negligent operation of a gasoline station on the property. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal. The court reversed and remanded, holding that plaintiff should be granted leave to amend to allege a continuing nuisance and thereby withstand demurrer based on the statute of limitations. The court held that a nuisance that may be discontinued at any time is considered continuing; moreover, in case of doubt as to the permanency of the injury caused by the nuisance, plaintiff may elect to treat the nuisance as permanent or continuing (23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1180-1181) . In this case, the continuing nature of the nuisance refers not to defendants' conduct, but to the continuing damage caused by the offensive condition (23 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1181) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.45

§ 167.45 Supporting Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Obstruction of Public Right

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION FOR NUISANCE IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A PUBLIC NUISANCE THAT AMOUNTS TO AN ACTUAL OBSTRUCTION OF A PUBLIC RIGHT, WHICH A LAPSE OF TIME CANNOT LEGALIZE.

Obstruction of Public Right. Lapse of time cannot legalize a public nuisance amounting to actual obstruction of public right (Civ. Code § 3490; see Williams v. Blue Bird Laundry Co. (1927) 85 Cal. App. 388, 395, 259 P. 484).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that an action for nuisance is not barred by the statute of limitations because the nuisance is a public nuisance amounting to actual obstruction of public right, which a lapse of time cannot legalize.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an action for nuisance is not barred by the statute of limitations because the nuisance is a public nuisance amounting to actual obstruction of public right. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should also include facts showing that the nuisance is public and amounts to an actual obstruction of a public right.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.62 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities that an action for nuisance is not barred by the statute of limitations because the nuisance is public and amounts to an obstruction of a public right.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obstruction of Public Right

Williams v. Blue Bird Laundry Co. (1927) 85 Cal. App. 388, 259 P. 484 , was an action for injunctive relief restraining the operation of defendant's laundry and construction of a new building for the same purposes. Plaintiffs contended that the laundry constituted a nuisance in that it emitted offensive odors and caused loud and disturbing noises that were offensive to the senses and deleterious to the health of the plaintiffs. Defendant contended that it had operated its laundry for a period of more than ten years and that plaintiffs had waived any legal objection that they may have had. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

In its opinion, the court of appeal noted that it has repeatedly been held that in suits in which defendant's activity or conduct amounts to a public nuisance, no lapse of time would justify the special injury to plaintiff (85 Cal. App. 388, 395) . The court held that the operation of the laundry was a continuing nuisance giving rise to successive rights of action; therefore, an injunction could issue (85 Cal. App. 388, 398) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.46

§ 167.46 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Injurious Effect on Property or Lessening of Personal Enjoyment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD ENJOIN THE NUISANCE BECAUSE THE CONDUCT OR ACTIVITY THAT CONSTITUTES THE NUISANCE _____ [INJURIOUSLY AFFECTS PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY or LESSENS PLAINTIFF'S PERSONAL ENJOYMENT OF HIS/HER PROPERTY].

A. Injunction Available. Injunctive relief is available to any person whose property is injuriously affected or whose personal enjoyment of that property is lessened by a nuisance (Code Civ. Proc. § 731; see also Los Angeles Brick & Clay Prods. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 478, 486, 141 P.2d 46).

B. Preliminary Injunction to Abate Nuisance. A preliminary injunction may be issued to abate a private nuisance in order to protect plaintiff's rights (Hartsif v. Wann (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 119, 120, 293 P.2d 65 ; Wilms v. Hand (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 811, 815-816, 226 P.2d 728).

[Optional] C. Contributory Negligence Not a Bar. Contributory negligence is not a defense to an action seeking injunctive relief to abate a nuisance (Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 749, 218 P. 753).

[Optional] D. Criminal Statute Is Not Exclusive Remedy for Abating Public Nuisance. The California Street Terrorism Enforcement and Prevention (STEP) Act, Penal Code Section 186.20 et seq., is not the exclusive remedy for abating criminal street gang activity constituting a public nuisance and does not preempt the use of the general public nuisance statutes (People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1119, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that a nuisance may be enjoined because it injuriously affects the plaintiff's property or lessens the plaintiff's personal enjoyment of his or her property. Optional Paragraph C should be used if the plaintiff is or may be guilty of contributory negligence, to support the contention that contributory negligence cannot be used as a defense to an action for injunctive relief.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of availability of injunctive relief to abate a nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion regarding nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to injunctive relief generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities regarding injunction generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

If appropriate, the points and authorities in see §§ 167.65 and 167.66 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Available

In Los Angeles Brick & Clay Prods. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 478, 141 P.2d 46 , was an action for a permanent injunction. Plaintiff contended that defendant city's action in paving two streets caused discharge of storm waters onto plaintiff's land. While plaintiff's land was in an unimproved condition, no damage occurred. However, once plaintiff improved the property the runoff caused increasing damage. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal stated that anything that obstructs the free use of property so as to interfere with its comfortable enjoyment is a nuisance, and injunction is the traditional method of abating a nuisance (60 Cal. App. 2d 478, 486) . Finding that defendant's action constituted a nuisance, the court of appeal upheld the trial court's decision, issuing a permanent injunction to abate the nuisance (60 Cal. App. 2d 478, 485, 491) .

[b] Preliminary Injunction to Abate Nuisance

In Hartsif v. Wann (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 119, 293 P.2d 65 , plaintiff sought an injunction to restrain defendant from interfering with plaintiff's access to his mining property over a road that plaintiff and the general public had used for more than 35 years. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained defendant from obstructing or interfering with the use by the general public, including plaintiff, of the road in question. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction, stating that a preliminary injunction may lie to protect the enjoyment of an easement, against the obstruction of it, or for the abatement of the nuisance constituted by that obstruction. The court observed that if plaintiff had the easement rights for the period claimed, the purpose of the injunction was to preserve those rights without defendant's obstruction pending the hearing on the merits (139 Cal. App. 2d 119, 120) .

In Wilms v. Hand (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 811, 226 P.2d 728 , plaintiffs were owners and occupants of a motel. Defendants conducted a dog and cat hospital on property adjacent to the motel. Plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction restraining defendants from permitting the dogs they harbored and maintained from annoying and disturbing the peace and comfort of plaintiffs and any guests they might have at their motel. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court noted that plaintiffs were suffering substantial damage to their business and were having their peace and comfort disturbed; thus, there was no abuse of discretion in granting the preliminary injunction (101 Cal. App. 2d 811, 815-816) .

[c] Contributory Negligence Not a Bar

The facts and procedural background of Kafka v. Bozio (1923) 191 Cal. 746, 218 P. 753 , are discussed in § 167.44[3][a]. On appeal, plaintiffs waived all claims for damages and the Court dealt only with the issue of injunctive relief. Defendant contended that the sinking of the foundation wall and the resulting encroachment of defendant's building on plaintiffs' premises were caused, or at least contributed to, by the act of plaintiffs in building on that portion of the wall within their property, and that plaintiffs were thus barred from seeking damages and injunctive relief. The Court held that plaintiffs' use of the wall was not a legal wrong or a violation of any duty owed to defendant and could form no predicate for an estoppel (191 Cal. 746, 749) . The Court held that the fact that plaintiffs were guilty of contributory negligence, if it be a fact, could not confer on defendant a right to the continued maintenance of his own building in such condition that it obstructs and interferes with the free use and enjoyment by plaintiffs of their own property (191 Cal. 746, 749) . This being the rule, the Court found that it did not have to decide the issue of whether plaintiffs were guilty of contributory negligence (191 Cal. 746, 750) .

[d] Criminal Statute Is Not Exclusive Remedy for Abating Public Nuisance

The facts and procedural background of People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , are discussed in § 167.35[3][b]. The Supreme Court held that two challenged provisions in a preliminary injunction entered by the superior court against individual members of a criminal street gang fell within the superior court's equitable power to abate a public nuisance and did not run afoul of rights secured to defendants by the federal Constitution (14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1102) . In reaching this conclusion the Court considered and rejected defendants' argument that the California Street Terrorism Enforcement and Prevention (STEP) Act [Penal Code §§ 186.20 et seq.] is the exclusive means of obtaining nuisance-based injunctive relief against a criminal street gang. Defendants contended that the STEP Act, which declares a building or place used by members of a street gang for specified illegal activities to be a nuisance per se, preempted use of the general public nuisance statutes. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that the Act expressly provided that it was not the exclusive remedy for abating gang activity constituting a public nuisance and thus contemplated additional remedies including those made available by the general public nuisance statutes (14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1119) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction to Abate Nuisance

In Island Reclamation Dist. No. 776 v. Floribel Alfalfa Syndicate (1914) 167 Cal. 467, 140 P. 4 , plaintiff was a reclamation district that sought to enjoin the erection of a dam by defendants. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction, and defendants appealed. The California Supreme Court affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. Defendants had contended by general demurrer that the complaint failed to state a cause of action because the alleged threatened damage was merely a matter of opinion, and thus the complaint did not show why an action at law would not be sufficient. The Court disagreed, observing that, for the purposes of the preliminary injunction, it was sufficient for the court to know that defendants contemplated the construction and maintenance of a dam at the point indicated in the complaint. The court noted that one may not dam the natural flow of a stream to the detriment of one's neighbor by causing the water to empty onto the latter's land; therefore, prohibitory injunctive relief will issue if the damage is threatened, and mandatory injunctive relief will issue to remove the cause once some injury has been done (167 Cal. 467, 470-471) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.47

§ 167.47 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test Favors Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD ENJOIN THE NUISANCE BECAUSE THE HARDSHIP PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER IF THE INJUNCTION IS REFUSED AND THE NUISANCE CONTINUES OUTWEIGHS THE HARDSHIP DEFENDANT WILL SUFFER IF THE INJUNCTION IS GRANTED.

A. Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test. In determining whether to enjoin a nuisance, a court must weigh the hardship caused the plaintiff by refusing the injunction against the hardship caused the defendant by granting it (Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 560, 562, 250 P.2d 660).

B. Doubtful Cases Resolved in Plaintiff's Favor. In applying the relative hardships or balance of conveniences test, the court must resolve doubtful cases in the plaintiff's favor because the defendant is a wrongdoer (Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 560, 562, 250 P.2d 660).

C. Irreparable Injury. A court cannot refuse to enjoin a nuisance if refusing the injunction would cause the plaintiff irreparable injury and granting the injunction would not cause the defendant irreparable injury (Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 200, 323 P.2d 1001 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 560, 562, 250 P.2d 660).

D. Responsibility for Nuisance. A court cannot refuse to enjoin a nuisance if the defendant's negligence or willful acts caused the nuisance and if the plaintiff is not responsible by delay or otherwise for the situation (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660).

E. Disproportionate Hardships. A court cannot refuse to enjoin a nuisance if the hardship caused the defendant by granting the injunction is not greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused the plaintiff by refusing the injunction and allowing the nuisance to continue (Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660).

[Optional] F. Private Right of Eminent Domain. The plaintiff is entitled to injunctive relief against an encroachment because refusing to enjoin an encroachment in effect gives the defendant, a private person, the right of eminent domain over plaintiff's property by permitting the defendant to continue occupying that property (Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 200, 323 P.2d 1001 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 559-560, 250 P.2d 660).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that, under the relative hardships or balance of conveniences test, a nuisance should be enjoined because refusing an injunction would cause greater hardship to plaintiff than that caused defendant by granting the injunction. If the nuisance is an encroachment, counsel may use optional Paragraph F.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of whether the relative hardship tests favors the party seeking to enjoin a nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should assert facts tending to establish that the plaintiff would suffer hardship in the absence of an injunction, and that this hardship is greater than any hardship the defendant would suffer from the granting of the injunction.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion regarding nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 167.66 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test

In Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , plaintiff brought an action against defendants, the owners of adjoining real property, seeking both damages and an injunction to compel removal of structures built by defendants that encroached on plaintiff's property. The trial court found that encroachments did exist and permitted defendants either to remove the encroachments and pay an amount in damages or to pay a larger sum in damages and receive title to the area involved. Defendants chose the latter, and plaintiff appealed the denial of the injunction to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the case, holding that the trial court has discretion to grant or refuse to enjoin a nuisance and must exercise that discretion by weighing the hardship plaintiff will suffer if the injunction is denied against the hardship defendant will suffer if the injunction is granted. This test, referred to by the courts and commentators as the relative hardships or balance of conveniences test, looks at various factors. First, doubtful cases must be decided in plaintiff's favor because defendant is a wrongdoer. Second, the court must enjoin the nuisance if defendant's acts were either willful or negligent, and if plaintiff is not in any way responsible for the situation. Third, the court must enjoin the nuisance if plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury from the nuisance. Fourth, the court must enjoin the nuisance unless defendant proves that the hardship caused by the granting of the injunction will be greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused plaintiff by the continuing nuisance. The court found that the trial court's judgment was not supported by the findings because the trial court had made no findings concerning either the relative responsibility of each party for the nuisance or the hardship the defendants would suffer if compelled to remove the encroaching structures (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 564-565) .

[b] Doubtful Cases Resolved in Plaintiff's Favor

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[c] Irreparable Injury

In Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 323 P.2d 1001 , defendant erected a sign with the name of its business on property belonging to plaintiffs, who sought an injunction compelling defendant to remove it. The trial court refused to grant the injunction because the sign was a substantial benefit to defendant in carrying on its business and did not interfere with plaintiffs' use of their property. Plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Court reversed, ruling that a court cannot, in applying the balance of conveniences test, refuse an injunction unless defendant can show that defendant would suffer irreparable injury if the injunction were granted. Irreparable injury requires proof of more than mere deprivation of a substantial benefit (50 Cal. 2d 198, 200) .

The facts and procedural background of Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 are discussed in § 167.47[3][a]. The court of appeal noted that there was no evidence of irreparable injury to plaintiff's property from refusing the injunction because it was unimproved except for a garage that was not affected by defendants' encroaching structures. In addition, plaintiff provided no evidence concerning future plans for the property that plaintiff claimed would be adversely affected by the encroachments (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 557) .

[d] Responsibility for Nuisance

Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , was an action seeking injunctive relief to compel defendant to remove a fence that plaintiff claimed interfered with plaintiff's driveway easement. Defendant cross-complained, claiming that plaintiff's front porch pillar, eaves, gas meters and pipes extended over the property line and therefore encroached on defendant's property. The trial court held for defendant and issued an injunction compelling plaintiff to remove all encroachments. Plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Court reversed the order to remove the encroachments and remanded the case for further proceedings, holding that there was no evidence that plaintiff's predecessor had constructed the encroachments negligently or willfully. Furthermore, the court found that defendant had waited eight years before seeking legal relief against the encroachments (58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521) .

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[e] Disproportionate Hardships

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[f] Private Right of Eminent Domain

The facts and procedural background of Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 323 P.2d 1001 , are discussed in § 167.47[3][c]. In reversing the trial court's refusal to grant an injunction compelling defendant to remove a sign it had erected on plaintiff's property, the Supreme Court noted that by balancing the conveniences in defendant's favor the trial court was in effect giving a private person the right of eminent domain over another person's property.

The facts and procedural background of Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , are discussed in § 167.47[3][a]. In enunciating the rule that a court may refuse to enjoin a nuisance if an innocently made encroachment does not irreparably injure plaintiff and if the cost of its removal would greatly outweigh its inconvenience to plaintiff, the court acknowledged that the practical effect of this rule is, in some circumstances, to give a private person the right of eminent domain by permitting that private person to occupy property owned by another. The court also noted that a frequent justification of the rule is that granting an injunction as of right would encourage plaintiffs to engage in what amounts to legal extortion (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Irreparable Injury

In Pahl v. Ribero (1961), 193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 14 Cal. Rptr. 174 , the court of appeal upheld the granting of an injunction compelling defendants to remove an overhang that was encroaching on plaintiff's property. The court ruled that refusal of the injunction would cause plaintiff irreparable injury because plaintiff's building, which had moved laterally and become misaligned due to an unknown cause, could not be straightened out unless the encroachment was removed (193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 164) .

[b] Responsibility for Nuisance

The facts and procedural background of Pahl v. Ribero (1961), 193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 14 Cal. Rptr. 174 , are discussed in § 167.47[4][a]. Although the court of appeal overruled the trial court's refusal of an injunction, because plaintiff's building could not be straightened out unless the encroachment by defendants was removed, the court noted that defendants were innocent of responsibility for the lateral movement that had misaligned the building, which was due to an unknown cause (193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 164) .

[c] Disproportionate Hardships

In Pahl v. Ribero (1961), 193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 14 Cal. Rptr. 174 , the court of appeal upheld the granting of an injunction compelling the defendant to remove an overhang that was encroaching on plaintiff's property. The court found that the hardships of plaintiff and defendant were equal, because the cost of removal was $5,950 and the decline in market value of plaintiff's property was $5,600. Therefore, it was proper to rule in plaintiff's favor because the hardship caused defendant by the injunction was not greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused plaintiff by the nuisance (193 Cal. App. 2d 154, 164) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.48

§ 167.48 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3484; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR THE NUISANCE CAUSED BY DEFENDANT.

A. Right to Damages. An action may be brought by any person whose property is injuriously affected or whose personal enjoyment is lessened by a nuisance, as defined in Section 3479 of the Civil Code, and by the judgment in such action the nuisance may be enjoined or abated as well as damages recovered therefor (Code Civ. Proc. § 731).

B. Damages Recoverable. Damages recoverable by plaintiff in a successful nuisance action for injuries to real property include diminution of land value as well as damages for annoyance, inconvenience, and discomfort (Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 874, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 ; see also Smart v. City of Los Angeles (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239-240, 169 Cal. Rptr. 174).

[Optional] C. Abatement Does Not Bar Action. Abatement of a nuisance does not prejudice the right of any person to recover damages for its past existence (Civ. Code § 3484).

[Optional] D. Damages Without Injunction. The injured party need not seek an abatement of the nuisance but may sue for damages (McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254, 172 P.2d 758).

[Optional] E. Punitive Damages With Proof of Oppression or Malice. Clear and convincing proof that an act on the part of the offender was intended to cause injury to the plaintiff, or was despicable conduct on the part of the offender carried on with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, or was despicable conduct by the offender that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights, proves malice and/or oppression and justifies an award of punitive damages for nuisance (see Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c)(1), (2); see also Farmy v. College Hous., Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 181-182, 121 Cal. Rptr. 658 (decided before 1987 amendment to Civ. Code § 3294)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for damages for nuisance.

Optional Paragraph C may be used if plaintiff seeks to recover past damages for a nuisance that has been abated or enjoined. Optional Paragraph D may be used if plaintiff seeks damages without seeking an injunction. Optional Paragraph E may be used if plaintiff is seeking to recover punitive as well as consequential damages.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is liable for damages for nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If punitive damages are sought, counsel should show that the defendant exercised his or her lawful rights either with callous disregard of the rights of another or with the knowing intention to subject a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of his or her rights in order to show oppression and malice.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to damages in tort actions generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities pertaining to tort damages generally, including exemplary damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 167.67 -167.69 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable

The facts and procedural background of Lew v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42 , are discussed in § 167.32[3][a]. In denying the defendants' petition for a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to set aside its judgment awarding damages to plaintiffs, the court of appeal held that the mental suffering that was the main component of the injuries alleged by plaintiffs was compensable under a nuisance theory. Whether or not plaintiffs sustain physical injury, they may recover damages in a nuisance action not only for diminution in the market value of their property, but also for discomfort and annoyance and for mental suffering caused by fear for the safety of themselves and their families. Mental distress caused by a nuisance is an element of loss of enjoyment (20 Cal. App. 4th 866, 873-874) .

In Smart v. City of Los Angeles (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 232, 169 Cal. Rptr. 174 , plaintiff, owner of a vacant parcel of land near defendant's airport, brought an action for inverse condemnation and nuisance. The trial court held that plaintiff's nuisance cause of action was barred by reason of federal preemption of air space regulation and entered judgment in favor of defendant. The court of appeal reversed and remanded the matter to the trial court for further proceedings consistent with the opinion.

The court of appeal, finding that the California Supreme Court had ruled that a nuisance action for airport noise was not barred by federal preemption, held that damages recoverable by plaintiff in a successful nuisance action for injuries to real property include diminution of land value as well as damages for annoyance, inconvenience, and discomfort (112 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239-240) .

[b] Damages Without Injunction

In McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 247, 172 P.2d 758 , defendants excavated their property in such a way as to cause sloughing off of a portion of plaintiffs' land and created a hazardous condition for anyone using plaintiffs' garage, which was located near the edge of the pit created by defendants. Plaintiffs sued defendants, adjoining landowners, for damages based on nuisance created by violation of a city ordinance requiring permit for nonconforming uses. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal held that violation of the provisions of the ordinance constituted an actionable wrong against each member of the community for whose particular welfare the ordinance was enacted and created a public nuisance remediable at the suit of persons specially injured thereby, as plaintiffs had shown themselves to be (76 Cal. App. 2d 247, 253-254) . The court of appeal stated that in view of the circumstances herein, defendants' contention that the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict and judgment was without foundation because their argument failed to take into consideration the fact that the injured party need not seek an abatement of the nuisance but may sue for damages (76 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254) .

[c] Punitive Damages With Proof of Oppression or Malice

Farmy v. College Hous., Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 121 Cal. Rptr. 658 , was an action for damages and injunction bifurcated at trial. Defendants built a 15-unit apartment building next to plaintiff's 8-unit building, separated only by an alley. Plaintiff contended that defendant's exhaust fans blew polluted air from their garage onto plaintiff's property, polluting the air as well as creating noise, and that the traffic entering defendants' garage blocked the alley entrance. The trial court granted an injunction and awarded compensatory and punitive damages. Defendants appealed only from the portion of the judgment awarding damages. The court of appeal, finding that plaintiff's introduction of evidence regarding defendants' wealth was prejudicial, tainting the award for compensatory damages, reversed the judgment.

On appeal, defendants contended that there was insufficient evidence to sustain the amount of the judgment of compensatory damages and that there was a lack of any evidence to sustain punitive damages. The court of appeal held that, since defendants did not appeal the judgment granting injunctive relief, they conceded that a nuisance for which they were responsible called for relief and admitted liability for damage (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 173) . However, the court found that nothing in the evidence supported an instruction for or an award of punitive damages (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 183) . The court held that the criterion for an award of punitive damages was that defendants exercised their lawful rights with callous disregard of the rights of another or with the knowing intention to subject a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of his or her rights (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176) . The court stated that in every case involving a continuous nuisance mere proof thereof, to the satisfaction of a court or jury by an act that on the part of the offender has the complexion of knowing harassment to the injured, may be considered for the purpose of injunctive or compensatory relief, but unless the act is motivated by a callous disregard of whether the act will affect another or result in cruel and unjust hardship there is no oppression or malice (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 181-182) . The court found that the fact that defendants at all times complied with applicable building ordinances and regulations, did not violate any zoning ordinances, that the building was not an improper improvement for the area, and that defendants had initiated procedures in good faith to meet plaintiff's complaints, showed that there was no oppression or malice (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 175, 177, 182-183) . Therefore, the court directed the trial court to modify the judgment and to enter judgment on subject of punitive damages for defendants and ordered a retrial on the issue of compensatory damages (48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 183) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.49

§ 167.49 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Private Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3481, 3501; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Interference With Purely Personal Right or Lack of Present Property Interest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT BRING AN ACTION FOR PRIVATE NUISANCE BECAUSE _____ [THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF INTERFERES WITH A PURELY PERSONAL RIGHT or PLAINTIFF IS A _____ (LICENSEE or LODGER or EMPLOYEE) AND THUS DOES NOT HAVE A SUFFICIENT PROPERTY RIGHT].

[EITHER]

Purely Personal Right. The fact that plaintiff may have suffered a personal injury or an interference with some purely personal right is not sufficient to support an action based on private nuisance; there must be an interference with the use and enjoyment of a property interest (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[OR]

Insufficient Property Right. The property right of a licensee, lodger, or employee is not sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance (Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that plaintiff may bring an action for nuisance because the acts or conduct complained of only interfered with a purely personal right of plaintiff, or plaintiff is a licensee, lodger, or employee and does not have a sufficient property right to support the action.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of plaintiff's right to bring a private action for nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In support of defendant's contention that plaintiff may not bring an action for private nuisance, counsel may discuss facts showing either that only a personal right of the plaintiff is being interfered with and that there was no interference with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of a property interest, or that plaintiff was a licensee, lodger, or employee so that his or her property interest was not sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Purely Personal Right

The facts and procedural background of Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , are discussed in § 167.20[3][a]. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for defendant. One of the plaintiffs claimed injury by reason of obstruction to his view. In reviewing this plaintiff's standing, the court stated that the essence of a private nuisance is an interference with the use and enjoyment of a property right and any interest sufficient to be dignified as a property right is sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance, but the fact that plaintiff may have suffered a personal injury or have suffered an interference with some purely personal right is not sufficient to support an action based on private nuisance. The court found plaintiff's interest to be a purely personal interest and therefore held that he did not have standing to bring a nuisance action (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125) .

[b] Insufficient Property Interest

The facts and procedural background of Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , are discussed in § 167.20[3][a]. In affirming the trial court's decision that the facts stated did not support a cause of action, the court of appeal found that the three plaintiffs claiming injury for respiratory disorders had not alleged any interference with a known property right. Therefore, the court held that their action had to rest on the determination whether or not they were entitled to bring an action based on public nuisance. The court, in dictum, stated that the essence of a private nuisance is an interference with the use and enjoyment of a property right and that any interest sufficient to be dignified as a property right is sufficient to support an action based on a private nuisance, including a tenancy for a term but not that of a licensee, lodger, or employee (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 124-125) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.50

§ 167.50 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--No Special Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT BRING A PRIVATE ACTION FOR PUBLIC NUISANCE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF SUFFERED INJURY THAT IS MERELY DIFFERENT IN DEGREE, NOT DIFFERENT IN KIND, FROM THAT SUFFERED BY THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

Injury Merely Different in Degree and Not in Kind From Injury Suffered by General Public. A private party cannot maintain an action based on a public nuisance unless the injury suffered is different in kind and not merely in degree from that suffered by other members of the general public (Koll-Irvine Ctr. Prop. Owners Ass'n v. County of Orange (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1040, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that plaintiff may bring an action for nuisance. The basis of opposition is that the nuisance alleged is a public nuisance and plaintiff has not suffered injury that is different in kind, not just degree, from that suffered by the general public.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff cannot bring an action for public nuisance because plaintiff has not suffered injury different in kind, not merely degree, from that suffered by the general public. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should discuss facts showing the nature of the nuisance, the injury suffered by plaintiff, and the injury suffered by the general public.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Merely Different in Degree and Not in Kind From Injury Suffered by General Public

In Koll-Irvine Ctr. Prop. Owners Ass'n v. County of Orange (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 , plaintiffs were owners of commercial property in an industrial park adjacent to defendant's "Fuel Farm," which consisted of three large above-ground fuel storage tanks. Plaintiffs claimed that the Fuel Farm was a nuisance because it presented a severe risk of damage from fire and the release of toxic chemicals and that this risk caused plaintiffs extreme mental anguish and fear that their property insurance would be canceled or become unaffordable. Plaintiffs also alleged that the risk of an explosion if a plane from the nearby airport collided with the tanks had diminished the value of their property. After the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend, plaintiffs appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court, ruling that plaintiffs' complaint failed to allege that they had suffered injury from the Fuel Farm that was different in kind from that suffered by the public, which is required for a private party to bring an action for public nuisance. The court noted that plaintiffs' complaint itself alleged that all members of the public within one-half to three miles of the Fuel Farm would be hurt in the event of an explosion. Although plaintiffs' proximity arguably exposed them to a higher degree of injury, it did not expose them to injury of a different kind altogether (24 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1040-1041) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.51

§ 167.51 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--No Public Nuisance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT BRING A PRIVATE ACTION FOR PUBLIC NUISANCE BECAUSE THE ALLEGED INJURY ONLY AFFECTS THE PLAINTIFF AND NOT THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

Nuisance Which Does Not Injure General Public Is Not Public Nuisance. A finding of public nuisance must be supported by specific evidence of injury to the general public as identified in Civ. Code § 3479 (Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1209-1210, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention in a public nuisance action that the alleged nuisance complained of by plaintiff is a private nuisance rather than a public nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the alleged nuisance does not constitute a public nuisance, for example in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence of the nature of the alleged nuisance, and should argue that it has no effect on the general public.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nuisance Which Does Not Injure General Public Is Not Public Nuisance

In Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518 , a real estate developer brought a nuisance action against a prior owner for subsurface contamination. The contamination consisted of an oil reservoir which had been constructed sixty years and buried forty years prior to the lawsuit. The trial court found that the alleged contamination constituted a public nuisance. The matter proceeded to trial and a judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the contamination did not constitute a public nuisance. For something to be a public nuisance, there must be an injurious affect upon an entire neighborhood or community as identified in Civ. Code § 3479. However, the primary public effect in this case related to the City's loss of development fees if plaintiff were unable to use its property for residential development (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1209) . The only other potential nuisance suggested by plaintiff was the possibility of health concerns through the possibility of exposure to the substance. However, the evidence was uncontradicted that the substance posed no risk to health through personal proximity if it is left where it is. Similarly, there was no evidence that the substance had invaded other property or the water supplies of other persons (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1210-1211) . The court thus concluded that the plaintiff failed to meet its burden of proof that the substance had an affect on the general public.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.52

§ 167.52 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Private Action for Public Nuisance [Civ. Code §§ 3479, 3480, 3491, 3493; Code Civ. Proc. § 731]--Award Would Interfere with Policies of a Public Commission

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT BRING A PRIVATE ACTION FOR PUBLIC NUISANCE BECAUSE AN AWARD OF DAMAGES ON THE BASIS ALLEGED BY PLAINTIFF WOULD INTERFERE WITH THE POLICIES OF A PUBLIC REGULATORY COMMISSION.

Superior Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Issue Judgment Which Would Interfere with Policies of a Public Commission. Superior courts lack jurisdiction to render a judgment based on a finding of nuisance if that judgment would interfere with a broad regulatory policy of a public commission (San Diego Gas & Elec. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 893, 903, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724, 920 P.2d 669).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention in a public nuisance action that an award for plaintiff would interfere with a regulatory policy of a public commission.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an award would interfere with a policy of a public commission, for example in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence of a regulatory policy of a public commission, and should argue that an award in the nuisance action alleged by plaintiff would interfere with this policy.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Superior Court Lacks Jurisdiction to Issue Judgment Which Would Interfere with Policies of a Public Commission

In San Diego Gas & Elec. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 893 , 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724 , 920 P.2d 669 , plaintiffs filed an action for damages and injunctive relief against a power company, alleging that an increase in the number of power lines housed by the power company in an easement adjacent to plaintiff's property dramatically increased the dangerous levels of electromagnetic radiation flowing onto plaintiff's property. The power company demurred to the complaint on the ground that the superior court lacked subject matter jurisdiction because a judgment for plaintiffs would hinder or frustrate a general regulatory policy of the Public Utilities Commission. The trial court overruled the demurrer, but on a petition for writ of mandate the court of appeal directed the trial court to enter a new order sustaining the demurrer.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended that the electromagnetic fields generated by the power lines impaired their use and enjoyment of their property because of their fear that the fields would cause them physical harm. The Supreme Court initially noted that Pub. Util. Code § 1759 has been construed to prohibit an award of damages which would hinder or frustrate the declared supervisory and regulatory policies of the Public Utilities Commission. The court then noted that in order to award damages to plaintiffs on their nuisance theory, the trier of fact would be required to find that reasonable persons would experience a substantial fear that the fields cause physical harm, and would deem the invasion so serious that it outweighs the social utility of the power company's conduct. However, such findings would be inconsistent with a conclusion by the Public Utilities Commission that the available evidence does not support a reasonable belief that these electromagnetic fields present a substantial risk of physical harm (13 Cal. 4th 893, 939) . The judgment of the court of appeal was thus affirmed.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.53

§ 167.53 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Activity or Conduct Not Within Statutory Definition of Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF IS NOT A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS NOT WITHIN THE DEFINITION OF NUISANCE IN CIVIL CODE SECTION 3479.

A. Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance. The basis of a nuisance action must be found in the statute (People v. Lim (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 872, 880-881, 118 P.2d 472).

B. Definition of Nuisance Under Civil Code Section 3479. Anything that is injurious to health, including but not limited to the illegal sale of controlled substances, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, or unlawfully obstructs the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, or highway, is a nuisance (Civ. Code § 3479).

[Optional] C. Every Annoyance or Disturbance Is Not Nuisance. The question is not whether the plaintiff has been annoyed or disturbed, but whether there has been an injury to his or her legal rights. People who live in organized communities must of necessity suffer some inconvenience and annoyance from their neighbors and must submit to annoyances consequent to the reasonable use of property by others (Schild v. Rubin (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 764, 283 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[Optional] D. Defective Product Is Not Nuisance. A plaintiff cannot recover damages from the manufacturer of defective asbestos-containing building materials or other defective products under a nuisance cause of action, because nuisance cases universally concern the use or condition of property, not products, and allowing a nuisance action in this situation would convert nearly every product liability action into a nuisance claim (City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 586, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for nuisance if the activity or conduct complained of is not within the statutory definition of nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479. Optional Paragraph C may be used if the activity cited as a nuisance by plaintiff is not an injury to plaintiff's legal rights because it is a result of the reasonable use of defendant's property. Optional Paragraph D may be used if plaintiff is seeking recovery for damages caused by defective asbestos-containing building materials or other products, under a nuisance cause of action.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the existence of a nuisance. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should cite facts from supporting declarations, or the record, showing that the conduct of the opposing party fails to satisfy the requirements of Civ. Code § 3479.

If appropriate, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

People v. Lim (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 872, 118 P.2d 472 , was an action to restrain the continued operation of a gambling house. The complaint alleged that the operation of the gambling house constituted a public nuisance for the reason that it tends to, and does in fact, debauch and corrupt the public morals, encourage idle and dissolute habits, draws together great numbers of disorderly persons, disturbs the public peace, brings together idle persons and cultivates dissolute habits among them, and creates traffic and fire hazards, and is thereby injurious to health, indecent and offensive to the senses, and impairs the free enjoyment of life and property. The trial court sustained defendants' general and special demurrers to the complaint and denied plaintiff's motion for a temporary restraining order. Plaintiff refused to amend the complaint, and judgment was entered for defendants. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the complaint stated a proper cause of action and that it was error for the trial court to sustain the general demurrer. The Supreme Court reversed.

On appeal, the People maintained that the statutory definition of nuisance under Civ. Code § 3479 was not exclusive and that the court was empowered by the common law to restrain gambling activities. In rejecting this contention, the Supreme Court noted that the term "nuisance" did not have a fixed content either at common law or at the present time and held that it was the proper function of the Legislature to define those breaches of public policy that are to be considered public nuisances within the control of equity and that the basis of a nuisance action must be found in the statutes rather than by reference to the common law definitions of public nuisance (18 Cal. 2d 872, 880-881) . In this case, the Court, finding that crowds of disorderly people who disturb the peace and obstruct the traffic may well impair the free enjoyment of life and property and give rise to the hazards designated in the Civ. Code § 3479, held that sufficient facts were alleged so that the court could conclude that a nuisance existed within the general statutory provisions (18 Cal. 2d 872, 881-882) .

[b] Every Annoyance or Disturbance Is Not Nuisance

In Schild v. Rubin (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 283 Cal. Rptr. 533 , the cross complainants sought damages and an injunction against their next-door neighbors under the willful harassment statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6). The object of the injunction was to enjoin the neighbors from playing basketball in the neighbors' yard. The cross complaint was filed after the neighbors sued the cross complainants for battery, among other theories, as a consequence of the cross complainants' having sprayed the neighbors with a garden hose. After the trial court reviewed the evidence at a hearing on the cross complainants' application for a permanent injunction, it ordered the cross defendants not to engage in basketball playing on their property of any kind, "except between 10:00 a.m. and 12:00 p.m.; between 2:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.; and between 7:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. daily." The cross defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment and dissolved the injunction against the cross defendants. The court concluded that the cross defendants correctly contended that substantial evidence did not support the injunction and that evidence was lacking to support all of the requisite elements of the willful harassment statute. The court found, however, that there was sufficient evidence to establish that the noise from the basketball playing penetrated the air, offended "the senses" of the cross complainants, invaded their "peace and quiet," and generally interfered with their "comfortable enjoyment of life and property." Specifically, the sounds of the basketball playing interfered with the cross complainants' ability to rest, sleep, relax, read, watch television, eat in their home and to converse in their backyard. The court concluded, however, that there was no evidence in the record that the sounds of basketball playing caused the complainants substantial emotional distress within the meaning of the harassment statute (232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 763) .

Although the injunction was premised on the harassment statute and not on the theory of nuisance, the cross complainants characterized the basketball playing as amounting to a nuisance and argued that a nuisance is equivalent to harassment, so the court considered whether the cross defendants' conduct constituted a nuisance. While acknowledging that excessive and inappropriate noise may under certain circumstances constitute an interference with the present enjoyment of land amounting to a nuisance, the court stated that not every activity that is offensive to the senses and interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of life is a nuisance (232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 763-764) . The court quoted from a South Carolina decision that stated that every annoyance or disturbance of a landowner from the use made of property by a neighbor does not constitute a nuisance. The question, the decision declared, is not whether the plaintiffs have been annoyed or disturbed, but whether there has been an injury to their legal rights. People who live in organized communities, the opinion observed, must of necessity suffer some inconvenience and annoyance from their neighbors and must submit to annoyances consequent on the reasonable use of property by others (232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 764) . The court held that its view of the record compelled the conclusion there was no basis for the cross complainants' characterization of the neighbors' basketball playing as a nuisance (232 Cal. App. 3d 755, 764-765) .

[c] Defective Product Is Not Nuisance

In City of San Diego v. United States Gypsum Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876 , plaintiff was a city that claimed that its public buildings had been contaminated by the asbestos-containing building materials manufac tured and distributed by defendants. Plaintiff's suit against defendants contained several causes of action, including nuisance. The trial court granted defendants judgment on the pleadings for failure to state a nuisance cause of action, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting plaintiff's argument that the broad statutory definition of nuisance provided by Civ. Code § 3479 encompasses the release of asbestos from building materials and that the manufacturer of a defective product can be liable in nuisance because "the stream of commerce can carry pollutants every bit as effectively as a stream of water" (30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 584-585) . The court noted that no California decision allows recovery for a defective product under a nuisance cause of action, and that other jurisdictions have not permitted plaintiffs to recover damages for defective asbestos-containing building materials under a nuisance action. The court agreed with these other jurisdictions that nuisance cases universally concern the use or condition of property, not products, and concluded that nuisance, under plaintiff's theory, would "become a monster" devouring tort law in one gulp, would convert almost every product liability action into a nuisance claim, and would rob nuisance of any meaning at all (30 Cal. App. 4th 575, 586) .

NOTE:

Although agreeing that an action for past damages brought under a theory of public nuisance would be inappropriate for what is essentially a products liability action, one court of appeal has held that public entities could pursue a public nuisance action on behalf of the people seeking abatement of a nuisance, which in that particular case meant that the plaintiffs could pursue an abatement action against lead manufacturers for their role in creating the hazard of lead-based paint applied to the interiors of government buildings [County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 313, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 , review granted, depublished, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 629, 188 P.3d 579, 2008 Cal. LEXIS 9073 ; see § 167.35[3][c]].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Facts Pleaded or Proved Must Satisfy Statutory Definition of Nuisance

In Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518 , a real estate developer brought a nuisance action against a prior owner for subsurface contamination. The contamination consisted of an oil reservoir which had been constructed sixty years and buried forty years prior to the lawsuit. The trial court found that the alleged contamination constituted nuisance per se. The matter proceeded to trial and a judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, finding no support for the holding that the oil contamination was nuisance per se. To be considered a nuisance per se the substance must be expressly declared to be a nuisance by its very existence by some applicable law. The court noted that there were multiple agencies with jurisdiction over the situation on the property, but none had taken action against the plaintiff or the property (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1207) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.54

§ 167.54 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Actitivity or Conduct Authorized by Statute [Civ. Code § 3482]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE.

A. Activity or Conduct Expressly Authorized by Statute. Nothing that is done or maintained under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance (Civ. Code § 3482; see Friends of H St. v. City of Sacramento (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 159, 160, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607).

B. Contemplation by Legislature of Act Causing Injury. An activity is expressly authorized by statute if the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act that resulted in the injury complained of by plaintiff (Pekarek v. City of San Diego (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 909, 918, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 22).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant's conduct constitutes a nuisance if the conduct complained of is authorized by statute [see Civ. Code § 3482].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant's conduct did not constitute a nuisance because the conduct complained of was authorized by statute. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should cite the statutory provision that is alleged to authorize the conduct or activity complained of and show that the particular activity and the manner of carrying it out are expressly authorized by that statute as required by Civ. Code § 3482.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity or Conduct Expressly Authorized by Statute

In Friends of H St. v. City of Sacramento (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607 , plaintiff was an unincorporated association comprising residents owning real property abutting on a city street. Plaintiff filed a complaint for nuisance seeking an injunction to force the city to reduce the traffic speed and volume on the street. Plaintiff claimed that the traffic substantially impaired the residents' ability to use their own driveways and caused excessive noise, emissions, and accidents that interfered with the residents' enjoyment of their property and lowered the property's value. The trial court sustained defendant city's demurrer without leave to amend. The plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff had failed to state a cause of action because defendant's acts were authorized by statute, and Civ. Code § 3482 bars an action for nuisance against a public entity for allegedly wrongful acts that are expressly authorized by statute (20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 160) . The statutes authorizing defendant's acts, such as designating the street as a through street and not restricting or rerouting traffic, include various provisions [see, e.g., Veh. Code § 21100] giving local governments the authority to regulate traffic and maintain and control streets within their jurisdictions (20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 161) . The court also noted that the California courts have consistently held that Civ. Code § 3482 applies to alleged nuisances arising from the construction, operation, and maintenance of streets and highways (20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 162) .

[b] Contemplation by Legislature of Act Causing Injury

Pekarek v. City of San Diego (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 909, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 22 , was an action brought against defendant city by plaintiff, a five-year-old child, who was struck by a van while she was running across the street. The van driver's view was obstructed by the ice cream truck from which plaintiff had just purchased ice cream. Plaintiff's suit alleged that defendant was liable for creating a nuisance by permitting ice cream trucks to operate on city streets. After plaintiff settled her claims against the van driver and the operator of the ice cream truck, defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground that a city ordinance immunized the city from liability for nuisance. The trial court granted defendant's motion, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting that Civ. Code § 3482 provides that nothing done or maintained under express authority of a statute is a nuisance. The court agreed with plaintiff's argument that no immunity from liability exists under this provision unless the legislative body enacting the authorizing statute has contemplated the very act resulting in the injury claimed by plaintiff. However, the court pointed out that the language of the city ordinance authorizing the operation of ice cream trucks on city streets showed that the city council had carefully considered risks to pedestrians such as plaintiff, but nonetheless had authorized the very conduct, sales of food from vehicles on public streets, that led to plaintiff's injury (30 Cal. App. 4th 909, 917-918) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Activity or Conduct Expressly Authorized by Statute

In Jordan v. City of Santa Barbara (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340 , landowners filed an action against various public agencies alleging that defendants' activities increased the salinity of plaintiffs' groundwater, thereby causing crop losses and reduced land value. The trial court granted judgment to defendants, concluding, among other things, that the operation of a waste treatment facility was authorized by a state permit, thus precluding liability for nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3482, which provides that nothing done under the express authority of a statute can be deemed a nuisance. Plaintiffs contended that the permit did not specify that wastewater could be used in the way that it was. The court of appeal disagreed with plaintiffs, and affirmed the judgment. The court recognized that courts have circumscribed the exculpatory effect of to Civ. Code § 3482 by making the statutory immunity available only where the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute or permit. However, the permit in question specified that the discharge could not contain specified substances in concentrations which would promote aquatic growths, and plaintiffs did not allege that the facility was operating in violation of this or any other standards imposed in the permit (46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 1258-1259) .

In Lombardy v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 599, 72 Cal. Rptr. 240 , plaintiffs sought damages from defendant construction company on the theory that construction and operation of a freeway adjacent to their property was a nuisance due to fumes, noise, dust, shocks and vibration, and imminent hazards from foreseeable accidents and collisions. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's sustaining of demurrers to plaintiffs' complaint and giving judgment for defendants. The court of appeal held that construction of state highways was not a nuisance under Civ. Code § 3482 because the state constitution and various statutes expressly authorized both their construction and maintenance (266 Cal. App. 2d 599, 605) .

In Larson v. Santa Clara Valley Water Conservation Dist. (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 515, 32 Cal. Rptr. 875 , plaintiff sought damages for personal injuries sustained while water skiing at defendant's reservoir. Defendant had released water as part of its conservation activities. Plaintiff fell and struck his head on the bottom of the reservoir where the water was shallow and murky. Finding that the evidence did not show a nuisance, the trial court granted defendant's motion for a nonsuit regarding the first count of the complaint, which alleged that the shallowness and murky condition of the water constituted a nuisance. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. In its holding, the court stated that plaintiff's nuisance contention was answered by Civ. Code § 3482 in that the activity of releasing water from the reservoir was carried out as one of the express powers of the defendant district (218 Cal. App. 2d 515, 526) .

Liebman v. Richmond (1930) 103 Cal. App 354, 284 P. 731 , was an action to abate a county courthouse as a nuisance. The trial court sustained defendant supervisors' demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court found that defendants' contention that the power to build and maintain a courthouse was vested in the defendant board by the express provisions of the statutes and that the building may not be abated as a nuisance was sound (103 Cal. App 354, 356-357) .

41 of 105 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.55

§ 167.55 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Obstruction of Light and Air

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT ONLY OBSTRUCTS LIGHT AND AIR.

Mere Obstruction of Light and Air Is Not Nuisance. No structure may be considered a nuisance merely because it obstructs the passage of light and air to the building of the adjoining owner or merely because it obstructs the adjoining owner's view of neighboring property (Ingwersen v. Barry (1897) 118 Cal. 342, 343, 50 P. 536 ; Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 127, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance because an obstruction of light or air does not constitute a nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3479.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that obstruction of light or air does not constitute a nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3479. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that defendant's activity or conduct obstructs only light or air, that there is no perceptible injury to plaintiff's property, and that if smoke emissions are involved, the emissions do not pollute the air so as to impair plaintiff's enjoyment of his or her property.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance pursuant to Civ. Code § 3479, supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 and 167.24.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Obstruction of Light and Air Is Not Nuisance

Ingwersen v. Barry (1897) 118 Cal. 342, 50 P. 536 , was an action to abate as a nuisance a fence that was erected and stood wholly on defendant's land. Plaintiff contended that the fence was a nuisance because it interfered with the comfortable enjoyment of his property by obstructing the access of light and air to the building on his abutting premise. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Court held that the English doctrine of "ancient lights" is not generally recognized in this country and that the fence was not a nuisance merely because it obstructed the passage of light and air to the building of the adjoining owner (118 Cal. 342, 343) .

The facts and procedural background of Venuto v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 99 Cal. Rptr. 350 , are discussed in § 167.20[3][a]. The court of appeal held that the plaintiff, who claimed injury by reason of obstruction to his view, had not alleged a sufficient property right to support an action based on a private nuisance because this interference was not encompassed within the definition of nuisance. The Court noted that in California, activities that disturb or prevent the comfortable enjoyment of property have been held to constitute nuisances even though they did not directly damage the land or prevent its use (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 126) . It stated that although it would appear that an interference with the view from land may amount to a nuisance, the courts have held that a building or structure cannot be complained of as a nuisance merely because it obstructs the view from neighboring property. Similarly, the court noted that it has been held that a building or structure may not be complained of as a nuisance merely because it interferes with the passage of light and air to adjoining premises and stated that this rule applied equally to an obstruction or interference caused by the emission of smoke or other waste matter, provided that such emission does not otherwise constitute a nuisance (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 127) . The court found that the plaintiff had alleged nothing more than an interference with his view by the emissions from defendant's plant, and that he did not allege any perceptible injury to his property. The court also found that plaintiff had not alleged that these emissions polluted the air so as to impair the enjoyment of his property. Therefore, the court held that plaintiff had not brought himself within the purview of those cases that granted relief from activities that have disturbed or prevented the comfortable enjoyment of property because they produced smoke, dust, or odors (22 Cal. App. 3d 116, 127-128) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Obstruction of Light and Air Is Not Nuisance

In Oliver v. AT&T Wireless Servs. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 521, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491 , the plaintiffs were landowners who brought an action against neighboring landowners and other parties responsible for erecting a 130-foot cellular transmission tower on adjacent property. The plaintiffs alleged causes of action for nuisance and inverse condemnation. However, the only allegation in support of the plaintiffs' cause of action for nuisance was that the appearance of the tower, which they claimed "loom[ed] over" their property (even though it was only visible from within their home through one small window), interfered with the enjoyment of their own property. In upholding a summary judgment for the defendants on the plaintiffs' nuisance cause of action, the court of appeal held that the displeasing height and shape of the tower was insufficient, by itself, to support a nuisance action. In reaching this conclusion, the court noted that as a general rule, a landowner has no natural right to air, light, or an unobstructed view (76 Cal. App. 4th 521, 534-535) . The court then concluded that it follows from this general rule that a tower that did not obstruct the plaintiffs' view and is otherwise permitted by law could not be a nuisance merely because the size, shape, and appearance of the tower was displeasing to the plaintiffs (76 Cal. App. 4th 521, 535-536) .

Sher v. Leiderman (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 867, 226 Cal. Rptr. 698 , was an action for nuisance brought by plaintiffs when the trees of defendants, their neighbors, grew to a point where they prevented the sunlight from reaching plaintiffs' house, which created a gloomy atmosphere and raised the cost of heating the house. The court of appeal affirmed judgment for defendants, citing precedents holding that blocking light to a neighbor's property is not an actionable nuisance unless malice is the overriding motive (181 Cal. App. 3d 867, 875-880) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.56

§ 167.56 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Preexisting Agricultural Activity [Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS A PREEXISTING AGRICULTURAL USE UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 3482.5 OF THE CIVIL CODE.

A. Preexisting Agricultural Uses Are Not Nuisance. No agricultural activity, operation, or facility, or appurtenances thereof, conducted or maintained for commercial purposes, and in a manner consistent with proper and accepted customs and standards, as established and followed by similar agricultural operations in the same locality, shall be or become a nuisance, private or public, due to any changed condition in or about the locality, after the same has been in operation for more than three years if it was not a nuisance at the time it began (Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(1)).

B. Civil Code Section 3482.5 Preempts Local Regulations. The provisions of Section 3482.5 of the Civil Code prevail over any contrary provision of any ordinance or regulation of any city, county, city and county, or other political subdivision of the state (Civ. Code § 3482.5(d)).

C. Agricultural Activity Defined. For purposes of Section 3482.5 of the Civil Code, the term "agricultural activity, operation, or facility, or appurtenances thereof" shall include, but not be limited to, the cultivation and tillage of the soil; dairying; the production, cultivation, growing, and harvesting of any agricultural commodity including timber, viticulture, apiculture, or horticulture; the raising of livestock, fur bearing animals, fish, or poultry; and any practices performed by a farmer or on a farm as incident to or in conjunction with such farming operations, including preparation for market, delivery to storage or to market, or to carriers for transportation to market (Civ. Code § 3482.5(e)).

D. Defense Applies to Actions Between Commercial Agricultural Entities. Civil Code § 3482.5 applies broadly to bar a nuisance action brought by one commercial agricultural entity against another commercial agricultural entity (Souza v. Lauppe (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 865, 874, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494).

E. Defense Applies to Actions Alleging Physical Invasion of Neighboring Property. Civ. Code § 3482.5 applies even if the nuisance consists of a physical invasion of neighboring property, such as might be caused by irrigation runoff, and even if the cause of action is labeled as one for trespass (Rancho Viejo v. Tres Amigos Viejos (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 560-563, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479).

F. Change of Ownership of Land on Which Activity Occurs Is Irrelevant. If the offending agricultural activity has been ongoing for more than three years, the fact that ownership of the land on which the activity occurs has changed within the three-year period is irrelevant to the application of Civ. Code § 3482.5 (Rancho Viejo v. Tres Amigos Viejos (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 567, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance when the conduct or activity involves a preexisting agricultural use that has been in operation for more than three years and therefore cannot be or become a nuisance [see Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(1)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of does not constitute a nuisance because it involves a preexisting agricultural use that has been in operation for more than three years. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that defendant's activity or conduct is agricultural activity as defined in Civ. Code § 3482.5(e), that the activity is conducted or maintained for commercial purposes in a manner consistent with proper and accepted customs and standards, and that the activity has been carried on for more than three years.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.36.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense Applies to Actions Between Commercial Agricultural Entities

Souza v. Lauppe (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 865, 868, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 ; was a nuisance action between farmers of neighboring parcels, brought after plaintiffs switched from rice to row crops. Plaintiffs alleged that defendant's rice farming caused water to seep under and onto plaintiff's property, resulting in damage to the property and lost profits from plaintiff's farming operations. Defendants successfully moved for summary judgment on the ground plaintiff's action was precluded by Civ. Code § 3482.5. On appeal plaintiffs claimed that Civ. Code § 3482.5 did not apply because the statue was never intended to bar an action by one farmer against another; rather, its purpose was to preclude suburban dwellers from seeking to enjoin neighboring agricultural practices. Defendants responded that the plain language of Civ. Code § 3482.5 precluded any lawsuit which attempts to enjoin a lawful, commercial agricultural activity that meets the requisites of the statute. The court of appeal agreed with defendants' construction of the statue, holding that the statute's unambiguous language did not limit its preclusive effect to nuisance actions commenced by nonagricultural plaintiffs. Rather, the statute applied broadly to bar nuisance actions brought by one commercial agricultural entity against another commercial agricultural entity (59 Cal. App. 4th 865, 874) .

[b] Defense Applies to Actions Alleging Physical Invasion of Neighboring Property

In Rancho Viejo v. Tres Amigos Viejos (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479 , the plaintiff was a residential developer who purchased land adjacent to land that had for decades been used for growing avocados. After the plaintiff removed the orange groves on the newly-purchased property and had the property graded for building lots, which included cutting into the hills that ran along the boundary between the two properties, the plaintiff found water seepage and streams on several of the lots. This was caused by irrigation for the adjacent avocado farm, which required an unusually large amount of water because the well being used had a high salt content and less salty metropolitan water was unavailable for that particular farm. The avocado farm's owner refused to take measures to eliminate the runoff, and the plaintiff was forced to add a subdrain system to solve the problem. The plaintiff then brought suit against the avocado farm's owner, alleging causes of action for nuisance, trespass, and failure to contain irrigation water. The defendant moved for summary judgment on the grounds of the immunity provided by Civ. Code § 3482.5, and in response the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the nuisance cause of action. Nonetheless, the trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the statute, by expressly limiting its protection to nuisance lawsuits, necessarily excludes other activities that cause physical damage to other property. The court pointed out that a nuisance action itself may include tangible intrusions on neighboring property. Therefore, many activities involving physical intrusions that cause actual damage to neighboring property may constitute both a nuisance and a trespass. To further the purpose of Civ. Code § 3482.5, which is the protection of existing agricultural activities from complaints caused by encroaching residential development, the court concluded that if commercial agricultural activity otherwise falls within the statute, a plaintiff cannot avoid the immunity defense simply by recharacterizing or relabeling the action as one for trespass (100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 560-563) .

[c] Change of Ownership of Land on Which Activity Occurs Is Irrelevant

The facts and procedural background of Rancho Viejo v. Tres Amigos Viejos (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 479 , are discussed in § 167.56[3][b]. The court noted that the plaintiff was the one who caused the changed condition in the locality by purchasing the adjacent lot, eliminating orange groves that had been present for at least 30 years, and excavating the cut slopes, thereby bringing the situation within the immunity of Civ. Code § 3482.5. The court also noted that the fact that ownership over the adjacent avocado farm had changed hands less than a year before the water seepage was discovered did not prevent application of the statutory immunity. The relevant inquiry for establishing the immunity is the duration of the offending agricultural activity, not the duration of the farmland's ownership, and the new owners had used the same farming techniques that had been used by the prior owner (100 Cal. App. 4th 550, 567) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.57

§ 167.57 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Activity of District Agricultural Association [Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS AN ACTIVITY OF A DISTRICT AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION CONDUCTED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 3482.5(a)(2) OF THE CIVIL CODE.

A. Activity of District Agricultural Association. No activity of a district agricultural association that is operated in compliance with Section 3001 et seq. of the Food and Agricultural Code shall be or become a private or public nuisance due to any changed condition in or about the locality, after it has been in operation for more than three years if it was not a nuisance at the time it began (Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(2)).

B. Civil Code Section 3482.5 Preempts Local Regulations. [See § 167.56, Paragraph B.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity complained of constitutes a nuisance, if the activity is conducted by a district agricultural association operated in compliance with Food & Agric. Code § 3001 et seq., after it has been in operation for more than three years if it was not a nuisance at the time it began.

This exclusion does not apply to any public nuisance action brought by a city, county, or city and county, alleging that the activities, operations, or conditions of a district agricultural association have substantially changed after more than three years from the time the activities, operations, or conditions began [Civ. Code § 3482.5(a)(2) (provision also inapplicable to activities of 52nd Dist. Agricultural Assoc. conducted on state exposition and fair grounds)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should refer to facts showing: (1) the date the association commenced operation; (2) that the activity was not a nuisance when it was commenced; (3) that the association has complied with Food & Agric. Code § 3000 et seq.; and (4) that operations commenced more than three years before the changed condition occurred.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the activity complained of constitutes a nuisance because it unreasonably interferes with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.36.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.58

§ 167.58 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Preexisting Agricultural Processing Activity [Civ. Code § 3482.6]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF IS NOT A NUISANCE BECAUSE IT IS A PREEXISTING AGRICULTURAL PROCESSING USE UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 3482.6 OF THE CIVIL CODE THAT HAS NOT SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASED AFTER JANUARY 1, 1993.

A. Preexisting Agricultural Processing Uses Not Nuisance. No agricultural processing activity, operation, or facility, or appurtenances thereof, shall be or become a private or public nuisance due to any changed condition in or about the locality after it has been in continuous operation for more than three years, if it is conducted or maintained for commercial purposes and according to proper and accepted customs and standards, and if it was not a nuisance at the time it began (Civ. Code § 3482.6(a)).

B. Substantial Increases After January 1, 1993. A nuisance action may be brought against an agricultural processing activity, operation, facility, or appurtenances thereof that has substantially increased its operations or activities after January 1, 1993, with respect to those increases in activities or operations that have a significant effect on the environment. However, for increases that have been in effect for more than three years, it is rebuttably presumed, for purposes of producing evidence, that the increase was not substantial (Civ. Code § 3482.6(b)).

C. Civil Code Section 3482.6 Preempts Local Regulations. The provisions of Civ. Code § 3482.6 prevail over any contrary provision of any ordinance or regulation of any political subdivision of the state, except regulations adopted under Health & Safety Code § 41700 as applied to agricultural processing activities surrounded by housing or commercial development on January 1, 1993 (Civ. Code § 3482.6(d)).

D. Civil Code Section 3482.6 Does Not Supersede Other Provisions Specifically Defining Activity as Nuisance.

The provisions of Civ. Code § 3482.6 do not supersede any provision of law, other than provisions of Part Three of the Civil Code (Civ. Code § 3479 et seq.), if the agricultural processing activity, operation, facility, or appurtenances thereof, is a public or private nuisance as specifically defined or described in that provision (Civ. Code § 3482.6(c)).

E. Agricultural Processing Activity Defined. For purposes of Civ. Code § 3482.6, the term "agricultural activity, operation, facility, or appurtenances thereof" includes, but is not limited to, canning or freezing of agricultural products, processing of dairy products, production of bottling of beer and wine, processing of meat and egg products, drying of fruits and grains, packing and cooling of fruits and vegetables, and storage or warehousing of any agricultural products. The term includes processing of agricultural products for wholesale or retail markets (Civ. Code § 3482.6(e)(1)).

F. Continuous Operation Defined. For purposes of Civil Code Section 3482.6, the term "continuous operation" means at least 30 days of agricultural processing operations per year (Civ. Code § 3482.6(e)(2)).

G. Proper and Accepted Customs and Standards Defined. For purposes of Civil Code Section 3482.6, the term "proper and accepted customs and standards" means compliance with all applicable state and federal statutes and regulations governing operation of the agricultural processing activity, operation, or facility, or appurtenances thereof, with respect to the condition or effect alleged to be a nuisance (Civ. Code § 3482.6(e)(3)).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

These points and authorities cannot be used in any litigation pending, or against any cause of action accruing, before January 1, 1993 [Civ. Code § 3482.6(f)].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity or facility complained of constitutes a nuisance, if the conduct or activity involves a preexisting agricultural processing use that has been in operation for more than three years and has not substantially increased its operations or activities after January 1, 1993, and therefore cannot be or become a nuisance [see Civ. Code § 3482.6(a)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a), 437c], in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of is not a nuisance because it involves a preexisting agricultural processing use that has been in continuous operation for more than three years and that has not substantially increased its operations after January 1, 1993. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that the defendant's activity or conduct fits within the definition of agricultural processing activity as defined in Civ. Code § 3482.6(e)(1), that the activity is conducted or maintained for commercial purposes in a manner consistent with proper and accepted customs and standards, that the activity has been in continuous operation for more than three years, that it was not a nuisance at the time that it began, that it has not substantially increased after January 1, 1993, and that it is not a nuisance as specifically described or defined by any provision of law other than Civ. Code § 3479 et seq.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention, supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.36, that the activity or conduct complained of is a nuisance because it unreasonably interferes with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of his or her property.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.59

§ 167.59 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes a Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF IS NOT A NUISANCE BECAUSE THE ACTION IS BASED ON PERSONAL DISCOMFORT AND THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT IS NOT UNREASONABLE TO A NORMAL PERSON.

Not Unreasonable to Normal Person. In an action based on personal discomfort, defendant may show that other persons similarly affected by the nuisance do not complain, in order to show that only persons of unusual and abnormal sensibilities would be affected by the alleged nuisance (McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App. 770, 784, 230 P. 203).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for nuisance because defendant's use of his or her property is unreasonable, causing personal discomfort to plaintiff. These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's contention that the activity or conduct complained of is not unreasonable to persons of ordinary sensibilities and therefore does not constitute a nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of is not unreasonable to persons of ordinary sensibilities and therefore does not constitute a nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should show that only defendant's personal comfort is infringed and that the activity or conduct complained of would not be deemed unreasonable to a person of ordinary sensibilities. Counsel may wish to compare the response of others in the area to the activity or conduct complained of in order to establish that plaintiff's response is not the norm, thus establishing that the activity or conduct is not unreasonable.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant is liable for nuisance because defendant's use of his or her property is unreasonable, causing personal discomfort to plaintiff, supported by the points and authorities in § 167.24.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

The facts and procedural background of McIntosh v. Brimmer (1924) 68 Cal. App. 770, 230 P. 203 , are discussed in § 167.24[3][a]. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's decision granting plaintiff damages and an injunction. The court, holding that defendant's maintenance of the chicken ranch in the manner described in the complaint was a private nuisance, ruled that the trial court did not err in sustaining an objection to a defense question regarding whether or not any of the neighbors other than plaintiff had ever complained of the dust from the chicken yard. In order to show that only persons of unusual and abnormal sensibilities would be affected by the alleged nuisance, the court held that in an action based on personal discomfort defendant may show that other persons similarly affected by the nuisance do not complain. In this case, however, the court found that injury was to plaintiff's trees and fruit, which are property (68 Cal. App. 770, 784) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Not Unreasonable to Normal Person

Fendley v. City of Anaheim (1930) 110 Cal. App 731, 294 P. 769 , was an action for damages to properties owned and occupied by plaintiffs and for damages for personal discomfort of plaintiffs. Plaintiffs contended that defendants' operation of machinery created vibrations, noises, and shaking and jarring of their residences, causing them personal discomfort. The trial court gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal held that the operation of the gas engine, compressor, and machinery of defendants, under all the circumstances, was a private nuisance and an invasion of both plaintiffs' right in property and plaintiffs' personal right to comfortable use of their residences (110 Cal. App 731, 736) . In making its decision, the court noted that the law of nuisances, where personal discomfort is the ground of complaint, is only applied to normal persons, that is to persons of normal sensibilities. The court found the record in this case to be silent regarding any evidence from which a conclusion or inference could be drawn that plaintiffs were persons of other than ordinary sensibilities (110 Cal. App 731, 735-736) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.60

§ 167.60 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Fact That Plaintiff's Own Acts Constitute Same Type of Nuisance Considered in Determination

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FACT THAT PLAINTIFF'S OWN ACTS CONSTITUTE THE SAME TYPE OF NUISANCE AS THE ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF MAY BE CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING WHETHER OR NOT COMPLAINED OF ACTIVITY OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTES A NUISANCE.

Plaintiff's Own Acts Constitute Same Type of Nuisance. When plaintiff's own acts create the same type of danger of which he or she is complaining, those acts may certainly be considered in determining whether or not defendant's acts actually constitute a nuisance under all the circumstances (Carter v. Chotiner (1930) 210 Cal. 288, 291-292, 291 P. 577).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance when plaintiff's own acts constitute the same type of nuisance of which he or she complains and may be considered in determining whether or not the complained of activity or conduct constitutes a nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of does not constitute a nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that plaintiff is engaged in the same activity or conduct of which he or she complains.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Own Acts Constitute Same Type of Nuisance

Carter v. Chotiner (1930) 210 Cal. 288, 291 P. 577 , was an action to restrain and enjoin defendants from using land adjacent to plaintiffs for cemetery purposes. Plaintiffs contended that such use would constitute a nuisance because it would pollute water in wells plaintiffs used for domestic and stock purposes. The trial court, finding that maintenance of a cemetery did not constitute a nuisance, denied plaintiffs' application for an injunction prohibiting defendants from operating a cemetery. The trial court, however, did enjoin defendants from interring any bodies within a strip 40 feet wide encircling the cemetery grounds. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed.

In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court found that the testimony showed that plaintiffs themselves maintained cesspools and toilet vaults on their own property in close proximity to the wells used for domestic purposes, and that these constituted a greater danger than the cemetery maintained by defendants (210 Cal. 288, 291) . The Court stated that the mere fact that others in the neighborhood are likewise maintaining a nuisance in no way excuses the defendants for their maintenance of a nuisance, but when plaintiffs' own acts create the same type of danger of which they are complaining, those acts may certainly be considered in determining whether or not defendants' acts actually constitute a nuisance under all the circumstances (210 Cal. 288, 291-292) . The Court held that plaintiffs' maintenance of cesspools and toilet vaults was not controlling in this case but merely one of the circumstances to be considered; the court, however, found that there was ample evidence to sustain the trial court's finding that in fact no nuisance existed (210 Cal. 288, 292) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.61

§ 167.61 Opposing Contention That Activity or Conduct Constitutes Nuisance [Civ. Code § 3479]--Area Expressly Zoned for Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY COMPLAINED OF CANNOT BE ENJOINED AS A NUISANCE BECAUSE SUCH ACTIVITY IS EXPRESSLY PERMITTED IN THE ZONE IN WHICH IT HAS TAKEN PLACE AND THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT DEFENDANT HAS EMPLOYED UNNECESSARY OR INJURIOUS METHODS OF OPERATION.

Area Expressly Zoned for Use. Except in an action to abate a public nuisance brought in the name of the people of the State of California, whenever any city, city and county, or county has established zones or districts under authority of law wherein certain manufacturing or commercial or airport uses are expressly permitted, no person or persons, firm, or corporation shall be enjoined or restrained by the injunctive process from the reasonable and necessary operation in any such industrial or commercial zone or airport of any use expressly permitted therein, nor shall such use be deemed a nuisance, without evidence of the employment of unnecessary and injurious methods of operation. Nothing in this act shall be deemed to apply to the regulation and working hours of canneries, fertilizing plants, refineries, and other similar establishments whose operation produce offensive odors (Code Civ. Proc. § 731a).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance because the area is zoned for the specific use to which defendant is putting his or her property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 731a].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of does not constitute a nuisance because the area is zoned for the specific use to which defendant is putting his or her property. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should discuss facts showing that the specific use to which plaintiff is putting his or her property is expressly permitted in the zone in which it is located and that the methods of operation are neither unnecessary nor injurious.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the activity or conduct complained of constitutes a nuisance supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.36.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.62

§ 167.62 Opposing Contention That Action for Nuisance Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Permanent Nuisance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FROM BRINGING AN ACTION FOR NUISANCE BECAUSE THE NUISANCE WAS PERMANENT AND THIS ACTION WAS COMMENCED MORE THAN _____ [2 or 3] YEARS AFTER THE ALLEGED CREATION OF THE NUISANCE.

A. Limitations Period as Commencing to Run at Creation of Permanent Nuisance. If a nuisance is of such character that it will presumably continue indefinitely, it is considered permanent, and the limitations period runs from the time that the nuisance is created (Phillips v. Pasadena (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 104, 107, 162 P.2d 625).

B. Plaintiff Is Required to Bring One Action for All Damages. In cases of a permanent nuisance, the plaintiff is required to bring one action for all past, present, and future damages within the statutory limitation period (Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1482, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[EITHER]

C. Limitation Period for Injury to Real Property. The statute of limitations for injury to real property resulting from a permanent nuisance is three years (Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b); see Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1485, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[OR]

C. Limitation Period for Personal Injury or Wrongful Death. The statute of limitations for personal injury or wrongful death is two years (one year, prior to 2003) (Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions § 345.14 (Matthew Bender)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Opportunity for Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent Is Limited. Although it has been recognized that in certain cases a plaintiff may have an election to treat a nuisance as either permanent or not, a plaintiff does not have an unbridled election in every case (Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1487, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[Optional] E. Permissible Election Allowed Only in "Close" Cases. For plaintiff to be able to elect whether to treat a nuisance as continuing or permanent, the case must be a "close" one pertaining to the permanency of the encroachment (Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1487, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[Optional] F. Plaintiff Cannot Have Both Remedies. Although in doubtful cases a plaintiff should have an election to treat the nuisance as either permanent or continuing, a plaintiff cannot have both remedies (see Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 268, 239 P.2d 625).

[Optional] G. Abatement Alone Does Not Transform Permanent Nuisance Into Continuing Nuisance or Close Case. The solitary fact that there is a voluntary abatement of an alleged nuisance does not necessarily transform the nuisance into a continuing nuisance or bring into play the benefit of the "close case" election (Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1486, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[Optional] H. Solid Structures Are Permanent in Nature. Cases that have found the nuisance complained of to be unquestionably permanent in nature have involved solid structures (see Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1484, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[Optional] I. Structure Is Necessary Part of Public Utility Operations. A clear case of a permanent nuisance is the one in which the offending structure or condition is maintained as a necessary part of the operations of a public utility (see Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1484, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480).

[Optional] J. No Continuing Nuisance Without Proof That Injury Is Capable of Being Abated and That Cost of Abatement Is Reasonable. A property owner seeking to maintain a nuisance action for damages after the three-year statute of limitations period applicable to permanent nuisances has expired, on the theory that the nuisance is continuing in nature, must present evidence that the injury is one capable of being abated and that the cost of abatement is reasonable (Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1104, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 272).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff can bring an action for nuisance when the alleged nuisance is permanent and the action was brought either: (1) more than one year after its creation, if damages for personal injury are sought; or (2) more than three years after its creation, if damages for injury to real property are sought.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the action is barred by the statute of limitations. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that the alleged nuisance is not a continuing one, describe the type of injury sustained, and point out that the applicable statutory period has expired.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention, supported by the points and authorities in § 167.44, that the action is not barred by the statute of limitations because it is a continuing nuisance

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitations Period as Commencing to Run at Creation of Permanent Nuisance

Phillips v. Pasadena (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 104, 162 P.2d 625 , was an action for nuisance caused by defendant closing and placing a locked gate across the only safe ingress and egress to plaintiff's resort. Defendant contended, inter alia, that the complaint was not filed within time required by statute. Plaintiff contended that the locked gate constituted a continuing nuisance, giving rise to separate causes of action. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint and dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Court, in reversing the trial court's entry of dismissal, stated that if a nuisance is of such character that it will presumably continue indefinitely, it is considered permanent and the limitations period runs from the time the nuisance is created, but when the nuisance may be discontinued at any time, it is considered continuing and plaintiff may bring successive actions for damages until the nuisance is abated even though an action based on the original wrong may be barred (27 Cal. 2d 104, 107-108) . The Court held that they could not say as a matter of law that the locked gate constituted a permanent nuisance, since it appeared from the allegations in the complaint that it could have been removed at any time. Therefore, plaintiff's action was not barred (27 Cal. 2d 104, 108) .

[b] Plaintiff Is Required to Bring One Action for All Damages

In Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , an investment company filed suit against a public utility for trespass and nuisance. Both theories of recovery were based on the existence of telephone lines and equipment that defendant buried under the plaintiff's property. Defendant's amended answer asserted the affirmative defenses that it had acquired the right to maintain the facilities on the property as a prescriptive easement and that the three-year statute of limitations for a permanent trespass and nuisance had run when the plaintiff filed its claim. Prior to trial, the defendant removed the facilities from the property in response to the plaintiff's demands. The trial court bifurcated the trial and considered the statute of limitations first. The trial court ruled that the elements of prescription were not established and that the plaintiff's claims were barred by the three-year statute of limitations. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court reviewed the legal precedents that have evolved in California jurisprudence and noted that in cases of a permanent trespass or nuisance, the damages are complete when the nuisance comes into existence and the plaintiff is required to bring one action for all past, present, and future damages within three years after the permanent nuisance/trespass has occurred (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1485) . The court contrasted characteristics of a permanent nuisance and a continuing nuisance, citing classic examples of each (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1484-1485) , and discussed when a plaintiff may be permitted to elect to treat a case either as permanent or a continuing nuisance (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1486-1487) . The court concluded that because the nuisance/trespass in the case before it had characteristics that were "overwhelmingly permanent," the plaintiff should not have been allowed to elect to treat the encroachment as a continuing rather than a permanent nuisance (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1488) .

[c] Limitation Period for Injury to Real Property

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment that the defendant's trespass/nuisance was permanent in nature and therefore barred by the three-year statute of limitation (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1482) .

[d] Opportunity for Election to Treat Nuisance as Continuing or Permanent Is Limited

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal cited Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 270-271, 288 P.2d 507 , in which the Supreme Court allowed the plaintiffs to elect to treat the defendants' operation of a cotton gin six months out of the year as a permanent nuisance, thus asking for past, present, and future damages. The court noted that there was nothing in Kornoff to suggest that a plaintiff has an unbridled election in every case to elect whether to treat a nuisance as permanent or continuing (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1487) .

[e] Permissible Election Allowed Only in "Close" Cases

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal stated that the proper analysis in determining whether the plaintiff may elect to treat a nuisance as permanent or continuing appears to be that a permissible election is dependent on whether the case is a "close" one pertaining to the permanency of the encroachment. In this case, the encroachment was a telephone conduit, which was designed to have a useful life of 100 years, buried 10 feet in the earth for approximately 25 years. The court concluded that the case was not factually close (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1487) .

[f] Plaintiff Cannot Have Both Remedies

Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 239 P.2d 625 , was an action for damages and injunctive relief. Defendant removed the tops of three knolls and dumped the earth into the adjoining canyons, thereby creating fills. Plaintiff contended that this action constituted a nuisance because the fill was washed onto plaintiff's land by heavy rains causing damage. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the damage award but reversed the injunctive relief.

The Court found that defendant's fill constituted a nuisance and ordered a retrial on the issue of whether the nuisance was permanent or continuing to determine what further relief should be granted (38 Cal. 2d 265, 266, 270) . The Court held that in doubtful cases plaintiff should have an election to treat the nuisance as either permanent or continuing, but plaintiff cannot have both remedies (38 Cal. 2d 265, 268-270) . The Court affirmed the past damages award and held that if the trial court found the nuisance to be permanent, it could award damages for the decrease in market value of plaintiff's property; if it found the nuisance to be continuing, it could grant injunctive relief (38 Cal. 2d 265, 270) .

[g] Abatement Alone Does Not Transform Permanent Nuisance Into Continuing Nuisance or Close Case

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal held that the fact that there is a voluntary abatement of an alleged nuisance does not necessarily transform the nuisance into a continuing nuisance or bring into play the benefit of the "close case" election (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1486) .

Because the "permanent nuisance" was in fact abated before trial, it is apparent that the court considered the test to be an objective one, rather than a subjective one. The dissent commented that the majority opinion resulted in "an apparent oxymoron" of the abated "unabatable" nuisance and the impermanent "permanent" trespass, and created something of a legal anomaly. The dissent pointed out that the primary difference between a cause of action for a permanent nuisance and a cause of action for a continuing nuisance is that the former entitles the plaintiff to future damages and the latter for past injuries. Because the nuisance had been abated, there would be no future injuries to suffer and the plaintiff could only file an action for a "continuing nuisance," which it had done. Yet, according to the dissent, the majority opinion paradoxically held that the plaintiff was limited to a cause of action for "permanent nuisance" even though that would not have been a viable cause of action once the nuisance abated. Given that the nuisance/trespass shared characteristics of both a permanent and continuing nuisance, the dissent would have allowed the election (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1494) .

[h] Solid Structures Are Permanent in Nature

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal reviewed the legal precedents that have evolved in California jurisprudence. The court observed that cases that have found the nuisance complained of to be unquestionably permanent in nature have involved solid structures, such as a building encroaching on the plaintiff's land. The court cited as examples: concrete piers that extend across a common boundary line, a steam railroad operating on a plaintiff's land, and a buried sewer line running through a plaintiff's property (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1484) .

[i] Structure Is Necessary Part of Public Utility Operations

The facts and procedural background of Spar v. Pacific Bell (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 480 , are discussed in § 167.62[3][b]. The court of appeal quoted the Supreme Court's decision in Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 267, 239 P.2d 625 [see § 167.62[3][f]], that "[t]he clearest case of a permanent nuisance is the one in which the offending structure or condition is maintained as a necessary part of the operations of a public utility" (235 Cal. App. 3d 1480, 1484) .

