PART II. FORMS
D Liability Of Surety
2. Reduction Of Liability

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.223

§ 222.223 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Totally Liable--Surety Entitled to Benefit of Every Security for Principal's Performance [Civ. Code § 2849]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general contention form opposing the existence of a suretyship (see, e.g., § 222.21).]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS NOT [TOTALLY] LIABLE FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE OBLIGATION OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, BECAUSE _____ [_____ (name), THE CREDITOR, and/or _____ (name), THE COSURETY] HOLDS SECURITY FOR THE PERFORMANCE OF THE PRINCIPAL.

Surety Entitled to Benefit of Security. The surety is entitled to the benefit of every security for the performance of the principal obligation held by the creditor, or by a cosurety at the time of entering into the contract of suretyship, or acquired by him or her afterwards, whether the surety was aware of the security or not (Civ. Code § 2849).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the surety is entirely liable for the amount of the principal's default. The ground of the opposition is that the surety is entitled to the benefit of every security for the performance of the principal obligation held by the creditor or a cosurety, whether the surety was aware of the security or not [see Civ. Code § 2849].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the surety's entitlement to the benefit of every security for the performance of the principal obligation. For example, this contention may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was entirely liable for the principal's obligation. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts describing the other securities held by the creditor or a cosurety for the performance of the principal obligation, such as a deed of trust to the principal's house [see Civ. Code § 2849].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.220.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
D Liability Of Surety
2. Reduction Of Liability

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.224

§ 222.224 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Totally Liable--Surety Entitled to Have Principal's Property First Applied to Discharge of Obligation [Civ. Code § 2850]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general contention form opposing the existence of a suretyship (see, e.g., § 222.21).]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS NOT TOTALLY LIABLE FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE OBLIGATION OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, BECAUSE BOTH _____ [name], THE SURETY, AND _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, HYPOTHECATED PROPERTY FOR THE OBLIGATION AND THE SURETY IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THE PROPERTY OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, APPLIED FIRST TO DISCHARGE THAT OBLIGATION.

Surety Entitled to Have Principal's Property First Applied to Discharge. Whenever the property of a surety is hypothecated with property of the principal, the surety is entitled to have the property of the principal first applied to the discharge of the obligation, and the creditor will be required to apply the principal's property first when requested to do so by the surety (Civ. Code § 2850; State Ath. Com. v. Mass. Bonding etc. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829, 117 P.2d 75).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the surety is entirely liable for the amount of the principal's default. The ground of the opposition is that the surety is entitled to have the property of the principal first applied to the discharge of the obligation before any property the surety posted as security is applied [see Civ. Code § 2850].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the creditor's obligation to first apply the property of the principal to the obligation. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was primarily liable and that the surety's pledged property should be applied first to discharge the principal's obligation [see, e.g., State Ath. Com. v. Mass. Bonding etc. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 828-829, 117 P.2d 75] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts illustrating that property of the principal was given as partial security for the obligation, that property of the surety was also hypothecated and the surety demanded that the creditor first apply that property toward the obligation before seeking recovery from the surety [see, e.g., State Ath. Com. v. Mass. Bonding etc. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 117 P.2d 75] .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.221.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Entitled to Have Principal's Property First Applied to Discharge

In State Ath. Com. v. Mass. Bonding etc. Co. (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 117 P.2d 75 , a state athletic commission required that sponsors of a boxing events furnish a surety bond to guarantee payment of boxers. The principal was a promoter of boxing contests and kept on file with the commission a bond furnished by defendant. Prior to a large program the commission notified the principal that the amount of the bond was insufficient and that he would have to furnish an additional bond. The principal deposited cash with the commission in lieu of an additional bond. Payment was withheld from the main event fighter due to a dispute as to expenses. He complained to the commission that he had not been paid. The commission demanded that defendant surety pay the fighter. Defendant surety did not pay, and the fighter brought action against the principal and levied an attachment on the money held by the commission. After judgment was entered against the principal, the commission joined the fighter in suing defendant surety on the amount of that award. By cross complaint defendant alleged payment by its principal of the money, retention of that amount by the commission, and the failure to apply that money to the payment of fighter. The trial court denied the relief sought on the cross complaint and awarded judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Defendant surety appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Defendant did not deny liability on the bond, but contended that the judgment awarded was in excess of its liability, and that it was entitled to have received credit for the sum of money paid in cash by the principal to the commission and held by the commission for the purpose for which defendant became surety on the bond. The court agreed and said that defendant surety was entitled to have the cash deposited by the principal applied in reduction of its liability on the bond. The deposit was made with the funds of the principal; as between the principal and surety the principal is primarily liable; and the surety who is called on to pay the debt of the principal may seek reimbursement. Citing Civ. Code § 2845, the court said that a surety may require the creditor to proceed against the principal, or to pursue any other remedy in the creditor's power which the surety cannot itself pursue, and which would lighten its burden; and if in such case the creditor neglects to do so, the surety is exonerated to the extent to which the surety is thereby prejudiced. Furthermore, Civ. Code § 2850 provides that when property of a surety is hypothecated with property of the principal, the surety is entitled to have the property of the principal first applied to the discharge of the obligation. Civ. Code § 2849 provides that a surety is entitled to the benefit of every security for the performance of the principal obligation held by the creditor, or by a cosurety at the time of entering into the contract of suretyship, or acquired by it afterwards, whether the surety was aware of the security or not. The surety gave its personal obligation in the form of a bond and the principal delivered to the commission money to be applied to the specific purpose for which the bond was given (46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829) . The money was not given as collateral security for the bond and the surety was entitled to have the money applied to the purpose for which it was paid and accepted (46 Cal. App. 2d 823, 830) .

81 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
D Liability Of Surety
2. Reduction Of Liability

22-222 California Points & Authorities §§ 222.225-222.239

[Reserved]

§§ 222.225[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.240

§ 222.240 Supporting Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Material Alteration of Original Obligation Without Consent of Surety [Civ. Code § 2819]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION OF _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, WAS MATERIALLY ALTERED WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF _____ (name), THE SURETY and/or THE REMEDIES AND RIGHTS OF _____ (name), THE CREDITOR, AGAINST _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, WERE IMPAIRED OR SUSPENDED].

A. Alteration of Original Obligation Without Consent of Surety Exonerates Surety. A surety is exonerated, except so far as he or she may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor, without the consent of the surety, the original obligation of the principal is altered in any respect or the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal are in any way impaired or suspended. The alteration may occur in various ways, including an extension of the payment period, a release of a security interest, or an execution of a consent to compromise and the acceptance of a smaller amount from the principal (Civ. Code § 2819; Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162-163, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; Wexler v. McLucas (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9, 14 , 121 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; R.P. Richards, Inc. v. Chartered Construction Corporation (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 146, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425).

B. Alteration Must be Material by Affecting Rights, Interests, or Obligations of Parties. An alteration in any material respect without consent of the surety exonerates the surety. A material alteration is one which works some change in the rights, interests, or obligations of the parties to the writing (V.I.P. Agency of No. Cal., Inc. v. Duffy Electronics, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 849, 852-853, 155 Cal. Rptr. 45 ; Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548-549, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550).

[Optional] C. Alteration Benefiting Surety Serves to Exonerate. It is the fact of alteration, rather than its effect, which is decisive; an alteration which is to the surety's benefit will exonerate the surety of liability (Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162-163, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548-549, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550).

[Optional] D. Voidable Promise May Result in Alteration. A creditor's promise may alter the obligation or suspend or impair the remedy within the meaning of Civil Code Section 2819, even if that promise is for any cause void or voidable by the creditor at his or her option (Civ. Code § 2820).

[Optional] E. Mere Entitlement to Indemnification Is Not Sufficient to Defeat Exoneration. In order to come within the exception to exoneration provided by Civil Code Section 2819 to the extent that the surety may be indemnified by the principal, the surety must have received the indemnified amount, physical collateral, or a lien on property. A mere promise that the principal will indemnify the surety is not sufficient (Texaco Refining & Marketing v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 637, 640) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has been exonerated due to an alteration in the original obligation [see Civ. Code § 2819]. Although Civ. Code § 2819 provides that any alteration triggers an exoneration, the cases appear to require a material alteration before exoneration occurs [see, e.g., Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550] . In addition, Civ. Code §§ 2819 and 2822(b) provide that the creditor's agreement with the debtor to accept a lesser sum than the balance owed on the original obligation does not exonerate the surety for the agreed-on lesser sum, even if the agreement is made without the surety's consent [see § 222.244].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment motion or an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was liable for the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550 (appeal)]. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that the original obligation which called for payment directly to the creditor by the principal's customers was changed by the creditor and principal to an alternate method of payment without the surety's consent [see, e.g., Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550 (appeal)].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 238, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 222.243 and 222.244 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration of Original Obligation Without Consent of Surety Exonerates Surety

In Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 , defendant's son-in-law executed a promissory note to a bank. As a part of the same transaction, plaintiff guaranteed payment in writing on the reverse side of the note. When the note became due and payable defendant's son-in-law refused to pay any part of the sum owed. Plaintiff was obligated and did pay the amount then due. The bank transferred to plaintiff its interest in the note. Plaintiff and defendant then signed a document entitled Unconditional and Absolute Guaranty, prepared by plaintiff's attorney, in which defendant guaranteed payment on her son-in-law's note. Later, plaintiff signed a Consent to Compromise consenting and agreeing with defendant's son-in-law to compromise and settle its claim against him in consideration of a smaller sum. Pursuant to that instrument, plaintiff received and accepted a check for slightly less than one half the amount owed. Thereafter plaintiff brought an action against defendant for the difference between the compromise and the total amount owed on the note. Judgment was for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court said that a guaranty had been created by the document signed by plaintiff and defendant in which defendant guaranteed payment on her son-in-law's note. Civ. Code § 2819 may apply to exonerate defendant from any obligations in the guaranty agreement. The court found that defendant was exonerated of her obligations by the Consent to Compromise executed by plaintiff and the acceptance of the check for the smaller amount. The court disagreed with plaintiff's argument that defendant remained liable for the full amount owed, and was benefited by the application of the proceeds of the compromise check. The parties to an obligation may not alter its terms without the guarantor's consent, even though it may be to the guarantor's advantage (17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 162-163) .

The result in Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 , was codified, although the reasoning may be abrogated, by amendments to Civ. Code §§ 2819 and 2822(b) specifying that, even if done without the surety's consent, the creditor's agreement with the debtor to accept a lesser sum than the balance owed on the original obligation does not exonerate the surety for the agreed-on lesser sum. The amendments did not constitute a change in, but were declarative of, existing law [Stats. 1993, ch. 149, § 3].

The facts and procedural background of Wexler v. McLucas (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9 , 121 Cal. Rptr. 453 , are discussed in § 222.80[3][a]. In Wexler, the court of appeal reversed the trial court judgment against defendant surety. After finding that defendant was a surety rather than a principal debtor, the court found that plaintiff creditor materially altered the contract without defendant's consent by extending the payment period, and thereby discharged the surety through the application of Civ. Code § 2819. Plaintiff also altered the original contract by releasing his security interest in the furniture without defendant's consent. Civ. Code § 2849 entitles the surety to the benefit of every security for the performance of the principal obligation whether the surety was aware of the security or not. By releasing the security, plaintiff also released the surety (48 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9, 14) .

In R.P. Richards, Inc. v. Chartered Construction Corporation (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 146, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 , a subcontractor sued the general contractor and surety to enforce a stop notice and stop notice release bond. The subcontractor settled with the general contractor, obtained a judgment to enforce the settlement, and continued to prosecute the claim against the surety. The trial court found that the original obligation had been altered without the surety's consent, thereby exonerating it as surety under Civ. Code § 2819, and entered judgment for the surety. The subcontractor appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that a promisee's release of the principal extinguishes the principal obligation and impairs the promisee's rights and remedies against the principal within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2819. In this case, the subcontractor fully released the general contractor from its claim for payment under the bonded obligation and accepted instead an unbonded obligation under the settlement agreement. Although the subcontractor notified the surety of the proposed settlement agreement before execution, it did not request or receive the surety's consent. The court found that the negotiated release fully extinguished the general contractor's bonded obligation to the subcontractor, which constituted an impairment of the subcontractor's rights and remedies against the surety on that bonded obligation. Under Civ. Code § 2819, this had the legal consequence of exonerating the surety. Further, under Civ. Code § 2810, the general's liability on the original obligation ceased when the subcontractor released it, resulting in exoneration of the surety (83 Cal. App. 4th 146, 154-155) .

The court also addressed the subcontractor's argument that Civ. Code § 3225 expressly provides that an alteration of the original obligation does not exonerate the surety on a bond relating to a work of improvement. The court held that, based on the statutory text and purpose,Civ. Code § 3225 does not apply when the promisee releases the principal obligation. The court construed that section to apply to a change, alteration, or modification of the principal obligation, but not to its release (83 Cal. App. 4th 146, 156-158) .

[b] Alteration Must be Material by Affecting Rights, Interests, or Obligations of Parties

In V.I.P. Agency of No. Cal., Inc. v. Duffy Electronics, Inc. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 849, 155 Cal. Rptr. 45 , plaintiff filed an action against defendant principal seeking recovery for services rendered. The trial court issued a writ of attachment authorizing sequestration of two assets. Defendant presented a bond executed by defendant surety for the amount in question and the attachment was released. Plaintiff and defendant principal stipulated for judgment in a lower amount on the condition that execution be stayed pending payment of the judgment in installments. Later, plaintiff moved for judgment against defendant surety, alleging that the payments on the judgment had lapsed, leaving unpaid the amount requested. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Defendant surety referred to Civ. Code § 2819 as applying to exonerate it due to the alteration caused by the stipulation. Defendant principal's obligation was modified in two ways by the stipulated judgment. The amount of the obligation was reduced and enforcement of the judgment was deferred. The reduction modification reduced the surety's exposure but was not an alteration of the obligation. Therefore, no exoneration resulted from it. However, the second alteration, transforming an immediate obligation to pay into an obligation that was enforceable only according to a schedule of deferred payments, was a substantial alteration of the original obligation of the principal. It also altered the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal. Defendant surety did not consent to the alteration; therefore its obligation as surety was exonerated. The extension of time for payment postponed and perhaps depreciated the value of the surety's remedy to satisfy the debt (92 Cal. App. 3d 849, 852-853) .

In Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550 , plaintiff, a wholesale lumber dealer, contracted to supply lumber to defendant, a retail lumber dealer. The method of payment was for defendant to invoice all its customers for lumber supplied to them, with a notation that payment was to be made to plaintiff. Defendants, officers of defendant dealer, individually and jointly guaranteed defendant dealer's faithful performance. Plaintiff later decided that the method of payment was too cumbersome and orally agreed with defendant to change to a simple open book account. When defendant's account became substantially delinquent, plaintiff brought an action to enforce the guaranties of payment. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. One defendant guarantor appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. In addition to a contract interpretation question, the court analyzed the rules concerning exoneration of the guarantor. Civ. Code § 2819 provides that a surety is exonerated, except so far as he or she may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor, without the consent of the surety, the original obligation of the principal is altered in any respect or the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal, in respect thereto, are in any way impaired or suspended. Defendant guarantor contended that he was exonerated because the contract between plaintiff and defendant dealer was altered in a material respect without his consent and because plaintiff extended the time of payment. An alteration in any material respect without consent of the surety exonerates the surety. When a contract and a guaranty of performance thereunder are entered into at the same time, they are properly read and interpreted as an entire contract. Thus, if the main contract is altered without the consent of the guarantor and is changed in respects so material as to change the substantial rights of the parties and in effect to make a new contract, the guarantor is exonerated. This is true whether the effect of the alteration is to increase or to lessen the obligation, the performance of which is guaranteed. The materiality of the change does not depend on whether or not the party not consenting to the change will be benefited or injured, but on whether or not the change works any alteration in the meaning or legal effect of the contract. A material alteration is one that works some change in the rights, interests, or obligations of the parties to the writing. The contract was materially changed when the method of payment provided by the contract was changed. Since the change was effected without defendant's knowledge, it was without his consent (214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 548-549) . The oral agreement having been executed, the surety was discharged (214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 550) .

[c] Alteraton Benefiting Surety Serves to Exonerate

Coutin v. Nessanbaum (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 156, 94 Cal. Rptr. 453 , is discussed in § 222.240[3][a].

Hill & Morton, Inc. v. Coughlan (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 545, 29 Cal. Rptr. 550 , is discussed in § 222.240[3][b].

[d] Mere Entitlement to Indemnification Is Not Sufficient to Defeat Exoneration

Plaintiff in Texaco Refining & Marketing v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 637 , entered into an agreement in 1978 to sell oil to Oasis Petroleum Corp. Defendant issued a bond guaranteeing payment for Oasis' purchases under the contract. In 1985, plaintiff and Oasis entered into the seventh amendment of the contract. As part of the amendment, Oasis paid $7.2 million on account and executed two notes totaling $9.4 million. Defendant never consented to the seventh amendment, which plaintiff admitted constituted a material modification of the principal obligation, and in fact warned plaintiff not to rely on the bond if the proposed seventh amendment was executed. Oasis filed bankruptcy a month after execution of the seventh amendment, and the trustee in bankruptcy sought to require plaintiff to disgorge the $7.2 million payment as a voidable preference. Plaintiff brought a diversity action against defendant on the bond for the unpaid balance and to require defendant to reimburse plaintiff for any part of the payment it was required to disgorge. Judgment was for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeals affirmed. One of plaintiff's contentions was that defendant was not exonerated because Civ. Code § 2819 provides that a surety is exonerated by modification, "except so far as he may be indemnified by the principal," and that defendant came within that exception to exoneration because it was entitled to indemnification by Oasis and its parent company. The appellate court agreed with the district court that the only reasonable interpretation of that exception is that it requires the surety to have actually received the indemnified amount, physical collateral, or a lien on property. A mere promise that the principal will indemnify the surety is not sufficient. That promise is already imposed by law by Civ. Code § 2847. Thus, any other interpretation would create an exception that would swallow the rule and every case would be one in which the surety was indemnified. The court also relied on a reference in the Legislature's note to Civ. Code § 2819 referring to a New York case in which the surety had received the whole amount to become due (895 F.2d 637, 640) .

83 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.241

§ 222.241 Supporting Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Rescission of Exonerating Agreement Does Not Restore Surety's Liability [Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2821]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, WAS EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE AN AGREEMENT WAS MADE EXONERATING HIM/HER/IT OF LIABILITY THROUGH THE APPLICATION OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 2819. THE RESCISSION OF THAT AGREEMENT DOES NOT RESTORE THE LIABILITY OF _____ [name], THE SURETY.

Rescission of Exonerating Agreement Does Not Restore Surety's Liability. The rescission of an agreement which exonerated the surety through the application of Civil Code Section 2819 does not restore the liability of the surety, who thereby remains exonerated (Civ. Code § 2821).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has been exonerated due to an alteration in the original obligation and that the rescission of that altering agreement does not restore liability to the surety [see Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2821]. The elements of Civ. Code § 2819, describing when exoneration results from an alteration, are set forth in § 222.240.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was liable for the principal's obligation. The points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that the payment schedule of the original obligation was changed by the creditor and the principal to an alternate method of payment without the surety's consent and, although that agreement between the creditor and the principal was later rescinded, no restoration of the surety's liability took place [see Civ. Code § 2821].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.242

§ 222.242 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Indemnification From Principal Precludes Exoneration [Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2824]

[1] FORM

The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BY AN ALTERATION OF THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION OR IMPAIRMENT OF THE RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF _____ [name], THE CREDITOR, AGAINST _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, BECAUSE _____ [_____ (name), THE SURETY HAS BEEN INDEMNIFIED BY _____, (name), THE PRINCIPAL].

[EITHER]

Surety Has Indemnified Principal. A surety is not exonerated by an alteration of the original obligation or impairment or suspension of the creditor's rights or remedies against the principal to the extent that the surety has been indemnified by the principal (Civ. Code § 2819; see Texaco Refining & Marketing v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 637, 640) .

[AND/OR]

Indemnified Surety Remains Liable. A surety who has been indemnified by the principal is liable to the creditor to the extent of the indemnity, notwithstanding that the creditor, without the assent of the surety, may have modified the contract or released the principal (Civ. Code § 2824).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has not been exonerated because of an alteration in the original obligation or impairment of the creditor's rights or remedies against the principal when the surety has already been indemnified by the principal [see Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2824].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was exonerated from liability due to an alteration of the original obligation without the surety's consent. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel might include facts demonstrating that even though changes were made in the original obligation, the surety has already been indemnified by the principal for the amount of liability incurred as a result thereof. Indemnification is likely to be in the form of receipt of the indemnified amount, physical collateral, or a lien on property [see Texaco Refining & Marketing v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 637, 640] .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.240.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Has Indemnified Principal

The exact words used in Civ. Code § 2819 provide that a surety "is exonerated, except so far as he may be indemnified by the principal, by any act ... ." However, as discussed in § 222.240[3][d], a federal court applying California law in a diversity action has held that this exception to exoneration requires the surety to have actually already indemnified the principal [Texaco Refining & Marketing v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 637, 640] .

85 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.243

§ 222.243 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Surety Not Exonerated if Consented to Alteration, Alteration Not Material, or No Alteration Made [Civ. Code § 2819]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION OF _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, WAS ALTERED WITH THE CONSENT OF _____ (name), THE SURETY or THE REMEDIES OR RIGHTS OF _____ (name), THE CREDITOR, AGAINST _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, WERE IMPAIRED AND/OR SUSPENDED WITH THE CONSENT OF _____(name), THE SURETY or THE ALTERATION OF THE ORIGINAL OBLIGATION WAS NOT MATERIAL or THE CREDITOR'S ATTEMPT TO ENFORCE AN OBLIGATION NOT WITHIN THE SURETYSHIP AGREEMENT IS NOT AN ALTERATION].

[EITHER]

A. Alteration to Which Surety Gave Consent Does Not Exonerate. When a surety consents to an alteration of the original obligation of the principal, or the impairment or suspension of any of the creditor's rights or remedies against the principal, the surety is not exonerated (Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 800-801, 313 P.2d 568 ; see Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4).

[Optional] B. Surety's Consent to Alteration May Be Given at Any Time. The surety's consent may be given in advance of the alteration of the principal's obligation as well as at or after the time of that act (Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 800-801 , 313 P.2d 568 ; see Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4).

[AND/OR]

C. Alteration in Performance Resulting From Principal's Acts Is Not Material Alteration in Obligation. An alteration in performance necessitated by the principal's actions will not be deemed a material alteration, especially when the surety obligated itself to pay any additional costs resulting from the principal's failure to render an adequate performance (City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 389, 399-401, 159 Cal. Rptr. 514).

[AND/OR]

D. Void or Voidable Promise by Creditor Will Not Cause Exoneration Unless It Is Material Alteration. Although a creditor's promise that is void or voidable may alter the original obligation within the meaning of Section 2819 of the Civil Code, such a promise does not act as an alteration in all cases. The promise must result in a material alteration, thereby operating to discharge the surety as a matter of law (Civ. Code § 2820; Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 775-776, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231).

[AND/OR]

E. Creditor's Attempt to Enforce Obligation Not Within Suretyship Agreement Does Not Constitute Alteration. A creditor's attempt to collect from the surety something for which the surety is not liable under the suretyship agreement is not an alteration and does not exonerate the surety (Glickman v. Collins (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 852, 862, 120 Cal. Rptr. 76, 533 P.2d 204 ; see Ralston-Purina Co. v. Carter (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 378, 26 Cal. Rptr. 690).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] F. Alteration as Defense Must Be Pleaded at Trial. The defense of exoneration through alteration is a special defense which must be raised and pleaded at trial (Newhouse v. Getz (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 113, 114, 47 P.2d 306).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has not been exonerated due to an alteration in the original obligation, because the alteration was made with the consent of the surety [Paragraph A], the alteration was a result of the principal's actions [Paragraph C], the alteration was not a material one [Paragraph D], or the creditor's attempt to enforce an obligation not within the obligation was not an alteration [Paragraph E]. Optional Paragraph B may be used when Paragraph A is used and sets forth when the surety's consent may be given. Optional Paragraph F may be used to argue that alteration is a special defense. The requirements of an alteration which results in exoneration are set forth in Civ. Code § 2819.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment motion or an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was exonerated from liability on the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Newhouse v. Getz (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 113, 114, 47 P.2d 306 (appeal)]. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts demonstrating that even though changes were made in the original obligation, the changes were made with the surety's consent, as indicated in the suretyship agreement in which the surety waived its right to plead exoneration by agreeing to allow changes to be made [see, e.g., City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 389, 159 Cal. Rptr. 514] .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.240.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration to Which Surety Gave Consent Does Not Exonerate

The facts and procedural background of Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 313 P.2d 568 , are discussed in § 222.200[3][a]. In Bloom, the Supreme Court held that defendant surety was not released from its liability by an alteration because it had consented to the alteration. Defendant argued that when the creditor released the principal from further liability pursuant to the composition of creditors, the obligations of the surety were likewise terminated. But the Court explained that a surety is not discharged by release of the principal when the surety consents to remain liable notwithstanding the release. Civ. Code § 2819 provides that a surety is exonerated, except so far as he or she may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor, without the consent of the surety, the original obligation of the principal is altered in any respect or the remedies or rights of the creditor against the principal are in any way impaired or suspended. The logical corollary to the statute is that when the surety consents to an alteration of the original obligation of the principal, or the impairment or suspension of any of the creditor's rights or remedies against the principal, the surety is not exonerated. The release of a debtor following a composition of creditors was an alteration of the original obligation of the principal within the contemplation of Civ. Code § 2819, and that when that alteration is consented to by the surety, the release of the principal does not exonerate the surety (48 Cal. 2d 793, 800-801) .

In Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4 , defendants, in consideration of a loan by plaintiff to a company, of which one of the defendants was a director, guaranteed the payment of the loan by executing a continuing guaranty. They were not aware of what they were signing. The company executed a promissory note in plaintiff's favor. Later, defendants orally informed plaintiff that they would not agree to a renewal of the note and would not be further bound on their continuing guaranty; this was followed with a written revocation. Plaintiff continued to create new indebtedness in future transactions with the company, and increased the interest rate on the company's obligations. The trial court found that all of the promissory notes executed after defendant's revocation represented indebtedness created after plaintiff received notice of revocation and that defendants were released from liability. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court cited Civ. Code § 2819 and said that an increase in the rate of interest on an obligation constituted an alteration within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2819 and the surety was thereby exonerated if an increase was made without his or her consent. A surety is not exonerated from liability by a change in the contract between the principal and the creditor which is made with his or her consent (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240) . Although the court held that defendants were relieved of liability as to any indebtedness created after plaintiff received written notice of revocation in regard to future transactions, defendants had given advance consent to alterations by the terms of the guaranty and thus could have been held liable for obligations up to the revocation (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240-241) .

[b] Surety's Consent to Alteration May Be Given at Any Time

The facts and procedural background of Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 313 P.2d 568 , are discussed in § 222.200[3][a]. In Bloom, the Supreme Court held that defendant surety was not released from its liability by an alteration because it had consented to the alteration. The Court said that consent may be given in advance of the alteration of the principal's obligation as well as at or after the time of that act. The guaranty agreement specifically provided that the liability of the guarantor would not be affected by the acceptance of any settlement or composition. That provision plainly gave advance consent to the release of the principal by means of an arrangement such as the composition agreement and it did not operate to discharge defendant as guarantor unless discharge was effected by some overriding rule of law (48 Cal. 2d 793, 800-801) .

The facts and procedural background of Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4 , are discussed in § 222.243[3][a]. In Southern Cal., the court of appeal held that defendant guarantors were not liable. A surety is not exonerated from liability by a change in the contract between the principal and the creditor which is made with his or her consent; that consent may be given in advance of the alteration of the principal's obligation as well as at or after the time of the act. Defendant gave advance consent to an increase in the rate of interest on the company's obligation to plaintiffs (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240) . Nevertheless, the court held that defendants were relieved from liability for any transactions that occurred after plaintiff received their written notice of revocation of the guaranty as to future transactions (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 241) .

[c] Alteration in Performance Resulting From Principal's Acts Is Not Material Alteration in Obligation

In City of Sacramento v. Trans Pacific Industries, Inc. (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 389, 159 Cal. Rptr. 514 , plaintiff city and defendant developer executed a subdivision agreement in which plaintiff agreed to approve defendant's subdivision map for development of specified parcels subject to certain conditions. Among the conditions was a time deadline in which all the public improvements had to be completed. An extension of time allowed by plaintiff would not release the surety on the bond filed by defendant pursuant to the agreement; the surety waived Civ. Code § 2819. If defendant failed to complete the improvements within the allotted time, plaintiff had the right to complete any unfinished work and recover its costs from either defendant or its surety. Defendant surety issued a performance bond. Defendant developer sold some of the parcels. After the purchase the buyer learned that water and electrical improvements would have to be installed before he could proceed with development plans. He made no demand on defendant, well aware of its precarious financial position. Unable to develop the land, and informed by plaintiff that it would not install the missing improvements, the buyer contracted with plaintiff and agreed to construct all the improvements on his parcels in exchange for plaintiff's promise to reimburse him from any judgment it received from either defendant. Plaintiff brought an action for breach of contract against both defendants. Defendant surety cross complained for indemnity from the buyer. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff against both defendants and for cross defendant buyer. Defendants' motion for a new trial was denied. Defendants appealed the judgment against them.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among the issues addressed by the court was exoneration of the surety. Defendant surety claimed it was exonerated on the surety bond because plaintiff materially altered the principal's obligations under the subdivision agreement without defendant's consent. Alternatively, defendant argued it was not indemnified by the principal within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2819, which provides that a surety is exonerated, except so far as he or she may be indemnified by the principal, if by any act of the creditor the original obligation is altered. The issue was not raised at trial even though exoneration should have been pleaded and proved as an affirmative defense. Defendant's failure to introduce any evidence regarding indemnification precluded consideration of that argument on appeal. The court rejected on the merits defendant's claim of material alteration of the principal's obligations. Defendant alleged a material alteration through the relocation of a water main. The alteration was necessary because the defendant had not performed its work in a workmanlike manner and any additional costs were precisely what defendant had obligated itself to pay. Its other basis for exoneration, a 12-month time extension, was specifically waived in the agreement. The agreement provided for extensions of time, and the surety's obligation was measured by the terms of that agreement considered in conjunction with the bond (98 Cal. App. 3d 389, 399-401) .

[d] Void or Voidable Promise by Creditor Will Not Cause Exoneration Unless It Is Material Alteration

In Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231 , an unsecured promissory note was executed and delivered to defendants. Defendants sold and assigned the note to plaintiffs and guaranteed its payment. After plaintiffs informed defendants that the note remained unpaid at maturity, plaintiffs and the principal arranged for an immediate partial payment, with the balance paid two months after the original due date. Defendants had no knowledge of these arrangements. When the balance on the note remained unpaid, plaintiffs brought an action against the principal as maker and defendants as guarantors. The trial court found that plaintiffs agreed to and did grant a valid extension of time to the principal and that the agreement was made without the knowledge or consent of defendants, thereby materially altering the original obligation and discharging the guarantors. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded to the trial court to decide whether or not the agreement to extend time was for a definite period. Plaintiffs contended that they did not agree to grant an extension of time for payment for a definite period, and claimed that the evidence established the acceptance of a partial payment coupled with a delay in the enforcement of the obligation, and that neither of these exonerated defendant. The court thoroughly analyzed the law regarding an extension of time and partial payment in relation to exoneration of the surety. Civ. Code § 2822 provides that the acceptance by a creditor of partial payment reduces to that extent the obligation of a surety, but does not otherwise affect it or exonerate the surety. And Civ. Code § 2823 provides that a mere delay on the part of the creditor to proceed against the principal does not exonerate the surety. But an extension of time of payment without the surety's consent constitutes a material alteration of the original obligation and discharges the surety. Injury to the surety is presumed as a matter of law, and is not a matter into which the creditor may inquire (257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774) . Civ. Code § 2820 also provides that the fact that a promise by a creditor is for any cause void, or voidable by the creditor or at the creditor's option, shall not prevent it from altering the obligation or suspending or impairing the remedy within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2819. Thus, the fact that an extension agreement is subject to rescission at the option of the creditor does not preclude it from discharging the surety. However, an agreement to extend time does not exonerate a surety unless the extension is for a definite period. Civ. Code § 2820 does not dispense with the requirement that the extension agreement be for a definite period. Conceivably, a void or voidable promise might alter an obligation or impair a remedy when the rights of third parties intervene or other circumstances have occurred which prejudicially affect the surety. Nevertheless, Civ. Code § 2820 must be read in the context of Civ. Code § 2819, which requires a material alteration in the original obligation in order to exonerate the surety. Thus, before it can be deemed to be a material alteration which, without a showing of detriment or prejudice to the surety, operates to discharge the surety as a matter of law, the agreement to extend time, though void or voidable at the option of the creditor, must be for a definite period. Plaintiffs contended that they did not promise to extend the time of payment for a definite period. Because the trial court merely found that plaintiffs agreed to grant a valid extension of time, and did not consider the necessity for a definite period of time, the court of appeal could not construe its meaning (257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 775-776) .

[e] Creditor's Attempt to Enforce Obligation Not Within Suretyship Agreement Does Not Constitute Alteration

The facts and procedural background of Glickman v. Collins (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 852, 120 Cal. Rptr. 76, 533 P.2d 204 , are discussed in § 222.100[3][a]. In Glickman, the Supreme Court upheld defendant's liability on a guaranty she executed. Defendant claimed, among other contentions, that as the guaranty did not encompass the principal's obligation to provide medical insurance, plaintiff's attempt to recover those payments altered the obligation of the principal so as to discharge defendant as guarantor. The Court disagreed, stating that the provision for medical insurance was included in the settlement agreement and plaintiff's inclusion of it in her claim on the guaranty did not alter either defendant's liability or that of the principal. Thus, defendant was not discharged of her obligation by reason of plaintiff's attempt to recover them from her. Since defendant never agreed to guarantee those payments, the judgment against defendant was reduced by that amount (13 Cal. 3d 852, 862) .

The facts and procedural background of Ralston-Purina Co. v. Carter (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 26 Cal. Rptr. 690 , are discussed in § 222.200[3][b]. Although the court of appeal in Ralston-Purina reversed a judgment against defendant guarantor, on grounds other than exoneration, the court addressed that issue at length, and found that no exoneration of the guarantor's liability had occurred. The guaranty was for merchandise only and did not include a guaranty of cash given to the principal, even though cash was used to reimburse the principal for merchandise which he bought from other sources. Defendant contended that the receipt of cash terminated his liability; the court did not agree. The guaranty was only for merchandise and, while the principal was responsible for the notes he signed for cash received, the guarantor was not responsible for anything other than merchandise (210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 377-378) . Civ. Code § 2819 provides that a guarantor is released if the original obligation is altered. Additionally, a guarantor is not liable on any contract not within the terms of the guaranty. There was no alteration of the guaranty in this case, but merely an attempt by the creditor to charge the guarantor with items for which the guarantor was not liable under the guaranty. The guaranty covered any and all types of merchandise if they were received by the principal, but it did not include financing charges other than lawful interest (210 Cal. App. 2d 372, 378) .

[f] Alteration as Defense Must Be Pleaded at Trial

In Newhouse v. Getz (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 113, 47 P.2d 306 , plaintiff sued to collect a deficiency on a note after the sale of property described in a deed of trust which was given as security for the note. Defendants were the corporation which executed the note and an individual defendant who endorsed the note. After the note had been executed and payments were in arrears, defendant corporation made an oral agreement whereby plaintiff was to receive an assignment of rents from the property in payment of the interest. The individual defendant claimed that this agreement released him from liability. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated, among other points raised on appeal, that the discharge of a guarantor under Civ. Code § 2819 was a special defense to the suit on the note. That defense must be pleaded and tried. As it was not raised at the trial level, it could not be raised on appeal. The evidence of alteration was in direct conflict, and the court had to assume that if there had been findings on that issue, they would have been adverse to defendant (8 Cal. App. 2d 113, 114) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alteration to Which Surety Gave Consent Does Not Exonerate

The court of appeal in State Bd. of Equalization v. Carleton (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 273 Cal. Rptr. 436 , reversed the trial court's judgment for a guarantor of sales and use tax liability, holding that the guarantor had previously consented to alterations. The guarantor relied on Com. Code § 2819 and contended that the taxpayer's execution of waivers, which allowed the SBE to issue a deficiency determination beyond the statutory deadline, amounted to material alterations of the obligation and thus exonerated him (223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 1609) . The court of appeal agreed that the waivers were material alterations of the original obligation and that they would have exonerated the guarantor if the guarantor had not consented to the waivers. The guarantee agreement said that the guarantor's liability is "coextensive with that of the taxpayer and no change in the law or extensions, waivers, or modifications of the liability negotiated between the taxpayer and the State Board of Equalization shall in any way relieve" guarantor of this obligation (223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 1610) . This constituted an unconditional promise to pay the taxpayer's liability even if the principal obligation was materially altered without the knowledge or express consent of the surety (223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 1609-1610) .

[b] Surety's Consent to Alteration May Be Given at Any Time

The facts and procedural background of State Bd. of Equalization v. Carleton (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 273 Cal. Rptr. 436 , are discussed in § 222.243[4][a]. In its analysis, the court of appeal stated that the surety's consent to changes in the contract between the principal and the debtor may be given in advance in the contract for performance of the suretyship obligation (223 Cal. App. 3d 1607, 1610) .

[c] No Alteration of Surety Obligation

In FM Conner v. Conner (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 646, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 687 , two brothers had founded a business. One brother, the creditor, sold his stock for a promissory note executed by the business and personally guaranteed and secured by a deed of trust on real property by the second brother, the surety. The business later filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition. The surety brought an action to declare the rights and liabilities of the parties. The promissory note was subject to an offset for a preference payment which the creditor was required to make to the bankruptcy trustee. The business filed a second reorganization plan which the creditor believed to be a fraud. The business offered to waive the preference claim if the creditor withdrew his claim on the note. The creditor, however, feared that withdrawal of the creditor's claim would exonerate the surety's personal guarantee. After approval of the bankruptcy plan, the creditor requested that the surety make him whole as required by the personal guarantee and filed a cross-complaint to enforce the guarantee. The trial court found that nothing the creditor did or failed to do in the bankruptcy proceeding rose to the level of prejudicing the surety or exonerating the surety on the guarantee, and it entered judgment for the creditor (76 Cal. App. 4th 646, 648-649) .

On appeal, the surety claimed that the creditor's rejection of the settlement offer "altered" his obligation as a surety. The court disagreed. His acceptance of the settlement offer would have extinguished the personal guarantee. By rejecting the offer, the creditor left the personal guarantee just as it was bargained for 10 years earlier. He was not required to waive his creditor's claim if it would jeopardize enforcement of the personal guarantee. The court of appeal therefore affirmed the judgment (76 Cal. App. 4th 646, 650-652) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.244

§ 222.244 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Accord Does Not Exonerate Surety for Lesser Sum Agreed On [Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2822(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following should be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or a trial or appellate brief.]

THE AGREEMENT BY _____ [Name], AS CREDITOR, WITH DEBTOR, TO ACCEPT A LESSER SUM THAN THE BALANCE OWING HAS NOT EXONERATED _____ [Name], AS SURETY, FOR THAT LESSER SUM.

Effect of Accord Between Creditor and Debtor. For purposes of Sections 2819 and 2822 of the Civil Code, an agreement by a creditor to accept from the principal debtor a sum less than the balance owed on the original obligation, without the prior consent of the surety and without any other change to the underlying agreement between the creditor and principal debtor, does not exonerate the surety for the lesser sum agreed on by the creditor and the principal debtor (Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2822(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted after the creditor has agreed with the debtor to settle for a lesser sum than owed on the original obligation, to support the creditor's contention that the surety remains liable for that lesser sum [Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2822(b)].