[j] No Continuing Nuisance Without Proof That Injury Is Capable of Being Abated and That Cost of Abatement Is Reasonable

In Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1087, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 272 , owners of real property brought a nuisance action against an industrial manufacturer of solid fuels who leased the property from prior owners and who had contaminated the property caused by defendant's dumping and burning of hazardous chemicals during the lease. Defendant demurred and the trial court sustained the demurrer. The court of appeal issued two opinions. In Mangini I, Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 , the court of appeal validated plaintiffs' theory that the contamination of their property might qualify as a continuing nuisance because, although the actual dumping at the cite had ceased, toxic chemicals continued to migrate within the soil itself, causing further damage to the land. The court stated that the crucial distinction between a permanent and continuing nuisance was whether the nuisance may be discontinued or abated and concluded that, although features of the original complaint suggested plaintiffs had alleged a permanent nuisance, their proposed pleading met the test of a continuing nuisance: that the offensive condition was abatable. The case was then remanded to the superior court for trial. The jury returned a special verdict for plaintiffs. Defendant moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and the trial court denied the motion. In Mangini II, the court of appeal held that the trial court should have granted defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict because plaintiffs had failed to prove that the contamination was a continuing nuisance. The court of appeal concluded that plaintiffs had failed to present substantial evidence that defendant's chemical contamination of their land was capable of being abated at a reasonable cost.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal in favor of defendant, holding that the statute of limitations barred the action because plaintiffs presented no substantial evidence of continuing nuisance (12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1096) . The court ruled that in order for a property owner to maintain a nuisance action for damages after the three-year statute of limitations applicable to permanent nuisances has expired, on the theory that the nuisance is continuing, the plaintiff must present evidence that the injury is one capable of being abated and that the cost of abatement is reasonable (12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1103-1104) . The evidence showed that contaminants were found but the extent of contamination and viability of remediation were unknown. Since the extent of contamination was uncertain, it was also uncertain whether the nuisance was abatable (12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1103) . The court addressed the issue of what the term "abatable" meant and concluded that "abatable" means that the nuisance can be remedied at a reasonable cost by reasonable means (12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1103) . The court agreed that something less than total decontamination may suffice to show abatability, but that mere technological feasibility was insufficient. The court also stated that while cost is an appropriate factor to consider, an estimate of the cost for removing the contamination will suffice (12 Cal. 4th 1087, 1099) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Structure Is Necessary Part of Public Utility Operations

In Bartleson v. United States (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1270 , plaintiffs, owners of large ranches adjacent to a military artillery range, filed a claim under the Federal Tort Claims Act against the United States seeking damages for the permanent nuisance caused by artillery shells from the facility landing on their property. The district court awarded plaintiffs damages for diminution in value, relying on a theory of permanent nuisance. The government appealed, arguing that plaintiffs should have recovered only under a theory of continuing nuisance. After initially ruling that California nuisance law governed the case, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal held that because the military artillery range was an instrument of the government that could not be enjoined, like a public utility, and because the shelling activities would continue, it was appropriate to treat the nuisance as permanent (96 F.3d 1270, 1276) .

[b] No Continuing Nuisance Without Proof That Injury Is Capable of Being Abated and That Cost of Abatement Is Reasonable

In McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37 , the operation of a laundromat caused oil contamination of the underlying property. In 1986, the owner of adjacent real property downhill from the laundromat discovered oil seeping through her property and wrote a letter to the laundry owners complaining of the problem. In 1993, subsequent owners of the laundromat property had 560 tons of soil excavated in an effort to remedy the contamination. However, after a soil test showed that the downhill property still suffered from the oil contamination that occurred years before, the downhill property owner brought a lawsuit against the original and subsequent owner in 2002. Based primarily on the 1986 letter written by plaintiff to the original laundry owner, the trial court granted summary adjudication in favor of the defendants on the grounds that the plaintiff's claims for permanent nuisance, negligence, and permanent trespass were time-barred under the applicable three-year limitations period. Plaintiff went to trial on the theory of continuing nuisance and trespass. The jury found through special verdict that it was unknown whether the condition of plaintiff's property could have been repaired or abated by reasonable means and at a reasonable cost, but the trial court granted a motion for new trial after concluding that the jury form was confusing and ambiguous. The Court of Appeal reversed the granting of a new trial and directed entry of judgment in favor of defendants. Consistent with the jury's special verdict answers, the court agreed with defendants that plaintiff had failed to introduce evidence at trial proving that plaintiff's property could be repaired or abated at a reasonable cost by reasonable means, and this failure of proof defeated plaintiff's attempt to prove a continuing nuisance or trespass. The court noted plaintiff's attempts before and during trial to introduce expert evidence relating to the remediation that would be required, but the court concluded that this evidence was properly excluded by the trial court because the plaintiff's attorney had failed during the discovery period to properly designate experts who would provide such testimony (180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 96-101) . In the absence of this evidence, plaintiff's claim was one for a permanent nuisance and trespass and was barred by the three-year statute of limitations that began to run in 1986 when plaintiff became aware of the soil contamination (180 Cal. App. 4th 56, 85-90) .

In Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518 , a real estate developer brought a nuisance action against a prior owner for subsurface contamination. The contamination consisted of an oil reservoir which had been constructed 60 years and buried 40 years prior to the lawsuit. Plaintiff sought to avoid the bar of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b) by identifying the nuisance as continuing rather that permanent. The trial court agreed with the plaintiff, and the matter proceeded to trial, resulting in a judgment in favor of plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, concluding that the nuisance could not be considered continuing under the abatability test. The court referred to Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1087, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 272 , in which the Supreme Court held that "abatable" means reasonably abatable in light of the fundamental considerations that enter into the determination, such as expenses, time, and legitimate competing interests (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1220) . The court noted that there was no evidence that the buried substances in issue was migrating to other properties or into public water supplies, or that it was injurious or offensive to persons on the property. The only detriment established was the loss in value to the developer if the property could not be used for single-family residences (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1221) . However, total removal of the oil reservoir would not end the contamination problem, and the cost of remediation would greatly exceed the value of the land after remediation, and would far exceed the detriment that would be suffered if remediation is denied (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1221-1222) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.63

§ 167.63 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Defendant Did Not Create Nuisance, and Notice of Nuisance or Request for Abatement Not Given to Defendant

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR NUISANCE BECAUSE DEFENDANT DID NOT CREATE THE NUISANCE, AND NOTICE OF THE NUISANCE OR REQUEST FOR ABATEMENT WAS NOT GIVEN TO DEFENDANT.

Successor Not Liable in Absence of Notice of Nuisance. A successive owner of property who neglects to abate a continuing nuisance, created by a former owner, on or in the use of that property, cannot be held liable therefor if he or she does not have actual notice or knowledge of the nuisance (Reinhard v. Lawrence Warehouse Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746, 107 P.2d 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for nuisance because defendant did not create the nuisance, and notice of nuisance was not given to defendant.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is not liable for the nuisance even though he or she is a successor who neglected to abate a continuing nuisance on his or her property. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show that defendant did not create and had no notice of the nuisance on his or her property.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.42.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Successor Not Liable in Absence of Notice of Nuisance

Reinhard v. Lawrence Warehouse Co. (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 107 P.2d 501 , was an action for damages for injuries sustained while repairing defendants' skylight. Defendant owner was a corporation composed of the children of the original owner of the building where the skylight was located, and defendant lessee was the person who hired plaintiff to repair the skylight. The trial court granted defendants' motions for a directed verdict. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

On appeal, plaintiff sought to hold the owner of the property liable on the ground that the faulty construction of the roof was a nuisance. The court of appeal held that the evidence failed to prove a nuisance, either public or private. In holding that the owner was not liable for private nuisance, the court stated that one who was not the creator of a nuisance must have notice or knowledge of it before he can be held liable (41 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.64

§ 167.64 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Nuisance--Plaintiff Consented to Activity or Conduct Complained of

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR NUISANCE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF CONSENTED TO THE ACTS OR CONDUCT ALLEGEDLY CONSTITUTING THE NUISANCE.

A. Plaintiff's Consent to Defendant's Activity or Conduct as Defense to Action for Nuisance. When the owner of property consents to, acquiesces in, or even stands by and makes no suitable objection to its use, he or she cannot thereafter enjoin the continuance of such use as a nuisance or obtain damages (see Sutro Heights Land Co. v. Merced Irrigation Dist. (1931) 211 Cal. 670, 690, 693-696, 296 P. 1088 ; Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1139, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827).

[Optional] B. Successor Owner Bound by Predecessor's Consent to Conduct of Predecessor's Lessee. A successor owner is bound by a valid consent by a predecessor owner to the conduct of the predecessor owner's lessee, and therefore an owner who has lost the right to sue by consenting to a lessee's nuisance can pass no right to sue to a successor owner (Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1139, 281 Cal Rptr. 827).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant is liable for nuisance because plaintiff has acquiesced or consented to the nuisance and is therefore barred from injunctive relief or from recovering damages. If the plaintiff is a successor to the owner who originally consented to the conduct the plaintiff is alleging to be a nuisance, counsel may use optional Paragraph B.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is not liable for nuisance because plaintiff or plaintiff's predecessor has acquiesced or consented to the nuisance and plaintiff is therefore barred from injunctive relief or from recovering damages. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 167.23 -167.36.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Consent to Defendant's Activity or Conduct as Defense to Action for Nuisance

Sutro Heights Land Co. v. Merced Irrigation Dist. (1931) 211 Cal. 670, 296 P. 1088 , was an action for injunction and damages. Plaintiffs contended that defendant's construction, maintenance, and operation of irrigation canals, permitting water to flow or seep through its canals onto plaintiffs' lands, constituted a nuisance. The trial court gave judgment for defendant. Plaintiffs appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

Defendant contended that the canal system was built and operated with knowledge and acquiescence of the plaintiffs. The Supreme Court found that plaintiffs had acquiesced in the construction of defendant's canals by deeding defendant right of ways across their land for that purpose and had consented to and acquiesced in the construction of all canals. The Court, therefore, held that plaintiffs were not in a position to ask for an injunction prohibiting defendant from maintaining and operating the canals, nor to have the same abated as a nuisance (211 Cal. 670, 690) . As to damages, the Court found that plaintiffs were in the same position they would have been in had their land been condemned. The Court stated the rule in condemnation proceedings to be that whenever a grant of a right of way is executed by plaintiff, he or she estops himself or herself from afterwards prosecuting any action for the past, present, or future damages that may have occurred or would reasonably be expected to occur by reason of the necessary, natural, and ordinary use for which the right of way was granted. In this case, the Court found that plaintiffs had given consent to the taking of their land by the deeds granting defendant right of ways for the construction, and that all damages resulting from the seepage were the natural, necessary, and reasonable incident to the use and operation of the canal to which plaintiffs had consented. Therefore, plaintiffs were precluded from any recovery (211 Cal. 670, 693-696) .

However, the Supreme Court held that only damages that were the natural, necessary, and reasonable incident of acts or conduct consented to would be barred; that is, plaintiff would not be barred if the damages were beyond the scope of what would be reasonably expected to result from the activity consented to. The Court also held that damages that were the result of negligent acts or conduct would not be barred (211 Cal. 670, 694) .

The facts and procedural background of Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal Rptr. 827 , are discussed in § 167.64[3][b]. In agreeing with defendant that consent by a landowner is a defense to a nuisance action, the court cautioned that it was not ruling that consent can impede the abatement of a public nuisance. The court noted that it limited its holding to the facts in question, which involved a claim for damages for a special injury suffered as a result of a public nuisance (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1139) .

[b] Successor Owner Bound by Predecessor's Consent to Conduct of Predecessor's Lessee

Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal Rptr. 827 , was an action by property owners against a former lessee claiming that the former lessee had created a nuisance on the property by contaminating it with hazardous waste. In 1975, plaintiffs acquired the property from the estate of the owner who had originally leased it to defendant from 1960 to 1970. Plaintiffs eventually discovered that defendant had left millions of pounds of hazardous substances, such as waste rocket fuel, on the property. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer, and plaintiffs appealed to the court of appeal.

Defendant contended that it was not liable to plaintiffs for a nuisance because any disposal of hazardous waste was undertaken lawfully with the consent of plaintiffs' predecessor owners. The court of appeal agreed that a lessee may defend against a nuisance action by showing that the owner of the property consented to the lessee's use of the property by authorizing that use in the lease. The court noted that not permitting this defense could lead to absurd results. For example, if an owner leased property for the purpose of operating a quarry, it would be ludicrous to permit the owner to sue the lessee at the end of the lease term for creating the inevitable hole that was the object of the lease. The court also held that this defense applies against any successor owner. Once an original owner has lost the right to sue by authorizing the construction of a private nuisance, that original owner cannot pass any right to sue to his or her grantee (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1138-1139) . However, the court held that the trial court should not have sustained defendant's demurrer because the language of the lease was ambiguous and extrinsic evidence was needed to determine whether the lease either authorized disposal of hazardous waste on the property or required defendant to clean up any hazard on the property before the lease terminated (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1140) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Consent to Defendant's Activity or Conduct as Defense to Action for Nuisance

Churchill v. Baumann (1892) 95 Cal. 541, 30 P. 770 , was an action for damages to plaintiff's riparian and appropriated water rights, caused by defendants' diversion of water from a natural stream by building a dam across the creek above plaintiff's lands. The trial court gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Defendants denied injury to plaintiff, alleging that plaintiff participated with and assisted defendants in maintaining the dam, in keeping the dam and ditch in repair, and in acting with defendants to divert water from the stream. The trial court found that plaintiff was a tenant in common with defendants in the dam and that by his participation and assistance in maintaining the dam and diverting the water, plaintiff was estopped from maintaining this action. The Supreme Court found the trial court's judgment to be justified by the finding that the acts complained of were done with plaintiff's consent (95 Cal. 541, 546) . The Court, in dictum, stated that consent is generally a full and perfect shield when what is complained of is a civil injury that was consented to, and plaintiff could not complain of a nuisance if he or she concurred in or countenanced its erection (95 Cal. 541, 544) .

In Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518 , a real estate developer brought a nuisance action against a prior owner for subsurface contamination. The contamination consisted of an oil reservoir which had been constructed sixty years and buried forty years prior to the lawsuit. The matter proceeded to trial and a judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff. The court of appeal reversed, holding that plaintiff was barred from obtaining relief by the defense of consent as set forth in Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1214) . When it appears that the defendant conducted a lawful activity on a landowner's property with the consent of the landowner, the landowner is precluded from pursuing a cause of action based on that activity. In this case, the defendant was the landowner when it conducted the activities, and thus it had the consent of the owner. When defendant sold the property it did so with the oil reservoir in full view and with his full knowledge of the past usage of the property. The subsequent owner acquired no right to sue defendant for private nuisance, and could pass no such right to future owners such as the plaintiff (44 Cal. App. 4th 1160, 1216) . The judgment for the plaintiff was thus reversed, and the case remanded with directions to enter judgment for defendant.

51 of 105 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.65

§ 167.65 Opposing Contention That Nuisance Can Be Enjoined--Prospective Injury Not Probable and Imminent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIVITY COMPLAINED OF MAY NOT BE ENJOINED BECAUSE THE INJURY IS PROSPECTIVE AND PLAINTIFF HAS NOT SHOWN THAT THE DANGER FROM SUCH ACTIVITY IS PROBABLE AND IMMINENT.

Prospective Injury Must Be Probable and Imminent. Although a prospective nuisance may be enjoined, facts must be alleged to show that the danger is probable and imminent (Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 950-951, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 ; see Nicholson v. Getchell (1892) 96 Cal. 394, 396, 31 P. 265).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that an alleged nuisance can be enjoined when the injury is prospective and is not probable and imminent.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the activity or conduct complained of may not be enjoined because the injury is prospective and is not probable and imminent. They points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the activity or conduct complained of can be enjoined, supported by the points and authorities in § 167.46.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prospective Injury Must Be Probable and Imminent

The facts and procedural background of Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 , are discussed in § 167.26[3][a]. The court of appeal found that plaintiff had not stated a cause of action for nuisance (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) . In its holding, the court stated that a prospective nuisance may be enjoined but that facts must be alleged to show that the danger is probable and imminent (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 950-951) . The court found that there was a distinct lack of factual allegations in plaintiff's complaint, from which it could be reasonably concluded that the prospective nuisance was either probable or imminent. Therefore, the court held that no cause of action was stated for equitable relief against a prospective nuisance (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 951) .

Nicholson v. Getchell (1892) 96 Cal. 394, 31 P. 265 , was an action for a mandatory injunction to prevent defendant from maintaining a breakwater that had already been built. Plaintiff alleged that the breakwater would inevitably throw water with great force onto plaintiff's bank of the creek and damage would inevitably ensue. The trial court granted defendant's demurrer to the complaint and entered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Court, stating that it is not necessary to show that injury is inevitable to maintain an action, held that the complaint stated facts showing that danger was probable and imminent and that therefore, the demurrer should have been overruled (96 Cal. 394, 396) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.66

§ 167.66 Opposing Contention That Injunctive Relief Available to Abate Nuisance--Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test Favors Defendant

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD NOT ENJOIN THE NUISANCE BECAUSE THE HARDSHIP DEFENDANT WILL SUFFER IF THE INJUNCTION IS GRANTED OUTWEIGHS THE HARDSHIP PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER IF THE INJUNCTION IS REFUSED.

A. Relative Hardships (Balance of Conveniences) Test. [See § 167.47, Paragraph A.]

B. Irreparable Injury. A court cannot enjoin a nuisance if granting the injunction would cause the defendant irreparable injury and refusing the injunction would not cause the plaintiff irreparable injury (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 560, 562, 250 P.2d 660).

C. Responsibility for Nuisance. A court cannot enjoin a nuisance if the defendant's negligence or willful acts did not cause the nuisance and if the plaintiff is responsible by delay or otherwise for the situation (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660).

D. Disproportionate Hardships. A court cannot enjoin a nuisance if the hardship caused the defendant by granting the injunction is greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused the plaintiff by refusing the injunction (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660).

[Optional] E. Consideration of Public Interest. In determining whether to enjoin a nuisance, the court must consider the interests of third persons and the general public and must refuse the injunction if it will produce great public mischief (Loma Portal Civic Club v. American Airlines, Inc. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 582, 588, 39 Cal. Rptr. 708, 394 P.2d 548 ; McCarty v. Macy & Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 164, 167-168, 334 P.2d 156).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's contention that, under the relative hardships or balance of conveniences test, a nuisance should not be enjoined because granting an injunction would cause greater hardship to defendant than that caused to plaintiff by refusing the injunction. If the injunction would affect the public, counsel may use optional Paragraph E.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of whether the relative hardship tests favors the party against whom an injunction would issue. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should assert facts establishing that the defendant would suffer hardship from the granting of an injunction, and that this hardship is greater than any hardship the plaintiff would suffer if the injunction were refused. If optional Paragraph E is used, counsel should discuss facts showing that the hardship to the public from granting the injunction would outweigh the hardship to the plaintiff if the injunction were refused.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.47.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion regarding nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Irreparable Injury

The facts and procedural background of Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , are discussed in § 167.66[3][c]. The Court found no irreparable injury to the party seeking to enjoin an encroachment because it extended into a driveway area used as such by both parties (58 Cal. 2d 513, 521) .

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[b] Responsibility for Nuisance

Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][d].

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[c] Disproportionate Hardships

Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , was an action seeking injunctive relief to compel defendant to remove a fence that plaintiff claimed interfered with plaintiff's driveway easement. Defendant cross-complained, claiming that plaintiff's front porch pillar, eaves, gas meters, and pipes extended over the property line into that driveway and therefore encroached on defendant's property. The trial court held for defendant and issued an injunction compelling plaintiff to remove all encroachments. Plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Court reversed the order to remove the encroachments and remanded the case for further proceedings, holding that the cost of removal would be disproportionate to any damage caused if they were left in place. The Court took notice of the fact that removal would not only be expensive but would disfigure defendant's house. In contrast, plaintiff was suffering little or nominal inconvenience or damage from the encroachments (58 Cal. 2d 513, 521) .

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 167.47[3][a].

[d] Consideration of Public Interest

Loma Portal Civic Club v. American Airlines, Inc. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 582, 39 Cal. Rptr. 708, 394 P.2d 548 , was an action brought by owners of property located near a San Diego airport to enjoin certain flight operations because of noise, vibration, and the fear caused by the low-level flying of jets taking off and landing. The trial court refused to grant an injunction, and plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Court upheld the refusal of the injunction as proper, ruling that any determination regarding the availability and appropriateness of injunctive relief must take into account the interests of third persons and the public. The Court found that flight operations at the airport not only provided benefits to the people of San Diego and the state of California, but also furthered the national interest in commerce, transportation, and defense. The Court cited state and federal statutes indicating a policy not to enjoin airport uses unless they are being carried out in an unnecessary and injurious manner. The Court concluded that this overriding public interest required denial of injunctive relief (61 Cal. 2d 582, 588-589, 594) .

In McCarty v. Macy & Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 164, 334 P.2d 156 , property owners living near a grain mill sought to enjoin operation of the mill because of noise and dust. The trial court refused to grant an injunction. Plaintiffs appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed, ruling that the benefit to plaintiffs from an injunction would be slight compared to the injury to the general welfare caused by restricting the operation of legitimate businesses.. The court noted that ruling otherwise would prohibit railroads from operating near residences and would prevent the establishment of factories that were not located on prohibitively large areas of property (167 Cal. App. 2d 164, 167-168) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.67

§ 167.67 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Full Recovery Barred by Comparative Negligence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ALL DAMAGES CAUSED BY NUISANCE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS GUILTY OF CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, AND THEREFORE HIS/HER RECOVERY IS DIMINISHED UNDER THE DOCTRINE OF COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE.

Comparative Negligence Can Bar Full Recovery for Damages for Nuisance. At least when a nuisance is caused by negligence, comparative negligence principles can reduce the damages recoverable by a plaintiff whose negligence contributed to his or her injury (Tint v. Sanborn (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1225, 1234, 259 Cal. Rptr. 902 ; see Curtis v. Kastner (1934) 220 Cal. 185, 191, 30 P.2d 26 ; Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 808, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

No case has yet applied comparative negligence principles to nuisance actions that are based on intentional conduct, or that are based on strict liability in cases involving ultrahazardous activities [see Tint v. Sanborn (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1225, 1233-1234, 1234 n.3, 259 Cal. Rptr. 902 (limiting holding to case in which nuisance was at least arguably created negligently)].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant is liable for damages for injuries to plaintiff caused by defendant's maintenance of a nuisance when plaintiff is guilty of comparative negligence.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is not fully liable for damages for injuries to plaintiff caused by defendant's maintenance of a nuisance, based on the fact that plaintiff is guilty of comparative negligence. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that plaintiff's injury was caused or contributed to by his or her own failure to exercise due care.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Negligence Can Bar Full Recovery for Damages for Nuisance

In Curtis v. Kastner (1934) 220 Cal. 185, 30 P.2d 26 , plaintiff sought damages for injuries caused by striking her head against a projecting rafter of defendant's garage. The trial court found plaintiff's injuries to be proximately caused by her negligence and failure to exercise ordinary care for her own safety, thus barring her recovery. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court found that the obstruction that caused plaintiff's injuries was per se a wrongful encroachment on a public street. The Court, however, held that whether nuisance has its origin in negligence or is absolute and exists without regard to negligent acts or omissions of the defendant, one who sustains injury by reason of his or her own failure to exercise due care, as plaintiff, cannot recover (220 Cal. 185, 191) .

NOTE:

Curtis was decided before Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 808, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , in which the California Supreme Court adopted the doctrine of comparative negligence. Li was an action for damages based on negligence. Defendants contended that plaintiff was contributorily negligent and therefore barred from recovery. The trial court found for defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that the doctrine of contributory negligence, which bars all recovery when the plaintiff's negligent conduct has contributed as a legal cause in any degree to the harm suffered by him or her, must give way to a system of comparative negligence, which assesses liability in direct proportion to fault. In light of the Supreme Court's holding in Li, the rule stated in Curtis that a person who sustains injury by reason of his or her own failure to exercise due care cannot recover, is probably no longer applicable to nuisance actions.

Tint v. Sanborn (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1225, 259 Cal. Rptr. 902 , involved an action for nuisance alleging that trees growing on defendant's property damaged plaintiff by reducing the value of plaintiff's property, allegedly in violation of a recorded declaration of restrictions and a municipal ordinance. The complaint did not allege that the nuisance was negligently created, but defendant included in his answer an affirmative defense of comparative negligence, and the trial court gave (on defendant's request) a comparative negligence instruction. The jury awarded damages to plaintiff, who appealed on the ground that it was error to give a comparative negligence instruction. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court held that, although the complaint did not allege negligence, the answer's affirmative defense was sufficient to raise the issue of comparative negligence (211 Cal. App. 3d 1225,1230) . The court rejected plaintiff's contention that comparative negligence can never be raised in, or be relevant to, a nuisance action. Instead, the court relied on the rationale used in Curtis v. Kastner (1934) 220 Cal. 185, 30 P.2d 26 , and the breadth of the discussion in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , as well as treatises and out-of-state authority, to conclude that, at least in a case in which the defendant claims that any nuisance was negligently caused, the jury may be instructed on comparative fault principles (211 Cal. App. 3d 1225, 1232-1234) .

NOTE:

In Tint v. Sanborn, the court expressly declined to decide whether comparative fault principles could properly be applied to a nuisance that all concede arose from intentional or reckless conduct, or an ultrahazardous activity to which strict liability would be applied. This issue parallels an issue in negligence law generally--that is, whether or not comparative negligence applies in a case in which the party arguing that another party's negligence should reduce that party's recovery of damages when the action is based on a theory other than negligence [see, e.g., Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162 (award based on strict products liability reduced by percentage of negligent plaintiff's fault); Sorenson v. Allred (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 717, 722 , 169 Cal. Rptr. 441 (award based on "willful misconduct," defined by court as synonymous with recklessness, reduced by percentage of negligent plaintiff's fault); see generally Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 4 (Matthew Bender)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Negligence as Bar to Full Recovery for Damages for Nuisance

Calder v. San Francisco (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 837, 123 P.2d 897 , was an action for damages against defendant for personal injuries sustained when plaintiff fell in the driveway leading to a private garage in the basement of one of defendant's buildings. Plaintiff contended that defendant's construction and maintenance of a depressed area for driveway purposes next to a public sidewalk constituted a public nuisance. Defendant denied the allegations and affirmatively alleged that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. The trial court instructed the jury on the issues of nuisance, negligence, and contributory negligence. Judgment on a jury verdict was entered for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

On appeal, plaintiff attacked the instructions given by the trial court. In evaluating plaintiff's contentions, the court of appeal noted the relationship between negligence and nuisance. The court stated that while nuisance and liability for injuries, occasioned thereby, may exist without negligence, they are frequently coexisting and in many instances, nuisance, especially with respect to buildings or premises, presupposes negligence. The court then stated that when a claim of liability is predicated on either the theory of nuisance or the theory of negligence, the defense of contributory negligence is available to the defendant (50 Cal. App. 2d 837, 839) . The court, noting that under certain circumstances stock instructions regarding negligence would constitute prejudicial error, held that there was no prejudicial error in the giving of the challenged instructions because the major test on the question of nuisance in a case like this is the factor of reasonableness and, for all practical purposes, the same factor of reasonableness is the major factor in test on the question of negligence; therefore, a finding by the jury of nuisance would have necessarily presupposed a finding of negligence on the part of the defendant (50 Cal. App. 2d 837, 840) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.68

§ 167.68 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Injury Not Present, Real, or Ascertainable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR DAMAGES FOR NUISANCE WHEN THE INJURIES ALLEGED ARE POTENTIAL AND FUTURE INJURIES ARISING FROM THE THREAT OF NUISANCE AND ARE NOT PRESENT, REAL, OR ASCERTAINABLE.

Damages Only Recoverable for Present, Real, or Ascertainable Injuries. Plaintiff cannot recover damages for potential and future injuries arising from the threat of nuisance. The injuries must be present, real, and ascertainable (see Jordan v. City of Santa Barbara (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340 ; Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 950, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for damages for nuisance when the alleged damages are not present, real, or ascertainable.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is not liable for damages for nuisance when the alleged damages are not present, real, or ascertainable. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Only Recoverable for Present, Real, or Ascertainable Injuries

In Jordan v. City of Santa Barbara (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340 , landowners filed an action against various public agencies alleging that defendants' activities increased the salinity of plaintiffs' groundwater, thereby causing crop losses and reduced land value. The trial court granted judgment to defendants, on the grounds that the evidence did not prove that the alleged conduct caused damage or a cognizable nuisance. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that damage or injury has long been considered an essential element of a cause of action for nuisance, and that an action for private nuisance cannot be maintained for an interference in the use and enjoyment of land caused solely by the fear of future injury (46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 1257) . The court found that substantial evidence supported that plaintiffs' property values were not diminished due to any actions by defendants, and that plaintiffs had suffered no actual harm or interference with the use of their properties (46 Cal. App. 4th 1245, 1261) .

The facts and procedural background of Helix Land Co. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 147 Cal. Rptr. 683 , are discussed in § 167.27[3][a]. The plaintiffs contended that due to actions and inactions on the part of defendants in preventing completion of a flood control channel, plaintiffs' property was subjected to greater threat of flooding and possible subjection to raw and untreated sewage and other chemicals and substances injurious to the health of plaintiffs and to their lands. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal held that the landowners' complaint did not state a cause of action for nuisance (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 949) . The court stated that an essential element of a cause of action for nuisance is damage or injury. The court found that Helix's injuries were not present, real, or ascertainable and held that he could not recover damages for potential and future injuries arising from the threat of nuisance (82 Cal. App. 3d 932, 950) .

55 of 105 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.69

§ 167.69 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Plaintiff May Not Obtain Both Injunctive Relief and Depreciation or Other Future Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Identify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD NOT BE AWARDED FUTURE DAMAGES, BECAUSE THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SOUGHT WILL, IF GRANTED, TERMINATE THE NUISANCE FOR THE FUTURE. ANY DAMAGES AWARDED WOULD THEREFORE CONSTITUTE A DOUBLE RECOVERY.

A. Plaintiff Should Not Receive Both Abatement and Future Damages. It is well established that if the plaintiff receives an injunction against the defendant that requires the defendant to abate the nuisance, the plaintiff can recover past and present damages, but not future damages, since the abatement order will terminate the nuisance for the future (Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 979, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453).

B. Plaintiff Should Not Be Unjustly Enriched. A plaintiff obtains a double recovery if he or she is permitted to recover for depreciation in value and also have the cause of that depreciation removed (Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 269, 239 P.2d 625 ; Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453).

C. Presumption That Defendant Will Comply With Valid Order. When considering whether a party may recover for economic loss as a consequence of a nuisance, the court must presume that the party will comply with the terms of a valid court order (Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention that he or she should recover future damages as a consequence of a nuisance. The basis for the opposition is that an award of future damages would unjustly enrich the plaintiff, because injunctive relief sought by the plaintiff, ordering the abatement of the cause of the future damages, would terminate the nuisance for the future.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 167.48.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that defendant is not liable for future damages for nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, if this form were to be used in an appellant's brief contending that the trial court erred in awarding both future damages and permanent injunctive relief, counsel would: (1) identify the behavior found by the trial court to reduce the value of plaintiff's property; (2) refer to the trial court's order abating that behavior; (3) argue that, based on the necessary presumption that a defendant will comply with the terms of a valid court order, the problem has been corrected by equitable relief and plaintiff will therefore incur no future loss; and (4) conclude that the award of damages would permit the plaintiff to be unjustly enriched and should therefore be reversed.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Should Not Receive Both Abatement and Future Damages

In Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 , the plaintiffs filed an action seeking equitable relief and damages, alleging that defendants violated a declaration of restrictions by engaging in various activities that were nuisances. The trial court agreed, finding the defendants' behavior constituted a pattern of offensive and noxious activities, ordering them to remove a structure, and enjoining them from other specified activity. The trial court also determined that because Civ. Code § 1106.6 required the plaintiffs to disclose to potential buyers that the defendants were "difficult neighbors" the value of their respective properties would be reduced by a total of $24,000 and therefore included that sum in its $28,000 award of damages. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal modified the judgment to reduce the damage award from $28,000 to $4,000, and remanded the case for further proceedings for the limited purpose of allowing the trial court to include any damages because of emotional distress, if any, in its decision. The court of appeal stated that it is well established that if a plaintiff receives an injunction against a defendant that requires the defendant to abate the nuisance, the plaintiff can recover past and present damages, but not future damages, because the abatement order will terminate the nuisance for the future. The court observed that, assuming the defendants comply with the equitable terms of the judgment, the neighborhood problems will be resolved and the plaintiffs will suffer no damages. Further, the plaintiffs are not being denied an effective remedy or deprived of damages that they have actually suffered. At the time of the trial none of the plaintiffs' houses were on the market, and if at some future time the defendants fail to comply with the judgment or insist on finding other ways to offend their neighbors, the plaintiffs will be able to enforce the existing judgment through contempt proceedings or obtain appropriate relief, including damages, by filing new actions alleging what the defendants have done and why they are entitled to redress (7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978-979) .

[b] Plaintiff Should Not Be Unjustly Enriched

Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 239 P.2d 625 , involved an action for damages and for injunctive relief by a homeowner against a neighbor because of leveling operations that the neighbor was conducting on his property. As a result of those operations, a large quantity of mud was washed down a canyon by heavy rains. The mud surrounded the plaintiff's house and inundated her garage. The trial court ordered the defendant to build protective structures to prevent future mudslides and also awarded damages for diminution in value due to the continuing threat of future mudslides.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment. The Court stated that the plaintiff would obtain a double recovery if she could recover for the depreciation in value and also have the cause of that depreciation removed. The Court reasoned that if the defendant obeys the injunction and takes measures that will prevent the property of the plaintiff from being endangered or threatened by the existence of deposits of loose dirt, there will no longer be a threat to depreciate the value of the property (38 Cal. 2d 265, 269) .

The facts and procedural background of Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 , are discussed in § 167.69[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that problems corrected through equitable relief may not be compensated through an award of damages. To hold otherwise, the court concluded, permits a plaintiff to be unjustly enriched, receiving financial compensation when there is no compensable loss (7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978) .

[c] Presumption That Defendant Will Comply With Valid Order

The facts and procedural background of Alexander v. McKnight (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 , are discussed in § 167.69[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the depreciation component of a damages award because the trial court had ordered abatement of the behavior giving rise to those damages. The court stated that the trial court omitted in its calculus of damages to be awarded the presumption that necessarily must accompany a valid court order, that is, a party will comply with its terms (7 Cal. App. 4th 973, 978) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 167 NUISANCE
PART II. FORMS

16-167 California Points & Authorities § 167.70

§ 167.70 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Entitled to Damages for Nuisance--Damages Not Recoverable for Diminution in Value for Continuing and Abatable Nuisance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT RECOVER DAMAGES FOR DIMINUTION OF VALUE OF PROPERTY CAUSED BY A CONTINUING BUT ABATABLE NUISANCE.

A. Damages Not Recoverable for Diminution in Value Caused by Continuing and Abatable Nuisance. California law does not recognize a recovery for diminution in value to property as a result of a continuing and abatable nuisance (Santa Fe Partnership v. ARCO Prods. Co. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 967, 973, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 214).

[Optional] B. Interest Rate Differential Damages Caused by Inability to Refinance Not Permitted. If the presence of a continuing nuisance impairs a real property owner's ability to obtain refinancing on the land, plaintiff cannot recover as damages for a continuing nuisance the difference in interest paid under the original loan and what would have been paid had plaintiff been able to obtain refinancing at a lower rate, as such damages are effectively a component of damages for diminution in value of the land and would be available only in an action for a permanent nuisance (Gehr v. Baker Hughes Oil Field Operations, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 660, 670-671, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 219).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's contention in a nuisance action that plaintiff is entitled to recover for the diminution in value to property as a result of a continuing and abatable nuisance.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that no recovery is allowed for the diminution in value to property as a result of a continuing and abatable nuisance. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

If appropriate, the points and authorities in § 167.48 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Not Recoverable for Diminution in Value Caused by Continuing and Abatable Nuisance

In Santa Fe Partnership v. ARCO Prods. Co. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 967, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 214 , property owners brought an action for nuisance against the prior owner of their property seeking damages for the diminution in value of their property due to continuing nuisance. When defendant owned the property it had underground gasoline storage tanks on the property. The tanks leaked into the soil and groundwater, and were subsequently removed. Defendant then began continuing remedial efforts to clean up the contamination. Plaintiffs acknowledged that they had not suffered any costs of abatement because defendant continued to remediate the contamination on the property. However, plaintiffs claimed damages for postcleanup stigma damages to the property. Plaintiffs stipulated to a defense judgment in order to immediately seek review to request an extension of the law which would entitle them to recover damages for diminution in value on a theory of continuing nuisance.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that under current California law, damages for diminution in value are not recoverable for a continuing and abatable nuisance. The court based its decision on the holding in Spaulding v. Cameron (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 265, 239 P.2d 625 , that a plaintiff-landowner cannot recover damages for future or prospective harm, including damages for diminution in value, in a case where the nuisance is deemed to be continuing and abatable (46 Cal. App. 4th 967, 975) . The court concluded that as an intermediate appellate court it was bound to follow and apply the decisions of the highest court which expressly disallowed prospective damages in cases of continuing nuisance (46 Cal. App. 4th 967, 978) .

[b] Interest Rate Differential Damages Caused by Inability to Refinance Not Permitted

In Gehr v. Baker Hughes Oil Field Operations, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 660, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 219 , plaintiff was unable to obtain refinancing on real property due to soil contamination caused by the previous owner. Because the time period for filing a claim for a permanent nuisance had expired, plaintiff sued the previous owner for a continuing nuisance and sought to recover the difference in interest paid under the original loan and what would have been paid in interest had plaintiff been able to obtain refinancing at a lower rate. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant on the grounds that plaintiff was attempting to recover damages for what was essentially a decline in property value, which could only be recovered in an action for a permanent nuisance. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that plaintiff's inability to encumber the property with a new trust deed, the only loss alleged, was not a physical injury to the property the type of which is normally the focus of an action for a continuing nuisance (165 Cal. App. 4th 660, 668) . The court agreed with the trial court that plaintiff could not recover damages for interest rate differential in an action for a continuing nuisance. The court concluded that the interest rate differential damages were effectively a component of damages for diminution in value of the land and as such would be available only in an action for a permanent nuisance (165 Cal. App. 4th 660, 670-671) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES

16-168 California Points & Authorities 168.syn

§ 168.syn Synopsis to Chapter 168: PARTIES

§ 168.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 168.02 Governing Statutes

§ 168.03 Use of Federal Authority

§ 168.04 Procedure

[1] Plaintiff Seeking Joinder of New Party

[2] Defendant Objecting to Misjoinder of Parties

[3] Defendant Objecting to Nonjoinder of Party Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)

[4] Omitted Party Seeking to Join Pending Action

[5] Statute of Limitations

§ 168.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 168.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 168.07-168.29 [Reserved]

§ 168.30 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

[b] Liberal Construction

[c] Extent of Interest Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

§ 168.31 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Suing Same Tortfeasor for Personal Injuries

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Suing Same Tortfeasor for Personal Injuries

§ 168.32 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs in Action Against Same Tortfeasor Involving Injury to Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs in Action Against Same Tortfeasor Involving Injury to Property

§ 168.33 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Seeking Damages Based on Single Scheme of Misrepresentation, Fraud, or Conspiracy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Seeking Damages Based on Single Scheme of Misrepresentation, Fraud, or Conspiracy

§ 168.34 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Taxpayers Challenging Validity of Assessment or Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Taxpayers Challenging Validity of Assessment

[b] Multiple Taxpayers Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid

§ 168.35 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Receiver of Corporation in Suit by Corporation to Recover Corporate Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Receiver of Corporation

§ 168.36 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Purchaser of Securities Sold by Defendant in Violation of Securities Laws

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Purchaser of Securities

§ 168.37 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Suing for Injuries From Ongoing Incident of Industrial Contamination

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Suing for Ongoing Industrial Contamination

§ 168.38 Opposing Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

§ 168.39 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

[b] Liberal Construction

[c] Extent of Interest Required

§ 168.40 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Guarantor of Debtor as Proper Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Guarantor of Debtor as Proper Party

§ 168.41 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Surety as Proper Party in Action Against Principal for Acts Covered by Suretyship Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety of Principal as Proper Party

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Surety of Principal as Proper Party

§ 168.42 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Insurer

as Proper Party When Policy Benefits Run Directly to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer as Proper Party

[b] Multiple Insurers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer as Proper Party

§ 168.43 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a),(c)]--Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

[b] When Plaintiff in Doubt as to Liability

[c] Liability Based on Negligence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

[b] When Plaintiff in Doubt as to Liability

§ 168.44 Opposing Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

[b] Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Is in Doubt as to Liability of Defendants

§ 168.45 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties

[b] Disposition of Action in Omitted Party's Absence Will Impair His or Her Ability to Protect Interest in Subject of Action

[c] Disposition of Action in Absence of Omitted Party Will Leave Existing Parties Subject to Risk of Double, Multiple, or Inconsistent Obligations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties

[b] Disposition of Action in Omitted Party's Absence Will Impair His or Her Ability to Protect Interest in Subject of Action

[c] Disposition of Action in Absence of Omitted Party Will Leave Existing Parties Subject to Risk of Double, Multiple, or Inconsistent Obligations

§ 168.46 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. §

389(a)--Partial Assignee or Subrogee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined

§ 168.47 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)--Corporation Required to Be Joined in Shareholder's Derivative Suit Brought on Its Behalf

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Shareholder's Derivative Action on Behalf of Corporation

§ 168.48 Opposing Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of

Omitted Party

[b] The Complete Relief Clause of Code of Civil Procedure 389(a) Does Not Mandate That, Whenever Feasible, Persons Materially Interested in the Subject of an Action Should Be Joined

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

[b] Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of Omitted Party

§ 168.49 Supporting Contention That Action Must Be Dismissed Without Prejudice Because Omitted Party Described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) Cannot Be Joined [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] When a Party Is Indispensable

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Omitted Party Not Subject to Court's Process

[b] Joinder of Omitted Party Would Deprive Court of Jurisdiction Over Subject Matter

§ 168.50 Opposing Contention That Action Must Be Dismissed Without Prejudice Because Omitted Party Described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) Cannot Be Joined [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Court Can Proceed If Joinder Not Feasible

[b] Time When Indispensability Tested

[c] Court Can Proceed in Absence of Necessary or Proper Parties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Court Can Proceed If Joinder Not Feasible

[b] Time When Indispensability Tested

[c] Court Can Proceed in Absence of Necessary or Proper Parties

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.01

§ 168.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities relating to permissive and compulsory joinder of parties. It contains points and authorities supporting [see §§ 168.30 -168.37] and opposing § 168.38 the contention that a particular person is a proper plaintiff under Code Civ. Proc. § 378, as well as points and authorities supporting [see §§ 168.39 -168.43] and opposing § 168.44 the contention that a particular person is a proper defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 379. The chapter also contains points and authorities supporting [see §§ 168.45 -168.47] and opposing § 168.48 the contention that a particular person is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) and points and authorities supporting § 168.49 and opposing § 168.50 dismissal of an action for failure to join a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureParties JoinderGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureParties JoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedureParties JoinderPermissive Joinder

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.02

§ 168.02 Governing Statutes

Permissive joinder of plaintiffs is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 378. Permissive joinder of defendants is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 379. Compulsory joinder is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 389. Joinder of persons having an interest in real or personal property that is the subject of an action between others to determine conflicting claims to the property is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 389.5.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.03

§ 168.03 Use of Federal Authority

The statutes governing joinder of parties were substantially revised in 1971 [see Stats. 1971, chs. 244, 950] to conform to Fed. R. Civ. P., Rules 19 and 20 [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 500, 515-517, 534-540]. Federal cases may therefore be useful as a guide in interpreting the amended joinder statutes [see People ex rel Lungren v. Community Redevelopment Agency (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 875, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 (as revised, Code Civ. Proc. § 389 conforms substantially to Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19 and cases relating to the federal rules are relevant); Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803 (appropriate to use federal precedents as guide to application of Code Civ. Proc. § 389)]. Some federal cases are cited in this chapter as authority in the forms relating to compulsory joinder of parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a); counsel may wish to consult these and other federal cases in support of their arguments when a particular issue has not been decided under the revised statutes by the California courts.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureFederal & State InterrelationshipsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.04

§ 168.04 Procedure

[1] Plaintiff Seeking Joinder of New Party

A plaintiff may join additional parties as plaintiffs or defendants in his or her original complaint or cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 378, 379, 389]. After the complaint has been filed, plaintiff may amend the complaint as a matter of course at any time before the answer or demurrer is filed or after demurrer and before trial of the issue of law thereon [see Code Civ. Proc. § 472]. Thereafter, the plaintiff may seek leave of the court to amend the pleading to add a new party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473]. For points and authorities pertaining to amendments to pleadings generally, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

If the omitted party is one who is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), the court must, if joinder is feasible, permit plaintiff to amend the complaint to add the new party [see De La Beckwith v. Superior Court (1905) 146 Cal. 496, 498, 80 P. 717 ; Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

[2] Defendant Objecting to Misjoinder of Parties

A defendant may object to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of parties by demurrer, if the ground of objection appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30(a)]. If the ground of objection does not appear on the face of the complaint, the objection should be taken by answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. The objection is waived unless it is raised by demurrer or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)].

[3] Defendant Objecting to Nonjoinder of Party Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)

Defendant may also raise the issue of defect (nonjoinder) of parties by demurrer or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30]. Normally, when a defendant fails to object to the pleading, either by demurrer or answer, he or she is deemed to have waived the objection unless it is an objection that the court has no jurisdiction of the subject of the cause of action alleged in the pleading or an objection that the pleading does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a)]. Some early cases stated that the failure to join a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 is a "jurisdictional" defect, implying that such a defect is not waived by failure to object to the complaint and can be raised for the first time on appeal [see, e.g., Bank of California v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 522, 106 P.2d 879] . This is apparently not the rule under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971 [see Kraus v. Willow Park Public Golf Course (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 364-365, 140 Cal. Rptr. 744 ; see also 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 500, 535-536; but see Welch v. Bodeman (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 833, 840, 222 Cal. Rptr. 435 (relying on case law decided prior to effective date of 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389, and holding that a trial court can be said to lack subject matter jurisdiction when the absence of a truly indispensable party precludes the court from rendering effective judgment between the parties before it)]. Thus, failure to raise the issue of nonjoinder of such a party in a timely fashion before the trial court may result in waiver of the defect, at least when the action does not adversely affect the interests of the absent party [see Kraus v. Willow Park Public Golf Course (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 369-370, 140 Cal. Rptr. 744] .

If the court finds that the nonparty is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), the action should not be dismissed on the demurrer; instead, the missing party should be joined, if joinder is feasible [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a); Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] . If the person cannot be made a party, the court must determine whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it, or should be dismissed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b); see also §§ 168.49, 168.50].

[4] Omitted Party Seeking to Join Pending Action

Ordinarily, Code Civ. Proc. § 389 is invoked by an existing party to a pending action. However, an omitted party may also seek an order under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 joining him or her as a new party by filing a noticed motion [see Cuneo v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 452, 454-456, 28 Cal. Rptr. 791] . If the action is for recovery of real or personal property, or to determine conflicting claims thereto, an omitted party who has an interest in the subject of the action may also apply under Code Civ. Proc. § 389.5 for an order that he or she be made a party to the action.

Alternatively, an omitted party may seek to join a pending action through intervention under Code Civ. Proc. § 387. For points and authorities pertaining to intervention, see Ch. 124, Intervention in this publication.

Should none of the foregoing steps be taken to join the unnamed party and the unnamed party nevertheless voluntarily intrudes into the lawsuit, the party, by the intrusion, has consented to the jurisdiction of the court over it and is bound by any adjudication made in the case [California Concrete Co. v. Beverly Hills Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 260, 267-268, 261 Cal. Rptr. 484] .

[5] Statute of Limitations

When an additional party plaintiff, joining in a suit brought before the statute of limitations has run against the original plaintiff, seeks to enforce an independent right, the amended pleading does not relate back so as to render substitution permissible or to preclude the defense of the statute of limitations [Basin Construction Corp. v. Department of Water & Power (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 819, 826, 245 Cal. Rptr. 178] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsLeave of CourtCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.05

§ 168.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms pertaining to joinder of parties and intervention, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion and forms relating to answers, complaints, and demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 26, Answers ; Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints ; and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , respectively (Matthew Bender). For discussion of abatement of actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePartiesInterventionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesInterventionMotions to InterveneCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProcedurePartiesJoinderPermissive Joinder

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.06

§ 168.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new party may be found in Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 16.30 et seq. Points and authorities supporting and opposing a demurrer to a complaint on the grounds of defect or misjoinder of parties may be found in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 71.20 et seq. Points and authorities supporting a motion for a separate trial of the issue of defect or misjoinder of parties may be found in Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions, § 10.30 et seq.

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to intervention, see Ch. 124, Intervention . For points and authorities pertaining to class actions and shareholder's derivative actions, see Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions and Ch. 52, Corporations , Pt. V, respectively.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPartiesJoinderCompulsory JoinderCivil ProceduresPartiesJoinderNecessary PartiesCivil ProceduresPartiesJoinderPermissive JoinderCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsCivil ProceduresPretrial MattersSeparate Trials

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-168 California Points & Authorities §§ 168.07-168.29

[Reserved]

§§ 168.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.30

§ 168.30 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED IN THIS ACTION AS A PLAINTIFF BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT HAS _____ [A RIGHT TO RELIEF _____ (JOINTLY or SEVERALLY or IN THE ALTERNATIVE) ARISING OUT OF THE SAME _____ (TRANSACTION OR OCCURRENCE or SERIES OF TRANSACTIONS OR OCCURRENCES) AND THERE EXISTS A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT and/or A RIGHT, CLAIM, OR INTEREST ADVERSE TO DEFENDANT IN THE _____ (PROPERTY or CONTROVERSY) THAT IS THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION BEFORE THE COURT].

A. Statutory Authority. Persons may join in an action as plaintiffs if (1) they assert a right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative, arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and any common question of law or fact will arise in the action, or (2) they have a claim, right, or interest adverse to the defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)).

B. Liberal Construction. Section 378 of the Code of Civil Procedure, authorizing joinder of plaintiffs in one action containing several causes of action arising out of identical or related transactions and involving common issues, should be liberally construed, to permit joinder whenever possible in furtherance of the statute (see Coleman v. Twin Coast Newspaper, Inc. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 653, 346 P.2d 488).

[Optional] C. Extent of Interest Required. It is not necessary that each plaintiff be interested as to every cause of action or as to all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given for one or more plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief (Code Civ. Proc. § 378(b)).

[Add additional points and authorities, if appropriate, pertaining to specific reasons why joinder of the particular person as a plaintiff is proper (see, e.g., §§ 168.31 -168.36).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, which govern permissive joinder of plaintiffs.

This form sets forth the general point that joinder of plaintiffs is proper when all the parties (1) can assert the same right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there will arise in the action questions of law and fact common to all; or (2) have a claim, right, or interest adverse to the defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new plaintiff may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to the objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of plaintiffs in the original complaint.

Paragraph B should be included in the points and authorities to support the contention that the statute permitting joinder should be liberally construed in furtherance of the objectives of the statute. The optional Paragraph C may be included when the complaint contains multiple causes of action and the party whose joinder is at issue is not interested in every cause of action of relief prayed for [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(b)].

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

If appropriate, counsel should add further points and authorities relating to specific reasons why the person whose joinder is at issue is a proper plaintiff under Code Civ. Proc. § 378 [see, e.g., §§ 168.31 -168.36].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion showing that all existing or prospective plaintiffs assert a right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences. Counsel should also discuss any common questions of law or fact that will arise in the action.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion, forms, and procedures relating to joinder of parties in an action, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new plaintiff, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

For points and authorities relating to cross complaints generally, see Ch. 61, Cross Complaints .

For points and authorities opposing a demurrer to a complaint for misjoinder of plaintiffs, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and

Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a), governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs, provides that all persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)(1)]; or they have a claim, right, or interest adverse to the defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)(2)].

This statute was amended in 1971 to its present form. The Legislative Committee Comment to the 1971 amendment states that Code Civ. Proc. § 378 continues the substance of former California law governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 378, as well as those portions of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 381, 383, and 384 under which joinder of plaintiffs was formerly permitted. The Legislative Committee Comment also states that subdivision (a)(1) is phrased in substantial conformity with FRCP, Rule 20(a), which governs permissive joinder of plaintiffs in federal actions. Under the federal rule, as well as under Code Civ. Proc. § 378, the Comment further states, the broadest sort of joinder is permitted.

According to the Legislative Committee Comment, Paragraph (2) of Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a), which provides that joinder is proper when a person has a claim, right, or interest adverse to the defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action, is not needed to expand the broad scope of permissive joinder under the transaction clause of subdivision (a)(1) of the statute. Paragraph (2), the Comment states, was included to eliminate any possibility that the omission of the "interest in the subject of the action" provision formerly found in Code Civ. Proc. § 378 [see, e.g., North v. Cecil B. DeMille Productions, Inc. (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 55, 57-58, 39 P.2d 199 (discussed in § 168.35, under [3], Receiver of Corporation in Suit by Corporation to Recover Corporate Property)], and the deletion of other permissive joinder provisions, might be construed to preclude joinder in cases where it was formerly permitted [see Legislative Committee Comment--Assembly, 1971 Amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378].

[b] Liberal Construction

The facts and procedural background of Coleman v. Twin Coast Newspaper, Inc. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 346 P.2d 488 , are discussed in § 168.38, under [3], Statutory Requirements Not Met. In Coleman, the court of appeal stated that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 378 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)] was to permit the joinder in one action of several causes of action arising out of identical or related transactions and involving common issues. The statute should be liberally construed, the court held, so as to permit joinder whenever possible in furtherance of this purpose (175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 653) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of a plaintiff (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment relating to prior California law concerning joinder of plaintiffs, see Statutory Authority, above.

[c] Extent of Interest Required

Code Civ. Proc. § 378(b) provides that it is not necessary that each plaintiff be interested as to every cause of action or as to all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief. This subsection was added in 1971 and corresponds to the similar provision in Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b), which governs permissive joinder of defendants in one action [see § 168.39].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

Garrison v. Hogan (1931) 112 Cal. App. 525, 297 P. 87 , was an action by owners of certain lands for cancellation of a lease of the lands in question. Plaintiffs each owned adjoining parcels of land; however, in leasing the lands to defendant, they executed a single-lease instrument of the two lands. The purpose for leasing the property was for oil exploration and development. Under the terms of the lease, development of oil exploration operations on either lot would have shown complete compliance with the terms of the lease with respect to both lots. On defendant's failure to commence oil development operations, plaintiffs brought their suit to cancel the lease. Defendant subsequently appealed from the judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiffs, contending, among other things, misjoinder of parties in that plaintiffs were not united in interest.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, among other things, held that there was a proper joinder of both plaintiffs in the action. The lands in question, the court stated, were leased to defendant under a single-lease instrument that treated the separate lots as one parcel, and the terms and intent of the lease agreement were that the conditions contained within the lease were for the equal benefit of each parcel. The underlying motive of the lease agreement, the court noted, was that oil development and exploration on one tract would inure equally to the benefit of the other. The facts of the case, the court concluded, came clearly within the terms of former Code Civ. Proc. § 378 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)], which provided that all persons could be joined in one action as plaintiffs who had an interest in the subject of the action or in whom any right to relief existed in respect to or arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions, when, if separate actions were brought, questions of law or fact common to all parties would arise (112 Cal. App. 525, 531-532) .

Counsel should note that the above case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of plaintiffs. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.31

§ 168.31 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Suing Same Tortfeasor for Personal Injuries

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A PLAINTIFF BECAUSE HIS/HER/ITS INJURIES WERE CAUSED BY THE SAME DEFENDANT IN THE SAME TRANSACTION AND A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT IS INVOLVED.

Multiple Plaintiffs Suing Same Tortfeasor for Personal Injuries. Multiple plaintiffs injured in the same accident or incident involving the same defendant may join in a single action for damages for personal injury (see Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 666, 67 P.2d 1046 ; Peters v. Bigelow (1934) 137 Cal. App. 135, 140, 30 P.2d 450 ; Colla v. Carmichael U--Drive Autos, Inc. (1931) 111 Cal. App. Supp. 784, 786, 294 P. 378).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, which govern permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that all persons having a right of action against the same tortfeasor for personal injuries arising out of the same accident or incident may be properly joined as plaintiffs. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new party plaintiff may be properly joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts showing that all actual or prospective plaintiffs suffered personal injuries as a result of the same accident or incident involving the same defendant and that there exists a question of law or fact common to all.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Suing Same Tortfeasor for Personal Injuries

Emery v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 663, 67 P.2d 1046 , involved an appeal by defendant insurer from a directed verdict in favor of plaintiffs, judgment creditors of insured. In rejecting defendant's assertion that joinder was improper in the previous action upon which plaintiff's claims were based, the Supreme Court held that joinder of such plaintiffs was proper in cases where several persons have sustained personal injuries in the same accident (8 Cal. 2d 663, 666) .

In Peters v. Bigelow (1934) 137 Cal. App. 135, 30 P.2d 450 , two plaintiffs filed an amended complaint containing two counts. The first count alleged a cause of action for false imprisonment arising out of an arrest by defendants of one plaintiff. The second count alleged the same matter, substituting the name of the second plaintiff and asserting that the same acts complained of in the first complaint were the same acts complained of in the second, differing only as to named individual. Defendants demurred to, among other things, misjoinder of parties, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend.

On appeal from the trial court's dismissal of the action, the court of appeal held that both plaintiffs were proper parties to the action. Citing Code Civ. Proc. § 378, the court concluded that the acts of the defendants in falsely arresting plaintiffs at the same time and the same place were one transaction within the meaning of the statute and gave rise to a cause of action by both plaintiffs against the same tortfeasors. Both plaintiffs, the court stated, could try their claims against defendants in a single cause of action, since it involved the same parties, the same witnesses, and a question of fact common to both plaintiffs (137 Cal. App.135, 140) .

In Colla v. Carmichael U--Drive Autos, Inc. (1931) 111 Cal. App. Supp. 784, 294 P. 378 , defendants appealed a judgment awarded to multiple plaintiffs in an action arising out of a collision between an automobile driven by one of the plaintiffs and another automobile driven by one of the defendants. The other plaintiffs were passengers in the car struck by the defendant driver.

In affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, the appellate department of the superior court rejected appellant's contention that the plaintiff passengers were misjoined in the suit. Citing Code Civ. Proc. § 378, the court held that all persons may be joined as plaintiffs in one action who have any right to relief arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions. Included in the term "transaction" are tortious or delictual doings, such as a collision of the two automobiles, out of which arise questions of law and fact common to all the injured plaintiffs. Furthermore, the court, citing a New York case interpreting the comparable New York statute, found that joinder in such a case is proper, because the purpose of the statute is to lessen the delay and expense of litigation by permitting the claims of different plaintiffs to be decided in one action instead of many and that a single proceeding could be had with fairness to the different parties (111 Cal. App. Supp. 784, 786-787) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, these cases still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of plaintiffs when all parties can assert the same right to relief for personal injuries arising out of the same accident or incident and caused by the same defendant (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of plaintiffs, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.32

§ 168.32 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs in Action Against Same Tortfeasor Involving Injury to Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A PLAINTIFF BECAUSE INJURIES TO HIS/HER/ITS PROPERTY AROSE OUT OF THE SAME INCIDENT AND INVOLVED THE SAME DEFENDANT AND THERE EXISTS A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT.

Multiple Plaintiffs in Action Against Same Tortfeasor Involving Injury to Property. All parties having an interest in property injured by the same defendant in the same incident may be joined as plaintiffs in a single action against that defendant arising out of that incident (see Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 273-274, 86 P.2d 127).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, which govern permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that all persons having a right of action against the same tortfeasor for injuries to property in which they have an interest, when the injuries arose out of the same incident, may be properly joined as plaintiff in a single action. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new party plaintiff may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts showing that all actual or prospective plaintiffs suffered injuries to property in which they had an interest and those injuries arose out of the same accident or incident and involved the same defendant and that there exists a question of law or fact common to all.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs in Action Against Same Tortfeasor Involving Injury to Property

Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 86 P.2d 127 , arose out of an action for an accounting or for damages and for injunctive relief resulting to property held by holders of separate oil and gas leases on various tracts of property adjacent to property held by defendants as tenants in common. Plaintiffs alleged that defendants' slant drilling of a well on their property crossed over and came within the boundary lines of the respective leaseholds of the plaintiffs, consequently drawing oil from property in which plaintiffs had exclusive oil and gas rights. Plaintiff leaseholders each brought separate actions against defendants. After Union Oil brought its action, defendants, in a separate action, were adjudicated bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy was joined in the Union Oil action. At a later time, Texas Oil Co., the other leaseholder, also brought suit, and the trustee in bankruptcy was joined in that action as well. Subsequently, both actions were consolidated for trial. Plaintiffs abandoned the claims for an accounting or for damages, and sought only the injunctive relief. The trial court granted the requested relief and defendants appealed, contending, among other things, that there was a misjoinder of plaintiffs.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. Addressing itself to the issue of misjoinder of parties, the court answered defendants' assertions by pointing out that Code Civ. Proc. § 378, as amended in 1927 [subsequently amended in 1971; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)], liberalized the rules pertaining to joinder of parties to permit joinder of plaintiffs under circumstances such as presented in this action (30 Cal. App. 2d. 266, 273) .

Counsel should note that the court of appeal did not directly address the issue of joinder of plaintiffs. In this case, the separate causes of action were joined at the trial court level. The court pointed out that defendants failed to object at that time to the order for consolidation. Consequently, concluded the court, any misjoinder of plaintiffs, if there was a misjoinder, was without prejudice to defendants (30 Cal. App. 2d. 266, 274) .

This case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of plaintiffs when all parties can assert the same right to relief for injury to property arising out of the same incident and caused by the same defendant (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of plaintiffs, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.33

§ 168.33 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Seeking Damages Based on Single Scheme of Misrepresentation, Fraud, or Conspiracy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS PLAINTIFF BECAUSE HIS/HER/ITS CAUSE OF ACTION ARISES OUT OF THE SAME SCHEME AS, AND INVOLVES _____ [MISREPRESENTATION and/or FRAUD and/or CONSPIRACY] THAT IS EXACTLY SIMILAR IN KIND AND MANNER OF OPERATION TO, THAT ALLEGED BY THE OTHER PLAINTIFF(S) IN THIS ACTION AND INVOLVES A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT.

Multiple Plaintiffs Seeking Damages Based on Single Scheme of Misrepresentation, Fraud, or Conspiracy. A right to relief arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions exists when plaintiffs whose causes of action are based upon misrepresentation, fraud, or conspiracy allege a single scheme depending on the same basic misrepresentations and leading to a series of transactions exactly similar in kind and manner of operation (see Aldrich v. Transcontinental Land & Water Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 795, 281 P.2d 362 ; Adams v. Albany (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 639, 646, 269 P.2d 142).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, which govern permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that all persons having a right of action against the same defendant for damages based on a single scheme of misrepresentation, fraud, or conspiracy may properly be joined as plaintiffs in a single action. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new party plaintiff may be properly joined in a pending action, or to respond to the objection, by demurrer or answer, to the joinder of any or all of the plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the alleged misrepresentation, fraud, or conspiracy involving the party whose joinder is at issue that shows that the representations made by defendant were of the same nature as those made to other plaintiffs, that they were part of a general scheme to defraud the public, that they led to a series of transactions exactly similar in kind and operation, and that there exists a common question of law and fact that can be more expeditiously tried in one action than in a series of actions. In addition, counsel may wish to show that multiple actions would result in a duplication of the evidence.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Seeking Damages Based on Single Scheme of Misrepresentation, Fraud, or Conspiracy

Aldrich v. Transcontinental Land & Water Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 281 P.2d 362 , arose out of an action pendente lite involving 98 plaintiffs who brought suit for money had and received. Plaintiffs alleged that defendants had entered into a scheme to cheat and defraud the public, including plaintiffs, in a real estate venture. Defendants appealed an order of the superior court enjoining them from seeking to enforce or prosecute any actions in the municipal court by assignees seeking to collect on some of the contracts involved in the action in superior court. Defendants contended that there was a misjoinder of parties in that the cause of action affected different pieces of property and separate contracts involving each plaintiff, and the alleged misrepresentations occurred at different times and places and concerned different pieces of property.

The court of appeal found contrary to defendant's contentions and affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court stated that the causes of action presented questions of law and fact common to all parties, and arising out of the same series of transactions, and that there was no misjoinder of parties (131 Cal. App. 2d. 788, 796) . In reaching this conclusion, the court relied on similar cases that had arisen in California and New York in which the courts had found that (1) there existed a community of interest between all plaintiffs who had relied upon the alleged misrepresentations, (2) there was a common question of law and fact as to the intent of the defendants to defraud the plaintiffs, and (3) the purchases by plaintiffs at different times and places for different amounts were all factual variations of the same series of transactions (131 Cal. App. 2d. 788, 794-796) .

In Adams v. Albany (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 639, 269 P.2d 142, 78 plaintiffs sued for damages for civil conspiracy and fraud in the sale of houses to certain World War II veterans. Demurrers were sustained, some with leave to amend, others without, and plaintiffs elected to appeal from the judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment on the causes of action concerning the fraudulent conspiracy, holding that the trial court erred in sustaining the demurrers without leave to amend on grounds of misjoinder. The court of appeal found that there existed a community of interest in the questions of law and fact presented, in that one scheme was alleged, based upon conspiracy and fraud, which depended on the same basic misrepresentations, and led to a series of transactions exactly similar in kind and manner of operation, which affected all the plaintiffs. Although the court noted that the individual agreements and instruments involved incidental variations in details affecting different plaintiffs, nonetheless, the controlling questions of law relating to liability were the same with respect to all of the plaintiffs. Also, though some of the evidence about details and amounts varied, a large part of the evidence concerning one of the series of transactions applied equally to the others (124 Cal. App. 2d. 639, 646-647) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, these cases still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of plaintiffs when all parties assert the same right to relief arising out of a single scheme of misrepresentation, fraud, or conspiracy, against the same defendant (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378 relating to prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of plaintiffs, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.34

§ 168.34 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Taxpayers Challenging Validity of Assessment or Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Names] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS PLAINTIFFS IN THIS ACTION BECAUSE THEY ARE ALL TAXPAYERS SEEKING _____[TO ATTACK THE VALIDITY OF A TAX ASSESSMENT or TO RECOVER TAXES PAID UNDER PROTEST] AND THERE EXISTS A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT.

[EITHER]

Multiple Taxpayers Challenging Validity of Assessment. Taxpayers seeking to challenge the validity of a tax assessment may properly be joined in one cause of action (see DeMille v. County of Los Angeles (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508, 77 P.2d 905 ; General Engineering and Dry Dock Co. v. East Bay MUD (1932) 126 Cal. App. 349, 14 P.2d 828).

[OR]

Multiple Taxpayers Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid. Taxpayers seeking to recover taxes paid under protest may properly be joined in one cause of action (see People's Federal Savings & Loan Assn. v. State Franchise Tax Bd. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 696, 699, 243 P.2d 902 ; DeMille v. County of Los Angeles (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508, 77 P.2d 905).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that all persons having a right as taxpayers to challenge the validity of the same tax assessment or to seek recovery of the same type of taxes paid under protest may properly be joined in a single action against the same taxing authority. This form may be used either to support the contention that a new plaintiff may properly be joined in a pending action, or to respond to the objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of any or all of the plaintiffs in the original complaint. The first alternative paragraph should be used when the joinder of a party in an action challenging the validity of a tax assessment is at issue. The second alternative paragraph should be used when the joinder of a party in an action to recover taxes paid under protest is at issue.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the tax assessment or taxes paid under protest and show that all parties joined as plaintiff are challenging the same tax assessed by the same defendant taxing authority on the same grounds. Counsel should also show that the determination of the legality of the assessment or collection would affect all plaintiffs in the same manner.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Taxpayers Challenging Validity of Assessment

DeMille v. County of Los Angeles (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 77 P.2d 905 , was an action to have declared void an assessment on property levied by the County of Los Angeles and for recovery of taxes paid under protest [see discussion under Multiple Taxpayers Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid, infra]. Defendant's demurrer on grounds of misjoinder of parties and failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action was overruled by the trial court.

On appeal by defendant from the judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiffs, the court of appeal upheld the trial court's ruling on the demurrer regarding misjoinder of parties. Citing Code Civ. Proc. § 378, [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)], as amended in 1927, the court concluded that there were questions of law common to all of the parties mentioned as plaintiff, since the validity of the assessment was attacked upon the same ground by all and the decision on the law involved in the case necessarily would determine the rights of each of the plaintiffs (25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508) .

As to the question of fact common to all the parties, the court found that the rate of assessment would be the same for all properties levied upon, the only different questions being the value of the properties and the amount of assessment. Under the circumstances, the court found no actual or possible disadvantage to defendant by the joinder of all plaintiffs in one suit (25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508) .

In General Engineering and Dry Dock Co. v. East Bay MUD (1932) 126 Cal. App. 349, 14 P.2d 828 , plaintiffs appealed the trial court's judgment sustaining demurrers to the complaint challenging the validity of a tax assessment. The court of appeal, while affirming the lower court's order finding that the complaints were insufficient, nonetheless held that there had been no misjoinder of parties and that the plaintiffs therefore had properly been joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 378 (126 Cal. App. 349, 356) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, they still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as plaintiffs of taxpayers seeking to challenge the validity of the same type of tax assessment (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378, see § 168.30[3][a].

[b] Multiple Taxpayers Seeking Recovery of Taxes Paid

People's Federal Savings & Loan Assn. v. State Franchise Tax Bd. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 696, 243 P.2d 902 , involved an action by 29 taxpayers for a refund of taxes paid under the Bank and Corporations Franchise Tax Act. Defendant appealed an adverse judgment in the trial court on grounds of, among other things, misjoinder of parties.

In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal found that there was no misjoinder of plaintiffs. The court held that there was the same question of law applicable to all parties, and that the decision on that point of law would necessarily determine the rights of all of the plaintiffs. If successful, all plaintiffs would be entitled to the same relief, differing only in the amount of refund each plaintiff claimed to be entitled to (110 Cal. App. 2d 696, 699) .

DeMille v. County of Los Angeles (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 77 P.2d 905 , discussed under § 168.34[3][a] above, also concerned the recovery of taxes paid. In affirming the trial court's overruling of defendant's demurrer on the ground of misjoinder, the court of appeal held that joinder was proper in an action by taxpayers seeking to recover taxes paid under protest (25 Cal. App. 2d 506, 508) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, these cases still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as plaintiffs of taxpayers seeking recovery of the same type of taxes paid under protest (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.35

§ 168.35 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Receiver of Corporation in Suit by Corporation to Recover Corporate Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS PLAINTIFF BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT, AS A RECEIVER OF PLAINTIFF CORPORATION, HAS AN INTEREST ADVERSE TO THE DEFENDANT IN THE PROPERTY WHICH IS THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION BEFORE THE COURT.

Receiver of Corporation. A receiver of a corporation, having equitable title over property of the corporation, has an interest in property claimed by the corporation and is a proper plaintiff in an action to recover the property (see North v. Cecil B. DeMille Productions, Inc. (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 55, 57-58, 39 P.2d 199).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that a receiver of a corporation has an interest in the property claimed by that corporation and may properly be joined in an action by the corporation to recover the property claimed. This form may be used either to support the contention that a new plaintiff may properly be joined in a pending action, or to respond to the objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of any or all of the plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the status of the receiver of the corporation whose property is sought to be recovered.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Receiver of Corporation

In North v. Cecil B. DeMille Productions, Inc. (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 55, 39 P.2d 199 , the receiver of a bankrupt corporation joined in an action by the bankrupt corporation to recover usurious interest rates paid to defendant. Defendant demurred to the complaint on grounds, among others, that there was a misjoinder of parties. The demurrer was sustained with leave to amend; however, plaintiffs elected to stand upon their pleading, and judgment was rendered dismissing them from the action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the trial court, holding that there was a proper joinder of parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 378. A receiver, said the Court, holds equitable title to the corporation's property and is charged with securing the corporation's property so that it may be appropriated in accordance with the rights of the parties as they may be determined in bankruptcy proceedings. Consequently, having an equitable trust in the money paid to defendant by the corporation, the receiver had an interest in the subject matter of the action (2 Cal. 2d 55, 57-58) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as plaintiffs of persons having an interest in the subject of the action (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378 on cases decided under the "subject of the action" language employed by the former statute, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.36

§ 168.36 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Purchaser of Securities Sold by Defendant in Violation of Securities Laws

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS ONE OF THE PLAINTIFFS BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT WAS A PURCHASER OF SECURITIES SOLD BY THE SAME DEFENDANT IN VIOLATION OF THE SECURITIES LAWS.

Purchaser of Securities. Purchasers of securities sold in violation of the securities laws have an interest in the subject of the action and may properly be joined in an action to recover money had and received (see Parmely v. Boone (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 517, 519, 96 P.2d 164).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the point that all persons who purchased securities from the same seller, who sold them in violation of the laws regulating the sale of securities, may join in a single action against the seller for recovery of their investment money. This form may be used either to support the contention that a new plaintiff may properly be joined in a pending action, or to respond to the objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of any or all of the plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.30 in support of the contention that joinder of a person as a plaintiff in an action is proper if he or she can assert the same right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a common question of law and fact.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new plaintiff or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion showing that all plaintiffs were purchasers of securities from defendant, who sold the securities in violation of the securities laws.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.38 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of plaintiffs is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Purchaser of Securities

Parmely v. Boone (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 517, 96 P.2d 164 , involved four plaintiffs suing in one complaint upon four separate causes of action for money had and received relating to purported sales of securities in violation of the Corporate Securities Act. Judgment was entered against defendant, awarding specific amounts to each plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal found that there was no misjoinder of plaintiffs, holding that under Code Civ. Proc. § 378, it was permissible to join as plaintiffs in one action those who have an interest in the subject of the action when the questions of law and fact which would arise would be common to all the parties (35 Cal. App. 2d 517, 519) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as plaintiffs of persons having an interest in the subject of the action (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378 on cases decided under the "subject of the action" language employed by the former statute, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.37

§ 168.37 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--Multiple Plaintiffs Suing for Injuries From Ongoing Incident of Industrial Contamination

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see § 168.30).]

_____ [Name(s)] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS [ONE OF THE] PLAINTIFF[S] BECAUSE _____ [HIS/HER OR THEIR] INJURIES WERE CAUSED BY EXPOSURE TO INDUSTRIAL CONTAMINATION IN ONE LOCATION OVER A PERIOD OF YEARS.

Multiple Plaintiffs Suing for Ongoing Industrial Contamination. Persons alleging injuries resulting from exposure of themselves or family members to industrial contamination in one location over a period of years may properly be joined as plaintiffs in an action for resulting damages (Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that one or more persons may properly be joined as plaintiffs under Code Civ. Proc. § 378 governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs. The foregoing form sets out the point that persons who allege injuries from exposure to industrial contamination in one location over a period of years may properly be joined as plaintiffs [Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520] .

The foregoing form may be used either to support the contention that new plaintiffs may properly be joined in a pending action, or to respond to defendant's objection to the joinder of any plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The foregoing form should be combined with the general form of points and authorities set out in § 168.30. The foregoing may also be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural contexts in which the issue of joinder arises.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Multiple Plaintiffs Suing for Ongoing Industrial Contamination

In Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520 , numerous employees of defendant corporation and their family members initiated two actions (treated as one for convenience on appeal) for injuries allegedly caused by exposure of the employees over a period of years to certain hazardous chemicals at one of defendant's industrial plants. The trial court granted defendants' demurrer on the ground that plaintiffs were misjoined in the two actions. Plaintiffs petitioned for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the writ. The court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 378 a finding of misjoinder was proper only if either (1) plaintiffs had not asserted rights to relief arising from one series of transactions or occurrences, or (2) no question of law of fact common to all plaintiffs would arise in the action (160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 231) . The court concluded that plaintiffs' allegations that the employees were exposed to harmful chemicals over a period of many years at one location by inhalation, drinking, and physical contact showed that they were all involved in the same series of transactions or occurrences and established that common issues of fact and law abounded (160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233) . The fact that each employee was not exposed on every other occasion that any other employee was exposed did not destroy the community of interest linking the plaintiffs. The court stated further that certain differences in evidence and legal theories to be presented by plaintiffs did not negate propriety of joinder since Code Civ. Proc. § 378 permits joinder when any question of law or fact common to all plaintiffs will arise (160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.38

§ 168.38 Opposing Contention That Joinder of Person as Plaintiff Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] CANNOT PROPERLY BE JOINED AS PLAINTIFF, BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT HAS NOT ALLEGED THAT HE/SHE/IT HAS A RIGHT TO RELIEF ARISING OUT OF THE SAME TRANSACTION OR OCCURRENCE OR SERIES OF TRANSACTIONS OR OCCURRENCES, AND THAT THERE EXISTS A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT, OR THAT HE/SHE/IT HAS A RIGHT, CLAIM, OR INTEREST ADVERSE TO THE DEFENDANT IN THE PROPERTY OR TRANSACTION WHICH IS THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION.

Statutory Requirements Not Met. Joinder of plaintiffs under Code Civ. Proc. § 378 is improper when the parties joined do not have a right to relief arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there is no question of law or fact common to all of them, and when all the parties joined do not have a claim, interest, or right adverse to defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 378; see also Coleman v. Twin Coast Newspaper, Inc. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 654, 346 P.2d 488).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a person may properly be joined as a plaintiff under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 378, governing permissive joinder of plaintiffs. This form sets forth the general point that joinder of plaintiffs is not proper unless the criteria of Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a) are satisfied. The form may be used either to oppose the contention that a new plaintiff may properly be joined in the action before the court or to oppose the joinder of plaintiffs in the original complaint.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a defendant in opposition to plaintiff's motion for leave to amend the complaint to add a new plaintiff or in support of a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For discussion of procedures for obtaining and objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the interest of the party whose joinder is at issue and how that interest is insufficient to permit joinder under Code Civ. Proc. § 378.

In an appropriate case this form may be used in opposition to the contention that a person or persons are properly joined as plaintiffs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a), as supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 168.30 -168.36.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new plaintiff, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

For points and authorities relating to cross complaints generally, see Ch. 64, Cross Complaints .

For a form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a complaint for misjoinder of plaintiffs, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

Coleman v. Twin Coast Newspaper, Inc. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 346 P.2d 488 , arose out of actions for damages for alleged trespasses and conversions against three defendants. Each plaintiff set forth a separate cause of action against the three defendants alleging a joint venture by defendants to molest, hinder, and discredit the particular plaintiff by conducting an alleged investigation into his practice of chiropractic in which defendants entered the premises without consent, took photographs, inspected files, ransacked through papers, and committed other related acts. Plaintiffs also separately alleged conversion against two of the defendants. Each cause of action referred only to the particular plaintiff involved. One of the defendants demurred on the ground of misjoinder of parties. The demurrer was sustained and the action was dismissed against that defendant. Plaintiffs appealed from the judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court, holding that plaintiffs failed to show that plaintiffs had any community of interest. They were three separate and distinct plaintiffs suing for alleged trespasses on separate and distinct premises and for alleged conversions of separate and distinct property. These events, the court concluded, did not constitute a single transaction, and nothing was alleged to show a series of transactions (175 Cal. App. 2d 650, 654) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of plaintiffs (see, e.g., Anaya v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 228, 232, 206 Cal. Rptr. 520). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 378, see § 168.30[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.39

§ 168.39 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED IN THIS ACTION AS A DEFENDANT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS _____ [A RIGHT TO RELIEF _____ (JOINTLY or SEVERALLY or IN THE ALTERNATIVE), ARISING OUT OF THE SAME _____ (TRANSACTION OR OCCURRENCE or SERIES OF TRANSACTIONS OR OCCURRENCES) AND THERE EXISTS A QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT COMMON TO, and/or A RIGHT, CLAIM, OR INTEREST ADVERSE TO, _____ (name)) IN THE _____ (PROPERTY or CONTROVERSY) WHICH IS THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION BEFORE THE COURT].

A. Statutory Authority. All persons may be joined in a pending action as defendants if (1) there is asserted against them any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action, or (2) there is asserted against them a claim, right, or interest adverse to them in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)).

B. Liberal Construction. Joinder of parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 379 should be permitted whenever possible and practicable to allow the settlement of all matters of controversy between the parties in one action (Dallman Supply Co. v. Sweet (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 784, 195 P.2d 864 ; see also Shotwell v. Bloom (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 303, 308-309, 140 P.2d 728).

[Optional] C. Extent of Interest Required. It is not necessary that each defendant be interested as to every cause of action or as to all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities (Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b); see Lawler v. Gleason (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 390, 393-394, 279 P.2d 70).

[Add additional points and authorities, if appropriate, pertaining to specific reasons why joinder of the particular person as a defendant is proper (see, e.g., §§ 168.40 -168.43).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the general point that joinder of defendants is proper when there can be asserted against all defendants any right to relief, jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there will arise in the action questions of law and fact common to all defendants; or when there can be asserted against all defendants a claim, right, or interest adverse to them in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new party defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of defendants in the original complaint.

Paragraph B should be included in the points and authorities to support the contention that the statute permitting joinder of defendants should be liberally construed in furtherance of the objectives of the statute. The optional Paragraph C may be included when the complaint contains multiple causes of action and the party whose joinder is at issue is not interested in every cause of action or all relief prayed for [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b)].

If appropriate, counsel should add further points and authorities relating to specific reasons why the person whose joinder is at issue is a proper defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 379 [see, e.g., §§ 168.40 -168.43].

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the right to relief asserted by plaintiff in the action and show that plaintiff's right to relief against all existing or prospective defendants arose out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and there exists a question of law and fact common to all defendants.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 168.44 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention that joinder of defendants is proper on grounds supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to joinder of defendants, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities in support of a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new defendant, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

For points and authorities relating to cross complaints generally, see Ch. 64, Cross Complaints .

For points and authorities opposing a demurrer to a complaint for misjoinder of defendants, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority

Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a), governing permissive joinder of defendants, provides that all persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, and any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)(1)]; or if there is asserted against them a claim, right, or interest adverse to them in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)(2)].

This statute was amended in 1971 to its present form. The Legislative Committee Comment to the 1971 amendment states that the liberal joinder rules of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a, 379b, 379c, 380, and 383 were replaced by the even broader transaction test as set forth in FRCP, Rule 20. However, in so doing, the Comment advises, the amended section probably merely made explicit what was implicit in prior decisions. The Legislative Committee Comment also states that Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)(2) was included merely to make clear that Code Civ. Proc. § 379 as amended permitted joinder in any case where it formerly was permitted [see Legislative Committee Comment--Assembly, 1971 Amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379].

[b] Liberal Construction

In Dallman Supply Co. v. Sweet (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 195 P.2d 864 , plaintiff's assignor entered into an agreement to supply coolers and electric motors to defendant Sweet for installation at a federal housing project. Plaintiff subsequently entered into an agreement with defendant Royal to purchase the specified equipment. After the equipment was delivered to the housing project, it was discovered that it was not to specifications and the equipment was rejected by the housing authority. Plaintiff informed defendant Royal of the rejection and both parties attempted to find the proper equipment but were unable to do so. The housing authority later agreed to accept the equipment subject to revised specifications, thereby increasing the installation costs, which were borne by defendant Sweet. Sweet then installed the equipment and, after notice to plaintiff, deducted the additional installment costs from the amount of the purchase price due plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action for declaratory relief against both defendants, alleging that a controversy existed between itself and both defendants about the meaning of the specifications. The complaint alleged that plaintiff was in doubt which one of the defendants should be held liable and sought in the alternative money due from Sweet on the original purchase of the equipment or damages against Royal for its failure to provide equipment as specified in the contract. Defendant Royal filed a motion for an order changing venue from the county where the action was commenced, in which defendant Sweet resided, to the county in which Royal had its principal place of business. The trial court granted the motion, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order, holding that both defendants had properly been joined pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)] and that the motion to change venue from the county where defendant Sweet resided was therefore improperly granted. In so holding, the court noted that the courts have consistently held that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure governing joinder should be liberally construed, permitting joinder whenever possible in furtherance of the objects of the procedure, that is, to simplify the pleadings and conduct of actions and, so far as practicable, to permit the settlement of all matters of controversy between the parties in one action (86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 784) .

In Shotwell v. Bloom (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 303, 140 P.2d 728 , plaintiffs brought an action against their employer and its landlord to recover the value of their personal effects, which were lost in a fire that destroyed the premises provided for them by their employers and owned by the landlord. The defendant landlord demurred to the complaint on the ground, among others, that there was a misjoinder of causes of action and of parties. During the course of the trial, plaintiffs dismissed the action against their employer and received a verdict in their favor against the landlord. Defendant landlord appealed the judgment entered on the verdict.

The court of appeal found the trial court's overruling of the demurrer proper, holding that the rules of joinder of defendants had been so broadened that Code Civ. Proc. § 379 now permitted joinder as a defendant a person who is a necessary party to a complete determination or settlement of the question involved (60 Cal. App. 2d 303, 308) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, they still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of defendants (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see Statutory Authority, above.

[c] Extent of Interest Required

Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b) provides that it is not necessary that each defendant be interested as to every cause of action or as to all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given against one or more defendants according to their respective liabilities.

This section as amended is the same as former Code Civ. Proc. § 379b, and prior case law interpreting this section is not affected. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment relating to prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

In Lawler v. Gleason (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 390, 279 P.2d 70 , plaintiff filed a complaint containing three counts against defendant sheriff and three other persons. The first count sought a declaration of the rights of the parties under various certificates of redemption issued by defendant sheriff to determine whether a tender by one of the other defendants to the sheriff of a certain amount of money was sufficient to redeem the property rather than the larger amount demanded by plaintiff. The second cause of action sought to quiet plaintiff's title to the real property in question against the claims of the other named defendants. The third cause of action sought a writ of mandate to compel defendant sheriff to make and record a sheriff's deed to the property and to deliver it to plaintiff. The sheriff demurred to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants, among other grounds. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment entered in defendant sheriff's favor.

The court of appeal reversed the order of the trial court, which had sustained the demurrer, holding that the sheriff was a proper and necessary party to the action, even though he made no claim to the property and was therefore not directly interested in the quiet title action. The sheriff was, however, interested in the action seeking determination of the rights of plaintiff and the other defendants regarding the various certificates of redemption issued by the sheriff, as well as in the action seeking the writ of mandate to compel him to make, record, and deliver a deed of the property to plaintiff. The court stated that it was not necessary for each named defendant to be made a party to each pleaded cause of action. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 379b [repealed; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b)], named defendants need not be interested in or affected by all of the relief requested or every cause of action set forth in the complaint (130 Cal. App. 2d 390, 393-394) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of the extent of interest required by defendants joined in a single action (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.40

§ 168.40 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Guarantor of Debtor as Proper Party

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of defendants (see § 168.39).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A DEFENDANT BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT IS LIABLE AS A GUARANTOR FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE NOTE SIGNED BY THE DEFENDANT DEBTOR.

Guarantor of Debtor as Proper Party. Joinder as defendants of a debtor and guarantor in one cause of action to recover judgment on a note is proper (Rodabaugh v. Kauffman (1921) 53 Cal. App. 676, 682, 200 P. 747).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the point that a guarantor of a defendant debtor may properly be joined as a defendant in an action against the debtor for recovery of the debt. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of defendants in the original complaint.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.39.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should indicate the relevant facts concerning the party's status as a guarantor of the instrument executed by the defendant debtor.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.44 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Guarantor of Debtor as Proper Party

In Rodabaugh v. Kauffman (1921) 53 Cal. App. 676, 200 P. 747 , plaintiff brought an action to recover on a promissory note, joining as defendants the maker of the note and two separate guarantors, one for the full amount of the note, and one for half the amount. Plaintiff prevailed at trial, and defendants appealed the judgment against them. The defendant guarantor who had guaranteed only half the amount of the note contended that it could not be sued in the same cause of action as that of the maker of the note.

The court of appeal, in rejecting this contention, held that if the guaranty is on the same instrument, the guarantor is properly joined as a party with the maker of the note. Likewise, when the guaranty is executed on a separate paper, as in appellant's case, the guarantor is properly joined if the guaranty was part of the same transaction, was demanded by the payee, and was agreed to by the guarantor before the note was executed (53 Cal. App. 676, 682) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of a guarantor and his or her debtor in an action to recover the debt (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see 168.38[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.41

§ 168.41 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Surety as Proper Party in Action Against Principal for Acts Covered by Suretyship Agreement

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of defendants (see § 168.39).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A DEFENDANT BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT IS LIABLE AS A SURETY FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE SURETY BOND FOR ACTS COMMITTED BY THE DEFENDANT PRINCIPAL.

Surety of Principal as Proper Party. Joinder of a principal and its surety as defendants is permitted in an action for damages against the principal for tortious acts committed by the principal against the plaintiff (see Kane v. Mendenhall (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 749, 755, 56 P.2d 498).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the point that a surety of a defendant principal may properly be joined as a defendant in an action against the principal relating to acts of the principal covered by the suretyship agreement. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of defendants in the original complaint.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.39.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should indicate the relevant facts concerning the party's status as a surety for the other defendant.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.44 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety of Principal as Proper Party

Kane v. Mendenhall (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 749, 56 P.2d 498 , was an action to procure cancellation of a deed involving as defendants both a real estate broker and the surety on the broker's bond. The trial court rendered judgment against both the broker and the surety, and defendant surety company appealed on grounds of misjoinder of causes of action and of parties. Defendant contended that since its liability was only for the amount of the surety bond, an amount wholly within the jurisdictional limits of the municipal court, plaintiff had improperly joined it to its cause of action against the broker.

The Supreme Court rejected the surety's claim of misjoinder. The Court held that plaintiff had a right to join both defendants in one cause of action under the Real Estate Broker's Act as well as under Code Civ. Proc. § 379, which permits joinder of defendants when causes of action arise out of the same transaction and involve common questions (5 Cal. 2d 749, 752-755) . It would be unfortunate, the Court said, to require plaintiff to prosecute two separate actions. The liability of the principal and the liability of the surety, though differing in amount, rest alike upon the acts of fraud committed by the principal to the damage of the plaintiff and require the examination of questions common to both principal and surety (5 Cal. 2d 749, 751) . The Court also held that the differing amounts of liability, the principal for the full amount of damages suffered, and the surety only for the amount of the bond were not a bar to the superior court having jurisdiction over the matter, since the principal's liability was within the jurisdictional limits of that court (5 Cal. 2d 749, 755-757) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of a surety and its principal in an action against the principal for acts covered by the surety agreement. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Surety of Principal as Proper Party

Dreher v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 695, 307 P.2d 407 , involved a suit against certain detectives and their sureties arising out of an investigation of plaintiff. On appeal from an order granting a change of venue to defendants, the court of appeal noted that joinder as defendants of the principal and surety was entirely proper, since liability rested alike on acts committed by the principal to the damage of plaintiff and required the examination of questions common to both principal and surety (148 Cal. App. 2d 695, 700) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of a surety and its principal in an action against the principal for acts covered by the surety agreement (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.42

§ 168.42 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]--Insurer as Proper Party When Policy Benefits Run Directly to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of defendants (see § 168.38)].

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A PARTY DEFENDANT BECAUSE IT IS LIABLE AS AN INSURER ON A POLICY WHOSE BENEFITS RUN DIRECTLY TO PLAINTIFF.

A. Insurer as Proper Party. Joinder of plaintiff's, defendant's, or a third party's insurer as a defendant in an action for damages is proper when the benefits of the contract between insured and insurer run directly to the plaintiff (see Zak v. State Farm etc. Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 500, 505, 42 Cal. Rptr. 908).

[Optional] B. Multiple Insurers. When the same person or thing is insured by two or more insurers separately in respect to the same subject and interest, any or all of the insurers may be joined in a single action for recovery of a loss under the several policies (see Fageol Truck & Coach Co. v. Pacific Indemnity Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 748, 754, 117 P.2d 669).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the point that an insurer may be joined as a defendant when the benefits of its policy with the insured run to the benefit of the plaintiff. The optional points and authorities may be included when an insurer is one of two or more insurers providing policy coverage in respect to the same subject and interest [Paragraph B]. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of defendants in the original complaint.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.39.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should indicate the relevant facts concerning the party's status as an insurer of plaintiff, defendant, or a third party, and describe the terms of the insurance policy, showing that the benefits of the policy run directly to plaintiff.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.44 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer as Proper Party

Zak v. State Farm etc. Ins. Co. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 500, 42 Cal. Rptr. 908 , arose out of an action for damages resulting from a multiple automobile accident in which plaintiff was a passenger. Plaintiff was a guest in a vehicle driven by Jones when it was struck by a vehicle operated by defendant Grassley, and then pushed into the vehicle of defendant Romick. In her fourth and fifth causes of action, plaintiff joined the insurer of Jones and her own insurer on grounds that defendant Grassley was an uninsured motorist and therefore the insurers were liable on their respective policies in the event that the uninsured motorist was held liable. Jones's insurer moved to strike the fourth and fifth causes of action, and the trial court granted the motion. Plaintiff appealed from the order. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's order, holding, inter alia, that the applicable provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379, 379a, 379c and 383 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a), (c)] dealing with the question of what persons may be named as defendants permit joinder of an insurer when the benefits of the contract between the insurer and insured run directly to the benefit of plaintiff (232 Cal. App. 2d 500, 505) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as a defendant of an insurer of a party to the action whose benefits under its policy coverage run to the benefit of the plaintiff (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a and 383, see § 168.39[3][a].

[b] Multiple Insurers

Fageol Truck & Coach Co. v. Pacific Indemnity Co. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 748, 117 P.2d 669 , involved an action by a conditional seller to recover on insurance policies issued to it and to the purchaser of a truck that was damaged in an accident. The purchaser of the truck, at the time of the conditional sale, took out a policy naming as its primary beneficiary plaintiff seller. This policy covered loss from accident and fire. Plaintiff also had taken out an excess insurance policy that provided for indemnity to plaintiff in the event that all specific insurance covering purchaser and truck had been exhausted. After the accident involving the truck, plaintiff sought to recover on the policies. The trial court found in favor of plaintiff, holding that both insurers were liable but that plaintiff's insurer, the excess insurer, need only pay that part of the judgment not paid by purchaser's insurer. Plaintiff's insurer appealed, contending, among other things, that there was a misjoinder of parties.

In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court held on page 754 that when the same person is insured by two or more insurers separately in respect to the same subject and interest, that person, or the beneficiary under the policies, may join any or all of the insurers in a single cause of action for the loss covered under the several policies [citing former Code Civ. Proc. § 383 (repealed; see now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 378, 379, 389) (18 Cal. 2d 748, 754)].

Counsel should note that this case was decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 383, which was subsequently repealed. However, this case still appears to be good law under the broad language of Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a), as amended in 1971. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law pertaining to permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer as Proper Party

In Grier v. Ferrant (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 144 P.2d 631 , plaintiff sued for personal injuries, joining defendant's insurer on the ground that plaintiff was the beneficiary of the terms of the contract between insurer and the defendant's employer as mandated by municipal ordinance. The court of appeal, in reversing the trial court's judgment dismissing the action, held that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 379a [repealed; see now Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)], all persons may be joined in an action against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist and that the insurer was properly joined as a defendant, since the policy issued to defendant's employer covering defendant in accordance with the municipal ordinance inured to the benefit of plaintiff (62 Cal. App. 2d 306, 313-314) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as a defendant of an insurer of a party to the action when the policy coverage runs to the benefit of the plaintiff (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.43

§ 168.43 Supporting Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a),(c)]--Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities pertaining to permissive joinder of defendants (see § 168.39).]

_____ [Name] MAY PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A DEFENDANT BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT IS LIABLE _____ [JOINTLY or IN THE ALTERNATIVE] TO PLAINTIFF AS A _____ [JOINT or INDEPENDENTLY CONCURRENT or INDEPENDENTLY SUCCESSIVE] TORTFEASOR.

A. Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors. The plaintiff may join as defendants in a single action two or more persons on a showing that these persons, whether jointly, concurrently, or successively, contributed proximately to cause the alleged injury (Kraft v. Smith (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 124, 130-131, 148 P.2d 23).

[Optional] B. When Plaintiff in Doubt as to Liability. When the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he or she is entitled to obtain redress, he or she may join two or more defendants, with the intent that the question as to which, if any, of the defendants is liable, and to what extent, may be determined between the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c); see Kraft v. Smith (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 124, 128-131, 148 P.2d 23 ; see also Landau v. Salam (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 901, 909, 95 Cal. Rptr. 46, 484 P.2d 1390 ; Lambert v. Southern Counties Gas Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 347, 353, 340 P.2d 608).

[Optional] C. Liability Based on Negligence. A plaintiff, by pleading an injury, negligence by one or more tortfeasors, and doubt as to which tortfeasor is liable comes within the express terms of Section 379(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Landau v. Salam (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 901, 906-907, 95 Cal. Rptr. 46, 484 P.2d 1390).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the point that all persons who are liable, either jointly or in the alternative, for injuries to the plaintiff as joint, independently concurrent, or successive tortfeasors may properly be joined in a single action. The optional paragraphs may be included in the points and authorities when the plaintiff is in doubt as to the respective liability of two or more persons [Paragraph B] and their liability is based on negligence [Paragraph C]. The form may be used either to support the contention that a new defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to respond to an objection, by answer or demurrer, to the joinder of defendants in the original complaint.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.39.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the alleged injury sustained, the facts demonstrating the liability of the party whose joinder is at issue, and, if applicable, the reasons why doubt exists as to the respective liability of each defendant. For example, in an action involving two or more independently successive tortfeasors, counsel should show the facts surrounding the separate incidents, the interrelationship of the injuries, and the reasons why doubt exists as to the respective liability of each defendant [see Kraft v. Smith (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 124, 128-131, 148 P.2d 23 (see § 168.43[3][b])].

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.44 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

The facts and procedural background of Kraft v. Smith (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 124, 148 P.2d 23 , are discussed under § 168.43[4][b] below.

In Kraft, the Supreme Court, in discussing the liability of multiple tortfeasors alleged to have injured plaintiff independently of each other, held that the procedure available in former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a, 379b, and 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a),(b),(c)] was clearly intended for use by a plaintiff on showing that either the negligence of two or more persons, whether joint, independently concurrent, or successive, contributed proximately to cause the injury for which recovery is sought, or that the injury for which recovery is sought was proximately caused by the negligence of either one or more persons and, as to each person who was not charged absolutely, there was a reasonable uncertainty, requiring determination of some factual or legal issue, as to alternative or quantitative liability (24 Cal. 2d 124, 130-131) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of joint, concurrent, or successive tortfeasors (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[b] When Plaintiff in Doubt as to Liability

Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c) provides that when the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he or she is entitled to redress, he or she may join two or more defendants, with the intent that the question which, if any, of the defendants is liable, and to what extent, may be determined between the parties.

Kraft v. Smith (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 124, 148 P.2d 23 , involved a malpractice suit against two physicians who, independently of each other, treated plaintiff at different times and places for the same injuries, including a broken leg, broken ankle, and fractured knee. In count one of the second amended complaint, plaintiff alleged that she received negligent and improper treatment from the first physician, and in count three, she alleged the same concerning the second physician. She further alleged that she was damaged to such an extent that her right leg was made permanently shorter than her left leg, and that she was in doubt as to which defendant she was entitled to redress from, and for that reason joined both of them with the intent that the question as to alternative or quantitative liability be determined. The second physician demurred to the complaint, alleging, among other things, misjoinder of parties. Plaintiff appealed the judgment entered on an order sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend.

The Supreme Court, in reversing the judgment of the trial court, held that plaintiff's joinder of both physicians under the provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a and 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a),(c)] was proper. Plaintiff, the Court stated, had properly alleged that she had a right to relief from the defendants either jointly, severally, or in the alternative as required in former Code Civ. Proc. § 379a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)] and that she entertained a doubt as to the person from whom she was entitled to redress as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)] (24 Cal. 2d 124, 128) .

The Court further held that the fact that defendants were not joint tortfeasors, but independent wrongdoers, did not defeat plaintiff's right of joinder. The salutary procedure afforded by the joinder statutes regarding permissive joinder of defendants, the Court said, is clearly intended to be available to a plaintiff on a showing that the negligence of two or more persons, whether joint, independently concurrent, or successive, contributed proximately to cause the injury for which relief is sought. Furthermore, this procedure is also available on the showing that there exists a reasonable uncertainty requiring determination of some factual or legal issue with respect to the alternative or quantitative liability of the several defendants (24 Cal. 2d 124, 130-131) .

The Court then held that neither defendant was prejudiced by such joinder, since neither would be liable for any injury caused by the independent tort of his codefendant to which he himself did not proximately contribute. Joinder of defendants, the Court said, would promote rather than obstruct justice, since if it develops that only one defendant was negligent, the verdict will be simple. On the other hand, if it appears that the negligence of both defendants contributed proximately to the injury, then the matter of apportioning the damages to which each defendant was responsible would be considerably eased by having both defendants before the court at the same time and in the same action. Such joinder would also enable a jury to arrive at soundly based and just verdicts (24 Cal. 2d 124, 130) .

In Landau v. Salam (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 901, 95 Cal. Rptr. 46, 484 P.2d 1390 , plaintiff brought an action against two separate and successive tortfeasors alleging personal injury as a result of the negligence of one defendant in the operation of an automobile and of the other in the maintenance of property, and a doubt as to which the damage was attributable. Defendants demurred to the complaint on grounds of misjoinder, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend.

On appeal from the judgment of dismissal, the Supreme Court reversed. Although the Court found the complaint clearly deficient in setting forth facts showing a fair doubt or reasonable uncertainty about the liability of defendants, nonetheless, it was error for the trial court to sustain the demurrer without leave to amend, since it is an abuse of discretion not to allow plaintiff leave to amend if there is a reasonable possibility that the defect can be cured by amendment. In this case, the Court held that plaintiff had alleged only an undescribed injury arising from two accidents that were separated by a period of over three months; nevertheless, he could, by amending his complaint, set forth more specific information concerning the facts of the two accidents, the nature of the injuries, and the interrelationship of the injuries. In so doing, plaintiff could well demonstrate a reasonable uncertainty about the respective liabilities of defendants (4 Cal. 3d 901, 909) .

For discussion of other issues raised in this case, see § 168.43[3][a], below.

Counsel should note that the Supreme Court in Landau held that the theory that there must be some sort of "factual nexus" connecting or associating the claim pleaded against the several defendants in order for joinder to be permitted under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a-379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)-(c)] was inapplicable to cases under Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)]. The Court stated that the imposition of the "factual nexus" theory on former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)] would be superfluous. This section does not permit the unlimited joinder of defendants; rather it provides for joinder only when plaintiff pleads a specific relationship between the defendants, namely a single or cumulative injury, giving rise to doubt as to the respective liability of defendants for that injury. Therefore, the Court concluded, when a plaintiff states facts showing a reasonable uncertainty as to the respective liability of the defendants, these same facts constitute the connection that links the acts of the defendants and fulfills any claimed requisite of "factual nexus" (4 Cal. 3d 901, 907) .

Lambert v. Southern Counties Gas Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 347, 340 P.2d 608 , arose out of an action for damages resulting from destruction of a bulldozer owned by plaintiffs that caught fire after it struck and punctured a gas pipeline. In count one, plaintiffs alleged negligence of the lessors of the bulldozer in operating it over the pipeline. In count two, plaintiffs alleged negligence on part of the gas company in permitting its pipeline to remain so near the surface of the ground. Defendant gas company demurred generally to the entire complaint on the grounds that plaintiff had pleaded its own contributory negligence by alleging negligence on the part of defendant lessors. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed from the subsequent judgment of the trial court in favor of defendant.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the trial court, holding that plaintiff could properly plead inconsistent causes of action. Moreover, the Court stated, the two counts in their respective statements of alleged negligence indicated that plaintiffs were in doubt as to which defendants should be held liable for the damages sustained and for that reason elected to set forth their two causes of action in one complaint. The Court concluded that plaintiffs had a right to do this under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 379a, 379b, and 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a),(b),(c)] (52 Cal. 2d 347, 353) .

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, these cases still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of all persons as to whom the plaintiff is in doubt concerning their respective liability (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[c] Liability Based on Negligence

The facts and procedural background of Landau v. Salam (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 901, 95 Cal. Rptr. 46, 484 P.2d 1390 , are discussed under § 168.43[4][b] above. The Supreme Court in Landau held that plaintiff had pleaded (1) an injury, (2) negligence by successive tortfeasors, and (3) doubt as to which tortfeasor was liable and therefore came within the express terms of former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)]. Under that provision, the Court stated, a plaintiff was not required to further plead a factual nexus connecting or associating the claim pleaded against the several defendants as required when the theory was solely grounded on former Code Civ. Proc. § 379a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a)]. That requirement, the Court added, would be superfluous, since former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)] did not permit unlimited joinder, but rather permitted joinder only upon the plaintiff pleading a specific relationship between the defendants, namely a single or cumulative injury, giving rise to doubt as to the respective liability of defendants for that injury (4 Cal. 3d 901, 906-907) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of all persons as to whom the plaintiff is in doubt concerning their respective liability (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint, Concurrent, or Successive Tortfeasors

Hege v. Worthington, Park & Worthington (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 670, 26 Cal. Rptr. 132 , involved an action by a client against attorneys for negligence in allowing the statute of limitations to run on his claim against contractors for alleged failure to complete a residence and against the contractor's surety on the performance bond. The surety demurred specially to the complaint on several grounds, including improper joinder of the cause of action against the surety with the cause of action against the attorneys. The trial court sustained this demurrer, and plaintiff appealed. Although affirming the portion of the judgment based on the sustaining of the defendant surety's special demurrer on other grounds (209 Cal. App. 2d 670, 682-684) , the court of appeal concluded that counts were properly joined. The court noted that if it is shown that the wrongful acts of two or more persons, whether joint, independently concurrent, or successive, contributed proximately to cause the injury for which recovery is sought, the causes of action thus arising may be joined in the same complaint under the statutes governing joinder of parties. The court concluded that in this case, the acts of defendants were successive events contributing to plaintiff's injury (209 Cal. App. 2d 670, 680-688) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of joint, concurrent, and successive tortfeasors (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

[b] When Plaintiff in Doubt as to Liability

The facts and procedural background of Dallman Supply Co. v. Sweet (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 195 P.2d 864 , are discussed in § 168.39, under [3], Liberal Construction. In reversing an order of the trial court granting the motion of one of the defendants for a change of venue, the court of appeal held that parties had properly been joined as defendants under the provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 379c [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c)] permitting joinder of parties as defendants when plaintiff is in doubt as to the defendant from whom he or she is entitled to redress (86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 784) .

In Smith v. City of Los Angeles (1944) 66 Cal. App. 2d 562, 153 P.2d 69 , plaintiffs brought suit against defendant city, as well as against the local flood control district and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, among others, for damages caused by flooding from the overflow of the Tujunga River, allegedly caused by the construction of certain dikes by the various defendants. In reversing the trial court's sustaining of defendant's demurrers, the court of appeal held, among other things, that under the circumstances of the case, defendants were properly joined. The court said that plaintiffs properly alleged that they were unable to determine whether the damage sustained by them was caused by a concurrence of the acts of all of the defendants, or was caused in part by the acts of certain of the defendants and in part by the acts of the other defendants, and they were in doubt as against which of the defendants they were entitled to redress, the extent of the liability, and whether such liability was joint or several (66 Cal. App. 2d 562, 575-576) .

In Morris v. Duncan (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 635, 58 P.2d 669 , plaintiff filed suit for personal injury against the driver of an automobile in which she was riding for negligent operation of the vehicle and against defendant county for negligence based on allegedly dangerous and defective warnings and barricade where a bridge had been washed out. In reversing the judgment of the trial court, the court of appeal held that plaintiff had stated a good cause of action when she joined the defendants and stated that she was in doubt whether she was entitled to recover against the driver, the county, or both (14 Cal. App. 2d 635, 638) .

See also Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 386, 398, 343 P.2d 787 ; Russello v. Mori (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 828, 833, 315 P.2d 343 ; Sareussen v. Lowe (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 288, 290, 270 P.2d 27 ; and Klinger v. Modesto Fruit Co., Inc. (1930) 107 Cal. App. 97, 101, 290 P. 127 , for additional appellate cases holding that when plaintiff is in doubt as to the liability of one or more persons, arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions of occurrences, he or she may join those persons in a single action to determine their respective liability.

Counsel should note that these cases were decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, these cases still appear to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder as defendants of all persons as to whom the plaintiff is in doubt concerning their respective liability (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379 on prior California law concerning the permissive joinder of defendants, see § 168.39[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.44

§ 168.44 Opposing Contention That Joinder of Person as Defendant Is Proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 379]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] CANNOT PROPERLY BE JOINED AS A DEFENDANT, BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT ALLEGED THAT HE/SHE/IT HAS A RIGHT TO RELIEF AGAINST _____ [name] ARISING OUT OF THE SAME TRANSACTION OR OCCURRENCES OR SERIES OF TRANSACTIONS OR OCCURRENCES, AND THAT THERE EXISTS A COMMON QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT, OR THAT PLAINTIFF HAS A RIGHT, CLAIM, OR INTEREST ADVERSE TO _____ [name] IN THE PROPERTY OR TRANSACTION WHICH IS THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION.

A. Statutory Requirements Not Met. Joinder of defendants under Section 379 of the Code of Civil Procedure is improper when plaintiff fails to allege that he or she has a right to relief against each defendant, arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences, or that he or she has a claim, interest, or right adverse to each defendant in the property or controversy which is the subject of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a); see also Hoag v. Superior Court (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 611, 618-620, 24 Cal. Rptr. 659).

[Optional] B. Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Is in Doubt as to Liability of Defendants. Joinder of defendants under Section 379(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure is improper when plaintiff fails to allege that he or she is in doubt as to which defendant he or she is entitled to seek redress from (Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c); see also San Francisco M. Co. Ltd. v. Mordecai (1933) 134 Cal. App. 755, 761-762, 26 P.2d 669).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a person may properly be joined as a defendant under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 379, governing permissive joinder of defendants. This form sets forth the general point that joinder of defendants is not proper unless the criteria of Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a), or, if appropriate, Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c), are met. The form may be used to oppose the contention that a new defendant may properly be joined in the action before the court, or to oppose the joinder of defendants in the original complaint. The optional Paragraph B may be included in the points and authorities when the plaintiff seeks relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 379(c) but has failed to allege that he or she is in doubt as to the liability of the respective defendants.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, argument supported by the foregoing memorandum may be made by a plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend his or her complaint to add a new defendant or in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of misjoinder of defendants. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For a discussion of procedures for obtaining or objecting to joinder of parties, see § 168.04.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts supporting the contention that the plaintiff has failed to allege the necessary statutory requirements that he or she has a right to relief against all the defendants arising out of the same transaction or occurrence or series of transactions or occurrences and that there will arise a question of law and fact common to all these persons.

In an appropriate case, this form may be used in opposition to the contention that a person or persons are properly joined as defendants pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 379, as supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 168.39 -168.43.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new defendant, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

For points and authorities relating to cross complaints generally, see Ch. 64, Cross Complaints .

For points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a complaint for misjoinder of defendant, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

In Hoag v. Superior Court (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 611, 24 Cal. Rptr. 659 , petitioner sought a writ of mandate to direct the respondent trial court to transfer certain causes of action relating to him to the superior court in the county of his residence. In the underlying action, three former students at the University of California, Berkeley, brought an action against each of four defendants for damages arising out of an alleged invasion of privacy. Plaintiffs in the underlying action had been arrested, though subsequently released with charges dismissed, after demonstrating against the House Un-American Activities Committee when it held hearings in San Francisco. Plaintiffs alleged in their respective causes of action that certain "mug shots" taken of them following their arrest had somehow been obtained by defendants and used maliciously to harass the respective plaintiffs by displaying these "mug shots" at various meetings in schools and in other media. In the twelve causes of action, each plaintiff set forth an identical cause of action against each defendant based on his or her displaying or disseminating of the "mug shot" of each plaintiff, giving the differing dates and places of each activity. Petitioner demurred to the complaint, filed a motion to strike the complaint, and a motion for a change of venue, on the ground of misjoinder of parties. In his affidavits in sup port of the motions, petitioner denied that he knew two of the other defendants and denied that he discussed or communicated with any of the other defendants about any of the matters referred to in plaintiffs' causes of action and specifically denied displaying any of plaintiffs' mug shots to large public audiences at certain alleged places and times as alleged in some of the causes of action. The trial court denied the motions and overruled the demurrer. Petitioner then filed an application for the writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ, holding that there was an improper joinder of parties (207 Cal. App. 2d 611, 620) . The court noted that the complaint alleged that the defendants acted in four entirely different transactions independently of each other. Furthermore, there was no allegation of any conspiracy, community of interest, or concerted action in any respect, nor was there any single cause in which all of the defendants were interested or affected, or a necessary party to its determination. The court stated that although the general rule that statutes governing joinder of defendants are to be liberally construed should normally be followed, neither the statutes nor case law permitted unlimited joinder. Relying on Landau v. Salam (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 901, 907, 95 Cal. Rptr. 46, 484 P.2d 1390 , the court observed that although each named defendant need not be interested in or affected by every count pleaded in the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b)], there still needed to be some sort of factual nexus connecting or associating the claim pleaded against the several defendants (207 Cal. App. 2d 611, 618-619) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of defendants (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379, see § 168.39[3][a].

[b] Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Is in Doubt as to Liability of Defendants

San Francisco M. Co. Ltd. v. Mordecai (1933) 134 Cal. App. 755, 26 P.2d 669 , arose out of an action for recovery of money and conversion of cattle. Plaintiff filed a complaint containing four separate and distinct causes of action against four separate defendants, praying for separate and distinct relief against each defendant on the cause of action specifically pleaded. In the first cause of action, plaintiff alleged the defendant Mordecai had agreed to sell a certain number of cattle but that later he rescinded the contract and took possession of the cattle, and that plaintiff's assignor had expended a certain sum for the care of the cattle. Plaintiff sought recovery of that money. In the second cause of action, plaintiff alleged defendant Mordecai assigned all of his rights in the contract to the second defendant, who chose to rescind the contract and took possession of the cattle, and plaintiff sought judgment for the same sum alleged to have been expended for the care of the cattle. In the third and fourth causes of action, plaintiff alleged that the third and fourth defendants wrongfully converted the cattle from the possession of its assignor, and plaintiff sought the value of the cattle from each defendant. Defendant Mordecai moved for a change of venue to the county of his residence on ground of misjoinder of parties in that the three other defendants were joined in order to obtain venue elsewhere. Plaintiff contended that joinder was justified on the theory that it was in doubt as to which of the defendants was liable. The trial court denied the motion, and defendant Mordecai appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order denying the motion for a change of venue. While plaintiff may have argued that it was in doubt as to the defendant from whom it was entitled to seek redress, the court found that there was no allegation in any part of the complaint to that effect. To the contrary, stated the court, the complaint demonstrated no doubt as to the liability of Mordecai in the first cause of action based on an implied contract for the care of the cattle involved. The complaint also demonstrated no doubt as to the liability of the named defendants in the third and fourth causes of action for damages for conversion of the cattle. The court suggested that had plaintiff pleaded any uncertainty as to whether the appellant or either of the other named defendants was liable for the care of the cattle, the joinder of these defendants would have been permissible under the code section. The court further noted that relief was not sought in the alternative; separate judgments were demanded against each defendant separately. No doubt was expressed as to appellant's liability under the other causes of action, nor of the other defendants' liability under the first cause of action against appellant (134 Cal. App. 755, 760-762) .

Counsel should note that this case was decided before the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379. However, this case still appears to be good law regarding the issue of permissive joinder of defendants (see, e.g., Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 758, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316). For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 379, see § 168.39[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.45

§ 168.45 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] MUST BE JOINED AS A PARTY TO THIS ACTION UNDER SECTION 389(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE _____ [IN HIS/HER/ITS ABSENCE, COMPLETE RELIEF CANNOT BE ACCORDED AMONG THOSE WHO ARE ALREADY PARTIES and/or HE/SHE/IT CLAIMS AN INTEREST RELATING TO THE SUBJECT OF THE ACTION AND IS SO SITUATED THAT THE DISPOSITION OF THE ACTION IN HIS/HER/ITS ABSENCE MAY _____ (AS A PRACTICAL MATTER IMPAIR OR IMPEDE HIS/HER/ITS ABILITY TO PROTECT THAT INTEREST and/or LEAVE THOSE PERSONS WHO ARE ALREADY PARTIES TO THE ACTION SUBJECT TO A SUBSTANTIAL RISK OF INCURRING DOUBLE, MULTIPLE, OR OTHERWISE INCONSISTENT OBLIGATIONS BECAUSE OF HIS/HER/ITS CLAIMED INTEREST)].

[EITHER]

A. In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties. A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action must be joined as a party in the action if in his or her absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those who are already parties. If the person has not been joined, the court shall order that he or she be made a party (Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(1); see Cook v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 569, 579 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895 ; Kaczorowski v. Board of Supervisors for the County of Mendicino (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 564, 570-571, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 14 ; Sierra Club, Inc. v. California Coastal Com. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 495, 499-501, 157 Cal. Rptr. 190).

[AND/OR]

B. Disposition of Action in Omitted Party's Absence Will Impair His or Her Ability to Protect Interest in Subject of Action. A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action must be joined as a party in the action if he or she claims an interest relating to the subject matter of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his or her absence may as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest. If the person has not been joined in the action, the court shall order that he or she be made a party (Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i); see Cook v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 569, 579 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895 ; Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803 ; Ursino v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 611, 616, 114 Cal. Rptr. 404).

[AND/OR]

C. Disposition of Action in Absence of Omitted Party Will Leave Existing Parties Subject to Risk of Double, Multiple, or Inconsistent Obligations. A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action must be joined as a party in the action if he or she claims an interest relating to the subject matter of the action and if the disposition of the action in his or her absence would leave any of the persons already parties to the action subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of his or her claimed interest. If the person has not been joined, the court shall order that he or she be made a party (Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii); see Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176, 124 Cal. Rptr. 63).

[Optional] D. Unwilling Plaintiff May Be Joined as Defendant. If the consent of anyone who should have been joined as plaintiff cannot be obtained, he or she may be made a defendant (see Code Civ. Proc. § 382).

[Add further points and authorities if appropriate, relating to specific reasons why omitted party must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) (see §§ 168.46 and 168.47). If dismissal of the action is sought because the omitted party cannot be joined, this form should be combined with the points and authorities set out in § 168.49.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an omitted party is required to be joined under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), governing compulsory joinder of parties. This form sets forth the point that a person who is subject to the jurisdiction of the court and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction must be joined if (1) in his or her absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those parties already in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(1)], or (2) he or she claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his or her absence may as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i)] or leave any of the persons already parties to the action subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of his or her claimed interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii)].

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder of parties arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing form may be raised by plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend the complaint to add a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473; see also § 168.04[1]]. The argument may also be raised by defendant when objecting, by answer or demurrer, to the nonjoinder of a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30; see also § 168.04[3]]. The argument may also be raised by the omitted party in support of a noticed motion for an order compelling his or her joinder [see Cuneo v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 452, 454-456, 28 Cal. Rptr. 791 ; see also § 168.04[4]]. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.48 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For a discussion of amendment of a complaint to bring in a new defendant after the statute of limitations has run, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions in that set.

For a discussion and forms relating to intervention of a party into a pending action, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new party, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings in this set.

For points and authorities relating to complaints and cross complaints generally, see Ch. 61, Cross Complaints in this set.

For points and authorities opposing a demurrer to a complaint for nonjoinder of parties required to be joined, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings in this set.

For points and authorities relating to intervention generally, see Ch. 124, Intervention in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties

Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) provides that a person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action shall be joined as a party in the action if (1) in his or her absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those who are already parties, or (2) he or she claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his or her absence may (i) as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest, or (ii) leave any of the persons already parties subject to substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of his or her claimed interest. If he or she has not been so joined, the court shall order that he or she be made a party.

Code Civ. Proc. § 389 was amended in 1971 to conform substantially to FRCP, Rule 19, governing compulsory joinder in federal courts. As amended, Code Civ. Proc. § 389 requires joinder of persons materially interested in an action whenever feasible. In certain instances, for example, joinder cannot be accomplished, because it would deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter, as in cases where federal courts would have exclusive jurisdiction over matters involving the omitted party, or because personal jurisdiction over the omitted party cannot be obtained.

Under the former law, parties required to be joined were characterized as indispensable, and in their absence, the court could not proceed, since it had no jurisdiction to do so without their presence in the action before it. Under the revised law, a party required to be joined by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) is to be regarded as indispensable only in the conclusional sense that in his or her absence, the court has decided that the action should be dismissed. When the decision is to proceed, the court has power to make a legally binding adjudication between the parties before it pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b).

In practice, however, the change from the former absolute rule is perhaps more one of emphasis, since the guidelines regarding the compulsory joinder of parties as set forth under revised Code Civ. Proc. § 389 are substantially those that have guided the courts for years, as represented by the principles enunciated in Bank of California v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 521-523, 106 P.2d 879 [see Law Revision Commission Comment to the 1971 Amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389]. For discussion of Bank of California, see § 168.50[3][c].

In Cook v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 569 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895 , the treasurer of the state Republican party filed an action in Orange County Superior Court requesting a writ of mandate stopping a candidate in the Democratic primary for Congress from using the title of "mayor" in her ballot designation. The candidate, Cook, filed a motion to dismiss the action for lack of jurisdiction. Cook then brought a petition for writ of mandate seeking dismissal of the action and a stay of her scheduled deposition. The treasurer had brought the action under Elec. Code § 13314, which allowed any "elector" to challenge by writ of mandate an error in ballot designations. The statute provides that the venue for such a proceeding is "exclusively in Sacramento" when the Secretary of State is named as a real party in interest or respondent. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), if the Secretary of State is an indispensable party to the proceedings, the Secretary must be joined in the action. The court then analyzed whether the Secretary of State was an indispensable party because, if so, the treasurer would have to file the action in Sacramento County.

The court of appeals held that because the Secretary of State has a statutorily required role in determining whether a ballot designation contravenes the Election Code, complete relief could not be given in her absence. Additionally, the Secretary of State has an interest in the subject matter of the action because the Secretary is independently bound not to accept improper ballot designations and as a practical matter there is a risk she may not be able to review the results of a trial in Orange County. Because the Secretary of State was an indispensable party, the case had to be dismissed since the Secretary could not be made a party in Orange County (161 Cal. App. 4th 569, 579) .

In Kaczorowski v. Board of Supervisors for the County of Mendicino (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 564, 570-571, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 14 , the court held that, in light of the indisputable centrality of the California Coastal Commission, its status as an indispensable party to an administrative mandamus challenging the Commission's issuance of a permit appears as a matter of law. If the court had entered a judgment against the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors in the proceeding, that judgment would not bind the Commission and would be vulnerable to collateral attack by the Commission. Thus, a judgment in the absence of the Commission would not be a complete determination of the controversy. A judgment without the Commission would be neither effective nor adequate.

In Sierra Club, Inc. v. California Coastal Com. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 495, 157 Cal. Rptr. 190 , plaintiff sought a writ of mandate to set aside decisions of the defendant coastal commission authorizing construction of condominiums and filed an amended petition naming developer of the project as the real party in interest. Developer moved for a judgment on the pleadings and dismissal of the action on ground that he was an indispensable party to the action and was not joined until after the statute of limitations had run on the time allowed for plaintiff to bring an action to set aside the decision of the commission. The trial court granted the motion and dismissed the action, and plaintiff appealed.

In affirming the decision, the court of appeal agreed with trial court's finding that the developer was a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389. The court of appeal held that the developer met the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(1) in that he was a party in whose absence complete relief could not be accorded to those already parties, because he would not be bound by any judgment adversely affecting his permit and would be free to attack any such judgment collaterally (95 Cal. App. 3d 495, 501) . The court of appeal also found that the omitted party could have been required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i) and Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii) as well as under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(1).

[b] Disposition of Action in Omitted Party's Absence Will Impair His or Her Ability to Protect Interest in Subject of Action

In Cook v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 569 , 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895 , the treasurer of the state Republican party filed an action in Orange County Superior Court requesting a writ of mandate stopping a candidate in the Democratic primary for Congress from using the title of "mayor" in her ballot designation. The candidate, Cook, filed a motion to dismiss the action for lack of jurisdiction. Cook then brought a petition for writ of mandate seeking dismissal of the action and a stay of her scheduled deposition. The treasurer had brought the action under Elec. Code § 13314, which allowed any "elector" to challenge by writ of mandate an error in ballot designations. The statute provides that the venue for such a proceeding is "exclusively in Sacramento" when the Secretary of State is named as a real party in interest or respondent. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), if the Secretary of State is an indispensable party to the proceedings, the Secretary must be joined in the action. The court then analyzed whether the Secretary of State was an indispensable party because, if so, the treasurer would have to file the action in Sacramento County.

The court of appeals held that because the Secretary of State has a statutorily required role in determining whether a ballot designation contravenes the Election Code, complete relief could not be given in her absence. Additionally, the Secretary of State has an interest in the subject matter of the action because the Secretary is independently bound not to accept improper ballot designations and as a practical matter there is a risk she may not be able to review the results of a trial in Orange County. Because the Secretary of State was an indispensable party, the case had to be dismissed since the Secretary could not be made a party in Orange County (161 Cal. App. 4th 569, 579) .

Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803 , was a mandamus proceeding by a former employee of the federal Social Security Administration seeking to compel the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board to vacate its decision denying him benefits. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on ground that an indispensable party, the federal government, had not been joined, and the court entered judgment for the board.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court erred in failing to afford plaintiff the opportunity to join the federal agency as a defendant (47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 242) . The court found that in this case, the federal government had a direct pecuniary interest in the outcome of litigation, since a judgment compelling an award of benefits would fall upon federal funds budgeted for support of the agency, and was therefore an indispensable party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2) because it was a party subject to service of process and the court's jurisdiction (47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241-242) .

In Ursino v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 611, 114 Cal. Rptr. 404 , petitioners moved to set aside and vacate the judgment of respondent superior court that restrained the city board of permit appeals from hearing petitioners' appeal from its grant of a building permit for a proposed McDonald's Restaurant, and to require the board to hear petitioners' appeal. Petitioners, operators of restaurants in the vicinity of the proposed restaurant, filed a timely notice of appeal, as authorized by local ordinance, from the department of public works' issuance of a building permit authorizing construction of the proposed restaurant. Petitioners claimed that their interest would be adversely affected by the operation of McDonald's Restaurant as a result of the issuance of the permit. Because of vacancies on the board, the hearing on the appeal was delayed several times. In the meantime, the owners of the construction site and McDonald's filed separate actions in the trial court and obtained writs of prohibition restraining the board from taking any action on petitioners' appeal other than upholding the validity of the previously issued permit. When the board with its full membership convened, it refused to hear the appeal of petitioners. Petitioners moved the trial court to set aside and vacate the order of the trial court in granting its writ of prohibition. The owners had, however, voluntarily dismissed their own action, leaving only the McDonald's action before the court. Petitioners were not named as parties in the McDonald's action. The trial court denied the motions to set aside the judgment. Subsequently, petitioners brought an action against the site owners, McDonald's, and the construction company to enjoin construction of the restaurant. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to petitioners' complaint without leave to amend. Petitioners then applied to the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to require the trial court in the prohibition action brought by McDonald's to set aside and vacate its judgment restraining the board of permit appeals from hearing petitioners' appeal.

The court of appeal granted the writ, holding, among other things, that the superior court acted in excess of its jurisdiction by entering its judgment in the action brought by McDonald's without naming petitioners as real parties in interest, since McDonald's brought the action to prevent the hearing of petitioners' appeal on the issue of the validity of the original permit (39 Cal. App. 3d 611, 616) . The court noted that petitioners, as operators of nearby restaurants, had exercised their right to appeal to the board of permit appeals and that McDonald's lawsuit enjoining the board from hearing the appeal, if successful, as it was, would as a practical matter frustrate petitioners' appeal before that board and thus impair their ability to protect their interest. Petitioners, the court held, were indispensable parties because the relief sought would injure or adversely affect their interests and any attempt to adjudicate their rights without joinder was futile (39 Cal. App. 3d 611, 617) .

[c] Disposition of Action in Absence of Omitted Party Will Leave Existing Parties Subject to Risk of Double, Multiple, or Inconsistent Obligations

The facts and procedural background of Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 124 Cal. Rptr. 63 , are discussed in § 168.49[3][a]. In Atlantic Richfield, the court of appeal held that joinder of 57 royalty claimants in the action was required pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 because any disposition in the action without their presence would subject petitioners to possible substantial risk of incurring multiple obligations to pay the same oil royalty (51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties

In Hayes v. State Dept. of Developmental Services (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1523, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 363 , the court held that the Department of General Services, Office of Administrative Hearings (OAH) was not a necessary party, let alone an indispensable one, in an autistic minor's action challenging a decision that affirmed the termination of funding for the educational portion of the minor's "In-Home Discrete Trial Program"; therefore, the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the minor's petition for peremptory writ of administrative mandamus. The contracts between the Department of Developmental Services (DDS) and OAH unequivocally demonstrated that OAH was DDS' designee with respect to the fair hearing procedure of the Lanterman Developmental Disabilities Services Act (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 4500 et seq.). The minor could be accorded complete relief among those who were already parties without the need to join OAH. Moreover, OAH would suffer no harm from the minor's failure to join it as a party (138 Cal. App. 4th 1523, 1533-1534) .

In Deltakeeper v. Oakdale Irrigation District (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244 , the court of appeal clarified that the complete relief clause of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) focuses not on whether complete relief can be afforded all possible parties to the action, but on whether complete relief can be afforded the parties named in the action (94 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 1101 , citing Countrywide Home Loans, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 785). See § 168.48 for discussion of this case and its application in opposing joinder of a party.

The following cases were decided under FRCP, Rule 19, which is the source of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971 [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535]. Federal cases interpreting FRCP, Rule 19(a), may be useful in interpreting the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), as amended, in those instances in which a California appellate court has not ruled on a particular issue [see, e.g., Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

Lopez v. Arraras (1st Cir. 1979) 606 F.2d 347 , involved an action by tenants in a federally funded housing project against local officials for failure to meet statutory requirements, which caused them to pay rents in excess of the permissible maximum. The federal court of appeals remanded the case for, among other things, joinder of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The court agreed with defendants that the availability of federal funds was a decision solely within the responsibility of HUD. Consequently, without HUD, the district court would be unable to accord complete relief to those already parties in the action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a)(1), (606 F.2d 347, 351-354) .

In Harris v. White (D. Mass. 1979) 479 F. Supp. 996 , plaintiffs brought an action challenging employment practices of a municipal public works department on the grounds of discrimination. Various state officials, joined as defendants, moved to dismiss the action, as against them, on the grounds that the complaint failed to allege state involvement in the allocation of revenue sharing funds to the public works department. The federal district court denied the motion, holding that there was sufficient state involvement and that under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a)(1), state defendants were proper parties, since in their absence the court would be unable to fashion complete and effective relief to the other parties already in the case (479 F. Supp. 996, 1011) .

Dyke v. Gulf Oil Corp. (Temp. Emer. Ct. App. 1979) 601 F.2d 557 , arose out of an action by plaintiffs for private damages under the Economic Stabilization Act. Plaintiff had joined the Department of Energy as a defendant under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19. As to the term "complete relief," the court of appeals in a footnote said that it refers to relief as between the persons already parties and not as between the parties and the absent person whose joinder is sought (601 F.2d 557, 566, n.20).

[b] Disposition of Action in Omitted Party's Absence Will Impair His or Her Ability to Protect Interest in Subject of Action

In In re Marriage of Lugo (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 427, 217 Cal. Rptr. 74 , the court of appeal held that a county that provides public assistance benefits for a child to a custodial parent is an indispensable party to an action that seeks to reduce or suspend the noncustodial parent's obligation to pay child support. The court rejected the noncustodial parent's contention that a stipulation he made with the custodial parent to suspend his payment of child support should be upheld, even though a county that was paying Aid to Families With Dependent Children benefits for the child did not receive written notice of the hearing at which the stipulation was made. Under Civ. Code § 248 the county may proceed on behalf of an obligee to enforce his or her right of support against the obligor. In any proceeding that seeks to diminish or impair those statutory rights, the county is an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i) (170 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430, 433) . Note that Civ. Code § 248 is repealed operative January 1, 1994, and replaced by Fam. Code § 4002(a), with respect to enforcement of child support.

The facts and procedural background of Sierra Club, Inc. v. California Coastal Com. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 495, 157 Cal. Rptr. 190 , are discussed in § 168.45[3][a].

In Sierra Club, the court of appeal affirmed the decision of the trial court dismissing the action for failure to join a party required to be joined within the applicable statute of limitations. In so doing, the court agreed with the subsequently joined omitted party's contention that he was required to be joined by Code Civ. Proc. § 389. The court noted that when the plaintiff seeks affirmative relief that, if granted, would injure or affect the interest of a third person not joined, the third person is an indispensable party. The court held in this case that plaintiff, in seeking to set aside the decision authorizing construction of condominiums in a certain area along the coast, sought relief that, if granted, would adversely affect the rights of the developer who had received permission to begin construction and therefore was required to join the developer as a defendant (95 Cal. App. 3d 495, 501) .

In Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 232, 73 P.2d 1163 , plaintiff lessor brought an action for, among other things, forfeiture of an oil lease against defendant sublessee on grounds of breach of an implied convenant to protect plaintiff's land from drainage. Plaintiff prevailed at trial, and the trial court granted a conditional decree of forfeiture. On appeal, defendant contended, regarding the forfeiture, that as sublessees they were not subject to an action by the original lessor for breach of covenants of the parent lease. The Supreme Court on its own motion raised the objection of failure to join indispensable parties, though noting that defendant had unsuccessfully demurred on the grounds that there was a defect of parties, and held that the owners and holders of the parent lease were indispensable parties who should have been joined, since the relief sought affected the rights of the sublessors who are the owners and holders of the parent lease and the judgment of forfeiture of the lease would necessarily affect their rights (10 Cal. 2d 232, 262) .

Southern Cal. Title Clearing Co. v. Laws (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 586, 83 Cal. Rptr. 8 , involved an action by plaintiff for partition of certain property and termination of a community oil and gas lease on the property. The lease involved 13 lots in a certain area, and by the terms of the leases between the original lessee and the 13 owners, all 13 leases were to be construed together and constituted one community lease. Each lot owner was to receive a pro rata share of oil and gas royalties for oil and gas discovered and produced on any of the 13 lots. Plaintiff was coowner of only one lot, together with defendant coowner. Defendant lessee was the successor to the lease entered into between the 13 owners and the original lessee. Plaintiff sought to terminate the lease on the ground that the oil and gas being extracted from the lots were not being produced in paying quantities. Defendant lessee had brought the trial court's attention to the absence in the action of the other lot owners, but apparently the trial court took no action concerning the omission. On the issue of the termination of the lease, the trial court refused to declare it terminated, and plaintiff, who had prevailed in the partition action, appealed from the order denying termination of the lease.

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment declaring the lease to be in full force and effect. The court of appeal held that the other coowners of lots involved in the community gas and oil lease were required to be joined in the action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389. A community oil and gas lease, the court stated, gives each lessor an interest in any oil or gas produced on each of the other lots involved in the lease. Consequently, the court concluded, plaintiff's attempt to terminate the lease with regard to only one lot affected the owners of the other lots as well, since they would be deprived of their right to share royalties on any oil that might be produced on the property in question.

Counsel should note that both Hartman and Laws, above, were decided under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 prior to its 1971 amendment; however, both cases are probably still good law under present Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i), since a judgment forfeiting the oil and gas lease in each case would probably, as a practical matter, impair the ability of the omitted parties to protect their interests in the lease.

The following case was decided under FRCP, Rule 19, which is the source of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971 [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535]. Federal cases interpreting FRCP, Rule 19(a), may be useful in interpreting the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), as amended, in those instances in which a California appellate court has not ruled on a particular issue [see, e.g., Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

In Schutten v. Shell Oil Co. (5th Cir. 1970) 421 F.2d 869 , plaintiff filed suit to evict defendant oil company from certain land and to secure accounting for removal of oil, gas, and other minerals. Plaintiff failed to join defendant's lessor who had a conflicting claim regarding the land. The federal court of appeals stated that despite the fact that the omitted party would not be bound by the judgment, a judgment in favor of plaintiff would nonetheless create a cloud on the omitted party's title and deprive it of royalties. Therefore, held the court, joinder was required pursuant to FRCP, Rule 19(a)(2)(i), since a disposition in the lessor's absence would as a practical matter affect its rights in the property (421 F. 2d 869, 873) .

[c] Disposition of Action in Absence of Omitted Party Will Leave Existing Parties Subject to Risk of Double, Multiple, or Inconsistent Obligations

The following cases were decided under FRCP, Rule 19, which is the source of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971 [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535]. Federal cases interpreting Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a), may be useful in interpreting the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), as amended, in those instances in which a California appellate court has not ruled on a particular issue [see, e.g., Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

In Window Glass Cutters League of America v. American St. Gobain Corp. (3d Cir. 1970) 428 F.2d 353 , plaintiff union sought to compel defendant employer to arbitrate a grievance involving an alleged violation of its collective bargaining agreement when defendant employer assigned certain work to be done by persons outside the contractual bargaining unit. Defendant company moved to join the union that represented the assigned workers. The court of appeals held that joinder was required under FRCP, Rule 19(a)(2)(ii), since there was a substantial risk that arbitration between only defendant and plaintiff would expose defendant company to the risk that the omitted union would in turn initiate a separate grievance against the company, leading to potentially conflicting awards, thus giving rise to a substantial risk of inconsistent obligations being imposed on defendant (428 F. 2d 353, 354-355) .

N.Y.S. Association for Retarded Children, Inc. v. Carey (E.D. N.Y. 1977) 438 F. Supp. 440 , involved an action by plaintiffs to force a state agency to comply with a consent judgment entered against it in a previous action. The state agency, through an order to show cause, sought to join the civil service employee's union that represented agency employees, for the limited purpose of determining whether the proposed contract between the state agency and a private organization to operate certain facilities would infringe on any rights of its employees. The district court ordered the union to be joined, holding, among other things, that the state agency might be subject to double liability should it conclude a contract with the private organization and thereafter discover it had no right to do so (438 F. Supp. 440, 443) .

The following cases were decided under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 prior to its 1971 amendment; however, both cases still appear to be good law under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended. In both cases, the court held that the omitted party's joinder was required because a disposition of the action in his or her absence would leave existing parties subject to future litigation by the omitted party and the consequent possibility of inconsistent obligations. Thus, joinder would probably have been held to be required under present Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii).

Warner v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 497, 263 P.2d 465 , was an action for damages against defendant telephone company for damages allegedly resulting from the form of listing of the former wife of plaintiff's husband in the telephone directory. The directory listed plaintiff's husband, Caryl Warner, with office and residence address and phone number, followed by two listings for Mrs. Caryl Warner. The first listing had a residential address and phone number different from Caryl Warner, while the second listing for Mrs. Warner corresponded to Caryl Warner's residential address and phone number. After previously sustaining defendant's demurrer, the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the third amended complaint without leave to amend and granted judgment to defendant. The court of appeal, on appeal by plaintiff, affirmed the judgment of the trial court, holding that the former Mrs. Warner was a party required to be joined in the action. Should plaintiff prevail, reasoned the court, and should the omitted party's listing be discontinued as requested, the telephone company would be subjected to a possible future action brought against it by the omitted party. Since the telephone company has a right to be protected against unnecessary litigation to which it might be subjected, the trial court's action was proper in sustaining defendant's demurrer without leave to amend in as much as plaintiff had twice failed to include the omitted party in the amended complaints after the original ruling (121 Cal. App. 2d 497, 500-502) .

In Nau v. Santa Ana Sugar Co. (1926) 79 Cal. App. 685, 250 P. 705 , plaintiff, creditor of the omitted parties, brought an action for a declaration of rights against defendant, also a creditor of the same parties, to determine whether money received by defendant for the benefit of the mutual debtors should be applied to the debt owed to plaintiff or to the debt owed to defendant. Plaintiff owned certain property, which he leased to one of the omitted parties, Buck, who in turn assigned his lease to the other omitted party, Culver, subject to the same terms and conditions, including the creation of an equitable lien on future crops in favor of plaintiff. Defendant sugar-processing company executed with Culver a chattel mortgage on future crops. Culver delivered the crop to defendant for processing, and defendant applied the proceeds of the sale in excess of the value of the crop to the debt of Culver. The court of appeal reversed the judgment in favor of plaintiff on the ground that the trial court had failed to join Buck and Culver as necessary parties. Their presence was required, said the court, for the full protection of defendant, who would be subjected to an inconvenience and danger of future litigation with the omitted parties, since they would not be bound by the judgment in favor of plaintiff and could resist and defend any action brought against Culver by defendant (79 Cal. App. 685, 694-695) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.46

§ 168.46 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)--Partial Assignee or Subrogee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set out in § 168.45.]

_____ [Name] MUST BE JOINED AS A PARTY TO THIS ACTION UNDER SECTION 389(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT IS A PARTIAL _____ [ASSIGNEE or SUBROGEE] OF THE CLAIM ASSERTED BY PLAINTIFF.

Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined. A person who has been partially subrogated to, or has received a partial assignment of, another's claim must be joined in an action by the other on that claim (see Bank of Orient v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 595, 136 Cal. Rptr. 741).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an omitted party must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a). The form sets forth the point that a partial assignee or subrogee must be joined as a party in an action by another on the assigned or subrogated claim. The points and authorities set out in this form should be combined with the general form of points and authorities supporting the contention that joinder is required under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see § 168.45].

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing form may be raised by plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend the complaint to add a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473; see also § 168.04[1]]. The argument may also be raised by defendant when objecting, by answer or demurrer, to the nonjoinder of a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30; see also § 168.04[3]]. The argument may also be raised by the omitted party in support of a noticed motion for an order compelling his or her joinder [see Cuneo v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 452, 454-456, 28 Cal. Rptr. 791 ; see also § 168.04[4]]. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts in the record showing that the omitted party has received a partial assignment of, or has been partially subrogated to, the claim asserted by plaintiff in the action.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and pleading forms relating to assignment of claims, see Ch. 60, Assignments in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion and pleading forms pertaining to subrogation, see Ch. 536, Subrogation in that set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined

In Bank of Orient v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 136 Cal. Rptr. 741 , petitioner savings and loan association, defendant in an underlying action, sought a writ of mandate directing the respondent superior court to order joinder of plaintiff bank's insurer as a plaintiff in the underlying action. In the underlying action, plaintiff bank brought an action to recover funds converted by one of its branch managers, who had deposited some $435,000 in the savings and loan association and had subsequently withdrawn the entire amount. The bank's insurer had paid the bank some $449,000 on its loss and obtained a partial release. After an additional payment of $124,000, it obtained a full release. The bank, in return for these payments, assigned all of its claims and demands arising out of the loss to its insurer. After the trial court refused to order joinder, petitioner sought the writ of mandate to compel it to do so.

The court of appeal granted the writ directing that the insurer be joined as a party to the action. Citing Taylor v. Sanford (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 330, 347, 21 Cal. Rptr. 697 , the court observed that when, in a situation such as this, there has been a partial assignment, all parties claiming an interest in the assignment must be joined as plaintiffs. The court stated that the same reasoning applies to partial subrogees (67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 595) . The court held that because of the partial release executed contemporaneously with the commencement of this action, plaintiff's insurer became a partial assignee and subrogee, possessed of a substantial interest in plaintiff's claims (67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 595-596) . The court concluded that the presence of plaintiff's insurer was compelled under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389 and that the defendant bank should be permitted to file its proposed cross complaint for declaratory relief, offset, and damages against the joined plaintiff (67 Cal. App. 3d 588, 597) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined

In Ferraro v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 162 Cal. Rptr. 238 , plaintiffs brought an action against defendants for damages caused by alleged negligence. Plaintiffs failed to join as parties their insurer, with whom they had reached a settlement and subrogation agreement. On appeal, defendants raised, for the first time, the failure to join an indispensable party. The court of appeal affirmed the decision, holding that while the insurer was a partial subrogee and therefore was required to be joined pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), nonetheless, defendants waived their right to assert the issue by failing to object to the defect in parties until appeal (102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 44-45) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.47

§ 168.47 Supporting Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)--Corporation Required to Be Joined in Shareholder's Derivative Suit Brought on Its Behalf

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set out in § 168.45.]

_____[Name of corporation] MUST BE JOINED AS A PARTY TO THIS ACTION BECAUSE IT IS THE CORPORATION ON WHOSE BEHALF PLAINTIFF IS BRINGING THIS ACTION.

Shareholder's Derivative Action on Behalf of Corporation. A corporation is required to be joined in a representative action brought on its behalf by shareholders, since its rights, not that of the nominal plaintiff, are to be litigated (see Keeler v. Schulte (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 803, 306 P.2d 430 ; Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an omitted party is required to be joined under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), governing compulsory joinder of parties. This form sets forth the point that joinder of a corporation is required when plaintiff shareholders bring an action on the corporation's behalf. The points and authorities set out in this form should be combined with the general form of memorandum of points and authorities set out in § 168.45.

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder arises. For example, the argument supported by the foregoing form may be raised by plaintiff in support of a motion for leave to amend the complaint to add a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473; see also § 168.04[1]]. The argument may also be raised by defendant when objecting, by answer or demurrer, to the nonjoinder of a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30; see also § 168.04[3]]. The argument may also be raised by the omitted party in support of a noticed motion for an order compelling his or her joinder [see Cuneo v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 452, 454-456, 28 Cal. Rptr. 791 ; see also § 168.04[4]]. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms pertaining to shareholder's derivative actions generally, see Ch. 160, Corporations in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to shareholders' derivative suits generally, see Ch. 52, Corporations , in this set. For points and authorities relating to class and representative actions, see Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Shareholder's Derivative Action on Behalf of Corporation

In Keeler v. Schulte (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 306 P.2d 430 , plaintiff brought a representative suit on behalf of a lodge organized as a California corporation, to set aside a deed of lodge property and to enjoin an attempted dissolution of the lodge. Defendants demurred to plaintiff's complaint on the ground that it failed to state a cause of action because of the failure to include the lodge as a party. The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. When plaintiff declined to amend the complaint, the trial court entered judgment dismissing the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of dismissal. Citing Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1 (discussed infra), the Court held that a corporation is an indispensable party to a representative action brought on its behalf, since its rights, not those of the nominal plaintiff, are to be litigated. In this case, the Court observed, plaintiff in a representative capacity was attempting to recapture the lodge's funds and property (47 Cal. 2d 801, 803) . The Court concluded that since plaintiff refused to amend his complaint to join the corporation as a party, the action could not continue on its behalf, and the trial court had no alternative but to order dismissal of the action (47 Cal. 2d 801, 804) .

Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 265 P.2d 1 , involved a stockholder's derivative suit to compel certain individual defendants to transfer to the defendant corporation a certain oil lease in return for stock issued. The court ordered plaintiff to deposit security for the reasonable expenses incurred by defendant corporation and individual defendants.

On appeal by plaintiff, the Supreme Court upheld the trial court's decision to dismiss the action upon failure of plaintiff to obey the security order. The Court held that regardless of the propriety of the trial court's order concerning the individual defendants, plaintiff's refusal in regard to the corporation left the trial court no choice. The stockholders were only nominal plaintiffs, and the rights to be litigated were that of the corporation. Therefore, concluded the Court, when plaintiff failed to furnish the required security for the corporation, the action could not continue against it and since it was an indispensable party to the action, the trial court had no alternative but to dismiss as to all defendants (42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28) .

Counsel should note that both of the above-cited cases were decided before the 1971 revision of the compulsory joinder of parties statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 389]. However, cases decided under the former statute appear still to be good law insofar as they define which persons must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) if subject to the court's process and if joinder would not deprive the court of jurisdiction. These cases, however, are no longer authority insofar as they hold that the court's failure to bring in a particular person as a party to an action deprives the court of jurisdiction to render judgment in an action between the parties already before the court [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535-537 (1971)]. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 on prior California law, see § 168.45[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.48

§ 168.48 Opposing Contention That Omitted Party Is Required to Be Joined Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name] IS NOT REQUIRED TO BE JOINED AS A PARTY TO THIS ACTION UNDER SECTION 389(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, BECAUSE (1) HE/SHE/IT IS NOT SO SITUATED THAT A DISPOSITION OF THIS ACTION IN HIS/HER/ITS ABSENCE WILL AS A PRACTICAL MATTER IMPAIR OR IMPEDE HIS/HER/ITS ABILITY TO PROTECT HIS/HER/ITS CLAIMED INTEREST IN THE SUBJECT OF THIS ACTION, (2) A DISPOSITION OF THIS ACTION IN HIS/HER/ITS ABSENCE WILL NOT LEAVE ANY OF THE PERSONS WHO ARE ALREADY PARTIES TO THIS ACTION SUBJECT TO ANY SUBSTANTIAL RISK OF INCURRING DOUBLE, MULTIPLE, OR OTHERWISE INCONSISTENT OBLIGATIONS BECAUSE OF HIS/HER/ITS CLAIMED INTEREST, AND (3) THE COURT CAN ACCORD COMPLETE RELIEF TO THE PERSONS WHO ARE ALREADY PARTIES TO THIS ACTION, WITHOUT _____'S [name] PRESENCE.

A. Statutory Requirements Not Met. Joinder of a person who claims an interest in the subject of the action is not required when he or she is not so situated that a disposition of the action in his or her absence will as a practical matter impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest; when a disposition of the action in his or her absence will not leave any of the persons already parties to the action subject to substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of his or her claimed interest; and when the court can accord complete relief to the persons already parties to the action without the omitted party's presence (see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)).

B. Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of Omitted Party. Section 389 of the Code of Civil Procedure limits compulsory joinder to those situations in which the absence of a person may result in substantial prejudice to that person or to the parties already before the court (Union Carbide Corp v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 15, 21-24, 201 Cal. Rptr. 580, 679 P.2d 14 ; Copley v. Copley (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 296-297, 178 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see also Camp v. Board of Supervisors (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 354, 176 Cal. Rptr. 620).

[AND/OR]

C. The Complete Relief Clause of Code of Civil Procedure 389(a) Does Not Mandate That, Whenever Feasible, Persons Materially Interested in the Subject of an Action Should Be Joined. Section 389(a)(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure focuses not on whether complete relief can be afforded all possible parties to the action, but on whether complete relief can be afforded the parties named in the action; courts must be careful to avoid converting Section 389 from a discretionary power or a rule of fairness into an arbitrary and burdensome requirement which may thwart rather than accomplish justice (Olszewski v. Scripps Health (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 798, 808, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; Deltakeeper v. Oakdale Irrigation District (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 1100-1109, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a person is required to be joined under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), governing compulsory joinder of parties. This form sets forth the general point that an omitted party need not be joined in an action unless one of the three criteria of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) are satisfied. The form may also be used in opposition to the contention that the action should be dismissed on the ground that a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) cannot be joined [see §§ 168.49, 168.50].

The foregoing points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the issue of joinder arises. For example, the points and authorities set out in this form may be submitted by plaintiff in opposition to the objection, by answer or demurrer, to the nonjoinder of a party, when defendant contends that the omitted party is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30; see also § 168.04[1]]. The points and authorities in this form may also be submitted by either existing party in opposition to a noticed motion by the omitted party for an order compelling his or her joinder [see Cuneo v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 452, 454-456, 28 Cal. Rptr. 791 ; see also § 168.04[4]]. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the claimed interest of the omitted party and show how the absence of the omitted party would not substantially prejudice the rights of either the omitted party or that of existing parties in the action.

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in the foregoing form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 168.45.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For a discussion of amendment of a complaint to bring in a new defendant after the statute of limitations has run, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions in that set.

For a discussion and forms relating to intervention of a party into a pending action, see Ch. 395, Parties in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing a motion for leave to amend a complaint to add a new party, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings in this set.

For points and authorities opposing a demurrer to a complaint for nonjoinder of indispensable parties, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings in this set.

For points and authorities relating to intervention generally, see Ch. 124, Intervention in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of Omitted Party

Union Carbide Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 15, 201 Cal. Rptr. 580, 679 P.2d 14 , was an action under the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16700-16758) for an alleged price-fixing conspiracy. Plaintiffs were indirect end purchasers (consumers) of gas from defendant. Defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate, in part in order to join all persons in the chain of distribution between plaintiffs and defendants as additional parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii).

The Supreme Court denied the writ. The Court stated that the risk of multiple liability must be substantial before joinder of parties will be required under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii). The Court stated that a "substantial risk" means more than a theoretical possibility of the absent party asserting a claim that would result in multiple liability; the risk must be substantial as a practical matter (36 Cal. 3d 15, 21) . The Court further stated that in the context of an indirect-purchaser suit under the Cartwright Act, care must be taken to avoid an application of Code Civ. Proc. § 389 that would thwart the legislative purpose of the Cartwright Act, which is to retain the availability of indirect-purchaser suits as a viable means of enforcing California's antitrust laws. The Court said that the legislative mandate was to avoid unnecessary procedural barriers to indirect-purchaser suits. Thus, unless necessary under the particular facts of the case, the parties should not be joined (36 Cal. 3d 15, 21-22) . The Court concluded that defendants' papers did not demonstrate a substantial risk of multiple liability sufficient to require that additional parties be joined in the complaint (36 Cal. 3d 15, 22) .

Copley v. Copley (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 178 Cal. Rptr. 842 , arose out of an action by two cotrustees of marital and nonmarital trusts for declaratory relief and a petition in probate seeking to determine the propriety of the cotrustees' actions regarding their entry into a stock redemption agreement to fund the nonmarital trust's obligation to pay taxes arising out of the death of the settlor. Each trust held 862,500 shares of common stock in a family-held corporation. The trustees, after extensive negotiations with the Internal Revenue Service, entered into an agreement whereby the fair market value of the stock was set, for tax purposes, at approximately $35 per share. The trustees then sold to the corporation some 672,133 shares of stock held by the nonmarital trust at the agreed market value to pay the settlor's federal estate tax liability, leaving only 190,367 shares in the trust. Subsequently, the trustees caused the corporation to redeem at the same value an additional 102,474 shares of its stock on a pro rata basis from the marital and nonmarital trusts in relation to their respective holdings of the total outstanding shares. The second redemption resulted in 83,946 shares being redeemed from the marital trust and 18,528 shares from the nonmarital trust. Two of the beneficiaries under the nonmarital trust claimed that the stock sold in the first redemption was undervalued and that the nonmarital trust was therefore deprived of its proper pro rata share of the proceeds of the second redemption. The trial court, among other things, found the value of the stock to be approximately $58 per share and ordered the trustees to transfer 173,346 shares of the stock from the marital trust to the nonmarital trust, as well as the dividends received on those shares and the redemption price for additional shares that the nonmarital trust would have sold to the corporation under the second redemption based on what would have been its proper pro rata share. The trial court also removed the trustees from both trusts. After the rendition of the judgment in the case, two potential beneficiaries of the nonmarital trust who had not been named parties to the action filed a notice of motion to vacate the judgment on the ground that they were indispensable parties to the action. The trial court found that it was without jurisdiction to rule on the motion to vacate the judgment. Omitted parties then appealed the order of the trial court. Their appeal, as well as that of the trustees, was consolidated for appeal purposes.

The court of appeal affirmed the order of the trial court relating to the stock and money transfers between the marital and nonmarital trusts, but reversed the order removing trustees from their trusteeship over the nonmarital trust. In determining whether or not the omitted parties were indispensable, the court examined Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as adopted in 1971, and found that the statute limits compulsory joinder to those situations in which the absence of a person may result in substantial prejudice to that person, or to the parties already before the court (126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 296) . Furthermore, stated the court, under the statute as adopted, failure to join an indispensable party did not necessarily deprive the court of the power to render a decision as to the parties before it. Indispensability of a party is tested by looking to the status of the parties at the time relief is to be entered, or at the time the issue of indispensability is raised, rather than to the status of a party at the time the suit is filed. Consequently, said the court, it is not for want of jurisdiction but for discretionary and equitable reasons that a court may decline to proceed with the absent party. Applying this equitable approach, and the test of indispensability at the time the issue was raised, or relief entered, the court concluded that the omitted parties had not been injured or prejudiced by the judgment of the trial court as modified by the opinion of the court of appeal (126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 297) . The trial court had required the transfer of certain stock and money to the nonmarital trust, of which omitted parties were beneficiaries, thereby increasing the value of that trust. The money and stock came from the marital trust, which neither omitted party had an interest in. The court did find that the omitted parties may have suffered a detriment by the removal of the trustees of the nonmarital trust; however, any potential loss or detriment was avoided by the court's reversal of that part of the judgment of the trial court. Consequently, the court found that the omitted parties, having suffered no loss or prejudice, could not assert any basis for equitable relief requiring the court to return the action to the trial court (126 Cal. App. 3d 248, 297) .

Camp v. Board of Supervisors (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 176 Cal. Rptr. 620 , involved one of three separate proceedings commenced by residents, taxpayers, and the Attorney General against a county board of supervisors to declare invalid the county's plan for development for failure to comply with statutory requirements for the development of a general plan concerning land use, housing, and circulation. At trial, defendants apparently brought into issue the joinder of 100 land developers who had received subdivision approval at various stages before issuance of the preliminary injunction. The trial court found, however, that there were no indispensable parties absent from the proceeding. In the first action, the trial court found for defendant. In the other two proceedings, the trial court found for plaintiffs and granted a peremptory writ of mandate compelling the board to vacate its approval of certain subdivision development and a permanent injunction restraining the county from developing or accepting applications for subdivisions in the affected area.