The points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the surety is not exonerated for the amount agreed on.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The agreement to accept a lesser sum should be quoted or referred to, followed by a statement that the there has been no other change in the underlying agreement between the creditor and the principal.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Effect of Creditor's Agreement to Accept Lesser Sum

Civ. Code § 2819 provides in part that nothing in that section shall be construed to supersede Civ. Code § 2822(b).

These amendments to Civ. Code §§ 2819 and 2822 were enacted as an urgency measure, effective July 19, 1993 [Stats. 1993, ch. 149, § 4], and did not constitute a change in law but were declaratory of existing law [Stats. 1993, ch. 149, § 3].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
1. Exoneration Through Alteration

22-222 California Points & Authorities §§ 222.245-222.259

[Reserved]

§§ 222.245[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
2. Exoneration Through Revocation

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.260

§ 222.260 Supporting Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Surety Has Revoked Continuing Guaranty [Civ. Code § 2815]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT REVOKED HIS/HER/ITS CONTINUING GUARANTY IN RESPECT TO FUTURE TRANSACTIONS AND THE OBLIGATION FOR WHICH PERFORMANCE IS SOUGHT WAS INCURRED AFTER THAT REVOCATION.

A. Surety May Revoke Future Liability on Continuing Guaranty. A continuing guaranty may be revoked at any time by the surety, in respect to future transactions, unless there is a continuing consideration as to those transactions which is not renounced (Civ. Code § 2815; White Sewing Machine Co. v. Courtney (1904) 141 Cal. 674, 676-677, 75 P. 296 ; Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4).

[Optional] B. Third-Party Pledge as Continuing Guaranty Under Civil Code Section 2815. A pledge agreement under which a party hypothecates property as security for the debts of another is a guaranty for purposes of the suretyship provisions of the Civil Code, including the revocation provisions of Civil Code Section 2815 (Pearl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1028, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805).

[Optional] C. No Waiver of Continuing Guaranty Absent Explicit Waiver Language. Waiver of the right to revoke a continuing guaranty pursuant to Civil Code Section 2815 will not be found absent a clear and explicit waiver by the guarantor (Pearl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1032, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety for a continuing guaranty has been exonerated due to an effective revocation of the surety's liability [see Civ. Code § 2815].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration due to revocation. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety is liable for the obligation of the principal obligation [see, e.g., White Sewing Machine Co. v. Courtney (1904) 141 Cal. 674, 676, 75 P. 296 (appeal)]. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel might include facts illustrating the surety's written revocation of the suretyship agreement and describing the obligation that was incurred on a date subsequent to that revocation, as well as showing there was no continuing consideration that was not renounced [see Civ. Code § 2815].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.261 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety May Revoke Future Liability on Continuing Guaranty

In White Sewing Machine Co. v. Courtney (1904) 141 Cal. 674, 75 P. 296 , defendant principal debtor became a sales agent for plaintiff. Defendant surety executed a bond which provided that if the principal debtor paid to plaintiff all indebtedness then existing or thereafter incurred, the bond would be void. Plaintiff's sewing machines were sold to the principal on consignment. When the principal became insolvent, defendant surety demanded of plaintiff to be released from the bond, and thereafter, with plaintiff's and the principal's consent, a release was executed and ratified by plaintiff. Sometime later plaintiff and the principal executed a second agreement, not involving defendant surety, for machines sold. Plaintiff brought suit for the amount owing on the second agreement against both defendant principal debtor and defendant surety. The trial court judgment was against defendant principal, and in favor of defendant surety. Plaintiff appealed the judgment.

The Supreme Court affirmed. Plaintiff contended that defendant surety had no right to revoke the contract of suretyship, nor to demand and receive a release as surety as to future transactions between the principal and plaintiff, and that defendant surety was bound to continue to be responsible under the bond for all time, and for all future transactions, so long as plaintiff chose to continue business with the principal. The Court disagreed, saying that was not the effect of the transaction. If the bond had recited that the principal was appointed agent of plaintiff for a definite time, and the obligation of defendant was to stand as his surety during that time, defendant surety could neither revoke the contract nor would he be entitled to a release without plaintiff's consent. And the same would be true with respect to a contract to become surety for the performance of any definite contract, such as the erection of a building or the administration of an estate. But the contract was one to become surety for any liability which might thereafter exist or be incurred by the principal to plaintiff. Civ. Code § 2815 governed. It provides that a continuing guaranty may be revoked at any time by the guarantor, in respect to future transactions, unless there is a continuing consideration as to those transactions which is not renounced. Defendant surety's bond was a continuing guaranty. As a surety on a contract contemplating a future liability of the principal under successive transactions, defendant had a right at any time to revoke the contract with respect to liability on any transaction which was not at that time begun. The demand for a release and the consent by plaintiff, followed by the execution of the release, constituted a revocation of the contract by the surety. The second sale was a future transaction with relation to which the contract of suretyship was revoked, and for which defendant could not be held responsible (141 Cal. 674, 676-678) .

The facts and procedural background of Southern Cal. First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4 , are discussed in § 222.243[4][a]. In Southern Cal., the court of appeal upheld a finding that defendant surety was not liable for liability incurred after its revocation of the suretyship agreement. After defendants revoked their guaranty, the creation of a new note at a new interest rate was a future transaction. A continuing guaranty does not cover renewals, after revocation, of obligations which were covered by the guaranty at the time of revocation (41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 240) .

[b] Third-Party Pledge as Continuing Guaranty Under Civil Code Section 2815

In Pearl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805 , plaintiff executed a guaranty and separate pledge agreement on behalf of a car dealer. The guaranty, drafted by defendant creditor, stated that it was a continuing guaranty that would remain in full force and effect until defendant received a notice of termination from plaintiff. The pledge agreement, also drafted by defendant creditor, pledged 20,000 shares of stock to secure a revolving line of credit for the dealer that would involve repayments and future extensions of credit. With respect to revocation, the agreement stated, in pertinent part "[t]his Agreement ... shall remain in full force and effect until all obligations owing to Pledgee by Borrowers have been satisfied ... Upon satisfaction of all such obligations, this agreement shall terminate ..." Several weeks after executing the guaranty and pledge agreement, plaintiff delivered to defendant a letter revoking and terminating the continuing guaranty and pledge agreement. Defendant acknowledged plaintiff's termination of the guaranty as to future advances, but it advised plaintiff that the pledge agreement continued in effect. Plaintiff then sought declaratory relief regarding the pledge agreement, asking the court to confirm that his purported termination of the agreement was effective to preclude his responsibility for future loans made by defendant to the dealer. The trial court entered summary judgment for defendant.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. With respect to the pledge agreement, the trial court first addressed plaintiff's assertion that Civ. Code § 2815 applies to pledge agreements executed by nondebtors. Under Civ. Code § 2787, the term "guarantor" includes one who promises to answer for a debt of another, or hypothecates property as security therefor. The statute further provides that guaranties of collection and continuing guaranties are forms of suretyship obligations, and except in so far as necessary in order to give effect to provisions specifically relating thereto, guaranties are subject to all provisions of law relating to suretyships in general. The court stated that because under the pledge agreement, plaintiff hypothecated or pledged his stock as security for the debts of the dealer, pursuant to the express terms of Civ. Code § 2787, plaintiff was a "guarantor" and the pledge agreement was implicitly a "guaranty" for purposes of the suretyship provisions of the Civil Code, including Civ. Code § 2815. Under Civ. Code § 2814, a "continuing guaranty" is a guaranty relating to a future liability of the principal, under successive transactions, which either continue his liability or from time to time renew it after it has been satisfied. Thus, since the pledge agreement secured a revolving line of credit for the dealer, the pledge agreement must be considered a "continuing guaranty" for purposes of Civ. Code §§ 2814 and 2815. The court concluded that absent a possible waiver or other considerations, Civ. Code § 2815 would allow plaintiff to revoke the pledge agreement at any time as to future extensions of credit (13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1028) .

[c] No Waiver of Continuing Guaranty Absent Explicit Waiver Language

The facts and procedural background of Pearl v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805 , are discussed in § 222.260[3][b]. In Pearl, the defendant creditor claimed that plaintiff effected a waiver of his right to revoke the pledge agreement. The court of appeal held that the right to revoke indeed was waivable (13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1030) . The court determined, however, that the terms of the pledge agreement did not effect the waiver of plaintiff's revocation rights. The pledge agreement was ambiguous with respect to waiver. It did not mention Civ. Code § 2815 by name. Furthermore, it did not specifically state that plaintiff may not revoke the continuing security interest at any time as to future advances made by defendant to the dealer. The court stated that in light of the important rights granted guarantors by Civ. Code § 2815, any waiver language must be clear, so that a guarantor knows on execution of the document that he or she will not have any right to revoke the guaranty as to any future advances and, thus, that the guarantor may essentially have no control over his or her ultimate responsibility for the debtor's borrowings. The provisions of the pledge agreement did not affirmatively establish an intent to waive the benefits of Civ. Code § 2815, according to the court. To the extent that the agreement contained ambiguity, the court was required to interpret the agreement most strongly against defendant, the drafting party. The court concluded that plaintiff's revocation rights were not waived by the language contained in the pledge agreement, and that plaintiff's termination letter effectively revoked his responsibility under the agreement for advances made to the dealer after defendant received it (13 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1031-1033) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
2. Exoneration Through Revocation

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.261

§ 222.261 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Retroactive Revocation Ineffective or Continuing Consideration Not Renounced [Civ. Code § 2815]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE HIS/HER/ITS REVOCATION _____ [DOES NOT APPLY TO OBLIGATIONS INCURRED PRIOR TO THE REVOCATION and/or DID NOT RENOUNCE A CONTINUING CONSIDERATION THAT EXISTS FOR FUTURE TRANSACTIONS].

[EITHER]

A. Surety May Not Revoke Its Liability Retroactively. A surety may not revoke its liability retroactively; a surety remains liable if the purpose for which the suretyship was required has been obtained (American City Bank v. Tourtelot (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591-592, 150 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; Nielsen v. Davidson (1924) 66 Cal. App 442, 444, 226 P 835).

[AND/OR]

B. Continuing Consideration for Future Transactions Not Renounced by Surety. A continuing guaranty is not revoked by the surety if there is a continuing consideration for future transactions that was not renounced by the surety (see Civ. Code § 2815).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a surety's contention that he or she has been exonerated due to revocation. The ground of opposition is that there was no exoneration because the revocation attempted to revoke the surety's liability retroactively (Paragraph A) or because a continuing consideration for future transactions was renounced by the surety (Paragraph B) [see Civ. Code § 2815].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment premised on the argument that the surety was not liable for the principal's obligation [see, e.g., American City Bank v. Tourtelot (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 585, 586, 150 Cal. Rptr. 361] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts showing that the surety attempted to revoke its liability retroactively, or that a continuing consideration exists that was not renounced by the surety [see Civ. Code § 2815].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.260.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety May Not Revoke Its Liability Retroactively

In American City Bank v. Tourtelot (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 585, 150 Cal. Rptr. 361 , defendant, a director of a trust company, executed a continuing guaranty for money owed by the trust company to plaintiff. The guaranty, in addition to those made by other directors, was executed when the trust company executed two promissory notes to plaintiff. Within the guaranty there were provisions allowing plaintiff to alter, compromise, or change the time or manner for payment, change the interest rate, release or add guarantors, and accept or release security without notice to defendant. It was a continuing guaranty and would remain effective until revoked in writing. The guaranty bound the guarantor's heirs, executor, and assigns. The trust company defaulted and eventually plaintiff offered it a repayment program calling for monthly installment payments, and notified all the guarantors of the program. The notice was sent to defendant even though plaintiff knew of his death. When the installments were not paid, plaintiff requested payment of the guarantors. Plaintiff brought an action to enforce the guaranty when decedent defendant's executrix refused to pay. The executrix asserted that the indebtedness had been renewed and extended after defendant's death, of which plaintiff had knowledge. A summary judgment for plaintiff was granted. The executrix of defendant's estate appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court did not accept plaintiff's premise that the guaranty provision binding the makers's heirs, executor, and assigns was intended to prevent notice of the maker's death from acting as a revocation of the guaranty. A creditor's knowledge of a guarantor's death will result in the revocation of a continuing guaranty with respect to future advances. Had the parties wished to change this rule, they could have done so by more explicit language. The language of the guaranty merely established that the guarantor's estate would remain responsible after the guarantor's death for any liability incurred by him under the guaranty during his lifetime (86 Cal. App. 3d 585, 590) . Decedent's executrix argued that the repayment program resulted in the creation of a subsequent indebtedness for which decedent's estate was not responsible because his guaranty had been revoked. The court distinguished Southern Cal.

First Nat. Bank v. Olsen (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 234, 116 Cal. Rptr. 4 (discussed in § 222.243[3][a]), and found that the executrix's reliance on it was misplaced. So far as the rights of a guarantor are concerned, there is no essential difference between an extension of the time of payment of the old note and a renewal. All of the indebtedness incurred for which plaintiff sought to hold decedent's estate liable was advanced to the trust company prior to the time that decedent's guaranty was revoked by notice of his death. Plaintiff's decision to extend or renew the obligations following that revocation did not, pursuant to the terms of the guaranty, create a subsequent indebtedness for which decedent's estate is not responsible (86 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591-592) .

In Nielsen v. Davidson (1924) 66 Cal. App 442, 226 P 835 , plaintiff agreed to sell his dairy to two purchasers who asked plaintiff to accept two promissory notes to cover one-half the purchase price. Plaintiff agreed, provided the arrangement was acceptable to the bank handling the transaction. Defendant told the bank that he was a silent partner in the dairy and would guarantee the notes, and sent a letter to that effect. After the sale was completed and the purchasers took possession, defendant attempted to revoke his guaranty. The notes had been made payable to the bank, which assigned the notes to plaintiff, when defendant attempted to revoke. Plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount on the notes. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant argued that the guaranty was revoked. Defendant attempted to revoke the guaranty long after it had been acted on and the purpose for which it had been executed obtained by his associates. As soon as the sale was consummated the guaranty became irrevocable so far as plaintiff was concerned (66 Cal. App 442, 444) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
2. Exoneration Through Revocation

22-222 California Points & Authorities §§ 222.262-222.279

[Reserved]

§§ 222.262[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
3. Exoneration Through Principal's Defenses

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.280

§ 222.280 Supporting Contention That Surety Is Not Liable--Surety Entitled to Use Principal's Defenses to Avoid Liability [Civ. Code § 2810]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS NOT LIABLE FOR HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE THERE IS NO LIABILITY ON THE PART OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL.

[EITHER]

A. Surety May Invoke Principal's Defenses Existing at Execution of Underlying Contract. The surety is not liable if for any reason other than the mere personal disability of the principal there is no liability on the part of the principal at the time of the execution of the contract. If the underlying contract is unenforceable, the defenses available to the principal, such as illegality and usury, are also available to the surety (Civ. Code § 2810; Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 154-155, 308 P.2d 713 ; Rochester Capital Leasing Corp. v. K & L Litho Corp. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 697, 705, 91 Cal. Rptr. 827).

[AND/OR]

B. Surety May Invoke Principal's Defenses That Terminate Principal's Liability on Underlying Contract After Execution. The surety is not liable if for any reason other than the mere personal disability of the principal the liability of the principal ceases. The available defenses include things which exonerate once the liability has been incurred, such as performance, since the surety is in no worse position than the principal would be if sued separately (Civ. Code § 2810; Post Bros. Constr. Co. v. Yoder (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 141 Cal. Rptr. 28, 569 P.2d 133 ; Flickinger v.

Swedlow Engineering Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 388, 394, 289 P.2d 214).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has been released from liability because the principal, other than from a mere personal disability, was not liable at the time the underlying contract was executed (Paragraph A) or because the principal, other than from a mere personal disability, ceased to be liable (Paragraph B) [see Civ. Code § 2010].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the surety's lack of liability. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a motion for summary judgment or an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was liable for the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 145, 308 P.2d 713] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts demonstrating that the original obligation between the creditor and principal was unenforceable because it was usurious [see, e.g., Rochester Capital Leasing Corp. v. K & L Litho Corp. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 697, 91 Cal. Rptr. 827] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.282 or § 222.303 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety May Invoke Principal's Defenses Existing at Execution of Underlying Contract

In Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 308 P.2d 713 , after defendant contractor was awarded contracts for the construction of a parkway, it contracted with plaintiff for services and equipment. Defendant surety executed the required labor and material bonds. Plaintiff brought an action against both defendants for damages for breach of the equipment rental contracts. Defendant contractor cross complained, alleging breach of contract and seeking recovery of overpayments. The trial court judgment was for defendants on the complaint and for plaintiff on the cross complaint. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court ruled that plaintiff's behavior in acting as a contractor without the license required of it barred plaintiff from maintaining any action for compensation. Plaintiff contended that even if it could not recover on the contracts from defendant contractor, the defense of a lack of a license was not available to defendant surety. The Court disagreed, saying that no action was allowed. Moreover, even in the absence of the statute requiring a license to maintain an action, the defense of illegality was available to the surety if it was available to the principal. The obligation of the surety on defendant's bonds was not to pay for labor merely by virtue of the fact that it had been expended; it was an obligation to pay only if plaintiff established, without reference to the bond, a legal and valid claim for compensation (48 Cal. 2d 141, 154-155) .

In Rochester Capital Leasing Corp. v. K & L Litho Corp. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 697, 91 Cal. Rptr. 827 , defendants were organizers of a printing company. As a method of financing, defendants and plaintiff agreed that defendants would convey title to the printing equipment to plaintiff and plaintiff would lease the same equipment to defendants. Under the lease-back arrangement, defendants retained the use of the equipment and received from plaintiff a large sum of money. Defendants as individuals with their wives were to execute guaranties. Later the equipment was assigned to another person by defendants, with plaintiff's permission. The successor lessee was in arrears for some time and an involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed against it. Plaintiff sold the equipment and brought an action for breach of contract. The trial court found that the agreements made in the form of lease-backs were not lease-backs, but transactions representing loans of money made by plaintiff to defendants at usurious rates of interest and that the security for the loans was the equipment which defendants conveyed to plaintiffs. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. In addition to a discussion of the law applicable to the agreements, the court considered the argument raised by defendants as guarantors. Plaintiff contended that the guaranties provided independent grounds for recovery. Defendant guarantors contended that the guaranties they severally executed were made for a lease-back agreement, which due to technical flaws enforced by plaintiff were never executed. Plaintiff contended that two new and separate lease-back agreements were executed as substitutes. Defendant guarantors did not sign the new guaranties. The court said that it did not need to decide if it was the intention of the parties that the new guaranties be applied to the two new lease-back agreements. As the agreements were held to be usurious, the principal obligation which plaintiff contended was guaranteed was usurious. Citing Civ. Code § 2810, the court said that under the circumstances at hand, any guaranties, even if extant, were unenforceable (13 Cal. App. 3d 697, 705) .

[b] Surety May Invoke Principal's Defenses That Terminate Principal's Liability on Underlying Contract After Execution

In Post Bros. Constr. Co. v. Yoder (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 1, 141 Cal. Rptr. 28, 569 P.2d 133 , defendant was the owner of a tract of land for which its subsidiary served as general contractor. The subsidiary subcontracted with defendant subcontractor for grading work on the tract. The subcontractor rented the necessary equipment from plaintiff, with whom it had done business in the past. Prior to commencement of the work, defendant owner as principal and its surety executed a labor and material bond, providing that if the principal, contractor, or subcontractor failed to pay for materials or labor, the surety would pay the amount due. Defendant subsidiary issued checks totalling the amount due under the contract, jointly naming the subcontractor, other materialmen, and plaintiff as payees. They were endorsed by each named payee, including plaintiff, then deposited in the subcontractor's bank account. Pursuant to their usual business arrangement, plaintiff credited the checks received from the subcontractor to the earliest unpaid invoices, but there remained money owing. Plaintiff brought an action against the subcontractor for the amount due, and after recovering a default judgment against the insolvent subcontractor, brought action against defendant surety. The trial court judgment was for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court first addressed the method of payment before addressing the suretyship rules. The Court noted that the use of joint checks is well established by custom and practice in the construction industry and is deemed payment to those named. Because the joint check is deemed payment to the materialman, the paid materialman may not recover on the owner's or contractor's surety bond. The application of the governing statutes dictates this result. Under Civ. Code § 2810, the surety is entitled to the principal's defenses other than personal defenses unless the surety assumed liability with knowledge of the defense; under Civ. Code § 2839, performance exonerates the surety. To hold otherwise would mean that the principal would be the one ultimately liable, and required to pay twice because a surety is entitled to reimbursement from its principal by the provisions of Civ. Code § 2847. To so hold would preclude effective use of joint checks in all cases when there is a surety bond, defeating the simple, speedy, and fair method of payment open to the owner and contractor who wish to pay fully once and only once for labor and material in a manner offering protection to the materialman. Plaintiff argued that the bond provided for payment when subcontractors fail to pay for material, and reasoned that even if it had been deemed paid by the owner and contractor, it has not been paid by the subcontractor and may proceed on the bond. However, plaintiff was deemed paid under the joint check rule as among itself, the owner, and the principal on the bond, and the surety was entitled to the principal's defenses (20 Cal. 3d 1, 8) .

In Flickinger v. Swedlow Engineering Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 388, 289 P.2d 214 , plaintiff, a licensed contractor, contracted with defendant general contractor to perform a portion of defendant's contract for the construction of a highway. Defendant surety issued a performance bond for defendant contractor. Thereafter plaintiff assigned the contract to a partnership comprised of himself and another licensed contractor, although the partnership itself was not licensed. The partnership performed the work, but a controversy arose between the parties after completion. Defendant general contractor sued plaintiffs for damages for breach of contract. Plaintiff partnership counterclaimed for monies owed it. The trial court judgment allowed neither party recovery. Later plaintiff brought an action against defendants, principal and surety, seeking payment alleged to be due under the bonds. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendants' motion for a new trial was denied. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court decided the case on application of former Code Civ. Proc. § 439 (superseded by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 426.10 and 426.30-426.60), which stated the law as to when counterclaims arising out of the same transaction need to be brought. The Court examined the law pertaining to cross complaints and the law's abhorrence of multiplicity of actions. While plaintiff had the option to file a cross complaint on the bond, and thereby bring in the surety as a party in the prior action, he was clearly compelled to assert by way of counterclaim, in the prior action, any right which he had against defendant principal under the contract. Plaintiff was barred from relitigating his alleged rights under the contract as the basis for an action against defendant as the principal on the bond. And as that defense to the action was available to defendant as principal, it was likewise available to defendant surety as the surety on the bond. Sureties on a bond have a legal right to avail themselves of all defenses that would be allowed the principal and are generally in no worse position than the surety would be if sued separately (45 Cal. 2d 388, 394) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Surety May Invoke Principal's Defenses Existing at Execution of Underlying Contract

In Wells v. Comstock (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 528, 297 P.2d 961 , plaintiffs, officers in a corporation, agreed to sell to defendant, general manager of that corporation, shares of corporate stock. Defendant guaranteed defendant buyer's performance. Plaintiffs brought an action for breach of contract. Defendants' main contention was that the contract was unenforceable because the shares were illegally issued. The trial court found that plaintiffs had caused the shares to be issued in violation of its corporate permit, that defendant buyer participated in the issuance of the stock with knowledge of the violation, and that defendant buyer was estopped from asserting illegality. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff against both defendants. The Supreme Court reversed. The Court discussed both contract law and the Corporate Securities Act, finding that estoppel did not apply and that the contract was unenforceable. With regard to defendant guarantor, the Court cited Civ. Code § 2810 and said that since the principal obligation of the contract was unenforceable because of illegality, the guaranty was also unenforceable (46 Cal. 2d 528, 533) .

The court of appeal in WRI Opportunity Loans II, LLC v. Cooper (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 525, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205 , resolving an issue not previously addressed by California appellate courts, held that insofar as a guaranteed debt for interest is unenforceable on the ground of usury, the guarantor's contract cannot be construed or enforced so as to waive the guarantor's right to raise that defense, since a promise to pay usurious interest is illegal and therefore cannot be enforced on any theory (154 Cal. App. 4th 525, 542-544) .

The court of appeal in Kalfountzos v. Hartford Fire Ins. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1655, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 714 , affirmed a judgment for cross-defendant surety in a cross-action by a subcontractor. The court held that the fact that the contractor's corporate status had been suspended, causing it to default in the subcontractor's action against it, did not preclude the surety from raising the contractor's defenses and setoffs (37 Cal. App. 4th 1655, 1659) . Because those defenses and setoffs were valid, the surety was not liable to the subcontractor (37 Cal. App. 4th 1655, 1661) .

The court of appeal in Bennett v. Leatherby (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 449, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 340 , affirmed a judgment for guarantors of a lease and sublease, holding that under Civ. Code § 2819, plaintiff/lessor's settlement and general release of partners of the sublessee for sums owed for breach of the sublease exonerated guarantors of the lease and sublease because the lessor/creditor, and thus the guarantors, would no longer have any rights against the sublessee (3 Cal. App. 4th 449, 452-453) [see also Civ. Code §§ 2819, 2822(b) (discussed in § 222.244)].

The court of appeal in Schmitt v. Insurance Co. of North America (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 245, 281 Cal. Rptr. 261 , reversed a judgment against defendant surety, the issuer of a statutory motor vehicle dealer's bond. Plaintiff bought and paid for a used vehicle but never obtained possession or title to it due to the fraudulent acts of third persons who were not parties to the action. The dealer was in violation of certain Vehicle Code provisions in failing to report the transfer. Plaintiff considered defendant, rather than the dealer, to be primarily liable. After obtaining a default judgment against the dealer, plaintiff released the dealer in return for the dealer's assignment of its claim against defendant surety. The court of appeal relied on Civ. Code §§ 2810 and 2819 (set forth in § 222.240) in holding that as of the date of the assignment and release, any obligation the dealer had to plaintiff pertaining to the original transaction was extinguished and, thus, no further liability on the surety bond ran from defendant to plaintiff (230 Cal. App. 3d 245, 259) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
3. Exoneration Through Principal's Defenses

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.281

§ 222.281 Supporting Contention That Surety Is Not Liable--Nonjudicial Foreclosure Impairs Surety's Remedies Against Principal and Estops Creditor From Proceeding Against Surety (the "Gradsky Defense") [Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819; Code Civ. Proc. § 580d]

[1] FORM

[The following should be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY IS NOT LIABLE FOR HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION BECAUSE THE NONJUDICIAL FORECLOSURE OF THE REAL PROPERTY COLLATERAL PRECLUDES ENTRY OF A PERSONAL JUDGMENT AGAINST _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL DEBTOR, AND THUS DESTROYS SURETY'S REMEDIES AGAINST PRINCIPAL.

A. Nonjudicial Foreclosure Terminates Surety's Liability. The creditor cannot recover the unpaid balance of an obligation from the surety following the creditor's nonjudicial sale of any real property that was security for the obligation (Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 41, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 ; see Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819).

[Optional] B. Attempted Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Not Sufficiently Explicit. An agreement waiving the "Gradsky defense" must inform the surety that the surety waives all rights and defenses arising out of an election of remedies by the creditor, even though that election of remedies, such as nonjudicial foreclosure with respect to security for a guaranteed obligation, has destroyed the surety's rights of subrogation and reimbursement against the principal by operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d or otherwise (Civ. Code § 2856(d); see Cathay Bank v. Lee (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1539, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420 ; Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 48, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 ; see also Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the surety has been released from liability because the creditor foreclosed nonjudicially on real property that secured the primary obligation [Civ. Code § 2856; see Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819; Code Civ. Proc. § 580d]. A contractual provision that expresses an intent to waive any or all suretyship rights and defenses will be effective to waive these rights and defenses without regard to the inclusion of any particular language or phrases in the contract to waive any rights and defenses or any references to statutory provisions or judicial decisions [Civ. Code § 2856(b)], and whether or not it would be an effective waiver of all rights and defenses that the guarantor or other surety may have in respect of his or her obligations as a surety by reason of the creditor's election of remedies [Civ. Code § 2856(d)]. Optional Paragraph B contains the statutory language set forth in Civ. Code § 2856(d) and may be used to establish that the suretyship agreement is not explicit enough to constitute waiver by the surety of this defense. Civ. Code § 2856(b)-(d), however, does not apply to a guaranty or other type of suretyship obligation made in respect of a loan secured by a deed of trust or mortgage on a dwelling for not more than four families when the dwelling is occupied, entirely or in part, by the borrower and that loan was in fact used to pay all or part of the purchase price of that dwelling [Civ. Code § 2856(e)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the surety is released from liability. Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. The agreement should be quoted or referred to.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in this form may be opposed by those in § 222.283, which required less explicit waiver language.

Counsel may also wish to incorporate points and authorities from Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, that address deficiency judgment prohibitions.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonjudicial Foreclosure Terminates Surety's Liability

In Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 , defendant Bess Gradsky borrowed $112,500 from plaintiff and executed a note payable to plaintiff Bank, secured by a first deed of trust and a construction loan disbursement agreement. Guarantor, defendant Max Gradsky, although having the same surname as maker, Defendant Bess Gradsky, was not related. Their sole relationship was that of owner (Bess) of the property on which surety, as general contractor (Max), had been engaged to construct a building. The due date of the note was extended twice after completion of the building. Both times, guarantor's specific consent to the extension was obtained. Bank foreclosed at the trustee's sale at which Bank bid $112,500, the fair market value of the property. After paying costs of sale and delinquent taxes, the proceeds were less than the remaining principal and interest owing on the note by $11,566. When Bank sued guarantor to recover the $11,566, Guarantor demurred. The trial court dismissed the action on the ground that Code Civ. Proc. § 580d shields a guarantor from a deficiency judgment remaining after a nonjudicial foreclosure sale. Bank appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed.

At the time the Bank foreclosed, the court of appeal reasoned, it has three options: (1) to proceed against Bess and Max together in a judicial foreclosure action; (2) to proceed against Max on the guaranty for the full amount of the obligation, without proceeding against Bess or the security; or (3) to realize on the security by way of a nonjudicial sale (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 43) .

If Bank proceeded by judicial foreclosure action, it could have obtained a deficiency judgment against Bess in the judicial foreclosure proceeding. Had the Bank chosen the second course, and proceeded against Max alone, on the guaranty, neither Code Civ. Proc. § 726 (the "one-action" rule) (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 43-44 n.3), nor Code. Civ. Proc.

§ 580d would have applied. Code. Civ. Proc. § 580d would not have applied, because an action on a guaranty is neither an action "on a note" nor one "to recover a deficiency." Despite the fact that Max could not have used Code. Civ. Proc. § 580d defensively had he been sued on the guaranty before the Bank resorted to the security, Code. Civ. Proc. § 580d would have had a critical affect on the rights of the parties, because it would have limited Max' rights against Bess (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 43) . If Max paid the debt to Bank before Bank resorted to the security, Max would have acquired all Bank's rights against Bess by way of subrogation [see Civ. Code §§ 2848, 2849]. Max would have obtained by subrogation the right to pursue recovery from Bess by either judicial or nonjudicial sale of the security. If he proceeded by judicial sale, he could have obtained a deficiency judgment against Bess. However, Max could stand no better against Bess than Bank did with respect to the rights he acquired by subrogation (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 45) .

By exercising the third option, nonjudicial foreclosure of the security, Code. Civ. Proc. § 580d prevents either the Bank or the guarantor from thereafter recovering any deficiency judgment against Bess. When the creditor makes the election between possible remedies, it alone has the option of preserving its own and the surety's rights by way of subrogation to realize a personal judgment against the principal. The creditor has the duty not to impair the surety's remedies [see Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819] (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 46) . By electing a remedy that destroys both the security and the possibility of the surety's reimbursement from the principal debtor, the creditor is thereafter estopped from pursuing the guarantor for a deficiency judgment following a nonjudicial sale of the security (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 46-47) .

The court of appeal noted that there are cases holding that the antideficiency statutes do not protect guarantors or endorsers; however, those cases are factually distinguishable. The result in this situation is not solely based on the antideficiency statutes but on the application of suretyship statutes, namely Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819, 2848-2849, to the rights of the parties after judicial foreclosure sale (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 47-48) .

A guarantor may waive any defense he or she may have based on the creditor's election to proceed by nonjudicial foreclosure. The waiver can be by express contract or by subsequent actions. The language in this agreement stated that the guarantor waived "any right to require the holder of this within instrument to proceed against maker or against any other person or to apply any security it may hold or to pursue any other remedy." The court of appeal found that language insufficiently explicit to waive the guarantor's defense. The court said that whatever language was used, it should specifically waive the guarantor's defense based on the creditor's election of a remedy that destroyed both the guarantor's (1) subrogation rights and (2) right to proceed against the principal for reimbursement (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 48) . The court was unwilling to strain to imply a waiver where none was explicit (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 48) .

[b] Attempted Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Not Sufficiently Explicit

Defendant in Cathay Bank v. Lee (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420 , guaranteed a $5.2 million loan made by plaintiff Bank. The loan was secured by a hotel owned by a firm of which defendant was the corporate secretary and a director. The firm defaulted. The Bank foreclosed in a private sale. There was a deficiency between the amount realized at the sale and the amount owing on the loan. The Bank sued defendant to recover the deficiency, and obtained a judgment in its favor. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The only issue on appeal was whether defendant had waived the "Gradsky defense" [see Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 41, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 (§ 222.281[3][a])], prevents a creditor from proceeding against a surety after it has elects a particular remedy (nonjudicial foreclosure) that cuts off the guarantor's subrogation rights against the principal (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1535) . The "Gradsky defense" can be waived; and Bank claimed that its agreement with defendant waived the defense. The court of appeal found that the parties' agreement was not explicit enough to waive the "Gradsky defense" (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1542) .

Paragraph 4 of the parties' agreement provided that the guarantor authorized Bank at its sole discretion to "exercise any right or remedy it may have with respect to the Creditor or any collateral securing the Credit ... including ... exercise of power of sale ... and Guarantor shall be liable to Bank for any deficiency resulting from the exercise by it of any such remedy, even though any rights which Guarantor may have against others ... might be ... destroyed."

A sentence in Paragraph 5 that Bank claimed constituted waiver of the "Gradsky defense" read: "Guarantor waives any defense arising by reason of any disability or other defense of Debtor, its successor or endorser or co-maker or other guarantor or by reason of the cessation from any cause whatsoever of the liability of Debtor or endorser of co-maker, or other guarantor."

The court of appeal discussed the three primary cases at that time dealing with attempted waiver, in the guaranty agreement, of the so-called "Gradsky defense": Gradsky itself (Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64); Mariners Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Neil (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 99 Cal. Rptr. 238 (discussed in § 222.283[3][a]); and Indusco Management Corp. v. Robertson (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 456, 114 Cal. Rptr. 47 . Only Mariners Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Neil (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236, 99 Cal. Rptr. 238 , found the language sufficiently explicit to waive the defense. The court of appeal commented that it was easy to see why the Indusco language did not pass muster. All that agreement said was that the guarantor waives "all suretyship defenses and defenses in that nature thereof." Such general language could not be construed to be a specific wavier of the guarantor's defense (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1538) .

To constitute an explicit waiver, it is not enough that the language imply that the guarantor has a right to compel the Lender to select a particular remedy (judicial foreclosure); the waiver must explicitly state the true legal consequences of what would otherwise happen if the lender selected another method (nonjudicial foreclosure). The agreement must inform the guarantor that if the Lender forecloses by private sale (nonjudicially), the guarantor would otherwise have a defense, based on Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819 (destruction of surety's rights and remedies against principal; destruction of subrogation rights) but that it is just this defense that the guarantor is being asked to waive in advance (and will waive by signing this agreement). All this agreement did, the court felt, was say: "You will be liable for a deficiency judgment even if our exercise of one of our remedies destroys your subrogation rights." That's not enough (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1538-1539) . While it tells the guarantor that he or she may lose subrogation rights, it does nothing to tell the guarantor that the very fact of the loss of those subrogation rights itself has legal significance--namely, that it confers immunity from a deficiency. The closest Bank's agreement came was the statement that the guarantor "shall be liable to Bank for any deficiency resulting from the exercise by it of any such remedy, even though any rights which Guarantor may have against others might be destroyed" (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1539) .

Remarking that the classic test for waiver is "the intentional relinquishment of a known right," the court of appeal said the language required to waive "the Gradsky defense" must state that (1) the destruction of the surety's subrogation rights creates a defense to a deficiency judgment, and (2) the guarantor is now waving that specific defense. The court was unwilling to imply any waiver. Paragraphs 4 and 5 would not give anyone actual knowledge and awareness of what is being waived, and general principles require resolution against waiver (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1539) . Paragraph 4 does not provide the reader with any actual awareness of the "Gradsky defense" (i.e., the legal consequences of the destruction of subrogation rights by nonjudicial foreclosure) and even if the matter is arguable, doubt should be resolved against waiver (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1540) . The court's conclusion was buttressed by the failure of the guaranty agreement to mention Code Civ. Proc. § 580d (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1541) .

Even though most contracts of guaranty are contracts of adhesion, in that the guarantor needs the loan proceeds and is not in a position to negotiate changes to the lender's standard form guaranty agreement, they are enforceable if the provisions being construed against the guarantor are within the guarantor's (as party in weaker bargaining position) reasonable expectations. This need not enter into the equation if the ambiguities are resolved against the drafter, the bank, not the guarantor (14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1540) .

Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 , is discussed in § 222.281[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Attempted Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Not Sufficiently Explicit

In Resolution Trust Corp. v. Titan Fin. Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 22 F.3d 923 , the Resolution Trust Corporation, as receiver for a failed financial corporation, sued the personal guarantor of a promissory note for a deficiency judgment after foreclosure on the collateral in a nonjudicial sale. The district court awarded summary judgment to the guarantor, and the RTC appealed. The 9th Circuit held that Cathay Bank v. Lee (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420 (discussed in § 222.281[3][b]) is controlling authority on the waiver language of the guaranty in this case and that the guaranty was not sufficiently explicit to waive the guarantor's "Gradsky defense" (22 F.3d 923, 925) . The court compared the language in the Cathay Bank guaranty with the language of the guaranty in this case and noted that neither guaranty informed the guarantor about subrogation rights that would be destroyed if the lender elected the remedy of nonjudicial foreclosure and that the guarantor would have immunity from a deficiency judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, the "Gradsky defense." Although this case was decided before the enactment of Civ. Code § 2856, it is doubtful that the result would have different since Civ. Code § 2856 did not represent a change in, but was merely declarative of, existing law [Stats. 1994, ch. 1204].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
3. Exoneration Through Principal's Defenses

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.282

§ 222.282 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Not Liable--Contract Is Void Against Principal Due to Personal Disability, Surety Assumed Liability With Knowledge of Principal's Defense, or Remedy Against Principal Is Barred [Civ. Code § 2810]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS LIABLE ON ITS OBLIGATION BECAUSE _____ [THE CONTRACT IS VOID AGAINST THE PRINCIPAL ONLY BECAUSE OF A MERE PERSONAL DISABILITY OF THE PRINCIPAL and/or THE SURETY HAS ASSUMED LIABILITY WITH KNOWLEDGE OF THE EXISTENCE OF A DEFENSE THAT THE PRINCIPAL HAS AGAINST THE CREDITOR and/or ONLY A REMEDY AGAINST THE PRINCIPAL, NOT THE RIGHT OF RECOVERY, IS BARRED].

[EITHER]

A. Surety Is Liable if Contract Is Void Against Principal Only Because of Mere Personal Disability. If the contract is void against the principal only because of a mere personal disability of the principal, the surety is liable (Civ. Code § 2810).

[AND/OR]

B. Surety Is Liable if Assumed Liability With Knowledge of Principal's Defense Against Creditor. If the surety assumed liability with knowledge of the existence of a defense that the principal has against the creditor, the surety is liable (Civ. Code § 2810).