On consolidated appeals, the court of appeal reversed the judgment of the trial court in the first case and affirmed the other two judgments with modifications. On the issue of joinder of parties, the court of appeal found that the trial court's ruling that there were no indispensable parties absent from the case was supported by the record. None of the relief sought in the petitions involved the cancellation or suspension of any subdivision permit previously granted by the board to any developer who was not a party to the action. The court found that nonparty subdividers of land in the county were slightly affected by the proceedings and would be so affected until the county adopted a valid general plan. The court stated that these subdividers could properly be classified as necessary parties, but they were not indispensable, and the trial court did not exceed its jurisdiction in proceeding without them and not pursuing the impractical prospect of joining them (123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 354) .

For discussion of this case, involving the same issue raised in another context, see § 168.50[3][a].

[b] The Complete Relief Clause of Code of Civil Procedure 389(a) Does Not Mandate That, Whenever Feasible, Persons Materially Interested in the Subject of an Action Should Be Joined

In Olszewski v. Scripps Health (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 798, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , plaintiff sought to invalidate liens filed by defendant pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.791. Because plaintiff did not assert an imbedded claim for declaratory relief seeking to invalidate Section 14124.791, the California Supreme Court rejected defendant's contention that the court of appeal erred by deciding the federal preemption issue without making the State of California a party to the action. A person is an indispensable party only when the judgment to be rendered necessarily must affect his rights. In this case, the court could grant the relief requested by plaintiff without injuring or affecting the rights of the State of California. The fact that an adverse ruling against defendants may have a financial impact on the state or require a finding that federal law preempts a California statute does not make the state an indispensable party (30 Cal. 4th 798, 808) .

In Deltakeeper v. Oakdale Irrigation District (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244 , defendants entered into an agreement with various entities for the sale of water by defendants to those entities. As the lead agencies, defendants prepared an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) for the project, which the plaintiffs challenged by a petition for a writ of mandate. The trial court entered an order dismissing the petition for failure to join the other entities which were parties to the agreement. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal clarified that the complete relief clause of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) focuses not on whether complete relief can be afforded all possible parties to the action, but on whether complete relief can be afforded the parties named in the action. In this case, there was no risk of partial or hollow relief to the named parties. Resolution of the adequacy of the EIR would provide them complete relief. (94 Cal. App. 4th 1092, 1101-1109 , citing Countrywide Home Loans, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999)69 Cal. App. 4th 785).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements Not Met

In Salsedo v. California Dept. of Parks and Recreation (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 493 , Salsedo brought a petition for writ of mandate against the California Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) to compel it to reissue his revoked vehicle access permit, which allowed him to engage in commercial surf fishing at Gold Bluffs Beach. Gold Bluffs Beach is a part of Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park, which is managed cooperatively by the DPR and the National Park Service (NPS), a federal entity. After filing the action, Salsedo received a temporary restraining order and an order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued. DPR argued that Salsedo could not show a probability of success because NPS was a necessary and indispensable party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, and complete relief could not be afforded in its absence. The trial court disagreed, and issued the preliminary injunction. The court of appeals affirmed, finding NPS was not a necessary or indispensable party. Although the two agencies developed joint procedures for processing permits such as Salsedo's, legislative history made clear that the state has retained jurisdiction over Gold Bluffs Beach and has sole statutory authority to issue permits. Thus, complete relief could be afforded without NPS (175 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1521-1522).

The following cases were decided under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19, which is the source of Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971 [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 500, 535]. Federal cases interpreting Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a), may be useful in interpreting the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), as amended, in those instances in which a California appellate court has not ruled on a particular issue [see, e.g., Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803] .

In United Automobile Workers v. Brock (1986) 477 U.S. 274, 106 S. Ct. 2523, 91 L. Ed. 2d 228 , a union and several of its members brought suit challenging the Secretary of Labor's interpretation, and resultant guidelines, of the eligibility provisions of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. § 2101). The United States District Court for the District of Columbia held that the guidelines were inconsistent, and ordered the Secretary of Labor to notify all cooperating state agencies of the proper construction of the Trade Act, and to direct those agencies to process anew any claims wrongfully denied as a result of the guidelines by applying the proper eligibility standards. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia reversed on the grounds that the union had no standing to sue under the circumstances, and never discussed the merits of the case. The United States Supreme Court disagreed on the standing issue, and reversed. In its reversal, the Supreme Court also held that the fact that the state agencies had not been joined as parties to the action, and could not be so joined because they were outside the jurisdiction of the district court, was not fatal to the action because the state agencies were not indispensable parties under the meaning of Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(b). The Court noted that the state agencies, who had entered into agreements with the Secretary, were bound to comply with the relief ordered, and if they balked, they would be found in breach of agreement. Such a finding would cause employers in that agency's state to lose certain tax credits against their liability for federal unemployment tax. The district court could therefore issue an order that would result in proper action by the state agency, albeit through an indirect method. Thus, the court was not unable to grant in full the relief sought by petitioners in the absence of the joinder of the state agencies. In addition, the state agencies themselves would not be prejudiced by not being joined in the action, because they would be fully reimbursed by the federal government for the Trade Act benefits they would pay, and for the administrative costs of processing those payments. Thus, the state agencies were not indispensable parties, and the failure to join them was not an obstacle to the suit (477 U.S. 274, 292-293) .

In New England Patriots Football Club, Inc. v. University of Colorado (1st Cir. 1979) 592 F.2d 1196 , plaintiff football team sued to enjoin defendants from contracting with its head coach while he was contracted to the team. A preliminary injunction was granted, and defendants appealed, contending that the head coach was an indispensable party who should have been joined. The federal court of appeals affirmed, rejecting defendants' contention. The court observed that historically in induced breach of contract cases, the contracting party allegedly induced was not a party to that action. In this action, the head coach was allowed to file an amicus brief. Moreover, the court stated, no unfairness resulted to defendants by reason of his absence, nor were the general rights of plaintiff and the head coach in the underlying contract affected by the decision. Therefore, under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a), the head coach was not an indispensable party (592 F.2d 1196, 1201) .

Kaiser v. Local No. 83 (9th Cir. 1978) 577 F.2d 642 , arose out of an action by an employee who sued defendant labor union for alleged breach of contract of its duty to represent him fairly in grievance proceedings against his employer. The district court dismissed the proceeding for failure to join the employer as an indispensable party. Employee filed an amended complaint joining his employer, and the district court granted summary judgment to defendants. The court of appeals reversed the district court's ruling as to the employer being an indispensable party, holding that neither the employer nor the union is an indispensable party in a suit by an employee union member against the other when the action against the union is based on the statutory duty of fair representation, or the action against the employer is based on a violation of the collective bargaining agreement. In such cases, complete relief could be accorded without the joinder of the other (577 F.2d 642, 644) .

Miller v. United States (6th Cir. 1978) 583 F.2d 857 , involved an action by plaintiffs, owners of property adjoining Lake Superior against the United States to recover damages caused by flooding. Plaintiffs alleged that the manner in which flood gates were operated by the federal government resulted in a loss of some 6,000 square feet of lake-front property submerged beneath the lake. The district court dismissed the action on the ground that plaintiffs had failed to join the state of Michigan as a party required to be joined, since the state had title to the land now submerged under navagible water. The federal court of appeals reversed the order of the district court, holding that plaintiffs did not by their action seek to hold Michigan responsible and a judgment for or against the federal government would not bind the state; therefore, its interests would not be impaired or impeded by any disposition in the matter in its absence (583 F.2d 857, 862) .

Air-Exec, Inc. v. Two Jacks, Inc. (10th Cir. 1978) 584 F.2d 942 , arose out of an action by plaintiff against defendant for conversion of an airplane. On appeal, the federal court of appeals rejected defendant's argument that a certain bank was an indispensable party under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a)(2)(ii), because it had a security interest executed by plaintiff in the airplane allegedly converted by defendants. The court held, among other things, that the bank's interest in the airplane was insufficient to compel joinder in this action. This was an action for conversion, the court noted, and the bank was not a party through whom the defendant converter could claim title, or right to possession, to defeat the action for conversion. Moreover, the court stated, no harm resulted to defendant by the judgment of the court rendered in the bank's absence requiring defendant to pay damages for the conversion. Although the bank could compel plaintiff to pay on its obligation on the airplane by instituting its own action, defendant would be subrogated to any possible bank claim by the amount of the judgment in favor of plaintiff. Therefore, the court concluded, the bank's absence would not subject defendant to inconsistent obligations arising from any judgment in the action (584 F.2d 942, 944-945) .

In People, etc. v. City of South Lake Tahoe (E.D. Cal. 1978) 466 F. Supp. 527 , plaintiff State of California sought to prevent defendant city and a local planning agency from constructing the California segments of a road project at the south end of Lake Tahoe without first complying with certain applicable state and federal laws. Plaintiff argued that defendants were subject to and violated applicable provisions of the regional planning agency. Defendants claimed that the suit should be dismissed for failure to join the regional planning agency as required by Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19(a)(2)(ii), since a state court was considering the same issue in an action brought by the regional planning agency and there was a substantial risk that defendants would be subject to inconsistent obligations. The district court rejected defendant's claim, holding that a resolution of the issue before the respective trial courts could result in only one possible obligation by defendants, that is, to comply with the regional agency's provisions; consequently, that agency was not required to be joined, since there would not be any inconsistent obligations incurred by defendants (466 F. Supp. 527, 540-541) .

In Wylain, Inc. v. Kidde Consumer Durables Corp. (D. Del. 1977) 74 F.R.D. 434 , plaintiff brought an action against a Delaware corporation, alleging unfair competition and other misconduct. Defendant moved to dismiss for failure to join as indispensable parties two officers of the corporation who had knowledge that the acts were committed by two associated corporations. The district court denied the motion, holding, among other things, that no particular harm would befall the omitted parties as a result of their absence in the case, since their property would not be jeopardized and their ability to defend subsequent litigation would not be impaired (74 F.R.D. 434, 436) .

[b] Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of Omitted Party

Harboring Villas Homeowners Assn. v. Superior Court (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , involved an action by a homeowners association composed of owners of condominium units against a developer. The association sought compensatory damages for construction defects. The trial court sustained the developers's demurrer on the grounds of misjoinder of parties and ordered the association to amend its complaint to name the secured lenders of each condominium unit. The association filed a writ proceeding (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 427-428) . The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order sustaining the demurrer and to enter a new and different order overruling the demurrer (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 433) . The court held, quoting from Union Carbide Corp. v. Superior (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 15, 22, 201 Cal. Rptr. 580, 679 P.2d 14 , held that the lenders are not indispensable parties because the pleadings do not demonstrate a substantial risk of multiple liability sufficient to require that additional parties be joined in the complaint (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 428) . The joinder claim was raised by way of demurrer. Observing that a party may be added to an action at any stage, the court in Union Carbide, quoting from the California Law Revision Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389, which quotes pertinent observations from the Advisory Committees notes on Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 19, stated that a joinder question should be decided with reasonable promptness, but decision may be properly deferred if adequate information is not available at the time (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 429) . Thus, a trial court does not have to make an immediate determination of what parties must be joined at the pleading stage (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 430) . Moreover, the court in Union Carbide interpreted of Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii) which permits joinder where an existing party to the action may incur "a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations." A "substantial risk" means more than a theoretical possibility of the absent party's asserting a claim that would result in multiple liability. The risk must be substantial as a practical matter (63 Cal. App. 4th 426, 429-430) .

In Noguera v. North Monterey County Unified Sch. Dist. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 64, 164 Cal. Rptr. 808 , plaintiffs brought an action for writ of mandate, alleging improper termination of employment in conjunction with the formation of a unified school district. Plaintiffs contended that pursuant to provisions of the Education Code, the new school district was required to offer them employment. On appeal from a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint for failure to state a cause of action, the court of appeal reversed. The court held, among other things, that the plaintiffs' failure to join as indispensable parties the newly employed persons was not error. The court said that the omitted parties were not indispensable to the disposition of the case against the parties before the court, but were necessary parties in the sense that the main issue affected their own interests. The court did suggest that the better procedure would have been for the trial court to have ordered their joinder (106 Cal. App. 3d 64, 72-73) .

For further discussion of this case, see § 168.50[4][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.49

§ 168.49 Supporting Contention That Action Must Be Dismissed Without Prejudice Because Omitted Party Described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) Cannot Be Joined [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general form of points and authorities supporting the contention that an omitted party is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) (see § 168.45) and, if appropriate, with points and authorities relating to specific reasons why the omitted party must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) (see, e.g., §§ 168.46, 168.47)].

THIS ACTION SHOULD BE DISMISSED BECAUSE _____ [name] IS REQUIRED TO BE JOINED AS A PARTY TO THIS ACTION UNDER SECTION 389(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE AND HE/SHE/IT CANNOT BE JOINED, BECAUSE _____ [HE/SHE/IT IS NOT SUBJECT TO THE COURT'S PROCESS and/or JOINDER OF _____ (name) WOULD DEPRIVE THE COURT OF JURISDICTION OVER THE SUBJECT MATTER OF THIS ACTION].

[EITHER]

Omitted Party Not Subject to Court's Process. When joinder of an omitted party described in Section 389(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be obtained because he or she is not subject to the court's process, and the court has determined that it cannot in equity and good conscience proceed among the parties before it, the action must be dismissed without prejudice, the absent party being regarded as indispensable (see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b); see also Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 175-176, 124 Cal. Rptr. 63).

[AND/OR]

Joinder of Omitted Party Would Deprive Court of Jurisdiction Over Subject Matter. When joinder of an omitted party described in Section 389(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be obtained because joinder would deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter, and the court has determined that it cannot in equity and good conscience proceed among the parties before it, the action must be dismissed without prejudice, the absent party being regarded as indispensable (see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b); see also Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241-242, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803 ; Vanoni v. County of Sonoma (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 746-747, 115 Cal. Rptr. 485).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an action should be dismissed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) because a person described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) has not and cannot be made a party to the action. The first alternative paragraph should be used if the omitted party cannot be joined because he or she is not subject to service of process. The second alternative paragraph should be used if the omitted party cannot be joined because such joinder would deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction. This form should be used in conjunction with the general form of points and authorities supporting the contention that the omitted party is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) as set out in § 168.45 and, if appropriate, with points and authorities relating to specific reasons why the omitted party is a party described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) [see, e.g., §§ 168.46, 168.47].

Counsel should combine the foregoing points and authorities with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of nonjoinder of indispensable parties arises. For example, defendant might make the above argument in conjunction with a demurrer for defect of parties [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30, 430.70; see also § 168.04[3]] or in support of a subsequent motion to dismiss the action for failure to join an indispensable party. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion of the relevant facts concerning the interest of the omitted party and why joinder cannot be obtained.

[b] When a Party Is Indispensable

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971, a party is to be regarded as indispensable only in the conclusional sense that in his or her absence, the court has decided that the action should be dismissed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b); 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535 (1970); see also Kraus v. Willow Park Public Golf Course (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 366, 140 Cal. Rptr. 744 (see § 168.50[3][b])].

The California Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 states that in deciding whether or not a particular omitted party whose joinder is not feasible is an indispensable party, the court must examine the facts of the case pragmatically and choose between the alternatives of proceeding with the action in the omitted party's absence or dismissing the case without prejudice to the plaintiff. Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) sets out four factors to be considered in making this decision.

The first factor relates to the effect the judgment would have on the omitted party, or on the existing parties. The court should consider whether or not the omitted party would be adversely affected in a practical sense by any judgment and, if so, whether the prejudice would be immediate and serious, or remote and minor. In addition, the court should consider whether or not an existing party would, as a result of any judgment, be subjected to a serious threat of future litigation by an omitted party.

The second factor relates to the means by which a court, existing party, or omitted party can avert or lessen any prejudice. The court can shape relief or take other protective measures, for example, awarding money damages in lieu of specific relief. A defendant may also take measures to avoid prejudice, such as bringing in an omitted party by interpleader or cross complaint. In addition, an omitted party can voluntarily appear in the action or intervene and the court should consider whether or not such action would impose undue hardship on him or her.

The third factor relates to the adequacy of the judgment and whether or not such a judgment can be accomplished in the absence of the omitted party.

The fourth factor relates to the practical effect of a dismissal on the plaintiff and whether or not plaintiff could effectively bring his or her action in another forum [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 538-539 (1970)].

Indispensable parties have been identified as those who are essential for a complete determination of the controversy or the ability of a court to enter any effective judgment. Whether a party qualifies as indispensable is ordinarily treated as a matter where the trial court has a large measure of discretion in weighing factors of practical realities and other considerations. Accordingly, the trial court's determination that an entity is an indispensable party will be reversed only if it amounts to an abuse of discretion [Kaczorowski v. Board of Supervisors for the County of Mendicino (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 564, 568, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 14] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 168.50 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Omitted Party Not Subject to Court's Process

Atlantic Richfield Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 124 Cal. Rptr. 63 , arose out of mandate proceedings instituted by petitioner to compel the trial court to dismiss an action against petitioner. Petitioner was defendant in an underlying action for fraud and an accounting brought by royalty claimants under an oil and gas lease on property leased by plaintiffs' predecessors in interest. Petitioner moved to dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum, contending, among other things, that the court lacked jurisdiction to hear the matter, since some 57 purported assignees of the interest of the original lessors, residing in Texas, were indispensable parties and had not been joined. The trial court denied the motion to dismiss, and petitioners sought review in the court of appeal. That court denied the petition for a writ of mandate on the ground that petitioner's motion to dismiss was an improper procedure to raise the issues involved, including failure to join indispensable parties. The Supreme Court granted a hearing and retransferred the matter to the court of appeal with instructions to issue the alternative writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the peremptory writ compelling the trial court to dismiss the action before it for inconvenient forum (51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 176) . The court interpreted the Supreme Court's order as a determination that petitioner had properly raised the issue of nonjoinder of an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389. Directing itself to that issue, the court found that the 57 claimants to the lessors' royalty interest in the leased property were required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(ii). These claimants were nonresidents of California and not subject to the jurisdiction of California process. The court concluded that these parties were indispensable under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) because a judgment rendered in their absence would be prejudicial to petitioners because of the conflicting claims on the same fund, and it did not appear that any prejudice could be mitigated by protective provisions or any other measure in an eventual judgment. Furthermore, plaintiffs had a remedy by suing in Texas where jurisdiction could be obtained and all claimants to ownership of the lessors' royalty interest could be brought before the court (51 Cal. App. 3d 168, 175-176) .

For discussion of another issue raised in this case, see § 168.45[3][a].

[b] Joinder of Omitted Party Would Deprive Court of Jurisdiction Over Subject Matter

The facts and procedural background of Conrad v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 120 Cal. Rptr. 803 , are discussed in § 168.45[3][b]. In Conrad, the court of appeal found that the federal agency involved in the action was required to be joined in the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)(2)(i), since it had a direct pecuniary interest in the outcome of the case. However, unless Congress had vested state courts with jurisdiction to determine matters in which the United States claimed an interest, a state court had no power to exercise jurisdiction in matters where a federal agency had a direct pecuniary interest (47 Cal. App. 3d 237, 241-242) .

The facts and procedural background of Vanoni v. County of Sonoma (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 115 Cal. Rptr. 485 , are discussed in § 168.50[3][a]. In Vanoni, the court of appeal implied that normally a contractor who performed work pursuant to a contract with a government entity was required to be joined in a taxpayer suit seeking a declaration that the contract was void. In this case, however, the contractor was the United States, and joinder of the United States, the court held, was not feasible, since it would not be subject to the jurisdiction of the state courts (40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 746-747) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 168 PARTIES
PART II. FORMS

16-168 California Points & Authorities § 168.50

§ 168.50 Opposing Contention That Action Must Be Dismissed Without Prejudice Because Omitted Party Described in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) Cannot Be Joined [Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THIS ACTION SHOULD NOT BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 389(b) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, BECAUSE THE COURT CAN IN EQUITY AND GOOD CONSCIENCE PROCEED AMONG THE PARTIES ALREADY BEFORE THE COURT.

A. When Court Can Proceed If Joinder Not Feasible. If a person described in Section 389(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be made a party, the court must determine whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it, or be dismissed without prejudice, the absent parties being thus regarded as indispensable. The factors to be considered in determining whether or not the action should be dismissed include (1) the extent to which a judgment rendered in the omitted party's absence would be prejudicial to him or her, or those who are already parties; (2) the extent to which, by protective provisions in the judgment, or by the shaping of relief, or other measures, the court may lessen or avoid any prejudice; (3) whether or not the judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate; and (4) whether or not plaintiff will have an adequate remedy should the action be dismissed for nonjoinder (Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b); see People ex rel Lungren v. Community Redevelopment Agency (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 879-885, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 ; Vanoni v. County of Sonoma (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 746-747, 115 Cal. Rptr. 485).

B. Time When Indispensability Tested. Indispensability is tested by looking to the status of the parties at the time relief is to be entered, or at the time the issue of indispensability is raised, rather than to their status at the time the suit is filed (Kraus v. Willow Park Public Golf Course (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 364-370, 140 Cal. Rptr. 744).

[Optional] C. Court Can Proceed in Absence of Necessary or Proper Parties. A trial court may, in its discretion, properly proceed in an action in the absence of parties who normally should have been joined because they were necessary or proper parties to the action and whose presence may be necessary for a complete determination of the action when the court can render a judgment between the parties before the court without affecting the interests of the omitted parties (see Bank of California v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 524-527, 106 P.2d 879 ; see also Camp v. Board of Supervisors (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 354, 176 Cal. Rptr. 620).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that an action must be dismissed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) for failure to join a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) when joinder is not feasible and the court can in equity and good conscience proceed among the parties before it. The optional Paragraph C may be included in the points and authorities when the omitted party is a person who should normally have been joined in order for the court to make a complete determination of the action, but the court can nonetheless render a judgment between the parties before it without affecting the interests of the omitted party.

The form may be used in conjunction with the general form of points and authorities opposing the contention that the omitted party is required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), as set out in § 168.48, when counsel wishes to argue that even if the omitted party should have been joined in order for the court to have made a complete determination of the action, the court nonetheless can render a judgment between the parties before it without affecting the interests of the absent party, so that the action should not be dismissed.

Counsel should combine these points and authorities with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of nonjoinder of indispensable parties arises. For example, plaintiff might make the above argument in opposition to a demurrer for defect of parties [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(d), 430.30, 430.70; see also § 168.04[3]] or in opposition to a subsequent motion to dismiss the action for failure to join an indispensable party. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the interest of the omitted party and the relief sought, and indicate how the judgment can be rendered to allow the court in equity and good conscience to proceed among the parties before it.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 168.49.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Court Can Proceed If Joinder Not Feasible

People ex rel Lungren v. Community Redevelopment Agency (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 , involved an action brought by the Attorney General against an Indian tribe, a redevelopment agency and a transfer corporation. In the complaint the Attorney General challenged actions of the agency in entering into a contract with the tribe under which the Agency would transfer real property owned or acquired by it to the tribe for use in the tribe's gaming operations, and in exchange the tribe would give the agency a share of the gambling proceeds. The complaint sought a declaration that (1) the conveyance of the lands to the tribe or transfer corporation under the agreement was subject to an implied reservation by the state of exclusive and complete civil and criminal jurisdiction, (2) the agency had no power to surrender, impair, or embarrass the state's exclusive, sovereign civil or criminal jurisdiction over land, including the state's jurisdiction to prohibit or regulate gambling on such land, (3) the agreement was void to the extent it purported to dispose of issues related to the conduct of class III gambling in the state, and (4) the agreement was void as inconsistent with Cal. Const., art IV § 19(e). The complaint also sought a preliminary injunction prohibiting the agency from conveying to the tribe title to any property to be used in connection with any prohibited gambling operation under California law except to the extent that such a conveyance is expressly permitted by statute or by an approved tribal-state compact. The tribe moved to quash service of the summons on the ground that the tribe possessed sovereign immunity from unconsented suit, which immunity had not been waived. The agency filed its own motion demurring to the complaint on the ground that the Attorney General could not join the tribe because of the tribe's sovereign immunity, and that since the tribe was an party indispensable to a proper adjudication of the case the court was compelled to dismiss the entire action. The trial court concluded that the tribe was an indispensable party, and that the inability to join the tribe required dismissal of the action. Judgment was entered dismissing the Attorney General's complaint and an appeal followed (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 870-874) .

The court of appeal reversed. The court initially concluded that the tribe was a proper party to be joined in the suit, and was therefore a necessary party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 876-879) . The court went on to examine whether the tribe was also an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b). It is under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) that a court must decide whether a party is truly indispensable. If a party is found under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) to be necessary to the action but cannot be a party, the court shall determine whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it, or whether the action should be dismissed, the absent person being thus regarded as indispensable. In making this determination the court should consider the four factors listed in the statute (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 879-880) . With regard to the first factor in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b), i.e., to what extent a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to him or her or those who are already parties, this is essentially the same assessment that must be made under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) in determining whether a party's absence would impair or impede that party's ability to protect his or her interests, and determining whether proceeding to judgment would subject existing parties to inconsistent obligations (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 880) . The court, in discussing Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) had noted that although the tribe and agency have interests under the agreement that are not identical, the tribe's object in the litigation, i.e., establishing that the agency acted lawfully in entering into the agreement, would duplicate that of the agency and would be adequately represented by the agency in the present litigation. There is authority, however, stating that a party to a contract is always an indispensable party to a suit to set aside that contract (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 877) . The effect of this, however, as a firm rule in determining whether to dismiss would be to eliminate the exercise of discretion accorded the trial court under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a). The mere fact of participation in a contract would render a party indispensable. The court then distinguished the cases stating this rule (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 877-878 . Turning to the factor of prejudice under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b), the court cited Makah Indian Tribe v. Verity (9th Cir. 1990) 910 F.2d 555 , in which the court adopted a public rights exception to traditional joinder rules. In so doing, the court noted that the absent tribes would not be prejudiced because under the facts all of the tribes had an equal interest in an administrative process that is lawful. In the instant case, however, it could not be said that the absent tribe would not be prejudiced because all of the parties have an equal interest in a process that is lawful. The tribe was not subject to the laws that the Attorney General sought to enforce and would have very little interest in enforcement of those laws. Nonetheless, the court concluded that the interest the public has in obtaining some level of review of actions of the agency in transferring property and placing it beyond the reach of the state's police power is sufficiently important that it provides an exception to the general application of the rule, under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, that an action challenging a contract should be dismissed if a party to the contract cannot be joined as a party. The court must recognize the interest of the citizens of the state, as represented by the Attorney General, in providing some review of the power of a local agency to permanently relinquish its interest in property within its control (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 882-883) .

The court next turned to the third and forth factors listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b). With regard to the third factor, i.e., the adequacy of the judgment that could be rendered in the absence of an unavailable party, the court concluded that the judgment that could be rendered in the absence of the tribe would be completely adequate. The only real issue for the court to consider is whether the agency had the power to enter into the contract it did with the agency. Although the tribe would be affected by the outcome of the court's decision on the issue, the presence or absence of the tribe would not appear to have any direct resolution of the legal issues themselves (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 883) . With regard to the fourth factor dealing with the adequacy of the remedy available to the plaintiff if the action was dismissed for nonjoinder, the court noted that there would be no other remedy available to the Attorney General once the contract takes effect and the real property is transferred to the tribe. This factor clearly weighted in the court's decision. The court's overall conclusion was that it could not in equity and good conscience affirm the trial court's dismissal of the action for failure to join the tribe. The trial court has jurisdiction over the suit and can enter a binding judgment on the parties before the court (56 Cal. App. 4th 868, 883-884) .

Vanoni v. County of Sonoma (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 115 Cal. Rptr. 485 , arose out of an action by taxpayers of a county against the county, a coterminous flood control district, and the members of both the county board of supervisors and the board of directors of the flood control district. Taxpayers sought declaratory relief and an injunction prohibiting further action under a contract between the district and the United States until the contract was approved by the voters as required by the California Constitution. Plaintiff taxpayers contended that by entering into the contract, the county and district became obligated for debts in excess of the county's annual revenue and income, and therefore the contract had to be approved by two-thirds of the electors within the county. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed the subsequent judgment for defendants. in response to the appeal, defendants, for the first time, raised the issue of the United States being an indispensable party to the action because it had interests in the contract that would be affected by the relief sought by plaintiffs.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. However, the court of appeal did discuss the issue raised by defendants concerning whether the United States was an indispensable party to the action because it had interests in the contract that would be affected by any relief sought by plaintiffs. The court first determined that the issue could be raised for the first time on appeal (40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 746) . It also determined that parties to a contract should usually be joined in an action challenging the validity of the contract, but that joinder of the United States, a party to the contract that was the subject of the action before the court, was not feasible, because the United States was not subject to the jurisdiction of state courts. When joinder is not feasible, the court must look to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) to determine whether in equity or good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it, or should be dismissed without prejudice, the absent party thus being regarded as indispensable. The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) sets forth the following four factors to be considered by the court in making that determination: (1) the extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to him or her, or to those already parties; (2) the extent to which, by protective measures, by the shaping of relief, or by other measures, the prejudice can be lessened or avoided; (3) whether or not a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate; and (4) whether or not the plaintiff or cross complainant will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder. The court concluded that the term "indispensable" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) was a term used only in a conclusional sense--that is, a person is regarded as indispensable when he or she cannot be made a party and, on consideration of the relevant factors, it is determined that in his or her absence it would be preferable to dismiss he action. The court could find no direct authority concerning whether or not, under the circumstances of the case, the United States should be regarded as indispensable. However, the court declined to make that determination. Instead, the court found, equity and good conscience suggested that this type of action should proceed rather than be dismissed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b), since dismissal would leave plaintiffs without a remedy in the state court, one of the factors to be considered in determining whether or not the omitted party is indispensable (40 Cal. App. 3d 743, 747) .

For discussion of an additional issue raised by this case, see § 168.49[3][b].

[b] Time When Indispensability Tested

Kraus v. Willow Park Public Golf Course (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 140 Cal. Rptr. 744 , involved an action by certain limited partners in a limited partnership against a corporate assignee of the indebtedness to all those limited partners who had paid money for the development of a golf course, and against various other individuals. Plaintiffs alleged, among other things, fraud, breach of contract, conversion, and fraudulent conveyance. The trial court found for plaintiffs based on evidence which indicated that plaintiffs and other limited partners had each invested money toward the construction of a golf course, but that the defendants never intended to use the money for that purpose. The trial court also set the respective percentages of ownership of all the general and limited partners, including those limited partners not before the court. This action did not affect the respective percentages of ownership of any of the limited partners. Defendants appealed from the judgment of the trial court, raising for the first time the issue of the failure to join all the limited partners. Defendants contended that absent partners were indispensable parties and that the trial court lacked jurisdiction over the action because of their absence. At the time the case began in litigation, Code Civ. Proc. § 389 had not been amended to its present form.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment of the trial court, rejected defendants' argument that the omitted limited partners were indispensable parties. The court discussed in detail both former Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1957, and Code Civ. Proc. § 389, as amended in 1971, concerning what constituted an indispensable party and what effect failure to join that party would have in a pending action. The court observed that many cases held that failure to join an indispensable party deprived the court of jurisdiction over the case. The court rejected these holdings, finding that even before the 1971 amendment, a trial court still had power to render a decision on the case before it in the absence of an indispensable party. The court observed that it was not for want of jurisdiction that the trial court would not proceed further with a case, but for reasons of equity and convenience (73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 364) . The court also noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 389 as amended in 1971 substantially conformed to FRCP, Rule 19, relating to the compulsory joinder of parties. Relying on the California Law Review Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 and the Advisory Committee's Note to FRCP, Rule 19, regarding the reasons for adopting the respective provisions, the court stated that failure to join an omitted party who may be regarded as indispensable was not a jurisdictional defect under the new Code Civ. Proc. § 389 in the technical sense (73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 365-367) . Although the trial court would have no jurisdiction over the omitted party, and its judgment could not bind him or her, the court did have jurisdiction over existing parties and would have the power to render a judgment affecting their interests. Therefore, indispensability was not a matter of jurisdiction in the strict sense of the term. Rather, it was more accurately a consideration so crucial to equity that dismissal was in order if, for whatever reason, an indispensable party could not be joined. The court further stated that indispensability is to be tested by looking to the status of the parties at the time that relief is to be entered, or at the time that the issue of indispensability is raised, rather than to their status at the time the suit is filed (73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 368) . Consequently, the court found that the judgment of the trial court should not be reversed on the ground that the absent limited partners were indispensable parties to the suit. The case had been fully tried, and until the appeal, no objection had been raised to the absence of the parties. The trial court's decision did not in a real and practical sense adversely affect the interests of the absent limited partners. While defendants may be subjected to some risk of multiple lawsuits, the court implied that because of the judgment rendered, the risk was not a substantial one (73 Cal. App. 3d 354, 369-370) .

[c] Court Can Proceed in Absence of Necessary or Proper Parties

Bank of California v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 516, 106 P.2d 879 , arose out of an action by petitioners for a writ of prohibition to restrain the respondent superior court from proceeding with the trial in the underlying action without bringing in certain beneficiaries of a will alleged to be necessary and indispensable parties. Petitioner bank, executor of decedent's will, and petitioner hospital, residuary legatee and devisee under the terms of the will, were defendants in an underlying action brought by plaintiff, a niece and legatee of the decedent, to enforce provisions of an alleged contract by which the decedent agreed to leave her entire estate to plaintiff. Although all beneficiaries were named defendants in the action, only petitioners were served summons. Petitioners argued that since the complaint challenged the right of every legatee and devisee to share in the estate, and prayed for the award of the entire estate, any judgment without the absent defendants would subject petitioners to inconvenience, expense, and the burden of future litigation. The trial court denied petitioners' motions for compulsory joinder, and petitioners applied for a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial until the other parties were brought in. The Supreme Court granted an alternative writ pending the outcome of its decision.

The Supreme Court discharged the alternative writ and denied the peremptory writ of prohibition (16 Cal. 2d 516, 527) . In doing so, the Court discussed in detail what constituted indispensable and necessary parties. As to indispensable parties, the Court held that among those types of persons who were indispensable parties were persons who had undetermined interests in the same property, or in a particular trust fund, when one of them seeks, in an action, to recover all of it, to fix his or her share, or to recover a portion claimed by him or her. The Court said that such parties were indispensable because any judgment in favor of one claimant for part of the property or fund would necessarily determine the amount or extent which remains available to the others (16 Cal. 2d 516, 521) . Necessary parties, on the other hand, the Court explained, were normally persons who were interested in the action in the sense that they might possibly be affected by a decision, or whose interests in the subject matter or transaction are such that it cannot finally and completely be settled without them, but nevertheless their interests are so separable that a decree may be rendered between the parties before the court without affecting those others. These latter may be necessary to a complete determination of an action, but are not indispensable. The Court stated that these persons should normally be joined, but when, for example, it is impossible to find them, or bring them in, the action may proceed in regard to those parties who are present (16 Cal. 2d 516, 523) .

The Supreme Court found that the omitted parties, the remaining distributees of the estate, were not indispensable parties, but only necessary parties, since the action was not to recover the entire estate, but to impose a constructive trust on the property of each of the individual legatees, and was against the executor and a distributee, personally. In actions of this type, the Court said, the distributees of the estate are considered to succeed to the legal title of the estate, and should plaintiff prevail, they would be considered to hold, individually, as trustees, only the property that came to each of them and none of the distributees would be interested in the granting or denial of similar relief as to any other. Consequently, the absent parties would not be bound by the judgment one way or the other, and their property interests would not be affected. Therefore, the Court concluded, the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed without them and to determine the rights of the parties actually before it (16 Cal. 2d 516, 524-527) .

Counsel should note that the Bank of California case was decided before the 1971 revision of the compulsory joinder of parties statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 389]. However, cases decided under the former statute still appear to be good law insofar as they define which persons must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) if subject to the court's process and if joinder would not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Indeed, the Law Revision Commission Comment to the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389, citing the Bank of California case, states that the factors to be considered by the court in determining whether or not to dismiss an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b) are substantially those that have guided the courts for years [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 536]. The prior cases, however, are no longer authority insofar as they hold that the court's failure to bring in a particular person as a party to an action deprives the court of jurisdiction to render judgment in an action between the parties already before the court [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535-537 (1971)]. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 on prior California law, see § 168.45.

The facts and procedural background of Camp v. Board of Supervisors (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 176 Cal. Rptr. 620 , are discussed in § 168.48, under [3], Joinder Not Required When Neither Omitted Party nor Existing Parties Substantially Prejudiced by Absence of Omitted Party. In Camp, the court of appeal held that the trial court's ruling that there were no indispensable parties absent in an action brought to declare invalid a county's general development plan was supported by the evidence. The court noted that none of the relief sought in the petitions in the case involved the cancellation or suspension of any subdivision permit previously granted by the board to any developer who was not a party to the action. Although there were nonparty subdividers of land in the county who would be slightly affected by the court's ruling until a valid general plan was adopted, these subdividers, the court stated, could properly be classified as necessary parties, but they were not indispensable. Consequently, the court concluded, the trial court did not exceed its jurisdiction in proceeding without them and not pursuing the impractical prospect of joining them (123 Cal. App. 3d 334, 354) .

Counsel should note that Code Civ. Proc. § 389 no longer uses the term "necessary parties." However, the courts have continued to use that term to characterize absent parties who would be proper parties to an action and who are necessary to a complete determination of the action and should therefore be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) but in whose absence the court can nonetheless accord complete relief to the parties already before it without prejudicially affecting the interests of the absent parties, so that dismissal is not required under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Court Can Proceed If Joinder Not Feasible

In Citizens Task Force on Sohio v. Board of Harbor Comm'rs (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 812, 153 Cal. Rptr. 584, 591 P.2d 1236 , petitioner sought a writ of mandate challenging the adequacy of an environmental impact report prepared jointly by a city port and the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) with regard to a project to move crude oil from a city harbor overland to an out-of-state site. The trial court granted respondents' motion to compel joinder of the PUC and transferred the matter to the Supreme Court on the ground that joinder of the PUC deprived it of jurisdiction over the subject matter. The Supreme Court transferred the case back to the trial court, holding that although the PUC could not properly be made a party, the trial court should nonetheless have proceeded in the matter without its presence. Defendant port, the Court noted, was the first of the two agencies to act on the project and was therefore the lead agency and, as such, it was required under Pub. Res. Code § 21167 to defend the report in the action challenging its adequacy (23 Cal. 3d 812, 814) .

[b] Time When Indispensability Tested

The facts and procedural background of Ferraro v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 162 Cal. Rptr. 238 , are discussed in § 168.46, under Additional Authorities, Partial Assignees or Subrogees Required to Be Joined. In that case, the court of appeal held that the failure of defendant to object to any defect in parties at the trial of the case constituted a waiver of the issue and therefore defendant could not assert it for the first time on appeal. Although the court conceded that the omitted party, an insurer and partial subrogee, was a party who should have been joined pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), it did not expressly rule whether or not the omitted party was an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b). However, because the court of appeal affirmed the action of the trial court in entering judgment for plaintiffs and reducing the amount of damages awarded by the jury to plaintiffs, the decision in effect implied that the insurer was not an indispensable party pursuant to § 389(b), since the trial court had shaped the relief so that no prejudice occurred to defendant and there was no substantial risk that defendant could be subjected to multiple damages as a result of any action taken by the omitted party (102 Cal. App. 3d 33, 44-48) .

[c] Court Can Proceed in Absence of Necessary or Proper Parties

Bowles v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 574, 283 P.2d 704 , involved a proceeding in prohibition by absent beneficiaries of a trust to restrain the superior court in an underlying action brought by other beneficiaries for removal of trustees. Petitioners also sought to have court orders already made relating to the removal and appointment of new trustees declared null and void. In the underlying action, petitioners had sought to intervene and/or be joined as necessary and indispensable parties to that action. The Supreme Court held that the trial court, having jurisdiction to proceed to protect property, acted within its jurisdiction, and the denial of petitioners' application for intervention or joinder was within its discretion. The Court stated that although the absent beneficiaries were proper parties, they were not indispensable parties required to be joined in the action for the removal of the trustees, since that action involved the preservation of the trust and not the particular interest of the beneficiaries of the trust property (44 Cal. 2d 574, 582-584) .

Counsel should note that the above-cited case was decided before the 1971 revision of the compulsory joinder of parties statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 389]. However, cases decided under the former statute still appear to be good law insofar as they define which persons must be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) if subject to the court's process and if joinder would not deprive the court of jurisdiction. These cases, however, are no longer authority insofar as they hold that the court's failure to bring in a particular person as a party to an action deprives the court of jurisdiction to render judgment in an action between the parties already before the court [see 10 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 501, 535-537 (1971)]. For discussion of the effect of the 1971 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 389 on prior California law, see § 168.45, under

[3], In Absence of Omitted Party, Complete Relief Cannot Be Granted to Existing Parties.

The factual and procedural background of Noguera v. North Monterey County Unified Sch. Dist. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 64, 164 Cal. Rptr. 808 , is discussed in § 168.48. In that action, involving mandate proceedings to determine the validity of a new school district's failure to rehire teachers employed in the former districts that now made up the new district, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's order sustaining the district's demurrer to the complaint for failure to state a cause of action. The court itself raised the issue of petitioner's failure to join as indispensable parties persons newly employed in the former districts. The court held, however, that the omitted parties were not indispensable to the disposition of the case against the parties before it, but were necessary parties in the sense that the main issue affected their own interests. However, the court suggested that the better procedure would have been for the trial court to have ordered their joinder (106 Cal. App 3d 64, 72-73) .

Counsel should note that Code Civ. Proc. § 389 no longer uses the term "necessary parties." However, the courts have continued to use that term to characterize absent parties who would be proper parties to an action and who are necessary to a complete determination of the action and should therefore be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) but in whose absence the court can nonetheless accord complete relief to the parties already before it without prejudicially affecting the interests of the absent parties, so that dismissal is not required under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(b).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION

16-169 California Points & Authorities 169.syn

§ 169.syn Synopsis to Chapter 169: PARTITION

§ 169.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 169.02 Governing Statutes

§ 169.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities Chapters

§ 169.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§§ 169.05-169.19 [Reserved]

§ 169.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Authorized to Bring Partition Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Allegation of Authorization

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Authorized to Bring Partition Action

§ 169.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Interests of All Persons in Property Sought to be Partitioned [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.230]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interests in Property

[b] Allegation of Interests

§ 169.22 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Authorized to Bring Action for Partition of Condominium [Civ. Code § 1359(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

§ 169.23 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Condition Required for Partition of Condominium Project [Civ. Code § 1359(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 169.24 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Probate Homestead When Child Is Minor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Probate Homestead With Minor Child

§ 169.25 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Homestead for Married Spouses

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homestead Claimed for Spouses

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homestead Claimed for Spouses

§ 169.26 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Waiver of Right to Partition [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.710(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Right to Partition

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Right to Partition

§ 169.27 Supporting Motion for Confirmation of Report of Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.290]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correct Division and Allotment

[b] Error Required

§ 169.28 Supporting Motion for Confirmation of Sale by Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.720]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reason Required to Refuse Confirmation

[b] Affirmative Appearance of Ground

§ 169.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Complaint Alleges Facts Showing Plaintiff Authorized to Bring Partition Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partition by Tenant in Common

[b] Partition by Joint Tenant

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partition by Tenant in Common

§ 169.30 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Partition Not Barred by Cotenant's Statutory Homestead

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cotenant's Statutory Homestead as Not a Bar

§ 169.31 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Agreement Does Not Waive Right to Partition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Not Waiving Partition

[b] Intention Necessary to Imply Waiver

§ 169.32 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Agreement Waiving Right to Partition Breached by Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Agreement Waiving Right to Partition

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Agreement Waiving Right to Partition

§ 169.33 Opposing Motion for Confirmation of Report of Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.290]--Partition Violative of Statutory Requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 873.210-873.240]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.01

§ 169.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities relating to partition. It includes the following types of forms:

- Supporting [see §§ 169.20 -169.23] and opposing [see § 169.29] a general demurrer to a complaint or cross complaint for partition.

- Supporting [see §§ 169.24 -169.26] and opposing [see §§ 169.30 -169.32] a motion for summary judgment in a partition action.

- Supporting [see § 169.27] and opposing [see § 169.33] a motion for confirmation of a referees' report.

- Supporting a motion for confirmation of a sale by the referees [see § 169.28].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersRefereesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEstatesConcurrent OwnershipPartition Actions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.02

§ 169.02 Governing Statutes

Actions for partition of real and personal property are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 872.010 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsReal Property LawEstatesConcurrent OwnershipPartition Actions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.03

§ 169.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities Chapters

In general, a supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeTime LimitationsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.04

§ 169.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms of complaints, allegations, notices of motions, and orders involving the partition of real and personal property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 397, Partition (Matthew Bender).

For discussions and forms for use in particular cases involving partition, see in that set the following chapters:

- Ch. 101, Boundaries.
- Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal.
- Ch. 290A, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Maintenance of Ward or Conservatee.
- Ch. 294, Homesteads.
- Ch. 316, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common.
- Ch. 440, Probate.
- Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaEstate, Gift & Trust LawProbateGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEstatesConcurrent OwnershipPartition ActionsReal Property LawEstatesConcurrent OwnershipTenancies in Common

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

16-169 California Points & Authorities §§ 169.05-169.19

[Reserved]

§§ 169.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.20

§ 169.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Authorized to Bring Partition Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff, vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COM-)	PLAINT
	)

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT PLAINTIFF IS A PERSON AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE TO BRING A PARTITION ACTION.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Section 430.30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face of the complaint (or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice), the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

B. Person Authorized to Bring Partition Action. A partition action may be commenced and maintained by a co-owner of personal property or by an owner of an estate of inheritance, an estate for life, or an estate for years in real property when the property or estate in the property is owned by several persons concurrently or in successive estates. However, a partition action may not be commenced or maintained between spouses or putative spouses for partition of their community or quasi-community property or their quasi-marital interest in property (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210).

C. Allegation of Authorization. A complaint fails to state a cause of action for partition when it fails to allege facts showing that the plaintiff is a person entitled to maintain an action for partition under the provisions of Section 872.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Jacquemart v. Jacquemart (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 794, 795-798, 299 P.2d 281).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it fails to allege that the plaintiff is a person entitled to maintain an action for partition under Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should note the absence of an allegation that the plaintiff is authorized to bring the partition action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Allegation of Authorization

In Jacquemart v. Jacquemart (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 794, 299 P.2d 281 , the complaint for partition of real property alleged that plaintiff and defendant owned the property as community property in equal undivided interests. After the presentation of evidence, the trial court sustained the defendant's objection to the introduction of evidence and granted the defendant's motions to strike the evidence and for judgment on the pleadings. In affirming, the court of appeal held that ownership of community property is not the same as ownership of property as joint tenants or tenants in common. Thus, the complaint failed to allege facts showing that plaintiff was a person within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 752, now Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210, who is entitled to maintain an action for the partition of the property (142 Cal. App. 2d 794, 795-798) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Person Authorized to Bring Partition Action

In In re Marriage of Graves (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 244 Cal. Rptr. 110 , the court of appeal held that a former spouse was required to bring a separate partition action, rather than a post-dissolution motion, to divide a former community asset (a military pension) that was omitted from adjudication in a marital dissolution. Community property that is not mentioned in the dissolutionpleadings is held post-dissolution by the parties as tenants in common. Neither the doctrine of res judicata nor a failure to resolve jurisdiction bars a subsequent action for partition of the missed community asset. The enactment of former Civ. Code § 4800.4 [now see Fam. Code § 2650], which permits a court to divide the separate property interests of spouses held in joint tenancy or tenancy in common when it divides their community and quasi-community property, did not abrogate the requirement of bringing a partition action to divide omitted assets (198 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1050-1052) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.21

§ 169.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Interests of All Persons in Property Sought to be Partitioned [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.230]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THE INTERESTS OF ALL PERSONS IN THE PROPERTY.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 169.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Interests in Property. The complaint in an action for partition must set forth the interests known to plaintiff of all persons, known or unknown, in the property sought to be partitioned (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.230).

C. Allegation of Interests. A complaint fails to state a cause of action for partition if it fails to allege facts showing the interests of all persons in the property (Neusted v. Skernswell (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 361, 364, 159 P.2d 49).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it fails to allege the interests of all persons in the property.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should note the absence of facts regarding the interests of all persons in the property.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interests in Property

The complaint must set forth, among other facts, (1) all interests the plaintiff has or claims in the property and (2) all interests of record or actually known to the plaintiff that persons other than the plaintiff have or claim in the property and that the plaintiff reasonably believes will be materially affected by the action, whether the names of the persons are known or unknown to the plaintiff (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.230). The plaintiff must join as defendants all persons having or claiming interests of record, or actually known to the plaintiff, or reasonably apparent from an inspection of the property, in the estate as to which partition is sought (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.510). However, if the property is subject to a lease, community lease, unit agreement, or other pooling arrangement with respect to oil, or gas, or both, the plaintiff need not join as defendants persons whose only interest in the property is that of a lessee, royalty owner, lessor/owner of other real property in the community, unit, or pooled area, or working-interest owner, or persons claiming under them (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.540).

[b] Allegation of Interests

Neusted v. Skernswell (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 361, 159 P.2d 49 , decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 753 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 872.230) was an action to establish a resulting trust for plaintiff in an undivided interest in real property in which the plaintiff also sought partition of the property. The complaint alleged only that the plaintiff and defendants were owners of the property involved in the action. The defendants' demurrer, general and special, was overruled. Interlocutory and final decrees in partition were entered after trial and reversed on appeal with directions to sustain the defendants' demurrer with leave to amend. The court of appeal held that the complaint did not state a cause of action and the demurrer should have been sustained in that the allegation that the plaintiff and defendants were the owners of the property failed to state the proportionate interests of the respective parties (69 Cal. App. 2d 361, 364) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.22

§ 169.22 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Authorized to Bring Action for Partition of Condominium [Civ. Code § 1359(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT PLAINTIFF IS A PERSON AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE TO BRING AN ACTION FOR PARTITION OF A CONDOMINIUM PROJECT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 169.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Allegation of Ownership. A complaint fails to state a cause of action for partition of a condominium project by sale of the entire project if it fails to allege facts showing that plaintiff owns a condominium, as defined in Section 783 of the Civil Code, in the condominium project sought to be partitioned (Civ. Code § 1359(b)).

C. Condominium Defined. A condominium consists of an undivided interest in common in a portion of real property coupled with a separate interest in space called a unit (Civ. Code § 1351(f)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it fails to allege that the plaintiff is a person authorized to bring an action for the partition of a condominium project under Civ. Code § 1359(b).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should note the absence of an allegation that the plaintiff is authorized to bring the partition action.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.23

§ 169.23 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Condition Required for Partition of Condominium Project [Civ. Code § 1359(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THE EXISTENCE OF A CONDITION REQUIRED BY STATUTE FOR PARTITION OF A CONDOMINIUM PROJECT BY SALE OF THE ENTIRE PROJECT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 169.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Allegation of Condition Required by Statute. A complaint fails to state a cause of action for partition of a condominium project where it fails to allege facts showing that (1) three years after damage or destruction to the project which renders a material part thereof unfit for its use prior thereto, the project has not been rebuilt or repaired substantially to its state prior to its damage or destruction; (2) three-fourths or more of the project has been destroyed or substantially damaged, and condominium owners holding in aggregate more than a 50 percent interest in the common areas are opposed to repair or restoration of the project; (3) the project has been in existence in excess of 50 years, it is obsolete and uneconomic, and condominium owners holding in aggregate more than a 50 percent interest in the common areas are opposed to repair or restoration of the project; or (4) conditions for such a partition by sale set forth in the declaration have been met (Civ. Code § 1359(b)).

C. Condominium Defined. [See § 169.22, Paragraph C.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it fails to allege the existence of a condition specified in Civ. Code § 1359(b) required for partition of acondominium project by sale of the entire project.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law stated.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.24

§ 169.24 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Probate Homestead When Child Is Minor

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name(s)],	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
Defendant(s).	)	JUDGMENT
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]
	)

_____

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER WHERE THE PROPERTY WAS SET ASIDE AS A PROBATE HOMESTEAD FOR DECEDENT'S FAMILY AND A CHILD IS STILL A MINOR.

A. Summary Judgment. A defendant may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that the action has no merit. Such motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Probate Homestead With Minor Child. The defendant is entitled to judgment in an action for partition of real property when the property has been set aside in the administration of a decedent's estate as a probate homestead for the decedent's minor child or children and surviving spouse, if any, and one such child has not attained its majority (Hoppe v. Hoppe (1894) 104 Cal. 94, 101, 37 P. 894).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion forsummary judgment when the motion asserts that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law since the property sought to be partitioned was set aside as a probate homestead for a decedent's family and at least one child is still a minor.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Probate Homestead With Minor Child

Hoppe v. Hoppe (1894) 104 Cal. 94, 37 P. 894 , was an action for partition of real property which was consolidated with an action for foreclosure of a mortgage on the property. The pleadings showed (1) the property had been set apart in a decedent's estate for the use of the decedent's wife and nine children as a probate homestead; (2) the wife had subsequently executed a mortgage on the homestead property; (3) this mortgage was being foreclosed in the action for foreclosure; and (4) the action for partition against the wife and mortgagee was brought by the decedent's children who were still minors. The mortgagee's demurrer to the complaint for partition was sustained. In affirming, the court of appeal stated that a homestead must remain intact until the youngest child has reached majority. Hence, it was not competent for the other cotenants to have a partition until that time had been reached. The court qualified this by noting that circumstances might exist where it would be the duty of the court, for the benefit of the minor, to decree a partition or order the interest of the minor to be sold, but such circumstances were not involved in the case at hand (104 Cal. 94, 101) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.25

§ 169.25 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Homestead for Married Spouses

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.24.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER WHERE THE PROPERTY IS SUBJECT TO A HOMESTEAD SELECTED AND RECORDED FOR THE BENEFIT OF A HUSBAND AND WIFE DURING THEIR MARRIAGE.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 169.24, Paragraph A.]

B. Homestead Claimed for Spouses. The defendant is entitled to judgment in an action brought for the partition of real property that is subject to a valid and subsisting homestead selected and recorded for the benefit of a husband and wife during their marriage (Swan v. Walden (1909) 156 Cal. 195, 200, 103 P 931).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law since the property sought to be partitioned is subject to a homestead selected and recorded for the benefit of a husband and wife during their marriage.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homestead Claimed for Spouses

Swan v. Walden (1909) 156 Cal. 195, 103 P 931 , was an action for partition of property. The property consisted of three lots which had been conveyed in joint tenancy to a husband and wife, the defendants. A homestead had been declared by the wife on the two lots where she and her husband resided and the homestead was never abandoned. Subsequently, a grant deed was executed by the husband purportedly conveying his interest in the lots to the plaintiff. The Supreme Court reversed a judgment for plaintiff, holding that the homestead declared by the wife was valid and, as a necessary consequence, the deed of the husband alone, made after the declaration, was inoperative and void (156 Cal. 195, 200) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homestead Claimed for Spouses

Kaupe v. Kaupe (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 511, 280 P.2d 856 , involved a partition action brought by a wife for the sale of real property. The property had been acquired during marriage by deed to them as joint tenants. The wife executed and recorded a declaration of homestead for herself and her husband in the property. Subsequently, she commenced an action for divorce but none was granted. She then executed and recorded an abandonment of the homestead, but her husband had not signed this document. In affirming the judgment denying partition, theappellate court stated that there was no compliance with the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 1242 and 1243 for abandonment of a homestead, and the partition action was not authorized by Civ. Code § 1241 as an exception to a homestead's exemption from forced sale.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.26

§ 169.26 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--Waiver of Right to Partition [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.710(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.24.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER WHEN PLAINTIFF HAS WAIVED HIS OR HER RIGHT TO PARTITION THE PROPERTY.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 169.24, Paragraph A.]

B. Partition as Right. Partition as to concurrent interests in the property is a matter of right unless barred by a valid waiver (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.710(b)).

C. Waiver of Right to Partition. The defendant is entitled to judgment in an action for partition of property when the plaintiff has expressly or impliedly waived his or her right to partition the property (Schwartz v. Shapiro (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 238, 253, 40 Cal. Rptr. 189).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law since the plaintiff expressly or impliedly waived his or her right to partition the property.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Right to Partition

Schwartz v. Shapiro (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 238, 40 Cal. Rptr. 189 , was an action for partition of real property in which the plaintiff and the defendant couple each owned a half interest. The parties had agreed that they would not sell their interest without giving the other party the right to purchase it at a price not in excess of the original purchase price. The court of appeal reversed an interlocutory decree ordering partition, sale, and distribution of the proceeds. In holding that the plaintiff under the agreement must first offer her interest to the defendant couple before proceeding with an action for partition, the court held that while it is the general rule that a cotenant may require a partition of the cotenancy as a matter of absolute right, this right may be modified or waived by contract, either expressly or by implication (229 Cal. App. 2d 238, 253) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Right to Partition

In Pine v. Tiedt (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 733, 43 Cal. Rptr. 184 , the property sought to be partitioned had been acquired for the construction of a sanitarium, which was to be leased to a corporation. Title to the property was taken in the names of the plaintiff and the promoter's nominee. A lease to the corporation was executed by the plaintiff and nominee, which then conveyed undivided interests in the property amounting to 56/100 to the defendants and other small investors by a grant deed waiving the grantees' right to partition. However, the plaintiff and nominee retained respectively 25/100 and 19/100 interests in the property without such waiver. The court of appeal reversed an interlocutory decree in partition, concluding as a matter of law that there was an implied waiver of any right of the plaintiff to partition during the leasing. To permit partition would frustrate the very purpose for which the land was acquired by the investors and for which it was being used.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.27

§ 169.27 Supporting Motion for Confirmation of Report of Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.290]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR CONFIRMA-)	TION OF REPORT OF REFEREE
	)

_____ [Identify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S] MOTION FOR A CONFIRMATION OF THE REFEREE'S REPORT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THERE IS A FULL AND CORRECT DIVISION AND ALLOTMENT OF PROPERTY AND THERE IS NO ERROR SHOWN OR APPEARING ON THE FACE OF THE REPORT.

A. Confirming Referee's Report. Any party to a partition action, on notice to the other parties who have appeared, may move the court to confirm the referee's report. At the hearing, the court may either confirm the report as filed or as the court may modify and enter judgment of partition accordingly or set aside the report and order the preparation of a new report and, if necessary, appoint a new referee for this purpose (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.290(a), (b)).

B. Correct Division and Allotment. A referee's report should be confirmed if the referee reports a full and correct division and allotment of property under the reference (Worcester v. Worcester (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 56, 60-62, 54 Cal. Rptr. 436).

C. Error Required. When no error appears on the face of the referee's report, none will be presumed, and the report will not be set aside unless a party excepting to it shows a state of facts that will make the alleged error affirmatively and clearly appear (Camicia v. Camicia (1944) 65 Cal. App. 2d 487, 491, 150 P.2d 814).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion to confirm the report of the referee in a partition action.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that there is a full and correct division and allotment of property in the report.

[c] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion to change, modify, or set aside the referee's report.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correct Division and Allotment

Worcester v. Worcester (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 56, 54 Cal. Rptr. 436 , was an action to partition four parcels of real property. Pursuant to the parties' stipulation, the interlocutory decree allotted the property to the parties and appointed a referee to fix and determine an easement over a parcel allotted to defendant as access to a parcel allotted to plaintiff. After taking evidence and hearing argument, the trial court overruled defendant's objections to the referee's report incorporating a map delineating an easement, denied defendant's motion for new instructions to the referee, confirmed the report on plaintiff's notice of motion, and proceeded to enter judgment. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that being satisfied from the evidence before it that the purpose of the reference had been fully and correctly accomplished, nothing remained to be done by the court except to confirm the report and enter a judgment in accordance with the judgment (246 Cal. App. 2d 56, 60-62) .

[b] Error Required

In Camicia v. Camicia (1944) 65 Cal. App. 2d 487, 150 P.2d 814 , plaintiffs brought an action to partition property owned by plaintiffs and defendants as tenants in common. Pursuant to stipulation of the parties, the trial court made and entered an interlocutory decree regarding the respective rights of the parties and appointed three referees to make partition. The referees made their report in which they alleged they had divided the property according to the respective rights of the parties into two equal parts. The plaintiffs moved to modify or set aside the report, contending that the division was not fair or just. The motion was denied and amotion by defendants to confirm the report was granted.

The court of appeal affirmed. Whether the division made by the referees was fair and equitable was a question of fact. An appellate court in a partition suit will not ordinarily consider the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the findings of the trial court, and these findings will be taken as conclusive when the evidence is conflicting and there is sufficient evidence to sustain them. In this case the trial judge viewed the premises, which constituted independent evidence that enabled him to verify the referees' report, and on appeal this evidence had to be presumed to support the judgment. Citing Seale v. Greer (1868) 1 Cal Unrep 423, 424 , the court found that when no error appears on the fact of a referee's report, none will be presumed, and the report must not be set aside unless a party excepting to it shows a state of facts that will make alleged error affirmatively and clearly appear (65 Cal. App. 2d 487, 490-491).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.28

§ 169.28 Supporting Motion for Confirmation of Sale by Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.720]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR CONFIRMA-)	TION OF SALE BY REFEREE
	)

_____ [Identify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S] MOTION FOR CONFIRMATION OF THE SALE BY THE REFEREE SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THERE ARE NO GROUNDS WARRANTING A REFUSAL TO CONFIRM.

A. Confirming Referee's Sale. A party, referee, or purchaser in a partition action may move the court to confirm any sale or sales reported by the referee to the court, after giving 10 days' notice to the other parties who have appeared in the action and any purchaser who is not the moving party (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.720).

B. Reason Required to Refuse Confirmation. A sale reported by the referee should be confirmed unless there is a reason recognized by law as warranting a refusal to confirm (Dunn v. Dunn (1902) 137 Cal. 51, 57-58, 69 P. 847).

C. Grounds for Vacating Sale. A court may vacate the sale reported by the referee if the proceedings were unfair or the sum bid disproportionate to the value, and if it appears that a sum exceeding the bid accepted by at least 10 percent on the first $10,000 and 5 percent on the amount in excess thereof, exclusive of the expenses of a new sale, may be obtained (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.730(c)).

D. Affirmative Appearance of Ground. The ground alleged for refusing confirmation of a referee's sale must be made affirmatively to appear (Dunn v. Dunn (1902) 137 Cal. 51, 57-60, 69 P. 847).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for confirmation of a sale by a referee in a partition action when there are no grounds warranting a refusal to confirm the sale.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should note the absence of any grounds for vacating the sale.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modification, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion to confirm a referee's sale of personal property in a partition action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reason Required to Refuse Confirmation

In Dunn v. Dunn (1902) 137 Cal. 51, 69 P. 847 , the appellant bought one parcel at the public auction conducted by a referee in an action for partition of several tracts of real property. When the referee's report and a petition for approval of the proceedings were filed, an objection to confirmation was filed for alleged inadequacy of the price bid. At the hearing held six months after the sale, there was evidence that the parcel sold to the appellant had advanced in value after the sale but had brought all that it would sell for at the time of the sale. There was no other evidence of the parcel's value at the date of sale. The judgment denying confirmation and ordering a resale was reversed with directions to confirm the referee's sale to appellant. The Supreme Court held that confirmation must follow unless there exists some reason recognized by law as warranting a refusal to confirm (137 Cal. 51, 57-58) .

When Dunn v. Dunn arose, former Code Civ. Proc. § 784 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 873.720], did not expressly provide for a hearing on a motion to confirm or set aside the sale reported by a referee or authorize the court to vacate a sale.

[b] Affirmative Appearance of Ground

The factual background of Dunn v. Dunn (1902) 137 Cal. 51, 69 P. 847 , is set forth in § 169.28[3][a].

In holding that the evidence did not support denial of confirmation for alleged inadequacy of the price bid, the Supreme Court stated that the ground alleged for refusing confirmation of sale should be made affirmatively to appear (137 Cal. 51, 57-60) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.29

§ 169.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Complaint Alleges Facts Showing Plaintiff Authorized to Bring Partition Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO DEMURRER TO COM-)	PLAINT
	)

_____

DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFF IS A PERSON AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE TO BRING A PARTITION ACTION.

[EITHER]

Partition by Tenant in Common. When the plaintiff owns as a tenant in common an estate of inheritance, for life or lives, or for years, in the property sought to be partitioned, the plaintiff is a person entitled to bring an action for partition of real property (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210; Oliver v. Sperry (1934) 220 Cal. 327, 329, 30 P.2d 402).

[OR]

Partition by Joint Tenant. When the plaintiff owns as a joint tenant an estate of inheritance, for life or lives, or for years, in the property, sought to be partitioned, the plaintiff is a person entitled to bring an action for partition of real property (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210; Lazzarevich v. Lazzarevich (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 48, 50-51, 244 P.2d 1).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to allege facts showing that plaintiff is a person authorized to bring a partition action under Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210 and when the plaintiff is a tenant in common, joint tenant, or holder of a lien on the property on a parity with that on which the title of the property's owner is based.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should set forth the facts showing that the plaintiff is authorized to bring the action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partition by Tenant in Common

Oliver v. Sperry (1934) 220 Cal. 327, 30 P.2d 402 , was an action for partition of real property brought by the surviving spouse of a deceased cotenant. The final judgment of partition allotted the property to the surviving cotenant and the successors in interest of the deceased cotenant. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that on the death of his wife, who owned part of the property in her lifetime, the plaintiff was vested with an interest in the property. As he was owner as a tenant in common with the other owners, he was authorized to commence the partition action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 752 (220 Cal. 327, 329 ; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 872.210).

[b] Partition by Joint Tenant

Lazzarevich v. Lazzarevich (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 48 , was an action for the partition of real property held in joint tenancy by plaintiff and defendant. The trial court concluded that the plaintiff should be barred from obtaining partition because the plaintiff had not paid a judgment the defendant had against him. In reversing the judgment against plaintiff, the Supreme Court held that in the absence of a waiver, a joint tenant is entitled as a matter of right to have his interest severed from that of his cotenant (39 Cal. 2d 48, 50-51) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partition by Tenant in Common

In Brunson v. Brunson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 786, 214 Cal. Rptr. 378 , the court of appeal held that a military pension omitted from adjudication in a 1971 marital dissolution proceeding could be divided in a partition action by a former spouse, and that current community property principles should be applied in apportioning the parties' interests. The court rejected the argument that because the pension had been considered in making an award of spousal support the former spouse was barred from dividing it later. Mere mention of the pension inan interlocutory judgment was not an adjudication, and the pension was not listed in the pleadings as community property (168 Cal. App. 3d 786, 788) .

In Bacon v. Wahrhaftig (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 599, 218 P.2d 144 , the complaint for partition alleged that the plaintiff was the owner in fee of a specific undivided interest in the land. Judgments of dismissal were entered after the sustaining of the defendants' demurrers on special and general grounds. In reversing, the court of appeal held that it was error to sustain the demurrers since ordinarily if the party seeking partition is shown to be a tenant in common, and as such entitled to possession of the land sought to be partitioned, the right is absolute (97 Cal. App. 2d 599, 605-606) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.30

§ 169.30 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Partition Not Barred by Cotenant's Statutory Homestead

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name(s)],	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUM-
Defendant(s).	)	MARY JUDGMENT
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]
	)

_____

PARTITION IS NOT BARRED BY A COTENANT'S STATUTORY HOMESTEAD ON HIS OR HER INTEREST IN THE PROPERTY.

Cotenant's Statutory Homestead as Not a Bar. A statutory homestead on a cotenant's interest in property is not a defense to an action by another cotenant for partition of the property (Squibb v. Squibb (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 766, 768-770, 12 Cal. Rptr. 346).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that partition is barred by the existence of a statutory homestead and where the homestead affected only the cotenant's interest in the property.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the memorandum [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cotenant's Statutory Homestead as Not a Bar

Squibb v. Squibb (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 766, 12 Cal. Rptr. 346 , was an action for partition of real property where the evidence showed the parties had previously acquired the property in joint tenancy during their marriage. When they were divorced, no disposition was made of the property's use and ownership. After the divorce, the defendant with the parties' children continued to live on the property and executed and recorded a declaration of homestead on it. In her answer to the plaintiff's action for partition, the defendant alleged the recordation of her declaration of homestead on the property. This defense was stricken on plaintiff's motion. An interlocutory judgment ordering partition was entered and affirmed. The court of appeal determined that defendant, as an unmarried person at the time she selected her homestead, could do so only for her own property. The court held that a cotenant's statutory homestead interest does not deprive a cotenant of the right to have the common property partitioned and sold, and the homestead right of the cotenant in his own interest in the common property is no bar to a suit for that purpose (190 Cal. App. 2d 766, 768-770) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.31

§ 169.31 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Agreement Does Not Waive Right to Partition

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.30.]

AN AGREEMENT IS NOT A DEFENSE TO AN ACTION FOR PARTITION WHEN IT DOES NOT WAIVE THE RIGHT TO PARTITION.

A. Agreement Not Waiving Partition. An agreement is not a defense to an action for partition when the agreement does not expressly or impliedly waive the right to partition (Heber v. Yaeger (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262-263, 59 Cal. Rptr. 353).

B. Intention Necessary to Imply Waiver. A waiver of the right to partition real property will not be implied unless the parties' agreement clearly indicates an intention to restrict the property to a use foreclosing its partition (Heber v. Yaeger (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 258, 262-263, 59 Cal. Rptr. 353).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the motion alleges that the plaintiff waived the right to partition and where the agreement on relief does not have this effect.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the memorandum [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Not Waiving Partition

Heber v. Yaeger (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 258, 59 Cal. Rptr. 353 , involved a series of actions. In her first action for declaratory relief and an accounting, plaintiff was declared vested with a life estate in an undivided half interest in real property under an agreement dividing partnership property. The defendant owned a life estate in the other half interest and the remainder in the real property. Plaintiff's second action for an accounting had been dismissed on the plaintiff's waiving future income from the property as long as defendant operated it as a citrus ranch and plaintiff was not charged with any portion of ownership and operation costs and expenses. In an action for partition, the defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted on the ground that plaintiff had waived her right to partition. The court of appeal reversed the judgment and concluded that the plaintiff had not waived partition by agreeing to divide partnership property or waiving income from the property.

[b] Intention Necessary to Imply Waiver

The factual background of Heber v. Yaeger (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 258, 59 Cal. Rptr. 353 , is discussed in § 169.31[3][a]. The court of appeal in that case held that the agreement in the first action and the waiver in the second action did not sustain judgment for the defendant on the ground of the plaintiff's having waived her right to partition because neither clearly indicated an intention that the subject property should be restricted to a use foreclosing its partition.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.32

§ 169.32 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--Agreement Waiving Right to Partition Breached by Defendant

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 169.30.]

AN AGREEMENT WAIVING THE RIGHT TO PARTITION IS NOT A DEFENSE TO AN ACTION FOR PARTITION WHEN THE DEFENDANT'S BREACH OF THE AGREEMENT RELEASED PLAINTIFF FROM THE PROMISE NOT TO PARTITION.

Breach of Agreement Waiving Right to Partition. An agreement expressly or impliedly waiving the right to partition is not a defense to an action for partition when the defendant has breached the agreement so that the plaintiff is no longer obligated under the agreement (Lehmann v. Kamp (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 701, 706, 77 Cal. Rptr. 910).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the motion alleges that the plaintiff has waived the right to partition but where the defendant has breached the agreement constituting a waiver, releasing the plaintiff from his or her waiver.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the point of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the memorandum [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Agreement Waiving Right to Partition

In Lehmann v. Kamp (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 701, 77 Cal. Rptr. 910 , the plaintiffs had agreed to leave their ranch on their deaths to the defendants, who had agreed to provide plaintiffs with physical care and financial support during their old age. Subsequently, (1) plaintiffs conveyed a half interest in the ranch to defendants in joint tenancy with plaintiffs; (2) plaintiffs conveyed the remaining half interest to defendants subject to a limited life estate in order only to avoid a reduction in public assistance received by plaintiffs; and (3) defendants breached their agreement to provide financial support and physical care. In an action to set aside both deeds or for partition in case only the second deed was set aside, the judgment set aside the second deed, ordered partition of the ranch excepting a house remodeled by defendants, and awarded damages for breach of the agreement for support and care. On appeal, the defendants contended that the trial court erred in partitioning the ranch because plaintiffs had promised to leave it to defendants. However, the court of appeal affirmed, noting that the defendants' argument ignored the fact that they promised to provide the plaintiffs with financial support and physical care during their old age, a promise which the trial court found they had breached. Consequently, the plaintiffs were no longer obligated to leave the ranch to the defendants (273 Cal. App. 2d 701, 706) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Agreement Waiving Right to Partition

De Harlan v. Harlan (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 555, 168 P.2d 985 , was an action for an adjudication of the parties' rights and partition of real property. The parties had entered into a written agreement concurrently with defendant's conveying of the property in joint tenancy to plaintiff and himself. Generally, the agreement provided for joint occupancy during defendant's life and reserved to defendant the exclusive right to rent, sell, encumber, or dispose of the property. The action was brought after defendant had barred plaintiff from any use of the property. Interlocutory and final judgments directed sale of the property and division of the proceeds subject to a lien on defendant's share for damages caused by his excluding plaintiff from the premises. In affirming the judgments, the court of appeal stated that if the defendant had performed the agreement on his part, its provision might reasonably have been construed as a waiver by the plaintiff of the right to have the property sold in a partition action. But since defendant breached the agreement, no such waiver would be enforced.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 16 Chapters 160-169 MOTIONS TO STRIKE---to---PARTITION
CHAPTER 169 PARTITION
PART II. FORMS

16-169 California Points & Authorities § 169.33

§ 169.33 Opposing Motion for Confirmation of Report of Referee [Code Civ. Proc. § 873.290]--Partition Violative of Statutory Requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 873.210-873.240]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR CON-)	FIRMATION OF REPORT OF REFEREE [Code
	)	Civ. Proc. § 873.290]

_____

A MOTION FOR CONFIRMATION OF THE REFEREE'S REPORT SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED WHERE THE PARTITION _____ [either IS NOT ACCORDING TO THE PARTIES' RESPECTIVE RIGHTS AS DETERMINED BY THE COURT or DOES NOT ALLOT A SPECIFIC TRACT TO A PURCHASER PURPORTEDLY CONVEYED THE WHOLE TITLE TO THE TRACT or DOES NOT ALLOT TO AN ALLOTTEE A SHARE EMBRACING HIS OR HER IMPROVEMENTS].

[EITHER]

Partition According to Court's Determination Required. In making a partition, the referee must divide the property and allot the portions thereof, quality and quantity relatively considered, according to the respective rights of the parties as determined by the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.210).

[OR]

Allotment of Specific Tract to Purchaser. When one of the tenants in common has sold to another person a specific tract out of the common land and purported to convey the whole title to such a specific tract to the purchaser, the land described in the deed of conveyance should be allotted to the purchaser in a partition action if the specific portion can be set apart to the purchaser without material injury to the other cotenants (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.230).

[OR]

Allotment of Share With Cotenant's Improvements. It is the duty of the referee, in making partition, to allot to each cotenant a share of the land sought to be partitioned embracing as far as practicable the cotenant's own improvements on the land where the share embracing his or her improvements can be allotted to the cotenant without material injury to other cotenants owning the land sought to be partitioned (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.220).