[AND/OR]

C. Surety Is Liable if Remedy Rather Than Right of Recovery Against Principal Is Barred. If only the remedy against the principal rather than the right of recovery is barred, the surety is liable (Civ. Code § 2810; Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 831, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434 ; see Heckes v. Sapp (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 549, 552-553, 40 Cal. Rptr. 485).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety is liable under the circumstances outlined in Civ. Code § 2810. Paragraph A may be used when the contract is void against the principal only because of a mere personal disability. Paragraph B may be used when the surety assumed liability with knowledge that the principal has a defense against the creditor. Paragraph C may be used when the creditor's remedy against the principal has been barred, because as long as the right of recovery against the principal exists, the surety is liable.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the surety's liability. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment motion premised on the argument that the surety was not liable for the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 829, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434] . This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case; for example, facts indicating that the creditor was unable to collect from the principal due to the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, and therefore was seeking recovery from the surety [see, e.g., Heckes v. Sapp (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 549, 40 Cal. Rptr. 485] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to foreclosure sales and deficiency judgments, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the existence of mortgage security for a note, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Is Liable if Remedy Rather Than Right of Recovery Against Principal Is Barred

The facts and procedural background of Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434 , are discussed in § 222.303[3][a]. In Gottschalk, the court of appeal upheld the guarantors' liability. The sale of real property under a deed of trust does not erase the indebtedness, and the debt technically survives a default so that enforcement of collateral securities may be had. The obligation of the maker of a note secured by a deed of trust is not discharged by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (antideficiency statute). Instead, any recovery against him or her on the note is barred. A bar of remedy against the principal debtor does not prevent the right of recovery against the guarantor and the creditor is not precluded from seeking redress on or enforcing any other security. Since the principal debtor, the buyer, remained liable after the foreclosure sale and Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred only plaintiffs' remedy against it, defendants could not avail themselves of a defense based on Civ. Code § 2810, which requires the nonexistence or cessation of the principal's liability to make the surety also exempt (23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 831) .

In Heckes v. Sapp (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 549, 40 Cal. Rptr. 485 , a corporation purchased real property from plaintiffs by making a sizeable down payment and executing a promissory note. The note was secured by a deed of trust on the property. Defendants, principal officers of the corporation, signed the note as individual guarantors. Sometime later the holders of a senior deed of trust foreclosed and sold the property. As a result of the sale, plaintiffs' security was rendered worthless. When the corporation defaulted on the note, plaintiffs brought an action against defendants for the entire unpaid balance. Defendants asserted that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (antideficiency statute) barred a judgment against them. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court stated that the major purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b is to prevent aggravation of the downturn in depression times. This purpose dictates that a guarantor not be shielded from a deficiency judgment by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. The purpose of the antideficiency statute is served by relieving the purchaser of personal liability to any person who finances the purchase and takes as security a trust deed or mortgage on the property purchased, provided the financier intended the loan to be used to pay all or part of the purchase price. The scope of protection afforded by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b must be confined to the purchaser debtor's obligation which is secured by the purchased property. The guarantor's obligation is not within this delineation. It is not secured by the purchased security and is not the debtor's obligation. The guarantor's obligation is not a variation of the standard purchase money mortgage transaction within the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, and the guarantor should not be protected against a deficiency judgment. A guaranty is simply additional security for the obligor's debt, and can be exhausted notwithstanding the antideficiency legislation (229 Cal. App. 2d 549, 552-553) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
3. Exoneration Through Principal's Defenses

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.283

§ 222.283 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Not Liable--Suretyship Agreement Waived Defense Based on Section 580d Deficiency Prohibition ("Gradsky Defense") [Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819; Code Civ. Proc. § 580d]

[1] FORM

[The following should be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or a trial or appellate brief.]

THE AGREEMENT EXECUTED BY _____ [name], AS SURETY EXPLICITLY CONSENTED TO, AND WAIVED ANY DEFENSES BASED ON _____'S [name of creditor] _____ [NONJUDICIAL FORECLOSURE or EXERCISE OF POWER OF (PRIVATE) SALE or RELINQUISHMENT OF COLLATERAL] IN A WAY THAT PRECLUDED ENTRY OF A PERSONAL JUDGMENT AGAINST _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL DEBTOR.

Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Sufficiently Explicit. Any guarantor or other surety, including a guarantor of a note or other obligation secured by real property or an estate for years, may waive (1) the surety's rights of subrogation, reimbursement indemnification, and contribution, and any other rights and defenses available to the guarantor by reason of Civil Code Section 2787 et seq. (governing suretyship), (2) any rights or defenses the surety may have to the guaranty obligation by reason of an election of remedies by the creditor, and (3) any rights or defenses the guarantor or other surety may have because the principal's note or other obligation is secured by real property or an estate of years, including any rights or defenses that are directly or indirectly based on the application of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a, 580b, 580d, and 726 to the principal's note or other obligation (Civ. Code § 2856(a)). A contractual provision that expresses an intent to waive any suretyship rights or defenses will be an effective waiver of the surety's defense to a recovery by the creditor by reason of the creditor's election of remedies, whether or not it contains references to statutory provisions or judicial decisions (Civ. Code § 2856(b), (d); see Mariners Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Neil (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236-237, 99 Cal. Rptr. 238 ; see also Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819; cf. Cathay Bank v. Lee (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1539, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420 ; Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 48, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the surety's liability has been terminated by application of Civ. Code §§ 2810, 2819 and Code Civ. Proc. § 580d after the creditor foreclosed nonjudicially on real property that secured the primary obligation. The contention is based on the ground that the suretyship agreement constitutes a waiver of the "Gradsky defense." Civ. Code § 2856(d) gives effect to any language that expresses a waiver of the surety's defense to a recovery by the creditor by reason of the creditor's election of remedies. Language effective for this purpose is contained in § 222.281, Optional Paragraph B. A creditor or any guarantor or other surety, however, may use any other language to express an intent to waive all rights and defenses of the surety by reason of any election of remedies by the creditor [Civ. Code § 2856(d) (effective January 1, 1997); see Civ. Code § 2856(f) (validity of waiver executed before January 1, 1997, determined under law applicable when waiver was executed)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the surety remains liable for a deficiency judgment.

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. The agreement should be quoted or referred to.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in this form may be opposed by those in § 222.281, which required more explicit waiver language.

Counsel may also wish to incorporate points and authorities from Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, that address deficiency judgment prohibitions.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Sufficiently Explicit

Plaintiff in Mariners Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Neil (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 99 Cal. Rptr. 238 , loaned money to defendant's spouse. The note was secured by a deed of trust on the spouse's separate real property. Defendant guaranteed the note. The loan proceeds were used for community purposes unrelated to the property that secured the note. When the spouse failed to make the required payments, plaintiff exercised its power of sale under the deed of trust and commenced this action against defendant on the guaranty. The property was sold at trustee's sale in 1970. Defendant argued that Code Civ. Proc. § 580d and Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 (discussed in § 222.281[3][a]), precluded entry of judgment against him on the guaranty. The contract of guaranty contained a number of waivers, including waiver of "any defense based on Sections 580 and 726 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of California, or either of them." The agreement further provided that defendant waived "any right to require Association to (a) proceed against Borrowers; (b) proceed against or exhaust any security held from Borrowers; or (c) pursue any other remedy in Association's power whatsoever." Judgment was entered for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first criticized Gradsky as running contrary to the objectives of Civ. Code §§ 2809 and 2845 by encouraging creditors to bring actions directly against guarantors without first exhausting the remedies against the principal or resorting to the security. The court noted Gradsky's explanation that Code Civ. Proc. § 580d was not directly applicable and that a guarantor could, by express agreement or subsequent action either waive or be estopped from raising the defense to a creditor's action to recover a deficiency judgment after a nonjudicial foreclosure sale (22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236) . The court of appeal found the waivers in the contract of guaranty explicit, and held further, that the waiver was not invalidated by Civ. Code § 2953, which prevents waiver of certain of guarantors' rights deemed to be contrary to public policy. Civ. Code § 2953 does not embrace Code Civ. Proc. § 580d (22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236) . The court also found defendant's conduct persuasive in finding that defendant could not assert the "Gradsky defense." Before the trustee's sale, plaintiff offered to assign the note and deed of trust to defendant if he paid the balance owed. Defendant's failure to do so indicated to the court that he had no interest in any rights of subrogation (22 Cal. App. 3d 232, 236-237) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of "Gradsky Defense" Sufficiently Explicit

For a discussion of Resolution Trust Corp. v. Titan Financial Corp. (9th Cir. 1994) 22 F.3d 923 , see § 222.281[4][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
3. Exoneration Through Principal's Defenses

22-222 California Points & Authorities §§ 222.284-222.299

[Reserved]

§§ 222.284[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.300

§ 222.300 Supporting Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Performance Exonerates Surety [Civ. Code § 2839]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, _____ [PERFORMED THE OBLIGATION or DULY MADE A VALID OFFER OR PERFORMANCE].

Performance of Principal Obligation Exonerates Surety. Performance of the principal obligation, or an offer of performance, duly made as provided in the Civil Code, exonerates a surety (Civ. Code § 2839).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has been exonerated from liability due to performance of the principal obligation or an offer of performance duly made as provided in the Civil Code [see Civ. Code § 2839]. Presumably, an offer of performance duly made meets the requirements set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1485-1505.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of performance of the principal obligation exonerating the surety. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety remains liable even though the principal obligation has been performed. This form may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts demonstrating the principal's performance on the obligation for which the surety guaranteed performance; for example, by showing the completion of an office building by the principal contractor within the time set for completion [see Civ. Code § 2839].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.10 et seq., (Matthew Bender).

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Performance Exonerates Surety

In Quality Wash Group v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 , the purchaser of a car wash business located on leased property sued the sellers for breach of contract and negligent misrepresentation after improvements and fixtures were found to encroach on adjoining property. The purchaser also sought to hold the sellers liable as joint and several co-obligors on a promissory note that the purchasers had assumed from the sellers as part of the purchase price of the car wash and eventually paid off in settlement of a collection action brought by the holders of the note against the seller and purchaser. The purchaser also cross-complained against the seller seeking to collect on a separate promissory noted executed by the purchaser in favor of the seller, also as part of the purchase price of the car wash. The superior court entered judgment for the sellers.

The court of appeals found that the sellers could assert surety status against the purchasers under Civ. Code § 2832. The trial court's implied finding that the sellers signed the note as guarantors of the purchaser's principal obligation to pay the note was substantially supported by the evidence, including the sales documents and the parties' stipulated facts and testimony showing that the purchasers assumed the note as part of the purchase price of the car wash. As guarantors of the purchaser's obligation to pay the note, the sellers were exonerated by the purchaser's satisfaction of that obligation under Civ. Code § 2839. The purchaser, as principal obligor under the note, had no right to seek reimbursement or contribution from the sellers as guarantors (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1699-1700) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.301

§ 222.301 Supporting Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Creditor's Acceptance of Stock in Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings [Civ. Code §§ 2822, 2839]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS BEEN _____ [WHOLLY or PARTIALLY] EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [name], THE CREDITOR, ACCEPTED STOCK IN SATISFACTION OF THE OBLIGATION OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, DURING THE PRINCIPAL'S BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.

A. Creditor Must Accept Stock or Demand Cash and Subrogate Rights to Surety in Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings. A creditor, before acceptance of stock in bankruptcy proceedings, may reserve the option of demanding full cash payment from its surety and subrogating the surety to its rights in the securities. The creditor must act promptly and clearly to exercise its option at a time before the benefits of stock appreciation will accrue to it, and to avoid being charged with acceptance of the stock in either partial or total satisfaction of the obligation. Normally this time will be the date of the final decree of the bankruptcy court confirming the plan of arrangement (Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 89-92, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70).

B. Creditor's Acceptance of Stock Will Satisfy Surety's Obligation, Either Wholly or Partially. The creditor accepted the stock, evidenced by its retention of and benefit from the stock, its failure to exercise its option to demand cash, and its affirmative election of the value theory of recovery at trial. The surety's obligation was wholly extinguished by the creditor's acceptance of stock equal in value to that of the debt. That acceptance rendered the contract of guaranty fully executed and terminated any contractual relationship between the parties (Civ. Code §§ 2822, 2839; Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 87-89, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety has been released from liability due to the creditor's acceptance of stock during the principal's bankruptcy proceedings, the acceptance of which either wholly or partially satisfied the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70] .

The bankruptcy of the principal will not release the surety from its obligation, since bankruptcy is an operation of law and Civ. Code § 2825 provides that a surety is not exonerated if the principal is discharged by operation of law [see, e.g., Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the creditor's acceptance of stock in the principal's bankruptcy. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment motion or an appeal premised on the argument that the creditor had not accepted the stock and the surety remained liable for the full amount of the obligation [see, e.g., Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 83, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts demonstrating that the creditor accepted stock at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings in satisfaction of its claim against the principal and did not indicate any intention to exercise its option to demand cash until sometime after the final decree of the bankruptcy court when the value of the stock had plummeted [see, e.g., Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to a creditor's rights in bankruptcy proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 94, Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to suretyship, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the debtor's discharge in bankruptcy, see Ch. 30, Bankruptcy .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.320 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creditor Must Accept Stock or Demand Cash and Subrogate Rights to Surety in Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings

In Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70 , plaintiff's predecessor supplied materials to the principal company, of which defendant was the principal stockholder and director. In order for the principal to obtain credit, defendant executed a continuing guaranty, covering purchases by the principal. When the principal filed for bankruptcy, the court approved its plan of arrangement. The plan provided for the issuance of one share of stock to each creditor for each dollar of indebtedness in full satisfaction of the creditors' claims against the principal debtor. Plaintiff filed a claim in the bankruptcy court and received stock. Plaintiff later brought an action against the principal and defendant guarantor on the agreement and guaranty. Defendant pleaded as an affirmative defense plaintiff's receipt of the stock in the bankruptcy proceeding. Plaintiff tried to prove that the stock was valueless. The trial court instructed the jury that if judgment was for plaintiff, it should be in the amount of the debt less the fair market value of the stock. The trial court judgment was for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The major issue discussed by the Court was the effect to be given plaintiff's receipt of stock in the bankruptcy arrangement proceeding. Plaintiff had not sought to exercise its remedial theory of subrogation on full cash payment, and raised it only on appeal. Plaintiff proceeded on the theory that the stock was worthless rather than on its subsequent subrogation theory that the value of the stock was irrelevant. Plaintiff's failure to raise its subrogation theory of recovery at trial was a substantive, nor merely procedural, matter evidencing its acceptance of the stock. Plaintiff could not later prevail on its subrogation theory because its acceptance of the stock, evidenced by its retention of and benefit from the stock, its failure to exercise its option to demand cash, and its affirmative election of the value theory of recovery at trial brought into operation Civ. Code §§ 2822 and 2839. Civ. Code § 2822 provides that the creditor's acceptance of anything in partial satisfaction of an obligation of a principal reduces the guarantor's obligation in the same measure. Civ. Code § 2839 states that actual payment of an obligation by a principal exonerates the guarantor. Defendant did not agree to waive the protection of these provisions, and his obligation was wholly extinguished by plaintiff's acceptance of stock equal in value to that of the debt. That acceptance rendered the contract of guaranty fully executed and terminated any contractual relationship between the parties (68 Cal. 2d 81, 87-89) . Plaintiff contended that it should not be held to acceptance of the stock in the settlement because its participation in the Chapter XI proceeding was involuntary and it merely made the best of a bad situation. The Court believed that plaintiff's actions and inaction during the bankruptcy and trial proceedings constituted a acceptance of the stock. Plaintiff, as the offeree of alternative modes of performance, sought to treat its silence as both acceptance and rejection, subject to its ultimate choice unlimited as to time. If plaintiff was to receive the benefit of appreciation in value of the stock, it must have born the risk of depreciation. If it wished to protect itself against the risk, it must exercise its option of rejection before acquiring the opportunity for gain. The Court held that plaintiff accepted the stock within the meaning of Civ. Code § 2822 not only expressly, by choosing the value theory of recovery at trial, but impliedly by as well, by remaining silent while accepting the benefits of the stock. There is no conflict with the rule that a creditor, before acceptance of stock in bankruptcy proceedings, may reserve the option of demanding full cash payment from its guarantor and subrogating the guarantor to its rights in the securities. That option may not be exercised for the first time years after receipt of the stock, much less after a jury determination that its fair market value at the time of the receipt equalled the value of the principal debt. If a creditor is to avoid the operation of Civ. Code § 2822 and retain its option to demand cash instead of accepting securities, the creditor must act promptly and clearly to exercise its option at a time before the benefits of appreciation will accrue to it. Normally this time will be the date of the final decree of the bankruptcy court confirming the plan of arrangement (68 Cal. 2d 81, 89-92) . All of the circumstances constituting acceptance cannot be defined, nor can exclusive means of exercising the option be listed. Appropriate procedures may include, if the securities are transferable, their tender to the guarantor, or, if the securities are not transferable except by operation of law, written notice to the guarantor demanding full cash payment and offering subrogation of the rights in the securities, prayer for that relief in pleadings, and indication of the election of such a theory of recovery in connection with a motion for summary judgment. Needless to say, that actio must be taken before acceptance of the securities by the creditor (68 Cal. 2d 81, 92) .

[b] Creditor's Acceptance of Stock Will Satisfy Surety's Obligation, Either Wholly or Partially Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 89-92, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70 , is discussed in § 222.301[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.302

§ 222.302 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Neither Partial Satisfaction of Obligation Nor Creditor's Delay in Pursuing Available Remedies Exonerates Surety [Civ. Code §§ 2822, 2823]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [ACCEPTANCE OF PARTIAL SATISFACTION OF THE OBLIGATION BY _____ (name), THE CREDITOR, and/or THE FAILURE OF _____ (name), THE CREDITOR, TO PURSUE AVAILABLE REMEDIES] DOES NOT EXONERATE _____ [name], THE SURETY.

[EITHER]

A. Partial Satisfaction of Obligation Reduces Surety's Obligation But Does Not Exonerate Surety. The acceptance by a creditor of anything in partial satisfaction of an obligation reduces the obligation of a surety, in the same measure as that of the principal, but does not otherwise exonerate the surety (Civ. Code 2822; Oleson v. Tellson (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 671, 673-674, 98 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231).

[AND/OR]

B. Creditor's Delay in Pursuing Available Remedies Does Not Exonerate Surety. The mere delay of a creditor to proceed against a principal or to enforce any other remedy does not exonerate the surety; forbearance alone does not release a surety (Civ. Code § 2823; Administrative Management Services, Inc. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (1979) 89 Cal.

App. 3d 532, 535-536, 152 Cal. Rptr. 620 ; Oleson v. Tellson (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 671, 673-674, 98 Cal. Rptr. 668).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a surety's contention that it was exonerated. The ground of the opposition is that exoneration does not result from partial satisfaction of the obligation (Paragraph A) [see Civ. Code § 2822] or the creditor's delay in pursuing available remedies (Paragraph B) [see Civ. Code § 2823]. Although these arguments do not necessarily arise in the same case, it is possible that they might arise in the same case and be argued simultaneously.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exoneration. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a demurrer premised on the argument that the surety was exonerated from liability on the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Administrative Management Services, Inc. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 532, 533-535, 152 Cal. Rptr. 620] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts showing that the creditor only accepted partial satisfaction of the obligation [see Civ. Code § 2822] or that the creditor merely delayed in pursuing a remedy against the surety [see Civ. Code § 2823]. For example, if the creditor only accepted partial satisfaction of the obligation but did not otherwise exonerate the surety, counsel might include facts illustrating that the creditor accepted payments from the principal equivalent to the amount of accrued interest only, without any payment of the principal amount [see, e.g., Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Satisfaction of Obligation Reduces Surety's Obligation But Does Not Exonerate Surety

In Oleson v. Tellson (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 671, 98 Cal. Rptr. 668 , defendants purchased a business and executed a promissory note as payment. The sellers assigned the note to plaintiffs. After notice to plaintiffs, defendants sold the business and the buyers agreed to assume the note obligation. Although the promissory note contained an acceleration clause that gave the holder the option of declaring the whole principal and interest immediately due on transfer of the business, plaintiffs did not exercise it. Plaintiffs accepted one payment in full from the buyers and thereafter accepted payments of interest only. Defendants were not informed that only interest payments were being accepted. When the payments were in default, plaintiffs brought an action on the note. The buyers were discharged because of bankruptcy. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs for the amount unpaid on the note, with interest and attorneys' fees. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among defendants' contentions was that their obligation as sureties had been exonerated by plaintiffs' acceptance of the interest payments only, without notification to defendants. Without so finding, the court assumed that a suretyship relation had been created. Plaintiffs did not exonerate defendants by their conduct in accepting the buyers as obligors, nor by accepting from them payments of interest only. Civ. Code § 2822 provides that the acceptance by a creditor of partial payments reduces to that extent the obligation of a surety, but does not otherwise exonerate the surety. The court also held that plaintiffs' failure to exercise their rights under the acceleration clause did not exonerate defendants, as is discussed in § 222.302[3][b].

The facts and procedural background of Wise v. Clapper (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 65 Cal. Rptr. 231 , are discussed in § 222.243[3][d]. In Wise, the court of appeal reversed a holding that defendant surety had been exonerated. The court agreed with plaintiffs' contention that its acceptance of partial payment of the obligation, through accepting payments covering only the interest and not the principal, did not exonerate defendant surety. Civ. Code § 2822 provides that the acceptance by a creditor of partial payment reduces to that extent the obligation of a surety, but does not otherwise affect it or exonerate the surety (257 Cal. App. 2d 770, 774) .

[b] Creditor's Failure to Pursue Available Remedies Does Not Exonerate Surety

In Administrative Management Services, Inc. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 532, 152 Cal. Rptr. 620 , a couple owned a convalescent hospital, administration of which was taken over by a receiver appointed during the couple's marital dissolution proceedings. Prior to his appointment, the receiver posted a bond provided by defendant. During the receivership, plaintiff filed an action alleging that its contract with the couple had been breached by the receiver. The husband bought his wife's share of the hospital and ousted the receiver. The receiver filed a motion in the dissolution proceeding for termination of receivership. The trial court approved, discharged the receiver, and exonerated the bond. In the meantime, plaintiff had obtained a judgment against the receiver. Plaintiff filed an action against defendant surety for the amount of the judgment against the receiver. Defendant demurred on the ground that it had no liability by virtue of the court order exonerating the bond. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and found that plaintiff had adequately stated a cause of action. Prior to the order exonerating the bond, plaintiff had obtained a judgment in which it was specifically found that the receiver failed and refused during his receivership to faithfully execute the duties of his trust according to law. Since the receiver violated his duty during the period the bond was in effect, plaintiff stated a cause of action against the surety. The court said that no surety is released from damages or liabilities for acts, omissions, or causes existing or arising before the making of the order releasing the surety. Although plaintiff neglected to present its judgment to the court having jurisdiction of the receivership for enforcement, that did not bar recovery against the surety. Civ. Code § 2823 provides that mere delay on the part of a creditor to proceed against the principal, or to enforce any other remedy, does not exonerate a surety (89 Cal. App. 3d 532, 535-536) .

The facts and procedural background of Oleson v. Tellson (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 671, 98 Cal. Rptr. 668 , are discussed in § 222.302[3][a]. In Oleson, the court of appeal upheld a finding that plaintiff creditors were entitled to performance by defendant sureties. Plaintiffs' failure to exercise their rights under the acceleration clause did not operate to exonerate defendants. The holder of a note with an optional acceleration clause may bring an action to have the entire amount declared due if he or she chooses, but the holder is not required to sue. Under Civ. Code § 2823, the mere delay of a creditor to proceed against a principal or to enforce any other remedy does not exonerate the surety; forbearance alone does not release a surety (21 Cal. App. 3d 671, 673-674) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Creditor's Failure to Pursue Available Remedies Does Not Exonerate Surety

In Crumrine v. Dizdar (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 783, 140 P.2d 101 , the administrator of an estate furnished a bond signed by defendant as surety. The administrator died without completing the administration proceedings in the estate and it was shown that he owed the estate money. Plaintiff succeeded the first administrator as administrator of the estate and later brought action against defendant surety to recover the amount of the bond. Defendant raised many defenses, among them laches. The trial court judgment was for defendant, but the court of appeal reversed. The court held that plaintiff was not guilty of laches. An administrator or surety who asserts that an action against him or her on the bond is barred by laches or equitable estoppel must show an unreasonable and unexplained delay; mere delay short of the full period of limitation will not defeat an action on the bond. Mere passive delay and forbearance cannot discharge the sureties nor affect their obligation. The court noted that several legal proceedings and investigations were necessary before commencing the action, and it could not be concluded that there was a delay amounting to laches (59 Cal. App. 2d 783, 792) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.303

§ 222.303 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Discharge of Principal by Operation of Law Does Not Exonerate Surety [Civ. Code § 2825]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, WAS DISCHARGED SOLELY BY OPERATION OF LAW, WITHOUT ANY INTERVENTION OR OMISSION BY _____ [name], THE CREDITOR.

Surety Is Not Exonerated When Principal Is Discharged by Operation of Law. A surety is not exonerated by the discharge of its principal by operation of law, without the intervention or omission of the creditor. Operation of law is the manner in which rights devolve on a person by the mere application to the particular transaction of the established rules of law, without the act or cooperation of the party (Civ. Code § 2825; Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 802, 313 P.2d 568 ; Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 831-832, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a surety's contention that he or she has been exonerated. The ground of the opposition is that exoneration of the surety does not occur even though the principal was discharged because the discharge of the principal was by operation of law, without the intervention or omission of the creditor [see Civ. Code § 2825].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the surety was not exonerated. For example, this argument

may arise in opposing a summary judgment premised on the argument that the surety was exonerated from the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 829-830, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts indicating that the creditor was unable to collect from the principal due to the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, and therefore was seeking recovery from the surety [see, e.g., Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 100 Cal. Rptr. 434] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to periods of limitation on various actions, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions in that publication. For forms relating to foreclosure sales and deficiency judgments, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the existence of mortgage security for a note, see Ch. 166, Negotiable Instruments . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers alleging the action is barred by the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing foreclosure actions, see Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Is Not Exonerated When Principal Is Discharged by Operation of Law

The facts and procedural background of Bloom v. Bender (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 793, 313 P.2d 568 , are discussed in § 222.200[3][a]. In Bloom, the Supreme Court affirmed a finding in favor of plaintiff, the creditor's successor. Among the many points discussed, the Court referred to Civ. Code § 2825 as stating the general rule that a surety is not discharged when the liability of its principal is extinguished by operation of law (48 Cal. 2d 793, 802) .

It should be noted that in Bloom the operation of law discharging the principal was the statute of limitations. The enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 359.5 in 1982 would have changed the result in this case, but not the reasoning.

In Gottschalk v. Draper Companies (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 828 , 100 Cal. Rptr. 434 , plaintiffs sold real property to the principal debtor. As payment, the principal debtor executed two promissory notes secured by purchase money deeds of trust also executed by the principal. Defendants unconditionally guaranteed all payments due under the two notes. The trust deeds were junior to another encumbrance on the same property. As the result of a foreclosure sale by the trustee of the senior deed of trust, plaintiffs' security for the two notes was extinguished. Plaintiffs brought suit against defendants on the written guaranties. Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment, asserting that there was no defense to the action, was granted, and the trial court judgment was for plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court discussed the implications of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (antideficiency legislation), and then addressed the issues concerning the suretyship statutes. Defendants argued that they were protected by Civ. Code § 2810, which provides that a surety is liable, notwithstanding any mere personal disability of the principal, though the disability be such as to make the contract void against the principal; but the surety is not liable if for any other reason there is no liability on the part of the principal at the time of the execution of the contract, or the liability of the principal thereafter ceases, unless the surety has assumed liability with knowledge of the existence of the defense. The court disagreed, setting forth two different reasons; one based on an interpretation of Civ. Code § 2810, which did not release the surety; the other based on application of Civ. Code § 2825. Even assuming that the foreclosure sale terminated the liability of the principal, defendants still could not prevail. Civ. Code § 2825 sets up a well known exception to Civ. Code § 2810, and provides that a surety is not exonerated by the discharge of the principal by operation of law, without the intervention or omission of the creditor. Ordinarily whatever discharges the principal debtor will discharge the surety, but that rule does not apply when the discharge is by operation of law or when the defense is personal. Operation of law is the manner in which rights, and sometimes liabilities, devolve on a person by the mere application to the particular transaction of the established rules of law, without the act or cooperation of the party himself or herself. If any discharge of the principal's liability took place, it took place by a mere application of the relevant code provisions without any intervention or omission of plaintiffs' creditors. Since the bar of the remedy against the principal came about by operation o law, Civ. Code § 2825 was clearly applicable and prohibited defendants from exoneration (23 Cal. App. 3d 828, 831-832) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.304

§ 222.304 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Exonerated--Creditor Demanded Cash and Subrogated Surety During Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings [Civ. Code §§ 2822, 2839]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN _____ [WHOLLY or PARTIALLY] EXONERATED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY BECAUSE _____ [name], THE CREDITOR, EXERCISED HIS/HERS/ITS OPTION TO DEMAND CASH IN LIEU OF STOCK OR SECURITIES AND SUBROGATED THE SURETY TO ITS RIGHTS IN THE SECURITIES DURING THE BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL.

A. No Exoneration of Surety if No Actual Payment or Partial Satisfaction of Obligation. A surety is not exonerated by performance or partial satisfaction of an obligation if there is no actual payment of the obligation or acceptance of partial satisfaction by the creditor [see Civ. Code §§ 2822, 2839].

B. Principal's Discharge Through Bankruptcy Does Not Exonerate Surety. The surety remains liable even when the principal debtor has been discharged through bankruptcy (Superior Wholesale Elec. Co. v. Cameron (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 488, 494, 70 Cal. Rptr. 636 ; see Civ. Code § 2825).

C. When Creditor Must Demand Cash in Lieu of Accepting Securities in Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings. If a creditor wishes to retain its option to demand cash and subrogate the surety to its rights instead of accepting securities in the principal's bankruptcy proceedings, the creditor must act promptly and clearly to exercise its option at a time before the benefits of appreciation will accrue to it. Although this is normally the time of the final decree of the bankruptcy court confirming the plan of arrangement, if the creditor's claim is not allowed until after that order, the creditor will not automatically be deemed to have accepted the benefits of the plan of arrangement in satisfaction of the obligation (Civ. Code § 2822; Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 794-795, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810).

D. Manner of Indicating Creditor's Election to Demand Cash as Payment. Procedures The option to accept cash rather than stock may be exercised by the tender of the securities to the surety if the securities are transferable, or, if the securities are not transferable except by operation of law, by written notice to the surety demanding full cash payment and offering subrogation of the rights in the securities, prayer for such relief in pleadings, and indication of the election of that theory of recovery in connection with a motion for summary judgment (Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 794-796, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the surety has been exonerated by acceptance of stock in the principal's bankruptcy proceedings. The ground of opposition is that the creditor exercised its option to demand cash in lieu of stock and to subrogate the surety to its rights, and the surety has not been exonerated [see, e.g., Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 794-795, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810] .

The bankruptcy of the principal will not release the surety from its obligation, since bankruptcy is an operation of law and Civ. Code § 2825 controls its impact on the surety. This form may be combined with a memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that an operation of law which discharges the principal does not exonerate the surety [see Form § 222.303].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the creditor's demand of cash in the principal's bankruptcy, for which the surety remains liable. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a summary judgment premised on the argument that the surety was not liable because the creditor was issued stock in the bankrupt principal's company [see, e.g., Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 789, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts indicating that the creditor sent the surety timely notice of election to subrogate, advising him that it did not elect to receive any stock in satisfaction of the principal's obligation [see, e.g., Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810] .

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.303.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to a creditor's rights in bankruptcy proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 94, Bankruptcy (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to suretyship, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the debtor's discharge in bankruptcy, see Ch. 30, Bankruptcy .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principal's Discharge Through Bankruptcy Does Not Exonerate Surety

The facts and procedural background of Superior Wholesale Elec. Co. v. Cameron (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 488, 70 Cal. Rptr. 636 are discussed in § 222.20[3][c]. In Cameron, the court of appeal upheld the surety's liability after the principal debtor had been discharged through bankruptcy. The court cited the rule that it is no defense that the original obligor filed bankruptcy following the execution and delivery of the written guaranty. A surety remains fully liable when the obligation of the principal is discharged in bankruptcy (264 Cal. App. 2d 488, 494) .

[b] When Creditor Must Demand Cash in Lieu of Accepting Securities in Principal's Bankruptcy Proceedings

In Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810 , the nominal plaintiff was the creditor's assignee. Plaintiff's assignor entered into a sale and option agreement with the principal company. Defendants guaranteed the principal's performance. The principal defaulted on its obligation and it and a coguarantor filed Chapter XI bankruptcy petitions. The two proceedings were consolidated and the consolidated plan of arrangement was confirmed. Among its provisions was the transfer of stock of equivalent value to the debt owed each of the creditors in full and complete satisfaction of their claims. Each creditor was enjoined from prosecuting claims against the debtors. Plaintiff's assignor filed with the bankruptcy court its claim of damages, which was approved. In the meantime, the nominal plaintiff filed an action against the principal and defendant guarantors for moneys due under the original agreement. The nominal plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the action against those adjudicated bankrupt. Pursuant to the confirmed plan of arrangement, stock was issued to plaintiff's assignor. Plaintiff's assignor sent defendant guarantor a notice of election to subrogate, advising him as guarantor that the stock issued in the name of plaintiff's assignor was to be deposited in escrow for its benefit, that it did not elect or intend to receive any of the stock in satisfaction of any obligation owed, that it looked solely to him for payment, and that once payment in full had been made, plaintiff's assignor would transfer to him all of its interest in the stock. Defendant rejected the election of plaintiff's assignor to subrogate. The nominal plaintiff filed a supplement to the complaint, asking that defendant be subrogated to the rights of plaintiff's assignor in the stock. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment. The nominal plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. In its discussion of the complex fact situation and applicable law, the court reviewed the statutes governing bankruptcy of a principal and exoneration of guarantors. Both the Bankruptcy Act (11 U.S.C. § 34) and Civ. Code § 2825 result in the surety's not being exonerated by the discharge of the principal by operation of law, such as bankruptcy, without the intervention or omission of the creditor. According to Civ. Code § 2839, actual payment of an obligation exonerates the guarantor, and according to Civ. Code § 2822, a creditor's acceptance of anything in partial satisfaction of an obligation reduces the guarantor's obligation in the same manner. The creditor is not prejudiced by filing a proof of claim or by accepting a dividend in a Chapter XI proceeding. A creditor who obtains a cash dividend in partial satisfaction of its claim may recover the balance from the guarantor. If the dividend is paid in securities, the creditor has a choice, and may retain the securities and sue the guarantor for the difference or, to avoid the difficulties of valuation, the creditor may recover the full amount of the claim from the guarantor and subrogate the guarantor to its rights in the securities. But the creditor cannot receive securities, hold them for speculative purposes, and later seek to subrogate the guarantor to its rights therein. Under those circumstances, the creditor is deemed to have accepted the stock; once the choice is made, the right to demand cash and let the guarantor be subrogated to the securities is lost. The court framed the issue as whether plaintiff's assignor made a choice by its participation in the arrangement proceeding which resulted in the issuance of stock in its name (13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 792-793) . The court relied heavily on Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70 , although it ultimately distinguished the facts of Durgin. If the creditor is to avoid the operation of Civ. Code § 2822 and retain its option to demand cash instead of accepting securities, the creditor must act promptly and clearly to exercise its option at a time before the benefits of appreciation will accrue to it. Normally, this time will be the date of the final decree of the bankruptcy court confirming the plan of arrangement (13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 794-795) . The court noted that the statements in Durgin indicating that the choice must be made at the time of the order confirming the plan of arrangement appear to be dicta. A plan of arrangement affects only unsecured creditors, and only those unsecured creditors whose claims have been allowed may participate in and vote at the meeting of creditors at which the plan is being considered. The confirmation of a plan of arrangement is binding on all creditors, whether or not they are affected by the arrangement or have accepted it or have filed their claims, and whether or not their claims have been scheduled or allowed and are allowable. Since the claim of plaintiff's assignor was not allowed until several months after the order confirming the plan, it could be assumed that prior to that date it had not participated in any of the proceedings in connection with the plan of arrangement and that it had not given its consent thereto. Until that time plaintiff's assignor did not know whether it would be entitled to the stock to be distributed under the plan. It was during the period of uncertainty about its status and rights that plaintiff's assignor filed the action against the guarantor. Accordingly, the court held that triable issues of fact were present in regard to whether plaintiff's assignor accepted the securities before its offer to subrogate, and that the granting of the motion was erroneous (13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 796) .

[c] Manner of Indicating Creditor's Election to Demand Cash as Payment

The facts and procedural background of Zellner v. Lasky (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 91 Cal. Rptr. 810 , are discussed in § 222.304[3][b]. In Zellner, the court of appeal overturned an order granting summary judgment because there was a question of fact as to whether the creditor accepted the securities prior to its order to subrogate. In a bankruptcy proceeding by the principal debtor, the creditor must exercise its option to choose between returning the securities and suing the guarantor for the difference in value or recovering the full amount of the claim from the guarantor and subrogating the guarantor to its rights in the securities. Having made the choice in a timely manner, the creditor will not be able to change its mind if the other option proves more advantageous to it. Quoting from Durgin v. Kaplan (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 81, 92, 65 Cal. Rptr. 158, 436 P.2d 70 , the court noted that it was impossible to describe all of the circumstances which might indicate exercise of the option to accept cash. Appropriate procedures might include, if the securities are transferable, their tender to the guarantor, or, if the securities are not transferable except by operation of law, written notice to the guarantor demanding full cash payment and offering subrogation of the rights in the securities, prayer for such relief in pleadings, and indication of the election of that theory of recovery in connection with a motion for summary judgment (13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 794-795) . The court stated that plaintiff's assignor had filed the complaint against the surety during a period when it did not know whether it would be entitled to the stock to be distributed under the plan. Accordingly, it held that there were triable issues of fact as to whether plaintiff's assignor had accepted the securities before its offer to subrogate (13 Cal. App. 3d 787, 796) .

101 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.305

§ 222.305 Opposing Contention That Surety Has Been Discharged--Creditor Had No Duty Under Circumstances to Disclose Facts to Surety of Revocable Continuing Guaranty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS NOT BEEN DISCHARGED FROM HIS/HER/ITS OBLIGATION AS SURETY UNDER THE REVOCABLE CONTINUING GUARANTY BECAUSE _____ [name], THE CREDITOR, DID NOT OWE ANY DUTY UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES TO DISCLOSE FACTS CONCERNING THE RISK OF GUARANTEEING THE PERFORMANCE OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL.

A. Creditor Has No Duty to Disclose Facts to Surety of Revocable Continuing Guaranty Unless Three Prerequisites Are Established. On a revocable continuing guaranty, the creditor only has a duty to disclose facts it knows about the debtor to the surety prior to every new extension of credit to the principal if three conditions are established: (1) the creditor has reason to believe that those facts materially increase the risk beyond that which the surety intends to assume; (2) the creditor has reason to believe that the facts are unknown to the surety; and (3) the creditor has a reasonable opportunity to communicate the facts to the surety. The creditor's failure to disclose will discharge the surety from liability on the subsequent loan only if all three conditions are satisfied (Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 92-94, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956 ; Bank of Santa Ana v. Molina (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 619-622, 81 Cal. Rptr. 885).