[OR]

Allotment Without Division of Distinct Lots. When real property consists of more than one distinct lot or parcel, the property is required to be divided by such lots or parcels without other internal division to the extent that it can be done without material injury to the rights of the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 873.240).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for confirmation of the report of the referees when the partition made violates the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 873.210-873.240 in regard to the court's determination of the parties' respective rights, the allotment of a specific tract to a purchaser purportedly conveyed the whole title to the tract, or the allotment of shares embracing the cotenants' improvements.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to oppose or support a motion to change, modify, or set aside a referee's report.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS

17-170 California Points & Authorities 170.syn

§ 170.syn Synopsis to Chapter 170: PARTNERSHIPS

§ 170.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 170.02 Governing Law

[1] Uniform Partnership Act (pre-'97 Act)

[2] Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA'94)

[a] Enactment

[b] Operative Dates

[c] Application to Other Partnership Forms

[d] Application of Rules of Law and Equity; Interest Rates

[3] Correlation Table

[4] Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA)

[5] California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)

[6] Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008

§ 170.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

[3] Citing to the Correct Governing Statute

§ 170.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

[3] Other Related Publications

§§ 170.05-170.09 [Reserved]

§ 170.10 Supporting Contention That UPA'94 Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16111(b)]--Partnership Formed Prior to Effective Date of UPA'94

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 Applies to pre-1997 Partnerships

§ 170.11 Supporting Contention That pre-'97 Act Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16112]--Action Filed or Right Accrued Prior to January 1, 1997

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Former Uniform Partnership Act Continues to Govern Pre-Existing Rights and Actions

§§ 170.12-170.19 [Reserved]

§ 170.20 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists-Requirements [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16102; former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Defined

[b] Sufficiency of Partnership Agreement

[c] Finding of Partnership Need Be Proved by Only Preponderance of Evidence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Partnership Agreement

§ 170.21 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Intent Regarding Formation Is Determinative

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Carry On Business as Co-owners Is Determinative of Partnership

[b] Intent to Do Things That Constitute Partnership Is Material

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Carry On Business as Co-owners Is Determinative of Partnership

[b] Intent to Do Things That Constitute Partnership Is Material

§ 170.22 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Relinquishment of Control Is Evidence of Partnership

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Community of Interest May Exist Even Though Party Relinquishes Control

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Community of Interest May Exist Even Though Party Relinquishes Control

§ 170.23 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Person Who Receives Share of Profits Is Presumed to Be Partner [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sharing Profits Is Prima Facie Evidence of Partnership

[b] Implied Agreement to Share Losses

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sharing Profits Is Prima Facie Evidence of Partnership

§ 170.24 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property or Capital Contribution Not Necessary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership of Property That Constitutes Partnership Capital Not Necessary

[b] Contribution of Capital Not Necessary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership of Property That Constitutes Partnership Capital Not Necessary

§§ 170.25-170.29 [Reserved]

§ 170.30 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Failure to Prove Partnership's Existence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof That Partnership Exists

[b] Persons Not Partners Between Themselves Are Not Partners as to Third Parties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof That Partnership Exists

§ 170.31 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Absence of Words or Phrases in Agreement That Designate Partnership Relation Is Significant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Words or Phrases Designating Partnership Significant When Intent of Parties Is Unclear

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absence of Words or Phrases Designating Partnership Significant When Intent of Parties Is Unclear

§ 170.32 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Community of Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Community of Interest Is Necessary for Partnership to Exist

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Community of Interest Is Necessary for Partnership to Exist

§ 170.33 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1); former Corp. Code § 15007(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership

§ 170.34 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2); former Corp. Code § 15007(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not of Itself Establish Partnership

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sharing of Gross Return Does Not of Itself Establish Partnership

§ 170.35 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Presumption of Partnership When Profits Received as Payment [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3); former Corp. Code § 15007(4)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Presumption of Partnership From Sharing of Profits Under Certain Circumstances

§§ 170.36-170.49 [Reserved]

§ 170.50 Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Law Applicable to Joint Ventures, Joint Venture Defined, and Intent to Create Joint Venture

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ventures Governed by Law of Partnerships

[b] Joint Venture Defined

[c] Existence of Joint Venture Dependent on Intention of Parties

[d] Joint Venture Agreement Need Not Be in Writing

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ventures Governed by Law of Partnerships

[b] Joint Venture Defined

[c] Joint Venture Agreement Need Not Be in Writing

§ 170.51 Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Elements of Joint Venture

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Joint Venture

[b] Sharing of Losses Implied

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements of Joint Venture

[b] Sharing of Losses Implied

§§ 170.52-170.59 [Reserved]

§ 170.60 Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--No Intent to Form Joint Venture

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Agreement to Go Into Business Together Does Not Imply Joint Venture

§ 170.61 Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Essential Elements Not Present

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Joint Venture When Essential Elements Are Lacking

[b] Right of Management and Control of Business Is Essential Element of Partnership or Joint Venture

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Joint Venture When Essential Elements Are Lacking

§§ 170.62-170.69 [Reserved]

§ 170.70 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15533, 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714, 15722]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of California Revised Limited Partnership Act

§ 170.71 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15501-15533]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Limited Partnership Act Governs Limited Partnerships Existing on or Before July 1, 1984 That Have Not Elected to Be Governed by California Revised Limited Partnership Act

§ 170.72 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15611(r), 15621(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partnership Defined

[b] Requirements of Formation

§ 170.73 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15678.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger

§ 170.74 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15677.9]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion

§ 170.75 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code § 15912.06(a), (b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Partnership Act of 2008 Governs Limited Partnerships Formed After Operative Date or Electing to Be Governed by Act

§ 170.76 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15901.02(q), 15902.01]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partnership Defined

[b] Requirements of Formation

§ 170.77 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15911.16]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger

[4] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[5] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion

§ 170.78 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.09]

[1] FORM

§§ 170.79-170.99 [Reserved]

§ 170.100 Supporting Contention That Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Partnership and Other Partners [Corp. Code § 16404(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partners Are Fiduciaries or Trustees for Each Other

[b] Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs

[c] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partners Are Fiduciaries or Trustees for Each Other

[b] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

§ 170.101 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity or Acquisition of Interest Adverse to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16404; former Corp. Code § 15021]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Fiduciary Duty Prevents Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity

[b] Partner May Not Acquire Property in Which Partnership Is Interested

[c] Partner May Not Engage in Other Ventures Adverse to Interests of Partnership

[d] Lease Option or Expectancy of Renewal Is Partnership Asset

[e] Partner May Not Secretly Encumber Partnership Property for Personal Use

[f] Partner May Not Occupy Partnership Real Property and Pay Below-Market Rent

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partner May Not Acquire Property in Which Partnership Is Interested

§ 170.102 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Taking Secret Profits [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1); former Corp. Code § 15021]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner Must Account for Secret Profits

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partner Must Account for Secret Profits

§ 170.103 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Failure to Disclose Information to Other Partners [Evid. Code § 962; Corp. Code §§ 16403(c); former Corp. Code § 15020]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Fiduciary Duty Requires Disclosure

[b] Attorney for Partner

§ 170.104 Supporting Contention That Partner's Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Partnership Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

§ 170.105 Supporting Contention That Person Winding Up Partnership's Affairs as Personal or Legal Representative of Last Surviving Partner Has Same Fiduciary Duty As A Partner [Corp. Code § 16404(g); former Corp. Code § 15021(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Winding Up Partnership Affairs Owes Same Fiduciary Duty as Would a Partner

§ 170.106 Supporting Contention That General Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Limited Partnership and Other Partners Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partners are Fiduciaries for Each Other

[b] General Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs

[c] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

§§ 170.107-170.119 [Reserved]

§ 170.120 Opposing Contention That Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty--Partner's Actions Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partner's Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 16404]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Due Care

[b] Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties

[c] Transaction Furthering Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

[d] Loan of Money to or Transaction of Business With Partnership Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

[e] Partner May Purchase Partnership Property At Foreclosure Sale

[f] Partner Does Not Breach Fiduciary Duty by Paying Undisputed Partnership Debt

[g] Partner May Purchase Partnership Debt

[h] Partner Need Not Bear Disproportionate Burden of Partnership Obligation

[i] Creditor Partner May Use Partnership Funds to Pay Personal Debts

[j] Lessor Partner May Retain Improvements Financed by Partnership When Authorized by Agreement

[k] Partner's Interest in Land Was Not Adverse to Interests of Partnership

[l] Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Copartner

[m] Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Partnership

§ 170.121 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Breached Fiduciary Duty--No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Former Partner Who Is Now Only Secured Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Secured Party

§ 170.122 Opposing Contention That General Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty Under ULPA '08--Partner's Action Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partners' Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care

[b] Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties

[c] Transaction Furthering General Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

§§ 170.123-170.129 [Reserved]

§ 170.130 Supporting Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]--Implied Agreement for Salary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent to Compensation Implied

§ 170.131 Supporting Contention That Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective

§ 170.132 Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Reimbursement for Payments Made to Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reimbursement By Limited Partnership for Payment or Advance

§§ 170.133-170.139 [Reserved]

§ 170.140 Opposing Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation

[b] Agreement to Agree on Amount of Compensation Is Insufficient

§ 170.141 Opposing Contention That Assignee of Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Examine Books or Participate in Management [Corp. Code § 16503; former Corp. Code § 15027(1); Corp. Code §§ 15519(3) (ULPA), 15672 (CRLPA)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Assignee of Partnership Interest Has Only Limited Rights

§ 170.142 Opposing Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Payment by Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation

§§ 170.143-170.159 [Reserved]

§ 170.160 Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Not Liable for Losses or Mistakes Incurred in Good-Faith Exercise of Business Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule

§ 170.161 Supporting Contention That Purchaser of Limited Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Rescission Because No Permit for Sale Was Obtained as Required by California Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25503]--Limited Partnership Interests Were Offered to Public and/or Unsophisticated Investors

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale of Limited Partnership Interest Required Permit

[b] Limitation Period for Rescission

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sale of Limited Partnership Interest Without Permit

[b] Limitation Period for Rescission

§ 170.162 Supporting Contention That Person Who Has Withdrawn as Limited Partner and/or Legal Representative of Deceased/Incompetent Limited Partner Is Entitled to Distribution of Profits and/or Return of Contribution [Corp. Code §§ 15515, 15516, 15521(1) (ULPA), 15675 (CRLPA)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Return of Withdrawing Limited Partner's Contribution Under California Uniform Limited Partnership Act

[b] Rights of Personal Representative of Deceased Limited Partner Under California Uniform Limited Partnership Act

[c] Right of Limited Partner to Withdraw Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act

§§ 170.163-170.169 [Reserved]

§ 170.170 Opposing Contention That General Partner Is Not Liable for Losses Incurred in Good-Faith Exercise of Business Judgment--Business Judgment Cannot Contravene Specific Terms of Partnership Agreement or Obstruct Ordinary Business of Partnership (ULPA) [Corp. Code § 15509(1)(a), (b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partner Liable if Exercise of Business Judgment Contravenes Partnership Agreement or Bars Ordinary Partnership Business

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Partner Liable if Exercise of Business Judgment Contravenes Partnership Agreement or Bars Ordinary Partnership Business

§ 170.171 Opposing Contention That Purchaser of Limited Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Rescission Because No Permit for Sale Was Obtained as Required by California Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25503]--Offering Was Exempt From Permit Requirement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exempt Sale

§§ 170.172-170.199 [Reserved]

§ 170.200 Supporting Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Partner as Agent, Presumption of Agency, and Burden of Proving Lack of Authority to Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner Is Agent of Partnership

[b] Scope of Partnership Business and Presumption of Ostensible or Apparent Agency

[c] Burden of Proof

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partner Is Agent of Partnership

§ 170.201 Supporting Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Authority to Make Contracts and Execute Negotiable Instruments

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Authority to Enter Into Written Agreement

[b] Partnership May Be Bound by Instrument Executed in Individual Partner's Name if Parties so Intended

[c] Execution of Promissory Note

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Authority to Enter Into Written Agreement

[b] Execution of Promissory Note

§ 170.202 Supporting Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Ratification of Acts Beyond Scope of Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ratification of Partner's Acts Beyond Scope of Authority

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ratification of Partner's Acts Beyond Scope of Authority

§ 170.203 Supporting Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Failure to Inform Third Parties of Special Restrictions on Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Third Parties Are Required to Be Informed of Special Restrictions on Partner's Authority

§§ 170.204-170.209 [Reserved]

§ 170.210 Opposing Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Statutory Limitations on Partner's Authority to Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Act Apparently Outside Usual Course of Partnership Business

§ 170.211 Opposing Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership--Notice of Limitation on Authority [Corp. Code §§ 16301, 16303; former Corp. Code §§ 15009(1), (4), 15010.7]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Not Bound When Third Party Has Notice of Limitation on Partner's Authority to Act

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partnership Not Bound When Third Party Has Notice of Limitation on Partner's Authority to Act

§ 170.212 Opposing Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; Corp. Code § 15009]--Burden of Proof and Presumption Against Binding Partnership to Contract Signed by Individual Partner

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption That Contract Signed by Individual Partner Is Partner's Own Obligation

§ 170.213 Opposing Contention That Act of Partner Binds Partnership [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Partner Has No Authority to Bind Partnership on Contract of Guaranty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Authority of Partner to Execute Guaranty

§§ 170.214-170.219 [Reserved]

§ 170.220 Supporting Contention That Partnership Is Liable for Wrongful Act or Omission of Partner--Willful Misconduct, Recklessness, Negligence, Fraud, and Misrepresentation [Corp. Code § 16305(a); former Corp. Code § 15013]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Liable for Partner's Wrongful Act or Omission

[b] Partnership Liable for Partner's Willful and Malicious or Negligent Acts

[c] Fraud or Misrepresentation

§ 170.221 Supporting Contention That Partnership Liable for Partner's Breach of Trust--Misapplication of Money or Property Belonging to Third Person [Corp. Code § 16305(b); former Corp. Code § 15014]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Liable for Partner's Misapplication of Third Person's Money or Property

§ 170.222 Supporting Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Obligations [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Joint and Several Liability [Corp. Code § 16306; former Corp. Code § 15015(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Liability

§ 170.223 Supporting Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Debts and Obligations [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009] or Individual Partner's Wrongful Acts, Omissions, or Breaches of Trust [Corp. Code § 16305; former Corp. Code §§ 15013, 15014]--Dormant or Undisclosed Partners

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[2] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Debts Chargeable to Dormant Partners

§ 170.224 Supporting Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Debts and Obligations or Individual Partner's Wrongful Acts, Omissions, or Breaches of Trust--Ostensible Partner by Estoppel [Corp. Code § 16308; former Corp. Code § 15016]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ostensible Partner or Partnership by Estoppel

[b] Test of Ostensible Partnership

[c] Standard by Which to Hold Party Liable as Ostensible Partner

§§ 170.225-170.239 [Reserved]

§ 170.240 Opposing Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Debts and Obligations or Individual Partner's Wrongful Acts, Omissions, or Breaches of Trust--Judgment Against Partnership Not a Judgment Against Partner

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Individual Property Not Liable Without Judgment Against Partner

§ 170.241 Opposing Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Debts and Obligations or Individual Partner's Wrongful Acts, Omissions, or Breaches of Trust--Failure to Plead Ostensible Partnership [Corp. Code § 16308; former Corp. Code § 15016]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ostensible Partnership Must Be Pleaded

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Existence of Ostensible Partnership

§ 170.242 Opposing Contention That All Partners Are Liable for Partnership Obligations--Incoming Partner Is Not Personally Liable for Existing Partnership Obligations [Corp. Code § 16306(b); former Corp. Code § 15017]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incoming Partner Presumed Not Personally Liable for Preexisting Partnership Debts

§§ 170.243-170.249 [Reserved]

§ 170.250 Supporting Contention That Act of Joint Venturer Binds Joint Venture [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--Joint Venturer as Agent Has Authority to Bind Other Joint Venturers by Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Law of Partnerships as to Third Parties Applies to Joint Ventures

[b] Joint Venturers Are Agents in Transaction of Enterprise Business

[c] Authority to Bind Joint Venture in Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Authority to Bind Joint Venture in Contract

§§ 170.251-170.254 [Reserved]

§ 170.255 Opposing Contention That Act of Joint Venturer Binds Joint Venture [Corp. Code § 16301; former Corp. Code § 15009]--No Authority to Bind Other Joint Venturers by Acts Not Within Express, Implied, or Ostensible Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Venturer May Not Bind Associates by Acts Exceeding His or Her Authority

[b] No Liability on Theory of Ostensible Agency When Third Party Did Not Rely on Representations of Agency

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Venturer May Not Bind Associates by Acts Exceeding His or Her Authority

§§ 170.256-170.259 [Reserved]

§ 170.260 Supporting Contention That All Joint Venturers Are Liable for Obligations of Joint Venture or Individual Joint Venturer's Wrongful Acts--Contracts, Negligence, and Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Venture Liable for Joint Venturer's Wrongful Act or Omission

[b] Liability of Joint Venture on Contracts

[c] Liability of Joint Venture for Negligence

[d] Liability of Joint Venture for Fraud

§ 170.261 Supporting Contention That All Joint Venturers Are Liable for Obligations of Joint Venture or Individual Joint Venturer's Wrongful Acts--Joint and Several Liability [Corp. Code § 16306; former Corp. Code § 15015(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability

§ 170.262 Opposing Contention That Act of Joint Venturer Binds Non-Negligent Joint Venture--Injured Employee of Joint Venturer Covered by Workers' Compensation Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Non-Negligent Joint Venture Is Not Liable for Injuries to Joint Venturer's Employee When Coverage Is Provided by Workers' Compensation Act

§§ 170.263-170.264 [Reserved]

§ 170.265 Supporting Contention That Act of General Partner Binds Limited Partnership Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15643(a)] and ULPA [Corp. Code § 15509(1)]--Authority of General Partner to Act on Behalf of Limited Partnership

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rights and Powers of General Partner in Limited Partnership

§ 170.266 Supporting Contention That Act of General Partner Binds Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.02(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partner as Agent of Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08

§§ 170.267-170.269 [Reserved]

§ 170.270 Supporting Contention That Limited Partners Are Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15632]--No Control of Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certain Acts Do Not Constitute Control of Business

§ 170.271 Supporting Contention That Limited Partners Are Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under ULPA [Corp. Code §§ 15501, 15507]--No Control of Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability as General Partner if No Control of Business

[b] Other Acts May Not Constitute Control of Business

§ 170.272 Supporting Contention That Putative Limited Partner Is Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15633(a)]--Discovery of Failure to File Certificate of Limited Partnership

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Certificate of Limited Partnership

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Putative Limited Partner Is Not Liable

§ 170.273 Supporting Contention That Putative Limited Partner Is Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under ULPA [Corp. Code § 15511]--Prompt Renunciation of Interest in Partnership Profits

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Putative Limited Partner Is Not Liable if Erroneously Believed Limited Partnership Existed and Promptly Renounced Interest in Profits and Business

§ 170.274 Supporting Contention That Limited Partner Is Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15903.03]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability for Partnership Obligations If No Control of Business

§§ 170.275-170.280 [Reserved]

§ 170.281 Opposing Contention That Limited Partners Are Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under ULPA [Corp. Code § 15505]--Limited Partner's Name Used in Name of Limited Partnership

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partner Whose Name Is Part of Partnership Name Generally is Liable for Partnership Obligations

§ 170.282 Opposing Contention That Putative Partner Is Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15633]--Liability for Partnership Transactions Made Before Certificate of Limited Partnership Filed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Acts Prior to Filing of Certificate of Limited Partnership

§ 170.283 Opposing Contention That Limited Partner Is Not Liable for Partnership Obligations Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15903.03]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partner Who Is Named in Certificate or Participates In Control of Business Is Liable for Partnership Obligations

§§ 170.284-170.299 [Reserved]

§ 170.300 Supporting Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Settlement of Accounts Upon Winding Up Partnership Business [Corp. Code § 16807(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner Is Entitled to Settlement of All Partnership Accounts Upon Winding Up the Partnership Business

§ 170.301 Supporting Contention That Partner May Sue Individual Partners for Legal or Equitable Relief, Including Dissolution and Accounting [Corp. Code § 16405(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner May Sue Other Partners for Legal or Equitable Relief, Including Dissolution and Accounting.

§ 170.302 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Right to Reasonable Compensation for Completing Unfinished Partnership Business [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Right to Compensation

§ 170.303 Supporting Contention That Noncompetition Agreement Is Enforceable Against Withdrawn Partner [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorneys in Partnership May Make Enforceable Noncompetition Agreements

[b] Physicians in Partnership May Make Enforceable Noncompetition Agreements

[c] Accountants in Partnership May Make Enforceable Noncompetition Agreements

[d] Professionals in Partnership May Make Enforceable Noncompetition Agreements

§ 170.304 Supporting Contention That Aggrieved Partner May Elect Dissolution and Sale of Assets [Corp. Code § 16801(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Aggrieved Partner May Elect Dissolution Rather than Damages

§§ 170.305-170.309 [Reserved]

§ 170.310 Opposing Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Settlement of Accounts Upon Winding Up Partnership Business [Corp. Code § 16807(b)]--Forfeiture

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Forfeiture Provision Eliminates Right to Settlement of Accounts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.01

§ 170.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to general partnerships, joint ventures, and limited partnerships. The forms for general partnerships also can be adapted for use in actions involving limited liability partnerships, which are a species of general partnership, available only to certain specified professions, that afford the individual partners a measure of protection from individual liability [see Corp. Code §§ 16101(8)(A), 16306(c), 16951 et seq.; see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships]. The forms in this chapter include:

- Contentions regarding which partnership act governs a particular partnership [§ 170.10 et seq.].
- Contentions relating to the formation and existence of partnerships and joint ventures [§ 170.20 et seq.].
- Actions or proceedings among partners or joint venturers [§ 170.100 et seq.].
- Actions relating to third parties [§ 170.200 et seq.].
- Actions or proceedings related to dissolution and dissociation [§ 170.300 et seq.].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsDissolution & Winding UpDissolutionGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsFormationGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawJoint VenturesGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawJoint VenturesDissolution & Winding UpBusiness & Corporate LawJoint VenturesFormationBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability PartnershipsBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsDissolution & Winding Up

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.02

§ 170.02 Governing Law

[1] Uniform Partnership Act (pre-'97 Act)

The Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.] governed California partnerships that were formed before January 1, 1997, the operative date of the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA'94) [see Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.]. For this reason, the former version of the Uniform Partnership Act is referred to in this chapter as the "pre-'97 Act." Partnerships formed before January 1, 1997, and partnerships continuing the business of a dissolved partnership, continued to be governed by the pre-'97 Act until January 1, 1999, unless they elected at an earlier date to be governed by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16111(a)]. As of January 1, 1999, the pre-'97 Act was repealed, and since that date the UPA'94 governs all partnerships regardless of their date of formation [Corp. Code § 16111(a), (b); see Stats. 1996, ch. 1003, § 18 (repealing the pre-'97 Act operative January 1, 1999)].

Repeal of the pre-'97 Act, however, did not affect actions or proceedings commenced, or rights accrued, prior to the effective date of UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16112]. For that reason, discussion of the pre-'97 Act has been retained in the partnership coverage in this publication. All references to former Corp. Code §§ 15001-15045 are to the repealed provisions of the pre-'97 Act. When the two acts have the same or similar provisions, this chapter cites the UPA'94 provision first, followed by the corresponding pre-'97 Act provision. When the two Acts differ, the distinction will be pointed out in context and the appropriate act cited. Obviously, only the relevant section should be cited to the court in an actual memorandum of points and authorities, depending on whether the case is governed by the current or by the former statute. Cases decided under the pre-'97 Act that have continuing applicability are cited throughout this chapter.

[2] Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA'94)

[a] Enactment

The Uniform Partnership of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] was enacted in 1996 [Stats. 1996, ch. 1003] and is referred to in this chapter as "UPA'94." Since January 1, 1999, all California general partnerships have been governed by the UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16111(b); see Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.; see also [1][a], above, and [b], below].

[b] Operative Dates

UPA'94 initially applied to [Corp. Code § 116111(a)]:

- Partnerships formed on or after January 1, 1997; and

- Partnerships formed prior to January 1, 1997, that elected to be governed by the provisions of the UPA'94 instead of the pre-'97 Act.

The effect of these operative dates was to provide a two-year grace period during which pre-existing partnerships remained subject to the pre-'97 Act [see [1], above] On January 1, 1999, this two-year grace period expired, and since that date all partnerships have been subject to UPA'94, regardless of when they were formed [Corp. Code § 16111(b)]. UPA'94, however, does not affect actions or proceedings commenced, or rights accrued, prior to its effective date [Corp. Code § 16112; see [1], above].

If a partnership formed under the pre-'97 Act elected to be governed by UPA'94 before January 1, 1999, to the extent that UPA'94's provisions limit partners' liabilities to third parties, those limitations applied to third parties who had done business with the partnership within one year preceding the partnership's election to be governed by UPA'94, but only if the third party knew or received notification of the partnership's election to be governed by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16111(c); see Corp. Code § 16102 (defining "notice" and "notification")]. This rule does not apply, however, to any of the UPA'94 provisions that specifically apply to the liability of registered limited liability partnerships [Corp. Code § 16111(c)].

[c] Application to Other Partnership Forms

UPA'94 governs all general partnerships, including limited liability partnerships [Corp. Code § 16101(9) (defining "partnership")]. The definition of "partnership" excludes any partnership formed under the ULPA [Corp. Code § 15501] or CLRPA [Corp. Code § 16101(9); see Corp. Code § 15611; see also [4], [5], below], the statutes governing formation of limited partnerships. However, limited partnerships, to the extent the law governing them is not inconsistent, are also governed by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 15722].

[d] Application of Rules of Law and Equity; Interest Rates

UPA'94's provisions regarding the rights and duties of surviving partners, legal representatives of deceased partners, creditors of either, and creditors of the partnership all supersede any conflicting provisions in the Probate Code [Corp. Code § 16109]. Unless displaced by particular provisions of UPA'94, the principles of law and equity supplement UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16104(a)]. When UPA'94 imposes an obligation to pay interest (e.g., on the amount owed a dissociating partner for that partner's partnership interest), and the rate is not specified, the rate is the one specified in Civ. Code § 3289 [Corp. Code § 16104(b)].

[3] Correlation Table

This table compares and correlates the former Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code §§ 15001-15058] with the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.]. Using this table, readers can determine the sections of the former UPA that correspond to those in UPA'94, and vice versa. The table also indicates whether or not each section was revised and, if so, whether the revision was minor or major. Classification of revisions as "minor" or "major" obviously involves a degree of discretionary judgment by the authors of this table.

The left hand column gives the section number of the former UPA sections. The middle column indicates the corresponding section of the UPA'94, if any. The right hand column indicates whether or not any revision was made, as well as the extent of the revision.

Pre-1997 Act Section	UPA'94 Section	Effect
15001	16100	Minor revision
15002	16101	Minor revision
15003	16102	Major revision
	16103	New
15004, 15005	16104	Minor revision
15010.5	16105	Minor revision
	16106	New
	16107	New
15004(4)	16108	No revision
15045	16109	No revision
	16110	New
	16111	New
	16112	New
	16113	New
	16114	New
	16201	New
15006	16202	Minor revision
15006(2)		Not reenacted, but see Pub. Res. Code § 3940
15007	16202(c)	Minor revision
	16203	New
15008	16204	Minor revision
15009	16301	Minor revision
15010	16302	Minor revision
15010.5	16105, 16302(b), 16304	Minor revision
15010.6		Not reenacted
15010.7	16303	Minor revision
15011		Not reenacted, but see § 16301
15012	Not reenacted
	16304	New
15013	16305(a)	Minor revision
15014	16305(b)	Minor revision
15015	16306	Minor revision
	16307	New
15016	16308	Minor revision
15017	16306(b)	Major revision

15018	16401	Minor revision
	16402	New
15019	16403(a), (b)	Minor revision
15020	16403(c)	Minor revision
15021(1)	16404(b)	Minor revision
15021(2)	16404(g)	Minor revision
	16404(b)-(f)	New
15022	16405(b)	Minor revision
	16405(a)	New
	16405(c)	New
15023	16406	No revision
15024		Not reenacted, but see § 16502
	16501	New
15025		Not reenacted
15026	16502	Minor revision
15027	16503	Minor revision
15028	16504	Minor revision
	16601	New
	16602	New
	16603	New
	16701	New
	16701.5	New
	16702	New
	16703	New
	16704	New
	16705	New
15029		Not reenacted
15030	16802(a)	No revision
15031	16801	Major revision
	16802(b)	New
15032		Not reenacted
	16803(c)	New
15033		Not reenacted
15034		Not reenacted
15035	16804	Minor revision
15035.5	16805	Major revision
15036		Not reenacted
15037	16803(a), (b)	Minor revision

15038		Not reenacted
15039		Not reenacted
15040	16807	Major revision
	16806	New, but see § 15035
15041		Not reenacted
15042		Not reenacted
15043		Not reenacted
15044		Not reenacted
15045	16109	No revision
	16901	New
	16902	New
	16903	New
	16904	New
	16905	New
	16906	New
	16907	New
	16908	New
	16909	New
15046	16910	Major revision
	16911	New
	16912	New
	16913	New
	16914	New
	16915	New
	16916	New
	16917	New
15047	16951	No revision
15048(a)	16952	No revision
15048(b)-(e)		Not reenacted
15049	16953	No revision
15050	16954	No revision
15051	16955	No revision
	16955.5	New
15052	16956	No revision
15053	16957	No revision
15054	16958	No revision
15055	16959	No revision
15056	16960	No revision

15057	16961	No revision
15058	16962	No revision

For a summary of UPA'94 changes from the pre-'97 Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), Ch. 400, Partnerships: Governing Statutes, § 400.11[5]. For a summary of definitions pertaining to partnerships, see §§ 400.20, 400.21 in that publication.

[4] Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA)

The Uniform Limited Partnership Act [Corp. Code § 15501 et seq.], referred in this chapter as "ULPA," generally governed limited partnerships existing on or before July 1, 1984. The California Revised Limited Partnership Act [Corp. Code § 15611 et seq.; see [5], below], referred to as "CRLPA," governed limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984, as well as limited partnerships existing on or before July 1, 1984, that elected to be governed by it [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714]. The Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA '08) [Corp. Code §§ 15900-15912.07; see [6], below], applies to all limited partnerships on and after January 1, 2010 [Corp. Code § 15912.06(b)].

The ULPA became inoperative and was repealed on January 1, 2010 [see Corp. Code § 15534; see also [6], below]. Citations to its provisions, therefore, refer to former law. Repeal of the ULPA, however, does affect actions commenced, proceedings brought, or rights accrued before January 1, 2008, the operative date of the ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15912.07; see Corp. Code § 15900 et seq.; see also [6], below]. Furthermore, certain provisions of the ULPA '08 do not apply to limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008 unless the partners otherwise elect [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(c); see also Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, §§ 5, 8.03 (LexisNexis)]. For these reasons, discussion of the ULPA has been retained in the partnership coverage in this publication.

[5] California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)

Limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984 and before January 1, 2008 [see 6, below] were governed by CRLPA [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b), 15714]. CRLPA limited partnerships were also governed, in any case not provided for by CRLPA, in the same manner as general partnerships, either under the pre-'97 Uniform Partnership Act or by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 15722]. For further discussion of the law applicable to limited partnerships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), Ch. 400, Partnerships: Governing Statutes, §§ 400.12, 400.13.

The CRLPA became inoperative and was repealed on January 1, 2010 [see Corp. Code § 15724; see also [6], below]. Citations to its provisions, therefore, refer to former law. Repeal of the CRLPA, however, does not affect actions commenced, proceedings brought, or rights accrued before January 1, 2008, the operative date of the ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15912.07; see Corp. Code § 15900 et seq.; see also [6], below]. Furthermore, certain provisions of the ULPA '08 do not apply to limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008 unless the partners otherwise elect [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(c); see also Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, §§ 5, 8.03 (LexisNexis)]. For these reasons, discussion of the CRLPA has been retained in the partnership coverage in this publication.

[6] Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008

The Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA '08) [see Stats. 2006, ch. 495, § 20; Corp. Code §§ 15900-15912.07], operative January 1, 2008 [see Corp. Code § 15912.04], governed the following limited partnerships before January 1, 2010 [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(a)]:

- Limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008; and

- Limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008, which elected to be subject to the new Act.

Beginning January 1, 2010, except as otherwise provided, the ULPA '08 governs all limited partnerships, regardless of the date of formation [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(b)]. However, it does not affect any action commenced, proceeding brought, or right accrued before its operative date [see Corp. Code § 15912.07]. Furthermore, certain provisions of the ULPA '08 do not apply to limited partnerships formed before January 1, 2008 unless the partners otherwise elect [see Corp. Code § 15912.06(c); see also Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, §§ 5, 8.03 (LexisNexis)].

It will take time before new appellate decisions interpreting the ULPA '08 begin to appear. Discussion of the ULPA and the CRLPA, therefore, has been retained in the partnership coverage in this publication. When applicable, discussions of points and authorities under the ULPA '08 include cross-references to similar points and authorities drafted under prior law. However, users of this chapter with litigation involving limited partnerships governed by the ULPA '08 are cautioned to independently verify that any cases decided under the old acts are consistent with the statutory provisions of the new limited partnership legislation before citing or relying on those decisions in actions involving limited partnerships governed by the new law. The ULPA '08 extensively recasts and revises the provisions governing the organization and governance of limited partnerships. It creates a stand-alone law covering formation, filings, contributions and distributions, rights of transferees and creditors, dissociation, dissolution, actions by partners, conversion and merger, dissenting limited partners' rights, and foreign limited partnerships. For an extensive discussion of the ULPA '08, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships , Part C (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsFormationGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsManagement Duties & LiabilitiesGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability PartnershipsBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.03

§ 170.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

Some of the most significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in summary judgment or summary adjudication proceedings. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. A memorandum that exceeds 10 pages must include a table of contents and a table of authorities. A memorandum that exceeds 15 pages must also include an opening summary of argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)]. A memorandum that includes a table of contents and a table of authorities must be paginated as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(h). These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other forms to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . That chapter also sets forth a skeletal form for a memorandum, for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication.

[3] Citing to the Correct Governing Statute

As discussed in § 17.02[1][a], actions involving general partnerships may be governed either by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 or by its predecessor statute, the Uniform Partnership Act, depending on when the action was commenced and when the rights at issue accrued. For that reason, some of the individual forms in this chapter include alternative citations of authority to the relevant sections of both the UPA'94 and its predecessor. When these forms are incorporated into an actual memorandum, however, the drafter should be careful to retain only statutory references to the partnership act that actually governs the action, and should delete any citation in these forms to the provisions of the partnership act that does not apply.

CAUTION:

If citations to only one general partnership act are included following a statement of law in a form in this chapter, the practitioner should not use that provision in an action controlled by the other partnership act without conducting careful independent research to verify that the statement of law is valid under the partnership statute that is applicable to the particular action. For example, the UPA'94 is more detailed in many respects than its predecessor act, and has codified a number of rules that either are new or were previously controlled by case law rather than by statute [see correlation table in § 170.02[3]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.04

§ 170.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms relating to partnerships and joint ventures, see the following chapters of California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 400, Partnerships: Governing Statutes.
- Ch. 401, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners and Partnership.
- Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties.
- Ch. 403, Partnerships: Actions by and Against Dissociated Partners.
- Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships.
- Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties.
- Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution.

For discussion and forms relating to limited liability companies, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of mining partnerships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 363, Mining (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to unincorporated associations generally and nonprofit organizations, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs.

- Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations.
- Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations.

For discussion and forms for use in specific actions in which points of law regarding partnership may be relevant, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 103, Brokers.
- Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts.
- Ch. 427, Principal and Agent.

For discussion and forms relating to corporations generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), Chapters 160 through 170.

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For memoranda relating to the requirement that a partnership must file a fictitious business name statement before it can maintain an action on any transaction had in the fictitious name, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For memoranda as to the effect of failure to file a fictitious business name statement, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions .

Related memoranda that may be useful in particular cases involving partnerships may be found in Ch. 31, Brokers and Salespersons and Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

For memoranda relating to the procedural requirements of accountings and appointments of receivers and referees, see Ch. 12, Accounting , Ch. 200, Receivers , and Ch. 201, Reference and Referees .

[3] Other Related Publications

For a detailed discussion and analysis of the enactment of and transition to UPA'94, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 24, Partnerships (Matthew Bender). For statements of partnership, certificates of limited partnership, and registration forms for limited liability partnerships, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 15, General Partnerships, Ch. 16, Formation of Limited Partnerships, and Ch. 16C, Limited Liability Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsDissolution & Winding UpGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawGeneral PartnershipsManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability CompaniesGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawLimited Liability PartnershipsBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsFormationBusiness & Corporate LawLimited PartnershipsManagement Duties & LiabilitiesBusiness & Corporate LawUnincorporated Associations

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.05-170.09

[Reserved]

§§ 170.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
A. Governing Statutes

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.10

§ 170.10 Supporting Contention That UPA'94 Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16111(b)]--Partnership Formed Prior to Effective Date of UPA'94

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That UPA'94 Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16111(b)]--Partnership Formed Prior to Effective Date of UPA'94

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BECAUSE _____ [THIS ACTION (or PROCEEDING) WAS FILED or THE RIGHTS AT ISSUE IN THIS ACTION ACCRUED] AFTER _____ [JANUARY 1, 1999 or, if partnership made a valid election between January 1, 1997 and December 31, 1998, to be governed by UPA'94: _____ (date of election), THE DATE ON WHICH THE PARTNERSHIP MADE A VALID ELECTION TO BE GOVERNED BY THE PROVISIONS OF THE UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT OF 1994], _____ (THIS ACTION IS or THOSE ISSUES ARE) GOVERNED BY THE UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT OF 1994.

A. Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 Applies to pre-1997 Partnerships. [If partnership elected prior to Jan. 1, 1999 to be governed by UPA'94, include: A partnership formed prior to January 1, 1997, could elect on or after that date to be governed by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.), at which point the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994, rather than the predecessor statute, would govern the partnership. (Corp. Code § 16111(a))]. On and after January 1, 1999, the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] governs all partnerships, regardless of the date on which they were formed. (Corp. Code § 16111(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that UPA'94 governs an action or proceeding, or legal issues, involving a partnership that was formed under the pre-'97 Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.]. It may be used in any action in by a party contending that the UPA'94, rather than former partnership law, is the governing law with respect to such a partnership.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of applicable governing law. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

If the partnership in question was formed on or after January 1, 1997, the effective date of UPA'94 (unless it was continuing the business of a dissolved partnership under former Corp. Code 15041), it was automatically subject to the UPA'94 from the date of its formation [Corp. Code § 16111(a)], and the need for these points and authorities should not arise.

If a party wishes to argue that the UPA'94 does not apply in a particular action, § 170.11 should be used in appropriate cases, instead of this form.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. If the application of the UPA'94 is at issue, this entails showing that the partnership was not within the very limited exceptions to applicability of the UPA'94 [see Corp. Code §§ 16111(a), 16112; see also § 170.11]. To show that UPA'94 applies in the action or to the rights at issue when a pre-1997 partnership is involved, the party supporting application of UPA'94 need show only that the action was commenced, or the rights in question accrued, subsequent to either:

- The date, if any, on which the partnership made a valid election to be governed by UPA'94 [see Corp. Code §§ 16111(a), 16112]; or

- January 1, 1999, the date on which UPA'94 became applicable to all partnerships regardless of the date of formation [see Corp. Code § 16111(b)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 Applies to pre-1997 Partnerships

Corp. Code § 16111(b) provides that on and after January 1, 1999, the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] governs all partnerships. Formerly, partnerships formed before January 1, 1997, and partnerships continuing the business of a dissolved partnership, continued to be governed by the pre-'97 Act until January 1, 1999, unless they elected at an earlier date to be governed by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16111(a)]. However, as of January 1, 1999, the pre-'97 Act was repealed, and since that date the UPA'94 governs all partnerships regardless of their date of formation [Corp. Code § 16111(a), (b); see Stats. 1996, ch. 1003, § 18 (repealing the pre-'97 Act operative January 1, 1999)].

Repeal of the pre-'97 Act, however, did not affect actions or proceedings commenced, or rights accrued, prior to the effective date of UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16112]. For discussion, and points and authorities supporting the application of the pre-'97 Act to a particular claim, see § 170.11.

Note that Corp. Code § 16111(c) provides that except with respect to the UPA'94 provisions specifically relating to registered limited liability partnerships and foreign limited liability partnerships, the UPA'94 provisions relating to the liability of the partnership's partners to third parties apply to limit those partners' liability to a third party who had done business with the partnership within one year preceding the partnership's election to be governed by the UPA'94 only if the third party knew or received a notification of the partnership's election.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
A. Governing Statutes

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.11

§ 170.11 Supporting Contention That pre-'97 Act Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16112]--Action Filed or Right Accrued Prior to January 1, 1997

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That pre-'97 Act Governs Action Involving General Partnership [Corp. Code § 16112]--Action Filed or Right Accrued Prior to January 1, 1997

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BECAUSE _____ [THIS ACTION (or PROCEEDING) WAS FILED or THE RIGHTS AT ISSUE IN THIS ACTION ACCRUED] PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1997, IT IS GOVERNED BY THE FORMER UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.], NOT THE UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT OF 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.].

A. Former Uniform Partnership Act Governed All Partnerships Formed Before January 1, 1997. The former Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.] governed California general partnerships that were formed before January 1, 1997, the effective date of the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] (former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.; see Corp. Code § 16111(a)).

B. Former Uniform Partnership Act Continues to Govern Pre-Existing Rights and Actions. The Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] does not affect any action or proceeding commenced, or right accrued, before that Act takes effect. Thus, if an action or proceeding was commenced, or rights accrued, prior to January 1, 1997, the effective date of the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994, the action, proceeding, or rights continue to be governed by the Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.]. (Corp. Code § 16112; see Dickson, Carlson & Campillo v. Pole (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 445, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the argument that an action or proceeding involving a general partnership formed before January 1, 1997, or the rights at issue in such an action or proceeding, are governed by the pre-'97 partnership act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.] rather than by UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.]. In appropriate cases, it may be modified to oppose a contention that the UPA'94 controls the action [see § 170.10].

Note that after January 1, 1997, a pre-1997 partnership continued to be governed by the pre-'97 act until January 1, 1999, or the earlier date, if any, on which it elected to be governed by UPA'94 [see Corp. Code § 16111(a), (b)]. Corp. Code § 16112, in contrast, states simply that UPA'94 does not affect an action or proceeding commenced or right accrued "before this chapter takes effect." As applied to an action or proceeding that was commenced, or a right that accrued, with respect to a pre-1997 partnership after January 1, 1997, but while the partnership was still governed by the pre-'97 Act, the words "takes effect" presumably were intended to refer the date on which the UPA'94 became applicable to the specific partnership in question, rather than to January 1, 1997, the date on which the UPA'94 first went into effect. A contrary reading of Corp. Code § 16112 would give the illogical result that the UPA'94 would govern all actions or proceedings that were initiated after January 1, 1997, even if, under Corp. Code § 16111(a), (b), the partnership was still governed by pre-1997 act at the time the action was commenced or the right accrued [but see Dickson, Carlson & Campillo v. Pole (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 445 n.6, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 (stating that pre-'97 act governs actions commenced and rights accrued before January 1, 1997), discussed in § 170.11[3]]. Counsel should read these statutes carefully, and understand the potential issue, before modifying these points and authorities to apply to an action involving a pre-1997 partnership that arose after January 1, 1997, but before that partnership became subject to UPA'94.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the applicable governing law. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel needs to demonstrate that the partnership in question was formed before January 1, 1997. Counsel then must further establish that the action or proceeding commenced, or the rights accrued, prior to January 1, 1997 [see Corp. Code § 16112].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Former Uniform Partnership Act Continues to Govern Pre-Existing Rights and Actions

Corp. Code § 16112 provides that UPA'94 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.] does not affect actions or proceedings commenced, or rights accrued, "before this chapter takes effect" [Corp. Code § 16112]. The effective date of the UPA was January 1, 1997.

In Dickson, Carlson & Campillo v. Pole (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 , two partners informed their law partnership on August 28, 1995, that they had decided to withdrew, and took the firm's largest client with them. The remaining partners immediately dissolved the firm (on September 20, 1995), and in two separate actions sued the two departing partners and their new firm in October/November 1995 for declaratory relief, accounting, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract, and other causes of action seeking their share of the profits earned from the completion of the partnership's unfinished business representing a defendant in numerous product liability cases. The trial court in the first action (1) found that the plaintiffs had a fiduciary duty to complete some of the unfinished business but had failed to do so and therefore had failed to "do equity," (2) barred the plaintiffs from recovering in the accounting any of the profits earned by the defendants, and (3) referred the accounting cause of action to the court hearing the second action, which primarily asserted tort claims against the departing partners. The trial court in the second action consolidated the two actions and determined that the prior ruling in the first action completely precluded the recovery of tort and contract damages based on profits earned by the defendants after the date of dissolution, granted a motion in limine excluding all evidence of those profits, and granted a motion for judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants (83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 440) . Plaintiffs challenged both rulings on appeal. The appellate court concluded that the equitable maxim to "do equity" was not a complete defense in an accounting action and also did not preclude the recovery of damages on the plaintiffs' tort and contract causes of action, and thus reversed and remanded (83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 440, 449) .

With respect to the law governing post-dissolution profits from unfinished partnership business, the court noted that the Uniform Partnership Act [former Corp. Code § 15001 et seq.] was repealed effective January 1, 1999 [Stats. 1996, ch. 1003, § 1.2, p. 88], and replaced by the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 [Corp. Code § 16100 et seq.]. It stated that the former act governs actions commenced and rights accrued before January 1, 1997 [Corp. Code § 16112], and therefore governed this action (83 Cal. App. 4th 436, 445 n. 6). (Note, however, that the court was not faced with the issue of an action that was commenced or a right that accrued during the 2-year grace period beginning on January 1, 1997, and ending on December 31, 1998, during which pre-1997 partnerships that had not affirmatively elected application of UPA'94 continued to be governed by the pre-'97 Act [see Corp Code § 19111(a), (b)].)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
A. Governing Statutes

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.12-170.19

[Reserved]

§§ 170.12[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.20

§ 170.20 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists-Requirements [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16102; former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists-Requirements [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16102; former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE THEY ENTERED INTO AN ASSOCIATION TO CARRY ON AS CO-OWNERS A BUSINESS FOR PROFIT[, AND ALTHOUGH THERE _____ (IS or WAS) NO WRITTEN AGREEMENT, THE EXISTENCE OF THE PARTNERSHIP _____ (IS or WAS) EVIDENCED BY THE CONDUCT OF THE PARTIES].

A. Partnership Defined. A partnership is an association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit [add if relevant: and includes, for all purposes of the laws of California, a registered limited liability partnership] (Corp. Code §§ 16101(9), 16202(a) or former Corp. Code § 15006(1); Holmes v. Lerner (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130).

B. Business Defined. "Business" includes every trade, occupation, and profession (Corp. Code § 16101(1) or former Corp. Code § 15002(b)).

C. Person Defined. "Person" includes an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, limited partnership, limited liability partnership, limited liability company, association, joint venture, government, governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality, or any other legal or commercial entity (Corp. Code § 16101(13)).

[Optional] D. Sufficiency of Partnership Agreement. A partnership need not be evidenced by a writing; it may be an oral agreement. When there is no writing as evidence for the agreement, the existence of a partnership may be shown by the conduct of the parties (Calada Materials Co. v. Collins (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 250, 253, 7 Cal. Rptr. 374).

[Optional] E. Finding of Partnership Need Be Proved Only by Preponderance of Evidence. A party who alleges that a partnership existed based on an oral agreement need prove the partnership's existence only by a preponderance of the evidence (Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 476, 490, 286 Cal. Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a partnership was formed because two or more persons entered into an association to carry on as co-owners of a business for profit [see Corp. Code §§ 16101(9), 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]. It may be used in any action in which a party contends that a partnership was formed.

The issue of whether a partnership was formed most often arises when there is no formal partnership agreement. Thus, optional Paragraph D may be used to support the contention that a written partnership agreement is not necessary and a partnership may be established by the conduct and acts of the parties [see Calada Materials Co. v. Collins (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 250, 253, 7 Cal. Rptr. 374] .

Optional Paragraph E may be used to clarify the burden of proof. Although some cases have held that clear and convincing proof of an oral partnership or joint venture is required, the California Supreme Court has established that the normal preponderance of the evidence rule applies [Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 476, 490, 286 Cal. Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892 (analyzing and declining to follow cases such as Lyon v. MacQuarrie (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124, 115 P.2d 594)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership existed. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the parties entered into an arrangement whereby they conducted a business jointly and shared in the profits, thereby forming a partnership.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 170.30 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partnership Defined

The facts and procedural background of Holmes v. Lerner (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130 , are discussed in § 170.23. In Holmes, defendants contended that they did not discuss sharing profits of the business with plaintiff and that without an agreement to share profits, there could be no partnership. The court examined the definition of "partnership" set forth in former Corp. Code § 15006 [see now Corp. Code § 16101(9)] and the fact that it omitted language regarding division of profits which had been included in prior versions of the definition of partnership. The fact that former Corp. Code § 15006 defined a partnership as "an association of two or more persons to carry on as coowners a business for profit," and that former Corp. Code § 15007(4) [see now Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)] provided that in determining whether a partnership exists, "[t]he receipt by a person of a share of the profits of a business is prima facie evidence that he is a partner," mandates the conclusion that profit sharing is prima facie evidence of being a partner, rather than a required element of the definition of a partnership. The appellate court therefore held that the trial court properly determined that a partnership had been formed, notwithstanding the absence of an express agreement to share profits (74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 453-454, 457) .

[b] Sufficiency of Partnership Agreement

Calada Materials Co. v. Collins (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 250, 7 Cal. Rptr. 374 , involved an action for the value of oil well materials delivered to defendants. Plaintiff delivered the materials to two wells operated by defendants and drilled by the same drilling contractor. The trial court rendered judgment against defendants individually and doing business as a partnership for the unpaid balance on the deliveries to both sites. One of the defendants appealed, contending that the trial court's finding that a partnership existed as to the second site was unsupported by the evidence.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that because defendant personally signed the contract with the contractor with respect to the second site and held himself out to plaintiff and others as the other defendant's partner, the inferences to be drawn from these and other acts adequately supported the challenged finding (184 Cal. App. 2d 250, 252-253) . The court held that a partnership may be oral, and the existence of a partnership may be evidenced by the conduct of the parties (184 Cal. App. 2d 250, 253) .

[c] Finding of Partnership Need Be Proved by Only Preponderance of Evidence

Both plaintiff and defendant in Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 476, 286 Cal. Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892 , were attorneys. Plaintiff owned 100 shares of Pioneer Theaters stock and also represented other shareholders who wished to sell their Pioneer stock. Plaintiff and defendant orally agreed that if the opportunity arose, they would find a third-party buyer for the stock and share the finder's fee equally. Plaintiff also testified that they agreed to purchase the stock together if they were unable to find a third-party buyer. Defendant and a third party ended up purchasing the stock, although plaintiff and defendant shared the finder's fee as agreed. Plaintiff commenced the action alleging that defendant concealed his participation in the transaction as buyer in violation of their agreement. The trial court instructed the jury that they had to find by clear and convincing evidence that the parties had entered into an oral agreement and its essential terms. The jury held for defendant and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed and remanded for a new trial, holding that it was error to require proof of the oral agreement by clear and convincing evidence. The California Supreme Court granted review to determine the proper standard of proof for establishing an oral joint venture or partnership agreement.

The court noted that the general rule is that issues of fact in civil cases are determined by a preponderance of testimony [see Evid. Code § 115]. The court then considered whether any constitutional, statutory, or decisional law required a burden of proof higher than a preponderance to establish an oral joint venture or partnership agreement (54 Cal. 3d 476, 483) . Neither of the parties found any constitutional law that dictated a higher standard (54 Cal. 3d 476, 483) , nor did any statute require an oral partnership or joint venture agreement to be established by clear and convincing evidence (54 Cal. 3d 476, 483) .

The court considered all the cases relied on by defendant in light of the rule enunciated in Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 278, 289 n.6, 137 Cal. Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316 , that statements in case law purporting to require clear and convincing or clear and satisfactory evidence must be read in light of the statutory provision for proof by a preponderance of the evidence, and concluded that none required clear and convincing evidence to prove the existence of an oral joint venture or partnership agreement (54 Cal. 3d 476, 484) . The court considered the statement in Welch v. Alcott (1921) 185 Cal. 731, 742, 198 P. 626 , that proof of an oral partnership agreement be "clear," and said that in light of Evid. Code § 115, that language in Welch should not be interpreted as holding that a "clear and convincing" burden of proof is required. Defendant contended that Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 278, 137 Cal. Rptr. 635, 562 P.2d 316 , and Cameron v. Crocker-Citizens Nat. Bank (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 940, 943, 97 Cal. Rptr. 269 , state that "clear proof" is merely a variant of the "clear and convincing" standard of proof. However, the court said, Cameron, which involved an oral contract to make a will, did not hold that "clear proof" and "clear and convincing proof" were equivalent standards, but only said that English precedents permitted the enforcement of oral contracts to make a will "upon clear proof" of their execution (54 Cal. 3d 476, 484) . Liodas merely noted that some court of appeal cases in civil fraud actions had required proof of fraud by "clear and convincing evidence" or a variant of that standard, but held that the proper standard of proof in civil fraud actions is preponderance of the evidence (54 Cal. 3d 476, 484-485) .

The court conceded that certain appellate decisions have stated that proof of an oral joint venture or partnership agreement must be made by clear and convincing evidence, naming specifically Sullivan v. Schellinger (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 111, 113, 338 P.2d 462 , Smalley v. Baker (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 824, 839, 69 Cal. Rptr. 521 , and Lyon v. MacQuarrie (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 119, 124, 115 P.2d 594 . Smalley relied on Sullivan and Sullivan relied on Lyon. Lyon relied on Welch v. Alcott (1921) 185 Cal. 731, 742, 198 P. 626 (discussed above), Swanson v. Siem (1932) 124 Cal. App. 519, 523, 12 P.2d 1053 , and Blinn v. Ritchie (1929) 101 Cal. App. 691, 692-693, 282 P. 390 . When this trail of citations was traced and analyzed, the court said, it lost much of its persuasiveness. Swanson stated only that the existence of an oral agreement of partnership need be proved by "competent evidence." Blinn stated that there was no finding that a partnership existed between the parties, nor was there "competent evidence in the record to sustain such a finding." The Blinn court reasoned that a contract of partnership must be proved in the same manner that any other contract must be established. The defendant in Weiner v. Fleischman did not contend that an oral contract must be established by clear and convincing evidence (54 Cal. 3d 476, 485) .

The court continued to name other cases that relied on Sullivan, Smalley, and/or Lyon, specifically, ABC Egg Ranch v. Abdelnour (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 12, 15-16, 35 Cal. Rptr. 487 and Coronet Constr. Co., Inc. v. Palmer (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 603, 611, 15 Cal. Rptr. 601 (54 Cal. 3d 476, 485-486) , and noted that Coronet Constr. also cited Milstein v. Saratain (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 924, 932, 133 P.2d 836 (discussed in § 170.30[4]), which states that the burden is on the one asserting the existence of the partnership to prove it by "competent evidence." Finally, the court distinguished the last two cases relied on by defendant to establish the clear and convincing standard of proof. Tannehill v. Finch (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 224, 232 Cal. Rptr. 749 and Toney v. Nolder (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 791, 219 Cal. Rptr. 497 , involved attempts to rebut legal and beneficial title to real property and were expressly decided under Evid. Code § 662, which provides for a presumption in favor or the owner of legal title to property and provides that the presumption may be rebutted only by clear and convincing proof. Thus, the court concluded that the case law does not justify or require a departure from the ordinary civil standard of preponderance of the evidence when a party seeks to establish the existence and scope of an oral joint venture or partnership agreement (54 Cal. 3d 476, 486) .

The court considered and rejected defendant's contention that imposition of a higher burden of proof was necessary because of the gravity of the consequences flowing from a finding that an oral joint venture or partnership agreement exists, distinguishing the issues for which a higher standard is required, such as the creation of trusts and oral agreements to make wills (54 Cal. 3d 476, 487-490) . The error, the court held, was prejudicial, and required reversal and remand for a new trial (54 Cal. 3d 476, 491) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sufficiency of Partnership Agreement

The facts and procedural background of Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99 , are discussed in § 170.21[3]. In Greene, defendants appealed an interlocutory decree declaring the dissolution of their former partnership with plaintiffs in a club and ordering the sale and equitable distribution of partnership assets. Defendants contended that the evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's finding that the parties had been associated as partners because they never agreed on terms. The court of appeal held that a partnership need not be evidenced by writing, and that it is immaterial that the parties do not designate the relationship as a partnership or realize that they are partners because the intent to carry on a business as co-owners may be implied from their acts (235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 166) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.21

§ 170.21 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Intent Regarding Formation Is Determinative

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Intent Regarding Formation Is Determinative

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.20, and may be combined with §§ 170.22-170.24 if appropriate based on the issues involved.]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE IT IS EVIDENT FROM THE TERMS OF THE AGREEMENT AND THE PARTIES' CONDUCT THAT THEY INTENDED TO ENTER INTO A PARTNERSHIP.

A. Intent to Carry On Business as Co-owners Is Determinative of Partnership. The ultimate test of the existence of a partnership is the intention of the parties to carry on a definite business as co-owners. That intention may be determined from the terms of the parties' agreement or from the surrounding circumstances (Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 165-166, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99 ; Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386, 235 P.2d 113).

[Optional] B. Intent to Do Things That Constitute Partnership Is Material. The fact that the parties did not intend their relationship to be called a partnership is immaterial; it is the intent to do the things that constitute a partnership that usually determines whether or not that relationship exists between the parties (Associated Piping & Eng'g Co., Ltd. v. Jones (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 110-111, 61 P.2d 536).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that a partnership was formed based on the intent of the parties to an agreement. This contention may be used if there is no written partnership agreement, or if the parties did enter into a written agreement but that agreement either (1) did not specify clearly the nature of the relationship between the parties or (2) attempted to designate the relationship between them as something other than a partnership.

The parties' intent may be ascertained by the terms of the agreement, the parties' conduct, or both [see Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 165-166, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99 ; Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386, 235 P.2d 113] . Although the terms of a written agreement are important with respect to whether a partnership has been formed, they do not always reflect the true intention of the parties as to their relationship. For example, it is possible for a written agreement to expressly provide that the relationship it covers is not a partnership. However, this type of provision generally has been found only to reflect the parties' intention that the relationship covered by the agreement not be called a partnership, which is immaterial. It is the intent of the parties to do the things that constitute partnership that usually is determinative [Associated Piping & Eng'g Co., Ltd. v. Jones (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 110-111, 61 P.2d 536] . Thus, optional Paragraph B may be used to support a contention that a partnership was formed even though a written agreement provides to the contrary.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the parties' intent to form a partnership is determinative. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that regardless of the agreement between the parties, whether written or oral, the parties intended to enter into a partnership. This may be established by facts showing that the parties acted in such a manner to indicate their intent to carry on as co-owners of a business.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 170.30 and 170.31 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Carry On Business as Co-owners Is Determinative of Partnership

In Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99 , defendants approached plaintiffs and proposed that they go into business together as partners, and that plaintiffs buy a one-half interest in defendants' liquor license. Plaintiffs agreed and borrowed money from a third party to buy their interest. During the course of their relationship, plaintiffs and defendants discussed a formal partnership agreement, but plaintiffs were not interested due to defendants' pre-existing debts and corresponding liens on the license. The parties agreed to place plaintiffs' names on the liquor license, but did not agree on several other items. They left these matters to be resolved in the future. Thereafter, the relationship of the parties broke down, and plaintiffs brought an action to dissolve the partnership, and to liquidate and distribute the partnership assets. The trial court found that plaintiffs and defendants were associated as partners, and entered an interlocutory decree in plaintiffs' favor. Defendants appealed, contending that, at most, the evidence indicated that they had an agreement with plaintiffs to form a partnership in the future, but never executed the agreement since they could not agree on all of the terms.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the ultimate test of the existence of a partnership is the intention of the parties to carry on a definite business as co-owners (235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 165-166) . The court held that that intention may be determined from the terms of the parties' agreement or from the surrounding circumstances. It held that the parties' joint loan negotiations, a joint search for the business premises, mutual lease and sublease arrangements, a combined effort to remodel and equip the premises and manage the business, the fact that the alleged partners names were to go on a liquor license, the sharing of profits, and the presence of both names on checking accounts, service accounts, and health permits were all facts indicating the parties' intention to carry on as co-owners (235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 166) .

Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 235 P.2d 113 , arose from an action against three defendants (two brokers and a contractor) for the value of building materials furnished to defendant contractor. Defendant brokers entered into a written agreement with defendant contractor wherein they agreed to secure suitable locations, arrange financing, arrange and pay for plans and specifications, and provide venetian blinds, nails, and hardware with respect to residences to be built by defendant contractor. Defendant contractor agreed to enter into a written contract with each purchaser of a residence, and build the residences in accordance with the plans and specifications provided by defendant brokers. At trial, the jury concluded that defendants were partners, and awarded judgment against them. Defendant brokers appealed, contending that the agreement was not a partnership agreement because, among other things, it contained no express intention that defendant contractor would share the conduct of his business with them.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the question of the existence of a partnership depends primarily on the intention of the parties ascertained from the terms of the agreement and from the corresponding circumstances (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386) . The court held that it is the intention as evidenced by the terms of the agreement that controls, not the subjective or undisclosed intention of the parties. The court found that defendants' agreement provided that the parties to it were mutually interested in the construction of residences for sale. They agreed to cooperate and work together in obtaining suitable sites and financing, and in the construction of the residences. It also found that defendants then proceeded to an apportionment of duties (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 387) . Thus, the court held that the jury was justified in finding that there was a mutual interest and purpose between defendants to carry on business jointly (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 390) .

[b] Intent to Do Things That Constitute Partnership Is Material

In Associated Piping & Eng'g Co., Ltd. v. Jones (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 61 P.2d 536 , defendants entered into a written contract whereby one defendant agreed to loan money to the other two defendants to promote and sell machines patented by the latter. In consideration of the loan, defendant borrowers assigned to defendant lender a one-third interest in the profits derived from the sale of the machines. Under the agreement, defendant lender was to collect and retain the funds derived from any sales and apply them to the loans. However, the agreement also provided that defendant borrowers were to retain full management and operation of the business. Plaintiff, the manufacturer and installer of the machines, sued to recover a balance due for merchandise sold and delivered, and for money advanced to and services performed for defendants. The trial court found that defendant lender was a partner of defendant borrowers by virtue of the contract, and rendered judgment for plaintiff against all defendants. Defendant lender appealed, contending that the contract merely established a relationship of debtor and creditor.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that notwithstanding the provisions of the contract that defendant lender was to loan defendant borrowers various sums of money, defendant lender was a member of the partnership. The court conceded that the relationship of debtor and creditor was shown and expressly provided for in the contract, but held that this fact did not establish that the parties did not intend to create a partnership. The court held that the parties did intend to create exactly the relationship as shown by the contract, but did not intend that relationship to be called that of partnership (17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 110) . It held that the parties' intent in that respect was immaterial, and if a contract by its terms establishes a partnership between the parties, even the expressed intent that it should not be so classed would be of no avail (17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 110-111) . It is the intent to do the things that constitute a partnership that usually determines whether or not that relationship exists between the parties (17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 111) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Carry On Business as Co-owners Is Determinative of Partnership

Estate of Foreman (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 180, 74 Cal. Rptr. 699 , involved a proceeding in probate on a petition of respondents, decedent's partners and co-executors, for conveyance of decedent's partnership interest to them pursuant to a "Buy and Sell" agreement between the partners. Appellant, decedent's surviving spouse, also filed a petition for the removal of respondents as co-executors. Appellant contended that a partnership did not exist. The appellate court held that in the face of 20 years of partnership actions, it was unreasonable to deny the existence of the partnership merely because a schedule of assets was never attached to the partnership agreement, the assets were never appraised or valued, and the appraisal sum was never inserted in the blank space provided in the agreement. The court held that indefiniteness as to details will not void a partnership agreement when the indefiniteness may be made definite by other evidence. Citing Greene v. Brooks (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 161, 45 Cal. Rptr. 99 (discussed in § 170.21[3][a]), the court held that the ultimate test of the existence of a partnership is the intention of the parties to carry on a definite business as co-owners, and that intention may be determined from the terms of the parties' agreement or from the surrounding circumstances (269 Cal. App. 2d 180, 188) .

[b] Intent to Do Things That Constitute Partnership Is Material

In Singleton v. Fuller (1953) 118 Cal. App. 2d 733, 259 P.2d 687 , an action on an account stated and on an indebtedness, the trial court found that defendants were associated together in a business venture for the purpose of purchasing, remodeling, and selling barracks, and that their relationship to each other was a general partnership. The evidence indicated that defendants became mutually interested in the venture. One defendant, however, did not desire that it appear that way and accordingly made it appear that his interest was only in loaning money to the other defendant, with the obligation of repayment of the principal, together with interest, being the only objective. There was evidence that on the first defendant's insistence, the instrument executed by defendants was drawn so that it did not show a partnership. The appellate court held that there was sufficient evidence to support the court's finding of a partnership. The court relied on the rule that an express stipulation under written articles of agreement, to the effect that the relationship is not one of partnership, is of no value if such is the actual nature of the business (118 Cal. App. 2d 733, 740-742) .

California Employment Stabilization Comm'n v. Walters (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 149 P.2d 17 , was an action to recover money alleged to be due as contributions, interest, and penalties under the provisions of the California Unemployment Insurance Act. Plaintiff contended that because the word "partnership" was not used in framing an agreement between defendant and her employees to share the profits of defendant's business, it was not a partnership agreement. The appellate court held that the existence of a partnership may be established although the parties may not have used the words "partner" or "partnership." Furthermore, it is not essential that the parties should have known that their contract in law created a partnership. Citing Associated Piping & Eng'g Co., Ltd. v. Jones (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 61 P.2d 536 (discussed in § 170.21[3][b]), the court held that it is the intent to do the things that constitute a partnership that usually determines whether or not that relationship exists between the parties (64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 558) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.22

§ 170.22 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Relinquishment of Control Is Evidence of Partnership

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Relinquishment of Control Is Evidence of Partnership

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with 170.20, and may be combined with §§ 170.21, 170.23, 170.24 if appropriate according to the issues involved.]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] EVEN THOUGH _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] _____ [DID or DOES] NOT HAVE CONTROL OR MANAGEMENT OF THE BUSINESS BECAUSE THE PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT _____ [PROVIDES or PROVIDED] THAT MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL WOULD BE ENTRUSTED TO _____ [specify, e.g., PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT _____ (name) or specify some other alleged partner not a party to the action], AND THEREFORE _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] WAS EXERCISING HIS/HER RIGHT TO CONTROL BY RELINQUISHING IT.

Community of Interest May Exist Even Though Party Relinquishes Control. When persons jointly associated agree that management of the enterprise should be entrusted to one of the group, there may nevertheless be a community of interest in view of the fact that the making of the agreement to relinquish control is itself exercise of the requisite right to control (Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by a party that a partnership exists even though management or control of the partnership was given to one or more of the alleged partners. Relinquishing control by agreement between the parties is itself an exercise of the requisite right of control [Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572] . This form may be used in circumstances in which the parties have agreed that control should rest primarily with one partner because of the particular character of the business, or the duties of the other partners do not allow them the time to engage in the management and control of the business [see, e.g., Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572] . This form may be most persuasive when the parties have reserved the right to terminate the management authority of the managing partner.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership has been formed notwithstanding the fact that management or control of the business rests with one or more of the alleged partners. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that management or control of the business has been given to one or more of the parties by agreement among the parties.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 170.32 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Community of Interest May Exist Even Though Party Relinquishes Control

In Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572 , plaintiffs and defendant, pursuant to a written partnership agreement, entered into an association to carry on the business of trading in commodities for profit. The agreement provided that capital contributed to the partnership by the parties was only to be used to finance the trading in commodities and commodity futures. Plaintiffs brought an action against defendant for money had and received, contending that these payments constituted investments in a security that could not be lawfully sold by defendant without a permit from the Commissioner of Corporations [see Corp. Code § 25008]. The trial court found that a bona fide general partnership had been formed, and therefore it was not necessary for defendant to obtain a permit from the Commissioner. Plaintiffs appealed, contending, among other things, that the agreement did not constitute a partnership because the sole power to manage the business and incur liabilities was in defendant.

The appellate court affirmed. The court held that the necessary community of interest in the control of the partnership affairs existed under the agreement by reason of the fact that the partners elected to recognize circumstances requiring immediate and decisive action in a fluctuating market, and to give almost complete managerial powers to defendant as one of the partners. The court held that the other partners were not completely without control because they could terminate the agreement and defendant's managerial powers on 30 days written notice. It also held that the execution of an agreement relinquishing control is itself an exercise of the requisite right of control over the conduct of the partnership business (191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Community of Interest May Exist Even Though Party Relinquishes Control

The facts and procedural background of Associated Piping & Eng'g Co., Ltd. v. Jones (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 61 P.2d 536 , are discussed in § 170.21[3][b]. In Associated Piping, the court held that it is the intent to do the things that constitute a partnership that usually determines whether or not that relationship exists between the parties. The court held that a provision in the partnership agreement that two of three partners were to retain full control of the management and operation of the business did not prevent a partnership. It held that the fact that the parties agreed to give the management of the partnership enterprise to one or more person did not prevent a partnership from arising (17 Cal. App. 2d 107, 111) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.23

§ 170.23 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Person Who Receives Share of Profits Is Presumed to Be Partner [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Person Who Receives Share of Profits Is Presumed to Be Partner [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.20, and may be combined with §§ 170.21, 170.22, or 170.24 if appropriate according to the issues involved.]

BECAUSE THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF]_____ [name] _____ [PROVIDES or PROVIDED] THAT THE PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS _____ [ARE or WERE] TO BE SHARED BY THEM, _____ [name] IS PRESUMED TO BE A PARTNER IN THE BUSINESS.

A. Sharing Profits Is Prima Facie Evidence of Partnership. A person who receives a share of the profits of a business is presumed to be a partner in the business (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3); Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386, 235 P.2d 113 ; see Holmes v. Lerner (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 453-454, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130).

[Optional] B. Implied Agreement to Share Losses. If an agreement only contains an express provision for the division of profits, a corresponding division of losses will be implied (California Employment Stabilization Comm'n v. Walters (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 558, 149 P.2d 17 ; San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. Costaloupes (1929) 96 Cal. App. 322, 334, 274 P. 84).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a partnership existed when the evidence shows that the parties agreed to and did share in the profits of the business. A person who receives a share of the profits of a business is presumed to be a partner in the business [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)]. Optional Paragraph B may be used when it is not evident from the agreement that the parties also agreed to share losses. An agreement to share profits implies an agreement to also share losses [see California Employment Stabilization Comm'n v. Walters (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 558, 149 P.2d 17 ; San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. Costaloupes (1929) 96 Cal. App. 322, 334, 274 P. 84] . This may be most useful when the opposing party is attempting to defend an action on the ground that a partnership did not exist because the parties allegedly only agreed to share profits.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that because a party shared in the profits of a business, he or she is presumed to be a partner in the business. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss facts showing that the agreement between the parties provided for a sharing of the profits of the business.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 170.30, 170.34, and 170.35 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sharing Profits Is Prima Facie Evidence of Partnership

The facts and procedural background of Constans v. Ross (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 235 P.2d 113 , are discussed in § 170.21[3][a]. In Constans, the appellate court, relying in part on former Corp. Code § 15007(4), held that ordinarily the existence of a partnership is evidenced by the right of the respective parties to participate in the profits and losses and in the management of the business (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386) . It held that the agreement in this case was not cast in the form of an agency contract as defendant brokers alleged, because it contained no agreement by defendant contractor to pay defendant brokers a commission for their services. The court held that, to the contrary, the agreement provided for a division of profits in that defendant contractor was to receive as profit $9,000 or $7,990, less the cost to him of construction, and the practice of the parties, operating under the agreement, was that defendant brokers received $1,000 of the purchaser's payments (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 387) . The court also held that the fact that the profits and losses were not equally shared did not necessarily compel a conclusion that no partnership existed because although a partnership generally contemplates an equal sharing of the profits and losses in the prosecution of a common purpose, the division may be left to the agreement of the parties (106 Cal. App. 2d 381, 389) .

In Holmes v. Lerner (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130 , plaintiff claimed that the first defendant breached an oral partnership agreement with plaintiff for creation of a cosmetics company, and that the second defendant interfered with the contract. The trial court found defendants liable to plaintiff for compensatory and punitive damages and granted a nonsuit on various causes of action against the second defendant. The appellate court reversed the judgment against the second defendant for interference with the contract and the order granting a nonsuit, and in all other respects affirmed the judgment and a postjudgment order. Defendants contended that they did not discuss sharing profits of the business with plaintiff and that without an agreement to share profits, there could be no partnership. The court examined the definition of "partnership" set forth in former Corp. Code § 15006 [see now Corp. Code § 16101(9)] and the fact that it omitted language regarding division of profits which had been included in prior versions of the definition of partnership. The fact that former Corp. Code § 15006 defined a partnership as "an association of two or more persons to carry on as coowners a business for profit," and that former Corp. Code § 15007(4) [see now Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)] provided that in determining whether a partnership exists, "[t]he receipt by a person of a share of the profits of a business is prima facie evidence that he is a partner," mandated the conclusion that profit sharing is prima facie evidence of being a partner, rather than a required element of the definition of a partnership. The court therefore held that the trial court properly determined that a partnership had been formed, notwithstanding the absence of an express agreement to share profits (74 Cal. App. 4th 442, 453-454, 457) .

[b] Implied Agreement to Share Losses

California Employment Stabilization Comm'n v. Walters (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 149 P.2d 17 , was an action brought by plaintiff state commission to recover money alleged to be due as contributions, interest, and penalties under the California Unemployment Insurance Act. Defendant operated an inn and connected concessions located on a state park. At the beginning of the inn's last year of operation, defendant entered into a written agreement with her former employees to operate the business together and divide the net earnings. The agreement defined net earnings as gross earnings or income less expenses incident to the operation of the inn. The trial court found that the parties that signed the agreement entered into a partnership, and therefore defendant was not subject to payment of the contributions provided for in the act. Plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that it did not matter, as plaintiff contended, that the agreement failed to provide for a share of the losses, for it is well settled that an agreement to divide profits implies an agreement for corresponding division of losses (64 Cal. App. 2d 554, 558) .

In San Joaquin L. & P. Corp. v. Costaloupes (1929) 96 Cal. App. 322, 274 P. 84 , two defendants entered into a written contract by which one agreed to loan money to the other in consideration of which the former could warehouse and sell all of the latter's output. The contract provided that after payment from the sales proceeds, expenses, wage allowances, and the monies advanced by defendant lender, the surplus was to be divided equally between the two defendants. It expressly provided that the relationship was not a partnership, the monies advanced to defendant borrower were advanced as a loan and not as a contribution to the business, and the receipt of one-half of the net profits was in lieu of interest payments on the indebtedness. There was no provision as to the sharing of losses, although the contract did provide that if it appeared that the business did not pay, the agreement could be terminated. Plaintiff, a power company, sued defendants to recover money allegedly due under contracts for the furnishing of light and power by plaintiff to defendant borrower. All defendants except defendant lender were dismissed from the action, and the trial court rendered judgment against him, finding that he was a partner in defendant borrower's firm. Defendant lender appealed, contending that he was only defendant borrower's creditor.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that, in essence, the agreement between the defendants contemplated the united action of the parties in manufacturing and sales, and the sharing of joint expenses incurred through such activities. The court held that an agreement to divide the profits of a business implies an agreement for corresponding division of its losses, unless otherwise expressly stipulated. Courts will not countenance contrivances for giving persons the whole of the advantage of a partnership without subjecting them to the liabilities, and an agreement that attempts to carry out a joint venture for the mutual profit of the adventurers and evade their responsibility for losses may be enforced and construed as creating a partnership (96 Cal. App. 322, 334) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sharing Profits Is Prima Facie Evidence of Partnership

The facts and procedural background of Moulin v. Der Zakarian (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572 , are discussed in § 170.22[3][a]. In Moulin, the court held that one of the rules applicable to the determination of a partnership is that a partnership agreement between the parties must provide for the sharing of profits and losses, or in other words, the sharing of net profits (191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 189) . The court held that the evidence, and the instrument at issue alleged to be a partnership agreement, fully supported the finding that a general partnership was formed because, among other things, the agreement was unequivocal in stating the basis under which the partners were to share the net profits of the partnership (191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 190-191) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.24

§ 170.24 Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property or Capital Contribution Not Necessary

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property or Capital Contribution Not Necessary

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.20, and may be combined with §§ 170.21-170.23 if appropriate according to the issues involved].

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] EVEN THOUGH _____ [_____ (PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT) DID NOT CONTRIBUTE ANY CAPITAL TO THE PARTNERSHIP or THEY _____ (DO or DID) NOT JOINTLY OWN THE PROPERTY THAT FORMED THE PARTNERSHIP CAPITAL].

A. Joint Ownership of Property That Constitutes Partnership Capital Not Necessary. It is not necessary for a partnership's existence that the partners jointly own the property that constitutes the partnership capital (Brown v. Fairbanks (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 441, 263 P.2d 355).

B. Contribution of Capital Not Necessary. The fact that members of a partnership do not put money into the business may have some evidentiary value, but it is not determinative as to whether a partnership exists (Whitley v. Bradley (1910) 13 Cal. App. 720, 729, 110 P. 596).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a partnership was formed and exists even though the party asserting existence did not contribute any capital or own any portion of the partnership property. It is not necessary that parties jointly own partnership capital in order to establish a partnership [Brown v. Fairbanks (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 441, 263 P.2d 355] . For example, the above contention may be used when one party to an alleged partnership agreement initially obtains the financing necessary to acquire partnership property and commence business with the understanding that the other party will contribute his or her share at a later date, and the first party thereafter claims that a partnership does not exist before the second party makes a contribution.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership was formed and exists even though the parties do not jointly own the partnership capital. For example, this form may be used in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint made on the ground that no facts have been pleaded showing that there is joint ownership. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, it is important for counsel to demonstrate affirmatively that a partnership exists under the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss facts showing that a partnership agreement exists, and/or that the conduct of the parties indicates that they intended to form a partnership.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership of Property That Constitutes Partnership Capital Not Necessary

In Brown v. Fairbanks (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 263 P.2d 355 , plaintiffs alleged that they initially agreed that defendant would contribute money to commence operation of a mine in exchange for one-half interest therein. Allegedly, when this agreement fell through, plaintiffs proposed that defendant work the mine for them and they would pay him for his labor. Thereafter, plaintiffs leased the mine to another party, and paid defendant one-half of the proceeds received from the party for ore extracted from the mine. Plaintiffs brought an action for a declaration that the latter agreement was merely a contract of employment, and not a partnership. The trial court found that plaintiffs and defendant entered into an oral agreement of venture or partnership even though record title of the mining claim stood in plaintiffs' name. Plaintiffs appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that to constitute a partnership, it is not necessary for partners to jointly own property forming its capital (121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 441) . The court held that because plaintiffs first contacted defendant and offered him one-half interest in the claim, this fact, in and of itself, indicated that plaintiffs were willing to give a one-half interest in the mine under certain conditions (121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 440-441) . The court then noted that defendant was subsequently urged to go into the mine and perform certain services with plaintiffs, and promised that if their efforts proved successful, he was to receive one-half interest in "it." The court held that this provision under these circumstances could be construed to mean the mine as well as the profits from its operations (121 Cal. App. 2d 432, 442) .

[b] Contribution of Capital Not Necessary

In Whitley v. Bradley (1910) 13 Cal. App. 720, 110 P. 596 , plaintiffs and defendant entered into an agreement to form a partnership for the purpose of manufacturing and selling cement washtrays, and doing a general cement construction business. The agreement provided that each of the partners would contribute one-third of the capital, receive one-third of the profits, and be liable for one-third of the debts. Thereafter, defendant denied the existence of a partnership, and excluded plaintiffs from the business. Plaintiffs brought an action for accounting and dissolution, and requested that a receiver be appointed to take possession of the assets and manage the business. The trial court granted plaintiffs' request and appointed a receiver, pendente lite. Defendant appealed, contending that the evidence was insufficient to show that there was ever an agreement to organize a partnership, but that the parties agreed to form a corporation, and the property claimed as partnership property was transferred to and owned by the corporation.

The appellate court affirmed. The court noted that although plaintiffs did not contribute any money towards establishing the business, they testified that they were ready and willing to put up their respective shares but were told by defendant to wait until the business was incorporated. At that time, the stock and profits would be divided equally (13 Cal. App. 720, 727) . The court held that because there was some showing that the parties actually formed and for a time carried on business through a partnership, it could not reverse the trial court's order. It noted that the lease under which the business was run was a valuable asset taken in the names of two of the original parties. The property of the business was never transferred to the corporation, and still remained in the name of the partnership. The court held that the fact that plaintiffs did not put any money into the business may have had some evidentiary value tending to negate the existence of a partnership, but it by no means follows that, because one partner may not put up his or her share of the capital under an agreement to form a partnership, the combination so formed is any less a partnership (13 Cal. App. 720, 729) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership of Property That Constitutes Partnership Capital Not Necessary

In Galardi v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 683 , the California Supreme Court upheld certain findings and conclusions of the Review Department of the State Bar Court in a matter in which discipline was based on petitioner's breach of fiduciary duties to real estate venture partners who were not clients. In one venture, petitioner contributed real property, title to which remained in his name, and the venture partner contributed cash. The California Supreme Court said that a joint venture may exist although the property forming the capital contribution of the venture is not jointly owned by the parties, and although one of the parties contributed money, another property, and another skill to the enterprise (43 Cal. 3d 683, 691) .

15 of 147 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.25-170.29

[Reserved]

§§ 170.25[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.30

§ 170.30 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Failure to Prove Partnership's Existence

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Failure to Prove Partnership's Existence

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE EXISTENCE OF A PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] HAS NOT BEEN ESTABLISHED BECAUSE _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] HAS NOT MET HIS/HER BURDEN OF SHOWING THAT THE PARTIES ENTERED INTO AN ASSOCIATION TO CARRY ON AS CO-OWNERS A BUSINESS FOR PROFIT [BY CLEAR AND CONVINCING EVIDENCE].