[Optional] B. Creditor Need Not Investigate for Surety's Benefit. The creditor is not required to investigate for the surety's benefit or to take any unusual steps to assure itself that the surety is acquainted with facts which the creditor may assume are known to both of them (Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 90-91, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the creditor owed a duty to disclose facts about the debtor to the surety of a revocable continuing guaranty. The ground of opposition is that the three prerequisites to such a duty were not all established [see Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 92-94, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the nonexistence of the creditor's duty of disclosure. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the surety was discharged because of the creditor's failure to disclose facts about the debtor to the surety [see, e.g., Bank of Santa Ana v. Molina (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 615, 81 Cal. Rptr. 885] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts showing that none of the prerequisites for disclosure are present. For example, if the creditor has no idea of the risk the surety intends to assume, it cannot be liable for failing to disclose facts which might increase that risk [see, e.g., Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Creditor Has No Duty to Disclose Facts to Surety of Revocable Continuing Guaranty Unless Three Prerequisites Are Established

In Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956 , plaintiff made three loans to the principal debtors after defendant had executed a continuing guaranty guaranteeing all their present and future indebtedness. Plaintiff was aware that defendant, its customer for many years, did not read the guaranty, because he knew plaintiff's officer and trusted him. Knowing that the principals were in financial difficulty, plaintiff granted a loan to them to pay their federal taxes, without informing defendant of the principals' financial difficulty. Defendant never issued a written revocation of the guaranty, and did not know of the principal's financial difficulties until after the loan had been made. Plaintiff brought an action on the guaranty. The trial court judgment awarded plaintiff damages for the amount owed on two of the loans, rejecting its claim on the third, finding that defendant was discharged from liability by plaintiff's failure to disclose the financial difficulties of the principals. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment as to the third loan. The Court summarized the issue as whether a creditor owes a duty of disclosure to a surety on a continuing suretyship relationship, and if so, the nature and extent of that duty. The Court noted that it was a question of first impression. In all suretyship relations, the creditor owes to the surety a duty of continuing good faith and fair dealing. The creditor must not misrepresent or conceal facts so as to induce or permit the surety to enter or continue in the relationship in reliance on a false impression as to the nature of the risk. A creditor's fraud, which may consist of intentional or negligent misrepresentation or active suppression of the truth, will discharge the surety as to any subsequently incurred liability (70 Cal. 2d 81, 84-85) . When the creditor, rather than the debtor, solicited the surety, a greater duty of disclosure is imposed on the creditor because it may not then assume that the surety will acquire all material information from the debtor. Circumstances other than solicitation of the surety by the creditor may give the creditor reason to believe that the surety will rely on it, rather than the debtor, to receive information material to the risk, thereby imposing a duty to disclose facts materially affecting the surety's risk. But solicitation by the creditor does constitute a prime example of the cases in which the creditor must, without request, disclose material facts because the relationship of the parties gives the creditor reason to believe that the surety neither possesses nor will affirmatively seek knowledge of those facts (70 Cal. 2d 81, 88-90) . Whether a creditor owes a duty of voluntary disclosure to the surety depends on the nature of the risk guaranteed and the relationship of the parties involved. The creditor is not required to investigate for the surety's benefit or to take any unusual steps to assure itself that the surety is acquainted with facts which the creditor may assume are known to both of them (70 Cal. 2d 81, 90-91) . The creditor owes the same duty of disclosure during the course of the suretyship relationship as is owed at its inception. Citing Civ. Code § 2815, the Court said that the surety on a continuing guaranty of credit who has not received independent consideration binding him for a given period of time may revoke the guaranty as to future liability at any time merely by giving written notice to the creditor. The creditor does not owe a continuous duty of disclosure to a surety guaranteeing credit. However, on a revocable continuing guaranty of credit, the creditor does owe a duty of disclosure to a surety prior to every new extension of credit to the principal. Each extension of credit creates a new suretyship contract because a revocable continuing guaranty is merely a continuing offer which the creditor accepts each time he extends credit to the principal. The creditor owes the same duty of disclosure immediately prior to each new extension of credit as it owes at the inception of the suretyship relationship (70 Cal. 2d 81, 92-93) . The Court cited with approval the Restatement of Security and its prescription of three conditions prerequisite to the imposition of a duty on a creditor to disclose facts it knows about the debtor to the surety. Those conditions are: (1) the creditor has reason to believe that the facts materially increase the risk beyond that which the surety intends to assume; (2) the creditor has reason to believe that the facts are unknown to the surety; and (3) the creditor has a reasonable opportunity to communicate the facts to the surety. The creditor's failure to disclose those facts to the surety prior to an extension of further credit to the debtor will discharge the surety from liability on the subsequent loan only if all three conditions are satisfied. If the evidence fails to establish any one of the three factors, any judgment discharging a surety from liability because of a breach of a duty of disclosure cannot stand (70 Cal. 2d 81, 93-94) . The Court, in reviewing the evidence, said that it established that plaintiff knew about the principal's inability to pay their federal taxes without a loan, but it did not establish that plaintiff had reason to believe that this fact materially increased the risk beyond that which defendant intended to assume. No evidence disclosed the financial condition of the principals at the time the guaranty was executed. Moreover, no evidence described the risk defendant intended to assume or whether plaintiff had reason to know what risk defendant intended to assume. Thus, evidence could not support a finding that the principals' inability to pay their taxes without a loan materially increased defendant's risk, nor that plaintiff had reason to believe this fact materially increased defendant's risk (70 Cal. 2d 81, 95-96) .

In Bank of Santa Ana v. Molina (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 81 Cal. Rptr. 885 , a construction business applied for a loan of credit with plaintiff. Plaintiff asked for continuing guaranties. Each of the three partners of the business and defendant signed a separate form of guaranty provided by plaintiff. Plaintiff made a loan, and payments were made until only a small portion remained unpaid. Thereafter plaintiff made additional loans to the principal business. When they were not paid, plaintiff brought an action for the monies owed. The trial court entered judgment against defendant. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant raised many contentions on appeal. The court cited Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956 , discussed above, in rejecting defendant's contention that plaintiff failed in its duty of disclosure to defendant. Defendant failed to show by a preponderance that the facts known to plaintiff and unknown to defendant materially increased the risk beyond that which the creditor had reason to believe the surety intended to assume. The only evidence introduced by defendant was rejected by the jury, indicating that plaintiff received a general continuing guaranty not limited to a specific loan, containing language that permitted renewals and additional loans, furnished and solicited by the debtor. The essence of the nondisclosure defense is that the creditor has reason to know that certain risks were not within the contemplation of the guarantor, and has reason to believe that information possessed by the creditor was unknown to guarantor and that the information concerned activity of the debtor that might materially increase those risks. Since plaintiff had no information that defendant would deny that he had executed the guaranty, no source of information as to what risks he contemplated was shown except the contents of the guaranty itself (1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 619-622) .

[b] Creditor Need Not Investigate for Surety's Benefit

Sumitomo Bank of Cal. v. Iwasaki (1968) 70 Cal. 2d 81, 73 Cal. Rptr. 564, 447 P.2d 956 is discussed in § 222.305[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
E. Termination Of Surety's Liability
4. Exoneration In Miscellaneous Circumstances

22-222 California Points & Authorities §§ 222.306-222.319

[Reserved]

§§ 222.306[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.320

§ 222.320 Supporting Contention That Surety May Bring Action Against Principal to Compel Performance or Seek Reimbursement [Civ. Code §§ 2846-2848; Code Civ. Proc. § 1050]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS ENTITLED TO BRING AN ACTION AGAINST _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, TO _____ [COMPEL THE PRINCIPAL TO PERFORM ITS OBLIGATION and/or COLLECT REIMBURSEMENT FROM THE PRINCIPAL FOR ALL DISBURSEMENTS MADE ON ITS BEHALF], BECAUSE _____ [THE PRINCIPAL'S OBLIGATION HAS BECOME DUE or THE SURETY HAS PAID THE OBLIGATION TO _____(name), THE CREDITOR].

[EITHER]

A. Surety May Compel Principal to Perform. A surety may compel the principal to perform the obligation when it becomes due and before the surety has paid it (Civ. Code § 2846; Code Civ. Proc. § 1050; Kreling v. Kreling (1897) 118 Cal. 413, 419, 50 P. 546 ; Karn v. Wills (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 604, 606-609, 123 P.2d 640).

[Optional] B. Creditor May Be Codefendant in Surety's Action. The creditor may be made a codefendant in an action brought by the surety to compel the debtor to perform the obligation, provided the creditor can itself enforce performance and neglects or refuses to do so (Eastin v. Roberts, Carpenter & Co. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 567, 571, 66 P.2d 224 ; Josephian v. Lion (1924) 66 Cal. App. 650, 657, 227 P. 204).

[AND/OR]

C. Surety Entitled to Reimbursement From Principal if Surety Satisfies Any Part of Principal Obligation. If a surety satisfies all or any part of the principal obligation, whether with or without legal proceedings, the principal is bound to reimburse what the surety has disbursed, including necessary costs and expenses; the surety is entitled to enforce every remedy that the creditor then has against the principal to the extent of reimbursing what the surety has expended (Civ. Code §§ 2847, 2848; Anchor Casualty Co. v. Strube (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 29, 32, 34 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; Filippi v. McMartin (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140, 10 Cal. Rptr. 180).

[Optional] D. Statutory Subrogation Remedy Is Not Exclusive. Section 2848 of the Civil Code is not the exclusive measure of a surety's rights to subrogation; it is merely declaratory of the common law on the subject (Estate of Elizalde (1920) 182 Cal. 427, 432-433, 188 P. 560 ; Commercial Standard Ins. Co. v. Bank of America (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 241, 246-247, 129 Cal. Rptr. 91).

[Optional] E. Subrogation Available to Surety When Premature Payment by Principal Increased Surety's Liability. The surety has the right to subrogation in the amount of its increased liability following a premature payment by the principal debtor that increases the surety's liability (Civ. Code §§ 2847, 2848; United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Oak Grove Union School Dist. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 231-233, 22 Cal. Rptr. 907).

[Optional] F. Surety's Rights Coextensive With Obligation Guaranteed. A guarantor who pays the principal obligation and receives an assignment of that obligation from the creditor is entitled to enforce that obligation against the principal in accordance with its terms[, including "default interest" and attorney's fees required incurred in the action against the principal even if the guarantor did not pay default interest to the creditor or incur attorney's fees in its dealings with the creditor] (Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721-723, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 ; see Civ. Code § 2848).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety may bring an action against the principal. Civ. Code § 2846 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1050 permit the surety to compel the principal to perform on the principal contract. Civ. Code § 2847 permits the surety to require reimbursement from the principal for disbursements made on his or her behalf on the underlying obligation, whether or not the creditor brought legal proceedings to require payment by the surety. Civ. Code § 2848 permits the surety to be subrogated to the creditor's rights and enforce every remedy that the creditor has against the principal if the surety has satisfied the principal's obligation. Alternative Paragraph A may be used by the surety to compel the principal to perform the obligation when it is due and before the surety has paid any part of it. Optional Paragraph B may be used when the surety wishes to include the creditor as a codefendant in an action to compel the principal's performance. Alternative Paragraph C may be used by the surety when the surety has satisfied all or any part of the principal obligation. Optional Paragraph D may be used if the surety wishes to employ other remedies against the principal in addition to its statutory right to subrogation. Optional Paragraph E may be used if the principal debtor made a premature payment, thereby increasing the surety's liability and the surety seeks reimbursement for that amount. Counsel may use both Alternative Paragraphs A and C if only part of the principal's obligation has been satisfied by the surety, and the surety wants reimbursement for that paid portion and wants to compel the principal to perform on the remaining obligation rather than pay and seek reimbursement later.

The authority in Optional Paragraph F goes further than reimbursement and holds that a surety that receives an assignment of the debt from the creditor after having paid the debt can enforce that obligation against the principal in accordance with its terms.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the remedies available to the surety. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a demurrer premised on the argument that reimbursement and subrogation pursuant to Civ. Code §§ 2847 and 2848 are not available to the surety [see, e.g., Commercial Standard Ins. Co. v. Bank of America (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 241, 246-247, 129 Cal. Rptr. 91] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that the principal's debt for which the surety guaranteed performance had become due and that the surety had been notified by the creditor that it held the surety liable [see Civ. Code § 2846]. If the surety has paid any or all of the principal obligation, counsel should present evidence of the amount, form, and date of payment, as well as any necessary costs and expenses [see Civ. Code § 2847].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to subrogation, see Ch. 536, Subrogation in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the occurrence of subrogation, see Ch. 220, Subrogation .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.324 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety May Compel Principal to Perform

In Kreling v. Kreling (1897) 118 Cal. 413, 50 P 546 , plaintiff's husband died intestate. Plaintiff was appointed administratrix of his estate. Prior to his death, the deceased was in partnership with defendant, his father, engaged in various enterprises, and with his brothers in operating a theater. A large amount of the property owned by the firms was recorded in the name of the deceased. After plaintiff was appointed administratrix, several suits were commenced by defendant and the deceased's brothers to determine the ownership of various properties claimed as part of his estate. The parties entered into a written agreement by which they compromised all their differences. The court approved the agreement, which provided that plaintiff convey to defendant money and parcels of land and that defendant pay two promissory notes executed on the partnership's behalf. Defendant did not pay the notes, although requested to do so by plaintiff and the holder bank. The bank brought an action against plaintiff to recover the amount due and foreclose a mortgage on other land owned by plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant to compel him to pay the notes. Defendant's demurrer, based on several grounds, was overruled. The trial court entered a decree directing defendant to specifically perform the agreement. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. In addition to its other findings, the Court upheld the appropriateness of the action. By the terms of the agreement, defendant assumed the payment of notes to the bank. By doing so, defendant became the principal debtor in regard to the estate, and the estate became a surety. Plaintiff was authorized to bring an action to enforce the payment without first making payment herself (118 Cal. 413, 419) .

In Karn v. Wills (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 604, 123 P.2d 640 , defendant partnership operated a tire store. Plaintiff and defendant contracted for plaintiff's procuring tires for the partnership for a percentage of the store's profits. Plaintiff contracted with defendant tire company for the tires, guaranteeing payment by defendant partnership. Defendant tire company delivered tires to defendant store and defendant store agreed to make installment payments and executed a promissory note. On default in the first monthly payment, plaintiff brought action against defendant partnership, joining it and defendant tire company. The trial court issued a wit of attachment. The trial court later denied defendant's motion to discharge the writ of attachment. Defendant partnership appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court framed the issue as whether an attachment could properly issue in an action by a surety to compel the principal obligors to pay and satisfy the principal obligation due another when the surety has not paid the principal obligation and there is no allegation of any indebtedness due and payable to plaintiff. While Civ. Code § 2846 permits a surety to maintain an action against the debtor after an obligation becomes due and before that surety has paid it, defendant maintained that such action is wholly equitable in nature and will not support an attachment. The court explained that the theory underlying Civ. Code § 2846 is of equitable origin, and is based on the duty of every person to perform his or her agreements; acting on this consideration a court of equity will enforce the actual accomplishment of a thing stipulated for on the ground that what is lawfully agreed to be done ought to be done. Under this rule a surety may bring an action to enforce payment of the obligation by the principal without first making payment himself or herself. The court said a surety against whom a judgment has been rendered may, without making payment itself, proceed in equity against the principal to subject the estate of the latter to the payment of the debt; a surety need not defer the action until the creditor has obtained judgment against the surety, or until the surety has paid the debt. Defendant tire company relied on its contract of guaranty with plaintiff by the terms of which plaintiff guaranteed payment of all goods sold by defendant company to defendant partnership. The action was one for the recovery of a specific sum of money on an express contract, and therefore an attachment should issue regardless of the fact that the exercise of the equitable power of the court is also incidentally involved (50 Cal. App. 2d 604, 606-609) .

[b] Creditor May Be Codefendant in Surety's Action

In Eastin v. Roberts, Carpenter & Co. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 567, 66 P.2d 224 , plaintiff brought an action against the copartners of a firm to recover on a promissory note executed to her by the firm. The firm had undergone many changes in partners since the obligation was incurred. One defendant filed a cross complaint, alleging that cross defendant had promised to pay plaintiff's note through the articles of partnership. Cross defendant's motion to strike the cross complaint was denied, as was his demurrer. The trial court judgment was in favor of plaintiff and against cross defendant. Cross defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant was clearly liable to plaintiff. The court went on to say that by virtue of an enforceable promise to a debtor to pay the debt, the promisor becomes the true debtor between the parties, while the promisee occupies the relation of surety, and the creditor may enforce the original obligation against either or both. Civ. Code § 2846 permits the surety to maintain an action against the debtor to compel the debtor to pay the debt after it becomes payable or to perform the principal obligation. The surety may bring the action before he or she has paid it and whether he or she has been sued by a creditor or not. The creditor may be made a codefendant, provided the creditor can itself enforce performance and neglects or refuses to do so (19 Cal. App. 2d 567, 571) .

In Josephian v. Lion (1924) 66 Cal. App 650, 227 P 204 , plaintiff claimed to be a surety on the obligation on which she alleged that defendant was the principal. Plaintiff brought suit to compel defendant to perform the obligation that was due. The obligation arose out of a transaction in which plaintiff executed a promissory note and offered as security a mortgage on her real property. Defendant was plaintiff's son-in-law and asked her for a loan, promising to pay the note and hold her harmless if she would borrow the money, execute a note, and mortgage her property as security for the note. The mortgage was later transferred to defendant creditor, who was a made a party defendant as creditor of defendant. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff and decreed that defendant pay the note to defendant Conn, that defendant Conn accept the payment, cancel the note, and release the property. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court's discussion of the case was thorough and addressed all of defendant's varied contentions. That a surety may maintain a suit in equity to compel the principal to pay the obligation is unquestionably allowed by Civ. Code § 2846. The theory underlying Civ. Code § 2846 is of equitable origin, and proceeds on the consideration of natural justice that a person must perform his or her agreement. A court of equity, exercising its discretion, will enforce the actual accomplishment of a thing that has been stipulated to on the ground that what is lawfully agreed to be done ought to be done. After an obligation becomes payable, the surety, before he or she has paid it, and whether he or she has been sued by the creditor or not, may maintain a suit in equity against the debtor to compel him or her to pay the debt or perform the obligation, provided the creditor can itself enforce the payment or performance and neglects or refuses to do so. The creditor is, of course, made a codefendant (66 Cal. App 650, 657) . Defendant contended that the remedy of Civ. Code § 2846 was not available to plaintiff, because he never executed a writing, or promised to pay the mortgagee, or at any time ever became a debtor, principal or otherwise, to the mortgagee, concluding that plaintiff could not be a surety for him (66 Cal. App 650, 658) . The court responded that on consummation of the loan and the agreement of plaintiff to secure and assure the repayment thereof, the relation between them became that of principal and surety: defendant as principal, because it was his debt and he promised to repay it; plaintiff as surety, because she executed the note and hypothecated her property as security for the repayment of the debt, thus becoming a surety in a double sense (66 Cal. App 650, 661) . The complaint stated a case under Civ. Code § 2846. The decree, by it own term, became a lien on any property of defendant not exempt from execution (66 Cal. App 650, 665) .

[c] Surety Entitled to Reimbursement From Principal if Surety Satisfies Any Part of Principal Obligation

In Anchor Casualty Co. v. Strube (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 29, 34 Cal. Rptr. 295 , the corporation of which defendant was president instituted a claim and delivery action for which plaintiff, as surety, issued a claim and delivery bond. Defendant signed as an individual a separate indemnity agreement that provided that he would indemnify the surety against all loss and expenses that plaintiff might sustain by reason of the undertaking on the bond. In the ensuing litigation, judgment was against the corporation for which plaintiff issued the bond. When the corporation went bankrupt, recovery was against plaintiff. Plaintiff brought action to recover from defendant the damages it incurred. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Civ. Code §§ 2847 and 2848 give a surety a cause of action against the principal when the surety has satisfied the principal obligation. Furthermore, the indemnification agreement set out charges for which defendant promised to pay plaintiff. While the indemnification agreement spelled out in more detail the extent of plaintiff's rights, it added little to the substance of those rights (221 Cal. App. 2d 29, 32) .

In Filippi v. McMartin (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 135, 10 Cal. Rptr. 180 , plaintiffs were subcontractors who furnished labor and material in the construction of a building on defendant's land. In their action for recovery of money due them and for foreclosure of mechanic's liens that each had recorded, plaintiffs also named the contractor and the contractor's surety as defendants. Among the cross complaints filed was one by defendant owner against the contractor and surety, in which she requested that they be required to pay plaintiffs directly or to reimburse her in the amount of any judgment for plaintiffs against her. Defendant surety answered the cross complaint by asserting that defendants contractor and owner committed fraud by misrepresenting defendant contractor's assets, and claimed that the suretyship was not enforceable by defendant owner. The trial court rendered judgment that provided, among other things, that plaintiff recover from defendants contractor and surety, that defendant owner take nothing against defendant surety, but that she recover from contractor any loss she sustained, and that if defendant surety paid the amount due plaintiffs, defendant surety would be subrogated to all of the rights of plaintiffs under the judgment, including liens. Defendant owner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Absent an owner's fraud in bringing about the issuance of the bond, a surety who has paid the claims of valid lien claimants is subrogated to the rights of former lien claimants as against the principal but not as against the property. However, the surety may proceed against the property of the owner whose fraud gave rise to the surety's liability to laborers or materialmen. In partial support of her position that defendant surety can have no lien against her property, defendant owner cited Civ. Code §§ 2847, 2848, and 2909 (extinction of lien by performance). The court recognized that the codes are silent on the subject of fraud committed on the surety by the owner of the bond. However, in the absence of a clearly expressed legislative intent to the contrary, they cannot be construed as designed to reward or to place a protective cloak around those guilty of fraud (188 Cal. App. 2d 135, 139) . The prerequisites to subrogation are (1) payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect its own interest; (2) the subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer; (3) the debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable; (4) the entire debt must have been paid; and (5) subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others. The court found each element to be present (188 Cal. App. 2d 135, 140) .

[d] Statutory Subrogation Remedy Is Not Exclusive

In Estate of Elizalde (1920) 182 Cal. 427, 188 P 560 , a deceased had died intestate, leaving his widow and daughter as his heirs. The administrator of his estate died without a final accounting, although he had filed four separate accounts. After the daughter was appointed administratrix, she filed an action against the sureties on the administrator's bond, to which suit the former administrator's administrator became a party defendant. The trial court judgment was against the sureties. The sureties paid the judgment in fulfillment of their bond obligations and then appealed the decision, seeking to be credited with the amount of advances made by the administrator to the widow and the amount of his commissions. The court of appeal held that such credits, if proper, could only be allowed on the settlement of the final account and decree of distribution. When the administratrix filed the final account, the sureties filed a contest and requested the credits. The trial court judgment was for the contestants. The court found the contestants were subrogated to the rights of the administrator and should recover the credits from the estate. The heirs appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The heirs argued that the court was wrong in concluding that the contestants were entitled to be subrogated to the rights of their principal to a setoff against the estate. They argued that Civ. Code § 2848 defines and limits the right of subrogation of sureties and that as so defined and limited it does not permit the sureties to claim the benefit of any rights that their principal might have had against the estate. Civ. Code § 2848 provides that a surety, on satisfying the obligation of the principal, is entitled to enforce every remedy that the creditor then has against the principal to the extent of reimbursing what has been expended, and also to require all cosureties to contribute thereto, without regard to the order in which they became cosureties. The heirs reasoned that the contestants, by virtue of their suretyship and the doctrine of subrogation, on payment by them of the judgment obtained against them as sureties, became subrogated to only the remedies that the administratrix had against the administrator or his estate, and not to any rights of the administrator against the estate. The Court observed that the heirs' reasoning might be true if Civ. Code § 2848 comprehensively and exclusively measured the rights of sureties to subrogation. That is not the case, and it is merely declaratory of the common law on the subject and controlling only so far as it goes. It does not appear that the Legislature intended to announce all the law on the subject. The common law, except so far as it was inapplicable because of court-imposed conditions or statutory modifications, still remains in force (182 Cal. 427, 432-433) . The construction advocated by the heirs, which would confine the surety's rights of subrogation to those derivable from the creditor, is not the true rule. The contestants had a right to adjudication of their rights and obligations under the bond, without thereby losing their equitable right of subrogation (182 Cal. 427, 434) .

In Commercial Standard Ins. Co. v. Bank of America (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 241, 129 Cal. Rptr. 91 , landowners contracted with a contractor for the construction of a duplex. The landowners obtained a construction loan from cross defendant bank. As a condition to granting the loan, cross defendant required the contractor to post performance and labor and material payment bonds. The contractor, as principal, and cross complainant, as surety, executed the bonds. After the contractor defaulted, the owner filed a complaint against defendants surety and contractor, seeking damages. Defendant surety cross complained against the owner and contractor, and against cross defendant bank, alleging implied indemnification, equitable subrogation, and negligence. The trial court sustained cross defendant's general demurrer without leave to amend. Cross complainant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the decisions in the equitable subrogation and negligence causes of action. In relation to subrogation, cross complainant contended that on making good the owner's loss resulting from the contractor's default, it became subrogated to the owner's rights against all malefactors, including cross defendant. Cross defendant contended cross complainant's right to subrogation was negated by Civ. Code §§ 2847 and 2848, and cited the language saying that the surety has no claim for reimbursement against persons other than the principal and cosureties, though others may have been benefited by its act. Cross defendant contended that cross complainant was subrogated to the right of owner against the contractor, but not against third persons, including itself. The court was not persuaded by cross defendant's argument. Civ. Code § 2848 does not comprehensively and exclusively measure a surety's rights to subrogation; it is merely declaratory of the common law on the subject and controlling only so far as it goes. Moreover, the court cited cases that approved application of the doctrine of subrogation to the creditor's rights against third persons when the surety's equities were superior to those of the third-party wrongdoer (57 Cal. App. 3d 241, 246-247) .

[e] Subrogation Available to Surety When Premature Payment by Principal Increased Surety's Liability

In United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Oak Grove Union School Dist. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 22 Cal. Rptr. 907 , defendant school district contracted with a building contractor who had obtained a bond from plaintiff. After progress payments had been earned and paid, a final payment was made to the contractor even though several subcontractors had filed stop notices. The sum was insufficient to pay the remaining claims of laborers and materialmen, including those who had filed stop notices. Plaintiff paid all claims. Then, contending that it was subrogated to the rights of the stop notice claimants, it brought an action against defendant for the amount represented by the stop notices. The trial court overruled defendant's demurrer and its motion for nonsuit and rendered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Initially the court explained the function of stop notices. In a public works contract there can be no lien; stop notices provide protection to subcontractors against defaulting contractors. When the notice is filed, the claimant immediately has a right against those earnings held by the public agency (205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 230-231) . Before addressing defendant's other contentions, the court considered the subrogation issue and held that plaintiff was subrogated to the stop notice rights of the claimants. When a surety discharges a claim against its principal, any lien that secures that claim is likewise discharged. Plaintiff contended that it could be subrogated to the rights of the stop claimants whose claims it paid. The court agreed. The right of a surety to be subrogated to the rights of the laborers and materialmen whose claims it has paid pursuant to the terms of its bond is declared in Civ. Code § 2848 (205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 231-232) . Defendant had paid the contractor prematurely and in disregard of the stop notices. The surety's obligation was to secure the owner against default by the contractor in paying for material and labor contributed to the improvement of the owner's premises. When the owner makes a premature payment to the contractor in disregard of a stop notice, the surety is relieved from protecting the owner pro tanto and is entitled to receive from the owner the amount that the owner has contributed to the contractor's default, which amount the surety would not have been required to pay had the owner complied with the stop notice (205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 232-233) . By paying the subcontractors, plaintiff was subrogated to the subcontractors' rights. To allow defendant to pay a contractor after stop notice and then say that the funds as well as the right to recover against it are all gone would strip any value from the stop notice procedure and from the right of subrogation. Defendant's position would make the right of subrogation very hollow, for the surety would be in the position of having no assurance that whatever contract funds remained would be available to mitigate its liability for labor and material (205 Cal. App. 2d 226, 233-234) .

[f] Surety's Rights Coextensive With Obligation Guaranteed

Flojo Internat., Inc. v. Lassleben (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99 , was a declaratory relief action between a corporation and one of its former principals arising out of obligations undertaken by each in connection with a reorganization and buyout. Defendant, by separate guaranty agreement, guaranteed a $75,000 note payable by the corporation to California First Bank. The note provided for interest at the bank's prime rate plus two percent; however, interest on the unpaid balance following maturity increased to prime plus four percent. The note also contained an attorney's fee provision. When the note came due and was not paid, the bank contacted defendant, who paid the full amount to the bank. Without marking the note "paid," the bank delivered the note to defendant with an assignment of all its right, title, and interest in the note. Defendant assigned the note to his son, who cross-complained on it. The trial court granted judgment in accordance with a summary judgment, awarding the son the amount paid on the note plus interest at the legal rate from the date of payment. Cross-complainant appealed, contending he was entitled to the increased rate of interest and to attorney's fees in accordance with the terms of the note.

The court of appeal agreed with cross-complainant and reversed and remanded for recalculation of interest at the increased rate to the date of judgment (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 723) . The opinion analyzed the issue under the Commercial Code, stating that it involved a transferee's rights under that statute (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 716) . and that defendant was an accommodation party under former Com. Code § 3415 [see now Com. Code § 3419]. However, to avoid deciding whether an accommodation party must sign the instrument itself [see Com. Code § 3419(a) (party who signs instrument as accommodation party)], the court based its conclusion on Civ. Code § 2848 (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 722) . Under the Commercial Code, the court said, cross-complainant was entitled to enforce the note in accordance with its terms. Those terms included an increased default interest rate and an award of attorney's fees (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 721) . Under Civ. Code § 2848, a surety who satisfies the obligations of the principal is subrogated to the rights of the holder and "is entitled to enforce every remedy that the creditor then has against the principal ..." The concept of subrogation puts the surety in the shoes of the creditor whose claim it has paid, according to the surety all the creditor's collection rights. Defendant as a surety therefore acquired and was entitled to enforce the rights to interest and attorney's fees provided by the note (4 Cal. App. 4th 713, 722) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.321

§ 222.321 Supporting Contention That Surety Is Entitled to Contribution From Cosureties [Civ. Code § 2848]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, HAS PAID _____ [ALL or MORE THAN HIS/HER/ITS PROPORTIONATE SHARE] OF THE PRINCIPAL'S OBLIGATION AND THUS IS ENTITLED TO REQUIRE _____ [name(s)], THE _____ [COSURETY or COSURETIES], TO CONTRIBUTE _____ [HIS/HER/ITS or THEIR] PROPORTIONATE SHARE(S), WITHOUT REGARD TO THE ORDER IN WHICH THEY BECAME COSURETIES [AND DESPITE THE FACT THAT ONE COSURETY HAS BEEN RELEASED].

A. Surety Who Has Paid More Than Its Proportionate Share of Obligation May Seek Contribution From Cosureties. A surety who pays more than his or her proportionate share of an obligation of the principal is entitled to require all of his or her cosureties to contribute their proportionate share of the obligation, without regard to the order in which they became cosureties (Civ. Code § 2848; Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 807, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628 ; Jans v. Nelson (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 848, 855-856, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106).

[Optional] B. Surety's Release of One Cosurety Does Not Affect Obligation of Other Cosureties. When a surety has released a cosurety, the other cosureties remain under the same duty of contribution that they had originally. The obligation of the other cosureties is neither increased nor diminished by the fact that the surety entitled to contribution has agreed to forgo or postpone payment by one of them (Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 809, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the surety is entitled to contribution from cosureties when the surety has paid more than its proportionate share of the principal's obligation [see Civ. Code § 2848].

They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of contribution among cosureties. For example, this argument may arise in opposing a motion for summary judgment or an appeal premised on the argument that the cosurety is not responsible for any part of the principal's obligation that was paid by the surety [see, e.g., Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 809, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628] . This argument may also arise after judgment on a motion made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882 and 883 (contribution among joint nontort debtors). These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts showing that two or more persons executed separate guaranties, each for an equal, proportionate share of the amount of the principal's liability, that the creditor brought action against all the cosureties, and that the creditor recovered the total amount from one of them.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to contribution among joint obligors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to suretyship, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing contribution among joint obligors, see Ch. 115, Indemnity and Contribution in this publication.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.325 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety Who Has Paid More Than Its Proportionate Share of Obligation May Seek Contribution From Cosureties

In Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628 , plaintiff and defendants were stockholders in an automobile rental business that financed its purchases through a bank with promissory notes secured by chattel mortgages on the vehicles. To provide additional security, the shareholders executed as individuals separate continuing guaranties. The business defaulted in its payment and the bank notified the guarantors of the default. The bank and the guarantors agreed that the business would sell the automobiles, thereby reducing the obligation to the bank. Plaintiff, the only shareholder with collateral acceptable to the bank, deposited securities with the bank on behalf of the guarantors. After the sale, the bank credited the business with the amount received and liquidated plaintiff's assets. When plaintiff paid the small amount remaining, the bank assigned to him the obligations secured by the guarantors and a promissory note executed by one defendant for the price of one of the automobiles. Plaintiff brought an action against the guarantors to obtain payment of their respective proportionate shares of the business debt. One of the coguarantors was not a part of the action. The trial court determined that each defendant was liable for his original share and that the defendant who had executed the promissory note was additionally liable for his note. That defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among the many contentions raised by defendant was the argument that plaintiff was not entitled to contribution. The court disagreed, finding that the concept was well established. When one or several joint judgment debtors pays more than its proportionate share of the judgment, it is entitled to obtain a proportionate contribution from those jointly liable and may bring suit against one or more codefendants on the implied contract of each obligor to the others that they will share the burden equally. The doctrine applies to coguarantors who are jointly and severally liable to pay the principal obligation. The right of a guarantor to contribution against coguarantors is an obligation implied by law and is governed by equitable principles (267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 807) . When a guarantor has released a coguarantor, the other coguarantors remain under the same duty of contribution as they had originally; the release is a matter solely between the parties. The obligation of the other coguarantors is neither increased nor diminished by the fact that the guarantor entitled to contribution has agreed to forgo or postpone payment by one of them (267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 809) .

In Jans v. Nelson (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 848, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106 , a partnership borrowed $750,000 from a predecessor of Bank of America. The bank required each owner of the partnership to execute a general continuing guarantee in favor of the bank. After the partnership business ceased operations, the loan went into default and the bank sued all of the guarantors. The bank obtained judgments against some partners and entered into settlement agreements with others. Ultimately, one partner who had paid to the bank a portion of partnership debt for which all partners were coguarantors brought an action for contribution against the other partners. The trial court concluded that each solvent guarantor was responsible in equity for an equal share of the total sum paid to the bank. The court of appeal reversed. It first stated that the question presented--what is the appropriate contributory share among partners who are sureties of a partnership debt--had not been decided in any known published opinion (83 Cal. App. 4th 848, 851) . The court examined the "proportionate contribution" concept set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1432, 2848 (83 Cal. App. 4th 848, 855-856) . It concluded that in a circumstance in which all limited partners execute guaranties of a partnership debt and there is no other express agreement concerning rights of contribution, equity requires the proportionate obligation for contribution to be based upon the ownership interest of the various guarantors. Thus, plaintiff was entitled to recover contribution from other solvent partners but the amount of contribution was limited to the excess of his actual payments over his own fair share of the debt (83 Cal. App. 4th 848, 852, 858-859) .

[b] Surety's Release of One Cosurety Does Not Affect Obligation of Other Cosureties

Overholser v. Glynn (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 800, 73 Cal. Rptr. 628 , is discussed in § 222.321[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.322

§ 222.322 Supporting Contention That Creditor Is Entitled to Securities Held by Surety [Civ. Code § 2854]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE CREDITOR, IS ENTITLED TO THE BENEFIT OF EVERYTHING THAT _____ [name], THE SURETY, HAS RECEIVED FROM _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, AS SECURITY FOR THE PERFORMANCE ON THE OBLIGATION [AND MAY COMPEL THE APPLICATION OF THAT SECURITY TO HIS/HER/ITS SATISFACTION].

Creditor Entitled to Security Held by Surety. The creditor is entitled to the benefit of everything which the surety has received from the principal debtor as security for the principal's performance on the obligation, and may compel the application of that security to his or her satisfaction on the maturity of the principal's obligation (Civ. Code § 2854).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a creditor's contention that he or she is entitled to the benefit of the security that the surety received from the principal, and on the maturity of the obligation, may compel the application of it to the creditor's own satisfaction [see Civ. Code § 2854].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the creditor's entitlement to securities held by the surety. For example, this argument may arise in opposing an appeal premised on the argument that the creditor is not entitled to the security given to the surety by the principal. The points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel might allege the circumstances under which the principal gave surety a lien against certain property as security for the performance of the obligation for which the surety guaranteed the principal's performance [see Civ. Code § 2854].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.323

§ 222.323 Supporting Contention That Surety Is Entitled to Relief in the Nature of Quia Timet

[1] FORM

[The following may be inserted in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], AS SURETY FOR _____ [name of creditor] IS ENTITLED TO RELIEF IN THE NATURE OF A BILL OF QUIA TIMET, SPECIFICALLY _____ [specify, e.g., TO HAVE _____ (name of debtor) ENJOINED FROM SPENDING, USING, CONVERTING, OR DISBURSING THE FUNDS S/HE TOOK FROM CREDITOR'S ESCROWS NUMBERS _____ (specify)].

A. Quia Timet Prevents Principle From Absconding. An action in the nature of a bill of quia timet allows a surety to prevent the principal from dissipating the funds necessary to pay or perform the bonded obligation if the surety (1) knows it will be called on to pay the debt or perform the obligation on bond, (2) suspects that the principal has some or all of the necessary funds to do so, and (3) fears that the principal may abscond with those funds (Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 493, 496, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698).

[Optional] B. Quia Timet Is Equitable Remedy for Preventing Wrongs. Quia timet is an action for equitable relief in the nature of a writ of prevention to accomplish the ends of preventionary justice. The remedy is applied to prevent wrongs or anticipated mischief and not merely to redress them when done (Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 494-495, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698).

C. Requisites for Relief by Quia Timet. To be entitled to relief by quia timet, the surety's obligation must have matured, but the surety need not yet have paid that obligation, and relief otherwise available must be inadequate (Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 494-496, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memorandum of points and authorities may be used to support the contention that a surety is entitled to relief in the nature of a bill in equity for quia timet (literally "because he fears"). This prejudgment remedy is often implemented by injunction, initially a temporary restraining order, preventing disbursement of funds, or by imposition of a constructive trust to prevent disbursement of funds pending final determination of the issue [see, e.g., Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. v. S.E.K. Construction Co. (10th Cir 1971) 436 F.2d 1345 (TRO) ; Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 (constructive trust)]. Quia timet will not lie when some other remedy, such as attachment, can provide the necessary relief [see, e.g., Karn v. Wills (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 604, 606-609, 123 P.2d 640 (action to compel principal's performance under Civ. Code § 2846; attachment available if principal and surety (quarantor) have contract out of which obligation arises)].

Older cases require that plaintiff's "fears be real" in the sense that the threat or impeding injury must be more than theoretical. There must be some reasonable basis for apprehension that cannot be remedied equally well by some other action, such as one to remove a cloud from title or to quiet title by setting aside a foreclosure sale or execution sale [see, e.g., Archbishop of S.F. v. Shipman (1886) 69 Cal. 586, 589-590, 11 P. 343 (would not restrain execution sale at request of legal owner without evidence that any sale was scheduled or that any purchaser seemed interested when judgment debtor was stranger to title)].

Counsel should combine the points and authorities in this form with points and authorities relating to the procedural context in which he or she wishes to raise the issue of entitlement to this unique remedy [see, e.g., Ch. 116, Injunctions]. Authorities related to other remedies may also be appropriately included to demonstrate that the relief available would not adequately protect the plaintiff's interests [see, e.g., Ch. 12, Accounting , Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 95, Eminent Domain , Ch. 198, Quieting Title and Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

The prejudgment remedy of quia timet may be sought in an action for imposition of a constructive trust. Discussion of constructive trusts and forms for complaints may be found in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 560, Trusts (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Quia Timet Prevents Principal From Absconding

Plaintiffs in Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 , were a nonprofit corporation created pursuant to the Escrow Law (Fin. Code § 17000 et seq.) and its insurer. Plaintiff Escrow Agents' Fidelity Corp was formed to act as fidelity surety for the trust obligations of California licensed escrow agents to indemnify member agents against loss of trust obligations as a result of embezzlement, theft, or mysterious disappearance. Defendant was alleged to have embezzled $4 million from two escrow companies which filed Chapter 11 petitions in bankruptcy on November 11, 1990. One of the trustees in bankruptcy made a claim with plaintiffs for the $4 million, which claim plaintiffs are statutorily obligated to pay [see Fin. Code §§ 17330, 17314]. On November 21, 1990, plaintiffs filed suit against defendant alleging 8 causes of action: (1) quia timet and imposition of constructive trust; (2) subrogation, (3) unjust enrichment, (4) fraud and deceit, (5) negligence, (6) accounting, (7) implied indemnity, and (8) statutory reimbursement under Civ. Code § 2847. The trial court sustained the demurrer to the first cause of action without leave to amend, overruled the demurrer to the 7th cause of action for indemnity, and sustained the demurrer with respect to the other causes of action with leave to file a first amended complaint within 30 days after either, or both, if the plaintiffs paid any money to the trustee in bankruptcy. The trial court believed that the remedy of quia timet no longer existed in California, but had been replaced by other remedies such as injunction and attachment. Plaintiffs petitioned for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate the portion of the trial court's order that sustained, without leave to amend, defendant's demurrer to the cause of action for quia timet (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 496) . Although quia timet has by and large been abandoned in favor of other legal and equitable prejudgment remedies, it is by no means obsolete. Although rarely utilized in general practice, it is widely and effectively used in fidelity and surety bond cases (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 493) . The court traced the origin of quia timet (literally "because he fears") as an action for equitable relief in the nature of a writ of prevention to accomplish the ends of preventionary justice. The remedy is applied to prevent wrongs or anticipated mischief and not merely to redress them when done. The party seeks the aid of the court because he or she fears some future probable injury to his or her rights or interests and not because an injury has already occurred which requires compensation or other relief (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 494) . The court listed California cases applying the remedy, mostly involving real property, between 1886 and 1925, noting that even then it was used sparingly (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 494-495) . To a great extent statutory remedies such as injunction, lis pendens, attachment, and claim and delivery now provide the necessary relief. However, these statutory remedies have not replaced quia timet in the fidelity and insurance industry. The court of appeal noted that several judges of the Los Angeles Superior Court have granted relief in cases similar to this one. The court cited federal cases for the proposition that no principle in equity is more familiar, or more firmly established, than the one that holds that a surety, after the debt for which it is liable has become due, without paying or being called on to pay it, may file a bill in equity in the nature of a bill in quia timet to compel the principal to exonerate it from liability for its payment, provided no rights of the creditor are rejudiced thereby. The doctrine is not premised on the mere fear of loss or liability prior to an obligation's maturity. Rather, only after the obligation becomes due, may the surety, before it pays, maintain a bill in equity against the debtor to pay the debt or perform the obligation, provided the creditor could enforce payment or performance but neglects or refuses to do so. Thus, quia timet is especially suited to surety cases (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 495) .

The court noted that a surety is obligated by law to pay the creditor of its defaulting principal immediately on the principal's default or defalcation [see Civ. Code § 2708]. Although a surety may file an action at law to compel its principal to perform the obligation on bond when due [see Civ. Code § 2846], the fact that it may eventually obtain a judgment against the principal is of little comfort to the surety if, in the interim, the principal has absconded with the very funds that could have been used to satisfy the bond. Quia timet allows the surety to prevent the principal from dissipating those funds if the surety knows it will be called on to "pay the debt or perform the obligation" on bond, suspects that the principal has some or all of the necessary funds to do so, and fears that the principal may abscond with those funds (4 Cal. App. 4th 491, 496) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Quia Timet Is Equitable Remedy for Preventing Wrongs

The court of appeal in Gagossian v. Arakelian (1908) 9 Cal. App. 571, 99 P. 1113 , reversed a judgment for plaintiff to whom stock had been transferred, but who could not get the corporation to reissue the shares in plaintiff's name because defendant had obtained a judgment against the transferor and levied on and purchased the shares at the sheriff's sale. The court concluded that plaintiff might have a cause of action against the corporation, but none against the defendant. Although the action was one under the first part of Code Civ. Proc. § 1050 (determining adverse claim), rather than under the part generally used by sureties (compelling one to satisfy a debt for which plaintiff is surety), the court said that Code Civ. Proc. § 1050 provides for an action in the nature of a bill of quia timet, the object of which is to prevent a party from anticipated future probable injury to his or her rights or interests, for example when a surety is fearful of injury from neglect of its principal to pay the debt. Code Civ. Proc. § 1050 incorporates only part of the remedy (9 Cal. App. 571, 573) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.324

§ 222.324 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Entitled to Reimbursement From Principal [Civ. Code § 2847]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, IS NOT ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT FROM _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, FOR ANY PAYMENTS MADE BY _____ [name], THE SURETY, BECAUSE _____ [_____ (name), THE SURETY, DID NOT DISBURSE ANY FUNDS and/or _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, HAD NOT DEFAULTED ON ITS OBLIGATION TO _____ (name), THE CREDITOR and/or ANY PAYMENTS TO _____ (name), THE CREDITOR, WERE MADE VOLUNTARILY and/or THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN _____ (name), THE SURETY, AND _____ (name), THE PRINCIPAL, TAKES PRECEDENCE OVER ANY IMPLIED REIMBURSEMENT OBLIGATION AND IT SETS FORTH DIFFERENT REPAYMENT TERMS].

[EITHER]

A. Surety May Be Reimbursed Only for Disbursements Required by Principal's Default. Reimbursement is available only if the surety has disbursed funds on behalf of the principal because the principal defaulted on its obligation. If the surety has not disbursed funds or the principal has not defaulted, reimbursement will not be allowed, even for costs and expenses (Civ. Code § 2847; Pacific Indemnity Co. v. Harper (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 379, 385-387, 94 P.2d 586 (principal did not default); Burge v. Michael (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 780, 784-785, 29 Cal. Rptr. 290 (no disbursement made)).

[AND/OR]

B. Surety Is Not Entitled to Reimbursement if Payment Was Made as Volunteer. When payment by the surety is made without submitting to suit, reimbursement will be allowed only when it can be shown that the principal's liability was clearly established and that the suit would have been a mere formality. When the surety pays the obligation as a volunteer, there is no entitlement to reimbursement from the principal (Civ. Code § 2847; Ragghianti v. Sherwin (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 351, 16 Cal. Rptr. 583).

[AND/OR]

C. Express Agreement Between Surety and Principal Controls Over Implied Obligation of Principal to Reimburse Surety. When a surety pays a debt for which it is liable as surety, the payment extinguishes the debt, and the surety's remedy is not on the original obligation but against the principal on the principal's implied obligation to reimburse the surety. If there is an express agreement between the principal and surety governing reimbursement, the agreement will control as opposed to the implied agreement (Berrington v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 134, 244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 134 ; see Civ. Code § 2847).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the surety is entitled to reimbursement from the principal. Paragraph A may be used when the surety makes a request for reimbursement prematurely, either before the principal defaulted or before an actual disbursement of funds. Paragraph B may be used when the surety voluntarily paid before payment was needed. Paragraph C may be used when an agreement exists between the principal and the surety that provides for repayment other than reimbursement.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the surety's right to reimbursement. For example, this argument may arise in support of a summary judgment based on the theory that there is no right to reimbursement [see, e.g., Ragghianti v. Sherwin (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 347, 16 Cal. Rptr. 583] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts illustrating that although the surety paid the amount requested by the creditor, payment was voluntary because the principal's obligation had not arisen, and there was no default by the principal necessitating payment.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 222.320.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to suretyship, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the occurrence of subrogation, see Ch. 220, Subrogation .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Surety May Be Reimbursed Only for Disbursements Required by Principal's Default

In Pacific Indemnity Co. v. Harper (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 379, 94 P.2d 586 , plaintiff issued a fidelity bond in which it agreed to pay any financial loss that defendant's employer sustained by reason of any dishonest act committed by defendant. Later, defendant's employer brought an action against plaintiff for damages on the bond by reason of financial losses it allegedly sustained because of defendant employee, who was not made a party to the action. Plaintiff surety prevailed in that action. Plaintiff surety then brought an action against defendant employee for the expenses sustained in connection with its defense in the earlier action. Plaintiff had not paid any part of the principal obligation of the bond, nor had defendant indemnified plaintiff for expenses. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend and entered judgment accordingly. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court provided an exhaustive analysis of out-of-state precedent and authority on the issue of whether a surety sued alone on a suretyship contract who successfully defends the action so that it is not required to pay any part of the principal sum of the bond, but does incur defense expenses, is entitled to recover its disbursements from the principal. Finding no right to recovery, the court explained that the theory of law that implies an obligation on the part of a principal to reimburse the surety, if and when the surety pays the obligation of the principal, is based on equitable considerations. The liability of the principal depends on the damages suffered by the surety because of the default of the principal. When the surety has satisfied the principal's obligation, it is equitable that the principal should reimburse the surety. However, when the surety has not been called on to answer for the default of the principal and has not paid any part of the principal's obligation, no recovery of expenses should be imposed against the principal when the litigation out of which the expenses arose resulted, in effect, in a determination that there was no default on the part of the principal. When the contingency against which the surety had contracted does not arise, and the surety sustained no damages and incurred no liability on account of the acts, neglect, or default of the principal, in the absence of any express contract of indemnity the principal ought not to be charged with the payment of expenses incurred by the surety in an action brought by a third person. Quoting Civ. Code § 2847, the Court found that it presupposes the existence of a legal obligation against the principal and the subsequent satisfaction or discharge of some part of that obligation by the surety before necessary costs and expenses of the surety may be recovered. It only provides for a recovery of costs when the surety has disbursed some amount including necessary costs and expenses. Civ. Code § 2847 also refers to what the surety has "disbursed," which in that term's general usage has reference to the paying out or the expending of money (14 Cal. 2d 379, 385-387) .

In Burge v. Michael (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 780, 29 Cal. Rptr. 290 , defendant was accountant for plaintiff's restaurant. Because the financial condition of the business was precarious from the outset, to keep it operating, defendant personally guaranteed bank credits for plaintiff. Defendant also advanced money to plaintiff for which plaintiff executed a promissory note and a pledge of restaurant stock as security. Plaintiff brought an action seeking to quiet title to the stock. Defendant filed a cross complaint on the open-book account. The trial court entered judgment against plaintiff on the quiet title and in favor of defendant on his cross complaint. Plaintiff appealed. Another case was consolidated with the quiet title case at trial, but because the only relation was the parties, the court discussed them separately on appeal.

The court of appeal modified the judgment by deleting certain interest amounts, including interest charged for a blocked account. One of plaintiff's contentions disputed the interest on the blocked savings account. After defendant guaranteed plaintiff's credit at a bank, the bank demanded that defendant deposit $5,000 in a blocked savings account, the bank having the right to draw on the money if necessary. No withdrawal was made by the bank and the account was eventually unblocked, intact. During the period it was blocked, defendant charged plaintiff with interest on the money just as though plaintiff had received the money, and he credited plaintiff with a $5,000 payment when the account was unblocked by the bank. Defendant claimed that he made an advance of the money held in the blocked account. The court felt he acted as surety in posting the money. The rights of a surety for reimbursement from the principal are specified in Civ. Code § 2847, which provides that if a surety satisfies the principal obligation, or any part thereof, whether with or without legal proceedings, the principal is bound to reimburse what the surety has disbursed, including necessary costs and expenses. The bank released the account intact, so there was no disbursement by defendant within the contemplation of Civ. Code § 2847. Unless the parties agree otherwise, a surety may sue only for reimbursement; the surety cannot recover interest on the surety deposit so long as it remains intact as a deposit only (213 Cal. App. 2d 780, 784-785) .

[b] Surety Is Not Entitled to Reimbursement if Payment Was Made As Volunteer

In Ragghianti v. Sherwin (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 16 Cal. Rptr. 583 , plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract whereby plaintiff would sell his real property to defendant and comply with all development and county requirements to enable defendant to construct houses on the property. Pursuant to that contract, plaintiff entered into a written agreement with the county for the construction of street improvements and drainage, and posted a bond for faithful performance. When the street contractor demanded payment from defendant and no payment was forthcoming, it brought an action against plaintiff. After the trial court held that the contractor had a valid lien on the subdivision for the work, the bond company paid the contractor and proceeded against plaintiff. Plaintiff paid the amount in dispute and then brought action against defendant. The trial court judgment was for defendant after granting defendant's motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that the payment made by plaintiff was voluntary and did not furnish plaintiff with a right to reimbursement against defendant. The court agreed. Plaintiff based his right to reimbursement solely on the theory that he filed a bond with the county at defendant's request and that he was thus entitled to recover from defendant any payments made under the bond on defendant's implied promise of indemnity. Nowhere in the bond or in the agreement with the county did plaintiff ever agree to incur liability to any party other than the county. Plaintiff contended that the bond in favor of the county also applied to the contractors, laborers, and materialmen who performed work and supplied materials in performance of the project for which the bond was given as security. The court noted that that was not the law (196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 347-348) . Under the terms of the bond and the agreement with the county, plaintiff was bound to the county alone, and his payments in settlement of the contractor's claim were not made under any legal compulsion, but as a mere volunteer (196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 350) . According to Civ. Code § 2847, a surety may be entitled to reimbursement by the principal whether or not the surety's payment on behalf of the principal was compelled by actual legal proceedings. When that payment is made without submitting to suit, however, reimbursement will be allowed only when it can be shown that liability was clearly established and that the suit would have been a mere formality. Plaintiff chose to pay the claim and must be viewed as a volunteer and not entitled to reimbursement from defendant (196 Cal. App. 2d 345, 351) .

[c] Express Agreement Between Surety and Principal Controls Over Implied Obligation of Principal to Reimburse Surety

In Berrington v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 52 Cal. Rptr. 772 , defendant executed a promissory note to a bank, and defendant's brother, plaintiff's assignor, signed the note as guarantor. When defendant defaulted on payment, the bank demanded payment from the guarantor. Plaintiff sued defendant to recover the amount the guarantor was compelled to pay. Defendant alleged a private oral agreement between him and the guarantor, resulting in an understanding that the reimbursement funds would be the proceeds from the sale of defendant's property and that because the property remained unsold, his reimbursement obligation was not due. Plaintiff alleged that the bank loaned defendant money without spelling out in the note any conditions, relying solely on the general credit of defendant, and denied that there was any agreement about the source of reimbursement funds. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The rights of a guarantor are those given by the law of suretyship, which include contribution from other sureties, if any, and reimbursement from the principal debtor. The surety is not a purchaser and cannot sue on the instrument as a holder (244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 133) . When a surety pays a debt for which it is liable as surety, the surety extinguishes the debt, and its remedy is not on the original obligation but against the principal on the principal's implied obligation to reimburse the surety. Citing earlier case law, the court explained the rights of the surety and principal. Full payment and performance by the surety extinguish the primary obligation; new rights and liabilities then arise. The principal must reimburse the surety for the monies expended, with interest, though not according to the terms of the primary obligation. The surety obtains the right to an action in assumpsit on the implied promise of the principal to make the surety whole. Thus, no right of action on the principal obligation ordinarily will pass to the surety, since it is deemed extinguished by the payment, and its action is for reimbursement on implied assumpsit arising from the enforced advancement for the principal (244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 134) . Plaintiff's suit was on the implied agreement of defendant to reimburse, not on the promissory note that was extinguished by the guarantor's payment. Plaintiff's argument in reliance on the absence of conditions in the note was not valid. In the absence of any express agreement between the guarantor and the principal, the guarantor's action for reimbursement is on an agreement implied in law, but if an actual agreement between the parties existed, that agreement controls. Thus, if it provided that reimbursement is to be made out of certain funds, that agreement may constitute a defense (244 Cal. App. 2d 130, 135) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 222 SURETYSHIP
PART II. FORMS
F. Procedures Available To Parties In Suretyship Relationship

22-222 California Points & Authorities § 222.325

§ 222.325 Opposing Contention That Surety Is Entitled to Contribution From Other Sureties--Sureties Are Successive Rather Than Cosureties [Civ. Code § 2848]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], THE SURETY, DOES NOT HAVE THE RIGHT TO RECEIVE CONTRIBUTION FROM _____ [name(s)], THE ALLEGED _____ [COSURETY or COSURETIES], FOR ANY PART OF THE OBLIGATION OF _____ [name], THE PRINCIPAL, BECAUSE THE SURETY AND THE ALLEGED _____ [COSURETY or COSURETIES] ARE SUCCESSIVE SURETIES RATHER THAN COSURETIES AND NO RIGHT OF CONTRIBUTION EXISTS.

No Right of Contribution When Sureties Are Successive Sureties Rather Than Cosureties. If one surety in equity should bear the ultimate burden rather than the other surety, they stand in the position of successive sureties rather than cosureties. Whether they are cosureties or successive sureties depends on the inferences to be drawn from their contracts and the circumstances of the case. If they are successive sureties, there is no right of subrogation and the surety whose principal's default occasioned the loss will be liable (Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 571, 52 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that the surety may recover contribution from another surety. The ground of the opposition is that the relationship was that of successive sureties rather than cosureties [see Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 52 Cal. Rptr. 533] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of no contribution among sureties. For example, this argument may arise in supporting a demurrer by one alleged to be a cosurety claiming to be a successive surety without liability because there was nothing owing by its principal [see, e.g., Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 566-568, 52 Cal. Rptr. 533] . These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should describe the circumstances under which the sureties guaranteed the performance of different principals for the payment of materialmen and the default by only one of the principals leading to liability for the surety who guaranteed that principal's performance [see, e.g., Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 52 Cal. Rptr. 533] .

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 222.321 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms relating to contribution among joint nontort obligors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to suretyship, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings in that publication.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing contribution among joint obligors, see Ch. 115, Indemnity and Contribution . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the occurrence of subrogation, see Ch. 220, Subrogation .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right of Contribution When Sureties Are Successive Sureties Rather Than Cosureties

In Continental Casualty Co. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 52 Cal. Rptr. 533 , plaintiffs were surety for the prime contractor in an Air Force base construction project. The plumbing work on the project was subcontracted to a business for which defendant was surety. The subcontractor failed to pay debts incurred for goods and materials furnished by its suppliers. Plaintiff was obliged to and did discharge that indebtedness. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant alleging that it was subrogated as a matter of law to the rights of its principal and had succeeded to a cause of action against defendant on its bond. The trial court entered a dismissal judgment after sustaining defendant's general demurrer. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Initially the court noted that the payment of the unpaid suppliers of the plumbers was not a voluntary act, but one compelled by law. After an analysis of the relationship and indemnification responsibilities between the sureties and the contractor's and subcontractor's bonds, the court addressed the issue of ultimate liability. Under some circumstances two persons may be cosureties for the same debt and may be required to share the loss, even when their liabilities originate in separate contracts. On the other hand, if one of them in equity should bear the ultimate burden rather than the other, they stand in the position of successive sureties. Whether they are cosureties or successive sureties depends on the inferences to be drawn from their contracts and the circumstances of the case. If the first of two successive sureties is forced to pay the debt, that surety is subrogated to the creditor's rights on the bond and may enforce it against the second surety. If a subcontractor's bond is put up in order to indemnify the prime contractor for any claim for which the latter may be held liable and for the payment of which the subcontractor is primarily liable, the subcontractor's surety is required to indemnify the principal contractor or the latter's surety for any liability imposed on it for labor and materials furnished to the subcontractor (243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 570-571) . Defendant became surety for the subcontractor whose default occasioned the loss. Plaintiff issued its bond to the prime contractor, and the loss was not occasioned by any default on the part of its principal. The two sureties were successive sureties, and the loss in equity should fall on defendant, whose principal's default occasioned it (243 Cal. App. 2d 565, 571) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
Chapters 223through 224 RESERVED

22-223 California Points & Authorities Chapters 223through 224

RESERVED

Chapters 223RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS

22-225 California Points & Authorities 225.syn

§ 225.syn Synopsis to Chapter 225: TRESPASS

§ 225.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 225.02 Governing Statutes

§ 225.03 Relation to Nuisance

§ 225.04 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 225.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 225.06 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 225.07-225.19 [Reserved]

§ 225.20 Definition of Trespass--Necessary Elements Exist

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Trespass

§§ 225.21-225.39 [Reserved]

§ 225.40 Supporting Contention That Defendant Committed Actionable Trespass--Requisite Intent Present

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent Necessary for Liability

[b] Intent to Be in Place Where Trespass Occurred Sufficient

[c] Intent to Cause Damage or Harm Not Necessary

§ 225.41 Supporting Contention That Defendant Committed Actionable Trespass--Requisite Intent Present--Substantial Certainty That Acts Would Cause Entry of Matter

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requisite Intent Present if Substantial Certainty That Acts Will Result in Entry of Matter on Property

§ 225.42 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--No Requisite Intent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability for Indirect Trespass When Requisite Intent Not Established

§§ 225.43-225.59 [Reserved]

§ 225.60 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Is Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Plaintiff as Possessor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person in Actual Possession of Real Property Is Proper Plaintiff in Trespass Action

[b] Act of Possession

[c] Possessor's Title May Not Be Attacked Unless Defendant Claims Title

[d] Possessor Has Right of Action Against Owner

§ 225.61 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Was Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Plaintiff Has Existing Future Possessory or Ownership Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person With Future Possessory Interest Presently Existing May Bring Action for Trespass

[b] Owner Not in Possession May Bring Action to Recover Damages to Ownership Interest

§ 225.62 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Owner Does Not Have Existing Possessory Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Possession Rather Than Title Is Required for Trespass Action

§§ 225.63-225.79 [Reserved]

§ 225.80 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Deposit of Material

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presence of Material on Property Without Possessor's Consent Is Trespass

[b] Continuing Presence of Materials Deposited by Former Owner Is Trespass

[c] Trespass Occurs Even if Property Value Is Increased by Unauthorized Entry

§ 225.81 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Deposit of Material Without Personal Entry

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activities Causing Deposit of Materials as Trespass

§ 225.82 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Indirect Injury to Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trespass by Indirect Injury

[b] Trespass Through Vibrations

[c] Trespass Through Fire

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trespass Through Vibrations

§ 225.83 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Invasion of Possessory Interest in Airspace

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Airspace Above Land as Part of Land

[b] Temporary Invasion of Airspace Is Privileged if Reasonable

[c] When Flights Incident to Takeoffs and Landings Constitute Trespass

§ 225.84 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--Entry of Intangible Matter Without Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intangible Intrusion Alone Is Not Trespass

§ 225.85 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--Entry of Airspace Was Privileged

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Flight Is Lawful Unless Altitude Regulations Are Violated or Imminent Danger Is Posed to Persons or Objects on Land

[b] Flight Allowed in Zone of Approach to Public Airport Without Restriction or Hazard

§§ 225.86-225.99 [Reserved]

§ 225.100 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Nominal Damages Presumed for Every Trespass

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nominal Damages Are Presumed for Every Trespass

[b] Nominal Damages Will Not Affect Award of Punitive Damages

§§ 225.101-225.119 [Reserved]

§ 225.120 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Exemplary Damages Available for Malicious Trespass

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exemplary Damages May Be Awarded When Trespassing Party Is Guilty of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

[b] Award Will Not Be Disturbed When Supported by Sufficient Evidence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exemplary Damages May Be Awarded When Trespass Was Malicious

§ 225.121 Opposing Award of Damages for Trespass--Exemplary Damages Unavailable if Not Based on Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exemplary Damages Must Be Based on Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

§§ 225.122-225.139 [Reserved]

§ 225.140 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Diminution in Value or Cost of Restoration [Civ. Code § 3333]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Measure of Damages as Flexible in Order to Provide Fair Compensation to Injured Party

[b] Diminution in Value as Measure of Damages for Injury to Real Property

[c] Cost of Restoration as Measure of Damages

[d] Measure of Damages as Lesser of Diminution in Value or Cost of Restoration

[e] Reasonable Costs of Restoration in Excess of Diminution in Value May Be Awarded if Landowner Has Personal Reasons for Restoration

[f] Costs of Restoration as Available Even if Land Value Not Diminished

§ 225.141 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages Available for Annoyance and Discomfort

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort Are Recoverable if Natural and Proximate Result of Trespass

[b] Damages for Emotional Distress Flowing Directly From Trespass Are Recoverable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort Are Recoverable if Natural and Proximate Result of Trespass

§ 225.142 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages Allowable to Businesses Injured by Trespass

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loss of Prospective Profits as Measure of Damages on Sufficient Proof

[b] Difference in Usable Value of Premises as Measure of Damages When Loss of Profits Cannot Be Sufficiently Proved

[c] One Measure of Damages Applied for Business Injuries

§ 225.143 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Other Consequential Damages [Civ. Code § 3333]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compensation Allowed for All Damages Proximately Caused by Trespass

[b] Intent to Cause Damages Not Element of Trespass

[c] Recovery of Costs to Prevent Further Harm

§ 225.144 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Anticipation of Injury Not Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Possessor or Landowner Not Required to Anticipate Injury

§ 225.145 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Continuing Trespass

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Continuing Trespass Affords Injunctive Relief or Successive Actions for Monetary Relief

[b] Accrued Damages Are Recoverable When Trespass Is Continuing

[c] Party May Bring Action for Prospective Damages and Waive Continuing Trespass

[d] Damages Are Available Up to Time of Injunctive Relief

[e] Plaintiff's Characterization of Trespass as Continuing Controls in Doubtful Cases

§ 225.146 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages for Trespass as Available Although Activities Within Protected Commercial Zone Not Enjoinable [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acts Exempt From Injunction Are Not Barred From Trespass Actions

§ 225.147 Opposing Award of Compensatory Damages for Trespass--Statutory Damages for Wrongful Occupation of Real Property [Civ. Code § 3334]--Disgorgement of Benefits Obtained by Occupation of Property Limited to Financial or Business Advantage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Benefits" Obtained Under Civil Code Section 3334(b) Require Financial or Business Advantage

[b] Restoration Costs Recoverable Only if Reasonable

[c] Specific Evidence Linking Profit to Trespass Required to Recover Profit as Damages

[d] Gross Profits is Appropriate Measure of Benefit Obtained When Defendant Provides Evidence of Expenses Incurred

§§ 225.148-225.159 [Reserved]

§ 225.160 Supporting Award of Damages for Production of Minerals in Trespass--Measure of Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Harsh Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Bad Faith

[b] Mild Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Good Faith

§ 225.161 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass to Timber--Multiple Damages Available

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages for Wrongful Removal of or Injuries to Timber

[b] Double Damages for Casual or Involuntary Trespass to Timber

[c] Double Damages Mandatory When Timber Damaged by Fire Set or Spread Negligently

§ 225.162 Opposing Award of Damages for Trespass to Timber--Treble Damages Only Available for Malicious Injury or Removal of Timber

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages Requires Malicious Intent

§§ 225.163-225.179 [Reserved]

§ 225.180 Supporting Contention for Issuance of Prohibitory Injunction Against Trespass--Equitable Relief Warranted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule Regarding Availability of Injunctive Relief

[b] Facts of Specific Case Are Determinative

[c] Injunctive Relief Available if Difficulty in Estimating Damage Indicates Irreparable Injury

[d] Injunctive Relief Available if Legal Remedy Inadequate

[e] Injunctive Relief Available to Avoid Multiplicity of Suits

[f] Injunctive Relief Available to Prevent Creation of Easement

[g] Interference With Easement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Easement

§ 225.181 Supporting Contention for Issuance of Mandatory Injunction Against Encroachment--Equitable Relief Warranted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doubtful Encroachment Cases Seeking Mandatory Injunction Decided in Plaintiff's Favor

[b] Mandatory Injunction Will Be Granted Unless Defendant Is Innocent, Plaintiff Will Not Suffer Irreparable Injury, and Hardships Are Disproportionate

[c] Court Need Not Balance Conveniences if Defendant Acted Knowingly or if Defendant's Negligence Is Sole Proximate Cause of Encroachment

[d] Willfulness or Lack of Good Faith Indicate Lack of Innocence

[e] Irreparable Injury Determined by Present or Future Use

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Need Not Balance Conveniences if Defendant Acted Knowingly or if Defendant's Negligence Is Sole Proximate Cause of Encroachment

§ 225.182 Opposing Contention for Issuance of Prohibitory Injunction Against Trespass--Equitable Relief Not Warranted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunctive Relief Only Available When Legal Remedy Is Inadequate or Injury Is Irreparable

[b] Completed Trespass Does Not Warrant Injunctive Relief

§ 225.183 Opposing Contention for Issuance of Mandatory Injunction Against Encroachment--Equitable Relief Not

Warranted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Relative Hardships Balanced and Essential Elements for Issuance Not Satisfied

[b] Showing of Irreparable Injury to Defendant Requires Balancing

[c] Adequate Compensation in Damages Precludes Issuance of Mandatory Injunction

[d] Promise of Prior Owner As Evidence of Good Faith

[e] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Injury Minimal

[f] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Delay in Assertion of Right

§§ 225.184-225.199 [Reserved]

§ 225.200 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Consent to Entry

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry After Express Consent Is Not Trespass

[b] Entry After Implied Consent Is Not Trespass

[c] Consent May Be Implied Beyond Express Consent

§ 225.201 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--No Consent to Entry

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Without Consent Is Trespass

[b] Admission to Entering Property Without Consent

§ 225.202 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Consent Given Was Ineffective Due to Lack of Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent to Entry by Possessor Does Not Authorize Interference With Ownership Interests

[b] Owner Lacks Authority to Consent to Entry When Possessory Right Belongs to Another

[c] Entry Pursuant to Consent in Excess of Agent's Authority Constitutes Trespass

§ 225.203 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Conditional Consent Given Was Exceeded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Made in Excess of Conditional Consent Constitutes Trespass

[b] Condition May Be Implied From Invitation

[c] Entry Complying With Condition Becomes Trespass When Condition Is Violated

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Entry Made in Excess of Conditional Consent Constitutes Trespass

§§ 225.204-225.219 [Reserved]

§ 225.220 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Entry by Necessity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Privileged if it Appears Reasonably Necessary to Prevent Harm

[b] Destruction of Property May Be Justified by Necessity

§ 225.221 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Entry for Unlawful or Abusive Purpose

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry for Unlawful or Abusive Purpose Constitutes Trespass

[b] Unjustifiable Interference With Business Relations Is Abusive Entry

§§ 225.222-225.239 [Reserved]

§ 225.240 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Civ. Code § 3346(c); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 338(b), 349 3/4]--In General

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Trespass on or Injury to Real Property Must Be Commenced Within Three Years

[b] Action for Underground Trespass by Drilling Well Must Be Commenced Within 180 Days

[c] Application of Statute of Limitations Not Affected by Procedure Used to Enforce Right

[d] Statute of Limitations Begins Running When Permanent Trespass Is Committed

§ 225.241 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations--Knowledge of Trespass Is Not Necessary for Statute of Limitations to Run

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge of Trespass Is Not Necessary for Statute of Limitations to Accrue

§ 225.242 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Trespass Is Continuing

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Begin Running From Date of Original Entry When Trespass Is Continuing

[b] Recovery for Continuing or Temporary Trespass as Measured by Damages Incurred Within Statutory Period Immediately Preceeding Action

[c] Right to Successive Actions Preferred

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Begin Running From Date of Original Entry When Trespass Is Continuing

§ 225.243 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Damages Must Be Sufficiently Appreciable for Period of Limitation to Run

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Period of Limitation Begins to Run When Damage Is Sufficiently Appreciable to Reasonable Person

§ 225.244 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas in Public Forum

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exercise of Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas

[b] Private Property Is Public Forum

§ 225.245 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--No Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas on Private Property That Is Not Public Forum

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Property Neither Open to Public Nor Equivalent of Traditional Public Forum

[b] Private Property Presenting No Significant Opportunity to Disseminate Ideas

[c] Prohibiting Activities on Property Does Not Curtail Opportunity for Exercise of Constitutional Right

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Property Neither Open to Public Nor Equivalent of Traditional Public Forum

§§ 225.246-225.259 [Reserved]

§ 225.260 Supporting Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property Constitutes Trespass

[b] Actual Damages Are Allowed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property Constitutes Trespass

§ 225.261 Opposing Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Insufficient Evidence of Intentional Interference With Possession of Personal Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Evidence of Intentional Interference Is Necessary for Trespass to Personal Property

§ 225.262 Opposing Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Interference Did Not Cause Actual Injury or Damage to Plaintiff's Personal Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actual Damage Required

[b] No Recovery for Mass E-Mails That Do Not Damage or Impair Functioning of Computer System

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.01

§ 225.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to trespass actions in four groups of forms. Part II, Subpart A, includes forms pertaining to the general definition of a trespass [see § 225.20], and the elements of a cause of action for trespass, including memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 225.40 -225.41] and opposing [see § 225.42] the existence of the element of intent, supporting [see §§ 225.60 -225.61] and opposing [see § 225.62] the existence of the element of possession, and supporting [see §§ 225.80 -225.83] and opposing [see §§ 225.84 -225.85] the existence of the element of entry. Part II, Subpart B, includes memoranda for use in alleging different measures of damages, including forms supporting nominal damages [see § 225.100], supporting [see § 225.120] and opposing [see § 225.121] exemplary damages, supporting [see §§ 225.140 -225.146] and opposing [see § 225.147] various compensatory measurements of damages and supporting [see §§ 225.160 -225.161] and opposing [see § 225.162] damages for trespass to minerals or timber. Part II, Subpart C, includes forms supporting [see §§ 225.180 -225.181] and opposing [see §§ 225.182 -225.183] the availability of injunctive relief, including a form supporting [see § 225.181] and opposing [see § 225.183] a mandatory injunction against encroachment. Part II, Subpart D, includes forms pertaining to defenses to a trespass action, including forms supporting [see § 225.200] and opposing [see §§ 225.201 -225.203] the contention that a trespass has not occurred based on the existence of consent, supporting [see § 225.220] and opposing [see § 225.221] the contention that a trespass has not occurred based on whether there was necessity for an entry on property, supporting [see §§ 225.240 -225.241] and opposing [see §§ 225.242 -225.243] the contention that the action for trespass is barred by the statute of limitations, and supporting [see § 225.244] and opposing [see § 225.245] the contention that a trespass has not occurred because of the constitutional right to free expression of ideas in a public forum. Part II, Subpart E, includes forms supporting [see § 225.260] and opposing [see §§ 225.261 and 225.262] a cause of action for trespass to personal property.

This chapter does not discuss the law of conversion, nuisance, negligence, or ultrahzardous activity, the points and authorities for which are covered in Ch. 51, Conversion , Ch. 167, Nuisance , Ch. 165, Negligence , and Ch. 234, Ultrahazardous Activities respectively.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassElementsTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesDamagesPunitive DamagesTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesInjunctions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.02

§ 225.02 Governing Statutes

Damages for trespasses are governed by Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3333, and 3346 and Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4. The statutes of limitations for the various trespasses are governed by Civ. Code § 3346 and Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b). Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.9 governs the recovery of attorney's fees by a prevailing plaintiff in an action to recover for damages to personal or real property resulting from trespass on lands under cultivation or intended or used for raising livestock.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesDamagesCompensatory DamagesTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesDamagesPunitive Damages

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.03

§ 225.03 Relation to Nuisance

Although the torts of trespass and nuisance are closely related, they are different torts and merit separate attention. The elements of trespass have developed through case law rather than statute and include an intended entry on property possessed by another. Nuisance is defined by statute and is generally anything that is injurious to health, indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property [see Civ. Code §§ 3479-3481]. A trespass may be an obstruction to the free use of property and interfere with the comfortable use of that property, and thereby become a nuisance. For points and authorities relating specifically to nuisance, see Ch. 167, Nuisance .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawTortsNuisanceGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsNuisanceElementsReal Property LawTortsTrespass to Real PropertyTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.04

§ 225.04 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda filed in discovery motion proceedings may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms in this chapter are in the form of contentions based on substantive points of law. They may be combined with each other as appropriate according to the facts of the case. The substantive contentions may also be combined with any appropriate procedural forms, depending on the procedural context in which the argument is raised, and may be adapted for use by a cross complainant and cross defendant. For a discussion of how to use the points and authorities in this chapter to draft a complete memorandum or a trial or appellate brief, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.05

§ 225.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to actions for trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions for negligence or nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the liability of the possessor of land to others for conditions on the land, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 421, Premises Liability (Matthew Bender). For additional discussion and forms relating to trespass actions, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners.
- Ch. 101, Boundaries.
- Ch. 177, Damages.
- Ch. 240, Easements.
- Ch. 241, Ejectment.
- Ch. 266, Fences.
- Ch. 482, Quieting Title.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawAdjoining LandownersBoundariesReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsQuiet Title ActionsReal Property LawTortsNuisanceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.06

§ 225.06 Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For points and authorities supporting and opposing injunctions generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For points and authorities supporting and opposing the barring of actions for lack of timeliness generally, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions . For points and authorities supporting and opposing the liability of the possessor of land to others for conditions on the land, see Ch. 178, Premises Liability .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsTortsPremises Liability & PropertyGeneral OverviewTortsPremises Liability & PropertyTrespassRemediesInjunctions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.07-225.19

[Reserved]

§§ 225.07[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
1. Elements of Trespass Generally

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.20

§ 225.20 Definition of Trespass--Necessary Elements Exist

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ACTIONABLE TRESPASS ARE PRESENT IN THIS ACTION BECAUSE DEFENDANT WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR AN ENTRY ON THE PROPERTY IN THE EXCLUSIVE POSSESSION OF PLAINTIFF WITHOUT PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT.

Elements of Trespass. A trespass is: an entry, without consent, on the property in the exclusive possession of another (Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 233, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 ; MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 387, 74 P.2d 276).

[Add supporting points and authorities for each element of trespass which is at issue in the case (see, e.g., §§ 225.40 -225.41, 225.60 -225.61, 225.80 -225.83).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that all essential elements of an actionable trespass are present in plaintiff's case. If any of the elements has been challenged, counsel may desire to combine these contentions with additional contentions specific to that element [see, e.g., §§ 225.40 -225.41 (intent), 225.60-225.61 (possession), 225.80-225.83 (entry)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the elements of trespass. This argument may arise in opposing a motion for summary judgment or nonsuit, a demurrer, or other similar procedure [see, e.g., Allen v. McMillion

(1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 214, 147 Cal. Rptr. 77 (summary judgment); Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 776, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 (nonsuit); La Com v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 115, 281 P.2d 894 (demurrer)]. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of plaintiff's possession, defendant's entry, and the fact that it occurred without plaintiff's consent. For example, counsel may show that plaintiff is an owner and in possession of a movie theater, that plaintiff was holding a private showing at the theater, and that defendant entered the theater to view the showing over plaintiff's objection [see, e.g., MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 74 P.2d 276] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to pleading a cause of action for trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Trespass

In Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 , plaintiffs were 22 retirees who resided near defendant's steel fabricating factory. The factory operated 24 hours per day, creating a very high level of noise which disturbed the neighbors, but in no way caused physical damage to their property. Plaintiffs filed a nuisance action seeking injunctive relief, and filed a separate trespass action while that action was pending. The nuisance action resulted in a judgment for defendants, as did the trespass action. Plaintiffs appealed the trespass case.

The Supreme Court denied plaintiffs a trespass remedy, but reversed the nuisance judgment, remanding the case to determine if relitigation was precluded and noting that plaintiffs had pled facts which supported a nuisance recovery. In reaching its decision the Court defined and distinguished trespass and nuisance. Trespass is an invasion of the interest in the exclusive possession of land, as by entry on it (32 Cal. 3d 229, 233) .

In MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 74 P.2d 276 , defendant movie theater agreed with a film company to a preshowing of a new film at defendant's theater; admittance of only two groups of people was part of the agreement. The publicity representative of the film company invited a radio announcer for a rival motion picture producer and allowed him to bring some guests, among them plaintiff. Plaintiff was told by the district manager of defendant that he would not be admitted to the theater, and after plaintiff had been admitted, he was escorted from the lobby by police officers acting under the direction of defendant. Plaintiff brought an action for damages after being ejected from the theater. After the jury found that the removal of plaintiff was not justified, the trial court awarded damages for ejectment and lost wages proximately resulting from the ejectment. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment. The Court discussed defendant's exclusive right to determine who should be permitted to attend its theater, which it had surrendered in part in its agreement with the film company. As plaintiff was not a member of either class to be invited, he was not entitled to admission. Since plaintiff's invitation was in excess of the authority of the film company, plaintiff had not been properly invited, but was a trespasser on the premises, or one who was on the land of others without their consent and against their will. Every wrongful entry on land in the possession of the owner is a trespass (10 Cal. 2d 383, 387) . The Court also addressed plaintiff's contention that the preshowing was a joint venture of defendant and the film company, noting that it was within the power of either partner to the joint venture at any time to revoke the right or license of plaintiff to be within the lobby and to order him to be removed from it. Plaintiff had no cause of action against defendants, as an owner has the right to forcibly eject trespassers and if the force used is not excessive, the trespasser has no personal action against the owner (10 Cal. 2d 383, 389) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
1. Elements of Trespass Generally

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.21-225.39

[Reserved]

§§ 225.21[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
2. Intent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.40

§ 225.40 Supporting Contention That Defendant Committed Actionable Trespass--Requisite Intent Present

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS CONSTITUTED TRESPASS BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED WITH SUFFICIENT INTENT FOR LIABILITY TO OCCUR.

A. Intent Necessary for Liability. There is no liability for a trespass unless the trespass is intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of injuries in an ultrahazardous activity (Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 784, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128).

B. Intent to Be in Place Where Trespass Occurred Sufficient. The intent required as a basis for liability for trespass is simply an intent to be at a place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred; the defendant is liable for an intentional entry even though he or she acted in good faith under the mistaken belief that he or she was not trespassing (Miller v. National Broad. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1480-1481, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668).

C. Intent to Cause Damage or Harm Not Necessary. Intent to cause damage or harm is not necessary for there to be liability for trespass (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 326, 43 Cal. Rptr. 542 ; Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant acted with sufficient intent to support liability for trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of defendant's intent. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts which demonstrate defendant's intent. For example, counsel could show that defendant built a road across plaintiff's land, knowing that plaintiff owned and was in possession of the land.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to pleading a cause of action for trespass, see Ch. 550, Trespass in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda or points and authorities supporting and opposing the ultrahazardous nature of the activity, see Ch. 234, Ultrahazardous Activities .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 225.42 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent Necessary for Liability

In Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 , plaintiffs brought an action for damages to real property allegedly caused by seismic vibrations activated by rocket motor test firings. The trial court granted nonsuit for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment of nonsuit with respect to plaintiff's causes of action against defendants, and affirmed it with respect to the causes of action against the contractors engaged by defendants to effect repairs on plaintiff's property. The court made a thorough examination of ultrahazardous activity and governmental immunity in addition to discussing liability for trespass. Actionable trespass may be committed indirectly through concussions or vibrations activitated by a defendant's conduct; it is immaterial whether the injuries were caused by the shaking of the earth or pulsation of the air or by physical projectiles or missiles. There is no liability for a trespass unless the trespass is intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of injuries in an ultrahazardous activity. The court held that defendant's rocket testing was an ultrahazardous activity (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 784) .

[b] Intent to Be in Place Where Trespass Occurred Sufficient

In Miller v. National Broad. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 , plaintiff brought suit for trespass against a television broadcasting company. The action arose when defendant's film crew, while filming documentary on emergency rescue paramedics, entered plaintiff's home with the paramedics who were responding to a call to administer aid to plaintiff's husband, who had suffered a heart attack. The film crew entered plaintiff's home without her consent and filmed the attempts to save the husband's life. On motion for summary judgment, the trial court found that no trespass had occurred because defendants did not enter the plaintiff's home maliciously and because plaintiff suffered no actual damage.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that the essence of a cause of action for trespass is an unauthorized entry onto the land of another. The court held that the intent required as a basis for liability for trespass is simply an intent to be at a place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred. Since the defendants intended to cross the threshold of the plaintiff's home, they committed a trespass notwithstanding the fact that they acted in good faith (187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1480-1481) .

[c] Intent to Cause Damage or Harm Not Necessary

In Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 43 Cal. Rptr. 542 , plaintiffs brought an action against a partnership, the insured of defendant, alleging that the partnership intentionally caused indirect trespasses to plaintiffs' land, which thereby sustained damages. Judgment was for plaintiffs, but defendants never paid. Thereafter, plaintiffs brought an action against the insurance company seeking a declaration of their rights and the liabilities of the insurer under a policy of liability insurance and recovery on the judgment against the insured. The trial court found that the acts were not accidental, but intentional, and that the insurance policy excluded coverage for property damage unless caused by accident, thereby excluding coverage for the acts which gave rise to the original court action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court distinguished between intent as to the act and intent as to the consequential damages. The trial court had found that the trespass was intentional and the liability of defendant was established even though the consequences of the trespass were unintentional and unforeseeable. Intent to cause damages is not an element of the tort of trespass, and the trespasser is liable for any damage caused even though that damage was not intended or foreseen (233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 326) .

In Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 , plaintiff homeowner brought a trespass action for property damages allegedly caused by dust and other substances escaping from defendant's cement plant and quarry and settling on plaintiff's nearby home. The trial court entered judgment for defendants after the jury had returned a verdict in its favor. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. Among the other issues considered, the court analyzed the jury instructions given by the trial court. The court found error with the instruction that in the absence of negligence there must be an intent to cause damage or injury for the jury to find liability. That instruction was wrong because it did not reflect the law, which establishes that the performance of an act that will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter on another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land on which liability may be based. An intent to harm is not required (188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
2. Intent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.41

§ 225.41 Supporting Contention That Defendant Committed Actionable Trespass--Requisite Intent Present--Substantial Certainty That Acts Would Cause Entry of Matter

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass, (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTION[S] CONSTITUTED TRESPASS BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED WITH THE KNOWLEDGE THAT THERE WAS A SUBSTANTIAL CERTAINTY THAT THE ACT[S] WOULD RESULT IN ENTRY OF FOREIGN MATTER ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY.

Requisite Intent Present if Substantial Certainty That Acts Will Result in Entry of Matter on Property. An act that will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter on another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land on which liability may be based (Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant acted with sufficient intent to support liability for trespass when defendant's acts would to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter on plaintiff's property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of defendant's intent. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might argue and present facts showing that defendant's cement-plant operations would, to a substantial certainty, result in the entry of dust, sand, and other particles on plaintiff's property.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 225.42 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requisite Intent Present if Substantial Certainty That Acts Will Result in Entry of Matter on Property

The facts and procedural background of Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][c]. The court of appeal held that an act that will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter on another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land on which liability may be based (188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
2. Intent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.42

§ 225.42 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--No Requisite Intent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS WERE NOT A TRESPASS BECAUSE THE REQUISITE INTENT FOR TRESPASS WAS NOT PRESENT.

No Liability for Indirect Trespass When Requisite Intent Not Established. Although trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injuries, there is no liability for this type of injury if it is not intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of engaging in an ultrahazardous activity (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 641-645, 295 P.2d 958).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted by defendant in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant committed a trespass because the consequential and indirect result of his or her actions was injury to plaintiff's property. The ground of opposition set forth is that although the consequence of defendant's actions was an injury to plaintiff's property, the act was not committed with the necessary intent.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of defendant's intent. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel might describe what defendant's intent was and how it was inadequate to result in liability. For example, describing defendant's ignorance of an unusually susceptible condition on plaintiff's land would be indicative of a lack of intent to cause injury and trespass.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 225.40 and 225.41.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability for Indirect Trespass When Requisite Intent Not Established

In Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 295 P.2d 958 , plaintiff, a tenant in the apartment house owned by defendant, was injured when a piece of ceiling plaster fell on her. The ceiling had been cracked for several years prior to its falling, but no portion had ever fallen and the condition was never reported to defendant. Plaintiff brought an action in trespass, alleging that construction work performed in the basement on defendant's direction caused the building to vibrate, causing the plaster to fall, and that those actions were a trespass. The trial court granted defendant's motion for a nonsuit. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, discussing liability for trespass acts in great detail. The court said that there is no distinction between direct and indirect invasions and that trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injuries as well as by direct and forcible injuries. Vibrations, under certain circumstances, can constitute a trespass (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 641) . The court discussed and distinguished McNeill v. Redington (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 315, 154 P.2d 428 [see § 225.82[4][a]]. While the McNeill court did not spell out the precise basis of liability, it was obvious from the facts of the case that it involved either an intentional or negligent trespass because a reasonable person knew or should have known that the operations would cause the adjoining properties to be subjected to vibrations. The court concluded that there is no liability for a trespass unless the trespass is intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of engaging in an ultrahazardous activity (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 645) . Because the construction was neither negligent nor ultrahazardous, the only basis for trespass liability was if defendant trespassed intentionally or acted with knowledge that the work would necessarily invade plaintiff's property rights. Defendant's lack of knowledge of the loose plaster precluded the implication of intent (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 646) .

123 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
2. Intent

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.43-225.59

[Reserved]

§§ 225.43[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
3. Possession

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.60

§ 225.60 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Is Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Plaintiff as Possessor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum or points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF IS THE PROPER PARTY TO BRING THIS ACTION FOR TRESPASS BECAUSE AT THE TIME OF THE ALLEGED TRESPASS PLAINTIFF WAS IN POSSESSION OF THE REAL PROPERTY ENTERED ON BY DEFENDANT.

A. Person in Actual Possession of Real Property Is Proper Plaintiff in Trespass Action. The proper plaintiff in an action for trespass to real property is the person in actual possession (Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane (1911) 161 Cal. 689, 694 ; see Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308).

B. Act of Possession. Possession is the peaceable or quiet actual possession. Actual possession is usually evidenced by occupation, substantial enclosure, cultivation, or an appropriate use according to the locality and quality of the property, and is a question of fact (Williams v. Goodwin (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 496, 508-509, 116 Cal. Rptr. 200).

[Optional] C. Possessor's Title May Not Be Attacked Unless Defendant Claims Title. No averment of title in the plaintiff is necessary. A defendant who is a mere stranger to the title will not be allowed to question the title of a plaintiff in possession of the land. It is only when the trespasser claims title, or claims under the real owner, that he or she is allowed to attack the title of the plaintiff whose peaceable possession has been disturbed (Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane (1911) 161 Cal. 689, 694-695, 120 P. 771).

[Optional] D. Possessor Has Right of Action Against Owner. The cause of action for trespass affords protection for a possessory interest, but not necessarily an ownership interest. On proof of the elements of trespass, a possessor is entitled to an award of at least nominal damages, even if the intruder is the owner of the property (see Allen v. McMillion (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 219, 147 Cal. Rptr. 77).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff, as possessor of the real property, is the proper party to bring an action for trespass. If the alleged trespasser is the owner of the property, optional paragraph D may be used.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of plaintiff's possession. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should allege plaintiff's possession of the land at the time of defendant's unauthorized entry, as evidenced by, for example, the installation of a mobile home, maintenance of a garden, and construction of a driveway for the use of plaintiff.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to pleading a cause of action for trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to unlawful detainer, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing an unlawful detainer action, see Ch. 236, Unlawful Detainer .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person in Actual Possession of Real Property Is Proper Plaintiff in Trespass Action

In Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane (1911) 161 Cal. 689, 120 P. 771 , plaintiff brought an action in trespass against the owners of an adjoining mine to recover the value of ore extracted by defendants from plaintiff's mine. The trial court ordered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court found that the trial court had made errors in its instructions, but that the errors did not substantially affect the right of plaintiff to a lesser amount of damages. With the consent of plaintiff to accept a lower award, the Court modified the earlier judgment of the damage award and affirmed the denial of a new trial. The Court examined at length the issues of possession, damages, and the period of limitations. The proper plaintiff in an action for trespass to real property is the person in actual possession. No averment of title in the plaintiff is necessary (161 Cal. 689, 694) . A defendant who is a mere stranger to the title will not be allowed to question the title of a plaintiff in possesion of the land. It is only when the trespasser claims title, or claims under the real owner, that he or she is allowed to attack the title of the plaintiff whose peaceable possession has been disturbed. One who is in possession under an agreement to convey giving him or her the right of possession may maintain an action against a stranger to the title for a trespass which consists of the removal and conversion of the substance of the estate. As plaintiff was rightfully in possession under an agreement of sale, and defendants did not claim right of possession, any possible defect in title at the time the action was begun did not affect defendant's case (161 Cal. 689, 695) .

In Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308 , plaintiffs leased real property to a lessee who, without plaintiffs' knowledge, sublet it. Without plaintiffs' consent, the sublessee hired defendant's agent to deliver 70 loads of concrete fill material to the property. Plaintiffs brought an action for trespass, and after a stipulation of the facts, the trial court denied plaintiffs relief, based on the argument that one out of possession cannot complain of trespass. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and the case was remanded to determine damages. Likening actions in trespass and waste, the court discussed the elements of traditional actions in both causes. The cause of action for trespass is designed to protect possessory, not ownership, interests in land from unlawful interference. The proper plaintiff in a trespass action is the person in actual possession; no averment or showing of title is necessary (133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774) . An out of possession property owner may recover for an injury to the land by a trespasser which damages the ownership interest. The inquiry in a case involving unlawful intrusion on property rights should focus on the nature of the injury and the damages sought: if the right to possession has been abridged and possessory rights damaged, the possessor may complain by way of an action for trespass; if an intruder harms real property in a manner which damages the ownership interest, the property owner may seek recovery whether the cause of action be technically labeled trespass or some other form of action, such as waste (133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774-775) . Plaintiffs had no possessory interest in the property and had no right to complain of unlawful interference with possessory rights. Their claim rested on damage to their ownership interest. In addressing defendant's claim that the possessor had given consent, thereby disallowing an action, the court said that the possessor's consent to entry does not justify interference with plaintiff's ownership rights. By showing they gave no authorization, plaintiffs established the lack of consent necessary to support their action for injury to their ownership interests (133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 778) .

[b] Act of Possession

In Williams v. Goodwin (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 496, 116 Cal. Rptr. 200 , plaintiff was knocked down and injured by a bull belonging to defendant while in the yard outside a mobile home in which he lived, which was located on the property belonging to his employers. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant based on negligence, strict liability for injuries inflicted by animals of dangerous propensities, and strict liability for damage by trespassing livestock. Defendant's motion for nonsuit was granted and judgment entered accordingly, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. In its discussion of trespass, the court focused on the type of possession required to support an action for trespass, as the trial court based its finding on the insubstantial nature of plaintiff's possession. In an action for trespass a plaintiff must prove the fact of possession, but the right to possession is not involved unless a defendant tenders an issue on it. Defendant contended that plaintiff's relationship to the land was of a character so vagrant as not to confer a right of action for trespass. The court defined possession as peaceable or quiet possession, which could be shown by actual possession (41 Cal. App. 3d 496, 508) . Actual possession is usually evidenced by occupation, by substantial enclosure, by cultivation, or by appropriate use acccording to the locality and quality of the property, and is a question of fact for jury determination (41 Cal. App. 3d 496, 508-509) . In this case, the court found that there was sufficient evidence of plaintiff's possession of the land to require ultimate determination by the jury (41 Cal. App. 3d 496, 509-510) .

[c] Possessor's Title May Not Be Attacked Unless Defendant Claims Title

The facts and procedural background of Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane (1911) 161 Cal. 689 , are discussed in § 225.60[3][a]. The Supreme Court discussed the requisite possession in a trespass action and who may challenge a plaintiff's possession. A defendant who is a mere stranger to the title will not be allowed to question the title of a plaintiff in possession of the land. It is only when the trespasser claims title, or claims under the real owner, that he or she is allowed to attack the title of the plaintiff whose peaceable possession has been disturbed. One who is in possession under an agreement to convey giving him or her the right of possession may maintain an action against a stranger to the title for a trespass which consists of the removal and conversion of the substance of the estate. As plaintiff was rightfully in possession under an agreement of sale, and defendants did not claim right of possession, any possible defect in title at the time the action was begun did not affect defendant's case (161 Cal. 689, 695) .

[d] Possessor Has Right of Action Against Owner

In Allen v. McMillion (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 147 Cal. Rptr. 77 , plaintiffs sued defendants, adjoining landowners, for trespass, adverse possession, declaratory relief, invasion of privacy, and to quiet title after defendants had removed a fence and surrounding foliage which had been the agreed boundary, but was actually on defendants' property as disclosed by a property survey. The court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment for all causes of action except adverse possession and entered dismissal accordingly. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of all the causes of action except trespass, the dismissal of which was reversed. In its discussion of the trespass action, the court said that one in peaceable though wrongful possession of real property may sue in tort for forcible interference with that possession even in the absence of injury to the person or goods (82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 214) . The court held that plaintiffs stated a cause of action for trespass, or wrongful interference with peaceful possession, which is different from an infringement of ownership rights or from injury to real property (82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 218) . The action of trespass affords protection for a possessory, not necessarily an ownership, interest. The court noted that under the forcible entry statutes, if the forcible intruder were the owner of the property, the party in peaceable possession would be entitled to an award of at least nominal damages, notwithstanding that a plaintiff's possession was wrongful. On proof of the elements of trespass, a nonstatutory action for forcible entry, a plaintiff should be entitled to an award of at least nominal damages, just as would be true were the intruder a third party rather than the owner of the property (82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 219) . Here plaintiffs objected to the manner of dispossession rather than the fact of it, and showed a disinterest in regaining possession. Therefore any damage to the property resulting from the forcible entry was not recoverable (82 Cal. App. 3d 211, 219-220) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
3. Possession

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.61

§ 225.61 Supporting Contention That Plaintiff Was Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Plaintiff Has Existing Future Possessory or Ownership Interest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF IS PROPER PARTY TO BRING THE ACTION FOR TRESPASS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS AN EXISTING _____ [FUTURE POSSESSORY or OWNERSHIP] INTEREST THAT HAS BEEN DAMAGED BY DEFENDANT'S TRESPASSORY ACTS.

[EITHER]

Person With Future Possessory Interest Presently Existing May Bring Action for Trespass. Although not in possession of the land at the time of trespass, a plaintiff with a future possessory interest under a presently existing and valid agreement is entitled to bring an action for injury to the land (Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 632, 643, 198 P.2d 1).

[OR]

Owner Not in Possession May Bring Action to Recover Damages to Ownership Interest. An out-of-possession property owner may recover for an injury to the land by a trespasser that damages the ownership interest whether the cause of action is technically labeled trespass or some other form of action, such as waste (Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774-775, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff, as one with an existing interest in the real property, may bring an action for damages even when not in possession of the land. Plaintiff's interest may be through an agreement, such as a lease, or through nonpossessory ownership.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of an existing interest in the property enabling plaintiff to bring a trespass action. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts showing the existence of a lease under which plaintiff's possession has not yet occurred, but under which plaintiff has an existing interest in the current crops.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to pleading a cause of action for trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person With Future Possessory Interest Presently Existing May Bring Action for Trespass

In Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 632, 198 P.2d 1 , plaintiffs, lessors of pasturage land, brought an action for damages for the destruction of grass and grain on the land. The damages resulted from the farming operations of defendants, who claimed to have acted in reliance on an oral agreement for the written lease of the land for farm cultivation. The trial court directed a verdict in favor of plaintiffs on actual and compensatory damages with the amount to be fixed by the jury, and left the issue of punitive damages entirely to the jury, which the jury awarded. Defendants appealed. Although the owners of the land were codefendants in the original action, the court ordered judgment in their favor, and they were not parties to the appeal.

The Supreme Court modified the damage award, but otherwise affirmed the trial court's judgment. Defendant contended that plaintiffs were not the proper persons to bring the action because they were not in possession of the property, nor entitled to possession, at the time of defendant's actions, and that the owners of the land were the proper parties to complain of the acts committed prior to the date of the commencement of plaintiffs' lease. The Court disagreed, explaining that defendants mistook the theory of plaintiffs' pleading that was premised on the principle that the destruction of the growing crops amounted to an invasion of plaintiff's future possessory interest under a presently existing and valid lease. The destruction of the growing crops constituted an invasion of plaintiffs' rights under the terms of their lease, depriving them of benefits thereby conferred, and they are entitled to pursue their remedy against defendants (32 Cal. 2d 632, 643) . As the real party in interest, sustaining the loss occasioned by defendants' acts in destroying the growing crops on the land, plaintiffs had a claim of redress from defendants which cannot be denied (32 Cal. 2d 632, 644) .

[b] Owner Not in Possession May Bring Action to Recover Damages to Ownership Interest

The facts and procedural background of Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308 , are discussed in § 225.60[3][a]. The court of appeal said that an out-of-possession property owner may recover for an injury to the land by a trespasser which damages the ownership interest. The inquiry in a case involving unlawful intrusion on property rights should focus on the nature of the injury and the damages sought: if the right to possession has been abridged and possessory rights damaged, the possessor may complain by way of an action for trespass; if an intruder harms real property in a manner which damages the ownership interest, the property owner may seek recovery whether the cause of action be technically labeled trespass or some other form of action, such as waste (133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774-775) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
3. Possession

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.62

§ 225.62 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Is Proper Party to Bring Action in Trespass--Owner Does Not Have Existing Possessory Interest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT THE PROPER PARTY TO BRING AN ACTION FOR TRESPASS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF, ALTHOUGH THE OWNER OF THE PROPERTY, DOES NOT HAVE AN EXISTING POSSESSORY INTEREST WHICH IS SUPERIOR TO DEFENDANT'S RIGHT OF POSSESSION.

Possession Rather Than Title Is Required for Trespass Action. If an owner of land is not in possession of it, the owner may not bring an action for damages for trespass against a defendant who is in possession of the land (Raffetto v. Fiori (1875) 50 Cal. 363, 364) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that plaintiff, as the owner of the land, is the proper party to bring an action for trespass. The ground of opposition set forth is that, plaintiff, although the owner, is not in possession of the property against which the trespass occurred.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of plaintiff's lack of possession. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might describe plaintiff's lack of possession of the land in question, as well as defendant's possession of the land, even if not under color of authority.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Possession Rather Than Title Is Required for Trespass Action

In Raffetto v. Fiori (1875) 50 Cal. 363 , plaintiffs were in possession of and claiming ownership of a mining claim. They also claimed ownership of an adjoining claim in which they did not have possession. Defendant, who obtained judgment against the possessor of the second claim and attached the claim, took possession of the second claim. Plaintiffs applied for a patent for their claim, including the claim held by the other party in the survey. Although defendant objected, plaintiffs obtained a patent for the entire claim. Defendant continued in possession of the claim, working it and claiming title. Plaintiffs sued for trespass, and sought damages and injunctive relief. The trial court awarded damages and injunctive relief to plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case, noting that plaintiffs were not in possession of the premises in controversy when the action was brought. When a plaintiff is actually desseized of the land, and the defendant is in the adverse possession of it, an action for damages for trespass cannot be maintained (50 Cal. 363, 364) .

127 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
3. Possession

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.63-225.79

[Reserved]

§§ 225.63[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.80

§ 225.80 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Deposit of Material

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT TRESPASSED ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY BY THE DEPOSIT OF MATERIALS ON THE PROPERTY WITHOUT THE KNOWLEDGE OR CONSENT OF PLAINTIFF.

A. Presence of Material on Property Without Possessor's Consent Is Trespass. The keeping of materials on property in which the owner of the materials has no right, title, or interest without the knowledge or consent of the possessor is a trespass (Herond v. Bonsall (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 152, 154-155, 140 P.2d 121 ; Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 571, 298 P. 1030).

[Optional] B. Continuing Presence of Materials Deposited by Former Owner Is Trespass. A property owner may bring an action for a continuing trespass against a former owner for depositing contaminants on the property that remain after the former owner has sold or transferred the property (Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 345, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377).

[Optional] C. Trespass Occurs Even if Property Value Is Increased by Unauthorized Entry. Trespass occurs with an unauthorized entry, and the effect of the entry on the property value is relevant only to the measure of damages (Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 571, 298 P. 1030).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant's acts in depositing or retaining material on plaintiff's property without permission is a trespass. Optional Paragraph B is for use if the trespass involves a former owner's deposit of material that remains on the property. Optional Paragraph C is for use if the deposit increased or did not diminish the value of the property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of trespass entry. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should describe defendant's deposit of excess soil on property in plaintiff's possession and indicate that plaintiff had not consented to that act.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 225.84 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presence of Material on Property Without Possessor's Consent Is Trespass

In Herond v. Bonsall (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 152, 140 P.2d 121 , plaintiffs brought an action for claim and delivery and for money had and received. Defendants cross complained for recovery of the reasonable value of the use and occupation of real property, and for breach of agreement to pay money. Defendants were the owners of real property which was leased to plaintiffs and used in the restaurant and night club business. After termination of the lease plaintiff's equipment remained on the premises until defendants caused the equipment to be placed with a storage company subject to the order of plaintiffs. The trial court rendered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court approved of the trial court's finding that plaintiffs did not have any right, title, or interest in or to the premises on termination of the lease and were not entitled to any notice to remove the equipment, and that by keeping their equipment on defendant's premises plaintiffs committed a continuing trespass (60 Cal. App. 2d 152, 154) . The court discussed the notice and equipment ownership issues as well. Plaintiffs had admitted ownership of the equipment in the original action, and could not avoid the cause of trespass by alleging that ownership remained in the tenants under a conditional sales contract from cross defendants as sellers (60 Cal. App. 2d 152, 156) .

In Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 298 P. 1030 , defendant dumped materials remaining from street construction on plaintiff's property without the consent or knowledge of plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action for damages for the complete destruction of the land as farm land. Defendant denied everything, and said that if anything had been placed on plaintiff's property, it increased the value of the land. The trial court ordered judgment for defendant. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the cause with instructions to establish the amount of damage resulting from the reasonable cost of removing the materials. The court said that a trespass had occurred when defendant, without the knowledge or consent of plaintiff, entered on plaintiff's land and deposited a large quantity of material. The only question of fact related to the quantity and description of the material and the amount of the resulting damage (113

Cal. App 570, 571) . The court noted that there was evidence that the value of the land was not diminished by the deposit of earth and soil on the land. However, to hold that plaintiff is without remedy merely because the value of the land was not diminished would be to decide that by the wrongful act of another, an owner of land may be compelled to accept a change in the physical condition of his or her property, or else perform the work of restoration at his or her own expense. Thus, the court allowed plaintiff to recover the reasonable cost of restoration (113 Cal. App 570, 572-573) .

[b] Continuing Presence of Materials Deposited by Former Owner Is Trespass

In Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 , plaintiff brought an action against prior owners of plaintiff's real property for having discharged hazardous waste onto the property that was continuing to pollute the soil and groundwater. Defendants demurred and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal reversed, rejecting the trial court's holding that defendants' use of their own land is not a trespass. The court held that this conclusion did not resolve whether plaintiff had stated a cause of action for continuing trespass. The court ruled that plaintiff had stated such a cause of action, because a trespass may be committed by the continued presence on the land of a thing that defendant has tortiously placed there, whether or not defendant has the ability to remove it. The court held that defendants had, by discharging hazardous waste on their property, created a public nuisance, which is tortious conduct (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 345) . The court disagreed with the conclusion in Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 675, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 796 , that an owner's creation of a public nuisance was not tortious conduct that would support an action for continuing trespass unless a private plaintiff could show a special injury that was different in kind from the injury suffered by the general public. The court ruled that one who causes a public nuisance is a tortfeasor and subject to tort liability whether or not a private person could have maintained a cause of action for a public nuisance (19 Cal. App. 4th 334, 346-347) .

[c] Trespass Occurs Even if Property Value Is Increased by Unauthorized Entry

The facts and procedural background of Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 298 P. 1030 , are discussed in § 225.80[3][a]. The court of appeal found that a trespass had occurred. Noting that the trial court had accepted evidence indicating that the property value had been increased through the deposit, the court said that to hold that plaintiff is without remedy merely because the value of the land was not diminished would be to decide that by the wrongful act of another, an owner of land may be compelled to accept a change in the physical condition of his or her property, or else perform the work of restoration at his or her own expense. The court awarded plaintiff the right to receive the reasonable value of the restoration, without regard to the fact that plaintiff had not yet removed the material from the land (113 Cal. App 570, 572-573) .

129 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.81

§ 225.81 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Deposit of Material Without Personal Entry

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT COMMITTED A TRESPASS BY CONDUCTING ACTIVITIES WHICH LED TO THE DEPOSIT OF FOREIGN MATERIAL ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY.

Activities Causing Deposit of Materials as Trespass. A defendant's activities, although lawful, if causing the entry of material on the plaintiff's property, are actionable as a trespass (see Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 267-268, 288 P.2d 507 ; Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant's acts caused the entry of foreign matter on plaintiff's property, thereby constituting a trespass, although defendant did not actually enter the property in person.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of causing an entry on property sufficient to constitute a trespass. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may include a description of defendant's milling activities, describe how they caused the release of materials into the atmosphere, and how these materials entered plaintiff's property, causing injury.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 225.84 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activities Causing Deposit of Materials as Trespass

In Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , defendant operated a cotton gin adjacent to the property on which plaintiff resided and operated a planing mill. Defendant's ginning and processing operations lasted six months of each year. Plaintiffs sued for trespass, alleging that large quantities of fumes, vapors, dust, dirt, sediment, lint, and waste materials were emitted into the atmosphere and penetrated their house and shop, covering them with an offensive, injurious, and adhesive coating of dust, lint, and ginning waste and causing injury to their house, furniture, and persons during a six-month period. At trial, the jury found plaintiffs had suffered property damage but no personal injuries. A new trial was granted on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to justify the verdict regarding the damages. In the second trial the jury found that plaintiffs had suffered $9,500 damages, and judgment was entered accordingly. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. Whether the entry and deposit of the materials was a trespass did not arise in the Court's opinion. The Court concentrated its discussion on damages, never questioning that defendant's acts were a trespass. The Court noted that the parties treated the trespass as permanent because of its recurrent character, rather than as a continuous trespass. When a trespass to land is of a permanent nature, all damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, but when the trespass is temporary in character, only those damages may be recovered which have accrued up to the time of the commencement of the action, since it is not to be presumed that the trespass will continue (45 Cal. 2d 265, 268-269) . Plaintiffs' election to sue for all damages past, present, and future, and the recovery of such damages was upheld by the Court (45 Cal. 2d 265, 271) . An election to sue for damages past and prospective is deemed a waiver of the invasion and a consent to the continued occupancy of the land (45 Cal. 2d 265, 269) . The Court said that even though defendant's trespass did not cause fright, shock, or physical illness, it obviously was of the type to cause plaintiffs much annoyance and discomfort, and thus it allowed damages for it (45 Cal. 2d 265, 273) .

The facts and procedural background of Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][c]. The court of appeal said that an act that will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter on another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land on which liability may be based (188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 530-531) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.82

§ 225.82 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Indirect Injury to Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS LED TO A CONSEQUENTIAL AND INDIRECT INJURY TO PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY AND THUS CONSTITUTED A TRESPASS, ALTHOUGH DEFENDANT DID NOT ACTUALLY ENTER THE PROPERTY OR CAUSE THE DEPOSIT OF MATERIAL ON THE PROPERTY.

A. Trespass by Indirect Injury. Trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injury as well as by direct and forcible injury (see Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 232, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922).

[Optional] B. Trespass Through Vibrations. Vibration intrusions may allow recovery under the doctrine of trespass if they are accompanied by the deposit of particulate matter on the property or actual physical property damage. It is immaterial whether the injuries were caused by the shaking of the earth or pulsation of the air, or by physical projectiles or missiles (Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 232, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 ; Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 784, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128).

[Optional] C. Trespass Through Fire. A negligent invasion by fire that causes damage to real property constitutes a trespass (Elton v. Anheuser-Busch Beverage Group, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1305, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a trespass occurred as a consequence and indirect result of defendant's actions.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of trespass as a consequential and indirect injury when there was no physical entry. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of defendant's actions and how they resulted in a consequential injury to plaintiff's property. For example, counsel could show how defendant's oil drilling caused subterranean vibrations that resulted in the destruction of plaintiff's water well.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 225.84 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trespass by Indirect Injury

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 233, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 , are discussed in § 225.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court recognized that trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injury as well as by direct and forcible injury. Vibration intrusions may allow recovery under the doctrine of trespass if they are accompanied by the deposit of particulate matter on the property or actual physical property damage (32 Cal. 3d 229, 232) .

[b] Trespass Through Vibrations

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 233, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 , are discussed in § 225.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court affirmed the denial of a trespass remedy, but reversed and remanded the denial of a nuisance remedy. It said that vibration intrusions may allow recovery under the doctrine of trespass if they are accompanied by the deposit of particulate matter on the property or actual physical property damage (32 Cal. 3d 229, 232) .

The facts and procedural background of Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the judgment of nonsuit. The court stated that an actionable trespass may be committed indirectly through concussions or vibrations activated by defendant's conduct; it is immaterial whether the injuries were caused by the shaking of the earth, pulsation of the air, or by physical projectiles or missiles (247 Cal. App. 2d 774 784) .

[c] Trespass Through Fire

In Elton v. Anheuser-Busch Beverage Group, Inc. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303 , plaintiffs were adjacent property owners whose property was damaged by a fire which escaped from defendant's land. Plaintiffs sued for trespass. The trial court found that the defendants negligence in allowing the fire to escape onto the plaintiff's land did not constitute a trespass and as a result would not allow the plaintiffs to recover attorney fees under Code Civ.

Proc. § 1021.9.

The court of appeal affirmed that portion of the judgment finding the defendant liable for the plaintiff's damages, and remanded for further proceedings on the issue of costs. The court held that (1) the negligent invasion by fire which causes damage to real property constituted a trespass, and (2) Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.9, which entitles the prevailing plaintiffs in actions to recover damages to real property resulting from a trespass on land to reasonable attorney fees, applied (50 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1304-1307) . The court stated that under the rule of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280 , a trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injury as well as by direct and forcible injury. It found no reason why a fire could not constitute the agent by which a trespass is committed. Since it was undisputed that the fire in this case caused actual damage to the plaintiff's property, and since the jury expressly found that those damages were caused by the defendant's negligence, the court held that the invasion of the fire onto the plaintiff's property constituted a trespass (50 Cal. App. 4th 1301, 1307) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trespass Through Vibrations

In McNeill v. Redington (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 315, 154 P.2d 428 , plaintiffs, homeowners residing near defendant's drop forging plant, brought actions in nuisance and trespass, seeking injunctive relief and damages. The parties stipulated that the operations of defendant's plant transmitted injurious vibrations to the residences of plaintiffs and that actual physical damages had been caused by them. The trial court judgment was for defendant. The court of appeal reversed with directions to retry only the issue of damages. Discussing the trespass action, the court saw no reason for differentiating between responsibility for damages done by physical projectiles or missiles and responsibility for damages done by vibration or concussion (67 Cal. App. 2d 315, 320) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.83

§ 225.83 Supporting Contention That Trespass Occurred--Invasion of Possessory Interest in Airspace

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

TRESPASS OCCURRED BECAUSE DEFENDANT MADE AN UNPRIVILEGED ENTRY INTO THE AIRSPACE OVER THE LAND IN PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION.

A. Airspace Above Land as Part of Land. The term "land" includes free or occupied space for an indefinite distance upwards, subject to limitations on the use of airspace imposed, and rights in the use of airspace granted, by law (Civ. Code § 659). Government declarations of sovereignty in the space above the land are not intended to and do not divest owners of the surface of the soil of their lawful rights incident to ownership in the airspace above the land (Civ. Code § 659; Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 839, 243 P.2d 497).

B. Temporary Invasion of Airspace Is Privileged if Reasonable. A temporary invasion of an air space is only privileged if it does not interfere unreasonably with the possessor's enjoyment of the land (see La Com v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116, 281 P.2d 894).

[Optional] C. When Flights Incident to Takeoffs and Landings Constitute Trespass. When flying at low altitudes incident to landing or taking off causes more than mere apprehension of injury and presents danger to persons or property lawfully on the land, the flight is not privileged and may be a trespass (Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 839, 243 P.2d 497 ; La Com v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116, 281 P.2d 894).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant trespassed by invading the airspace above plaintiff's land. There are regulations which govern the flight of aircraft and grant a privilege to prescribed flights [see, e.g., Pub. Util. Code § 21403]. Trespass may occur when the flight is not otherwise privileged. Pub. Util. Code § 21403(c) grants the right of flight to safe access to public airport, which includes flight within the zone of approach of any public airport without restriction or hazard, when the zone of approach complies with federal regulations. Presumably, flights to a private airport, flights which are not in a complying zone of approach, or flights which do not otherwise comply with regulations are not privileged, and may be a trespass for which these points and authorities may be appropriate.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of an unprivileged invasion of airspace over another's land. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel may allege that aircraft landing at defendant's private airport approached at extremely low heights and invaded the airspace above plaintiff's home.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to airplanes and airports, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 16 Airplanes and Airports (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For a form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting a nuisance action involving airport noise, see Ch. 167, Nuisance .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.85 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Airspace Above Land as Part of Land

In Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 243 P.2d 497 , plaintiffs, 50 homeowners residing near defendant's airport, brought a nuisance action against defendants, seeking damages and injunctive relief. Plaintiffs alleged that in the course of defendant's operation of the airport numerous aircraft of various types used the airport, and this use was continuous and frequent throughout the daylight hours, that the airplanes flew over the homes of plaintiffs at heights varying from 25 to 800 feet, creating a tremendous noise which interfered with the use, enjoyment, and occupancy of their land and caused great fear and apprehension. The trial court enjoined and restrained defendants from operating the airport on the premises, and awarded damages to a specified group of plaintiffs who had suffered damages from the operation of a flight school. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court, with minor modifications, adopted the opinion of the court of appeal, affirmed the damages judgment, and reversed and remanded the injunction. After discussions of defendant's ownership and control and evidentiary questions, the Court thoroughly analyzed the doctrine of nuisance as it relates to airports and airplanes. An airport is not a nuisance per se, but it may become a nuisance either because of unsuitable location or improper operation (38 Cal. 2d 825, 838) . Regulations concerning flying operations do not determine the rights of the surface owners as to nuisance, and are not considered as granting leave to maintain a private nuisance (38 Cal. 2d 825, 838-839) . Federal and state government declarations of sovereignty in the space above the land are not controlling, as these declarations were not intended to and do not divest owners of the surface of the soil of their lawful rights incident to ownership. There is no definite yardstick that may be used in determining how low an airplane may fly over the property of others in landing or taking off; however, flying at low altitudes incident to landing and taking off may constitute trespass, as it may cause more than mere apprehension of injury. Extensive low flying, causing unreasonable annoyance to occupants of land below, is also a substantial interference with enjoyment of the property. The Court cited from the Restatement of the Law of Torts, which provides that an entry above the surface of the earth in the air space in the possession of another by a person traveling in an aircraft is privileged if the flight is conducted for a legitimate purpose, in a reasonable manner, at a height not to interfere unreasonably with the possessor's enjoyment of the surface, and in conformity with government regulations (38 Cal. 2d 825, 839) . The Court noted that contiguous property owners must to a reasonable degree yield their desired privacy to the general welfare to which the operation of legitimate businesses contribute (38 Cal. 2d 825, 843) .