A. Partnership Defined. [See § 170.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Burden of Proof That Partnership Exists. The burden of proving the existence of a partnership by competent evidence is on the person asserting its existence (Frisch v. Frisch (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 185, 217 P.2d 150).

[Optional] C. Persons Not Partners Between Themselves Are Not Partners as to Third Parties. Except for persons who are liable as partners under Corporations Code Section 16308 either because they misrepresent themselves as partners or consent to such misrepresentations, persons who are not partners as to each other are not partners as to third persons (see Corp. Code § 16202(c) or former Corp. Code § 15007(1); see also Armato v. Baden (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 885, 897-899, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 ; Henningsen v. Howard (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359, 255 P.2d 837).

[Add points and authorities relating to the specific fact situation in question (see, e.g., §§ 170.31 -170.35)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that a partnership was formed. The burden of proving the existence of a partnership by competent evidence is on the person asserting it; the above contention may be used when it is alleged that a party failed to meet that burden [see Frisch v. Frisch (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 185, 217 P.2d 150] . Optional Paragraph C may be useful if the parties to an enterprise did not intend to be partners, or one or more of the essential elements of partnership was missing, and thus the parties are not liable as partners to third-party creditors.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership was not formed and does not exist. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the party asserting that a partnership existed did not meet his or her burden of proof.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 170.20 -170.24.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof That Partnership Exists

Frisch v. Frisch (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 217 P.2d 150 , involved an action by plaintiff against his parents to establish the existence of a partnership between himself and his parents in real property purchased by his parents and in the personal property used in the business conducted on the property. A dissolution, accounting, and sale was also sought by plaintiff. The trial court rendered judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appealed. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the burden of proving the existence of a partnership by competent evidence was on plaintiff (97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 185) . The court held that there was ample evidence to support the trial court's finding that there was no partnership agreement. Certain admissions contained in letters written by plaintiff's father and relied on by plaintiff created, at most, a conflict in the evidence that was resolved in favor of defendants by the trial court (97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 184-185) .

[b] Persons Not Partners Between Themselves Are Not Partners as to Third Parties

In Armato v. Baden (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 885, 897-899, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 , a former patient of a medical group who was treated by a physician assistant employed by the group filed an action against independent contractor doctors who worked part time for the group. Plaintiff alleged that defendants' conduct created an ostensible partnership within the group, so that the doctors were jointly liable for the negligent treatment plaintiff allegedly received from the physician assistant. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants and the appellate court affirmed. The court held that even if former Corp. Code § 15016 applied [see now Corp. Code § 16308], it did not support imposition of liability since defendants did not represent themselves (or consent to another representing them) as "partners in an existing partnership" or as a partner "with one or more persons not actual partners." The mere listing of the independent contractor doctors' names on the door to the medical group's office and on appointment cards and prescription pads did not reasonably induce the belief that the doctors and group's physician assistant, or doctors and medical group, were partners (71 Cal. App. 4th 885, 898-899) .

In Henningsen v. Howard (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 255 P.2d 837 , defendant brothers owned an office equipment business as a partnership. They also transacted other kinds of business, and had a general understanding that if the second defendant brother transacted any business in his own name, the first defendant brother would receive 50 percent of the profit and contribute 50 percent of any loss. Defendant brothers purchased surplus equipment in New York with other persons, including another defendant, as a joint venture. The second defendant brother went to New York to transact the venture, and opened an office there. At the third defendant's initiative, the New York venture entered the textile business. A certificate of limited partnership was filed stating that the third defendant, a fourth defendant, and the second defendant brother were interested in the textile business under the defendant brothers' partnership name. The first defendant brother had no contact with the textile business, although, pursuant to the understanding noted above, he received 50 percent of the profits. The certificate listed the second defendant brother as a limited partner, and the third and fourth defendants as the general partners in the textile business. The second defendant brother made a capital contribution to the business out of a bank account in the defendant brothers' partnership name. Thereafter, the limited partnership bought and received textiles from plaintiff's assignor. Plaintiff brought an action against all defendants individually, and doing business as a partnership for a balance due on the account. The trial court rendered judgment for defendants, finding that the first defendant brother was not a partner in the limited partnership, and that the second defendant brother was a limited partner and was not liable for the debts of the partnership. Plaintiff moved for a new trial, and the motion was granted on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to support the decision of the court. Defendants appealed.

The appellate court reversed, holding that although it may be inferred from the evidence that the second defendant brother was representing his partnership with his brother, it did not follow that it would cause defendant brothers to be liable as general partners (117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 358) . The court held that under the Uniform Partnership Act, except in cases of estoppel, one is not a partner as to third persons unless he or she is a partner with respect to his or her partners. The only persons who are partners are those who carry on a business as co-owners for profit. The court held that the receipt of a share of the profits is only prima facie evidence that a person is a partner, and it can be rebutted with evidence that the person is not a partner (117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 359) . The court held that the second defendant brother was not a general partner because he did not intend to become one, and only represented himself as a limited partner (117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 360) . It then held that the first defendant brother, although he may have been a subpartner with the second defendant brother, was not a partner in the limited partnership because he had no direct connection with it. Even if he was directly entitled to profits from the limited partnership because the second defendant brother represented him as an undisclosed principal or represented the brothers' partnership, the prima facie evidence was rebutted because the first defendant brother did not intend to be a partner, did not hold himself out as a partner, and nobody relied on his being so (117 Cal. App. 2d 352, 361) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof That Partnership Exists

In Milstein v. Sartain (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 924, 133 P.2d 836 , an action in assumpsit for recovery on five different promissory notes, plaintiff alleged that the individual defendants were engaged in business as partners. A default judgment was entered against defendants for procedural defects in their answer, and the appellate court reversed. After disposing of the procedural issues, the court held that affidavits of plaintiff and his attorney to the effect that they interviewed one of the defendants and that this defendant then admitted the existence of the partnership were not competent to show that defendants were engaged in business as partners (56 Cal. App. 2d 924, 932) . The court held that the burden is on the one asserting the existence of a partnership to prove it by competent evidence. Before a partner may be charged as such by a plaintiff's declarations, a prima facie showing of the existence of the partnership first must be established (56 Cal. App. 2d 924, 932-933) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.31

§ 170.31 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Absence of Words or Phrases in Agreement That Designate Partnership Relation Is Significant

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Absence of Words or Phrases in Agreement That Designate Partnership Relation Is Significant

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.30, and may be combined with §§ 170.32-170.35 if appropriate according to the issues involved].

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [DOES or DID] NOT EXIST BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE _____ [THE AGREEMENT _____ (DOES or DID) NOT CONTAIN ANY WORDS OR PHRASES DESIGNATING A PARTNERSHIP RELATION or THE PARTIES DESIGNATED THEIR RELATIONSHIP AS SOMETHING OTHER THAN A PARTNERSHIP], AND IT IS _____ [UNCLEAR WHETHER THE PARTIES INTENDED THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO BE A PARTNERSHIP or EVIDENT FROM THE PARTIES' CONDUCT THAT THEY DID NOT INTEND THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO BE A PARTNERSHIP].

Absence of Words or Phrases Designating Partnership Significant When Intent of Parties Is Unclear. Although the existence of a partnership may be established when the words "partner" or "partnership" are not used, the presence or absence of such words may be significant when the intent of parties to form a partnership is not clear under the circumstances (Smith v. Schultz (1891) 89 Cal. 526, 534, 26 P. 1087 ; Oscar Krenz Copper & Brass Works, Inc. v. England (1930) 109 Cal. App. 747, 753, 293 P. 689).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a partnership existed between the parties. Although the general rule is that the parties' intention not to call their relationship a partnership is immaterial when it is clear from the terms of the agreement and the parties' conduct that they intended to enter into a partnership [see § 170.21, above], the name the parties have given to their relationship should be given some weight when that intent is unclear [Smith v. Schultz (1891) 89 Cal. 526, 534, 26 P. 1087 ; Oscar Krenz Copper & Brass Works, Inc. v. England (1930) 109 Cal. App. 747, 753, 293 P. 689] . This form may be useful when it is unclear what the parties intended when they entered into an agreement, or their conduct suggests that they did not intend to form a partnership, and the agreement clearly designates their relationship as something other than a partnership.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that because the parties did not designate their relationship as a partnership in their agreement, a partnership was not formed. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the parties to the agreement designated their relationship as something other than a partnership. Counsel should also discuss any facts showing that the parties' conduct indicates that they did not intend to enter into a partnership.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 170.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Words or Phrases Designating Partnership Significant When Intent of Parties Is Unclear

In Smith v. Schultz (1891) 89 Cal. 526, 26 P. 1087 , plaintiff and defendants entered into a lease for a three-year term. Plaintiff contended that the lease instrument created a partnership and gave each party the right to end the relationship at any time. He brought an action for dissolution of the alleged partnership, an accounting and settlement, and the appointment of a receiver. The trial court found that a partnership existed. The partnership was dissolved, and a receiver was appointed to take possession of the subject property. There was an accounting and a judgment rendered against defendants to be paid out of the assets. Defendants appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that the instrument did not create a partnership (89 Cal. 526, 533) . The Court observed that neither the word "partner" nor "partnership," nor any other word or phrase ordinarily employed in written contracts of partnership, was used in the agreement. The court held that although the use of those words is not essential when the whole instrument shows clearly that a partnership was meant, their absence is significant when such intent is not clear. The court based its holding on the fact that there was nothing in any of the language of the instrument that expressed or suggested plaintiff's intention was to be a general partner in business with defendants (89 Cal. 526, 534) .

In Oscar Krenz Copper & Brass Works, Inc. v. England (1930) 109 Cal. App. 747, 293 P. 689 , defendant entered into a contract with a licensee, granting the licensee the exclusive right to manufacture and sell patented paint spraying machines. Defendant agreed to advance $750 to the licensee for advertising costs. This sum was to be repaid out of the first profits realized. The licensee agreed to pay defendant, as monthly royalty payments, 50 percent of the profits. The licensee assured defendant that he had made arrangements for funds to carry on the business, but he contributed no capital. When the licensee was unable to procure the funds, defendant advanced money to him for living expenses. All of the management and control of the business was done by the licensee. Thereafter, the licensee went into bankruptcy. A creditor of the licensee brought an action to recover for goods alleged to have been sold to defendant by virtue of his relationship with the licensee. However, the trial court rendered judgment in favor of defendant, finding that no partnership existed between defendant and the licensee. Plaintiff creditor appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the evidence, taken as a whole, was sufficient to support the conclusion of the trial court that no partnership existed. The court observed that a partnership relation was not mentioned in the agreement between defendant and licensee. The court held that although the existence of the relation may be established when the words "partner" and "partnership" are not used, the presence or absence of such words may be significant when the circumstances leave the question in doubt (109 Cal. App. 747, 753) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absence of Words or Phrases Designating Partnership Significant When Intent of Parties Is Unclear

Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. Grider (1908) 152 Cal. 746, 94 P. 601 , involved an action by plaintiff receiver to recover money received by defendants from the sale of lots under an agreement between defendants and a third party. The action was brought against defendants as the third party's agents. Defendants appealed the judgment rendered against them, contending, among other things, that the agreement between them and the third party constituted a partnership. The California Supreme Court affirmed, holding that while the question whether or not a partnership exists is to be determined from the nature of the relation agreed on, rather than the name that the parties have given to it, some weight must be allowed to the language of the parties themselves. The court observed that the agreement designated defendants as agents. It also observed that there was nothing in the agreement that indicated that defendants were to pay any part of the losses that might be suffered, nor were they given power to make contracts binding all. The court held that although certain expenses were to be borne by defendants, and their compensation for their services was to be determined by the net profits, these features were not inconsistent with the existence of an agency, which, on the face of the agreement, the parties were creating (152 Cal. 746, 752) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.32

§ 170.32 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Community of Interest

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Community of Interest

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.30, and may be combined with § 170.31 or §§ 170.33-170.35 if appropriate according to the issues involved.]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [DOES or DID] NOT EXIST BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE THERE _____ [IS or WAS] NO COMMUNITY OF INTEREST IN THE BUSINESS.

Community of Interest Is Necessary for Partnership to Exist. To constitute a partnership relation, there must be a community of interest that empowers each party to make contracts, incur liabilities, and manage the whole business (Smith v. Grove (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 461-462, 118 P.2d 324).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a partnership has been formed or exists. A partnership requires a community of interest such that each party may make contracts, incur liabilities, and manage the whole business, and this form may be used to contend the absence of such a relationship [see Smith v. Grove (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 461-462, 118 P.2d 324] . For example, the argument in this memorandum might be raised by a defendant against whom recovery is sought as a partner in a business that is the subject of litigation, and in which the defendant shared profits, but had no management or control of the business.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership was not formed because there was no community of interest therein. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss any facts showing that a party had no duties with respect to the management or control of the business.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 170.20 and 170.22.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Community of Interest Is Necessary for Partnership to Exist

In Smith v. Grove (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 118 P.2d 324 , plaintiffs and defendant entered into an agreement whereby defendant was to manage, patent, manufacture, sell, or otherwise dispose of an invention by plaintiffs. The agreement stated that in consideration for defendant's services, plaintiffs and defendant entered into a partnership to share equally in the benefits that accrued from the invention. Plaintiff brought a declaratory action to establish the existence of a partnership, and for an accounting and other relief. The trial court rendered its findings in favor of defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the agreement between the plaintiffs and defendant did not create a partnership relation between them because, among other things, it purported to impose on defendant not only the duty of perfecting the invention but of negotiating sales of rights to the use of the invention (47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 462) . The court held that to constitute a partnership relation, there must be a community of interest that empowers each party to make contracts, incur liabilities, and manage the whole business (47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 461-462) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Community of Interest Is Necessary for Partnership to Exist

In Swofford v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 400, 263 P.2d 129 , the appellate court annulled an award by respondent against petitioner. Respondent had found that a truck driver sustained personal injury while allegedly employed by petitioner and his son, individually and as partners. Relying on the rule that the basic elements necessary for a partnership are a community of interest and a sharing of profits, the court held that no inferences could be drawn from the conduct of petitioner and his son that they intended to associate themselves because the evidence showed that petitioner had no degree of control in his son's business, and that all control of the truck in which the driver was injured was with the son (121 Cal. App. 2d 400, 401-402) .

Dickenson v. Samples (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 231 P.2d 530 , involved an action by plaintiff to recover rent on a business premises leased to defendant for use as a billiard parlor. Defendant cross complained for breach of an alleged partnership contract because the contract provided that rent was to be paid on a basis of profits realized from the business. The appellate court affirmed a directed verdict that no partnership existed, holding that a mere sharing in the profits paid as rent to a landlord does not justify an inference of partnership (104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 315) . Citing Smith v. Grove (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 456, 462, 118 P.2d 324 (discussed in [3], above), the court relied on the rule that participation to some extent in the management of a business is a primary element in a partnership organization, and is virtually essential to a determination that such a partnership relationship exists (104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 315) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.33

§ 170.33 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1); former Corp. Code § 15007(2)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Joint Ownership of Property Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1); former Corp. Code § 15007(2)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.30, and may be combined with §§ 170.31-170.32 or §§ 170.34-170.35 if appropriate according to the issues involved.]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [DOES or DID] NOT EXIST BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] SIMPLY BY VIRTUE OF THEIR JOINT OWNERSHIP OF PROPERTY BECAUSE JOINT OWNERSHIP DOES NOT IN ITSELF ESTABLISH A PARTNERSHIP.

Joint Ownership Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership. Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, tenancy by the entireties, joint property, common property, or part ownership does not of itself establish a partnership, even if the co-owners share profits made by the use of the property (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1) or former Corp. Code § 15007(2); Fischer v. Carey (1916) 173 Cal. 185, 186, 159 P. 577 ; Billups v. Tiernan (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 372, 379, 90 Cal. Rptr. 246).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention by one of the parties that a partnership was formed. It may be used when the other party alleges that a partnership exists because the parties are joint owners in some property or business that is the subject of litigation. Joint ownership does not, in itself, constitute a partnership relation [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1); former Corp. Code § 15007(2); Fischer v. Carey (1916) 173 Cal. 185, 186, 159 P. 577] . These points and authorities may be useful in circumstances in which a party is attempting to assert a partnership relation because he or she is a joint tenant or a tenant in common in certain property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partnership was not formed and does not exist merely because the parties jointly own certain property on which the subject business has been established. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel may discuss facts showing that although the parties were co-owners, one of them did not exercise any management or control over the property or business.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership

Fischer v. Carey (1916) 173 Cal. 185, 159 P. 577 , involved an action for an accounting and sale of a vessel jointly owned by respondents and appellants, and for the division of the sale proceeds. The trial court appointed a receiver to take possession of the vessel and operate it until further notice from the court. Appellants appealed this order on the ground that the action was cognizable in admiralty, and that the state court was without jurisdiction to proceed in the matter. Respondents supported jurisdiction on the ground that they and appellants were partners, and therefore a determination by the admiralty court was not appropriate.

The California Supreme Court reversed. The court held preliminarily that the relationship of partners does not arise between part owners of ships merely by virtue of their ownership, particularly when respondents relieved themselves from liability from potential loss, and at the same time deprived themselves of the right to share in the profits resulting from the use of the ship when they compelled appellants to give a bond for its safe return (173 Cal. 185, 187) . The court held that a partnership arises only by special contract. The court used the term "special contract" to distinguish between the circumstances in which several persons merely jointly own a ship, and when there is a specific and distinct agreement to share in profits and losses (173 Cal. 185, 186) . As part owners the parties were merely tenants in common, not partners (173 Cal. 185, 186) .

In Billups v. Tiernan (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 372, 90 Cal. Rptr. 246 , plaintiff, a minor, suffered personal injuries while playing near a truck owned by decedent defendant doing business as a partnership. Plaintiff's mother, individually and as guardian ad litem for her son, filed a complaint against decedent, decedent's estate, a partnership consisting of decedent and his wife, and the wife as executrix of decedent's estate. The trial court found that although decedent's wife had community property rights in defendant's business, she did not meet the factual prerequisites for a partner. The court, therefore, dismissed the cause of action against defendant's wife. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment decreeing dismissal.

The appellate court affirmed. Citing former Corp. Code § 15007 [see now Corp. Code § 16202(c)(1)], the court held that mere common ownership of property or a common interest in a business does not of itself establish a partnership. The court observed that the trial court apparently applied the well recognized rule that some degree of participation by partners in management and control of the business is one of the primary elements of partnership (11 Cal. App. 3d 372, 379) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ownership Does Not in Itself Establish Partnership

The facts and procedural background of Frisch v. Frisch (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 217 P.2d 150 , are discussed in § 170.30[3][a]. In Frisch, the court held that the burden of proving the existence of a partnership by competent evidence is on the party asserting that a partnership existed. The court also held that there was substantial evidence to sustain the trial court's finding that plaintiff and defendants held title to the subject property as joint tenants, and the mere fact that plaintiff was named grantee in the deed did not create a partnership in the property (97 Cal. App. 2d 183, 185) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.34

§ 170.34 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2); former Corp. Code § 15007(3)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not Establish Partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2); former Corp. Code § 15007(3)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.30, and may be combined with §§ 170.31-170.33 or § 170.35 if appropriate according to the issues involved.]

A PARTNERSHIP _____ [DOES or DID] NOT EXIST BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] EVEN THOUGH THEY _____ [SHARE or SHARED] THE GROSS PROCEEDS OF THE BUSINESS BECAUSE THE SHARING OF GROSS PROCEEDS DOES NOT BY ITSELF ESTABLISH A PARTNERSHIP, AND THERE IS INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE TO OTHERWISE ESTABLISH THE EXISTENCE OF A PARTNERSHIP.

Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not By Itself Establish Partnership. The sharing of gross returns does not by itself establish a partnership, even if the persons sharing them have a joint or common right or interest in property from which the returns are derived (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2) or former Corp. Code § 15007(3); Blankenship v. Hearst Corp. (9th Cir. 1975) 519 F.2d 418, 425 .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that the parties were partners based solely on the fact that they shared gross earnings or receipts of a business. The sharing of gross returns does not by itself establish a partnership [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(2); former Corp. Code § 15007(3)]. Sharing profits is one of the essential elements of a partnership, but it implies the sharing of losses [see § 170.23, above]. Therefore, these points and authorities may be used in cases when a party did not share in the expenses or losses of the business.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the sharing of gross returns does not of itself establish partnership. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that although the parties may have had an agreement to share in the gross proceeds of a business, the parties did not agree to share in the expenses or losses of the business, nor was there any actual sharing in those expenses or losses.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 170.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sharing of Gross Returns Does Not of Itself Establish Partnership

In Blankenship v. Hearst Corp. (9th Cir. 1975) 519 F.2d 418 , a newspaper distributor brought a private antitrust action against the newspaper publisher and its director of circulation. Plaintiff distributed papers to news carriers who then delivered the papers to home subscribers. He alleged that defendant's dual distribution scheme (to home-delivery dealers and to street dealers) violated the Sherman Act, and that defendant engaged in a price-fixing conspiracy. The district court granted judgment on the pleadings with respect to the Sherman Act. With respect to the price-fixing charge, the court concluded that plaintiff and the carriers were in partnership, and thus plaintiff did not have capacity to prosecute the case without the carriers' approval. The court granted judgment on the pleadings for defendants on that cause of action (519 F.2d 418, 422 .

The Ninth Circuit held that the evidence relied on by the court to find a partnership was insufficient. The carriers made collections from the subscribers, kept 20 percent of the gross proceeds, and gave plaintiff 80 percent of the gross proceeds. If a subscriber failed to pay his or her bill, the carriers did not have to pay plaintiff the amount owed. Citing former Corp. Code § 15007(3) [now see Corp. Code § 16202], the court stated that the sharing of gross returns does not alone establish a partnership. In this case, the carriers had no community of interest with one another; they had no management role; they did not share in each other's profits or losses; they did not share in plaintiff's risks except to the limited extent of losing their profit if a subscriber failed to pay; and there was no writing between plaintiff and the carriers indicating a partnership (519 F.2d 418, 425-426 .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sharing of Gross Return Does Not of Itself Establish Partnership

The appellate court in Cislaw v. Southland Corp. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386 , affirmed a judgment in favor of defendant franchisor, on which plaintiffs sought to impose wrongful death liability arising out of a franchisee's sale of clove cigarettes to their child. The trial court found no evidence of an agency relationship between the franchisor and the franchisee, nor evidence of any partnership or joint venture. Plaintiffs argued that because the franchise fee was calculated as percentage of total receipts after deducting cost of goods sold, a partnership or joint venture existed. The court agreed that as there was no participation in net profits or losses, no joint venture or partnership existed (4 Cal. App. 4th 1284, 1297-1298) .

In Wheeler v. Farmer (1869) 38 Cal. 203 , plaintiff appointed defendant as his agent to procure patents in Great Britain for certain devices to which plaintiff already had patents in the United States. Their agreement provided that defendant was authorized to make, vend, and use the patents for the best prices he could procure. Further, any agreement defendant made under this arrangement was to be at defendant's own expense, account, and responsibility. Defendant was required to collect all monies that became due on the sale and use of the patents. He was required to then account for and quarterly pay over to plaintiff one-half of the money received. Thereafter, defendant refused to pay plaintiff the money he received on sales, and plaintiff obtained a writ of attachment for the money owed to him. Defendant filed a motion to discharge the attachment. The motion was denied, and defendant appealed on the ground that he and plaintiff were partners in the business to which their agreement related, and therefore an action at law could not be maintained between them.

The California Supreme Court affirmed, holding that an agreement to divide gross earnings does not transform the parties to the agreement into partners (38 Cal. 203, 213) . The court held that the essential elements of a partnership were wanting because there was no community of interest in capital, stock, profit, or loss (38 Cal. 203, 213-214) . It held that one-half of the proceeds of the sales of the devices was consideration for the arrangement plaintiff entered into with defendant (38 Cal. 203, 214-215) . In reaching its holding, the court observed that plaintiff had no voice or right of control in the conduct and management of the business in Great Britain, and incurred no liability for the expenses of the business or any losses sustained in its conduct (38 Cal. 203, 215) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.35

§ 170.35 Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Presumption of Partnership When Profits Received as Payment [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3); former Corp. Code § 15007(4)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partnership Exists or Existed [Corp. Code §§ 16101, 16202(a); former Corp. Code §§ 15002, 15006]--No Presumption of Partnership When Profits Received as Payment [Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3); former Corp. Code § 15007(4)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.30, and may be combined with §§ 170.31-170.34 if appropriate according to the issues involved].

THE FACT THAT PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT _____ [SHARE or SHARED] PROFITS IN A BUSINESS DOES NOT GIVE RISE TO A PRESUMPTION THAT A PARTNERSHIP _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN THEM. IF THE PROFITS _____ [ARE or WERE] RECEIVED IN PAYMENT _____ [specify, e.g., OF A DEBT or OF WAGES or OF RENT or OF AN ANNUITY TO A _____ (BENEFICIARY or REPRESENTATIVE or DESIGNEE OF A DECEASED OR RETIRED PARTNER) or OF INTEREST ON A LOAN or FOR THE SALE OF THE GOODWILL OF A BUSINESS OR OTHER PROPERTY].

No Presumption of Partnership From Sharing of Profits Under Certain Circumstances. A person who receives a share of the profits of a business is presumed to be a partner in the business, unless the profits were received for any of the following reasons:

(1) In payment of a debt by installments or otherwise (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(A); Dills v. Delira Corp. (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 124, 131, 302 P.2d 397).

(2) In payment for services as an independent contractor or of wages or other compensation to an employee (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(B); Sievert v. Simonds (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 34, 38, 200 P.2d 95

).

(3) In payment of rent (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(C); Dickenson v. Samples (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 315, 231 P.2d 530).

(4) In payment of an annuity or other retirement benefit to a beneficiary, representative, or designee of a deceased or retired partner (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(D)).

(5) In payment of interest or other charge on a loan, even if the amount of payment varies with the profits of the business, including a direct or indirect present or future ownership of the collateral, or rights to income, proceeds, or increase in value derived from the collateral (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(E)).

(6) In payment for the sale of the goodwill of a business or other property by installments or otherwise (Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)(F)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention by a party that because he or she received a share of the profits of a business, he or she is presumed to be a partner in the business. This presumption does not apply if the profits were received in payment of a debt, of wages or rent, of an annuity to a beneficiary of a deceased or retired partner, of interest on a loan, or in payment for the sale of the good will of a business or other property [see Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3); former Corp. Code § 15007(4)(a)-(e)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a presumption of partnership should not be made merely because the parties shared in the profits of a business. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that although the parties shared in the profits of a business, the profits were received in payment of a debt; in payment for services as an independent contractor, or of wages or other compensation to an employee; in payment of rent; in payment of an annuity or other retirement benefit to a beneficiary, representative, or designee of a deceased or retired partner; in payment of interest or other charge on a loan; or in payment for the sale of the goodwill of a business or other property. In an appropriate case, counsel also may argue that because there is no corresponding obligation to share in the losses of a business, or no community of interest in the business, the mere sharing of profits does not give rise to a presumption of partnership.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 170.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Presumption of Partnership From Sharing of Profits Under Certain Circumstances

In Dills v. Delira Corp. (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 124, 302 P.2d 397 , plaintiffs, a producer, and six manufacturers joined together to form defendant corporation for the purpose of producing promotional radio and television programs. One plaintiff was president, and the producer was vice-president of the corporation. The producer also owned his own independent production company. The producer was entrusted with sole management of the technical work in producing the programs because plaintiffs were busy with other duties. The producer used his own company to produce the programs, and plaintiffs agreed to advance $8,000 to the producer's company for production. For the loan of the money, the producer's company agreed to repay the loan, and repay plaintiffs for their services in securing the capital out of the profits of the program. When the producer induced defendant company to transfer to his company the exclusive right to produce the programs, plaintiffs brought suit for a declaration of a partnership, and that the partnership owned the principal asset on which it was allegedly formed. The trial court found that no partnership was created and rendered judgment for defendant. Plaintiffs appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. Citing former Corp. Code § 15007(4) [see now Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)], the court held that although it is true that a partnership relation is presumed when parties enter into a profit-sharing agreement and actually share profits, the presumption evaporates when substantial evidence shows the relationship to be one of borrower-lender, with the shares of profit being paid for services rendered or money advanced. The court held that plaintiff failed to show that no substantial evidence supported the finding of nonpartnership or that the admitted facts did show a partnership as a matter of law because the facts proved were just as consistent with the theory of a loan and interest as with partnership (145 Cal. App. 2d 124, 131) .

Dickenson v. Samples (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 231 P.2d 530 , involved an action by plaintiff to recover rentals from defendant. Defendant cross-complained for breach of an alleged contract between plaintiff and defendant to form a partnership or joint venture. Defendant claimed that he was excluded from the operation of the alleged partnership business when he was evicted from the premises on which it was located. Defendant based his claim on the fact that plaintiff had leased his premises to defendant and a third party for the operation of a billiard parlor. Although the evidence was conflicting, the rental agreement apparently provided that the rent involved payment of a portion of the profits of the business to plaintiff. The third party subsequently withdrew from his partnership with defendant, and no rent was paid to plaintiff for several months thereafter. The trial court granted a directed verdict against defendant on the cross complaint. Defendant appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. The court held that although it was true that rent was to be paid on a basis of profits realized, there was no further evidence of any joint liability for debts and losses, and there was no evidence of a community of interest insofar as plaintiff having any control or management of any of the factors influencing the net worth of the business. Accordingly, the court held that a mere sharing in the profits paid as rental to a landlord does not justify an inference of partnership under former Corp. Code § 15007(4) [see now Corp. Code § 16202(c)(3)] (104 Cal. App. 2d 311, 315) .

In Sievert v. Simonds (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 34, 200 P.2d 95 , defendant operated a business and employed plaintiff for several years, first as a salesman, and then as a manager. Plaintiff was paid a regular salary at first, and then entered into a profit-sharing arrangement with defendant. Another plaintiff was employed by defendant as a bookkeeper and office manager, and received a salary and a share in the profits. No one but defendant at any time contributed any money to his business. Plaintiffs brought an action for an accounting of an alleged partnership in defendant's business. The trial court found that defendant did not enter into any partnership agreement with plaintiffs. Plaintiffs appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the fact that some of the plaintiffs were employed by defendant and were to share in a division of the profits did not require the trial court to conclude that a partnership existed between the parties (89 Cal. App. 2d 34, 38) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
1. General Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.36-170.49

[Reserved]

§§ 170.36[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.50

§ 170.50 Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Law Applicable to Joint Ventures, Joint Venture Defined, and Intent to Create Joint Venture

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Law Applicable to Joint Ventures, Joint Venture Defined, and Intent to Create Joint Venture

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with the points and authorities in § 170.51 to set out the requisite elements of a joint venture.]

A JOINT VENTURE _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE THEY JOINTLY _____ [CARRY or CARRIED] ON A SINGLE BUSINESS ENTERPRISE FOR PROFIT AND INTENDED TO CREATE A JOINT VENTURE THEREBY[, AND ALTHOUGH THERE _____ (IS or WAS) NO WRITTEN AGREEMENT, THE EXISTENCE OF THE JOINT VENTURE IS EVIDENCED BY THE CONDUCT OF THE PARTIES].

A. Joint Ventures Governed by Law of Partnerships. The rights and liabilities of joint venturers, as between themselves, generally are governed by the principles applicable to partnerships (Stodd v. Goldberger (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 827, 836, 141 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Milton Kauffman, Inc. v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 17, 210 P.2d 88).

B. Joint Venture Defined. A joint venture is an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry on a single business enterprise for profit (Holtz v. United Plumbing & Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 501, 506-507, 319 P.2d 617 ; Franco Western Oil Co. v. Fariss (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 458).

C. Existence of Joint Venture Dependent on Intention of Parties. Whether a joint venture exists largely depends on determining the intention of the parties from the facts of the particular case, because there is no certain and all-inclusive definition to be applied (Holtz v. United Plumbing & Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 501, 506-507, 319 P.2d 617 ; Franco Western Oil Co. v. Fariss (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 344, 66 Cal. Rptr. 458).

[Optional] D. Joint Venture Agreement Need Not Be in Writing. A joint venture requires little formality in its creation, and may be the result of a parol agreement or may be assumed as a reasonable deduction from the acts and declarations of the parties (Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 749-750, 177 P.2d 931 ; Rickless v. Temple (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 893, 84 Cal. Rptr. 828).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a joint venture was created. The rights and liabilities of joint venturers are generally governed by the law of partnerships. Optional paragraph D may be useful when there is no written agreement between the parties.

Distinctions between joint ventures and partnerships, when made, have been based on concepts of the former involving a single transaction of limited duration and the latter involving an ongoing business enterprise [see Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 749, 177 P.2d 931] . A partnership, however, may be formed for a single venture and for a limited time [see Kaufman-Brown Potato Co. v. Long (9th Cir. 1950) 182 F.2d 594, 599 ; see also Page v. Page (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 192, 196, 10 Cal. Rptr. 356, 358 P.2d 684] . UPA'94 indirectly recognizes this fact by defining a "partnership at will" to include a partnership in which the partners have not agreed to remain partners until the expiration of a definite term or the completion of a particular project [Corp. Code § 16101(9)]. The distinction between partnerships and joint ventures in most cases, therefore, is rather indefinite and of little practical significance [see California Legal Forms, Ch. 15, General Partnerships, Part A, § 15.10[3] (Matthew Bender); Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 24, Partnerships , §§ 602.01, 617.02 (Matthew Bender); see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 401, Actions Between General Partners and Partnership, §§ 401.11[3][a][ii], 401.45; Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partner or Partnership and Third Parties, § 402.23 (Matthew Bender) (distinction made in some cases involving liability to third parties)].

Because the general principles regarding the creation of joint ventures are essentially the same as those that govern partnerships, the forms in Subpart A generally may be combined with the forms in this subpart to support the existence of a joint venture. The cases discussed in this subpart illustrate the application of general partnership principles to joint ventures.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the parties have entered into a joint venture. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry on a single business enterprise for profit and that the parties intended to enter into a joint venture. This may be shown by a written joint venture agreement. If the agreement is ambiguous, or if there is no written agreement, counsel should discuss facts that indicate that the parties' conduct established a joint venture relationship.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 170.60 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint Ventures Governed by Law of Partnerships

In Stodd v. Goldberger (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 827, 141 Cal. Rptr. 67 , a corporation entered into a written joint venture agreement with defendant limited partnership for the ownership and operation of a hotel. The agreement allocated to defendant all income and profits from the operation. However, it provided that on a sale of the hotel, any gain would be divided equally among the venturers. The corporation subsequently went bankrupt. Plaintiff, as trustee in bankruptcy, sued defendants seeking, among other things, contribution from defendants for one-half of the joint venture's debts. The trial court granted defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings, and plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that the rights and liabilities of joint venturers among themselves are governed by the principles applicable to partnerships (73 Cal. App. 3d 827, 836) . Thus, the court held that plaintiff stated no viable cause of action for contribution, because even if he could claim to be a representative of the bankrupt joint venturer, partners or joint venturers may not bring suit against one another on causes of action arising from the partnership or joint venture business until there has been a dissolution of the relationship, a settlement of its affairs, and an accounting. Further, the court held that because plaintiff was a trustee in bankruptcy of one of the joint venturers as opposed to the joint venture, he could not compel contribution on the theory that it was an asset of the joint venture (73 Cal. App. 3d 827, 837-838) .

In Milton Kauffman, Inc. v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 210 P.2d 88 , respondent and petitioner entered into an oral agreement to construct housing projects. Profits were to be shared equally. Respondent transferred to petitioner a one-half interest in his construction and development corporation, and petitioner became director and treasurer of the corporation. The venture was financed and carried on through the corporation, and after successful operation for a time the parties agreed that some of the projects of the venture would be carried on through a corporation to be formed by petitioner. The parties agreed to share equally in the profits of this new venture. Using the old venture's assets, the new venture acquired several tracts of land and constructed houses on them. When profits were realized on each tract, they were reinvested progressively in succeeding tracts. Except for certain sums determined by petitioner to be due, no part of the net profits were paid to respondent. Respondent brought suit, seeking an accounting and a share of the net profits. He moved for an order permitting the inspection and copying of certain writings in petitioner's possession to establish the disbursements, receipts, and profits from the tracts of land. The trial court granted the motion, and petitioners refused to comply with the court's order. Petitioners were cited for contempt, and they filed a petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain the court from entering judgment on the contempt citation. Petitioner contended that he never agreed to enter into a joint venture with respondents, and therefore the order was in violation of the constitutional guarantees against unlawful searches and seizures.

The appellate court denied the writ, holding that the facts alleged in the amended complaint and stated in respondent's affidavits were sufficient to warrant the court's conclusion for the purpose of the motion that respondent and petitioner were joint venturers. The court held that the resemblance between a partnership and a joint venture is so close that the rights as between joint venturers are governed practically by the same rules that govern partners. Thus, relying on former Civ. Code § 2401(4) [now see Corp. Code § 16202], the court held that the receipt by a person of a share of the profits of a business is prima facie evidence that he or she is a partner in the business (94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 17) .

[b] Joint Venture Defined

Holtz v. United Plumbing & Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 501, 319 P.2d 617 , arose out of a an action for the wrongful deaths of plaintiff's husband and son, who were killed when their automobile collided with an automobile driven by a contractor's employee. The contractor was hired on a cost-plus-15-percent profit basis to install sprinklers in housing units being built in an out-of-state city. As the contractor was not licensed to do work in that city, he enlisted the cooperation of defendant, a corporation who was licensed there. Defendant agreed to take over the jobs by obtaining the necessary permits, hiring and paying workmen, and furnishing material requested by the contractor. The contractor agreed to draw plans, direct the workers on the job, and furnish material not supplied by defendant. It was agreed that defendant would receive the cost of labor and material supplied by it plus 10 percent. The contractor was to receive the balance of the fifteen percent profit. One of the contractor's employees worked on the jobs. He was transferred from contractor's payroll to defendant's, and was employed and paid by defendant as a fitter and supervisor. Plaintiff sued both the contractor and defendant as employers of the employee. At trial, a nonsuit was granted in defendant's favor. Plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed the judgment of nonsuit as to defendant. The Court held that the evidence was sufficient to show that defendant and the contractor were engaged in a joint venture and that, at the time of the accident, the employee was acting in the course of his employment in the venture. The Court stated that whether a joint venture exists must largely depend on determining the intention of the parties from the facts of a particular case because there is no certain and all-inclusive definition to be applied. It defined a joint venture as an association of two or more persons who combine their property, skill, or knowledge to carry out a single business enterprise for profit (49 Cal. 2d 501, 506) . The Court held that defendant and contractor entered into an agreement pursuant to which they both contributed services and material toward a common end. Further, it could be inferred that their contributions were made for the purpose of obtaining the 15 percent fee to be paid as profit. The Court held that an understanding as to the manner in which the profit was to be shared was also shown (49 Cal. 2d 501, 507) .

In Franco Western Oil Co. v. Fariss (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 66 Cal. Rptr. 458 , plaintiff and defendant entered into a written operating agreement involving oil and gas leases owned by plaintiff and located within a certain area. Defendant agreed to drill a test well in the area, and in return would operate plaintiff's leases and receive one-half interest in them. The agreement also provided that if either party acquired a lease or other interest in any land adjacent to the land covered by their agreement, the other party would be notified and given the option to purchase a one-half interest therein. Plaintiff and defendant subsequently discussed joint acquisition of various leases in an area not covered by their agreement. Thereafter, defendant entered into an agreement with a third party to acquire leases on land located in the area that was the subject of the discussions. Defendant then notified plaintiff of the acquisition, and gave it the opportunity to participate. Plaintiff accepted, and contributed to the expenses of acquisition. Defendant subsequently repudiated, and plaintiff sued. The trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment, finding that the latter agreement between plaintiff and defendant was not a joint venture because the parties intended to enter into a formal joint venture and operating agreement, and did not do so. Plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court reversed. It held that the post-agreement discussions between plaintiff and defendant, and plaintiff's acceptance of defendant's proposal, constituted an agreement between plaintiff and defendant to buy and hold leases jointly and to jointly bear the expenses of them (259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 342) . The court held that all of the evidence showed the acts of partners in relation to a well-defined, definitely understood area separate from that included within the original agreement (259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 343) . It defined a joint venture as an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry on a single business enterprise for profit, and held that its existence largely depends on determining the intention of the parties from the facts of a particular case (259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 344) . The court held that the requisite intent may be implied from the conduct of the parties, and in this case both direct evidence and the unequivocal conduct of the parties showed an intent to form a joint venture (259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 345) .

[c] Existence of Joint Venture Dependent on Intention of Parties

Holtz v. United Plumbing & Heating Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 501, 319 P.2d 617 , and Franco Western Oil Co. v. Fariss (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 325, 66 Cal. Rptr. 458 , are discussed in § 170.50[3][b].

[d] Joint Venture Agreement Need Not Be in Writing

In Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 177 P.2d 931 , plaintiff and defendant entered into an oral agreement providing for plaintiff to conduct business in a new office for defendant's ice company in return for one-third of the net profits. However, plaintiff would not have an interest in the business. Plaintiff commenced operation of the new office, and performed all of the details of management. He had the power to sign checks drawn from the new office's bank account, to hire and discharge employees, fix their compensation, and to determine the sale price of ice. Sometime thereafter, defendant sold the new office to two competitors without notifying plaintiff. Plaintiff then asked defendant for an accounting and division of profits. Defendant refused on the ground that the profit and loss statement showed a net operative loss. Plaintiff commenced an action for an accounting and dissolution of partnership. The trial court found that a partnership did not exist and that plaintiff was not entitled to any portion of the profits. Plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed. The court first held that the fact that the complaint was drawn on the theory that the agreement contemplated only a partnership did not prevent the granting of the relief on some other theory based on the facts in evidence (29 Cal. 2d 745, 749) . It then held that a joint venture or undertaking may be formed by parol agreement, or it may be assumed as a reasonable deduction from the acts and declarations of the parties (29 Cal. 2d 745, 749-750) . The court held that the oral agreement and the conduct of the parties under the agreement, considering the nature of the undertaking and the surrounding circumstances, defined their respective rights, liabilities, and duties to each other (29 Cal. 2d 745, 750) .

In Rickless v. Temple (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 84 Cal. Rptr. 828 , plaintiff was a director and officer of a corporation. She was asked by the corporation's president to loan the corporation $20,000 to defray the costs of a Labor Commission investigation and attorney's fees. Plaintiff did not have the money on hand, but the president convinced her to borrow against a lot she owned. Defendant then was engaged by the president to arrange for the loan, and he did so with a savings and loan association. Thereafter, plaintiff was asked to deed her lot to defendant, ostensibly to make the loan easier to negotiate. Plaintiff did so, and signed an agreement that provided that when she paid defendant the sum of $23,000, the lot would be deeded back to her. Plaintiff endorsed defendant's check for $20,000 in blank, and gave it to the president. Defendant received the check back, and deposited it in his own account. With the funds, defendant purchased a foreign draft payable to the president's brother-in-law to acquire land in Mexico for a resort hotel venture. Plaintiff brought an action to have the deed to her lot declared to be a mortgage, to have the court determine the amount justly due on the loan, and after deposit in the court of the funds due, that she be granted a decree quieting title on the lot. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff, finding that the president and defendant were engaged in a joint venture to build the hotel. The court imposed vicarious liability on defendant for the use of plaintiff's money to purchase the land in Mexico. Defendant appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that although a joint venture ordinarily is created by contract or agreement between the parties, there need not be any formal written agreement defining the parties' respective rights and duties. Citing Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 749-750, 177 P.2d 931 (discussed above), the court held that such a venture may be formed by parol agreement, and may be assumed as a reasonable deduction from the acts and declarations of the parties. It held that there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding of a joint venture. Among other things, defendant and president discussed the enterprise; they went to Mexico together to survey possible sites, and determine the best city for a hotel; they consulted a law firm together to ascertain the best means to acquire property for the project; and the site was selected before the money was borrowed from plaintiff (4 Cal. App. 3d 869, 893) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint Ventures Governed by Law of Partnerships

In Orlopp v. Willardson Co. (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 750, 43 Cal. Rptr. 125 , appellant corporation was an undisclosed joint venturer with a poultry and egg company. In accordance with a planned program, respondents delivered eggs to the egg company, and a bookkeeping account was set up in the company's name. The company had a secret written joint venture agreement with appellant, who was to finance the program. Appellant then withdrew from the joint venture and assigned its interest to a new corporation formed by some of appellant's former stockholders. Respondents filed an action to recover a balance existing on the open account, and the trial court awarded judgment to them. On appeal, it was contended that payments made by the new corporation should have been credited to the existing balance rather than to new purchases made. Observing that the relations of joint venturers are generally the same as those of partners and to the extent they are the same, the law of partnerships applies to both, the appellate court held that appellant was in the position of an undisclosed or dormant partner in the joint venture and was fully liable as an ostensible partner for the firm's debts (232 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754) . Although the joint venture was dissolved when appellant withdrew, and its successor was a new entity, appellant nevertheless remained liable for the old firm's debts (232 Cal. App. 2d 750, 755) .

[b] Joint Venture Defined

Boyd v. Bevilacqua (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 272, 55 Cal. Rptr. 610 , involved an oral joint venture agreement between the parties for the purpose of purchasing and developing real property. Plaintiffs sued when defendants repudiated, and the trial court, finding a joint venture, rendered judgment in plaintiff's favor. Defendants appealed, contending that as plans for the development of the subject property had not yet been made, that part of the agreement was unenforceable as an agreement to agree, fatally infecting the joint venture agreement as a whole. The appellate court affirmed, defining a joint venture as an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry out a single business enterprise for profit, and held that its existence depends on the intention of the parties, which may be implied from their conduct. The court also held that the law requires little formality in the creation of a joint venture and an agreement is not invalid because it may be indefinite with respect to its details (247 Cal. App. 2d 272, 285) .

Sadugor v. Holstein (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 18 Cal. Rptr. 859 , involved an oral agreement between plaintiff and defendant to purchase real property together. The parties made an offer on the property, and while the offer was pending, defendant arranged a loan with a third-party lender using the property as security without plaintiff's knowledge. When plaintiff refused to execute the note and a deed of trust conveying the property as security, defendant took the property in his own name. Plaintiff brought an action to establish a trust in a one-half interest in the property, and judgment was rendered in his favor. Defendant appealed, and the appellate court held that there was a sufficient showing to support a finding of joint venture because the parties made a joint offer, jointly advanced funds, and orally agreed to put up one-half of the purchase price each and that each would acquire a one-half interest thereby (199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 482-483) . The court observed that the common definition of a joint venture is a special combination of two or more persons, where in some specific venture a profit is jointly sought without any actual partnership or corporate designation, or as an association of persons to carry on a single business enterprise for profit, for which purpose they combine their property, money, effects, skill, and knowledge. It held that whether the parties have created such a relationship as between themselves depends on their actual intention (199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 483) .

In Nels E. Nelson, Inc. v. Tarman (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 714, 329 P.2d 953 , an action for materials and services furnished to defendants and used in the construction of houses, the trial court found that defendants were in a joint venture with each other in the construction of the houses, and gave plaintiffs personal judgment against them. One of the defendants appealed, and the appellate court held that although the evidence probably was sufficiently conflicting to support a contrary finding, it was sufficient to support a finding that defendants were engaged in a joint venture (163 Cal. App. 2d 714, 721) . The court observed that a joint venture has been defined as an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry out a single business enterprise for profit with its existence dependent on the intention of the parties as shown by an express agreement or by inference from their acts and conduct (163 Cal. App. 2d 714, 724) . It held that in view of the fact that third parties were involved, the complete picture of all of the circumstances, statements, and conduct of defendants supported a finding that they were engaged in a joint venture regardless of the fact that perhaps, as between themselves, they did not consider themselves to be in such a relationship (163 Cal. App. 2d 714, 726) .

[c] Joint Venture Agreement Need Not Be in Writing

In Weinstock v. L.A. Carpet, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 809, 44 Cal. Rptr. 852 , plaintiff and defendant negotiated a plan to jointly engage in the retail carpet business. Plaintiff invested $15,000, and defendant contributed inventory and accounts receivable from his existing carpet business in an amount equal to plaintiff's investment. The parties agreed to incorporate their business, and while waiting for a permit from the Commissioner of Corporations to issue stock, the parties loaned the corporation $15,000 each so that it could function in the interim. Plaintiff later sued to recover his $15,000, claiming that he paid the money for shares of corporate stock issued without a permit. The trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment after plaintiff presented his case. Plaintiff appealed, and the appellate court affirmed, holding that the enterprise between plaintiff and defendant was exempt from the Corporate Securities Law because it was a joint venture. The court held that a joint venture requires little formality in its creation, and may be the result of a parol agreement or it may be assumed as a reasonable deduction from the acts and declarations of the parties (234 Cal. App. 2d 809, 813) .

The facts and procedural background of Milton Kauffman, Inc. v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 210 P.2d 88 , are discussed in § 170.50[3][a]. In Kauffman, the appellate court held that the facts alleged in an amended complaint and stated in plaintiff's affidavits supporting a motion for an order permitting the inspection and copying of certain writings in defendants' possession were sufficient to warrant the court's conclusion that for the purpose of the motion the parties were joint venturers. It held that a joint venture or undertaking may be formed by parol agreement or it may be inferred from the acts and declarations of the parties (94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 17) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.51

§ 170.51 Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Elements of Joint Venture

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Elements of Joint Venture

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with the points and authorities in § 170.50.]

A JOINT VENTURE _____ [EXISTS or EXISTED] BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE THERE _____ [IS or WAS] A COMMUNITY OF INTEREST IN THE ENTERPRISE, A SHARING IN THE PROFITS AND LOSSES, AND AN EQUAL RIGHT OF CONTROL[, AND THE FACT THAT THERE _____ (IS or WAS) NO EXPRESS AGREEMENT TO SHARE THE LOSSES IS IMMATERIAL BECAUSE THAT PROVISION IS IMPLIED BY LAW].

A. Elements of Joint Venture. The elements necessary for the creation of a joint venture are (1) joint interest in a common business, (2) with an understanding to share profits and losses, and (3) a right to joint control (April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285).

[Optional] B. Sharing of Losses Implied. The omission of a provision for the sharing of losses in a joint venture is immaterial because the law supplies the provision, and in the absence of agreement, losses are shared in the same proportion as profits are to be divided (Fitzgerald v. Provines (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 529, 535-536, 227 P.2d 860 ; Parker v. Trefry (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75, 136 P.2d 55).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a joint venture was created. It is most useful in circumstances when a joint venture relationship is challenged on the ground that one or more of the elements of joint venture was not present. In order for a relationship to be a joint venture, there must be a joint interest in a common business, an understanding to share profits and losses, and a right to joint control [April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 618, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285] .

Optional Paragraph B may be used when the joint venture agreement does not expressly provide that the parties contemplated a sharing of losses, if any. The absence of such a provision is immaterial because an agreement to share losses is normally implied by law [Fitzgerald v. Provines (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 529, 535-536, 227 P.2d 860 ; Parker v. Trefry (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75, 136 P.2d 55] .

Because the general principles regarding the creation of joint ventures are essentially the same as those that govern partnerships [see § 170.50[2][a]], the forms in Subpart A generally may be combined with the forms in this subpart to support the existence of a joint venture. The cases discussed in this subpart illustrate the application of general partnership principles to joint ventures.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a joint venture existed because the relationship between the parties contained the necessary elements of joint venture. For example, this form may be used in an opposition to a demurrer made on the ground that a complaint does not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action by showing that these elements have been pleaded on the face of the complaint. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that establish the presence of the requisite elements. In the case of an opposition to a demurrer, it will be necessary to show that these facts have been properly pleaded.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 170.61 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Joint Venture

In April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421 , appellants and respondents entered into two written contracts to produce a television show. The first contract set forth the rights of the parties with respect to the show's production and syndication. It provided that respondents owned the videotapes of the show, but that both parties had the right to initiate syndication with third parties. Each party was to receive 50 percent of the profits resulting from any syndication. The contract also provided that respondents could erase the videotapes within six months of the original broadcast. Thereafter, the parties entered into a second contract giving respondents the exclusive right to initiate syndication, and changing appellants' compensation to 20 percent. The contract also provided that respondents no longer had the right to erase the videotapes. Appellants subsequently offered to purchase the videotapes from respondents. In response, respondents offered to purchase the exclusive rights to broadcast the show, and warned appellants that if they did not agree to the offer, the videotapes would be erased. The videotapes were erased, and appellants sued, alleging, among other things, breach of fiduciary duty of a joint venturer. At trial, the court granted respondents' motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty. Appellants appealed, contending that both contracts were merely implementing an over-arching oral joint venture arrangement between the parties.

The appellate court reversed. The court held that the elements necessary for the creation of a joint venture are (1) joint interest in a common business, (2) with an understanding to share profits and losses, and (3) a right to joint control. The court held that it could not be determined as a matter of law that the complaint failed to allege facts supporting creation of a joint venture. A common interest was properly alleged with facts showing that the parties planned to co-produce the show in order to exploit the market for its syndication, and that each party contributed its own unique talents in furtherance of this objective. The requisite joint control was alleged by facts showing that each party agreed to have equal rights to initiate syndication. The court also disagreed with respondents' assertion that the requirement of sharing profits and losses was not met. The first contract provided that each party was to receive 50 percent of the profits, and the complaint alleged that the parties intended to share losses, which may be inferred from a contract provision to share profits (147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819) .

Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 , involved a written joint venture agreement between plaintiff seafood company, defendant vessel owners, and defendant ship captain. Plaintiff sued for an accounting to apportion losses. It alleged that under the agreement, the parties were to make a single voyage to purchase, transport, and ultimately sell seafood products; that the agreement designated the percentage of the net profits that each party was to receive; that the voyage was completed, and the venture suffered financial losses; and that the losses were borne by plaintiff who was not reimbursed in accordance with the terms of the agreement. When plaintiff attempted to present its case at trial, defendants objected on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. The objection was sustained, a motion to dismiss was granted, and judgment was entered for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court reversed. The court held that the elements of a joint venture are (1) a community of interest in the subject of the undertaking, (2) a sharing in profits and losses, (3) an equal right or a right in some measure to direct and control the conduct of each other and of the enterprise, and (4) a fiduciary relation between or among the parties (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 618) . It held that a complaint for an accounting need only state facts showing the nature of the relationship that requires an accounting and that some balance is due plaintiff. The court held that, in light of these rules, the complaint adequately stated a cause of action for an accounting. It held that, taking the facts in the complaint to be true, it must be accepted that the parties expressly declared their intention to establish a joint venture relationship, and the evidence on both sides should be presented at a trial on the merits (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 620-621) .

[b] Sharing of Losses Implied

In Fitzgerald v. Provines (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 529, 227 P.2d 860 , defendant and a third party were real estate brokers with whom an apartment building was listed for sale. Plaintiff told the third party that she would purchase the property, but then decided that she could not complete the transaction. Instead, she agreed to lend the third party the money to purchase the property. The third party told plaintiff that in return he would give her one-third of any profits realized from the operation of the apartment building. Plaintiff then completed the original sales transaction with the understanding that the third party would take over, and at the close of escrow a grant deed was executed to plaintiff. During escrow, plaintiff, defendant, and the third party entered into another escrow agreement wherein plaintiff conveyed the property to defendant and the third party as tenants in common. Defendant and the third party assumed a first deed of trust on the property, and executed a promissory note payable to plaintiff and a second deed of trust as security for their note. Defendant and the third party then took possession of the property and operated the apartment building. After awhile, the third party sold his interest in the property to defendant. Defendant notified plaintiff that he was ready to pay the note she held. Plaintiff responded by claiming her one-third interest in the property. Defendant filed an action to compel plaintiff to accept payment of the note, and prior to trial, plaintiff accepted payment with interest. Plaintiff subsequently brought an action for declaratory relief, to impress a trust on the property, and for an accounting. She contended that the parties had orally proposed a joint venture. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed, arguing that there was no evidence that plaintiff undertook the risks of a joint venturer.

The appellate court affirmed, noting that at the time the transaction was entered into, there was no discussion relative to losses. The evidence showed that the possibility of sustaining a loss was not within the contemplation of the parties. However, the court held that a provision to share losses may be implied in a joint venture. It held that if the facts sustain a finding that a joint venture was created, the omission of a provision for the sharing of losses is immaterial because the law supplies that provision. In the absence of agreement, losses by the parties are shared in the same proportion as profits are to be divided (102 Cal. App. 2d 529, 535-536) .

In Parker v. Trefry (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 69, 136 P.2d 55 , plaintiff building contractor and defendant property owner entered into an agreement to construct two houses on defendant's property. Defendant agreed to pay the cost of construction, and plaintiff agreed to build the houses. The agreement provided that when the houses were completed, the property would be sold, and the parties would share the profits equally. However, losses rather than profits were sustained. Plaintiff brought suit to recover the cost of labor and materials less the amount he received from defendant and from building loans, an administration fee as provided for in the agreement, and one-half of the difference between the total cost of the houses and the prices at which the parties agreed to sell them. Defendant filed a cross complaint alleging a partnership, and seeking actual and punitive damages. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiff, and against defendant on his cross complaint. Defendant appealed, contending that the parties were joint venturers, and that plaintiff should pay one-half of the loss.

The appellate court reversed. The court held that the omission of a provision for the sharing of losses in a joint venture is immaterial because the law supplies the provision, and in the absence of agreement, losses are shared in the same proportion as profits are to be divided (citing former Civ. Code § 2412(a); now see Corp. Code § 16401) (58 Cal. App. 2d 69, 75) . It held that an analysis of the agreement in this case, coupled with the acts of the parties under the agreement, revealed an intent to enter into a joint enterprise, and the fact that it resulted in a loss rather than in a profit was not sufficient to change the character of the transaction (58 Cal. App. 2d 69, 76) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Elements of Joint Venture

In Buck v. Standard Oil Co. (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 230, 321 P.2d 67 , defendants and a third party entered into an agreement wherein the third party agreed, for an hourly wage and five percent of the profits, to operate defendants' tractor to level some property. The third party followed defendants' guidelines and suggestions in performing the work. During the course of the work, an oil pipe line owned by defendant oil company was damaged. Oil sprayed across a nearby highway causing an accident involving plaintiffs, and they filed an action for damages for personal injury. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiffs, and the appellate court affirmed, holding that a joint venture requires the following elements: (1) a community of interest in the object of the undertaking; (2) an equal right to direct and govern the conduct of each other with respect to the undertaking; (3) a share in the losses, if any; and (4) a close and even fiduciary relationship between the parties (157 Cal. App. 2d 230, 239) . Responding to defendants' contention that there was no evidence to sustain the second element, the appellate court held that the evidence presented would justify a finding that there was sufficient control exercised by defendants (157 Cal. App. 2d 230, 239-240) .

[b] Sharing of Losses Implied

The facts and procedural background of Stilwell v. Trutanich (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 3 Cal. Rptr. 285 , are discussed in [3][a], above. In Stilwell, the appellate court held that one of the elements of a joint venture is a sharing in profits and losses (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 619) . The court held that the omission of a provision for the sharing of losses in a joint venture is immaterial because in the absence of agreement, the law implies a provision that losses are to be shared among the parties in the same proportion as profits were to have been divided (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 619) . Thus, the court held that it must assume that some balance was due plaintiffs in the same proportion that they agreed to share losses, even though the agreement did not provide for the manner in which losses were to be divided (178 Cal. App. 2d 614, 620-621) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.52-170.59

[Reserved]

§§ 170.52[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.60

§ 170.60 Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--No Intent to Form Joint Venture

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--No Intent to Form Joint Venture

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

A JOINT VENTURE BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] SHOULD NOT BE IMPLIED FROM THE FACT THAT THEY AGREED TO GO INTO BUSINESS TOGETHER BECAUSE THEY DID NOT INTEND THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO BE A JOINT VENTURE.

A. Joint Venture Defined. [See § 170.50, Paragraph B].

B. Existence of Joint Venture Dependent on Intention of Parties. [See § 170.50, Paragraph C].

C. Mere Agreement to Go Into Business Together Does Not Imply Joint Venture. An agreement to go into business of itself does not imply a joint venture or any specific type of operation (Myers v. Gager (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320-321, 346 P.2d 251).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that the parties created a joint venture. Whether a joint venture has been created depends on the intention of the parties. The fact that the parties agree to go into business together does not, of itself, imply a joint venture [Myers v. Gager (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320-321, 346 P.2d 251] . For example, an agreement may be interpreted to have created a broker relationship rather than a joint venture because the parties, as between themselves, did not intend to create a joint venture [see, e.g., Myers v. Gager (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320-321, 346 P.2d 251] .

Because the general principles regarding the creation of joint ventures are essentially the same as those that govern partnerships [see § 170.50[2][a]], the forms in Subpart 1 generally may be combined with the forms in this subpart to oppose the existence of a joint venture. The cases discussed in this subpart illustrate the application of general partnership principles to joint ventures.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that although the parties had an agreement to conduct business together, they did not intend their relationship to be a joint venture. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss facts supporting the position that the parties did not intend their relationship to be a joint venture.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 170.50.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Agreement to Go Into Business Together Does Not Imply Joint Venture

Myers v. Gager (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 346 P.2d 251 , involved an agreement between plaintiff broker and defendant property owners to grant plaintiff the exclusive right, for one year, to attempt to secure a change in zoning of defendants' property. If the attempt was successful, plaintiff and defendants were to form a corporation for the purpose of developing the property. If development did not prove to be advisable, the property would be sold, and the proceeds of the sale, after payment of a minimum amount to defendants, would be divided equally between the parties. Rezoning was accomplished, but plaintiff was unable to secure financing for the development, and prior to the expiration of the one-year term, he received an offer on the property. Defendants refused to accept the offer, and plaintiff brought an action for breach of contract and declaratory relief. The trial court rendered judgment for defendants, finding that plaintiff had not fully performed the contract, and that defendants had not refused to cooperate or discuss the sale of the property. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the court misinterpreted the contract. He argued that the contract created a joint venture, and as the property was an asset of the venture, he had a right to have the property sold and the proceeds divided.

The appellate court affirmed. The court held that whether parties to a contract have thereby created, as between themselves, a joint venture or some other relation involving cooperative effort depends on their actual intention, which is determined in accordance with the ordinary rules governing the interpretation and construction of contracts (175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320) . The court held that a reasonable conclusion from a reading of the contract and the oral evidence was that plaintiff was acting as a real estate broker. The court held that an agreement to go into business of itself does not imply a joint venture or any specific type of operation (175 Cal. App. 2d 314, 321) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.61

§ 170.61 Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Essential Elements Not Present

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Joint Venture Exists or Existed [Corp. Code § 16202; former Corp. Code § 15006]--Essential Elements Not Present

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It may be combined with § 170.60, if appropriate, according to the issues involved].

A JOINT VENTURE _____ [DOES or DID] NOT EXIST BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE _____ [specify the missing essential element of join venture, e.g., THE PARTIES _____ (DO or DID) NOT HAVE JOINT MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL OF THE ENTERPRISE], AND THIS IS AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT OF A JOINT VENTURE.

A. Elements of Joint Venture. [See § 170.51, Paragraph A.]

B. No Joint Venture When Essential Elements Are Lacking. When an agreement is entirely lacking in the essential elements of a joint undertaking of an enterprise, a joint venture has not been created (see Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 ; Howard v. Societa di Unione etc. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848, 145 P.2d 694).

[Optional] C. Right of Management and Control of Business Is Essential Element of Partnership or Joint Venture. An essential element of a partnership or joint venture is the right of joint participation in the management and control of the business. Absent such a right, the mere fact that one party is to receive benefits in consideration of services rendered or for capital contribution does not, as a matter of law, make that party a partner or joint venturer (Bank of California v. Connolly (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 364, 111 Cal. Rptr. 468 ; Howard v. Societa di Unione etc. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848, 145 P.2d 694).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that the parties have created a joint venture. In order for a relationship to be a joint venture, there must be a joint interest in a common business, an understanding to share profits and losses, and a right to joint control [April Enterprises, Inc. v. KTTV (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 805, 819, 195 Cal. Rptr. 421] . If essential elements are entirely lacking, there is no joint venture relationship [see Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179] . Optional Paragraph C may be useful when a party does not have a right of management and control in the enterprise, an essential element to a joint venture. An agreement by the parties to share jointly in the profits and losses, and a joint proprietary interest, have also been held to be essential elements [see Howard v. Societa di Unione etc. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848, 145 P.2d 694] . Thus, it appears that none of the elements of joint venture, standing on their own, are sufficient to establish a joint venture relationship. For example, a party may share in the profits of an enterprise, but if that party has no control over the enterprise, there probably is no joint venture.

Because the general principles regarding the creation of joint ventures are essentially the same as those that govern partnerships [see § 170.50[2][a]], the forms in Subpart 1 generally may be combined with the forms in this subpart to oppose the existence of a joint venture. The cases discussed in this subpart illustrate the application of general partnership principles to joint ventures.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that there is no joint venture relationship because one of the essential elements of a joint venture is not present. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that although some of the elements or features of a joint venture may have been present in an agreement between the parties, no joint venture was actually created because one of the essential elements of a joint venture, such as a sharing in the profits or joint control of the enterprise, was missing.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 170.51.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Joint Venture When Essential Elements Are Lacking

In Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp*. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179* , a worker who lost his arm in an industrial accident filed a claim under his employer's workers compensation insurance. He also sought to recover in tort from corporations engaged in various business pursuits with and on behalf of the employer, on a theory of joint venture. The superior court granted summary judgment for the corporations, and the injured employee appealed. The appellate court held that respondent corporations were not engaged in a joint venture with the employer for production of raisins at the employer's plant (51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666) .

The court reiterated that there are three basic elements of a joint venture: (1) the members must have joint control over the venture (even though they may delegate it), (2) they must share the profits of the undertaking, and (3) the members each must have an ownership interest in the enterprise. The court noted that although members can meet these requirements in many different ways, there was no evidence that any entity other than the employer had any control over the production of raisins, that any entity shared with the employer the profits from producing raisins, or that any entity other than the employer had an ownership interest in the raisin crop prior to its sale in the marketplace. The court therefore held that the evidence did not raise a triable issue of fact whether a joint venture composed of respondents and the employer engaged in the production of raisins at the employer's plant (51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666) .

The court further held that even if the injured employee could establish that a joint venture ran the raisin plant by or through the employer, the joint venture would not be liable without evidence of negligence by any joint venture member other than the employer (51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1669-1670) .

In Howard v. Societa di Unione etc. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848, 145 P.2d 694 , defendant association rented a baseball field from defendant lessor so that the association could use the field for its own events when lessor was not using it. Under the lease, the association could use the facilities already located on the property, and it agreed to construct, at its own expense, improvements needed for its activities. All structural work done by the association was to be under its own control. Although any structures erected by the association were to belong to lessor, lessor was not to be deemed the association's principal or employer, nor connected with the construction. The association was to maintain and repair the structures. It also agreed to indemnify lessor for any damage to the property, and against any liability resulting from its activities under the lease. Thereafter, the association erected improvements, and became indebted to various creditors for materials, services, goods, wares, and merchandise. The creditors assigned their claims to plaintiff, who brought an action against the association and lessor for the amounts of the claims. Plaintiff alleged a joint venture between lessor and the association. The trial court awarded judgment for plaintiff, holding both the association and lessor personally liable, and declaring the judgment sum an equitable lien on lessor's property. Defendant lessor appealed.

The appellate court reversed, enumerating some of the elements of a joint venture. It observed that the parties must have a community of interest in the purposes of the undertaking and equal authority or right to direct the movements and conduct of each other in connection therewith (62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847) . The court also noted that an agreement by the parties to jointly share profits and losses is an indispensable feature of a joint venture. It held that the agreement in this case was entirely lacking in the essential elements of a joint undertaking of the association's enterprise. Among other things, there was no agreement to share gains and losses. In fact, the association expressly agreed to indemnify lessor against loss. Further, the lessor did not reserve the right to direct or govern the conduct of the association (62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848) . The court also held that there was neither expression nor intimation that the two organizations contemplated other than completely independent operations, or that they intended to become partners (62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 848) .

[b] Right of Management and Control of Business Is Essential Element of Partnership or Joint Venture

In Bank of California v. Connolly (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 111 Cal. Rptr. 468 , decedent and appellants, decedent's associates, agreed to equally share 50 percent of the proceeds realized from the sale of two parcels of property owned by decedent and a third party. Appellants did not contribute any money toward the original purchase of the property, but they did render some service in connection with its acquisition. Further, appellants were expected to and did promote the sale of the property. Plaintiff, as successor administrator of decedent's estate, brought a declaratory relief action to determine the rights and obligations of the parties under the agreement. The trial court concluded that the agreement was enforceable only on the theory of an assignment of an equitable interest because profits from the sale of the land was only a possibility. In doing so, it impliedly rejected appellants' claim that their agreement with decedent was a joint venture. Appellants appealed.

The appellate court affirmed, holding that a joint venture exists when there is a community of interest or a joint interest in a common business undertaking, a sharing of profits and losses, and a right of joint control. The court held that the latter right is an essential element of a partnership or joint venture, and absent that right, the mere fact that one party received benefits in consideration of services rendered or for capital contribution does not, as a matter of law, make that party a partner or joint venturer (36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 364) .

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Societa di Unione etc. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 145 P.2d 694 , are discussed in § 170.61[3][a]. In Howard, the court held that because the subject agreement was entirely lacking in the essential elements of a joint undertaking, no joint venture existed between the parties. The court set out several elements that have been held to be essential features of joint ventures. These are (1) an agreement by the parties to share jointly in the profits and losses, (2) a joint proprietary interest, and (3) a right of mutual control over the subject matter of the enterprise or over the property (62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 847-848) . The court held that even when there is a sharing of profits, it does not follow that there is a joint venture relationship when there is no joint participation in the management and control of the business (62 Cal. App. 2d 842, 848) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Joint Venture When Essential Elements Are Lacking

In Zorich v. Petroff (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 806, 313 P.2d 118 , plaintiff and defendants entered into a written agreement to form a motion picture company for the purpose of producing, selling, and distributing one motion picture. Plaintiff was to be the associate producer of the picture, and he rendered numerous services for the production. Plaintiff brought an action for the reasonable value of his services, and for a declaration that he had an interest in the enterprise, alleging a contemporaneous oral agreement wherein the parties formed a joint venture or partnership. The trial court entered judgment for defendants, finding that no partnership or joint venture was formed, and that plaintiff had no interest in the picture. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the fact that plaintiff was to receive an interest in the profits of the picture in consideration for his services did not, as a matter of law, make him a partner or joint venturer. Plaintiff assumed none of the financial risks of the enterprise, and he had no right of control over the production of the picture or its business affairs (152 Cal. App. 2d 806, 810) .

28 of 147 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
2. Joint Ventures

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.62-170.69

[Reserved]

§§ 170.62[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.70

§ 170.70 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15533, 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714, 15722]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15611-15723]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15533, 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714, 15722]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE CALIFORNIA REVISED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT APPLIES TO THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE _____THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WAS [specify. e.g., CREATED ON OR AFTER JULY 1, 1984, THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THAT ACT or IN EXISTENCE ON JULY 1, 1984, THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THAT ACT, AND THE PARTNERSHIP ELECTED TO BE GOVERNED BY THAT ACT].

[EITHER, if limited partnership formed on or after July 1, 1984]

A. California Revised Limited Partnership Act Governs Limited Partnerships Formed on or After July 1, 1984. The California Revised Limited Partnership Act governs limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984, the effective date of the act (Corp. Code §§ 15533, 15711, 15714).

[OR, if limited partnership formed prior to and existing on July 1, 1984]

A. Election by Limited Partnership Existing on or Before July 1, 1984 to Be Governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act. Although the California Revised Limited Partnership Act does not apply to any limited partnership organized under the laws of California and existing on or before July 1, 1984, the effective date of the act, a limited partnership formed prior to and existing on the effective date may elect to be governed by the act (Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714).

[Continue with the following]

B. Applicability of General Partnership Law. In any case not provided for in the California Revised Limited Partnership Act, limited partnerships are governed in the same manner as general partnerships would be governed by the Uniform Partnership Act or the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (Corp. Code § 15722).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the provisions of the California Revised Limited Partnership Act ("CRLPA") contained in Corp. Code § 15611 et seq. apply to govern issues relating to the formation and operation of a limited partnership. Note that in cases not provided for in the CRLPA, limited partnerships are governed by the law applicable to general partnerships [Corp. Code § 15722].

One of the versions of Alternative Paragraph A may be used depending on whether the limited partnership was formed on or after July 1, 1984, or was in existence on July 1, 1984, but has elected to be governed by the provisions of the CRLPA [see Corp. Code §§ 15712(b)(1), 15714]. For further discussion of the relationship between the acts that may govern a limited partnership, see § 170.02[4], [5].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the CRLPA governs the issue of whether a limited partnership was created in his or her particular case. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that the CRLPA applies because the partnership was created on or after July 1, 1984, or the partnership elected to be governed by the CRLPA even though it was in existence when the CRLPA went into effect [see Corp. Code §§ 15712, 15714].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of California Revised Limited Partnership Act

The California Revised Limited Partnership Act [Corp. Code § 15611] governs limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984, as well as limited partnerships existing on or before July 1, 1984 that have elected to be governed by it [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1), 15714; see § 170.02[4], [5]]. Note that such an election must be made by the written consent of all the partners, or a lesser number provided by the partnership election [Corp. Code § 15712(b)(1)]. Thus, any purported unwritten election is invalid, as is a written election not in compliance with the foregoing criteria.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.71

§ 170.71 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15501-15533]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under Uniform Limited Partnership Act (ULPA) [Corp. Code §§ 15501-15533]--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT APPLIES TO THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] BECAUSE THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WAS IN ALREADY IN EXISTENCE ON JULY 1, 1984, THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE CALIFORNIA REVISED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT, AND THE PARTNERSHIP HAS NOT ELECTED TO BE GOVERNED BY THE LATTER ACT.

Uniform Limited Partnership Act Governs Limited Partnerships Existing on or Before July 1, 1984 That Have Not Elected to Be Governed by California Revised Limited Partnership Act. Unless limited partnerships in existence on or before July 1, 1984, elect to be governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act pursuant to Corporations Code Section 15712, they continue to be governed by the Uniform Limited Partnership Act (Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712(b)(1)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the provisions of the Uniform Limited Partnership Act ("ULPA") [Corp. Code § 15501 et seq.] apply to govern issues relating to the formation and operation of a limited partnership.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the ULPA governs the issue of whether a limited partnership was created in his or her particular case. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that a limited partnership in the case was in existence on July 1, 1984, and it has not elected to be governed by the CRLPA.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Limited Partnership Act Governs Limited Partnerships Existing on or Before July 1, 1984 That Have Not Elected to Be Governed by California Revised Limited Partnership Act

The CRLPA expressly provides that it does not apply to limited partnerships formed prior to and in existence on July 1, 1984, its effective date, unless a limited partnership elects to be so governed [Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712; see § 170.02[4], [5]]. Note that such an election must be made by the written consent of all the partners, or a lesser number provided by the partnership election [Corp. Code § 15712(b)(1)]. Thus, any purported unwritten election is invalid, as is a written election not in compliance with the foregoing criteria.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.72

§ 170.72 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15611(r), 15621(a)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15611(r), 15621(a)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.70 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes.]

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFEN DANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] _____ [IS or WAS] A LIMITED PARTNERSHIP UNDER THE CALIFORNIA REVISED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT BECAUSE IT _____ [CONSISTS or CONSISTED] OF BOTH GENERAL PARTNERS AND LIMITED PARTNERS. THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WAS PROPERLY FORMED BECAUSE THE PARTIES EXECUTED A PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT AND EXECUTED, ACKNOWLEDGED, AND FILED A CERTIFICATE OF LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WITH THE CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE.

A. Limited Partnership Defined. Under the California Revised Limited Partnership Act, a limited partnership or domestic limited partnership is a partnership formed by two or more persons under the laws of California and having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners (Corp. Code § 15611(r); see Corp. Code § 15611(n) ("general partner" defined), (q) ("limited partner" defined)).

B. Requirements of Formation. In order to form a limited partnership, the parties must execute a partnership agreement. The general partners also must execute, acknowledge, and file with the Secretary of State of California a certificate of limited partnership stating the name of the limited partnership; the street address of the principal executive office; the names and addresses of the general partners; the name and address of the partnership's agent for service of process, unless the agent is a corporation, and then only the name; and any other matters the general partners determine to include (Corp. Code § 15621(a)).

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate Is Filed. A limited partnership is formed at the time of the filing of the certificate of limited partnership in the office of the Secretary of State, and, for all purposes, a copy of the certificate duly certified by the Secretary of State is conclusive evidence of the formation of a limited partnership and prima facie evidence of its existence (Corp. Code § 15621(b), (c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a limited partnership exists or existed because there was proper compliance with the formation requirements of the California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) contained in Corp. Code § 15621. The CRLPA applies to limited partnerships formed on or after July 1, 1984, its effective date, and to limited partnerships organized under the laws of this state and existing on the effective date which elect to be governed by its provisions [see Corp. Code §§ 15533 (ULPA), 15711 (CRLPA), 15712 (CRLPA), 15714 (CRLPA); see also § 170.02[4], [5]].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the CRLPA. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should discuss facts that show that the parties executed a partnership agreement, and executed, acknowledged, and filed a certificate of limited partnership.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partnership Defined

A limited partnership under the CRLPA is a partnership formed by two or more persons under the laws of California and having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners [Corp. Code § 15611(r)].

[b] Requirements of Formation

In order to form a limited partnership under the CRLPA, the parties must execute a partnership agreement and the general partners must execute, acknowledge, and file a certificate of limited partnership providing several designated items of information about the partnership [Corp. Code § 15621(a)]. A partnership agreement is any valid oral or written agreement of the partners as to the affairs of a limited partnership and the conduct of its business, including all amendments to the agreement [Corp. Code § 15611(y)]. If the partnership agreement consists of an oral agreement and a dispute arises in connection with the agreement, the burden of proof is on the general partner or partners [Corp. Code § 15611(y)]. The CRLPA does not define a valid oral or written agreement, and presumably general partnership principles apply when this becomes an issue [see Corp. Code § 15722 (CRLPA)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.73

§ 170.73 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15678.6]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15678.6]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.70 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes].

_____ [Name of disappearing limited partnership], A PROPERLY FORMED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CEASED TO EXIST ON MERGER WITH _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of surviving limited partnership], AND AS THE SURVIVING LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of surviving limited partnership] _____ [SUCCEEDED TO ALL THE RIGHTS AND PROPERTY or BECAME SUBJECT TO ALL THE DEBTS AND LIABILITIES] OF _____ [name of disappearing limited partnership].

A. Limited Partnership Defined (CRLPA). [See § 170.72, Paragraph A].

B. Requirements of Formation. [See § 170.72, Paragraph B].

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate Is Filed. [See § 170.72, Paragraph C.]

D. Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger. In a merger pursuant to Corporations Code Section 15678.1 et seq., the separate existence of each of the disappearing limited partnerships ceases and the surviving limited partnership succeeds, without other transfer, act, or deed, to all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of each of the disappearing partnerships, and is subject to all the debts and liabilities of each in the same manner as if the surviving partnership had itself incurred them. All rights of creditors and all liens on the property of each of the constituent partnerships are preserved unimpaired and may be enforced against the surviving partnership to the same extent as if the debt, liability, or duty that gave rise to the lien had been incurred or contracted by the surviving partnership (Corp. Code § 15678.6(a), (b)).

[Optional] E. Pending Action. Any action or proceeding pending by or against any disappearing partnership may be prosecuted to judgment, and the judgment binds the surviving partnership, or the surviving partnership may be proceeded against or be substituted in the disappearing partnership's place (Corp. Code § 15678.6(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a limited partnership existed but disappeared as a result of a merger with one or more other limited partnerships pursuant to Corp. Code § 15678.1 et seq., and that the surviving partnership succeeded to the rights and liabilities of the disappearing partnership.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the CRLPA and another limited partnership succeeded to its rights and liabilities under Corp. Code § 15678.6(a), (b). This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

This form may be adapted to include a merger with "other business entity or entities" pursuant to Corp. Code § 15678.1 et seq. and as defined by Corp. Code § 15611(v).

For detailed discussion of the merger of limited partnerships, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 15C, Conversions and Mergers of Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender); see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships , § 7.21A (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss facts showing that the disappearing partnership was properly formed, the right or liability at issue arose before the merger became effective, and a certificate of merger was filed pursuant to Corp. Code § 15678.5(a), (b) (discussed in § 170.73[3][a]) to effectuate the merger.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to actions against a disappearing or a surviving limited partnership, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger

The following entities may be merged under Corp. Code § 15678.1*:

- Two or more limited partnerships into one limited partnership.
- One or more limited partnerships and one or more "other business entities" (i.e., a corporation, general partnership, limited liability company, business trust, real investment trust, or unincorporated for-profit association [Corp. Code § 15611(v) (definition); see also Corp. Code § 23006 for rules governing mergers of limited partnerships with REITs)]) into one of those other business entities.

- One or more limited partnerships and one or more other business entities into one limited partnership.

The merger of any number of limited partnerships with any number of other business entities may be effected only if the other business entities that are organized in California are authorized by the laws under which they are organized to effect the merger, and [Corp. Code § 15678.1]:

- If a limited partnership is the surviving limited partnership, any foreign other business entities are not prohibited by the laws under which they are organized from effecting the merger.

- If a foreign limited partnership or foreign other business entity is the survivor of the merger, the laws of the jurisdiction under which the survivor is organized authorize that merger.

If one or more domestic corporations is also a party to the merger, the merger may be effected only if, with respect to any foreign other business entity that is a corporation, the foreign corporation is authorized by the laws under which it is organized to effect that merger [Corp. Code § 15678.1].

A limited partnership that merged with or into one or more other limited partnerships or other business entities is referred to as a "constituent" limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15611(e)]. A "constituent other business entity" refers to an other business entity that is merged with or into one or more limited partnerships [Corp. Code § 15611(f)]. Constituents include the "surviving" limited partnership, into which one or more other limited partnerships or other business entities have been merged, and the "disappearing" limited partnership or partnerships or other business entity or entities, which do not survive the merger [Corp. Code § 15611(e), (f), (h), (i)].

After approval of a merger, the constituent partnerships and constituent other business entities must file a certificate of merger, or, if one is required by Corp. Code § 15678.4(b) when the surviving entity is a corporation, an agreement of merger, in the office of, and on a form prescribed by, the Secretary of State. The merger becomes effective on filing, unless the certificate or agreement provides for a future date. For all purposes, a copy of the certificate duly certified by the Secretary is conclusive evidence of the merger [Corp. Code § 15678.5(a), (b)]. In addition, filing of the certificate has the effect of filing a certificate of cancellation for each disappearing limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15678.4(c)].

Once the merger is effective, the separate existence of each of the disappearing partnerships and disappearing other business entities ceases and the surviving partnership or other surviving business entity succeeds, without other transfer, act, or deed, to all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of each of the disappearing partnerships or other business entities, and is subject to all the debts and liabilities of each in the same manner as if the surviving partnership or other business entity had itself incurred them [Corp. Code § 15678.6(a)]. All rights of creditors and all liens on the property of each of the constituent partnerships and constituent other business entities are preserved unimpaired and may be enforced against the surviving partnership or other business entity to the same extent as if the debt, liability, or duty that gave rise to the lien had been incurred or contracted by it. Liens on the property of a disappearing partnership or other business entity are limited, however, to the property affected by the liens immediately before the merger is effective [Corp. Code § 15678.6(b)]. Any action or proceeding pending by or against any disappearing partnership or other business entity may be prosecuted to judgment. The judgment binds the surviving partnership or other business entity, or the action or proceeding may be prosecuted against the surviving partnership or other business entity by substitution in the disappearing partnership's or disappearing other business entity's place [Corp. Code § 15678.6(c)]. This does not affect the liability a general partner of a disappearing limited partnership may have in connection with the debts and liabilities of the disappearing limited partnership existing prior to the time the merger is effective [Corp. Code § 15678.6(d)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.74

§ 170.74 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15677.9]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA)--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15677.9]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.70 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes.]

_____ [Name of converting limited partnership], A PROPERLY FORMED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CONVERTED INTO _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT], AND ALL DEBTS, LIABILITIES, AND OBLIGATIONS OF _____ [name of converting limited partnership], THE CONVERTING LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CONTINUED AS DEBTS, LIABILITIES, AND OBLIGATIONS OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of converted entity] AS THE CONVERTED ENTITY.

A. Limited Partnership Defined (CRLPA). [See § 170.72, Paragraph A.]

B. Requirements of Formation. [See § 170.72, Paragraph B].

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate is Filed. [See § 170.72, Paragraph C].

D. Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion. When a limited partnership converts into an other business entity, a foreign other business entity, or a foreign limited partnership pursuant to Corp. Code § 15677.4, all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of the converting limited partnership are vested in the converted entity. All debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting limited partnership continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity. All rights of creditors and liens upon the property of the converting limited partnership are preserved unimpaired and remain enforceable against the converted entity to the same extent as against the converting limited partnership, as if the conversion had not occurred (Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(1)-(3)).

[Optional] E. Pending Action. Any action or proceeding pending by or against the converting limited partnership may be continued against the converted entity as if the conversion had not occurred (Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(4)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that in the case of a limited partnership that has converted into another form of business entity, the rights and property of the converting limited partnership became vested in the converted entity, and that all debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting limited partnership continued as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity [see Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)]. These points and authorities may be used, for example, to refute a contention that a business entity which was converted from a limited partnership is no longer liable for the former limited partnership's debts and obligations, or in other situations in which issues involving succession to the former limited partnership's rights or obligations are at issue. Note than when another type of business entity converts into a limited partnership, similar rules apply to the converted limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15677.9(a), (b)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the CRLPA and another entity succeeded to its rights and liabilities under Corp. Code § 15677.9(b). This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion

A limited partnership may be converted into an other business entity (i.e., a corporation, general partnership, limited liability company, business trust, real investment trust, or unincorporated for-profit association [Corp. Code § 15611(v) (definition)]), foreign other business entity [see Corp. Code § 15611(m)], or a foreign limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15611(l) (definition)] pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 15677.1-15677.9 (CRLPA, Article 7.4) if, pursuant to the proposed conversion, each of the partners of the converting limited partnership receives a percentage interest in the profits and capital of the converted entity equal to that partner's percentage interest in profits and capital of the converting limited partnership as of the effective time of the conversion. Such a conversion may be effected only if the law under which the converted entity will exist expressly permits the formation of that entity pursuant to a conversion and the limited partnership complies with all other requirements of any other law that applies to conversion to the converted entity [Corp. Code § 15677.2; see Corp. Code § 15677.5]. A "converting limited partnership" is defined as a domestic limited partnership that converts to an other business entity, foreign other business entity, or a foreign limited partnership under the CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15677.1(c)]. A "converted entity" means the other business entity, foreign other business entity, or foreign limited partnership that results from a conversion of a domestic limited partnership under the CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15677.1(a)].

A limited partnership that wishes to convert to an other business entity, foreign other business entity, or a foreign limited partnership must approve a plan of conversion [see Corp. Code § 15677.3 (content and approval requirements)].

The conversion becomes effective upon the earliest date that all of the following occur [Corp. Code § 15677.4]:

- The approval of the plan of conversion by the partners of the converting limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15677.3];
- The filing of all documents required by law to create the converted entity; and
- The occurrence of the effective date if set forth in the plan of conversion.

Upon conversion, a statement or certificate of conversion must be completed or filed [see Corp. Code § 15677.6]. The filing with the Secretary of State of a certificate of conversion or a statement of partnership authority or articles of organization containing a statement of conversion has the effect of the filing of a certificate of cancellation by the converting limited partnership, and no converting limited partnership that has made the filing is required to file a certificate of dissolution or cancellation [see Corp. Code § 15623] as a result of conversion [Corp. Code § 15677.6(c)].

A limited partnership that converts into another entity pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 15677.1-15677.9 is for all purposes the same entity that existed before the conversion [Corp. Code § 15677.9(a)]. Upon a conversion taking effect, all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of the converting limited partnership are vested in the converted entity [Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(1)]. All debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting limited partnership continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity [Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(2)]. All rights of creditors and liens upon the property of the converting limited partnership are preserved unimpaired and remain enforceable against the converted entity to the same extent as against the converting limited partnership, as if the conversion had not occurred [Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(3)].

Any action or proceeding pending by or against the converting limited partnership may be continued against the converted entity as if the conversion had not occurred [Corp. Code § 15677.9(b)(4)]. The continuing liabilities of partners of the converting limited partnership are delineated in Corp. Code § 15677.9(c)-(e).

For detailed discussion of the conversion of limited partnerships, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 16B, Conversions and Mergers of Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender); see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.75

§ 170.75 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code § 15912.06(a), (b)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Applicable Partnership Law [Corp. Code § 15912.06(a), (b)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT OF 2008 APPLIES TO THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] _____ [name].

Uniform Partnership Act of 2008 Governs Limited Partnerships. Before January 1, 2010, the ULPA '08 governed limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008, or limited partnerships formed before that date that elected, in the manner provided in the partnership agreement or by law for amending the partnership agreement, to be subject to the ULPA '08. On or after January 1, 2010, the ULPA '08 governs all limited partnerships (Corp. Code § 15912.06(a),(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 (ULPA '08) [Corp. Code § 15900 et seq.] applies to govern issues relating to the formation and operation of a limited partnership.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the ULPA '08 governs the issue of whether a limited partnership was created. These points and authorities also may be used adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uniform Partnership Act of 2008 Governs Limited Partnerships Formed After Operative Date or Electing to Be Governed by Act

Corp. Code § 15912.06(a) provides that before January 1, 2010, the ULPA '08 governs only (1) limited partnerships formed on or after January 1, 2008, or (2) limited partnerships formed before that date that elect, in the manner provided in the partnership agreement or by law for amending the partnership agreement, to be subject to the ULPA '08. On or after January 1, 2010, the ULPA '08 governs all limited partnerships [Corp. Code § 15912.06(b)]. Certain ULPA '08 provisions, however, will not apply to pre-2008 partnerships except as the partners otherwise elect [Corp. Code § 15912.06(c); see § 170.02[4] -[6]; see also Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, §§ 5, 8.03 (LexisNexis)]. Furthermore, the ULPA '08 does not affect an action commenced, proceeding brought, or right accrued before it became operative [Corp. Code § 15912.07].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.76

§ 170.76 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15901.02(q), 15902.01]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Definition, Written Agreement, and Certificate of Limited Partnership [Corp. Code §§ 15901.02(q), 15902.01]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.75 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes.]

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] AND _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name] _____ [IS or WAS] A LIMITED PARTNERSHIP UNDER THE UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT OF 2008 BECAUSE IT _____ [CONSISTS or CONSISTED] OF BOTH GENERAL PARTNERS AND LIMITED PARTNERS. THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WAS PROPERLY FORMED BECAUSE THE PARTIES EXECUTED A PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT AND EXECUTED, ACKNOWLEDGED, AND FILED A CERTIFICATE OF LIMITED PARTNERSHIP WITH THE CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE.

A. Limited Partnership Defined. Under the Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, a limited partnership or domestic limited partnership (except in the phrases "foreign limited partnership" and "foreign limited liability limited partnership") is an entity having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners which is formed under the Act by two or more persons, or becomes subject to the Act pursuant to conversion or merger under Corp. Code § 15911.01 et seq. or by election or operation of law under Corp. Code § 15912.06(a) or (b) (Corp. Code § 15901.02(q); see Corp. Code § 15901.02(m) ("general partner" defined), (p) ("limited partner" defined)).

B. Requirements of Formation. In order to form a limited partnership, the partners must enter into a partnership agreement. A certificate of limited partnership must be filed with and on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State, stating the name of the limited partnership; the address of the initial designated office; the name and address of the initial agent for service of process in accordance with Corp. Code § 15901.16(d)(1); the name and address of each general partner; and any other matters the partners wish to include (Corp. Code § 15902.01(a), (b)).

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate is Filed. A limited partnership is formed when the Secretary of State files the certificate of limited partnership, unless a delayed effective date is specified pursuant to Corp. Code § 15902.06(c) (Corp. Code § 15902.01(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a limited partnership exists or existed because there was proper compliance with the formation requirements of the ULPA '08 contained in Corp. Code § 15902.01.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the ULPA '08. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Therefore, counsel should discuss facts that show that the parties entered into a partnership agreement and filed a certificate of limited partnership.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Partnership Defined

Under the ULPA '08, a limited partnership or domestic limited partnership (except in the phrases "foreign limited partnership" and "foreign limited liability limited partnership") is an entity having one or more general partners and one or more limited partners which is formed under the Act by two or more persons, or becomes subject to the Act pursuant to conversion or merger under Corp. Code § 15911.01 et seq. or by election or operation of law under Corp. Code § 15912.06(a) or (b) [Corp. Code § 15901.02(q); see Corp. Code § 15901.02(m) ("general partner" defined), (p) ("limited partner" defined)].

[b] Requirements of Formation

To form a limited partnership under the ULPA '08, the partners must enter into a partnership agreement and file a certificate of limited partnership with and on a form prescribed by the Secretary of State, providing several designated items of information about the partnership [Corp. Code § 15902.01(a), (b)]. A partnership agreement means the partners' agreement, whether oral, implied, in a record, or in any combination, concerning the limited partnership. The term includes the agreement as amended [Corp. Code § 15901.02(x)]. A limited partnership is formed when the Secretary of State files the certificate of limited partnership, unless a delayed effective date is specified pursuant to Corp. Code § 15902.06(c) [Corp. Code § 15902.01(c)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.77

§ 170.77 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15911.16]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Surviving Limited Partnership Liable After Merger of Limited Partnerships [Corp. Code § 15911.16]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.75 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes.]

_____ [Name of disappearing limited partnership], A PROPERLY FORMED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CEASED TO EXIST ON MERGER WITH _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of surviving limited partnership], AND AS THE SURVIVING LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of surviving limited partnership] _____ [SUCCEEDED TO ALL THE RIGHTS AND PROPERTY or BECAME SUBJECT TO ALL THE DEBTS AND LIABILITIES] OF _____ [name of disappearing limited partnership].

A. Limited Partnership Defined (ULPA '08). [See § 170.76, Paragraph A].

B. Requirements of Formation. [See § 170.76, Paragraph B].

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate Is Filed. [See § 170.76, Paragraph C].

D. Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger. Upon a merger of limited partnerships pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.10 et seq., the separate existence of the disappearing limited partnerships ceases and the surviving limited partnership succeeds without other transfer, act, or deed to all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of each of the disappearing limited partnerships, and is subject to all the debts and liabilities of each in the same manner as if the surviving limited partnership had itself incurred them. All rights of creditors and all liens on the property of each of the constituent limited partnerships are preserved unimpaired and may be enforced against the surviving limited partnership to the same extent as if the debt, liability, or duty that gave rise to that lien had been incurred or contracted by the surviving limited partnership, provided that those liens on the property of a disappearing limited partnership are limited to the property affected thereby immediately before the time the merger is affected (Corp. Code § 15911.16(a),(b)).

[Optional] E. Pending Action. Any action or proceeding pending by or against any disappearing limited partnership may be prosecuted to judgment, and the judgment binds the surviving limited partnership, or the surviving limited partnership may be proceeded against or be substituted in the place of the disappearing limited partnership (Corp. Code § 15911.16(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a limited partnership existed but disappeared as a result of a merger with one or more other limited partnerships pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.10 et seq. and that the surviving partnership succeeded to the rights and liabilities of the disappearing partnership.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the ULPA '08 and another limited partnership succeeded to its rights and liabilities under Corp. Code § 15911.16(a),(b). These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

This form may be adapted to include a merger with an "other business entity" pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.16 and as defined by Corp. Code § 15901.02(u).

For detailed discussion of the merger of limited partnerships, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 16B, Conversions and Mergers of Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender); see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships , § 7.12A (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should discuss facts showing that the disappearing partnership was properly formed, the right or liability at issue arose before the merger became effective, and a certificate of merger was filed pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.14 (discussed in [3][a], below) to effectuate the merger.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to actions against a disappearing or a surviving limited partnership, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surviving Limited Partnership Is Liable After Merger

The following entities may be merged under Corp. Code § 15911.11 :

- Two or more limited partnerships into one limited partnership.

- One or more limited partnerships and one or more "other business entities" (i.e., a corporation, general partnership, limited liability company, business trust, real estate investment trust, or an unincorporated association other than a nonprofit association [Corp. Code § 15911.02(u) (definition)]) into one of those other business entities.

- One or more limited partnerships and one or more other business entities into one limited partnership.

The merger of any number of limited partnerships with any number of other business entities may be effected only if the other business entities that are organized in California are authorized by the laws under which they are organized to effect the merger, and [Corp. Code § 15911.11]:

- If a limited partnership is the surviving limited partnership, the foreign other business entities are not prohibited by the laws under which they are organized from effecting that merger, and

- If a foreign limited partnership or foreign other business entity is the survivor of the merger, the laws of the jurisdiction under which the survivor is organized authorize that merger.

If one or more domestic corporations is also a party to the merger, the merger may be effected only if, with respect to any foreign other business entity that is a corporation, the foreign corporation is authorized by the laws under which it is organized to effect that merger [Corp. Code § 15911.11].

A limited partnership that is merged with or into one or more other limited partnerships or other business entities is referred to as a "constituent limited partnership" [Corp. Code § 15911.01(f)]. A "constituent other business entity" means an other business entity that is merged with or into one or more limited partnerships [Corp. Code § 15911.01(g)]. Constituents include the "surviving limited partnership" or "surviving other business entity," into which one or more other limited partnerships or other business entities are merged, and the "disappearing" limited partnership or other business entity which do not survive the merger [Corp. Code § 15911.01(h), (i), (l), (m)].

After approval of a merger, the constituent limited partnerships and any constituent other business entities must file a certificate of merger (or, if the surviving entity is a corporation, an agreement of merger if required by Corp. Code § 15911.15(b)) in the office of, on a form prescribed by, the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 15911.14(a)]. The merger becomes effective on filing, unless the certificate or agreement of merger provides for a future effective date [Corp. Code § 15911.15(a)]. For all purposes, a copy of the certificate of merger duly certified by the Secretary of State is conclusive evidence of the merger [Corp. Code § 15911.15(b)]. In addition, filing of the certificate has the effect of filing a certificate of cancellation for each disappearing limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.14(c)].

Once the merger is effective, the separate existence of the disappearing limited partnerships and disappearing other business entities ceases and the surviving limited partnership or surviving other business entity succeeds, without other transfer, act or deed, to all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of each of the disappearing limited partnerships and disappearing other business entities, and is subject to all the debts and liabilities of each in the same manner as if the surviving limited partnership or surviving other business entity had itself incurred them [Corp. Code § 15911.16(a)]. All rights of creditors and all liens upon the property of each of the constituent limited partnerships and constituent other business entities are preserved unimpaired and may be enforced against the surviving limited partnership or the surviving other business entity to the same extent as if the debt, liability, or duty that gave rise to that lien had been incurred or contracted by it. Liens on the property of a disappearing limited partnership or disappearing other business entity are limited to the property affected by the liens immediately before the merger is effective [Corp. Code § 15911.16(b)]. Any action or proceeding pending by or against any disappearing limited partnership or disappearing other business entity may be prosecuted to judgment. The judgment binds the surviving limited partnership or surviving other business entity, or the surviving limited partnership or surviving other business entity may be proceeded against or be substituted in the place of the disappearing limited partnership or disappearing other business entity effective [Corp. Code § 15911.16(c)]. This does not affect the liability a general partner of a disappearing limited partnership may have in connection with the debts and liabilities of the disappearing limited partnership existing prior to the time the merger is effective [Corp. Code § 15911.16(d)].

[4] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that in the case of a limited partnership that has converted into another form of business entity, the rights and property of the converting limited partnership became vested in the converted entity, and that all debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting limited partnership continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity [see Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)]. These points and authorities may be used, for example, to refute a contention that a business entity which was converted from a limited partnership is no longer liable for the former limited partnership's debts and obligations, or in other situations in which issues involving succession to the former limited partnership's rights and obligations are at issue. Note that when another type of business entity converts into a limited partnership, similar rules apply to the converted limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15911.09(a)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a limited partnership was properly formed under the ULPA '08 and another entity succeeded to its rights and liabilities under Corp. Code § 15911.09(b). This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

[5] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion

A limited partnership may be converted into another business entity (i.e., a corporation, general partnership, limited liability company, business trust, real estate investment trust, or unincorporated association other than a nonprofit association [see Corp. Code § 15911.01(k))] or a foreign other business entity [see Corp. Code § 15911.01(j) (definition)] or a foreign limited partnership pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 15911.01-15911.19 (ULPA '08, Art. 11) if, pursuant to the conversion, each of the partners of the converting limited partnership receives a percentage interest in the profits and capital of the converted entity equal to that partner's percentage interest in profits and capital of the converting limited partnership as of the effective time of the conversion. Such a conversion may be effected only if the law under which the converted entity will exist expressly permits the formation of that entity pursuant to a conversion, and the limited partnership complies with all other requirements of any other law that applies to conversion to the converted entity [Corp. Code § 15911.02]. A "converting limited partnership" is defined as a domestic limited partnership that converts to an other business entity or a foreign other business entity or a foreign limited partnership under the ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15911.01(c)]. A "converted entity" means the other business entity or foreign other business entity or foreign limited partnership that results from a conversion of a domestic limited partnership under the ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15911.01(a)(1)]. For a conversion into an other business entity or foreign other business entity not specified above, each limited partnership interest of the same class must be treated equally with respect to any distribution of cash, property, rights, interests, or securities of the converted entity, unless all limited partners of the class consent; and the nonredeemable limited partnership interests of the converting limited partnership must be converted only into nonredeemable interests or securities of the converted entity, unless all holders of the unredeemable interests consent [Corp. Code § 15911.01(a)(2)].

A limited partnership that wishes to convert to an other business entity or a foreign other business entity or a foreign limited partnership must approve a plan of conversion [see Corp. Code § 15911.03 (content and approval requirements)]. The conversion becomes effective on the earliest date that all of the following occur [Corp. Code § 15911.04(a)]:

- The approval of the plan of conversion by the partners of the converting limited partnership [see Corp. Code § 15911.03].
- The filing of all documents required by law to create the converted entity.
- The occurrence of the effective date, if set forth in the plan of conversion.

Upon conversion, a statement or certificate of conversion must be completed or filed [see Corp. Code § 15911.06(a)]. The filing with the Secretary of State of a certificate of conversion or a statement of partnership authority, articles of organization, or articles of incorporation containing a statement of conversion has the effect of the filing of a certificate of cancellation by the converting limited partnership, and no converting limited partnership that has made the filing is required to file a certificate of cancellation [see Corp. Code § 15902.03] as a result of that conversion [Corp. Code § 15911.06(c)].

A limited partnership that converts into another entity pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.01-15911.09 is for all purposes (other than for the purposes of Rev. & Tax Code §§ 17001 et seq., 18401 et seq., and 23001 et seq.) the same entity that existed before the conversion and the conversion will not be deemed a transfer of property [Corp. Code § 15911.09(a)]. Upon a conversion taking effect, all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of the converting entity or converting limited partnership are vested in the converted entity or converted limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(1)]. All debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting entity or converting limited partnership continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity or converted limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(2)]. All rights of creditors and liens on the property of the converting entity or converting limited partnership are preserved unimpaired and remain enforceable against the converted entity or converted limited partnership to the same extent as against the converting entity or converting limited partnership as if the conversion had not occurred [Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(3)].

Any action or proceeding pending by or against the converting entity or converting limited partnership may be continued against the converted entity or converted limited partnership as if the conversion had not occurred [Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(4)]. The continuing liabilities of partners of the converting limited partnership are delineated in Corp. Code § 15911.09(c)-(e)].

For detailed discussion of the conversion of limited partnerships, see California Legal Forms (Matthew Bender), Ch. 16B, Conversions and Mergers of Limited Partnerships; see also Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 25, Limited Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.78

§ 170.78 Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.09]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Limited Partnership Exists or Existed Under ULPA '08--Converted Entity Liable for Debts and Obligations of Converting Limited Partnership [Corp. Code § 15911.09]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. It should be combined with § 170.75 in order to set out the applicable governing statutes.]

_____ [Name of converting limited partnership], A PROPERLY FORMED LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CONVERTED INTO _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT], AND ALL DEBTS, LIABILITIES, AND OBLIGATIONS OF _____ [name of converting limited partnership], THE CONVERTING LIMITED PARTNERSHIP, CONTINUED AS DEBTS, LIABILITIES, AND OBLIGATIONS OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of converted entity] AS THE CONVERTED ENTITY.

A. Limited Partnership Defined (ULPA '08). [See § 170.76, Paragraph A].

B. Requirements of Formation. [See § 170.76, Paragraph B].

C. Limited Partnership Formed at Time Certificate Is Filed. [See § 170.76, Paragraph C].

D. Converted Entity Is Liable After Conversion. When a limited partnership converts into an other business entity, a foreign other business entity, or a foreign limited partnership pursuant to Corp. Code § 15911.04, all the rights and property, whether real, personal, or mixed, of the converting entity or converting limited partnership are vested in the converted entity or converted limited partnership. All debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converting entity or converting limited partnership continue as debts, liabilities, and obligations of the converted entity or converted limited partnership. All rights of creditors and liens on the property of the converting entity or converting limited partnership are preserved unimpaired and remain enforceable against the converted entity or converted limited partnership to the same extent as against the converting entity or converting limited partnership as if the conversion had not occurred (Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(1)-(3)).

[Optional] E. Pending Action. Any action or proceeding pending by or against the converting entity or converting limited partnership may be continued against the converted entity or converted limited partnership as if the conversion had not occurred (Corp. Code § 15911.09(b)(4)).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
B. Partnership Formation and Existence
3. Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.79-170.99

[Reserved]

§§ 170.79[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.100

§ 170.100 Supporting Contention That Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Partnership and Other Partners [Corp. Code § 16404(a)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Partnership and Other Partners [Corp. Code § 16404(a)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PARTNERS ARE FIDUCIARIES OR TRUSTEES FOR EACH OTHER AND OWE TO THE PARTNERSHIP AND THE OTHER PARTNERS THE DUTIES OF LOYALTY AND THE DUTY OF CARE, [AND THEIR FIDUCIARY DUTIES TO EACH OTHER CONTINUE THROUGH DISSOLUTION AND WINDING UP OF THE PARTNERSHIP AFFAIRS].

A. Partners Are Fiduciaries or Trustees for Each Other. A partner owes to the partnership and the other partners a duty of loyalty and a duty of care. The partnership relationship is confidential and fiduciary in nature; partners are trustees for each other. In all matters connected with the partnership business, every partner is bound to act in the highest good faith toward his or her copartner(s) and may not obtain any unfair advantage or secure an undue benefit by the slightest misrepresentation, concealment, threat, or adverse pressure of any kind. The burden is on the partner seeking the advantage to show complete good faith and fairness towards the other partner(s) (Corp. Code § 16404; Page v. Page (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 192, 197, 10 Cal. Rptr. 643, 359 P.2d 41 ; Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 512, 522, 2 Cal. Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 ; BT-I v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1406, 1411-1413, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811).

[Optional] B. Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs. The fiduciary obligations of partners continue until the partnership is dissolved and the affairs of the partnership are wound up (Page v. Page (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 192, 196-198, 10 Cal. Rptr. 643, 359 P.2d 41 ; Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 512, 522, 2 Cal. Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 ; see Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1), (2), (c)).

[Optional] C. Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation. A partner's duties of loyalty and care continue after dissociation with regard to matters arising and events occurring before a partner's dissociation (Corp. Code § 16603(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the general proposition that a partner owes the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care to the partnership and the other partners. Since the UPA'94 fiduciary duty rules are largely codifications of cases decided prior to its enactment, cases decided under the pre-'97 Act are included. However, to the extent to which a case decided under pre-1997 law imposes a higher level of loyalty or care, it may be in conflict with the specific provisions of UPA'94. Note also that Corp. Code § 16404, the principal UPA'94 section delineating the fiduciary duties of the partners, is considerably more detailed than was former Corp. Code § 15021, the predecessor provision in the pre-1997 law. Thus, cases decided under the pre-'97 Act need to be examined carefully to determine if their principles have been codified in UPA'94.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the relation of partners is fiduciary. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Paragraph A may be used alone to set forth the general fiduciary obligations of the partners to the partnership. It also may be combined with points and authorities in §§ 170.101 -170.109 relating to particular applications of the partners' fiduciary duties.

Optional Paragraph B may be used to establish that the fiduciary obligation continues through dissolution and winding up of the partnership affairs. If the partnership business is being wound up by the personal or legal representative of the last surviving partner, these points and authorities should be combined with the points and authorities in § 170.105 to assert that such a person is held to the same fiduciary standards as an actual partner [see Corp. Code § 16404(g)].

Optional Paragraph C may be used to set forth a withdrawn partner's continuing duty not to adversely exploit a partnership opportunity, and may be combined with points and authorities from § 170.102.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the members of the partnership, its business and date of formation, and the particular activity that is to be compared to the required standard.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partners Are Fiduciaries or Trustees for Each Other

Corp. Code § 16404(a) provides that a partner owes the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care to the partnership and the other partners. These duties must be discharged consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing [Corp. Code § 16404(d)].

Page v. Page (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 192, 10 Cal. Rptr. 643, 359 P.2d 41 , was an action for declaratory relief to determine whether the partnership of the parties was at will or for a term, as that would determine the extent of liability, if any, for unilateral dissolution. Plaintiff owned the major supplier and largest creditor of the partnership to which the partnership owed $47,000. Plaintiff dissolved the partnership when, after eight years of losses, it was finally showing a small profit. The trial court found that the partnership was one for a term, and plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed. Prior to the adoption of the Uniform Partnership Act ("UPA") in California in 1949, former Civ. Code § 2411 provided that "Partners are trustees for each other, and in all proceedings connected with the conduct of the partnership, every partner is bound to act in the highest good faith to his copartner and may not obtain any advantage over him in the partnership affairs by the slightest misrepresentation, concealment, threat, or adverse pressure of any kind." The Court said the repeal of Civ. Code § 2411 and adoption of the UPA was not intended to diminish the fiduciary duties between partners (55 Cal. 2d 192, 197) . Applying the general duty to the right to require dissolution, the Court said that a partner cannot use adverse pressure to "freeze out" a copartner and appropriate the business to his or her own use. A partner cannot dissolve the partnership to gain the benefits of the business for himself or herself unless he or she compensates any copartners for their share of the prospective business opportunity. Although the record before it did not indicate any bad faith or that the improved profit situation was more than temporary, the Court went on to say that a bad-faith attempt to appropriate the prosperity of a partnership without compensating one's copartners would be a wrongful dissolution and subject the dissolving partner to liability under former Corp. Code § 15038(2)(a) [see now Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1)] for breach of what it termed the implied agreement not to exclude a partner wrongfully from the partnership business opportunity (55 Cal. 2d 192, 196-198) .

Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 512, 2 Cal. Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 , was an action to determine the extent of an easement granted by plaintiff to defendant. The two had been partners, and for five years had farmed a parcel, hunted there during the deer season, and granted licenses to others to hunt there. On dissolution of the partnership, the property was divided into two parcels. The dissolution agreement provided that whoever got the southerly parcel (defendant) should also receive and have a right of way across the northerly parcel over the private access road, the only road used while the land was one parcel. Plaintiff drafted the deed that granted the right of way without any limitation either to its purpose or use by defendant. Defendant thereafter granted hunting leases, including one to a lessee who sold memberships for hunting purposes. Plaintiff, displeased with this use of the road, instituted the action to impose limitations on defendant's use of the right of way. Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed. The Court first discussed the confidential and fiduciary nature of the partnership relationship. The Court stated that neither party has the right to take an unfair advantage or secure an undue benefit, and that the burden is on the one seeking advantage to show complete good faith and fairness towards the other. The duty of good faith and the burden of showing it extend to the dissolution and liquidation of partnership affairs, as well as to the sale by one partner to another of his or her interest in the partnership. Plaintiff, as the partner who drafted the deed, had a duty to disclose any intended limitation or restriction in the deed itself, not four years later by way of action to restrict defendant's use of the easement (53 Cal. 2d 512, 522) .

BT-I v. Equitable Life Assurance Society (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1406, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 , was an action by a limited partner for breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract, and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The limited partner alleged that the general partner violated its fiduciary duties by purchasing and foreclosing a deed of trust on an office building which was the partnership's sole asset. The trial court sustained the general partner's demurrer without leave to amend. It found that the partnership agreement authorized the general partner's conduct and relieved it of any duty to the limited partner (75 Cal. App. 4th 1406, 1408) .

The limited partner argued that the limited partnership agreement could not abrogate the general partner's fiduciary duty not to engage in self-dealing. The appellate court agreed that the complaint was sufficient to state a cause of action and reversed. Citing Leff v. Gunter (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 508, 514, 189 Cal. Rptr. 377, 658 P.2d 740 , discussed in § 170.101[3][a], the court first stated that a partnership is a fiduciary relationship and partners are held to the standards and duties of a trustee in their dealings with each other. Although under Corp. Code § 15618 partners may determine by agreement many aspects of their relationship, there are limitations. The acquisition of partnership debt by a general partner is a breach of fiduciary duty. A general partner that acquires a partnership obligation cannot foreclose on partnership assets. The fiduciary duty not to purchase partnership debt and foreclose out one's partner cannot be contracted away in the partnership agreement. A limited partnership agreement cannot relieve the general partner of its fiduciary duties in matters fundamentally related to the partnership business. The court specifically held that a partnership agreement cannot relieve a general partner of its fiduciary duties to a limited partner and the partnership when the purchase and foreclosure of partnership debt is involved (75 Cal. App. 4th 1406, 1411-1413) .

[b] Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs

Both Page v. Page (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 192, 10 Cal. Rptr. 643, 359 P.2d 41 , and Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 512, 2 Cal. Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 , discussed in [a], above, also hold that the fiduciary relation of partners continues through the dissolution and winding up of the partnership affairs.

Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1) provides that a partner's duty of loyalty requires the partners to account to the partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by the partner in the conduct or winding up of the partnership business. Similarly, Corp. Code § 16404(b)(2) provides that the partner's duty of loyalty requires a partner to refrain from dealing with the partnership in the conduct or winding up of the partnership business. Corp. Code § 16404(c) limits the partner's duty of care (as opposed to the duty of loyalty) to the partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law.

[c] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

With respect to matters arising and events occurring before a partner's dissociation, the partner's duties of loyalty [see Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1), (2)] and care [see Corp. Code § 16404(c)] as to the conduct of the partnership business are generally continued after dissociation [Corp. Code § 16603(3)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partners Are Fiduciaries or Trustees for Each Other

The Ninth Circuit, in Ragsdale v. Haller (9th Cir. 1986) 780 F.2d 794 , affirmed a bankruptcy court's determination of nondischargeability of sums owing from the operating partner, who filed bankruptcy, to the other partner for his share of profits. Although under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) (governing nondischargeability of debts arising from fiduciary defalcation), the meaning of fiduciary is an issue of federal law, state law determines when a trust in the strict sense occurs. The court said that the words "hold as trustee" in former Corp. Code § 15021(1) [now see Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1)] did not apply here, because the profits were not derived without the consent of the partnership. Further, a trust imposed by law as the result of malfeasance or wrongdoing is not included within the purview of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4). Nevertheless, relying on California case law making all partners trustees over the assets of the partnership, the court held that California partners are fiduciaries within the meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) (780 F.2d 794, 796-797) .

In Nelson v. Abraham (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 745, 177 P.2d 931 , the plaintiff, an employee of defendant, had an oral agreement with defendant to open and manage a sales office in return for one-third of the profits, in addition to salary. Defendant sold that office to a third party and refused to account to plaintiff for any of the profits. The California Supreme Court, reversing a judgment for the defendant, said that whether the oral agreement created a partnership or a joint venture was immaterial. In either case, the relationship would be of a fiduciary character (29 Cal. 2d 745, 750) . In addition, like every contract, the agreement called for the highest degree of good faith and fair dealing between the parties and entitled plaintiff to an accounting (29 Cal. 2d 745, 750-754) .

[b] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

In Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94 , a client brought a legal malpractice action against the attorney who had represented her in a business transaction, and the two law firms in which he had practiced during the times of the alleged acts of malpractice. One firm cross-claimed for indemnity against the attorney. The superior court granted summary judgment to all defendants on the malpractice claims, and granted summary judgment to the first firm with respect to the cross-claims. The attorney's cross-complaint against his former firm included a claim titled "Breach of Fiduciary Duty" that alleged that his partnership relationship with the firm gave rise to fiduciary obligations from the firm to him, and that the firm breached those duties by cross-complaining against him for indemnity rather than defending and indemnifying him. The appellate court concluded that the trial court correctly granted summary adjudication in favor of the firm on the attorney's claim for breach of fiduciary duty. The court noted that the fiduciary duty among partners is limited. Citing Leff v. Gunter, discussed in § 170.101[3][a], the court stated that the continuing fiduciary duty that survives dissolution of partnership is breached only if the ex-partner attempts to divert partnership opportunities for his or her personal benefit to the detriment of the former partners, or if the remaining partners exclude an ex-partner from the benefits of an existing partnership opportunity. When the partnership is held liable to a third party based on a partner's negligence, the partnership is entitled to seek indemnity from the partner whose negligence caused the loss. Because the right to seek indemnity from the former partner would be hollow if its pursuit exposed the partnership to damages for breach of fiduciary duty, the court determined that pursuit of the indemnity action did not violate any fiduciary obligation the firm owed to the former partner (67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1551) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.101

§ 170.101 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity or Acquisition of Interest Adverse to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16404; former Corp. Code § 15021]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity or Acquisition of Interest Adverse to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16404; former Corp. Code § 15021]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT BREACHED HIS/HER FIDUCIARY DUTY BY _____ [EXPLOITING A PARTNERSHIP OPPORTUNITY FOR HIS/HER PERSONAL ADVANTAGE or ACQUIRING AN INTEREST ADVERSE TO THAT OF THE PARTNERSHIP].

[EITHER:]

A. Partner's Fiduciary Duty Prevents Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity. A partner cannot derive any benefit from the partnership relationship for himself or herself as against his or her copartners. [When one partner secretly enters into a contract that is sought by the partnership and for which another partner is negotiating on behalf of the partnership, that partner is in violation of his or her fiduciary duty.] A partner who derives profit or benefit from [such a contract or from] appropriation of a partnership opportunity holds those profits as [constructive] trustee for the partnership (Corp. Code § 16404(b) or former Corp. Code § 15021(1); Leff v. Gunter (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 508, 513-518, 189 Cal. Rptr. 377, 658 P.2d 740 ; Ferry v. McNeil (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415-416, 29 Cal. Rptr. 577).

[AND/OR:]

B. Partner May Not Acquire Property in Which Partnership Is Interested. Once the partnership or joint venture is established, the parties assume the status of fiduciaries and do not have the right, while the venture continues, to acquire property in which the partnership is interested to the exclusion of the others. A partner or venturer acquiring that property is a trustee for his or her partners or coventurers (Sadugor v. Holstein (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 483, 18 Cal. Rptr. 859).

[AND/OR:]

C. Partner May Not Engage in Other Ventures Adverse to Interests of Partnership. A partner who agrees to give his or her personal attention to the partnership business may not engage in any other business that gives him or her an interest adverse to that of the partnership (Corp. Code § 16404(b)(2); see Neilson v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 324-325, 186 P.2d 197).

[Optional] D. Lease Option or Expectancy of Renewal Is Partnership Asset. The expectancy of renewal of a lease is a species of property of the lessee. If the lessee is a partnership, the expectancy of renewal is a distinct partnership asset in which all partners have an interest. The general rule that a partner cannot derive any benefit from the partnership relationship for himself or herself as against his or her copartners prevents a partner from obtaining a renewal of a partnership lease for his or her own purposes, to commence after the expiration of the original lease or after termination of the partnership. If a partner does take such a lease, he or she holds it as constructive trustee for the partnership (Ferry v. McNeil (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415-416, 29 Cal. Rptr. 577 ; Donleavey v. Johnston (1914) 24 Cal. App. 319, 327-330, 141 P. 229).

[Optional] E. Partner May Not Secretly Encumber Partnership Property for Personal Use. It is a breach of fiduciary duty for a partner to encumber partnership property without notifying the other partners and obtaining their consent, and to use the proceeds of the loan for his or her personal expenses (Galardi v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 683, 693, 238 Cal. Rptr. 774, 739 P.2d 134).

[Optional] F. Partner May Not Occupy Partnership Real Property and Pay Below-Market Rent. When one partner, over the other partner's objection, occupies the partnership's real property and pays below-market rent, the occupying partner is in violation of the fiduciary duty imposed by law (Enea v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1565-1566, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 513).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that partners' fiduciary duty prevents one partner from appropriating a partnership asset or opportunity to the detriment of the partnership or the other partners or from acquiring an interest adverse to that of the partnership. Alternative Paragraphs A through C may be used alone or together depending on the facts of the case. Optional Paragraph D is for use when the particular asset exploited is a lease option or merely the expectancy of renewal. Optional Paragraph E is for use when a partner has secretly encumbered partnership property and used the proceeds for personal purposes. Optional Paragraph F is for use when one partner has occupied partnership real property over the objection of the other party.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities in § 170.21, setting forth the general rule that the relation of partners is fiduciary in nature. They should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the fiduciary relation of partners prevents one partner from reaping personal benefits from a partnership asset or opportunity. The points and authorities set forth in this form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the members of the partnership, its business and date of formation, the particular assets or opportunity appropriated, the acts that constitute the appropriation, and, if known, the amount of the monetary benefit to which the partnership or complaining partner is entitled.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 170.120 may be used in particular situations to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Fiduciary Duty Prevents Exploitation of Partnership Opportunity

Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1) provides that every partner must account to the partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by him or her in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business, or derived from a use by the partner of partnership property or information, including the appropriation of a partnership opportunity. Corp. Code § 16404(b)(3) provides that a partner's duty of loyalty includes refraining from competing with the partnership in the conduct of the partnership business before dissolution.

Leff v. Gunter (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 508, 189 Cal. Rptr. 377, 658 P.2d 740 , was an action by one joint venturer against three former venture partners for unfair competition based on breach of their fiduciary duty. Plaintiff, a real estate developer, and S, an architectural engineer, agreed to enter a joint bid for the construction of an IRS center in Fresno. S had already submitted a joint bid with defendants for construction of a similar center in Memphis. S suggested to plaintiff that defendants join in their venture and bid on the Fresno project. This was orally agreed to on January 28, 1970. Defendants were to have two-thirds of the profits, with plaintiff and S each taking one-sixth. Between late February and late March, 1970, defendants informed S that they wished to withdraw from the Fresno project. On April 10, 1970, defendants and one other person submitted their own bid on the Fresno project. That became the successful bid. Judgment was for plaintiff for $416,666 or one-sixth of the profits lost because of defendants' conduct. Plaintiff was denied prejudgment interest. (S had not joined in the suit because a company of which he was president had continuing business relationships with one of defendants.) Defendants appealed from the judgment and plaintiff appealed the denial of prejudgment interest.

Defendants contended that they were free to exploit the partnership opportunity since they had withdrawn from the partnership, are discussed in § 170.100. Defendants conceded that it would have been improper if they had engaged in "secret preemptive activities" while still members of the partnership (33 Cal. 3d 508, 513) . The California Supreme Court concluded that when the partnership is obviously pursuing an opportunity, the fiduciary duty not to compete with the partnership with respect to that opportunity survives after withdrawal (33 Cal. 3d 508, 514) .

The Court discussed former Corp. Code § 15021(1) [now see Corp. Code § 16404(b)], reviewed the various cases regarding appropriation of partnership opportunities, and reiterated its approval of the following jury instruction: "You are instructed that where one partner secretly enters into a contract sought to be contracted by the partnership which another partner is negotiating on behalf of the partnership such partner is in violation of his fiduciary duty to the excluded partner" (33 Cal. 3d 508, 513-517) . The Court considered the evidence in this case and found it supported each essential element: the oral venture agreement, that the venture was formed for the sole purpose of becoming successful bidder on the project, that useful information was exchanged between the parties, and that defendants without the knowledge or consent of the co-venturers began ultimately successful negotiations (33 Cal. 3d 508, 518) .

Defendants contended that prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) was not proper because plaintiff's damages were not certain or capable of being made certain. The Court said damages are deemed certain or capable of being made certain if there is essentially no dispute between the parties concerning the basis of computation of damages. The Court reversed and remanded for the purpose of calculating and awarding plaintiff prejudgment interest from the date of completion of the center (33 Cal. 3d 508, 519-521) .

Ferry v. McNeil (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 29 Cal. Rptr. 577 , was an action for declaration of rights between partners in the business of quarrying and processing rock, sand, and gravel. Defendant's contribution to the partnership was two leasehold interests representing the extraction rights on two parcels. Both leases were in defendant's name; one included an option to renew ("parcel one"). After formation of the partnership defendant assigned his interest in the leasehold on the second parcel ("parcel two") to the partnership and assigned a one-half interest in the leasehold on the parcel one to plaintiff. Plaintiff expended several hundred thousand dollars for installation of equipment and other expenses incident to the commencement of operations on the parcels. Plaintiff independently negotiated a lease with the owner of parcel two. That lease was to commence on expiration of the original lease to defendant. Plaintiff contended that he was merely an assignee or sublessee of defendant and that he had the right, as to parcel one, to sell his equipment and his interest therein free of any claim of defendant after the expiration of the renewal term, and, as to parcel two, to operate there free of any claim of defendant after the commencement of the lease term he had negotiated. Judgment was for defendant, with the court finding that the parties were cotenants as to parcel one and partners as to parcel two (214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415) . The findings further recited that the agreement between the parties created a confidential relationship that imposed on plaintiff the duty to operate the leasehold premises under the leases as they were in effect on the date of the agreement, and further imposed on plaintiff the duty to make every effort in good faith to continue the operations, by extensions or renewal of the original leases, in compliance with the parties' original agreement (214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 414) . Plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. The court's characterization of the expectancy of renewal as a partnership asset is discussed in § 170.101[3][d]. The court stated that a partner cannot derive any benefit from the partnership relationship for himself or herself as against his or her copartners. This general rule prevents a partner from obtaining a renewal of a partnership lease for his or her own purposes, to commence after the expiration of the original lease or after termination of the partnership (214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415) . If a partner does take such a lease, he or she holds it as constructive trustee for the partnership (214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415-416) .

[b] Partner May Not Acquire Property in Which Partnership Is Interested

Sadugor v. Holstein (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 18 Cal. Rptr. 859 , was an action to establish a trust in a half interest in real property. The parties agreed to acquire a certain property together for a purchase price of $170,000, each contributing $85,000. Plaintiff was prepared to pay cash, but defendant was raising his share by obtaining a $100,000 loan secured by a deed of trust on the property. Defendant's lender required that plaintiff join in execution of the deed of trust. Plaintiff refused to do this on advice of counsel. Defendant bought the property in his own name, and plaintiff brought this action. Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. After reviewing various authorities to the effect that a partnership or joint venture in land can be formed by oral agreement, the appellate court determined that a joint venture had indeed been formed. The court went on to discuss the effect of the joint venture and the status of the parties, saying that once the partnership or joint venture is established, the parties assume the status of fiduciaries and none have the right, while the venture continues, to acquire the property to the exclusion of the others. A joint venturer holding property for the joint venture is a trustee for his or her coventurers even if he or she has purchased the property with his or her own funds (199 Cal. App. 2d 477, 483) .

[c] Partner May Not Engage in Other Ventures Adverse to Interests of Partnership

The facts and procedural background of Neilson v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 186 P.2d 197 are discussed in § 170.120[3]. The appellate court cited former Corp. Code § 2411 to the effect that a general partner who agrees to give personal attention to the partnership business may not engage in any other business which gives that partner an interest adverse to that of the firm. The court noted that in this case the partnership was almost continually indebted to defendant and that there was no evidence that the partnership either desired or could afford to purchase additional land in the area. Thus, since the partnership suffered no injury on account of defendant's purchase of land for himself individually in the area of the partnership, the purchase was not adverse to the partnership (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 324-325) .

[d] Lease Option or Expectancy of Renewal Is Partnership Asset

The facts and procedural background of Ferry v. McNeil (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 29 Cal. Rptr. 577 , are discussed in § 170.101[3][a]. The court characterized an expectancy of lease renewal as a species of property of the lessee, and, if the lessee is a partnership, a distinct partnership asset in which all partners have an interest (214 Cal. App. 2d 411, 415) .

[e] Partner May Not Secretly Encumber Partnership Property for Personal Use

In Galardi v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 683, 238 Cal. Rptr. 774, 739 P.2d 134 , the California Supreme Court upheld certain findings and conclusions of the Review Department of the State Bar Court in a matter in which discipline was based on petitioner's breach of fiduciary duties to real estate venture partners who were not clients. In one venture, petitioner contributed real property, title to which remained in his name, and the venture partner contributed cash. Petitioner encumbered the property of both ventures and used the proceeds of the loans for personal expenses and for purposes not related to that venture. In neither case did petitioner obtain the consent of the other venture partner to the borrowings. There was a finding that the other partner in one venture did not know about the loans. There was no finding regarding the knowledge of the other partner in the other venture.

Citing Prince v. Harting (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 727, 2 Cal. Rptr. 545 (discussed in § 170.102), the Court stated that a partner has no right to use the partnership property for purposes unrelated to the partnership. Petitioner's use of the property to secure financing to pay expenses unrelated to the venture, and his failure to notify and obtain consent of the other partner before encumbering the property with those loans, was a breach of fiduciary duty. Concerning the venture for which no finding was made regarding the other partner's awareness of the loans, the Court said even if the other partner knew of the loans, the failure to obtain that partner's consent was a breach of both the written partnership agreement and of petitioner's fiduciary duty (43 Cal. 3d 683, 693) .

[f] Partner May Not Occupy Partnership Real Property and Pay Below-Market Rent

In Enea v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 513 , the plaintiff had bought a one-third interest in an existing partnership, which had only one significant asset: a small commercial office building, which was being held with a prospect toward selling it at a profit. The building was occupied and used as a professional office by the other partners, who paid below-market rent both before and after the plaintiff acquired his interest. The plaintiff was not aware that the partnership was receiving below-market rent until about eight years later, when the plaintiff raised objections to that arrangement and demanded to be bought out. No such buyout occurred. Instead, the plaintiff became disassociated and subsequently sued for determination of a buy-out price and damages, on the grounds of the occupying partners' fraud and breach of fiduciary duty. The trial court granted a defense motion for summary adjudication, on the ground that there was no legal duty, nor was there evidence of any contractual obligation, for the occupying partners to pay fair-market rent or for the partnership to receive fair-market rent.

The court of appeal reversed, observing that "the sole question presented is whether defendants were categorically entitled to lease partnership property to themselves, or associated entities (or for that matter, to anyone) at less than it could yield in the open market. Remarkably, we have found no case squarely addressing this precise question. We are satisfied, however, that the answer is a resounding 'No.' ... Here the facts ... plainly depict defendants taking advantages for themselves from partnership property at the expense of the partnership. The advantage consisted of occupying partnership property at below-market rates, i.e., less than they would be required to pay to an independent landlord for equivalent premises. The cost to the partnership was the additional rent thereby rendered unavailable for collection from an independent tenant willing to pay the property's value" (132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1563, 1564 ; footnote omitted; original emphasis). The court made three points in support of its conclusion:

- Corp. Code § 16404 does not exclusively delineate a partner's duty of loyalty to the partnership and other partners. On the contrary, the statute only lists particular obligations that are "included" in the duty of loyalty, leaving further articulation of the duty of loyalty to traditional common law processes (132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1565) .

- Even if the statutory enumeration of duties were held to be exclusive, that could not entitle the defendants to rent partnership property to themselves at below-market rates. The first duty listed in the statute is to "account to the partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by the partner in the conduct ... of the partnership business or derived from a use by the partner of partnership property ..." (132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1565 ; emphasis supplied by court).

- The exemption in Corp. Code § 16404(e) ("A partner does not violate a duty or obligation under this chapter or under the partnership agreement merely because the partner's conduct furthers the partner's own interest.") is intended to excuse partners from accounting for incidental benefits obtained in the course of partnership activities, when there is no detriment to the partnership. The statute could not be invoked here to justify the defendants' occupying the partnership property for their own exclusive benefit at partnership expense, in effect converting a partnership asset to themselves and appropriating the value the partnership would otherwise have realized as distributable profits (132 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1566) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partner May Not Acquire Property in Which Partnership Is Interested

In Lasry v. Lederman (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 480, 305 P.2d 663 , an action for declaratory relief and accounting, the appellate court reversed the trial court judgment for defendants. The parties had to purchase and lease a commercial building, each contributing one third of the downpayment. Defendants purchased the property as tenants in common and, although plaintiff tendered them one-third of the downpayment, refused to acknowledge any interest of plaintiff in the property. The appellate court said there is little formality required in the formation of a joint venture. Once the venture is established, the parties assume the status of fiduciaries and none has the right, while the venture exists, to acquire the subject property to the exclusion of the others (147 Cal. App. 2d 480, 487) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.102

§ 170.102 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Taking Secret Profits [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1); former Corp. Code § 15021]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Taking Secret Profits [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1); former Corp. Code § 15021]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT HAS BREACHED HIS/HER FIDUCIARY DUTY TO THE PARTNERSHIP BY TAKING SECRET PROFITS ON PARTNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS AND IS ACCOUNTABLE TO THE PARTNERSHIP FOR THOSE PROFITS.

Partner Must Account for Secret Profits. The fiduciary relation of partners prevents a partner from making any secret separate profit on partnership transactions. If a partner does make a secret profit, he or she is accountable at law or in equity as the situation requires for those profits (Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1) or former Corp. Code § 15021(1); Cagnolatti v. Guinn (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 189 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; Prince v. Harting (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 727-728, 2 Cal. Rptr. 545).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a partner has breached his or her fiduciary duty by making secret profits on a partnership transaction and must account to the partnership for those profits.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the partner must account for the secret profits made on a partnership transaction. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the transaction in question, that the partnership was interested in the transaction, how it was interested, and how and to what extent defendant profited from the transaction.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner Must Account for Secret Profits

Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1) provides that every partner must account to the partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by him or her in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business, or derived from a use by the partner of partnership property or information, including the appropriation of a partnership opportunity.

In Cagnolatti v. Guinn (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 189 Cal. Rptr. 151 , an action by former members of a partnership investment club who sued because defendant managing partners had not redeemed the value of plaintiffs' units as provided in the partnership agreement, the appellate court affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiffs. Defendants had used the money that should have been used for redemption of plaintiffs' interests to pay themselves commissions, expenses, salaries, and interest. When the investment club got so large that the number of signatory partners on deeds was too cumbersome, all the partnership property was deeded to a management trust of which defendants were also officers. The appellate court based liability on both the fiduciary duty of a partner and the duties of trustees under former Civ. Code §§ 2228-2230, 2239 [but see Prob. Code § 15003(b), Communication from California Law Revision Commission Concerning Assembly Bill 2652, comment to Prob. Code § 15003(b) (repeal not intended to affect general fiduciary principles); see Prob. Code § 15003(c) (trust principles of Prob. Code § 15000 et seq. may be applied to other relationships)] (140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 48-49) . Discussing the liability of one defendant for profits taken by another, the court noted that a fiduciary who breaches the duty of disclosure and causes secret profits to flow to a third party will be held liable for those profits even though he or she did not personally receive any of them (140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 49) .

Prince v. Harting (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 2 Cal. Rptr. 545 , was an action for dissolution, accounting, and damages designated as secret profits. Plaintiffs and defendant were partners in a business formed to distribute soft water in the 11 western states. Defendant told plaintiffs that he had the western states franchise from the national company that owned the patents for the best water softening equipment in the country. In fact, the national company was a corporation owned by defendant, his brother, and the brother's wife. During the six years of the partnership's operation, it paid the national company $245,683 for equipment that the national company purchased from the manufacturer for $138,046. In addition, defendant received commissions from the manufacturer. Defendant and his coconspirators sold other items to the partnership for total profits of $119,052. Judgment was in favor of the plaintiffs "on behalf of the partnership" for the profits plus interest. One plaintiff had withdrawn as partner several years earlier; he was given a lien on the assets of the partnership to secure his portion of the judgment. The other plaintiff was to wind up the business. Defendant appealed.

The appellate court modified the judgment to retain jurisdiction to make adjustments during the winding up and in all other respects affirmed the judgment. Citing former Corp. Code § 15021 [now see Corp. Code § 16404], the court said defendant was trustee for his partners and quoted from former Civ. Code §§ 2410 and 2411 that a partner may not obtain any advantage over another in the partnership affairs. Reiterating that a partner has no right to deal with the partnership property other than for the sole benefit of the partnership, the court described the fraud as allowing the conspirators to make for themselves the very kind of profit that the partnership was designed to make, and to that extent reduced the profits of the partnership. Equity will not tolerate such a transaction, but will require the conspirators to make good the entire profit of which the partnership has been deprived (177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 727-728) . Defendant advanced the novel theory that since his brother had the right to buy at as low a price as possible and sell to the partnership at a high price, his own conduct was excused. The court said this argument completely disregarded the nature of defendant's fiduciary duty. Each conspirator is liable for the entire loss suffered by plaintiffs (177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 728) .

Defendant challenged the measure of damages on several grounds. The court held that Civ. Code § 3343, governing damages for fraud and deceit in the purchase or sale of property, did not apply. Civ. Code § 3343 applies when the fraud is perpetrated by the other party to the transaction, not by an agent or fiduciary. Nor were damages to be limited, on an unjust enrichment theory, to the profits that could be traced to defendant's pockets. Breach of fiduciary duty is a tort. Thus, the maximum measure of damages applies to allow the beneficiary to recover under Civ. Code § 3333 the entire profit that has been lost (177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 729-731) . As in other conspiracies, each conspirator is liable for the entire loss (177 Cal. App. 2d 720, 731) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Partner Must Account for Secret Profits

The parties in Stenian v. Tashjian (1918) 178 Cal. 623, 174 P. 883 , formed a partnership to purchase land and to divide the profits on its sale. After the partnership was terminated, plaintiff discovered that defendant had taken a commission from the original sellers of the land and sought to recover half of that commission. Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court reasoned that each partner is the agent of the partnership in all matters coming within the scope of the relationship, and recited the elementary principle of equity that an agent may not make a profit for himself or herself in a transaction on behalf of the principal. Once parties enter into an agreement of partnership, each partner occupies a fiduciary relation to the others in all matters pertaining to the partnership enterprise, and each partner is precluded by the relationship from making any secret, separate profit on a partnership transaction. When one of the partners makes a secret profit, it constitutes fraud on the others, and the partner is accountable in law or in equity as the situation requires for those profits (178 Cal. 623, 627) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.103

§ 170.103 Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Failure to Disclose Information to Other Partners [Evid. Code § 962; Corp. Code §§ 16403(c); former Corp. Code § 15020]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partner Has Breached Fiduciary Duty--Failure to Disclose Information to Other Partners [Evid. Code § 962; Corp. Code §§ 16403(c); former Corp. Code § 15020]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT BREACHED HIS/HER FIDUCIARY AND STATUTORY DUTIES TO DEFENDANT BY FAILING TO DISCLOSE TO PLAINTIFF INFORMATION REGARDING THE PARTNERSHIP BUSINESS.

A. Partner's Fiduciary Duty Requires Disclosure. The fiduciary duty of partners or joint venturers requires that each fully disclose to the others information affecting the partnership or venture (Corp. Code § 16403(c); former Corp. Code § 15020; Milton Kauffman, Inc. v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 17, 210 P.2d 88 ; see Corp. Code § 16403(a), (b) or former Corp. Code § 15019).

[Optional] B. Attorney for Partner. An attorney for a partnership represents all the partners as to matters of partnership business. The joint-client rule of Evidence Code Section 962 applies to require disclosure by the attorney to all partners, even when the communication by one partner to the attorney was not made in the presence of the other partners (Wortham & Van Liew v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 927, 931-933, 233 Cal. Rptr. 725 ; McCain v. Phoenix Resources, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 575, 581, 230 Cal. Rptr. 25).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a partner has breached his or her fiduciary duty by failing to fully and honestly disclose information relevant to the partnership [see Corp. Code § 16403(c); former Corp. Code § 15020]. Optional Paragraph B may be used, particularly in the context of a discovery proceeding, to extend the duty of disclosure to an attorney for one partner or the partnership.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partner must make full and complete disclosure to all other partners. The issue may arise in discovery proceedings incident to other actions involving the partnership. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify whether the party seeking the information is a general partner or the personal representative or conservator of a partner, the interest of the partnership in the matter at issue, the information sought or withheld, any demands made for the information, and/or any false or incomplete information given.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Fiduciary Duty Requires Disclosure

Corp. Code § 16403(c)(1) provides that each partner and the partnership must furnish to a partner (and to the legal representative of a deceased partner or partner under legal disability) without demand, any information concerning the partnership's business and affairs reasonably required for the proper exercise of the partner's rights and duties under the partnership agreement or partnership law. On demand, a partner must receive any other information concerning the partnership's business and affairs, except to the extent the demand or information demanded is unreasonable or otherwise improper under the circumstances [Corp. Code § 16403(c)(2); see also former Corp. Code § 15020]. This information may be transmitted by electronic transmission by the partnership [Corp. Code § 16403(c); see Corp. Code § 16101(4) (definition)]. Corp. Code § 16403(b) provides that a partnership must provide partners (and their agents and attorneys) access to its books and records [see also former Corp. Code § 15019].

Milton Kauffman, Inc. v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 210 P.2d 88 , was a proceeding for writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from holding petitioners, a corporation and its principal, in contempt for refusal to comply with discovery orders relating to inspection and copying of records. Petitioners were venture partners of the real party in interest. The venture agreements were for construction and sale of houses on eight tracts--approximately 1700 homes in all. During the period at issue, some of the venture projects were conducted through a corporation controlled by real party and some through the corporate petitioner. The proceeding arose out of an action for accounting and to recover profits. Petitioners had accounted to real party for profits on sales from two tracts, but profits from the other tracts had been reinvested.

The appellate court rejected petitioners' contention that no discovery was proper until real party had first established his right to an accounting. The court said that only a prima facie showing of the right to an accounting is required, a requirement that had been met here by former Civ. Code §§ 2413, 2414 (now see Corp. Code § 16403). As the rights of joint venturers are the same as those of partners, the above partnership statutes applied to the facts at hand. In addition, the parties were fiduciaries, owing each other a duty of disclosure (94 Cal. App. 2d 8, 16-17) .

[b] Attorney for Partner

Wortham & Van Liew v. Superior Court (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 927, 233 Cal. Rptr. 725 , involved an action for dissolution and accounting of partnership, declaration of constructive trust, injunctive relief, and damages. In the course of that action, a discovery order was made compelling an attorney who had allegedly handled the transfer of partnership assets to a second partnership formed by defendant partners to answer questions regarding the transfer. Defendant partnership and partners sought a writ of prohibition to prevent enforcement of the discovery order. The writ was denied.

The appellate court first discussed the duties owed by partners and general partners to provide partnership information and to deal with one another fairly and in good faith. In the context of representation of a partnership, an attorney for a partnership represents all the partners as to matters of partnership business. All partners are entitled to a wide range of information, whether or not the information is generated under the aegis of the partnership's attorney. The court cited McCain v. Phoenix Resources, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 575, 581, 230 Cal. Rptr. 25 , for the proposition that the attorney-client privilege will not bar disclosure of matters related to partnership business simply because such business is conducted through a law firm. As applied to partnerships, the joint-client rule of Evid. Code § 962 requires disclosure by the attorney to all partners of any communication made to the attorney by one partner outside the presence of the other partners (188 Cal. App. 3d 927, 931-933) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.104

§ 170.104 Supporting Contention That Partner's Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Partnership Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partner's Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Partnership Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT BREACHED HIS/HER FIDUCIARY DUTY BY _____ [MISREPRESENTING or FAILING TO DISCLOSE] TO PLAINTIFF MATERIAL FACTS REGARDING THE VALUE OF [PLAINTIFF'S INTEREST IN] THE PARTNERSHIP AT THE TIME PLAINTIFF _____ [PURCHASED or SOLD] HIS/HER/DECEDENT'S INTEREST IN THE PARTNERSHIP.

Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner. The fiduciary duty of partners requires the highest good faith and full disclosure to another partner, or the personal representative of a deceased partner, on the sale of one's interest to another partner or the purchase of an interest from the other partner (Estate of Witlin (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 175-176, 147 Cal. Rptr. 723 ; Sibert v. Shaver (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 833, 245 P.2d 514).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a partner has breached his or her fiduciary duty by concealing or misrepresenting facts material to the sale of a partnership interest to or purchase of a partnership interest from another partner or the estate of a partner.

The points and authorities in this form should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partner's fiduciary duty extends to the purchase or sale of a partnership interest to or from another partner. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the particulars of the transaction in question and the material matters that were concealed or misrepresented. Counsel should note that the fiduciary duties, including disclosure, end after a contract has been formed for the purchase and sale of a partnership interest [see Stone v. Millstein (9th Cir. 1986) 804 F.2d 1434, 1437-1438 (applying California law; plaintiff had no claim based on offer and purchase of partnership assets by third party at substantial profit to partnership because offer was made after plaintiff agreed to sell his interest); see also Corp. Code § 16603(2) (partner's duty of loyalty under Corp. Code § 16404(b)(3) regarding noncompetition terminates upon partner's dissociation)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

The trial court in Estate of Witlin (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 147 Cal. Rptr. 723 , awarded the widow/executrix of a deceased partner the amount by which the decedent's interest in the partnership had been undervalued. At the time it offered plaintiff/executrix $24,600 per unit for decedent's interest, the partnership's management committee was negotiating to sell the hospital that was the partnership's main asset for a price that would amount to $93,000 per unit. No disclosure was ever made of the possibility of a sale. The sale eventually was consummated for the equivalent of $84,000 per unit.

The appellate court affirmed. The court said that throughout the transaction the management committee was bound to act in the highest good faith towards the executrix and was forbidden to obtain any advantage over her in the matter by, among other things, the slightest concealment. For authority, the court cited former Civ. Code § 2228 (but see Communication from California Law Revision Commission Concerning Assembly Bill 2652, comment to Prob. Code § 15003(b), repeal not intended to affect general fiduciary principles), former Corp. Code § 15020 [now see Corp. Code § 16403(c)] [see also Prob. Code § 15003(c) (trust principles of Prob. Code § 15000 et seq. may be applied to other relationships)], and Vai v. Bank of America (1961) 56 Cal. 2d, 329, 349-350 , 15 Cal. Rptr. 71, 364 P.2d 247 , a case in which the obligations of spouses with respect to a property settlement agreement are compared to those of partners on dissolution. The court described the management committee's negotiations with the widow for between $16,000-$24,600 per unit while negotiating with conglomerates for between $60,000-$93,500 per unit as talking out of both sides of their mouth and the antithesis of good faith. The court cited Arnold v. Arnold (1902) 137 Cal. 291, 296, 70 P. 23 , and Laux v. Freed (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 512, 522, 2 Cal. Rptr. 265, 348 P.2d 873 (discussed in § 170.100[3]), to the effect that the duty of good faith continued until consummation of the buy-out (83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 175-176) .

With respect to the proper basis for valuation, the court said that a valuation based on book value could not be a good faith valuation, since it did not take into account the goodwill of the business or its value as a going concern (83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 174) . Decedent died in July, 1971 (83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 171) ; negotiations with one conglomerate continued from April, 1971 until September, 1971; and the sale to another entity was consummated in July, 1972 (83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 176) . The sale was not too remote in time from the date of death to be a consideration in establishing the buy-out price (83 Cal. App. 3d 167, 174) .

In Sibert v. Shaver (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 833, 245 P.2d 514 , two men invented a potato slicer and began the process of patenting and marketing their invention. One of the men then died, and plaintiff, the decedent's widow, assigned the decedent's interest in the invention to the other man for a small sum, after the latter downplayed and misrepresented the value of the invention and its current state of development and manufacture. The surviving inventor ultimately made a great deal of money from the invention, and plaintiff eventually filed an action against the surviving inventor for rescission of the assignment. Judgement was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed on the grounds of the insufficiency of the proof, inconsistency of the findings, and lack of support for the conclusions of law. Defendant contended, among other things, that no partnership existed between him and the decedent (111 Cal. App. 2d 833, 838) .

The appellate court concluded, however, that the evidence clearly established that the two men invented the potato slicer together as partners, and that the survivor had misrepresented and concealed material facts relative to the partnership. The court then held that a surviving partner is a trustee of the trust inherited from the decedent partner, and of the assets of the partnership. As such, the survivor owes the maximum of good faith and personal confidence to the decedent and to the latter's beneficiaries. In all matters connected with this trust, the trustee is bound to act in the highest good faith toward the beneficiaries (111 Cal. App. 2d 833, 839-840) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fiduciary Duty Extends to Sale or Purchase of Interest to or From Another Partner or Estate of Deceased Partner

In Everest Investors 8 v. McNeil Partners (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31 , a real estate limited partnership merged into a new entity, becoming a wholly owned subsidiary of the new entity. The interests of the limited partners were liquidated or cashed out. The general partner, however, retained an equity interest in the post-merged entity, which then sold the assets of the limited partnership to third parties for more than the assets were valued for purposes of the cash-out and merger. The limited partners brought an action against the general partner for breach of fiduciary duty, unfair competition, and constructive fraud, claiming that the merger transaction harmed the limited partners by undervaluing their partnership interests or by depriving them of the future earnings and growth generated by the assets of the limited partnership. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants. The appellate court reversed, finding that the claims asserted by plaintiff limited partners were not derivative but were individual in nature (124 Cal. App. 4th 407) .

Although Wise Realty Co. v. Stewart (1915) 169 Cal. 176, 146 P. 534 , enunciates the rule set forth in the form, the partner who was guilty of failing to disclose the material change in conditions was not named as a defendant. Defendants were the third partner and the people to whom he sold the stock that was the major asset of the venture. Although the venture was carried out through corporations, the action was in equity for imposition of a constructive trust, and thus the corporate form was disregarded and the law of partnership and joint venture applied. Plaintiff had invested $3,333, part of $10,000 that was required as a deposit to secure the 35-year lease that was the main asset of the venture and which would earn $2.8 million over its term. After plaintiff departed for Alaska, negotiations with the school board/lessee continued and problems arose in getting a $25,000 bond that the board demanded. Plaintiff, communicating by wire, refused to advance additional funds. The nondefendant partner, R, who was plaintiff's friend and had introduced him to the project, became disenchanted with the project and thought it was about to fail. R and defendant partner agreed that R and plaintiff would sell their interests to defendant partner for $1000 with full repayment of their investments contingent on the success of the project. R wired plaintiff for authority to consummate that agreement, and plaintiff replied: "Accept any proposition that has any of our money." Later on the day this wire was received, the school board agreed to drop the requirement for the bond, considering the deposit to be sufficient, and the prospects of the venture improved markedly. Without informing plaintiff of this new development, R accepted the $1000. A new corporation was formed by defendant partner to which the lease was assigned and which assumed the obligation to construct the school. Later, unable to arrange construction financing, defendant partner sold his interest to the other defendants for $120,000, representing a profit after expenses of approximately $85,000. Plaintiff's shares of the original corporation had not been released by his attorneys. On his return from Alaska, plaintiff signed over his stock for the remainder of his $3,333 investment, with interest. This was done at a meeting with defendant partner, and without disclosure to plaintiff that defendant partner had resold the venture for the substantial profit. Judgment was for defendants in the action to impose a constructive trust. Plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court, in discussing the authority given by plaintiff to R in the wire, said the obligations of fair play and disclosure were imposed on all three associates by virtue of their relationship, yet the personal obligations of friendship and fidelity existed only between R and plaintiff (169 Cal. 176, 181) . The Court noted that plaintiff's reply, which was addressed only to R, was not an acceptance of defendant partner's offer, but gave authority to R, and that the trial court found plaintiff did not rely on the previous telegram from R, but understood the possibility that some way had been found to break the impasse in negotiations. The Court concluded that if there was any fraud, it was R's, not defendants' (169 Cal. 176, 186) . As to the claim that defendant partner had a duty to disclose to plaintiff the profits and resale before taking conveyance of the stock, the Court said no such duty was owed because plaintiff and defendant partner ceased to be partners when R consummated the sale and thereafter plaintiff and defendant partner could deal with each other at arms length (169 Cal. 176, 184) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.105

§ 170.105 Supporting Contention That Person Winding Up Partnership's Affairs as Personal or Legal Representative of Last Surviving Partner Has Same Fiduciary Duty As A Partner [Corp. Code § 16404(g); former Corp. Code § 15021(2)]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Person Winding Up Partnership's Affairs as Personal or Legal Representative of Last Surviving Partner Has Same Fiduciary Duty As A Partner [Corp. Code § 16404(g); former Corp. Code § 15021(2)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT[S], AS THE _____ [PERSONAL or LEGAL] REPRESENTATIVE[S] OF THE LAST SURVIVING PARTNER, _____ [name], IN WINDING UP THE AFFAIRS OF THE PARTNERSHIP, OWED TO THE OTHER PARTNERS AND THE PARTNERSHIP THE SAME FIDUCIARY DUTIES THAT WOULD BE OWED BY A PARTNER IN THE PARTNERSHIP.

A. Person Winding Up Partnership Affairs Owes Same Fiduciary Duty as Would a Partner. A person winding up the partnership affairs as the personal or legal representative of the last surviving partner owes the same duties to the partnership and the other partners that would exist if the person were a partner (Corp. Code § 16404(g) or former Corp. Code 15021(2)). [These fiduciary obligations specifically include the obligation to hold as trustee for the partnership any property, profit, or benefit derived by the partner in the winding up of the partnership business, and the obligation to refrain from dealing with the partnership in winding up the partnership business as or on behalf of a party having an adverse interest to the partnership (Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1), (2))].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person who is winding up a partnership business as personal or legal representative of the last surviving partner has the same fiduciary obligations that would exist if that person were actually a partner in the partnership [see Corp. Code § 16404(g) or former Corp. Code 15021(2)]. In a UPA'94 partnership, these duties specifically include the statutory obligation to hold partnership assets as trustee for the partnership [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1)] and to refrain from dealing with the partnership as or on behalf of a party having an interest adverse to the partnership [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(2)]. If either or both of these duties is at issue in a case involving a UPA'94 partnership, the second sentence of these points and authorities should be included.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the actions taken by the partner's representative violate his or her fiduciary duties. For example, they may be combined with the points and authorities in § 170.104 if the alleged violation involves a purchase or buyout of a deceased partner's interest. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the particulars of the transaction in question and the material matters that were concealed or mismanaged.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Winding Up Partnership Affairs Owes Same Fiduciary Duty as Would a Partner

Under both the UPA'94 [see Corp. Code § 16064(g)] and the pre-'97 Act [see former Corp. Code § 15021(2)], the legal or personal representatives of a deceased partner, when winding up the partnership affairs as representatives of the last surviving partner, owe the same fiduciary duties to the partnership and the other partners as would be owed by a partner.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.106

§ 170.106 Supporting Contention That General Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Limited Partnership and Other Partners Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That General Partners Owe Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care to Limited Partnership and Other Partners Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

GENERAL PARTNERS ARE FIDUCIARIES FOR EACH OTHER AND OWE TO THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP AND THE OTHER PARTNERS THE DUTIES OF LOYALTY AND CARE.

A. General Partners are Fiduciaries for Each Other. A general partner owes to the limited partnership and the other partners the duties of loyalty and care (Corp. Code § 15904.08).

B. General Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs. The fiduciary obligations of partners continue until the partnership is dissolved and the affairs of the partnership are wound up (see Corp. Code § 15904.08(b), (c)).

[Optional] C. Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation. Upon a person's dissociation as a general partner, the person's duty of loyalty pursuant to Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)(1), (2) and duty of care under Corp. Code § 15904.08(c) continue with regard to matters arising and events occurring before the person's dissociation as a general partner (Corp. Code § 15906.05(a)(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the general proposition that a general partner owes the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care to the limited partnership and the other partners.

This form should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the relation of partners is fiduciary. It may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Paragraph A may be used alone to set forth the general fiduciary obligations of the general partners to the limited partnership and the other partners. Optional Paragraph B may be used to establish that the fiduciary obligation continues through dissolution and winding up of the partnership affairs. Optional Paragraph C may be used to establish that the duties of loyalty and care continue after a partner's dissociation with respect to matters arising before the dissociation.

The enumeration of the fiduciary duties of the general partners in a limited partnership under the ULPA '08 was derived from the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94) [see Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, § 29.08 (LexisNexis)]. For points and authorities drafted under the applicable provisions of UPA '94 [see Corp. Code § 16404], see § 170.100.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partners are Fiduciaries for Each Other

Corp. Code § 15904.08(a) provides that a general partner owes the fiduciary duties of loyalty and care, as specified in Corp. Code § 15904.08(b) and (c), to the limited partnership and the other partners. These duties must be discharged consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing [Corp. Code § 15904.08(d)].