[b] Temporary Invasion of Airspace Is Privileged if Reasonable

In La Com v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 281 P.2d 894 , plaintiffs sued defendants airport and landowner for damages for personal injuries and damage to an airplane sustained when one plaintiff flew over defendant's land and crashed into overhead electrical wires. Due to plaintiffs' failure to plead about the installation of wires, the court presumed that the wires were lawfully installed and maintained prior to the construction of the airport, that they were plainly visible to aircraft approaching, and that plaintiffs knew of the dangerous character of the wires and their exact location. The demurrers of the airport and land owner were sustained without leave to amend. No appeal was taken from that order. An amended complaint was filed against the utility company alone, a demurrer to which was sustained, and, on plaintiffs' statement that no leave to amend was desired, judgment was entered for that defendant. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Citing case law, the Restatement of Torts, and Pub. Util. Code §§ 21402 and 21403, the court said that any aircraft flying over the land and the structures on the land of another is a trespasser. However, a temporary invasion of the air space by aircraft, as long as it does not interfere unreasonably with the possessor's enjoyment, is privileged. The plane in this case was operated at an altitude which was dangerous to persons or property lawfully on the land and was a trespasser (132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116) . As a trespasser, plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law. When contributory negligence appears on the face of the complaint a demurrer to the complaint is properly sustainable on that ground (132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 117) .

NOTE:
The La Com case was decided prior to Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , which established principles of comparative negligence.

[c] When Flights Incident to Takeoffs and Landings Constitute Trespass

Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 243 P.2d 497 , is discussed in § 225.83[3][a].

La Com v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 114, 281 P.2d 894 , is discussed in § 225.83[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.84

§ 225.84 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--Entry of Intangible Matter Without Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS DID NOT CONSTITUTE A TRESPASS BECAUSE INTRUSION OF INTANGIBLES WITHOUT ANY DEPOSIT OF PARTICULATE MATTER OR ANY PROPERTY DAMAGE IS NOT AN ENTRY AS REQUIRED IN AN ACTION FOR TRESPASS.

Intangible Intrusion Alone Is Not Trespass. An intangible intrusion alone, such as noise, odor, or light, when not accompanied by the deposit of particulate matter on the property or any actual physical damage to the property, is not a sufficient entry to constitute a trespass (San Diego Gas & Elec. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 893, 936, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724 ; Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 232-233, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that a trespass occurred. The ground of opposition set forth is that there was only an intangible intrusion on plaintiff's property without any deposit of particulate matter or actual physical damage, and thus there was an insufficient entry to constitute a trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that there was only an intangible intrusion without any deposit of materials or physical damage to the property. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts which illustrate the intangible nature of the matter which was alleged to have intruded on plaintiff's property, for example, that defendant operated a merry-go-round which played music between the hours of one and three in the afternoon, and this music in no way caused any injury to plaintiff's property.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in §§ 225.80 -225.82.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice , Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice , Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the existence of a nuisance, see Ch. 167, Nuisance .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intangible Intrusion Alone Is Not Trespass

In San Diego Gas & Elec. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 893, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 724 , plaintiffs filed an action for damages and injunctive relief against a power company, alleging trespass through electromagnetic radiation onto plaintiff's property from power lines housed by the power company in an easement adjacent to plaintiff's property. The power company demurred to the complaint. The trial court overruled the demurrer, but on a petition for writ of mandate the court of appeal directed the trial court to enter a new order sustaining the demurrer.

The Supreme Court affirmed, stating that plaintiffs could not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action under Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280 . First, electric and magnetic fields arising from power lines are intangible phenomena within the meaning of Wilson. Second, plaintiffs did not allege that the electric and magnetic fields caused any physical damage to their property (13 Cal. 4th 893, 936) .

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 , are discussed in § 225.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that noise alone, without damage to the property, will not support a tort action for trespass. Recovery allowed in trespass actions predicated on noise, or other intangibles such as gas emissions or vibration intrusions, has been predicated on the deposit of particulate matter on the plaintiff's property or an actual physical damage to it. All intangible intrusions alone, such as noise, odor, or light, are analyzed as a nuisance, not a trespass. Actionable trespass will not be predicated on nondamaging noise, odor, or light intrusion (32 Cal. 3d 229, 232-233) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.85

§ 225.85 Opposing Contention That Trespass Occurred--Entry of Airspace Was Privileged

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ENTRY INTO THE AIRSPACE OVER THE LAND IN PLAINTIFF'S POSSESSION WAS PRIVILEGED AND THUS WAS NOT A TRESPASS.

A. Flight Is Lawful Unless Altitude Regulations Are Violated or Imminent Danger Is Posed to Persons or Objects on Land. Ownership of the airspace above the land, while vested in the owner of the land below, is subject to the statutory right of overflight. Aircraft flight over the land of another is lawful unless below federal altitude regulations, or unless it is so conducted as to be imminently dangerous to persons or property lawfully on the land (Drennen v. County of Ventura (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 84, 87, 112 Cal. Rptr. 907 ; see Pub. Util. Code § 21403).

[Optional] B. Flight Allowed in Zone of Approach to Public Airport Without Restriction or Hazard. The right of overflight embraces the right of flight within the zone of approach to any public airport without restriction or hazard (Drennen v. County of Ventura (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 84, 87, 112 Cal. Rptr. 907 ; see Pub. Util. Code § 21403(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that a trespass occurred. The ground of opposition set forth is that there was no trespass because the flight through the airspace over plaintiff's property was privileged. There are regulations which govern the flight of aircraft and grant a privilege to prescribed flights [see, e.g., Pub. Util. Code § 21403]. These points and authorities would be used when the alleged trespass involved an aircraft within the privilege, either in general flight or adjacent to an airport.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of privileged entry. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel might include facts which demonstrate that defendant's flight met altitude and other applicable regulations and did not pose any type of threat to persons or objects on the land.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 225.83.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to airplanes and airports, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice , Ch. 16, Airplanes and Airports (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to nuisance, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice , Ch. 391, Nuisance (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice , Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the existence of a nuisance, see Ch. 167, Nuisance .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Flight Is Lawful Unless Altitude Regulations Are Violated or Imminent Danger Is Posed to Persons or Objects on Land

In Drennen v. County of Ventura (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 84, 112 Cal. Rptr. 907 , plaintiffs brought an inverse condemnation action against defendants. Defendants raised the special defense that the former owners of the Santa Susana Airport had acquired a specified prescriptive aviation easement over plaintiffs' land next to the airport and within the normal landing corridor to the airport's sole runway. The length of the runway was less than the minimum length generally required. Plaintiffs owned the land as a speculative investment, and did not occupy or use the land. Judgment was for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. In deciding that an aviation easement was not acquired, the court discussed trespass of airspace. A prescriptive easement is acquired only by means of an actionable invasion of the rights of the other in his or her land for the requisite period under the requisite conditions. The ownership of the airspace above the lands is vested in the several owners of the lands below, but this ownership is subject to the statutory right of overflight. Citing Pub. Util. Code § 21403, the court said that flight in aircraft over the land of another is lawful unless at altitudes below those prescribed by federal authority, or unless so conducted as to be imminently dangerous to persons or property lawfully on the land. The right of overflight embraces the right of a flight within the zone of approach of any public airport without restriction or hazard. Because the flights made within the claimed prescriptive period were at least qualifiedly privileged, no easement was acquired. The court also noted that flight by aircraft in the airspace above the land of another is a trespass only if an entry into the immediate reaches of the airspace next to the land is involved and the entry interferes substantially with the owner's actual use and enjoyment of his or her land (38 Cal. App. 3d 84, 87-88) .

[b] Flight Allowed in Zone of Approach to Public Airport Without Restriction or Hazard

Drennen v. County of Ventura (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 84, 112 Cal. Rptr. 907 , is discussed in § 225.85[3][a].

134 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
A. Elements of Cause of Action
4. Entry

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.86-225.99

[Reserved]

§§ 225.86[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
1. Nominal Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.100

§ 225.100 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Nominal Damages Presumed for Every Trespass

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT COMMITTED A TRESPASS AGAINST PLAINTIFF'S REAL PROPERTY, AND THUS AN AWARD OF AT LEAST NOMINAL DAMAGES IS REQUIRED.

A. Nominal Damages Are Presumed for Every Trespass. For every trespass on real property the law presumes nominal damages, and judgment of at least nominal damages must be entered (Empire Co. v. Bonanza Co. (1885) 67 Cal. 406, 408-409, 7 P. 810 ; Daly v. Smith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 602, 33 Cal. Rptr. 920).

[Optional] B. Nominal Damages Will Not Affect Award of Punitive Damages. Trespass always gives rise to nominal damages, even when there was no proof of actual damages. If punitive damages are appropriate, the nominal or minimal amount of actual damages will not matter (Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18-19, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award of damages, even if actual damages are minimal or nonexistent.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel may allege facts indicating the occurrence of a trespass, which alone is sufficient for an award of at least nominal damages; no actual damages need to be described.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nominal Damages Are Presumed for Every Trespass

In Empire Co. v. Bonanza Co. (1885) 67 Cal. 406, 7 P. 810 , plaintiff brought an action in trespass for damages and an injunction when defendant, an adjoining mine owner, encroached into plaintiff's property while working beneath the ground. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. Defendant's contention was that if the expense of mining equaled or exceeded the value of the gold extracted, judgment should be for defendant. Disagreeing with this, the Court said that the question of trespass or no trespass is not to be determined on the basis of profit and loss. For every trespass on real property the law presumes nominal damages. The Court said that the expense would be deducted from the value of the gold removed, but noted that that rule could not be extended to justify defendant's acts (67 Cal. 406, 408-409) .

In Daly v. Smith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 33 Cal. Rptr. 920 , a suit was brought by plaintiffs to quiet title to mining claims in which title was claimed by reason of having relocated the identical mining claims owned by defendant. Defendant filed a cross complaint alleging trespass and conversion of minerals. The first trial resulted in a judgment for plaintiffs, which was reversed by the court of appeal, and retried on all of the issues. The second trial court found that a trespass had been committed, but refused to allow any damages because cross defendant acted in good faith, and had realized no profit on the removal of the ore. The second trial resulted in a judgment for defendant for title and ordered that both defendant and plaintiffs take nothing by the action. Plaintiffs appealed. Plaintiffs' appeal from the judgment awarding them no damages was later dismissed for failure to file an opening brief. Defendant appealed the decision disallowing any damages for trespass and conversion.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on the cross complaint and remanded the issue of the attorney's involvement (the attorney had been named in the original action). Citing from several treatises on mining law, the court thoroughly discussed damages. A mining trespass is innocent when a person by mistake, or without an intention to trespass because of an honest belief that an existing right is being exercised, enters on the property of another and takes ore, coal, oil, or other minerals therefrom. When the trespass is innocent, the measure of damages is the value of the mineral in place, or the value of the mineral extracted from the ore, less the cost of mining and milling. When there is a willful trespass, if the taking is also willful, reckless, or intentional, or without claim of right or title, the trespasser is liable for the enhanced value of the product when and where it is finally converted to the use of the trespasser, without any deduction for expenses incurred, or for any value added (220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 598-599) . Citing Empire Co. v. Bonanza Co. (1885) 67 Cal. 406, 7 P. 810 , the court said that there is no question that a judgment for at least nominal damages must be entered in favor of one against whom a trespass has been committed (220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 602) .

[b] Nominal Damages Will Not Affect Award of Punitive Damages

In Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , plaintiff brought a complaint against defendant alleging several causes of action based on promissory notes executed by defendant in favor of plaintiff and secured by defendant's business assets. The parties entered into a stipulation for permanent injunction which allowed plaintiff limited access to defendant's premises to sell the collateral and judgment was entered on the stipulation. Plaintiff entered defendant's premises, ejected the employees, and changed the locks on the doors. Defendant filed an answer alleging that the stipulation was obtained by fraud and duress and filed a cross complaint with five causes of action, among them trespass. Plaintiff's demurrer to the cross complaint was overruled as to trespass and three other causes of action. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment on the cross complaint was initially denied, but was granted on its motion for reconsideration. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed judgment as to some of the causes of action, trespass and forcible entry among them. The court discussed all the causes of action as well as jurisdictional and procedural issues. The court discussed the situations in which a person exceeds a consent to entry, and held that plaintiff's privilege to enter was not extended to exclusive possession (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17) . The court then went on to the damage issue, stating that the tort of trespass has always given rise to nominal damages even when there was no proof of actual damages. Whether a party is entitled to more than nominal damages, should trespass be established, is for the trier of fact to decide. If punitive damages are appropriate, the nominal or minimal amount of actual damages will not matter (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18-19) .

136 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
1. Nominal Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.101-225.119

[Reserved]

§§ 225.101[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
2. Exemplary Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.120

§ 225.120 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Exemplary Damages Available for Malicious Trespass

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTS IN TRESPASSING ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY WERE MADE WITH MALICIOUS INTENT AND THUS WARRANT THE AWARD OF EXEMPLARY DAMAGES.

A. Exemplary Damages May Be Awarded When Trespassing Party Is Guilty of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice. Exemplary or punitive damages may be awarded when the defendant has been proven guilty by clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice (Civ. Code § 3294(a); Haun v. Hyman (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 615, 620-621, 36 Cal. Rptr. 84 ; see Civ. Code § 3294(c) (definitions of malice, oppression, and fraud)).

[Optional] B. Award of Exemplary Damages Will Not Be Disturbed When Supported by Clear and Convincing Evidence. An exemplary damage award must be supported by clear and convincing evidence of the defendant's conduct from which a jury could infer the defendant's wrongful intent. The amount awarded will not be disturbed unless the sum appears to be excessive or to have resulted from passion or prejudice (Brenner v. Haley (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 183, 188-189, 8 Cal. Rptr. 224).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award of exemplary or punitive damages for trespass made with malicious intent.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exemplary damages for malicious trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating defendant's malice during a dispute over title to property by describing how defendant entered the disputed property and damaged it by building a road, tearing down trees, and emptying a gravel pit [see, e.g., Haun v. Hyman (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 615, 620-621, 36 Cal. Rptr. 84] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of exemplary damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.121 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

CAUTION:

After the cases that follow were decided, Civ. Code § 3294(a) was amended in 1987 to require clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice. Thus, these cases should be used with caution because it is not clear how the courts would have ruled under the new standard of proof.

[a] Exemplary Damages May Be Awarded When Trespassing Party Is Guilty of Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

In Haun v. Hyman (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 615, 36 Cal. Rptr. 84 , defendants brought a quiet title action against plaintiff, the issue being the amount of land deeded to defendants by the adminstratrix of the estate of plaintiff's father. The trial court found that the deed conveyed a smaller number of acres than defendants sought and entered judgment for plaintiff. That judgment was affirmed on appeal. Pending that appeal defendants built a road and removed a large amount of gravel from a gravel pit on the disputed acreage, cutting down trees and dumping large piles of dirt in the river, all without plaintiff's permission. Plaintiff then brought an action to quiet her title to the land and sued for trespass. Defendants cross complained for a judgment quieting their title to the larger parcel of land. The trial court found that defendants acted deliberately and with malice in committing the trespass, considering that defendants ought to have known that the prior judgment was substantially against their claim, and considering that they did not act on the advice of counsel in trespassing. The trial court concluded that it was bound to a certain extent by the earlier decision. It quieted plaintiff's title to the land in dispute and awarded compensatory and exemplary damages for trespass. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among the points raised by defendants in their appeal was the exemplary damage award; they claimed that the evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to support the finding of malice. After noting that the principal attraction and value of the land were the trees and the natural beauty of the area, the court disagreed. It defined malice as the motive and willingness to vex, harass, annoy, or injure. When a trespass is committed from wanton or malicious motives, or a reckless disregard of the rights of others, or under circumstances of great hardship or oppression, it is clear that exemplary damages may be awarded. Defendants acted with reckless or criminal indifference to plaintiff's right and claims (223 Cal. App. 2d 615, 620-621) .

In Roth v. Shell Oil Co. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 676, 8 Cal. Rptr. 514 , plaintiff operated a service station and restaurant on the same premises as her residence. As part of a contract with defendant, plaintiff sold defendant's oil products and defendant provided plaintiff with the company trademark advertisements. After seeing the station closed during normal business hours, defendant concluded that plaintiff's station was no longer open for business. Plaintiff's account was closed, the contract terminated, defendant's advertisements removed, without making any further inquiry or giving any written notice, and the advertising trademarks were removed or painted over on the pumps, building, and sign. Defendant then discovered there had been no termination of the contract by plaintiff and no actual cessation of the service. After defendant offered to restore the previous relation, plaintiff refused. Plaintiff brought an action in trespass against defendant. Plaintiff made no effort to reopen the station because she would have been required by the city building code to make improvements she could not afford and she feared defendant would terminate the contract at the time of the next renewal. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff for compensatory and punitive damages. The trial court granted defendant's motion for a new trial, unless plaintiff consented to a reduction of the punitive damages awarded. Plaintiff consented and a new trial was denied. Defendant appealed. Plaintiff filed a cross appeal from the judgment and from the conditional order.

The court of appeal held that by consenting to the reduced award, plaintiff waived any appeal rights, and affirmed the judgment. The principal question on appeal was the sufficiency of the evidence to support exemplary damages. There must be some evidence of oppression or malice to justify the award. A tort committed by mistake, in the assertion of a supposed right, or without any wrong intention, and without such recklessness as evinces malice or a conscious disregard of the rights of others, does not warrant exemplary damages. The question is whether or not a jury might rightfully draw an inference from the evidence that there was a conscious disregard for the rights of others which constituted an act of subjecting plaintiffs to cruel and unjust hardship. The court said that an award of exemplary damages cannot be based on mere speculation; it depends on a definite showing of a willingness to vex, harass, or injure consistent with a wrongful intent to injure. The wrongful personal intention to injure calls for the penalty of exemplary damages. The court said that under the facts of the case, the jury might well have inferred malice or oppression on the part of defendant, and had the right to award exemplary damages. The court also saw no merit to the argument that the exemplary damages award was not commensurate with the compensatory damages awarded (185 Cal. App. 2d 676, 681-683) .

[b] Award Will Not Be Disturbed When Supported by Sufficient Evidence

In Brenner v. Haley (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 183, 8 Cal. Rptr. 224 , plaintiff rented a fence and had been painting signs on it for advertising purposes for some time. Defendant secured the rights to a billboard in the same area, and contracted it out to an advertiser who claimed that plaintiff's fence was an interference; defendant experienced the loss of rental of the billboard. Defendant applied to the district attorney's office and the planning commission to take action against plaintiff on several occasions. The complaints were based on a zoning ordinance pertaining to advertisements. Plaintiff's nonconforming use was exempt from compliance by a special provision regarding preexisting uses. All of defendant's complaints were dismissed. Plaintiff's fence advertisements were painted out on several occasions. Plaintiff sued defendant for willful trespass and obliteration of advertising signs. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff and awarded compensatory and exemplary damages. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court resolved all of the issues raised on appeal in plaintiff's favor. In responding to defendant's contention that a plaintiff is not entitled to bring a trespass action because of alleged problems with a lease, the court responded that the issue of the lease is not important because plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action merely on his possession and the judgment based on trespass is proper (185 Cal. App. 2d 183, 187) . The court examined the exemplary damage award and the evidence on which it was based. That evidence was predicated on the conduct of defendant: the painting out of the signs and harassment by solicitation of actions (all of which were dismissed). The evidence clearly supported a finding of malice. The amounts awarded will not be disturbed unless the sum appears to be excessive or to have resulted from passion or prejudice (185 Cal. App. 2d 183, 188-189) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exemplary Damages May Be Awarded When Trespass Was Malicious

In Goshgarian v. George (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 1214 , plaintiffs and defendants were neighbors in a residential area. Defendants owned a long narrow lot along the northern boundaries of all the residential lots. Plaintiffs built a swimming pool and drained water from the pool through hoses running over defendants' lot. Plaintiffs continued the draining through hoses hidden in the undergrowth after defendants and a sheriff told them to stop. Plaintiffs also constructed a wall encroaching on defendants' lot despite several warnings and a survey indicating the encroachment, and placed sod on defendants' parcel to prevent erosion without permission. Plaintiffs brought an action for damages for denial of an easement, and defendants cross complained for damages in trespass. On remand, the trial court granted judgment for defendants. The court of appeal remanded with directions regarding the amount of exemplary damages. Plaintiffs argued that the award of exemplary damages was improper because their conduct was no different from the conduct of others in the area, including defendants, before they owned the parcel bordering the lots. Defendants argued that plaintiffs' conduct demonstrated malice in that plaintiffs continued the siphoning long after they were told to desist, attempted to conceal their actions, made an improvement encroaching on defendant's land after a warning was given, and refused to remove the encroachment. Plaintiffs repeatedly disparaged defendants' interests and destroyed a survey monument. The court found that plaintiffs' actions manifested an unmistakably conscious disregard for the property rights of defendants and plaintiffs could reasonably be said to have acted with malice (161 Cal. App. 3d 1214, 1224-1225) .

In McCormick v. Appleton (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 591 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for plaintiffs in a trespass action after defendant adjoining landowners had torn down a boundary fence. The court stated that there was sufficient evidence of malice and oppression to justify an award of exemplary damages. The evidence included defendants' destruction of the fence without any notice to plaintiffs, the status of plaintiffs' parcel as a residence while defendants' lot was unimproved and vacant, and one defendant's removal of the fence before a survey had been filed with the court despite the fact that this defendant, an attorney, had knowledge of a quiet-title action pending between the parties (225 Cal. App. 2d 591, 597-598) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
2. Exemplary Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.121

§ 225.121 Opposing Award of Damages for Trespass--Exemplary Damages Unavailable if Not Based on Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXEMPLARY DAMAGES SHOULD NOT BE AWARDED TO PLAINTIFF BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ALLEGED ACT OF TRESPASSING ONTO PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY WAS NOT DONE WITH OPPRESSION, FRAUD, OR MALICE.

Exemplary Damages Must Be Based on Oppression, Fraud, or Malice. Exemplary damages may not be based on mere speculation, but are recoverable only when the defendant has been proven guilty by clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice. A defendant's tortious acts based wholly on a reasonable, though mistaken, belief does not indicate a malicious intent (Civ. Code § 3294; Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 632, 647-651, 198 P.2d 1 , overruled on other grounds, Flores v. Arroyo (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 492, 496-497 ; Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 532, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's request for exemplary damages for trespass. The ground of opposition set forth is that defendant was not guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice in committing the alleged acts of trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the inappropriateness of exemplary damages. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that defendants reasonably believed they had a valid right to use the land, acted in accord with that use, and that their actions were in no way directed against or in disregard of the plaintiff's rights.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to a contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.120.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

CAUTION:

After the cases that follow were decided, Civ. Code § 3294(a) was amended in 1987 to require clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice. These cases should still be of use in opposing an award of exemplary damages, because the new standard of proof requires an even stronger showing than former Civ. Code § 3294.

[a] Exemplary Damages Must Be Based on Oppression, Fraud, or Malice

The facts and procedural background of Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 632, 198 P.2d 1 , overruled on other grounds, Flores v. Arroyo (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 492, 496-497 , are discussed in § 225.61[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed an exemplary damage award. In so doing, the Court discussed the requirements of exemplary damages. An award of exemplary damages may not be based on mere speculation, but depends on a definite showing of a willingness to vex, harass, annoy, or injure consistent with the wrongful personal intention to injure. The record indisputably showed that defendants' tortious acts on the premises stemmed not from any malice, but wholly from a mistaken claim of right under the belief that the oral lease was valid and enforceable. The wrongful personal intention to injure that calls forth the penalty of punitive damages was not established and the court erred in submitting the matter of that award to the jury. Defendants' actions indicated their intent to farm the land pursuant to their claim of possession based on the alleged oral agreement, regardless of the identity of any other person claiming as lessee. They ceased operations after receiving notice of problems and did not resume until after consultation with an attorney and in reliance on his advice. Their actions were in no way based on the identity of the lessees and did not change once the identity of the lessees was made known (32 Cal. 2d 632, 647-651) .

The facts and procedural background of Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][c]. The court of appeal reversed judgment for defendants, but found no error in the trial court's refusal to give jury instructions on exemplary damages. Exemplary damages are recoverable only when defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. The question of exemplary damages is generally for the trier of fact. Exemplary damages may be awarded when a trespass is done with an intent which is malicious. The court found none of the prerequisites that would support an allowance of exemplary damages, nor any evidence from which they might reasonably be inferred (188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 532) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
2. Exemplary Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.122-225.139

[Reserved]

§§ 225.122[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.140

§ 225.140 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Diminution in Value or Cost of Restoration [Civ. Code § 3333]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum or points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS RESULTED IN DAMAGE TO PLAINTIFF'S [REAL] PROPERTY, AND THUS PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO AN AWARD OF DAMAGES ACCORDING TO THE _____ [DIMINUTION IN VALUE OF THE PROPERTY and/or COST OF RESTORATION OF THE PROPERTY (BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS PERSONAL REASONS FOR MAINTAINING THE PROPERTY IN ITS FORMER CONDITION)] [OR ACCORDING TO WHATEVER FORMULA IS MOST APPROPRIATE TO COMPENSATE PLAINTIFF FOR THE LOSS SUSTAINED].

A. Measure of Damages as Flexible in Order to Provide Fair Compensation to Injured Party. While diminution in market value and cost of restoration are common measures of damages, there is no fixed, inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property; whatever formula is most appropriate to compensate the injured party for all the detriment proximately caused will be adopted (see Civ. Code § 3333; Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 576, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 ; Basin Oil Co. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 606, 271 P.2d 122).

[EITHER]

B. Diminution in Value as Measure of Damages for Injury to Real Property. The proper and usual measure of damages for injuries to real property is the diminution in its market value, or the difference between the fair market value immediately before and immediately after the injury (LeBrun v. Richards (1930) 210 Cal. 308, 319, 291 P. 825 ; Hancock v. George R. Curtis Paving Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App 624, 628, 300 P. 65).

[AND/OR]

C. Cost of Restoration as Measure of Damages. An alternative measure of damages to the diminution in market value is the reasonable cost of repair or restoration of the property to its original condition, together with the value of the lost use during the period of injury (Raven's Cove Townhomes, Inc. v. Knuppe Dev. Co. (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 783, 801-802, 171 Cal. Rptr. 334 ; Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 862, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104).

[Optional] D. Measure of Damages as Lesser of Diminution in Value or Cost of Restoration. If the cost of restoration is less than the diminution in the value of the property, that cost is the proper measure of damages; if the cost of restoration will exceed the diminution if value, then the value of the property is the proper measure of damages (Green v. General Petroleum Corp. (1928) 205 Cal. 328, 336, 270 P. 952 ; Charles v. Reuck (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 145, 147, 3 Cal. Rptr. 490).

[Optional] E. Reasonable Costs of Restoration in Excess of Diminution in Value May Be Awarded if Landowner Has Personal Reasons for Restoration. Reasonable restoration costs may be awarded even though they exceed the diminution in market value if there is a reason personal to the owner for restoring the original condition or there is reason to believe that the plaintiff will, in fact, make the repairs (Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 450-451, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32 ; Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 865, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104).

[Optional] F. Costs of Restoration as Available Even if Land Value Not Diminished. Even if the value of the land was not diminished by the trespass, damages are allowable; an owner of land will not be compelled to accept a change in the physical condition of the property by the wrongful act of another. The reasonable cost of restoration may be recovered, without regard to the fact that the plaintiff has not yet restored the property (Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 572-573, 298 P. 1030).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages from trespass. There is no absolute rule for the measure of damages in trespass to real property, and the form provides the general measures, such as the diminution in value (alternative Paragraph B) and the cost of restoration (alternative Paragraph C). Rules specific to the measure of diminution in value or restoration costs are also included and may be used in determining which measure to use when one measure exceeds the other (optional Paragraphs D and E), and when the value of the land was not diminished by the trespass (optional Paragraph F).

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating defendant's trespass (the dumping of dirt on plaintiff's property). Counsel should then describe the resultant damages, calculated as the cost of restoration and repair to structures on the property.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Measure of Damages as Flexible in Order to Provide Fair Compensation to Injured Party

In Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 , plaintiffs were the owners of a motel and trailer park which suffered damage from flooding caused by defendant city's project. After the construction of the project plaintiffs' property was left in a hole into which surface waters naturally drained; formerly surface waters had flowed through or around the premises. Plaintiffs brought suit against defendants premised on many legal theories. The trial court awarded damages to plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the finding of defendant's liability, and reversed and remanded the damage portion of the judgment. On appeal defendant challenged the damage instruction to the jury which stated that when property has been damaged by the wrongful action of another, the owner is entitled to recover the reasonable costs of necessary repairs and damages for the loss of rental during that time, and the difference between the market value of the property immediately before and after the damage, after making any necessary repairs. Finding problems with this instruction, the court stated the primary object of an award of damages in a civil action is just compensation or indemnity for the loss or injury sustained by plaintiff, and no more. There is no fixed, inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property, and whatever formula is most appropriate in the particular case will be adopted (e.g., the difference in the value of real property immediately before and after the injury; cost of making repairs; loss of use of the property; loss of profits and prospective profits; increased operating expenses pending repairs; present and prospective damages that are the natural, necessary, or reasonable incident of the taking of property; cost of minimizing future damages). Nevertheless, the general rule is that if the cost of repairing the injury and restoring the premises to their original condition amounts to less than the diminution in value of the property, that cost is the proper measure of damages; and if the cost of restoration will exceed the diminution in value, then the diminution in value of the property is the proper measure (67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 576) . In making its award the jury might well have considered both the cost of repairs and the diminution value of the property. The computation of damages in this fashion was clearly improper, for it allowed recovery cumulatively for both the cost of repairs and the diminution in value of the property i violation of the general rules (67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 577) .

In Basin Oil Co. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 271 P.2d 122 , plaintiff purchased and rented oil well equipment from defendant. Three suspension plugs supplied by defendant failed, causing damage. Plaintiff brought an action for damages, alleging breach of an express and implied warranty and negligence in the design and manufacture of the plugs. After another plug failed, plaintiff brought a second action alleging the same causes. The cases were consolidated and the trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in the first case, and reversed the other with directions to retry only the issue of damages. After a full discussion of the other issues raised, the court addressed the damage issue. Citing Civ. Code § 3333, the court observed that the measure of damages recoverable as the result of the tortious conduct of another is that amount which will compensate the injured party for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not. The compensation received shall be commensurate with the injury, and no more (125 Cal.

App. 2d 578, 605) . There is no fixed, inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property; whatever formula is most appropriate to compensate the injured party for the loss sustained will be adopted. If the cost of repairing the injury and restoring the premises to their original condition amounts to less than the value of the property prior to the injury, that cost is the proper measure of damages; and if the cost of restoration will exceed that value then the value of the property is the proper measure (125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 606) . Plaintiff's proof showed that the injury to the well was not reparable, that the cost of restoration of its flow would exceed the value of the remaining production, and that plaintiff was compelled to abandon the oil formation. Under those circumstances, plaintiff was entitled to recover an amount equal to the value of its well as it existed prior to the cessation of production, plus any reasonable expense incurred in its effort to restore the well to production up to the time of plaintiff's determination that further efforts at restoration were impractical, less the value of any salvage realized. A measure of damages based on these factors, which would have fully compensated plaintiff for the loss, as well as for other items of expense, was within the scope of the issues. The trial court did not apply this measure of damages. It made no finding of the value of the well prior to the time production ceased, nor of the reasonable cost of remedial operations before it was decided that restoration would be futile. The sum awarded was made without a determination that the amount did not exceed the value of the original well immediately prior to the cessation of production, plus the legitimate costs of operations to save the well (125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 607-608) .

[b] Diminution in Value as Measure of Damages for Injury to Real Property

In LeBrun v. Richards (1930) 210 Cal. 308, 291 P. 825 , plaintiffs and defendant were adjoining landowners. Defendant constructed a ditch, embankment, and fence for irrigation purposes. After the city had improved the adjacent road, defendant's ditch was inadequate to carry off storm water and his embankment obstructed its further progress and caused it to back up and overflow plaintiff's property, causing considerable damage. Plaintiffs brought an action for damages. The trial court judgment was for plaintiffs. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal and adopted its decision affirming the holding of the trial court. The Court discussed the law of water and its containment, finding that defendant interfered with the natural flow of water by his obstruction. The Court disagreed with defendant's allegation that the damage award was excessive. Noting that the parties tried the case on the theory that the proper measure of damages was the cost of repairs, the Court said that the proper measure of damages for injuries to real property is the difference, if any, in its market value before and immediately after the injury (210 Cal. 308, 319) . When the amount of compensation in dollars and cents is not susceptible of proof, it must be left to the sound discretion of the trial court, to be ascertained and adjudged after consideration of all the facts and circumstances established by the evidence (210 Cal. 308, 320) .

In Hancock v. George R. Curtis Paving Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App 624, 300 P. 65 , plaintiffs, owners of a large lot, had posted a sign in one corner reading "dirt wanted--dump on fill." The lot was substantially level. Defendant construction company, in performing work on the adjacent street, dumped several thousand cubic yards of dirt, rocks, and debris on the lot near the house, damaging it and its foundation, destroying smaller buildings on the lot, and removing a tree in the process. The house and the debris deposited were some distance from the sign; the depression adjacent to the sign had been filled prior to defendant's acts. On the basis of this trespass, plaintiffs brought suit for damages. The trial court judgment was in favor of plaintiffs and awarded damages. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court disagreed with defendant's contention that it had merely complied with plaintiffs' invitation to deposit dirt. Citing Civ. Code § 3333, the court said that the measure of damages for the unlawful injury or destruction of buildings would ordinarily be the amount which will compensate for the detriment proximately caused. If the injury is to the freehold, the measure of damages is ordinarily the difference between the fair value of the property immediately before and immediately after the injury. This is particularly true when the detriment is permanent, or when the damages cannot be well expressed in specific items of injury (114 Cal. App 624, 628) .

[c] Cost of Restoration as Measure of Damages

In Raven's Cove Townhomes, Inc. v. Knuppe Dev. Co. (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 783, 171 Cal. Rptr. 334 , plaintiff, a homeowner's association, brought suit against defendant development company for strict liability and breach of warranty, and against defendant and various other persons for breach of fiduciary duty. The action was based on serious defects in the landscaping due to poor drainage and irrigation systems and unpainted exterior siding and trim on individual units. The trial court granted a nonsuit from which plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court considered many questions on appeal, including the appropriate measure of damages. The court reviewed the law of damages for injuries to real property. Civ. Code § 3333 sets forth the measure of damages for tort, the purpose of which is to make plaintiff whole. The normal measure of damages for injuries to real property is the difference between the market value of the land before and after the injury, although another permissible measure is the reasonable cost of repair or restoration of the property to its original condition, together with the value of the lost use during the period of injury. After noting that this is the correct and practical approach under the circumstances, the court held that the proper measure of damages is the cost of remedying the defects in the landscaping and repairing of the homeowners' individual properties, together with the value of the lost use (if any) during the period of injury (114 Cal. App. 3d 783, 801-802) .

In Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104 , plaintiffs sued defendants, adjoining landowners in a mountainous area, for an injunction and damages for trespass after defendants bulldozed a road on plaintiffs' property. Defendants acted despite plaintiffs' objections, relying on the erroneous advice of an attorney who told them they held a valid easement. The bulldozing killed many trees and undergrowth, but the road provided additional access to plaintiffs' property, thereby increasing its market value. Plaintiffs liked the land in its natural state, intended to keep it that way, and had personal reasons for restoring the land to its original condition. The trial court granted injunctive relief but denied any award of damages because there was no depreciation in the value of plaintiffs' property. Plaintiffs appealed the denial of damages.

The court of appeal reversed. The court discussed theories of damages at length, including a discussion of Civ. Code § 3346 and Code Civ. Proc. § 733 (injury to trees or shrubbery), but its primary focus was on restoration costs. Civ. Code § 3333 provides that the measure of damages for tortious injury to property is the amount which will compensate for all the deteriment proximately caused thereby, generally determined as the difference between the value of the property before and after the injury (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 861) . Diminution in market value is not an absolute limitation; several other theories are available to fix appropriate compensation for a plaintiffs' loss. There is no fixed inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property; whatever formula is most appropriate to compensate the injured party for the loss sustained will be adopted. One alternative measure of damages is the cost of restoring the property to its condition prior to the injury. The court noted costs of restoration are normally not awarded if they exceed the diminution in property value (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 862) . The court went on to review the personal-reason exception for determining which measure to apply [see § 225.140[3][e]].

[d] Measure of Damages as Lesser of Diminution in Value or Cost of Restoration

In Green v. General Petroleum Corp. (1928) 205 Cal. 328, 270 P. 952 , defendant's oil drilling operations resulted in the blowing out of an oil well and the deposit of oil, sand, mud, and rocks on plaintiffs' nearby residential property. Plaintiffs brought an action based on trespass and negligence to recover damages for injuries to their property. The trial court found that defendant was not negligent in its drilling operations, but held defendant liable in damages for the trespass, and rendered judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The fact that the act resulting in the blowout was lawful and not negligently done does not make the covering of plaintiffs' property with foreign matter any less an actual invasion of and a trespass on the premises (205 Cal. 328, 334) . When an injury arises out of, or is caused directly and proximately by the contemplated act or thing in question, without the interposition of any external or independent agency which was not or could not be foreseen, there is an absolute liability for the consequential damage, regardless of any element of negligence either in the act or in the construction, use, or maintenance of the object or instrumentality that may have caused the injury (205 Cal. 328, 334) . Defendants contended that the trial court did not apply the proper measure in awarding damages to the property. The court found, in specific items, what it would cost to restore the premises to their original condition, and allowed the aggregate amount as damages. Defendant contended that the discovery of oil in its well gave a new value to the property of plaintiffs, greatly in excess of its previous value as residential property and that the restoration of the property to its original condition would add nothing to its value for its new use, and that plaintiffs suffered no loss by reason of the injury to the realty. Rejecting this argument, the Court said that the rule to be applied is: if the cost of repairing the injury by removing the debris deposited by the defendant, and otherwise restoring the premises to their original condition, amounts to less than the value of the property prior to the injury, such cost is the proper measure of damages; and if the cost of restoration will exceed such value, then the value of the property is the proper measure (205 Cal. 328, 336) .

In Charles v. Reuck (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 145, 3 Cal. Rptr. 490 , plaintiffs, property owners, brought an action against several defendants for property damages caused by a traffic accident resulting in a logging truck entering plaintiffs' land and damaging their barn. The trial court judgment was for plaintiffs and awarded them damages. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among the issues raised by defendants was the proper measure of damages. The rule is that the amount of damages to be allowed for injury to realty is the value of the property prior to the injury unless the cost of restoration is less than that value, in which case the cost of repair is the proper measure of damages (179 Cal. App. 2d 145, 147) .

[e] Reasonable Costs of Restoration in Excess of Diminution in Value May Be Awarded if Landowner Has Personal Reasons for Restoration

In Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32 , plaintiff owned a 34-acre ranch that was damaged when a brush fire that was negligently sparked by defendant spread to over 20,000 acres. The fire destroyed several structures on plaintiff's ranch, as well as a number of trees. Subsequent mudslides causing further property damage resulted from the destruction of vegetation by the fire. Plaintiff sued defendant and was awarded almost $3 million in compensatory damages to restore the property to a habitable state, even though the market value of the property before the damage occurred was estimated to be no more than $1.8 million. Defendant appealed.

The Court of Appeal held that there was substantial evidence to support the jury's award of restoration damages. Defendant argued that the damages were excessive because, when expressed as a percentage of the property's value, they far exceeded any other award of such damages approved by a California court in the past. The court rejected this argument, noting instead that the reasonableness of the restoration costs must be decided on a case-by-case basis and cannot be determined through a mechanical comparison of damage awards in other cases (179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 453) . In upholding plaintiff's restoration costs of almost $3 million, the court concluded that the evidence supported the finding that this was the amount that would be required to allow plaintiff to make the property safe and habitable by his family and restore it for use as a horse ranch. As the property was unmarketable in its current condition due to damage caused by the defendant, the court noted that a person in plaintiff's position was justified in incurring substantial restoration costs notwithstanding that these costs exceeded the market value of the property (179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 454) .