Under Corp. Code § 15904.08(b) , a general partner's duty of loyalty to the limited partnership and the other partners is limited to the following:

- To account to the limited partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by the general partner in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities or derived from a use by the general partner of limited partnership property, including the appropriation of a limited partnership opportunity.

- To refrain from dealing with the limited partnership in the conduct or winding up of the limited partnership's activities as or on behalf of a party having an interest adverse to the limited partnership.

- To refrain from competing with the limited partnership in the conduct or winding up of the limited partnership's activities.

Corp. Code § 15904.08(c) provides that a general partner's duty of care to the limited partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law.

[b] General Partners Remain Fiduciaries Through Dissolution and Winding Up of Partnership Affairs

Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)(1) , discussed in [a], above, provides that a general partners's duty of loyalty requires the partner to account to the partnership and hold property as trustee in the conduct or winding up of the partnership business. Similarly, Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)(2), discussed in [1], above, provides that a general partner's duty of loyalty requires the partner to refrain from dealing with the partnership in the conduct or winding up of the partnership business as a party with an adverse interest. Finally, Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)(3), discussed in [a], above, provides that a general partner's duty of loyalty requires the partner to refrain from competing with the partnership in the conduct or winding up of the partnership's activities.

[c] Fiduciary Duties of Loyalty and Care Continue After Dissociation

With respect to matters arising and events occurring before a general partner's dissociation, the partner's duties of loyalty [see Corp. Code § 15904.08(b)] and care [Corp. Code § 15904.08(c)] as to the conduct of the partnership business are generally continued after dissociation [Corp. Code § 15906.05(a)(3].

46 of 147 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.107-170.119

[Reserved]

§§ 170.107[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.120

§ 170.120 Opposing Contention That Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty--Partner's Actions Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partner's Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 16404]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty--Partner's Actions Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partner's Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 16404]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT'S ACT[S] DID NOT CONSTITUTE A BREACH OF DEFENDANT'S FIDUCIARY DUTIES, AS A PARTNER OF _____ [name of partnership], TO THE _____ [PARTNERSHIP and/or OTHER PARTNERS OF THAT PARTNERSHIP].

[EITHER]

A. Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Due Care. A partner's duty of due care to the partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or knowing violation of law (Corp. Code § 16404(c)).

[AND/OR]

B. Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties. A partner is required to discharge his or her duties to the partnership and the other partners under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 and the partnership agreement and to exercise his or her rights consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing (Corp. Code § 16404(d)).

[AND/OR]

C. Transaction Furthering Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty. A partner does not violate his or her fiduciary obligations under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 merely because the partner's conduct further's the partner's own interest. (Corp. Code § 16404(e)).

[AND/OR]

D. Loan of Money to or Transaction of Business With Partnership Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty. A partner may lend money to and transact other business with the partnership, and as to each loan or transaction the rights and obligations of the partner regarding performance or enforcement are the same as those of a person who is not a partner, subject to other applicable law (Corp. Code § 16404(f)).

[AND/OR]

E. Partner May Purchase Partnership Property At Foreclosure Sale. It is not a breach of fiduciary duty for a partner to bid on and purchase partnership real property at a foreclosure sale which takes place after the other partners failed to fulfill their obligation to make mortgage payments on the property (Jones v. Wagner (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 466, 473-474, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669).

[AND/OR]

F. Partner Does Not Breach Fiduciary Duty by Paying Undisputed Partnership Debt. It is not a breach of fiduciary duty for a partner to pay an undisputed debt of the partnership, rather than attempting to extract a discount on a partnership loan by refusing to pay and putting the creditor to the expense and risk of a lawsuit to collect the amount owed. Equity will not recognize as a partnership opportunity the possibility of leveraging a discount from a lender by the threat of nonpayment (AB Group v. Wertin (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652).

[AND/OR]

G. Partner May Purchase Partnership Debt. Partners may agree among themselves that they may purchase partnership debts at full value, even if that means the purchasing partner will obtain grace and favor with the lender and that goodwill helps the purchasing partner with his or her own outside business dealings (AB Group v. Wertin (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652).

[AND/OR]

H. Partner Need Not Bear Disproportionate Burden of Partnership Obligation. A partner may withdraw his or her individual property as security for a partnership obligation and substitute partnership property as security in order to avoid bearing the entire loss on enforcement of the partnership obligation (Bowman v. Sears (1923) 63 Cal. App. 235, 253, 218 P. 489).

[AND/OR]

I. Creditor Partner May Use Partnership Funds to Pay Personal Debts. If the partnership owes the partner more than he or she withdraws, no breach of fiduciary duty arises from payment of a partner's personal obligations with partnership funds (Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 328-329, 186 P.2d 197).

[AND/OR]

J. Lessor Partner May Retain Improvements Financed by Partnership When Authorized by Agreement. When an agreement between a lessor partner and the lessee partnership so provides, the lessor partner, on termination of the lease, may retain improvements to the property made with partnership funds (Speka v. Speka (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 181, 188-189, 268 P.2d 129).

[AND/OR]

K. Partner's Interest in Land Was Not Adverse to Interests of Partnership. If a higher price could be obtained in eminent domain proceedings if title to all lands sought by the public entity, including those of the partnership, were in one name, a partner does not breach his or her fiduciary duty to the partnership by taking title to lands of third parties under pooling agreements from which he or she does not profit, or by making profits on land purchased with personal funds, if certain showings are not made. Specifically, there is no breach if there is no showing that the partner's interests are adverse to those of the partnership, or that the partner devoted so much time to the other interests that he or she was prevented from giving the partnership business all the attention that would be advantageous to it (Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 328-329, 186 P.2d 197).

[AND/OR]

L. Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Copartner. The fiduciary relation is confined to the business of the partnership, and thus it is not a breach of fiduciary duty for one partner, with his or her individual funds, to purchase a note of or judgment against a copartner or to enforce such a judgment against the partnership interest of the debtor partner (In re Levy & Schwab (1900) 130 Cal. 282, 284, 62 P. 520 ; McKenzie v. Dickinson (1872) 43 Cal. 119, 133-135) .

[AND/OR]

M. Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Partnership. A partner may purchase a judgment against the partnership, and may enforce the judgment against the partnership if he or she does not hold sufficient partnership assets to satisfy the judgment (see Bradbury v. Barnes (1861) 19 Cal. 120, 123-124) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a partner breached his or her fiduciary duties. The general ground for opposition is that the actions of the defendant partner(s) did not amount to a breach of fiduciary duty to the partnership or the other partner(s).

Corp. Code § 16404 (UPA'94) sets forth a partner's duties of loyalty and care to the partnership and the other partners. The pre-'97 Act contained only passing references to these matters, while the cases decided under that act articulated the scope of fiduciary duties. The UPA'94 rules are considerably more specific. Since the UPA'94 fiduciary duty rules are largely codifications of cases decided prior to its enactment, cases decided under the pre-'97 Act are included here. However, to the extent to which a case decided under pre-1997 law imposes a higher level of loyalty or care, it may be in conflict with the specific provisions of UPA'94. Note also that because Corp. Code § 16404, the principal UPA'94 section delineating the fiduciary duties of the partners, is considerably more detailed than was former Corp. Code § 15021, the predecessor provision in the pre-'97 Act, cases decided under the pre-'97 Act need to be examined carefully to determine if their principles have been codified in UPA'94.

Alternative Paragraphs A through N provide language relating to specific activities by one or more partners:

- Alternative Paragraph A should be used if the partnership is a UPA'94 partnership, the acts complained of occurred in the conduct and/or winding up of the partnership's business, and defendant is contending that those acts did not constitute gross negligence, reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law. This alternative may be appropriate, for example, when the defendant contend that he or she is guilty, at worst, of bad business judgment or ordinary negligence that does not rise to the level of conduct proscribed by the UPA'94. This alternative should be combined with points and authorities supporting the position that the specific conduct complained of is, at worst, simply bad business judgment or ordinary negligence.

- Alternative Paragraph B should be used if the partnership is a UPA'94 partnership and the defendant is contending that all his or her actions in relation to the partnership are consistent with his or her general duty of good faith and fair dealing to the partnership and the other partners. This alternative should be combined with other alternatives relevant to the specific acts in question.

- Alternative Paragraph C should be used if the partnership is a UPA'94 partnership and the acts in question arguably were in furtherance of the defendant's own interest. This alternative should be combined with other alternatives relevant to the specific acts in question, and demonstrating that in performing these acts the defendant did not violate his or her fundamental duty of loyalty to the partnership as specified in Corp. Code § 16404(a) -- that is, that he or she did not (1) personally derive profit, property, or other benefit from his or her conduct or winding up of the partnership business, or from his or her use of partnership property or information, or appropriate a partnership opportunity; (2) deal with the partnership as or on behalf of a party having an interest adverse to the partnership; or (3) compete with the partnership.

- Alternative Paragraph D should be used if the partnership is a UPA'94 partnership, the acts in question involve a loan of money or the transaction of business with the partnership, and the plaintiff is seeking to impose fiduciary standards on the defendant in connection with those transactions.

- Alternative Paragraph E should be used when the partner has purchased partnership property at a foreclosure sale after the other partners failed to fulfill their obligations to make mortgage payments on the property.

- Alternative Paragraph F should be used when the claim for breach of fiduciary duty is based on a partner's payment of a lawful and undisputed partnership debt.

- Alternative Paragraph G should be used when the partner has purchased partnership debt.

- Alternative Paragraph H may be used to establish that a partner has the right to substitute partnership property in place of his or her individual property as security for a partnership debt.

- Alternative Paragraph I may be used to establish that if the partnership owed the particular partner more money than is withdrawn by that partner, no breach of fiduciary duty arises from payment of the partner's personal obligation with partnership funds.

- Alternative Paragraph J sets forth the right of a lessor partner, with the consent of the partnership and pursuant to an agreement, to retain improvements made by the partnership on real property leased to the partnership.

- Alternative Paragraph K sets forth an example of a partner's personal dealing in an area related to the partnership's interests which was not in fact adverse. The example involves a partner taking title to land that could be obtained in an eminent domain proceeding.

- Alternative Paragraph L should be used when the partner has purchased or enforced a note of or judgment against another partner.

- Alternative Paragraph M should be used when the partner has purchased or enforced a note of or judgment against the partnership.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partner's acts do not amount to breach of fiduciary duty. These issues are most likely to arise in a motion for summary judgment or at trial because whether or not a particular action by a partner is or is not a breach of fiduciary duty will depend on the facts of the particular situation. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the acts of the partner at issue, the interests of the partnership, any disclosures to or agreements with the other partners, whether the partner held partnership funds and if so, how much, when he or she did the acts in question, or whether and to what extent the partnership was indebted to the partner at the time of the draws or acts in question. Specific arguments relative to some of the alternatives included in this form are noted in § 170.12[2][a]

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Due Care

Corp. Code § 16404(c) specifically limits the partner's duty of due care in the conduct and winding up of the partnership to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or knowing violation of law. Note that UPA'94 does not permit the partnership agreement to "unreasonably" reduce the duty of due care [Corp. Code § 16103(b)(4)], thereby implying that restrictions or elaborations defining the duty of due care may be upheld if determined to be "reasonable."

[b] Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties

Corp. Code § 16404(d) states that a partner is required to discharge his or her duties to the partnership and the other partners under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 and the partnership agreement and to exercise his or her rights consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing. By implication, therefore, if a partner can demonstrate that his or her acts were consistent with this obligation of good faith and fair dealing, no violation of fiduciary duty has occurred. UPA'94 does not further define the obligation of good faith and fair dealing in the partnership context, but presumably it would be determined with reference to the partner's general fiduciary duties under Corp. Code § 16404, other provisions of UPA'94, and the general case law on the duty of good faith and fair dealing. Note that UPA'94 also allows the partners broad latitude to define the duty of good faith and fair dealing in the partnership agreement, although that duty cannot be waived or eliminated entirely [Corp. Code § 16103(b)(5)].

[c] Transaction Furthering Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

Corp. Code § 16404(e) states that a partner does not violate his or her fiduciary obligations under the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 merely because the partner's conduct further's the partner's own interest. It appears, rather, that the existence or nonexistence of a breach of fiduciary duty must be determined with respect to the statutory duties of loyalty and due care. The duty of due care is discussed in [a], above. The duty of loyalty requires that partners must (1) account to the partnership and hold as trustee for it any property, profit, or benefit derived by the partner in the conduct and winding up of the partnership business or derived from a use by the partner of partnership property or information, including the appropriation of a partnership opportunity [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1)]; (2) refrain from dealing with the partnership in the conduct or winding up of the partnership business as or on behalf of a party having an interest adverse to the partnership [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(2)]; and (3) refrain from competing with the partnership in the conduct of the partnership business prior to the dissolution of the partnership [Corp. Code § 16404(b)(3)]. Note that while the UPA'94 does not permit the partnership to waive the duty of loyalty in the partnership agreement, it does allow the partnership agreement to identify specific types or categories of activities that do not violate that duty and gives all the partners, or a number or percentage specified in the partnership agreement, authority to ratify a specific act or transaction that otherwise would violate the duty after full disclosure of all the material facts, as long as the partnership agreement provisions or ratification are not manifestly unreasonable [Corp. Code § 16103(b)(3)]. Thus, the partnership agreement must always be examined to determine whether it deals directly or indirectly with the issue of fiduciary duty.

[d] Loan of Money to or Transaction of Business With Partnership Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

Corp. Code § 16404(f) provides that a partner may lend money to and transact other business with the partnership, and as to each loan or transaction the rights and obligations of the partner regarding performance or enforcement are the same as those of a person who is not a partner, subject to other applicable law. Thus, as to such transactions, the fiduciary standards that govern the dealings among the partners and the partnership are inapplicable.

[e] Partner May Purchase Partnership Property At Foreclosure Sale

Jones v. Wagner (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 466, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669 was an action for breach of contract and constructive fraud by partners who were liable on the mortgage of a townhouse against other partners who provided the down payment on the townhouse. The parties had purchased a beachfront townhouse that subsequently dropped in value. Plaintiffs stopped making mortgage payments, and defendants refused to pay the delinquent installments. The bank foreclosed on the property and defendants' trusts purchased the townhouse at the foreclosure sale. Defendants filed a cross-complaint. The trial court ordered dissolution of the partnership and made a monetary award for defendants on their cross-complaint. Plaintiffs appealed, claiming the trial court erred in failing to find constructive fraud.

The appellate court affirmed. It stated that there were unquestionably fiduciary duties among the partners, citing Corp. Code § 16404. However, there was no legal or fiduciary obligation for defendants to use partnership funds to pay the individual liability of plaintiffs for plaintiffs' agreed capital contribution to the partnership. Further, defendants had no duty to prevent the partnership property from going into foreclosure. Finally, defendants were entitled to bid on and buy the property at the foreclosure sale through their pension trust. Substantial evidence supported the trial court's decision that there was no breach of any duty by defendants that would justify an award of damages for constructive fraud (90

Cal. App. 4th 466, 473-474) .

[f] Partner Does Not Breach Fiduciary Duty by Paying Undisputed Partnership Debt

In AB Group v. Wertin (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652 , three individuals formed a real estate development partnership and obtained multimillion dollar loans from a bank under their individual personal guarantees. Subsequently the Southern California real estate market collapsed. The value of the partnership assets was substantially reduced and the partnership defaulted on its loan payments. One of the partners advocated withholding payments on the partnership's debt during negotiations with the bank as a tactic to attempt to leverage a discount from the bank. The other two partners refused to adopt this approach and made interest payments totaling about $740,000 to the bank. Under the partnership agreement, whenever one partner made a payment to the bank pursuant to a lender guarantee, the other partner was obligated to make an equal payment, and failure to do so was a default under the partnership agreement. The dissenting partner did not make any payment. Ultimately, the other two partners sued the dissenting partner for, among other things, partnership dissolution and accounting. In response, the dissenting partner filed a cross-complaint which alleged breach of fiduciary duty based on the payments made by the other two partners to the bank (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1025-1026) .

A referee was appointed to hear the accounting and dissolution phase of the case. During the proceedings before the referee, the dissenting partner sought to introduce evidence which, he contended, would have shown that the other two partners obtained discounts on debts unrelated to the partnership as a result of the interest payments made on the partnership debt. The referee refused to admit the proffered evidence, remarking that he could not "accept the argument that there is a breach of fiduciary duty for paying a legal debt," and accordingly found that all payments made by the plaintiffs were proper. The referee credited the interest payments to the capital accounts of the two partners who had made the payments, found that the third (dissenting) partner was fully liable to the other two partners for one-half the unsecured debt owed by the partnership, and declared that the third partner had breached the partnership agreement by failing to make required capital contributions. The result was a finding that the defendant owed the other two partners $6.7 million plus interest. The trial court adopted the referee's findings, stating that defendant could hardly complain that plaintiffs had committed the "outrageous and audacious act of paying off his debt" (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1027) .

The appellate court agreed with the referee and the trial court. The court noted that "the centerpiece of [defendant's] appeal is the idea that [the other partners] 'advanced their own interests at the expense of the partnership' when they made interest payments on the loans to the partnership." However, the court found that what the defendant was really saying was that "[b]y the simple act of not paying a lawful debt, a debtor can force a discount from a creditor because of the risks and collection expenses associated with litigation ... [t]hus deconstructed, [defendant's] argument plainly rests on the premise that in partnership matters it is ok -- and sometimes even required -- not to pay one's debts" (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1028 , italics in original). The court held that equity would not recognize any such duty, distinguishing between the situation in which a partnership simply buys up its own obligation at a discounted present value and one in which it tries to create such a discount by a bad faith refusal to pay a loan (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1029-1030) . It concluded that for purposes of determining whether or not a breach of fiduciary duty has occurred, "[e]quity will not recognize as a partnership opportunity the possibility of leveraging a discount from a lender by the threat of nonpayment" (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040) .

[g] Partner May Purchase Partnership Debt

The underlying facts in AB Group v. Wertin (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652 are discussed in [f], above. In that case, during the discovery phase of the litigation, the parties entered into two "pre-workout" agreements that provided, among other things, that each party had the right to "negotiate various courses of action with any other Party." The pre-workout agreements also contemplated the possibility of bilateral or side agreements on "individual issues" between various of the parties, acknowledged the fact that each of the parties might have "other," independent loans with the bank, and specifically provided that each party would have the right to negotiate with the bank regarding those loans. Furthermore, under the terms of these agreements, any evidence in connection with the workout discussions could not be used for any purpose whatsoever in any judicial proceeding. Subsequently, the parties discussed with the bank the purchase of the outstanding unsecured debt of the partnership. The end result was that one of the plaintiff partners purchased the debt from the bank for its undiscounted face value (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1026) .

In addition to his other arguments, defendant claimed that the partner who purchased the partnership's debt from the bank may have co-opted a partnership opportunity when he purchased that unsecured debt. Because the purchase occurred after trial commenced, defendant claimed it was error for the referee and trial court not to allow further discovery into the issue (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1034) . In rejecting this contention, the appellate court emphasized the fact that the partners, by agreement, gave themselves the right to keep whatever benefits concerning their own loans might come their way as a result of purchasing the partnership debt at face value (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1034) . Defendant's contention that the parties could not legally have agreed to such an arrangement because it violated their fiduciary duties to one another was rejected as equally unpersuasive (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1036) . The court therefore held that partners may agree among themselves that they may purchase partnership debts at full value, even if that means the purchasing partner will obtain grace and favor with the lender and that goodwill helps the purchasing partner with his or her own outside business dealings (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1040) . However, the court expressly declined to deal with the situation in which partners have not modified by agreement fiduciary duties which they might otherwise have owed each other (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1034) , or the restrictions that California law might place on partners who chose to structure their relationship in nontraditional ways (59 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1037) .

[h] Partner Need Not Bear Disproportionate Burden of Partnership Obligation

Bowman v. Sears (1923) 63 Cal. App. 235, 218 P. 489 , was an action by plaintiff partner to foreclose a note and chattel mortgage on partnership property. Plaintiff and the named defendant were husband and wife, as well as partners. The original note, from the partnership to a bank, was secured by a pledge of defendant's individual stock. Fearing the partnership would not be able to pay the note and that he would lose his stock, defendants executed a renewal note secured by a chattel mortgage on partnership property. Later, defendant made a gift to plaintiff of sufficient funds for her to pay the principal and interest then owing on the note. In return for payment, the bank assigned to her the note and chattel mortgage and released the pledged stock. Other defendants claimed the note had been extinguished because the funds with which it was purchased were the property of the named defendant and he was one of the makers of the note. The trial court found the funds were plaintiff's because the gift was completed before the bank was paid, and entered judgment of foreclosure. Defendants appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. After discussing the gift and assignment, the court went on to consider the claim that the plaintiff and the named defendant were guilty of fraud. The court said that defendant never sought to evade payment of his share of the obligation, and that he had the right to prevent his separate property from bearing the entire burden of the partnership debt (63 Cal. App. 235, 252-253) .

[i] Creditor Partner May Use Partnership Funds to Pay Personal Debts

Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 186 P.2d 197 , was an action to set aside a prior agreement settling partnership accounts and for an accounting. The partnership was composed of four partners: plaintiff, who owed a one-fifth interest, defendant L, who owed two-fifths and was the husband of defendant G who owed a one-fifth interest, and defendant M, who held a one-fifth interest. Plaintiff sought to have the prior agreement set aside on numerous grounds, including fraud and mistake, that defendants L and G had improperly taken salaries and applied partnership funds to their personal transactions, and that certain real property in L's name was partnership property, profits from the condemnation of which should have been credited to the partnership. The partnership was formed in 1922 to develop carob trees and to subdivide and sell land. At one time the partnership owned 1175 acres of land, most of which were the subject of eminent domain proceedings by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California ("the water district") in 1936 when plaintiff gave notice of dissolution and demanded the accounting that gave rise to the agreement now sought to be set aside. All the partnership real property was held in name of defendant L. When it became known that the water district wanted a large tract of land, including the partnership land, for a reservoir, someone conceived the idea that a better price could be obtained if title was vested in one person. In accordance with this scheme, defendant L took title to additional acreage under pooling agreements with other land owners, the profits on eminent domain to be returned to the original owners. Defendant L also had acquired land in his own name in the area sought to be condemned. Loans on some of these latter properties were paid with partnership funds, but at a time when substantial amounts of salary and commissions were unpaid and owing from the partnership to defendant. The liability of the partnership to him was always decreased by the amounts advanced by the partnership for his personal transactions. Judgment was for defendants and plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. The court's discussion regarding defendants' rights to salaries and commissions is discussed in § 170.130[3]. The court's discussion regarding defendants' purchase of land in the neighborhood of the partnership land and his interests in the pooling agreements are discussed in [k], below. Quoting from Dennis v. Gordon (1912) 163 Cal. 427, 125 P. 1063 , as to the loyalties owed to the partnership, the court noted that the partnership was almost continually indebted to defendant and that the proceeds of at least one bank loan to the defendant secured by assets of the partnership were paid to the partnership. It characterized the accounting methods as awkward and unusual, but concluded that in view of the indebtedness of the partnership to defendant, the fact that all personal expenditures were credited against salary owed, and the fact that the partnership suffered no injury on account of these transactions, the funds were to be considered defendant's funds and not the partnership's (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 324-325) . Similarly, taxes paid by the partnership on defendant's individual property were deducted from sums owed to defendant by the partnership, so there was no irregularity (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 326) .

[j] Lessor Partner May Retain Improvements Financed by Partnership When Authorized by Agreement

Speka v. Speka (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 181, 268 P.2d 129 , was an action for dissolution of partnership, accounting, and contribution. Plaintiff had run a bakery business as a sole proprietorship for eight years before giving his brother, defendant, the funds to purchase a half interest in the business. Sometime after defendant became a partner, plaintiff purchased with his individual funds the real property out of which the bakery operated and leased it to the partnership. Defendant was one of the parties who executed the lease on behalf of the partnership. The lease provided that all improvements would become property of the lessor and would be surrendered at the termination of the lease. Improvements were made to the premises with partnership funds. Defendant knew of, consented to, and designed some of the improvements. The partnership amortized the value of the improvements on its books. Disagreements arose between the brothers when the business began losing money and defendant, who had always taken his share of profits, refused to make contributions for losses. Plaintiff gave notice of dissolution in accordance with the terms of the partnership agreement and also terminated the lease for nonpayment of one year's rent. Judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The appellate court modified the judgment by decreasing the amount found owing from defendant to plaintiff on the accounting in recognition of certain taxes paid by defendant and in all other respects affirmed. Defendant contended that since the improvements to the real property were made with partnership funds, he was entitled to credit for half their value. The court set forth the general rule stated in Minikin v. Hendrix (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 338, 101 P.2d 473 , that when improvements purchased with partnership funds are placed on realty owned by one of the partners who is compensated by the partnership for the use thereof, and no agreement has been entered into by the partners respecting the disposition of the improvements in the event of dissolution, the improvements become a partnership asset and the nonlandowning partner is entitled to a proportionate share of their value (124 Cal. App. 2d 181, 187-188) . However, the agreement and lease in this case that provided otherwise were upheld. The court found no unfair advantage had been taken of defendant in the terms of the lease. No unjust enrichment was involved. Defendant contended the value of the improvements were profits within the meaning of former Corp. Code § 15021 [now see Corp. Code § 16404] for which plaintiff was accountable to the firm. The court said that former Corp. Code § 15021 refers to profits taken by one partner without the consent of the other partner, and that here consent was given in the lease (124 Cal. App. 2d 181, 188-189) .

[k] Partner's Interest in Land Was Not Adverse to Interests of Partnership

The facts and procedural background of Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 186 P.2d 197 , are discussed in [i], above. The appellate court quoted from Dennis v. Gordon (1912) 163 Cal. 427, 125 P. 1063 , as to the loyalties owed to the partnership in terms of interest and a partner's continuing duty to devote to the partnership all the attention advantageous to it. The court noted that in this case the partnership was almost continually indebted to defendant and that there was no evidence that the partnership either desired or could afford to purchase additional land in the area. Thus, since the partnership suffered no injury on account of defendant's purchase of land for himself individually in the area of the partnership, the purchase was not adverse to the partnership (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 324-325) .

Plaintiff also claimed for the partnership the profits made by defendant on the sale of his individually owned land, the land defendant held under the pooling agreements, and the profits from the sale of those lands. The court held that a partner may engage in business other than that of the partnership when the other business does not give that partner an interest adverse to the partnership nor prevent him or her from giving its business all the attention that would be advantageous to it. Since there was no evidence of injury to the partnership in this case, the profits made by defendant L on the land he purchased for himself were his own to retain. Both the pooling agreements and the purchase of the land individually by defendant L were in furtherance of the plan, from which the partnership benefitted, to put title to as much of the land sought by the water district as possible in one name (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 329) . Findings indicated that land purchased by the partnership for $50 per acre was purchased by the water district at $700 per acre (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 321) . Since defendant L's act of taking title to the land under the pooling agreements was not adverse to the partnership but in fact enabled it to get a higher price for its land, the partnership had no claim on either the third parties' land or their profits (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 329) .

[l] Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Copartner

In re Levy & Schwab (1900) 130 Cal. 282, 62 P. 520 , arose out of the insolvency proceeding of a partnership and its individual partners instituted by creditors. At the public auction of the firm's assets, the assignee had allowed one partner to purchase the firm's accounts receivable from the other partner. The purchaser partner collected a pro rata share of the receivable from the estate of the debtor partner. A creditor raised objections to the account of the assignee, claiming that the dividend from the debtor partner's estate should have been paid to the firm, not to the purchaser partner. The dividend to the purchaser partner was allowed, and the creditor appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court noted that there was no showing that the sale had been other than fair and open, nor was there any claim of fraud on the purchaser's part. The Court noted that the purchase price had been credited to the firm's account and distributed to its creditors. The money with which the purchase was made was no part of the insolvency estate of the purchaser partner (130 Cal. 282, 284) .

McKenzie v. Dickinson (1872) 43 Cal. 119 , was an action by one former partner against another to collect $3,090 paid to satisfy a note ("the Burns note") and judgment on the note against defendant. A cross complaint alleged the firm had never been dissolved, and that plaintiff had purchased another note and judgment against defendant ("the Lane note") and wrongfully caused execution of that note against defendant's share of partnership funds that were in plaintiff's possession. The trial court found that the Burns note had been made by the defendant partner in the name of the firm but in fact had been given for his personal debt (43 Cal. 119, 128-129) , that the firm had been dissolved and plaintiff left to collect its assets and apply them to pay its debts and the obligation owing by the firm to plaintiff (43 Cal. 119, 133) , and that plaintiff did in fact purchase the Lane note and judgment and cause execution of it against defendant's share of the partnership assets that were in plaintiff's possession, but that those assets did not consist of cash (43 Cal. 119, 131-132) . Judgment was for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court said no principle of equity prohibits one partner from purchasing with his or her own funds a judgment or other evidence of indebtedness, even against one who may be his or her own partner at the time, or prohibits enforcement and collection by levy and sale of the debtor partner's interest in the partnership. The fiduciary duties of partners refer only to the business in which the partnership is engaged (43 Cal. 119, 133-135) .

[m] Partner May Purchase Judgment Against Partnership

Bradbury v. Barnes (1861) 19 Cal. 120 , was an action for dissolution and accounting. The trial court found that defendant had purchased three judgments against the firm and a certificate of sale resulting from a tax sale of the partnership property. These totaled approximately $7,440. Executions had been made under all three judgments, and the sheriff had issued certificates, although deeds had not yet been given. The trial court also found that defendant had retained $7,074 of proceeds from certain partnership sales in the ordinary course of its business. Judgment was for cancellation of the sheriff's certificates, for an accounting in which defendant was to be charged with the $7,074 and credited with the sums paid for the judgment and tax certificate, and contained instructions for proceeding with the sheriff's sales. Defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed, modifying only certain particulars in regard to the sheriff's sale, which it deemed premature. The Court first discussed the right of a partner to purchase with his or her own funds and at public sale a copartner's interest in the partnership if there are no circumstances of fraud or other trust relation preventing it. The fact that a sheriff's sale is public and open is prima facie evidence that no unfair advantage is taken. However, the Court stated that this situation differed because defendant made the purchases at a time when he had partnership funds in his possession. He could have paid the judgments and demanded contribution from the other partners, but not having proceeded that way, equity required that he be deemed to have purchased the judgment on behalf of the partnership (19 Cal. 120, 123-124) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.121

§ 170.121 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Breached Fiduciary Duty--No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Former Partner Who Is Now Only Secured Party

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Breached Fiduciary Duty--No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Former Partner Who Is Now Only Secured Party

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT DOES NOT OWE PLAINTIFF ANY FIDUCIARY DUTY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS NO LONGER A PARTNER BUT ONLY A SECURED PARTY.

No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Secured Party. When a partner has sold his or her interest in the partnership and that partnership interest is pledged as collateral to secure payment of the sales price, no fiduciary duty is owed to the former partner[, although the former partner may have a cause of action based on statutory, contractual, or common law rights for impairment of the value of his or her security interest] (Baldwin v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 406, 145 Cal. Rptr. 406 ; see Corp. Code § 16603(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a fiduciary duty is owed to a former partner who only retains a security interest in the partnership interest that was sold.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the parties' relations are no longer as fiduciaries. For example, this issue may be raised by demurrer. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the date of sale of the partnership interest and that the sale was of all of the creditor's interest in the partnership, and should attach any documentary evidence of sale, such as the agreement of sale, the note, and the security agreement.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fiduciary Duty Is Owed to Secured Party

Baldwin v. Marina City Properties, Inc*. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 145 Cal. Rptr. 406* , was an action by former limited partners against the general partner and the new limited partner to whom they had sold their interests. Plaintiffs' limited partnership interests had represented eleven percent of the partnership equity. The sale of their interests were evidenced by notes and security agreements by which the interests sold were pledged as collateral for repayment of the sales price. Defendant purchaser would have no personal liability on default, and plaintiffs' sole recourse would be to the partnership interests. Shortly after the sale of plaintiffs' interests, the general partner made a capital call. None of the limited partners responded to the capital call, so the general partner contributed $500,000. That contribution increased the general partner's interest to 90 percent of the partnership equity and decreased the collateral to a one-percent share of the equity. Defendant purchaser had defaulted prior to the institution of the action and had agreed to reconvey the collateral security, but no allegation was made that the security had actually been reconveyed. Plaintiffs sought damages for breach of fiduciary duty and interference with prospective advantage from the general partner and for conspiracy to convert their security interest from all defendants. Plaintiffs claimed that the general partner's contribution amounted to self-dealing because there were other sources of funds available to the partnership, specifically notes receivable from the parent corporation of the general partner. Judgment for defendants was entered after demurrers were sustained without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed.

The appellate court reversed to allow amendment to set forth a cause of action for impairment of security interest (79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 414-415) . In regard to the cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty, the court said that one's status as a former partner or as a secured party is not sufficient to give rise to a fiduciary duty, although there may be a statutory, contractual, or common law right not to have the value of one's security interest impaired (79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 406) . Concerning the cause of action for interference, the complaint was fatally defective in its lack of a sufficient, nonconclusionary allegation that the value of plaintiffs' security interest had been impaired. The fact that the proportionate percentage share represented by the collateral had decreased did not mean that the collateral had a lower value or that its value had been impaired (79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 407) . In any action for damages for impairment of their security interest, plaintiffs' damages would be limited to the impairment of the value of the security, but in no event a sum greater than the unpaid balance due on the secured indebtedness plus collection costs. Further, they would be required by the California Commercial Code to resell the collateral and to turn any excess proceeds over to the debtor (79 Cal. App. 3d 393, 412-413) .

Corp. Code § 16603(3) provides that upon a partner's dissociation, the partner's duties of loyalty and due care continue only with regard to matters arising and events occurring before the partner's dissociation.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.122

§ 170.122 Opposing Contention That General Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty Under ULPA '08--Partner's Action Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partners' Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That General Partner Breached Fiduciary Duty Under ULPA '08--Partner's Action Did Not Amount to a Breach of Partners' Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty or Care [Corp. Code § 15904.08]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACT[S] OF DEFENDANT _____ [name of general partner] DID NOT CONSTITUTE A BREACH OF DEFENDANT'S FIDUCIARY DUTIES, AS A GENERAL PARTNER OF _____ [name of limited partnership], TO THE _____ [PARTNERSHIP and/or OTHER PARTNERS OF THAT PARTNERSHIP].

[EITHER]

A. General Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care. A general partner's duty of care to the limited partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law (Corp. Code § 15904.08(c)).

[AND/OR]

B. Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties. A general partner is required to discharge the duties to the partnership and the other partners under the ULPA '08 and the partnership agreement, and to exercise any rights consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing ( Corp. Code § 15904.08(d)).

[AND/OR]

C. Transaction Furthering General Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty. A general partner does not violate a duty or obligation under the ULPA '08 or under the limited partnership agreement merely because the general partner's conduct furthers the general partner's own interest (Corp. Code § 15904.08(e)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a general partner breached his or her fiduciary duties. The general ground for opposition is that the actions of the defendant general partner did not amount to a breach of fiduciary duty to the limited partnership or the other partners.

Paragraph A should be used if the acts complained of occurred in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's business, and the defendant is contending that those acts did not constitute gross negligence, reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law. This alternative may be appropriate, for example, if the defendant contends that he or she is guilty only of bad business judgment or ordinary negligence that does not rise to the level of conduct proscribed by the ULPA '08.

Paragraph B should be used if the defendant is contending that all of his or her actions in relation to the limited partnership are consistent with his or her general duty of good faith and fair dealing to the partnership and the other partners.

Paragraph C should be used if the acts in question arguably were in furtherance of the defendant's own interest. This alternative should be combined with other alternatives relevant to the specific acts in question and demonstrate that in performing these acts the defendant did not violate his or her fundamental duty of loyalty to the limited partnership as demonstrated in Corp. Code § 15904.08(b), i.e., he or she did not (1) personally derive property, profit, or benefit from his or her conduct or winding up of the limited partnership's activities, or from his or her use of limited partnership property, or appropriate a limited partnership opportunity; (2) deal with the limited partnership as or on behalf of a party with an adverse interest to the limited partnership; or (3) compete with the limited partnership.

The enumeration of the fiduciary duties of the general partners in a limited partnership under the ULPA '08 was derived from the Uniform Partnership Act of 1994 (UPA '94) [see Clark, California's Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008, § 29.08 (LexisNexis)]. For similar points and authorities drafted under the applicable provisions of UPA '94 [see Corp. Code § 16404], see § 170.120.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Specifically, counsel should specify the acts of the general partner that are at issue and explain why those acts did not violate any of the standards set out in these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partner's Conduct of Partnership Business Must Be Grossly Negligent, Reckless, Intentional Misconduct, or Knowing Violation of Law to Constitute Breach of Fiduciary Duty of Care

Corp. Code § 15904.08(c) specifies that a general partner's duty of care to the limited partnership and the other partners in the conduct and winding up of the limited partnership's activities is limited to refraining from engaging in grossly negligent or reckless conduct, intentional misconduct, or a knowing violation of law.

[b] Conduct Consistent With Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Does Not Violate Partner's Fiduciary Duties

Corp. Code § 15904.08(d) provides that a general partner must discharge the duties to the partnership and the other partners under the ULPA '08 and the partnership agreement and exercise any rights consistently with the obligation of good faith and fair dealing.

[c] Transaction Furthering General Partner's Own Interest Does Not Automatically Violate Fiduciary Duty

Corp. Code § 15904.08(e) states that a general partner does not violate a duty or obligation under the ULPA '08 or under the partnership agreement merely because the general partner's conduct furthers the general partner's own interest.

50 of 147 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
1. Fiduciary Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.123-170.129

[Reserved]

§§ 170.123[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.130

§ 170.130 Supporting Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]--Implied Agreement for Salary

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]--Implied Agreement for Salary

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF ACCEPTED THE BENEFITS OF DEFENDANT'S SERVICES ON BEHALF OF THE PARTNERSHIP, KNEW THAT DEFENDANT TOOK A SALARY, AND FAILED TO OBJECT, AND THUS PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT TO THE PAYMENT OF SALARY SHOULD BE IMPLIED AND PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE ESTOPPED FROM OBJECTING TO ITS PAYMENT.

Consent to Compensation Implied. If partners have accepted the benefits of profits and increased asset values attributable to another partner's management skills and services devoted to the partnership business, have seen financial statements or accounts, and know, or are chargeable with knowledge, that the partner was taking a salary, and have failed to object, their consent will be implied to an agreement for salary (Broffman v. Newman (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 259-260, 261 Cal. Rptr. 532 ; Busick v. Stoetzl (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 736, 738-742, 70 Cal. Rptr. 581 ; Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 322-324, 186 P.2d 197).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a partner is entitled to be compensated for services rendered in the partnership business, despite the fact that there was no express agreement for salary, because the other partners knew salary was being taken and failed to object.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an implied agreement for salary exists. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the amount of time plaintiff put into the business, any unique skills plaintiff had, the profits or increased asset values attributable to plaintiff's management, and the annual reports or copies of tax returns forwarded to the other partners showing salary was being taken, attaching copies if possible. Counsel should also specify that none of the other partners ever objected to the salary being taken.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 170.140 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent to Compensation Implied

In Broffman v. Newman (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 261 Cal. Rptr. 532 , a limited partnership owned a medical office building. After the full-time site manager died, one of the two general partners offered to manage the building and requested special compensation. The other partners did not object, and the two general partners entered into a one-year contract providing for such a fee. They later entered into a second one-year contract. Thereafter, a limited partner objected to the special compensation and demanded that the manager refund his compensation for the previous year. Plaintiff limited partner then sued for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duties, and declaratory relief. The general partner defended on the ground that the partners agreed to his special compensation and the partnership benefitted because the fee he charged was fair. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the general partner, and the limited partner appealed. The appellate court stated that an agreement for compensation may be implied by a course of conduct or found in an express agreement. In this case, plaintiff limited partner's failure to object to the compensation of the general partner constituted an implied agreement and estoppel to complain (213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 259-260) . However, once the limited partner objected to payment of the management fee, there was no longer in effect either an express or implied agreement to employ the general partner for additional compensation to perform the business of the partnership--management of the building (213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 260-261) . The court reversed the judgment, concluding that it was impermissible for the general partner to receive special compensation once a majority of the partnership interests no longer consented to his receipt of the management fee (213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 264) .

Busick v. Stoetzl (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 736, 70 Cal. Rptr. 581 , was an action for judicial dissolution and accounting. Plaintiff, her deceased husband, and two other couples were partners. Plaintiff's husband and defendant were the managing partners while her husband was alive, each taking a salary. After her husband's death, she and defendant spoke about his salary, and he said he was taking a raise--to $11,004 per year. Plaintiff called the bookkeeper after the fact and learned that defendant had taken the raise as indicated. Defendant's salary remained at that level for 1960-1962, but thereafter increased each year to $20,000 in 1967. Plaintiff received copies of the profit and loss statements and copies of the partnership income tax returns for each year in question; the books and records of the partnership were available for her inspection. The trial court found that plaintiff's share of profits and increases in assets during the years in question were $156,000, and that defendant's salary was less than the reasonable value of his services. All other partners agreed to the increases. The increases in 1963-1967 were discussed at meetings between the parties and their attorneys, but plaintiff remained silent. Still, on the basis of letters written by her attorney after those meetings objecting to the increases, the trial court required defendant to return the excess over $11,004 per year to the partnership. He did not appeal, but plaintiff appealed the portion of the judgment upholding the $11,004 per year.

The appellate court affirmed. The court first discussed cases approving salary to a retired partner who continued to provide services to the partnership, stating that equitable principles would entitle such a partner to more than the share of profits allowed by former Corp. Code § 15042, and noting that these cases rely heavily on principles of estoppel (264 Cal. App. 2d 736, 738-739) . The court stated that an agreement for salary may be implied and the existence or nonexistence of such an agreement is a question of fact in each case (264 Cal. App. 2d 736, 741) . After reviewing the evidence described above, the appellate court affirmed (264 Cal. App. 2d 736, 741-742) .

The facts and procedural background in Neilsen v. Holmes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 186 P.2d 197 , are discussed in § 170.120[3]. At the time plaintiff bought into the partnership, she examined the books and knew that salaries were being taken, albeit in accordance with a prior partnership agreement (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 322) . The salaries for the period in question were clearly shown on the account that was the basis of the settlement agreement here sought to be set aside. Plaintiff claimed that she never read the exhibits to the account and signed the settlement agreement on the advice of her attorney. The court stated, however, that the attorney was plaintiff's agent, and the salary and commission items in the account should have put both plaintiff and her attorney on notice that they had been taken. There was no legal reason to set aside the prior agreement regarding salary (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 323) . An agreement for salary may be express or implied, and is a question of fact to be determined in the trial court. When the written agreement of the parties is silent on the subject of salary, parol evidence and conduct of the parties may establish the agreement for compensation (82 Cal. App. 2d 315, 324) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.131

§ 170.131 Supporting Contention That Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN IRREGULAR AMENDMENT OF THE PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT IS EFFECTIVE IF THE PARTNERS AGREED TO THE AMENDMENT.

Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective. When the partnership agreement has been amended without following provisions of the agreement for amending it--such as, for instance, an amendment to which the partners orally agreed, although the partnership agreement required amendments to be in writing--the amendment is effective even though done irregularly, as long as the partners agreed to it, since the partners can waive requirements of that kind (Richard B. LeVine, Inc. v. Higashi (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 587, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an amendment of a partnership agreement is effective even though it was done without meeting requirements in the partnership agreement for amending it, as long as the partners in fact agreed to the amendment.

These points and authorities may also be used in a trial or appellate brief, or in a memorandum submitted in any procedural context in which a party seeks to raise this contention.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, if the contention is raised in opposition to a defendant's motion for summary judgment, the memorandum would include an analysis of the supporting and opposing papers showing that undisputed facts establish that the plaintiff's claim is supported by an irregular amendment of the partnership agreement, to which the partners agreed.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to actions in which the issue addressed in this form might arise, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 401, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners and Partnership , and Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Irregular Amendment of Partnership Agreement Is Effective

In Richard B. LeVine, Inc. v. Higashi (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244 , a partner unsuccessfully sued an accountant whom the partnership had engaged for the task of determining the partners' distributive shares and preparing tax-related forms. The plaintiff was not satisfied with the accountant's determination of the amount of the plaintiff's share of profits. The accountant's determination of the partners' shares had conformed to instructions from the partnership as to how those shares should be determined. Those instructions reflected the partners' oral agreement to change the method prescribed in the partnership agreement. The trial court granted the accountant's motion for summary judgment after concluding that the dissatisfied partner could not make a case against the accountant on any viable theory of liability.

The court of appeal affirmed. One of the arguments made by the dissatisfied partner was that the accountant was required to determine the allocation of profits by strictly following the method prescribed in the written partnership agreement, despite having received contrary instructions from the partnership. The court observed that "although the written partnership agreement provided a method of allocation, the partners orally agreed to modify the formula, and gave [the accountant] a written confirmation that the modification had been made. Although ... the written partnership agreement requires amendments to the agreement to be in writing, this type of provision may be waived. That is what happened here. And third parties, such as the ... [accountant], have no responsibility to police the internal governance of the partnership. What matters to third parties is the fact of amendment--not how it was done" (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 587 ; emphasis in original; internal citation omitted).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.132

§ 170.132 Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Reimbursement for Payments Made to Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Reimbursement for Payments Made to Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [name of general partner] IS ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT/INDEMNITY BY DEFENDANT FOR _____ [MAKING PAYMENTS/INCURRING LIABILITIES IN THE ORDINARY COURSE OF THE ACTIVITIES OF THE PARTNERSHIP OR FOR THE PRESERVATION OF ITS ACTIVITIES OR PROPERTY or MAKING AN ADVANCE TO THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP BEYOND THE AMOUNT OF CAPITAL THE GENERAL PARTNER AGREED TO CONTRIBUTE].

Reimbursement By Limited Partnership for Payment or Advance. A limited partnership must reimburse a general partner for payments made, and indemnify a general partner for liabilities incurred, by the general partner in the ordinary course of the activities of the partnership or for the preservation of its activities or property, or for making an advance to the partnership beyond the amount of capital the general partner agreed to contribute (Corp. Code § 15904.06(c), (d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a general partner is entitled to reimbursement for payments or advances made to, or indemnity for liabilities incurred on behalf of, the limited partnership.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the general partner's actions give rise to an obligation of the limited partnership to reimburse or indemnify the partner. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reimbursement By Limited Partnership for Payment or Advance

Corp. Code § 15904.06(c) provides that a limited partnership must reimburse a general partner for payments made and indemnify a general partner for liabilities incurred by the general partner in the ordinary course of the activities of the partnership or for the preservation of its activities or property. Corp. Code § 15904.06(d) requires a limited partnership to reimburse a general partner for an advance to the partnership beyond the amount of capital the general partner agreed to contribute.

A payment or advance made by a general partner which gives rise to an obligation of the limited partnership under Corp. Code § 15904.06(c) or (d) constitutes a loan to the limited partnership which accrues interest from the date of the payment or advance [Corp. Code § 15904.06(e)]. A general partner, however, is not entitled to remuneration for services performed for the partnership [Corp. Code § 15904.06(f)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.133-170.139

[Reserved]

§§ 170.133[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.140

§ 170.140 Opposing Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Partner Is Entitled to Compensation for Services Rendered to Partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

INASMUCH AS THE PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT DOES NOT CONTAIN ANY PROVISIONS TO THE CONTRARY, PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO ANY COMPENSATION, OTHER THAN HIS/HER SHARE OF PROFITS, FOR SERVICES HE/SHE RENDERED TO THE PARTNERSHIP.

A. Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation. Subject to the partnership agreement, a partner is not entitled to remuneration for services performed for the partnership, except for reasonable compensation for services rendered in winding up the business of the partnership (Corp. Code § 16401(h) or former Corp. Code § 15018(f); Broffman v. Newman (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 263-264, 261 Cal. Rptr. 532 ; Cagnolatti v. Guinn (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 50, 189 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 493, 497, 58 P.2d 639).

[Optional] B. Agreement to Agree on Amount of Compensation Is Insufficient. An agreement which provides that a partner is entitled to compensation for services rendered in carrying out the partnership business in an amount to be agreed on later is insufficient to support a claim for compensation, even an equitable claim for the reasonable value of the services, if no amount was ever agreed on (Security-First Nat'l Bank of Los Angeles v. Lutz (9th Cir. 1963) 322 F.2d 348, 351 ; Vangel v. Vangel (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 615, 631-632, 254 P.2d 919).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a partner is entitled to be compensated for services performed for the partnership [Corp. Code § 16401(h); former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]. Paragraph A should be used to set forth the general rule. The other circumstances referred to in Paragraph A are the winding up the business of the partnership. A partner winding up the partnership affairs is entitled to the reasonable value of his or her services, as discussed in § 170.302. Paragraph B should be used when the partnership or other agreement provided that the partner was to receive a salary, the amount of which was left to future agreement, and no agreement as to amount was ever reached.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a partner is not entitled to compensation, other than his or her share of profits, for services rendered in the partnership business. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify that there is no written agreement, oral agreement, or history from which it can be inferred that there was any agreement between the partners to vary the statutory rule prohibiting compensation.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

These points and authorities may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 170.130.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation

Corp. Code § 16401(h) provides that a partner is not entitled to remuneration for services performed for the partnership, except for reasonable compensation for services rendered in winding up the business of the partnership [see also former Corp. Code § 15018(f)]. The exception for services in winding up the partnership affairs is the subject of § 170.302.

The facts and procedural background of Broffman v. Newman (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 261 Cal. Rptr. 532 , are discussed in § 170.130[3]. Based on the statute governing remuneration to partners acting in the partnership business, former Corp. Code § 15018(f) [see now Corp. Code § 16401], the appellate court held that it was impermissible for the general partner to receive special compensation once a majority of the partnership interests no longer consented to his receipt of a management fee (213 Cal. App. 3d 252, 264) .

The facts and procedural background of Cagnolatti v. Guinn (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 189 Cal. Rptr. 151 , are discussed in § 170.102[3]. The appellate court rejected the assertion that the disputed transactions, if found to be self-dealing, were justified as reasonable compensation. It quoted the rule that absent an express agreement, a partner is not entitled to any compensation for services to the partnership other than his or her share of the profits. In this case, the partnership agreement was silent as to compensation of partners, and the trust agreement specified compensation only for extraordinary services. The court found no extraordinary services which might warrant additional compensation (140 Cal. App. 3d 42, 50-51) .

Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 493, 58 P.2d 639 , involved the appeal of the allowance of a claim against an estate by decedent's former partner. The claimant and decedent had been partners for 12 years. The articles of partnership had not provided for extra compensation to either partner. During the term of the partnership, the claimant devoted more time to the partnership business than decedent, who was ill. When the partnership accounts were settled, the claimant did not receive credit for any compensation based on services performed in aid of the partnership business. The note that was the basis of the claim was made nine years after dissolution of the partnership and was to be paid by the estate, not the deceased partner. The claimant contended the note was not a gift but was given in consideration of services rendered on behalf of the partnership during its existence. The estate appealed the allowance of the claim.

The California Supreme Court reversed. In reversing, the Court relied on the general rule that in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, one partner is entitled to no more compensation (in the form of shared profits) than another (6 Cal. 2d 493, 497) . It is also a settled rule that a gift note cannot create an obligation in favor of the donee against the estate of the donor (6 Cal. 2d 493, 495) .

[b] Agreement to Agree on Amount of Compensation Is Insufficient

Security-First Nat'l Bank of Los Angeles v. Lutz (9th Cir. 1963) 322 F.2d 348 , considered adjustments to be made in the respective amounts of stock issued to partners of a former partnership when it was taken over by a corporation. One of the adjustments being considered was the claim of partner S that his stock did not reflect accrued, but unpaid, salary owed him by the partnership. The partnership agreement provided that the managing partners were entitled to "such reasonable compensation for services as shall be agreed upon between said general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners." No agreement was ever reached regarding the amount of compensation, but S claimed to be entitled to salary in a reasonable amount. The Ninth Circuit denied the claim for reasonable value of services, citing Vangel v. Vangel (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 615, 254 P.2d 919 (discussed below). Based on former Corp. Code § 15018(f), if the partnership agreement reserves the matter of compensation for future determination, an agreement of the partners fixing the amount is necessary before any legal or equitable right to receive salary even in a reasonable amount exists (322 F.2d 348, 351) .

Vangel v. Vangel (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 615, 254 P.2d 919 , was an action for dissolution of partnership and accounting. Defendant partner made a claim for salary for services rendered to the partnership. The claim was based on a provision in the partnership agreement which said: "[t]he parties shall from time to time agree on a fixed amount to be drawn by each party by way of drawing account, living expenses, or wages." The partners were never able to reach agreement on the subject. The judgment of the trial court denied defendant any compensation as wages. Defendant appealed.

The appellate court reversed on other grounds, but upheld the trial court's finding that defendant was not entitled to any salary. With respect to the claim for salary, the court recited the general rule that in the absence of an express or implied agreement, a partner is not entitled to compensation for his or her services to the partnership other than his or her share of the profits. This is predicated on the theory that during the lifetime of the partners each of them is required to donate his or her time and talents to the affairs of the partnership. The service and labor of one partner offsets that of the other. The fact that one partner contributes greater skill and takes over the management of the business does not give rise to a right to extra compensation without an agreement for it (116 Cal. App. 2d 615, 631) . Defendant also argued he should receive the reasonable value of his services based on the fact that the partners were never able to agree. However, the court held that neither law nor equity provides a remedy for breach of an agreement to agree in the future (116 Cal. App. 2d 615, 631-632) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.141

§ 170.141 Opposing Contention That Assignee of Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Examine Books or Participate in Management [Corp. Code § 16503; former Corp. Code § 15027(1); Corp. Code §§ 15519(3) (ULPA), 15672 (CRLPA)]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Assignee of Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Examine Books or Participate in Management [Corp. Code § 16503; former Corp. Code § 15027(1); Corp. Code §§ 15519(3) (ULPA), 15672 (CRLPA)]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

INASMUCH AS PLAINTIFF IS ONLY AN ASSIGNEE OF A PARTNERSHIP INTEREST AND HAS NOT BEEN SUBSTITUTED AS A PARTNER, HE/SHE DOES NOT HAVE THE RIGHT TO _____ [PARTICIPATE IN THE MANAGEMENT OR CONDUCT OF PARTNERSHIP BUSINESS and/or REQUIRE ACCESS TO INFORMATION CONCERNING PARTNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS and/or INSPECT OR COPY THE PARTNERSHIP BOOKS OR RECORDS].

Assignee of Partnership Interest Has Only Limited Rights. Unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise, the assignee of a partnership interest does not become substituted as partner unless and until all other partners consent. In the absence of that consent, the assignee, [other than the assignee of a limited partnership interest in a limited partnership with over one hundred limited partners governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act], has no right to _____ [participate in the management or conduct of the partnership business or require access to information concerning partnership transactions or to inspect or copy the partnership books or records] (Corp. Code § 16503 or former Corp. Code § 15027(1) (general partnerships) or Corp. Code § 15519(3) (limited partnerships governed by ULPA) or Corp. Code § 15672 (limited partnerships governed by CRLPA); Kellis v. Ring (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 854, 858-860, 155 Cal. Rptr. 297).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that an assignee of a partnership interest is entitled to participate in the management or conduct of the partnership business, require access to information concerning partnership transactions, or to inspect or copy the partnership books or records [Corp. Code § 16503 (UPA'94); former Corp. Code §§ 15027(1) (pre-'97 Act); Corp. Code § 15519(3) (ULPA); Corp. Code § 15672(a) (CRLPA)]. If the limited partnership involved is governed by the CRLPA, the denial of these rights to an assignee is subject to two exceptions. The first exception grants the assignee of a limited partnership interest in a limited partnership with over one hundred limited partners all the information and records inspection rights set forth in Corp. Code § 15634 [Corp. Code § 15672; see Corp. Code § 15634]. The second exception allows limited partnerships to provide for certificates evidencing interests of partners and assignees and to make provision for the admission of transferees of certificates as additional or substituted limited partners [Corp. Code § 15638].

The appropriate section of the Corporations Code should be chosen depending on whether the partnership involved is a general partnership, a limited partnership still governed by the Uniform Limited Partnership Act, or a limited partnership governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an assignee has no rights other than to the share of income his or her assignor would otherwise take. This issue may be raised at the demurrer stage to establish that the assignee has no right to the specific relief he or she is seeking. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify that no agreement provides for automatic partnership status to an assignee and that the other partners have not consented to the assignee's substitution as a partner. Any pertinent details relating to the assignees' acquisition of his or her interest should also be set forth.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Assignee of Partnership Interest Has Only Limited Rights

Corp. Code § 16503 (UPA'94), which governs general partnerships, provides that a transfer in whole or part of a partner's transferable interest is permissible, and does not by itself cause the partner's dissociation or dissolution and winding up of the partnership business [Corp. Code § 16503(a)(1)]. Such a transfer does not entitle the transferee, as against the other partners or the partnership during the continuance of the partnership, to participate in the management or conduct of the partnership business, to require access to information concerning partnership transactions, or to inspect or copy the partnership books or records [Corp. Code § 16503(a)(1); see also former Corp. Code § 15027(1) (similar provisions under pre-'97 Act).

Corp. Code § 15519(3) governs limited partnerships formed before July 1, 1984, which have not elected to be governed by the California Revised Limited Partnership Act (CRLPA) [see Corp. Code §§ 15711, 15712, 15714; see also § 170.02[4], [5]]. It provides that an assignee who does not become a substituted limited partner has no right to require any information or account of the partnership transactions, to inspect the partnership books, or to vote on any of the matters as to which a limited partner would be entitled to vote under Corp. Code § 15507 and the certificate of limited partnership. He or she is only entitled to receive the share of profits or other compensation by way of income, or the return of contributions, to which his or her assignor would otherwise be entitled.

Corp. Code § 15672 (CRLPA) provides that unless the partnership agreement specifies otherwise [see Corp. Code §

15618 (variance of limited partnership provisions by agreement of partners)], a limited partnership interest is assignable in whole or in part. An assignment of a limited partnership interest does not dissolve a limited partnership or entitle the assignee to become or to exercise any rights of a partner except as set forth in the CRLPA [Corp. Code § 15611 et seq.]. An assignment entitles the assignee to receive, to the extent assigned, only the distributions and allocations of income, gain, loss, deduction, credit, or similar item to which the assignor would be entitled. Except as otherwise provided in the assignment, an assignee of a limited partnership interest in a limited partnership with over 100 limited partners is entitled to all the rights granted to a limited partner by Corp. Code § 15634. A limited partner remains a partner on assignment of all or part of his or her limited partnership interest, subject to the assignees becoming a limited partner pursuant to Corp. Code § 15674(a) (partnership agreement so provides or all of the general partners and a majority in interest of the limited partners consent) [Corp. Code § 15672(a)]. The pledge or grant of a security interest, lien, or other encumbrance in or against any or all of the partnership interest of a partner will not cause the partner to cease to be a partner and will not effect a grant to anyone else of the power to exercise any rights or powers of a partner [Corp. Code § 15672(b)]. In addition, the partnership agreement may provide that a general partner may not assign or encumber a partnership interest in a limited partnership [Corp. Code § 15672(c)].

Note that if the partnership agreement so provides, a limited partnership governed by the CRLPA may issue certificates of limited partnership as provided by Corp. Code § 15638. That section provides that the interest of a partner or assignee may be evidenced by a certificate of interest issued by the partnership. The partnership agreement may provide for the transfer of any interest represented by a certificate and for the admission of transferees of certificates as additional or substituted limited partners. The partnership agreement also may include other provisions with respect to the form of the certificates not inconsistent with the CRLPA. A certificate of interest may be, but is not required to be, a security as defined in Com. Code § 8102 [Corp. Code § 15638].

In Kellis v. Ring (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 854, 155 Cal. Rptr. 297 , plaintiff assignee of a limited partnership interest sued the general partner for a declaration that defendant's employment as officer and director of companies that supplied management services to the apartment complex that was the limited partnership's only asset amounted to breach of fiduciary duty. A demurrer was sustained and judgment of dismissal entered on the ground that plaintiff had no standing to bring the action.

The appellate court affirmed. Plaintiff claimed that construing Corp. Code § 15519(3) so as to prohibit him from suing for breach of fiduciary duty was contrary to general principles of law and equity, and specifically to Corp. Code § 15529, which provides that "[i]n any case not provided for in this act the rules of law and equity ... shall govern." The court set forth the provisions of Corp. Code § 15519(3), which are discussed above. Defendant conceded that if plaintiff's rights to profits or other compensation were impaired, he would have the right to sue for damages, but that no such allegations were made here (92 Cal. App. 3d 854, 858) . The court characterized plaintiff's suit as an attempt to interfere in the management of the limited partnership, and found that strict construction of Corp. Code § 15519(3) in this instance did not deprive plaintiff of any property right (92 Cal. App. 3d 854, 858-860) . The court noted that plaintiff did have remedies, as conceded by defendant, if his rights to income were interfered with or, as a preventive measure, by having initially conditioned the assignment on his substitution as a limited partner (92 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.142

§ 170.142 Opposing Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Payment by Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That General Partner Is Entitled to Payment by Limited Partnership Under ULPA '08 [Corp. Code § 15904.06]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] _____ [name of general partner] IS NOT ENTITLED TO REMUNERATION FOR SERVICES PERFORMED FOR THE PARTNERSHIP.

General Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation. A general partner is not entitled to remuneration for services performed for the partnership (Corp. Code § 15904.06(f)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a general partner is entitled to payment by the limited partnership.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the general partner is not entitled to compensation for services rendered in the partnership business. They also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Partners Are Not Entitled to Compensation

Corp. Code § 15904.06(f) states that a general partner is not entitled to remuneration for services performed for the limited partnership. Only a right of reimbursement is available to a general partner, either (1) for payments made in the ordinary course of the activities of the partnership or for the preservation of its activities or property, or (2) for an advance made to the limited partnership beyond the amount of capital the general partner agreed to contribute [Corp. Code § 15904.06(c), (d); see § 170.132]. A limited partnership also must indemnify a general partner for liabilities incurred by that partner in the ordinary course of the activities of the partnership or for the preservation of its activities or property [Corp. Code § 15904.06(c)].

58 of 147 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
2. Other Rights and Duties

17-170 California Points & Authorities §§ 170.143-170.159

[Reserved]

§§ 170.143[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
3. Situations Unique to Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.160

§ 170.160 Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Not Liable for Losses or Mistakes Incurred in Good-Faith Exercise of Business Judgment

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That General Partner Is Not Liable for Losses or Mistakes Incurred in Good-Faith Exercise of Business Judgment

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR THE LOSSES INCURRED BY PLAINTIFFS BECAUSE THOSE LOSSES RESULTED FROM MISTAKES IN THE GOOD-FAITH EXERCISE OF PLAINTIFF'S BUSINESS JUDGMENT.

Business Judgment Rule. A general partner is not liable to his or her limited partners for losses incurred in the good faith exercise by the general partner of his or her business judgment (Moore v. Tristar Oil and Gas Corp (S.D.N.Y. 1981) 528 F. Supp. 296, 312-314 ; Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 402-403, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a general partner of a limited partnership is not liable to the limited partners for losses or shortfalls in expected profits as long as the losses were incurred because of mistakes in the good-faith exercise of business judgment.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a general partner is insulated from liability for mistakes or losses based on good-faith exercise of his or her business judgment. This issue may arise on a motion for summary judgment or at trial. These points and authorities also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the particular venture involved, the reasonable profit and expense expectations, the particular risks inherent in the venture, any specific representations, assurances, warnings, or disclaimers made to the limited partners, the reasons for the decision that is being challenged, and any action taken to mitigate the unfortunate results once they became apparent.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule

Moore v. Tristar Oil and Gas Corp. (S.D.N.Y. 1981) 528 F. Supp. 296 , was a federal diversity action by dissenting limited partners of a California limited partnership against its corporate general partners, their principals (hereafter collectively referred to as the "general partners"), and the brokerage firm that assisted in the sale of assets. The limited partners claimed that the general partners had breached their fiduciary duty to the limited partners by (1) improperly claiming interests in the oil and gas leasehold in which the partnership was interested; (2) improperly valuing their separate interests so as to claim for themselves too great a share of the proceeds of the combined sale; (3) overcompensating the broker who arranged the sale; and (4) reimbursing one general partner for expenses incurred prior to formation of the partnership. Prior to the formation of the partnership, one of the general partners owned an 80 percent working interest in the leasehold, the landowner having retained a 20 percent overriding royalty. He determined that additional capital was necessary to steam flood the field in order to recover oil in commercial quantities, and thus the limited partnership was conceived. The prospectus that was the basis of plaintiffs' purchase and the partnership agreement provided that the general partner would contribute his 80 percent interest to the limited partnership; that the general partners would receive a five percent overriding royalty in production revenues as a management fee; that after the limited partner's initial capital contributions were repaid, this would increase to a 10 percent overriding royalty and a 10 percent working interest. An overriding royalty is not charged with production expenses, although a working interest is. Thus, over the remaining term of the lease, the general partners were projected to receive 36.5 percent of net revenues, and the limited partners would receive 63.5 percent. Within a few months of the formation of the limited partnership and before it began normal production, a third party offered to purchase all interests of the partnership and the general partners for $8.5 million. The proceeds went $2.38 million or 28 percent to the general partners for their overriding and working interests and $6.12 million or 78 percent to the limited partners, of whom the required 60 percent in interest had approved the sale. The sale returned $100,000 to each limited partner per $40,000 unit of initial contribution.

The district court cited Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 402, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 (discussed below), as establishing a business judgment rule insulating the general partner from liability for mistakes made or losses incurred in the good-faith exercise of reasonable business judgment (528 F. Supp. 296, 312) . Although the district court was of the opinion that the business judgment rule was narrower than the general fiduciary duty of partners to act in the highest good faith toward each other and not to take any advantage, it found that under either standard, plaintiffs failed to establish any breach of fiduciary duty (528 F. Supp. 296, 313) . As a matter of mining law and pursuant to the partnership agreement, the overriding and working interests of the general partners were valid interests, and no breach of contract was involved in defendant partners' claiming them (528 F. Supp. 296, 308-311) . Noting that the general partners' interests supposedly were worth 36.5 percent of the future income stream and that they had taken only 28 percent of the proceeds, the court found that defendants exercised their reasonable business judgment in good faith and did not take advantage of the limited partners in allocating the sale proceeds. Similarly, the evidence supported the reasonableness of the broker's fee, which was borne in proportion to the parties' share of the proceeds, and negotiation and payment of the fee did not constitute a breach of fiduciary duty under either standard. With respect to the reimbursement of preformation expenses, the defendant took those fees believing they were proper and repaid them to the partnership when informed five months later by the accountant that they were not. The court said that neither the taking of the expenses nor the failure to pay the partnership interest for the period before they were returned constituted a breach of fiduciary duty under either formulation of the rule (528 F. Supp. 296, 314) .

Wyler v. Feuer (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 149 Cal. Rptr. 626 , arose out of a limited partnership agreement for the production of a movie based on a book about the life of Edith Piaf written by her sister. Defendants owned the movie rights to the book and were the general partners/producers; plaintiff was the only capital contributor/limited partner, investing $1.6 million. Defendants were to raise an additional $850,000 of production financing from the sale of various distribution rights. Their $150,000 producer's fee was to be decreased by $10,000 for each $100,000 of the $850,000 they failed to raise. Plaintiff's initial profit percentage of 50 percent was adjustable in increments down to 25 percent in the event defendants raised $1.5 million of outside production financing. Two versions of the film were made, one in English and one in French. Production costs totaled $1.512 million. Warner Brothers sued for copyright infringement on the basis of Piaf material it owned. Although the suit was settled, the film was never released in the United States. Receipts from distribution abroad were $478,000, of which $313,000 went to plaintiff as reimbursement for his investment. He sued for rescission based on fraud and for damages for mismanagement of the business, based on excessive costs of the French version, failure to produce a marketable English version, improvident selection of relatively unknown actors, unreasonable scheduling of photography, failure to obtain production financing, and procurement of disadvantageous distribution contracts. The jury returned a verdict for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. The court began by noting that in a limited partnership, the general partner managed and controlled the partnership business pursuant to the rights and powers established in Corp. Code § 15509(1) (ULPA). In exercising his or her management functions, the general partner came under a fiduciary duty of good faith and fair dealing toward other members of the partnership, as established in former Corp. Code § 15021 [see now Corp. Code § 16404]. The court reasoned that the characteristics of a limited partner--limited liability, delegation of authority to management, and fiduciary duty owed by management to investors--are similar to those existing for corporate investment, in which it has long been the rule that directors are not liable to stockholders for mistakes made in the exercise of honest business judgment, or for losses incurred in the good-faith performance of their duties when they have used such care as an ordinarily prudent person would use (citing Corp. Code § 309(a)). By this standard a general partner may not be held liable for mistakes made or losses incurred in the good-faith exercise of reasonable business judgment (85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 402) . The court continued that although the picture did not make money and was not sought after by distributors, the same could be said of the majority of motion pictures made since the invention of cinematography. No evidence showed that defendants' efforts and decisions failed to conform to the general duty of care demanded of an ordinarily prudent person in a like position under the circumstances. The good-faith business judgment of a general partner need only satisfy that standard, and the court refused to apply hindsight (85 Cal. App. 3d 392, 403) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule

The Ninth Circuit in Toombs v. Leone (9th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 465 , affirmed a judgment of dismissal entered against plaintiff limited partner in an action against the general partner of a fishing venture for, among other things, damages for state and common law negligent mismanagement and breach of fiduciary duty. The type of fish to be caught was changed after plaintiff purchased his interest. Projections were continually revised downward, and after less than three years of operation, all the boats were sold to avoid foreclosure. Plaintiff's claims were based on defendant's failure to research the venture adequately and failure to hire experienced managers and employees. In view of plaintiff's failure to introduce evidence of the industry standard for management and defendant's evidence that the partnership's catches and revenues were comparable to those of other fishing ventures in the area, that the venture was formed only after consultation with an experienced participant in the industry, and that later projections were made with the aid of industry journals and publications, the dismissal was proper (777 F.2d 465, 470) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 17 Chapters 170-179 PARTNERSHIPS---to---PREMISES LIABILITY
CHAPTER 170 PARTNERSHIPS
PART II. FORMS
C. Relations Among Partners
3. Situations Unique to Limited Partnerships

17-170 California Points & Authorities § 170.161

§ 170.161 Supporting Contention That Purchaser of Limited Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Rescission Because No Permit for Sale Was Obtained as Required by California Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25503]--Limited Partnership Interests Were Offered to Public and/or Unsophisticated Investors

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Purchaser of Limited Partnership Interest Is Entitled to Rescission Because No Permit for Sale Was Obtained as Required by California Securities Law [Corp. Code § 25503]--Limited Partnership Interests Were Offered to Public and/or Unsophisticated Investors

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RESCIND THE PURCHASE OF HIS/HER LIMITED PARTNERSHIP INTEREST BECAUSE ALTHOUGH A PERMIT WAS REQUIRED PRIOR TO SALE OF THE LIMITED PARTNERSHIP INTEREST, NONE WAS OBTAINED.

A. Sale of Limited Partnership Interest Required Permit. The purchaser of a limited partnership interest that was offered for public sale in violation of the California Securities Law, specifically Corporations Code Section 25110, is entitled to rescind the purchase and to recover the purchase price plus interest at the legal rate (Corp. Code § 25503; Sherman v. Lloyd (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 693, 700-702, 226 Cal. Rptr. 495 ; People v. Graham (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1159, 1165-1169, 1174, 210 Cal. Rptr. 318).

[Optional] B. Limitation Period for Rescission. An action for rescission under Corporations Code Section 25503 must be brought within two years after the violation on which it is based or within one year after plaintiff discovers the facts which constitute the violation, whichever expires first. Discovery of the facts constituting the violation does not occur until plaintiff has actual, not inquiry, notice of those facts (Corp. Code § 25507(a); Eisenbaum v. W. Energy Res., Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 314, 325-326, 267 Cal. Rptr. 5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a particular limited partnership interest was a "security" subject to qualification under the state securities laws, and did not qualify for any exemption from qualification, and that because the interest was not "qualified" (in other words, no permit for sale was obtained) prior to sale, as required by law, the purchaser is entitled to the return of his or her consideration, less any profits, on tender of the limited partnership interest. The form may be modified by substitution of Corp. Code § 25130 (nonissuer transactions) or Corp. Code § 25133 (escrowed securities or securities subject to legend condition) in place of the reference to Corp. Code § 25110 if the purchase was not from the original issuer. Optional Paragraph B is for use when the limitation period for exercise of the right of rescission is in issue.

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that rescission is available for failure to comply with the California Securities Law. Because the determination of the availability of the private offering exemption is likely to rest on factual considerations, this issue would be most likely to arise at trial or on appeal.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specifically rebut each item of the private offering exemption requirements set forth in § 170.171.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 170.171 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[d] Related Forms

For discussion of the various California qualification requirements and complaints for rescission based on failure to comply with these requirements, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation (Matthew Bender). For detailed discussion of the qualification of securities for sale in California, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 6H, Qualification of Securities (Matthew Bender). For discussion of various securities exemptions that may be available to qualifying limited partnership interests, see Chapters 6 through 6D of California Legal Forms(Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale of Limited Partnership Interest Required Permit

Corp. Code § 25503 provides in part that any person who violates Corp. Code § 25110 (issuer transactions), 25130 (nonissuer transactions), or 25133 (escrowed securities or securities subject to legend condition), or a condition of qualification imposed under Corp. Code § 25141, or an order suspending trading, will be liable to any person acquiring the security sold in violation of any of those sections. The purchaser may recover the consideration paid for the security with interest at the legal rate, less the amount of any income received from the security, on tender of the security, or damages if he or she no longer owns the security or if the consideration given for the security is not capable of being returned.

Sherman v. Lloyd (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 693, 226 Cal. Rptr. 495 , was an action by a limited partner/investor for rescission and restitution based on the failure of the offering to qualify under California securities law. Plaintiff purchased a 4.38 percent limited partnership interest in October, 1981. Plaintiff was told by the general partner that in fact two partnerships were to be formed in order to comply with the exemption allowable when there were 10 or fewer limited partners [see Corp. Code § 25102(f)] (the current exemption allows sales to 35 or fewer persons)]. He was told that this arrangement was permissible under California securities law and was guaranteed an eight percent return on his investment. In January, 1983, when he had received no income from his investment and was notified that one of the limited partnerships had filed bankruptcy, plaintiff sought advice of counsel. He was told the scheme did not qualify for the exemption under California securities law. He then gave notice of rescission and offered to reassign his interest in the partnerships. The action followed, and summary judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendants appealed.

The appellate court affirmed. The court based its determination that the scheme did not qualify for the exemption under California securities law on the fact that no bona fide partnership was involved. The critical factor in determining whether a bona fide limited partnership exists is whether each partner had the right to determine the membership of the partnership. In a situation such as this one in which the limited partners never meet each other and the general partner seeks out investors, there is no bona fide partnership, and the exemption of Corp. Code § 25102(f) is inapplicable (181 Cal. App. 3d 693, 700-702) . The portion of the opinion considering the statute of limitations is discussed in § 170.161[4].

People v. Graham (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1159, 210 Cal. Rptr. 318 , involved a conviction for making an offer to sell an unqualified security consisting of a limited partnership interest in a venture to promote a machine that would detoxify chemical wastes. An investor in another of the general partner's ventures, to whom it was suggested that he recruit up to 25 investors for the new venture, became suspicious about the capabilities of the machine. Eventually he arranged for an investigator from the district attorney's office to pose as an investor to meet the general partner. An offer of sale was made at that meeting. After conviction, defendant appealed.

The conviction was upheld by the appellate court. First the court determined that the limited partnership interest being offered was a security within the definition of Corp. Code § 25019 because it met the federal criteria of a security and it met the California "risk capital" test. The definition of a security in 15 U.S.C. § 77b is substantially identical to the definition in Corp. Code § 25019. Under federal criteria, the limited partnership interest was a security because it involved a scheme whereby a person invests his or her money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party. Citing SEC v. Glenn W. Turner Enter., Inc. (9th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 476, 482 , the court noted that the Ninth Circuit has not literally interpreted the term "solely," but only requires that the efforts made by those other than the investor are the undeniably significant ones, that is, those essential managerial efforts that affect the failure or success of the enterprise (163 Cal. App. 3d 1159, 1165-1166) . The "risk capital" definition involves any situation when investors provide capital that will be risked in the promoter's venture and implies that the investor not exercise managerial control. Corp. Code § 15509, giving the general partner all the significant managerial control, led the court to conclude that the "no control" requirement was met (163 Cal. App. 3d 1159, 1166-1169) .

Defendant contended that the offer was exempt under the former version of Corp. Code § 25102(f) (repealed November 1, 1981), and under the Commissioner of Corporations Rule 260.102.2 (10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.2). The latter regulation applies when offers are not made to more than 25 people and sales are not consummated to more than 10 of such people, and when all offerees either have a preexisting business or personal relationship with the offeror or related persons, or by reason of their business or financial expertise could reasonably be assumed to have the capacity to protect their own interests in connection with the transaction. The court found that neither the second-hand relationship, nor the investigator's past investment experience, nor his knowledge of the scheme were sufficient to bring the offer within the exemption. His knowledge of the scheme was acquired from being given a brochure about the machine and a copy of the limited partnership agreement, and from discussion with defendant about the technical and business aspects of the venture. He told the defendant at their meeting that although he had invested in real estate, "I don't know a damn about this." Regarding the second-hand relationship, the court said that since the party who introduced him had a minor and relatively insignificant role in the venture, it was insufficient to give the investigator any significant insight into the character, business acumen, and general business and financial circumstances of the persons who would control the venture (163 Cal. App. 3d 1159, 1172-1174) .

The requirements for nonpublic offering exemption in current Corp. Code § 25102(f), set forth in more detail in § 170.171, change the number of purchasers to 35, add specificity to the relationship and sophistication conditions of 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.2, and add the requirement that the offers not be accomplished by means of published advertisement. The similarity of the current requirements for the nonpublic offering exemption and the ones under which Graham were decided indicate that Graham is still good authority for an investor who does not meet the sophistication and relationship criteria of the present law.

[b] Limitation Period for Rescission

In Eisenbaum v. W. Energy Res., Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 314, 267 Cal. Rptr. 5 , plaintiff bought a limited partnership interest in a Colorado partnership. The president of the partnership told plaintiff that he was not licensed to sell securities in California but also sent plaintiff, along with other promotional and subscription materials, a document stating that the security was exempt from registration under state and federal securities law. Nearly two years later, plaintiff consulted an attorney and a few months later filed an action for rescission and damages on the ground that the investment was not exempt and that the sale violated Corp. Code § 25110, which prohibits the sale of unqualified securities. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant, holding that the action was barred by Corp. Code § 25507(a), because plaintiff discovered the violation of securities law more than one year before commencing the action.