The facts and procedural background of Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 162 Cal. Rptr. 104 , are discussed in § 225.140[3][c]. The court of appeal discussed the available measures of damages, and applied an exception to the general rule. Although courts will normally not award costs of restoration if they exceed the diminution in the value of the property, a personal-reason exception applies to this rule. Restoration costs may be awarded even though they exceed the decrease in market value if there is a reason personal to the owner for restoring the original condition or where there is reason to believe that the plaintiff will, in fact, make the repairs (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863) . The personal-reason exception has been applied in the destruction of shade or ornamental trees that were of personal value to the owner. If restoration of the land to a reasonable approximation of its former condition is impossible or impracticable, the landowner may recover the value of the trees or shrubbery, either as timber or for their aesthetic qualities, without regard to the diminution in the value of the land. Guiding principles for the courts are flexibility of approach and full compensation to the owner, within the overall limitation of reasonableness (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864-865) . Only reasonable replacement costs may be recovered; replacement costs may be unreasonable or excessive in relation to the damage inflicted on the land or its value prior to the trespass. In those cases, the achievement of a reasonable approximation of the land's former condition may involve something less than substantially identical restoration (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 865) . If the trial court determined that appellants had personal reasons for restoring their land to its original condition, and that restoration could be achieved at a cost that was not unreasonable in relation to the damage inflicted and the value of the land prior to the trespass, it should have exercised its discretion to award those restoration costs (101 Cal. App. 3d 858, 866) .

[f] Costs of Restoration as Available Even if Land Value Not Diminished

The facts and procedural background of Dandoy v. Oswald Bros. Paving Co. (1931) 113 Cal. App 570, 298 P. 1030 , are discussed in § 225.80[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment for defendants. Noting that there was evidence that the value of the land was not diminished by the deposit of earth and soil on the land, the court discussed the proper measure of damages. The materials deposited by defendant on plaintiff's land could be removed at a cost less than the value of the land. To hold that plaintiff is without remedy merely because the value of the land was not diminished would be to decide that by the wrongful act of another, an owner of land may be compelled to accept a change in the physical condition of his or her property, or else perform the work of restoration at his or her own expense. The reasonable cost of restoration may be recovered, without regard to the fact that plaintiff had not yet removed the material from the land (113 Cal. App 570, 572-573) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.141

§ 225.141 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages Available for Annoyance and Discomfort

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum or points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE AWARDED DAMAGES FOR DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT CAUSED ANNOYANCE AND DISCOMFORT TO PLAINTIFF WHICH WERE THE NATURAL AND PROXIMATE RESULT OF THE TRESPASS.

A. Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort Are Recoverable if Natural and Proximate Result of Trespass. When a trespass has been established, the occupant of the land may recover damages for annoyance and discomfort that would naturally ensue. Discomfort and annoyance may be suffered when there is no physical injury (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 272, 288 P.2d 507 ; Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 219, 225, 259 P.2d 429).

B. Damages for Emotional Distress Flowing Directly From Trespass Are Recoverable. Trespassers are liable for all direct consequences of the trespass, including emotional distress (Miller v. National Broad. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1481, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award of damages for discomfort and annoyance resulting to plaintiff from defendant's trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts describing defendant's actions in changing the grade of a road over which plaintiff has an easement, making the slope so steep as to be dangerous, thus threatening the safety of those using the road, and causing annoyance and discomfort to plaintiff.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to mental distress, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort Are Recoverable if Natural and Proximate Result of Trespass

The facts and procedural background of Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , are discussed in § 225.81[3][a]. The Supreme Court affirmed a trespass damage award. In their trespass action plaintiffs alleged that their comfort and enjoyment of their home were diminished and that they were unable to live normally and peacefully and follow ordinary pursuits. They also alleged that they had suffered severe nervous distress and mental anguish (45 Cal. 2d 265, 271-272) . The Court said that the discomfort and annoyance suffered by plaintiffs was an injury directly and proximately caused by defendant's invasion of their property and that those damages would naturally result from that invasion. Discomfort and annoyance may be suffered when there is no physical injury. The Court reaffirmed that once a cause of action for trespass is established, an occupant of land may recover damages for annoyance and discomfort that would naturally ensue therefrom. The suffering caused by fear for the safety of family and visitors was a natural consequence of defendant's conduct and an invasion of a protected interest of an occupant of real property (45 Cal. 2d 265, 272) . While defendant's trespass was not of the type to cause fright or shock or even physical illness, it was obviously of the type to cause plaintiffs much annoyance and discomfort. The annoyance and discomfort suffered by plaintiffs as a result of the injury to the real property was a natural consequence of the trespass (45 Cal. 2d 265, 273) . The Court held that when a person is entitled to a judgment for harm to land resulting from a past invasion not amounting to a total destruction in value, compensation for discomfort and annoyance to the occupants of the land are distinct grounds of compensation for which the possessor is allowed recovery in addition to the harm to his or her proprietary interests (45 Cal. 2d 265, 273-274) .

In Herzog v. Grosso (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 219, 259 P.2d 429 , plaintiffs had an easement over defendant's property for road purposes. A series of confrontations developed between the parties, culminating in defendant's regrading the road, resulting in a passage which was narrow, steep, and dangerous. Plaintiffs brought an action to quiet title to the easement and for related relief, and obtained a temporary restraining order forbidding defendant from interfering with plaintiffs' use of the road. At trial plaintiffs presented evidence that the steep grade and incline created a condition of extreme fire hazard and safety hazard to all users and had depreciated the fair market value of plaintiffs' property. The trial court found that as a direct, natural, and proximate result of defendant's acts, plaintiffs suffered nervousness, worry, and mental distress for their safety and the safety of others obliged to use the road because of the dangerous conditions. The trial court entered judgment in favor of plaintiffs, awarding damages, and declaratory and injunctive relief. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal modified the judgment by deleting the requirement that defendants construct a road, but otherwise affirmed the judgment. In affirming the damage award for mental distress, the court reviewed the trial court's finding that plaintiffs' mental distress was a natural and proximate result of defendant's acts. Once a cause of action for trespass is established, an occupant of land may recover damages for annoyance and discomfort that would naturally ensue (41 Cal. 2d 219, 225) . The suffering caused by fear for safety was a natural consequence of defendant's conduct and an invasion of a protected interest of an occupant of real property (41 Cal. 2d 219, 226) . Defendant also contested the damage award based on the permanent depreciation in the value of plaintiffs' property, claiming that the amount was excessive. Defendant asserted that removal of the dirt would restore the parcel to its original condition, and that when the cost of restoration is less than the depreciation in value, the cost of restoration is the measure of damages. The court found fault with this contention, saying that plaintiffs established their damages by showing the depreciation in value. It was then incumbent on defendants to come forward with proof that the cost of restoration would be less. They failed to do so, and there is no evidence in the record showing the cost of restoring the parcel to its original condition (41 Cal. 2d 219, 226-227) .

[b] Damages for Emotional Distress Flowing Directly From Trespass Are Recoverable

The facts and procedural background of Miller v. National Broad. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][b]. The plaintiff sought to recover for emotional distress resulting from the trespass of a television film crew, who entered plaintiff's home without her consent and filmed unsuccessful attempts by emergency paramedics to save the life of plaintiff's husband, a heart attack victim. Plaintiff suffered the emotional distress when she later inadvertently viewed defendant's broadcast of a documentary that portrayed her husband's dying moments. The trial court, concluding that plaintiff suffered no actual damages, entered summary judgment for the defendants.

The court of appeal reversed. Noting the general rule that trespassers are liable for all direct consequences of the trespass including emotional distress, the court held that the consequences of defendants' actions included the plaintiff's emotional distress, which she suffered when she viewed her husband's dying moments (187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1481) . Although the court stated that emotional distress must be accompanied by physical injury to the person or the land, the court upheld plaintiff's action even though there was clearly no injury to the land and the only alleged physical injury to plaintiff was that she suffered "apprehension" and "nervousness" 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1471 n.2, 1481) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort Are Recoverable if Natural and Proximate Result of Trespass

In Alonso v. Hills (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 214 P.2d 50 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for plaintiff in an action for property damages and severe mental distress caused by defendant quarry's blasting operations near plaintiff's residence. The court held that an occupant is entitled to damages for discomfort and annoyance resulting from an invasion of real property rights. Discomfort and annoyance to an occupant of land and to members of the household are distinct grounds of compensation for which the possessor is allowed to recover in addition to any harm to proprietary interests. Among the bodily and mental harms which are compensable are the possessor's continual fear of damage in case of repetition of the offending acts (95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 787-789) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.142

§ 225.142 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages Allowable to Businesses Injured by Trespass

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF'S BUSINESS WAS INTERRUPTED AS A RESULT OF DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS, RESULTING IN DAMAGES MEASURED BY _____ [THE PROFITS LOST DURING THE TIME THE PROPERTY IS BEING RESTORED or THE LOSS OF USE OF THE PROPERTY DURING THE TIME THE PROPERTY IS BEING RESTORED].

[EITHER, if profits can be proved]

A. Loss of Prospective Profits as Measure of Damages on Sufficient Proof. If there is a satisfactory basis for estimating what the probable earnings would have been had there been no trespass, damages for loss of prospective profits are available. Operating experience sufficient to permit a reasonable estimate of probable income and expense may provide a satisfactory basis for the profits lost during the time the property cannot be used while it is being restored to its condition prior to the trespass (Natural Soda Prod. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 193, 199-201, 143 P.2d 12 ; Razzano v. Kent (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 254, 261, 177 P.2d 612).

[OR, if profits cannot be proved]

A. Difference in Usable Value of Premises as Measure of Damages When Loss of Profits Cannot Be Sufficiently Proved. When the property damage is temporary in character, and the proof is not sufficient to award loss of profits as damages, the general rule is that the measure of damages for the loss of use during restoration is the difference in the rental or usable value of the premises before and after the injury (Guttinger v. Calaveras Cement Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387-389, 233 P.2d 914).

[CONTINUE]

B. One Measure of Damages Applied for Business Injuries. The plaintiff may recover damages either for its loss of profits or for the diminution of property or leasehold value, according to the circumstances of the case (Lucky Auto Supply v. Turner (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 884-885, 53 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages to plaintiff's business proximately caused by defendant's trespass. If there is sufficient proof to establish what the prospective profits would have been absent the trespass, counsel should use the first alternative of Paragraph A. But if insufficient proof of prospective profits exists, counsel should use the second alternative of Paragraph A.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the damages resulting from trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may include facts illustrating that plaintiff's flower shop earned $2,000 profit per month, and that plaintiff lost two months of business resulting from defendant's trespass and insecticide spraying.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loss of Prospective Profits as Measure of Damages on Sufficient Proof

In Natural Soda Prod. Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 193, 143 P.2d 12 , defendant's aqueduct project diverted virtually all the flow from a lake into which it had previously emptied, resulting in the lake drying up and its subsurface becoming a crystalline cake impregnated with brines containing valuable chemicals. Plaintiff owned and operated plants on the shore of the lake bed to which brines pumped from wells on the bed were piped for the production of soda products. Defendant later caused a large amount of water to flow into the lake. The water inundated much of plaintiff's plants, causing substantial physical damage and reducing the value of the subsurface brines. Plaintiff's properties were wholly inaccessible for some time and plaintiff was unable to operate its plants. Plaintiff brought suits for an injunction and damages. After consolidating the cases, the trial court denied injunctive relief and awarded plaintiff damages. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. In addition to addressing the theory of liability and the requirements of a claim against a government entity, the Court discussed the measurement of damages. Defendant found fault with the damage award for loss of profits. Affirming the trial court's award, the Court said that the award of damages for loss of profits depends on whether there is a satisfactory basis for estimating what the probable earnings would have been had there been no tort. If no such basis exists, it may be necessary to deny that form of recovery. If there has been operating experience sufficient to permit a reasonable estimate of probable income and expense, damages for loss of prospective profits are awarded. Plaintiff was able to provide sufficient evidence to support an estimate of profits. Since defendant made it impossible for plaintiff to realize any profits, it cannot complain if the probable profits are of necessity estimated (23 Cal. 2d 193, 199-200) . Defendant also argued that plaintiff's damages should be determined on the basis of evidence concerning the value of plaintiff's properties before and after the tort. The Court responded that while diminution of property value is the usual method for determining damages for trespass to real property, it yields to others if they are more appropriate to a particular situation. In the case of a reparable injury, a frequent measure of damages is the cost of making repairs plus the value of the use of the premises for the period during which the tort has deprived the owner of the property. The trial court awarded damages for the physical destruction resulting from the tort, and the value of the use of plaintiff's properties was properly estimated on the basis of the probable profits that would have derived from their operation. Plants like plaintiff's did not frequently change hands and in a sale the price would likely be based on considerations peculiar to the plant. Expert opinion as to the market value of such a plant is likely to be based on nothing more substantial than the probable returns from the operations of the plant. A more accurate assessment of damage can be obtained by estimating profits directly (23 Cal. 2d 193, 200-201) .

In Razzano v. Kent (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 254, 177 P.2d 612 , plaintiff was the lessee of real property on which he dredged gold for a profit. Defendant carried on dredging operations on the property adjacent to plaintiff's property. Defendant's operations caused a mass of muddy water to flow into the pond used by plaintiff, making it impossible for him to continue his dredging operations profitably. Additionally, defendant, without plaintiff's consent, constructed a dam on the lower end of plaintiff's leasehold, causing the muddy water to be impounded on and to cover a substantial part of plaintiff's leasehold, making it impossible for him to carry on his dredging operations on that portion of the property. Plaintiff brought an action for damages for the two acts of trespass. The trial court found in favor of plaintiff and awarded damages. Defendant appealed the judgment and the order denying the motion for a new trial.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and dismissed the appeal from the order denying defendant's motion for a new trial. In response to defendant's arguments concerning required proof, the continuing nature of the trespass, and applicable damages, the court said that the wrongful act was completed as of the date when plaintiff was forced to abandon his dredging operations and move his equipment, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover for the loss of all prospective net profits (78 Cal. App. 2d 254, 261) .

[b] Difference in Usable Value of Premises as Measure of Damages When Loss of Profits Cannot Be Sufficiently Proved

In Guttinger v. Calaveras Cement Co. (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 382, 233 P.2d 914 , defendant, operator of a cement plant, and plaintiffs, cattle raisers, were owners of property in the same vicinity. Plaintiffs used their land for grazing purposes. After defendant's plant expanded and increased its production, dust and gases escaping from the plant were carried over and deposited on portions of each plaintiff's land, causing damages. Plaintiffs brought an action to enjoin a nuisance and for damages. The trial court provided injunctive relief for all six plaintiffs and awarded damages to five of them. Four plaintiffs appealed. The trial court determined that the method of plant operation was a nuisance, rendered judgment for damages in specified sums to specified plaintiffs and granted injunctive relief. Some plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among plaintiffs' contentions on appeal was that the court committed prejudicial error in instructing the jury on the measure of damages. The trial court's instructions included two measures of damages: the reasonable value of plaintiffs' loss of income and the difference in the fair rental values, with and without the injury caused by defendant. The court noted that both methods of measuring damages are approved and both may be considered. There is no hard and fast rule for the measurement of damages. Civ. Code § 3333 describes the desired result, rather than a method of reaching that result, and generally it is proper for the court to give the jury a more workable method for measuring damages than the broad language of the code. There was no permanent injury to the real property. The general measure of damages in this situation is the difference in the rental or usable value of the premises before and after the injury (105 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387) . Plaintiffs claimed that when an established business has been injured or interfered with, any loss of profits thus caused may be recovered. The court stated that lost profits may be awarded if the plaintiffs have been engaged in an established business for a long time. Although plaintiffs had been in business for some time, they did not prove that any loss of gross income actually occurred. To allow loss of profits from injury to an established business there must not only have been operating experience sufficient to permit a reasonable estimate of probable income and expense, but also evidence which proves the probable income and expenses made in respect to the business as a whole. If the proof is insufficient to enable the jury to arrive at a conclusion based on loss of profits, then the general rule of damages applies, which is the difference in the rental or usable value of the land before and after injury (105 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388-389) .

[c] One Measure of Damages Applied for Business Injuries

In Lucky Auto Supply v. Turner (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 53 Cal. Rptr. 628 , plaintiff operated several automobile supply stores and was a lessee in one of the buildings in which defendants, trustees of various trusts, eventually became the owners. The lease with the previous owners included the use of a parking lot adjoining the building, an extremely important adjunct to the conduct of plaintiff's business. After plaintiff denied permission to construct a building on the parking lot, defendants did so anyway. Plaintiff and its customers were unable to use the parking lot. Plaintiff sought a mandatory injunction to compel defendants to remove the building, which was denied on the hearing of an order to show cause. Thereafter plaintiff filed a complaint for damages for trespass. In response to defendant's allegation that plaintiff had continued to earn profits from the store, plaintiff presented evidence that the profits were less than they would have otherwise been. The trial court awarded judgment for plaintiff, including damages for loss of profits and exemplary damages. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The conduct of defendants was a tortious act for which defendants became liable to plaintiff for damages proximately caused by that act (244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 881) . Damages for tort may include loss of anticipated profits when an established business has been injured. When the operation of an established business is prevented or interrupted by a tort, damages for loss of prospective profits that otherwise might have been made from its operation are ordinarily recoverable because their occurrence and extent may be ascertained with reasonable certainty from the working experience of the business, the past volume of business, and other probable data relevant to the probable future sales. The award for damages for loss of profits depends on whether there is a satisfactory basis for estimating what the probable earnings would have been had there been no tort. The general principle inherent in the recovery of damages for loss of prospective profits is that the evidence must be of reasonable reliability and make reasonably certain the occurrence, nature, and extent of the damages (244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 882-883) . Plaintiff could have also sought damages on the theory of depreciation in the value of its leasehold. However, under the circumstances, it could not recover damages for both its loss of profits and good will and depreciation in the value of its leasehold because this would amount to a double recovery (244 Cal. App. 2d 872, 884-885) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.143

§ 225.143 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Other Consequential Damages [Civ. Code § 3333]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20), as well as with specific points and authorities supporting the award of particular damages (see, e.g., §§ 225.140 -225.142).]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD RECOVER DAMAGES FOR ALL THE OTHER INJURIES ALLEGED BECAUSE THEY ARE ALL THE DIRECT AND PROXIMATE RESULT OF DEFANDANT'S TRESPASS.

A. Compensation Allowed for All Damages Proximately Caused by Trespass. The measure of damages recoverable as the result of the tortious conduct of another is that amount which will compensate the injured party for all the detriment proximately caused by such conduct, whether it could have been anticipated or not. The damages which accrue subsequent to the trespass, but of which the trespass is the primary cause, are not separate causes of action but are part of the same tort (Civ. Code § 3333; Hawthorne v. Siegel (1891) 88 Cal. 159, 163, 166, 25 P. 1114 ; Basin Oil Co. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 605, 271 P.2d 122).

B. Intent to Cause Damages Not Element of Trespass. Intent to cause damages is not an element of the tort of trespass; a trespasser is liable for any damage caused even though that damage was not intended or foreseen (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 326, 43 Cal. Rptr. 542).

[Optional] C. Recovery of Costs Incurred to Prevent Further Harm. When the plaintiff has already suffered injury by the tort of another, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the reasonable and necessary costs of preventing further harm (Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Granite Constr. Co. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 765, 769, 37 Cal. Rptr. 727).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages proximately caused by defendant's trespass. Although damages are not restricted to injury to property, the damages must be the consequence of the trespass and not speculative or remote [see Civ. Code § 3333; Hawthorne v. Siegel (1891) 88 Cal. 159, 163, 166, 25 P. 1114] . This form may be combined, when appropriate, with other points and authorities supporting the award of specific damages according to the facts involved [see, e.g., §§ 225.140 -225.142].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the damages resulting from trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts demonstrating what consequential damages were caused by defendant's trespass not otherwise supported by the specific points and authorities in §§ 225.140 -225.142.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compensation Allowed for All Damages Proximately Caused by Trespass

In Hawthorne v. Siegel (1891) 88 Cal. 159, 25 P. 1114 , plaintiffs, partners in the barber and bath business, were lessees in the basement of the same building in which defendant was a tenant. Claiming authority from the owner, defendant made alterations in the building, changed the structure so it was totally unfit for plaintiffs' business, and compelled plaintiffs to abandon the basement. Plaintiffs sued for damages from trespass, including damages for necessary moving expenses, improvements made to the basement by them, monthly business profits, money lost from a supply agreement, and damages incurred by reason of abandoning their leasehold. The trial court awarded damages for plaintiffs but at a reduced amount. Defendant appealed from that judgment and an order denying a new trial.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment and the order. Defendant argued that an erroneous measure of damages was used by the trial court. Citing Civ. Code § 3333, the Court said that as the trespass compelled plaintiffs' to abandon their place of business, they were entitled to recover whatever amount would compensate for all the detriment caused, whether it could have been anticipated or not (88 Cal. 159, 163) . Damages may not be awarded for injuries remote or speculative, but only for that detriment proximately caused by the wrongful acts of defendants (88 Cal. 159, 165) . The cause which set all the rest in motion was the trespass. The operation of the subsequent agencies of loss was the result of this wrongful injury. Damages which accrue subsequent to the tort, but of which it is the primary cause, are not separate causes of action, but are part of the tort itself (88 Cal. 159, 166) .

The facts and procedural background of Basin Oil Co. v. Baash-Ross Tool Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 271 P.2d 122 , are discussed in § 225.140[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that the measure of damages recoverable as the result of the tortious conduct of another is that amount which will compensate the injured party for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not. It is a fundamental principle of the law of damages that the compensation received shall be commensurate with the injury, and no more (125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 605) . There is no fixed, inflexible rule for determining the measure of damages for injury to, or destruction of, property; whatever formula is most appropriate to compensate the injured party for the loss sustained will be adopted (125 Cal. App. 2d 578, 606) .

[b] Intent to Cause Damages Not Element of Trespass

The facts and procedural background of Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 43 Cal. Rptr. 542 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][c]. The court of appeal distinguished intent of the act and intent of the consequential damages. The trial court found that the trespass was intentional and the liability of defendant was established even though the consequences of the trespass were unintentional and unforeseeable. Intent to cause damages is not an element of the tort of trespass, and the trespasser is liable for any damage caused even though that damage was not intended or foreseen (233 Cal. App. 2d 321, 326) .

[c] Recovery of Costs to Prevent Further Harm

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Granite Constr. Co. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 765, 37 Cal. Rptr. 727 , plaintiff installed an underground communications cable adjacent to a road pursuant to franchise rights it had been granted. The installation conformed to position and depth requirements necessary for anticipated road improvement and expansion. In its road construction activity defendants damaged plaintiff's cable on three different occasions, making repairs necessary. Plaintiff sued defendants for damages to its cable caused by negligence and trespass and for costs incurred in relocating the cable. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff and allowed recovery for the actual and reasonable costs of repairing and relocating its cable. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that defendants trespassed on plaintiff's franchise rights, and that they should be held solely responsible for the injuries to the cable proximately caused by defendants' negligent or intentional failure to use proper care in preventing or avoiding injury to the underground installation (225 Cal. App. 2d 765, 769) . Plaintiff was entitled to recover the reasonable and necessary cost of relocating the cable, as relocation was necessary to prevent further injuries to the cable. A person who has already suffered injury by the tort of another is entitled to recover for expenditures reasonably made or for harm suffered in a reasonable effort to avert further harm (225 Cal. App. 2d 765, 769) . When related to threatened property damage in connection with the operation of a business, it is sometimes known as business duress. The doctrine is invoked in situations when necessary steps are taken to protect property or business interests from threat of wrongful action by others and there are reasonable grounds for believing that such threats will be carried out (225 Cal. App. 2d 765, 769-770) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.144

§ 225.144 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Anticipation of Injury Not Required

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE AWARDED DAMAGES FOR DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO MAKE ANY LAWFUL USE OF HIS/HER/ITS PROPERTY AND IS UNDER NO DUTY TO ANTICIPATE ANY INJURY THAT COULD BE CAUSED BY A FUTURE TRESPASS.

Possessor or Landowner Not Required to Anticipate Injury. A possessor or landowner is entitled to make use of the property in any lawful manner, and is under no duty to anticipate that the land will be injured by another's negligence (see Western Salt Co. v. City of Newport Beach (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 401, 76 Cal. Rptr. 322).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages when a possessor or landowner has not taken precautions to prevent any potential trespasses. A possessor or landowner is not required to anticipate a trespass, nor is he or she guilty of comparative negligence in failing to do so, except possibly in cases involving recurring intentional trespasses [see Western Salt Co. v. City of Newport Beach (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 401, 76 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of trespass damages. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts illustrating plaintiff's lawful use of his or her land and defendant's construction of a road without proper drainage ditches next to plaintiff's land, which caused plaintiff's land to flood when it rained. Plaintiff would not be required to protect the land from possible flooding [see, e.g., Western Salt Co. v. City of Newport Beach (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 401, 76 Cal. Rptr. 322] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda opposing the reduction of the damages award due to failure to mitigate, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Possessor or Landowner Not Required to Anticipate Injury

In Western Salt Co. v. City of Newport Beach (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 76 Cal. Rptr. 322 , plaintiff operated a salt plant, producing salt from ocean water by solar evaporation. Defendant city obtained use of a portion of the land of which plaintiff was the lessee by an easement for road purposes. When the road was built no ditch was constructed to provide drainage for the surface water and to prevent flooding of plaintiff's adjacent salt vat. When it rained, over a foot of water ran into plaintiff's plant, causing substantial damage. Plaintiff filed an action against defendants alleging strict liability and negligence. Defendants denied liability and alleged contributory negligence and assumption of risk. The trial court entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. It is not contributory negligence for a landowner to continue to make use of property in any lawful manner even though the landowner may know or suspect that such use may be interfered with by water carelessly diverted to the property by a neighbor. The landowner is under no duty to anticipate that the land will be flooded by a neighbor's negligence; the possessor is not obliged to protect the land, and failure on plaintiff's part to do so does not constitute contributory negligence (271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 401) . Most of the litigation over nontrespassory invasions of interest in the use and enjoyment of land involves situations in which there are continuing or recurrent invasions resulting from continuing or recurrent conduct. In those cases the first invasion may be either intentional or unintentional, but when the conduct is continued after the actor knows that the invasion is resulting from it, further invasions are intentional. In cases involving the intentional invasion of another's interest in land, one fact to be considered is the harmed person's burden of avoiding the harm. This burden applies only to intentional invasions (271 Cal. App. 2d 397, 403) .

NOTE:
The Western Salt case was decided prior to Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , which established principles of comparative negligence.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.145

§ 225.145 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Continuing Trespass

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS ONTO PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY IS CONTINUING AND THUS PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO _____ [BRING SUCCESSIVE ACTIONS FOR ACCRUED DAMAGES AS THEY OCCUR and/or SEEK INJUNCTIVE RELIEF and/or WAIVE THE TRESPASS AND SEEK PERMANENT DAMAGES].

A. Continuing Trespass Affords Injunctive Relief or Successive Actions for Monetary Relief. The remedy for a continuing injury is either a suit for injunctive relief or successive actions for damages as new injuries occur (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 269-270, 288 P.2d 507 ; Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677-678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591).

[Optional] B. Accrued Damages Are Recoverable When Trespass Is Continuing. When the trespass is temporary in character, or is a continuing series of trespass acts, only those damages which have accrued up to the time of the commencement of the action may be recovered, since it is not to be presumed that the trespass will continue (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 268-269, 288 P.2d 507 ; Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677-678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591).

[Optional] C. Party May Bring Action for Prospective Damages and Waive Continuing Trespass. When a party elects to sue for past and prospective damages resulting from a trespass, that party is deemed to have waived the invasion and consented to the continued occupancy of the land (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 269, 288 P.2d 507 ; Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591).

[Optional] D. Damages Are Available Up to Time of Injunctive Relief. A party is entitled to damages up to the time of injunctive relief to avert further damage (see Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591).

[Optional] E. Plaintiff's Characterization of Trespass as Continuing Controls in Doubtful Cases. Because of the difficulties in characterizing an invasion as permanent or a series of continuing trespasses, and because the rules allowing different remedies are for the plaintiff's benefit, in doubtful cases the plaintiff should have an election to treat it as permanent or not (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 270-271, 288 P.2d 507 ; Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677-678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages when the trespass consists of a continuing series of incidents. Plaintiff will be allowed to bring successive actions as these incidents occur, recovering for damages incurred within the statutory period immediately prior to bringing the action. Plaintiff might also seek injunctive relief to prevent future occurrence of the trespass. If damages for future as well as past injuries are sought, plaintiff will have waived the trespass and consented to its continuing. If a trespass to land is of a permanent nature or indefinite duration, not of a continuing nature, all past and prospective damages are recoverable in one action [see Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 268-269, 288 P.2d 507 ; Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677-678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages from a continuing trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts illustrating defendant's seasonal operation of a factory which causes the entry of dust and lint on plaintiff's land during certain periods of operation each year.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, California Forms of Pleading and Practice, see Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Continuing Trespass Affords Injunctive Relief or Successive Actions for Monetary Relief

The facts and procedural background of Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , are discussed in § 225.81[3][a]. The Supreme Court likened trespass to nuisance and stated that the remedy for a continuing nuisance was either a suit for injunctive relief or successive actions for damages as new injuries occurred (45 Cal. 2d 265, 269-270) .

In Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , plaintiffs and defendants were adjoining landowners. Plaintiffs filed a complaint setting forth three causes of action against defendants. In the first cause of action plaintiffs alleged that defendants diverted a stream and storm drain from their property to plaintiffs' property by bulldozing a ditch on plaintiff's property, causing erosion with rainfall. Defendants pleaded the statute of limitations as a bar to the action. Defendants' motions for summary judgment on all causes were granted, and the trial court entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on two causes of action, including the first which alleged the property injury, and affirmed judgment on the other cause. The court analyzed the statute of limitations and stated that it runs from the date the cause of action accrues. If the trespass is permanent, there is one cause of action. If the trespass is continuing, successive trespasses give rise to separate causes of action. A permanent trespass is different from a continuing series of temporary or isolated incident trespasses. When a trespass is deemed permanent a plaintiff may recover future damages in one lawsuit on the premise that the condition will exist forever. Because the rule is for the benefit of the plaintiff, a plaintiff will not be compelled to treat a condition as permanent when plaintiff prefers not to so treat it. In some cases, a plaintiff is not permitted to consider the trespass continuing, but is required to consider the trespass permanent as of the date of completion of construction; courts have held a plaintiff's cause of action barred if not brought within three years of that date. When from the character of the trespass it is not to be presumed that the wrongful conduct will be continued, successive trespasses give rise to successive causes of actions, and an action may be brought at any time to recover the damages which have accrued within the statutory period, although the original trespass occurred before that period. Every repetition of a continuing injury is a separate wrong for which the person injured may bring successive actions for damages until the wrong is abated, even though an action based on the original wrong may be barred. In doubtful cases a plaintiff should have an election to treat it as permanent or not (8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677-678) . If a plaintiff recovers damages on the premise that the trespass is permanent, the plaintiff will be deemed to have waived the invasion and consented to the continued occupancy of the land. But if a plaintiff obtains an injunction that will avert further damage, the plaintiff is not entitled to damages beyond the date when the injunction is granted (8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678) .

[b] Accrued Damages Are Recoverable When Trespass Is Continuing

The facts and procedural background of Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , are discussed in § 225.81[3][a]. The Supreme Court noted and upheld the parties' treatment of the trespass as permanent because of its recurrent character, rather than as a continuous trespass. When a trespass to land is of a permanent nature, all damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, but when the trespass is temporary in character, only those damages may be recovered which have accrued up to the time of the commencement of the action, since it is not to be presumed that the trespass will continue (45 Cal. 2d 265, 268-269) .

Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , is discussed in § 225.145[3][a].

[c] Party May Bring Action for Prospective Damages and Waive Continuing Trespass

The facts and procedural background of Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , are discussed in § 225.81[3][a]. The Supreme Court ruled that even though the right to sue for ejectment and damages may be exercised in the same action, they are independent and inconsistent causes of action based on the same invasion of the same right. When a party elects to sue for damages past and prospective, that party is deemed to have waived the invasion and consented to the continued occupancy of the land (45 Cal. 2d 265, 269) .

Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , is discussed in § 225.145[3][a].

[d] Damages Are Available Up to Time of Injunctive Relief

Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , is discussed in § 225.145[3][a].

[e] Plaintiff's Characterization of Trespass as Continuing Controls in Doubtful Cases

The facts and procedural background of Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 265, 288 P.2d 507 , are discussed in § 225.81[3][a]. The Supreme Court recognized the problems arising in cases in which injunctive relief is not appropriate or successive actions are undesirable, and said that some types of injuries should be considered permanent, and recovery of past and anticipated future damages allowed in one action. The clearest case of a permanent trespass is one in which the offending structure is maintained as a necessary part of the operations of a public utility. Since such conditions are ordinarily of indefinite duration and the utility, by making compensation, is entitled to continue them, it is appropriate that only one action should be allowed to recover for all damages inflicted (45 Cal. 2d 265, 269-270) . A more difficult problem is presented if a defendant is not privileged to continue a trespass but abatement is impractical, or if a plaintiff is willing that it continue if he or she can secure full compensation for both past and anticipated future injuries. To attempt categorically to classify a trespass as either permanent or not may lead to serious injustice to one or other of the parties. Because of the difficulties in doubtful cases plaintiff should have an election to treat it as permanent or not (45 Cal. 2d 265, 270-271) .

Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , is discussed in § 225.145[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.146

§ 225.146 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass--Damages for Trespass as Available Although Activities Within Protected Commercial Zone Not Enjoinable [Code Civ. Proc. § 731a]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD RECOVER DAMAGES BECAUSE DEFENDANT TRESPASSED ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY ALTHOUGH DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT WITHIN THE DESIGNATED ZONE IS NOT SUBJECT TO INJUNCTION.

Damages for Trespass Not Barred Although Conduct Within Designated Zone Exempt From Injunction. Although entities engaging in actions otherwise permitted within commercial zones or districts cannot be enjoined by injunction from the reasonable and necessary operation of the permitted use within that zone or district, there is no bar to recovery for damages for trespassory invasions of another's property occasioned by the conduct of that allowable use (Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 234, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 ; Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 529, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 731a).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award for damages for a trespass when defendant's acts causing the trespass are conducted within an appropriate zone and are not subject to an injunction. Code Civ. Proc. § 731a provides that manufacturing, commercial, or airport uses expressly permitted within a district or zone are not subject to injunction when the operation is reasonable and necessary, nor are such uses a nuisance without evidence of the employment of unnecessary and injurious methods of operation. It should be noted that the section expressly excludes from its coverage canneries, fertilizing plants, refineries, and other similar establishments whose operations produce offensive odors.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of appropriate damages from an activity not subject to injunction. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might allege facts illustrating that defendant's cement plant, although operated in a lawful manner and within an allowable zone, caused the entry of dust and rocks on plaintiff's land. Although plaintiff would not be able to obtain an injunction requiring defendant to cease operations, the damages to plaintiff from the trespassing rocks and dust are recoverable.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acts Exempt From Injunction Are Not Barred From Trespass Actions

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922 , are discussed in § 225.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court remanded the nuisance issue, providing guidelines to the trial court in so doing. The Court stated that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 731a is to eliminate injunctive relief when the business is operated in its appropriate zone and the only showing is an injury and nuisance to plaintiff in that operation. Code Civ. Proc. § 731a does not operate to bar a recovery for damages (32 Cal. 3d 229, 234) .

The facts and procedural background of Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 10 Cal. Rptr. 519 , are discussed in § 225.40[3][c]. The court of appeal observed that defendant operated a plant located in a zone which permitted its operation. It came within the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 731a which, subject to certain exceptions, generally provides that when a manufacturing or commercial operation is permitted by local zoning, no private individual can enjoin that operation. The court held, however, that this section does not operate to bar recovery for damages for trespassory invasions of another's property occasioned by the conduct of that manufacturing or commercial use (188 Cal. App. 2d 526, 529) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.147

§ 225.147 Opposing Award of Compensatory Damages for Trespass--Statutory Damages for Wrongful Occupation of Real Property [Civ. Code § 3334]--Disgorgement of Benefits Obtained by Occupation of Property Limited to Financial or Business Advantage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DISGORGEMENT UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 3334(b) OF THE BENEFITS OBTAINED BY DEFENDANT THROUGH A WRONGFUL OCCUPATION OF PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY IS LIMITED TO DISGORGEMENT OF THE AMOUNT REPRESENTING THE FINANCIAL OR BUSINESS ADVANTAGE ACTUALLY PROVIDED TO THE DEFENDANT BY THE OCCUPATION OF THE PROPERTY.

A. Detriment For Wrongful Occupation of Real Property Defined by Statute. The detriment caused by the wrongful occupation of real property, in cases not embraced by the statutes governing eminent domain, holdover tenant, or unlawful detainer, is deemed to include the value of the use of the property for the time of occupation, not exceeding the five years preceding the commencement of the action to enforce the right to damages, the reasonable cost of repair or restoration of the property to its original condition, and the costs of recovering possession. For these purposes, the value of the use of the property is the greater of (1) the reasonable rental value of that property, or (2) the benefits obtained by the person wrongfully occupying the property by reason of that wrongful occupation. If the wrongful occupation of real property is the result of a mistake of fact by the wrongful occupier, the value of the use of the property is deemed to be the reasonable rental value of the property (Civ. Code § 3334(a)-(c)).

B. "Benefits" Obtained Under Civil Code Section 3334(b) Require Financial or Business Advantage. For purposes of determining the benefits obtained by the person wrongfully occupying property under Civ. Code § 3334(b), "benefits" are not obtained unless the trespass provided the trespasser with a financial or business advantage (Watson Land Co. v. Shell Oil Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 69, 77, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343).

[Optional] C. Restoration Costs Recoverable Only if Reasonable. Restoration costs may be recovered under Civil Code Section 3334 only if restoration is possible and economically feasible in light of all the competing interests (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 599-602, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 165).

[Optional] D. Specific Evidence Linking Profit to Trespass Required to Recover Profit as Damages. In order to recover profits obtained by the trespasser by virtue of the decision to trespass as a "benefit obtained" under Civil Code Section 3334, the plaintiff must provide evidence specifically linking the profits to the decision to trespass (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 602-604, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 165).

[Optional] E. Gross Profits is Appropriate Measure of Benefit Obtained When Defendant Provides Evidence of Expenses Incurred. While in some instances the trial court may award damages based on gross revenue as the benefit obtained by the trespass, if the defendant presents credible evidence of the expenses incurred, the trial court may offset those amounts against the gross income generated to determine gross profits (Bailey v. Outdoor Media Group (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 778, 788, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 322).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a trespass action in opposition to a plaintiff's claim made under Civ. Code § 3334 for the disgorgement of benefits obtained by the defendant as a result of a wrongful occupation of real property. The basis for the opposition is that the plaintiff is seeking disgorgement of amounts that were not a "benefit" that the defendant obtained because of the occupation.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which these points are raised. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, for example, counsel should include facts showing that the defendant did not obtain a financial or business advantage by virtue of the occupation of the plaintiff's property, or that the benefit obtained was not as great as the amount of disgorgement sought by the plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Benefits" Obtained Under Civil Code Section 3334(b) Require Financial or Business Advantage

In Watson Land Co. v. Shell Oil Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 69, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 , the plaintiff was the owner of a large tract of commercial property. Several pipelines ran under the property, and leaks from the pipelines caused extensive groundwater and soil contamination. The plaintiff sued several companies that ran petroleum products through the pipelines to recover the costs of cleaning up the contamination, and after trial against one defendant, a jury awarded the plaintiff an amount to compensate for those costs. The jury also awarded over $14 million as trespass damages under Civ. Code § 3334(b), determining that the defendant derived a benefit in this amount when it failed to clean up the contamination itself. The defendant appealed, arguing that the plaintiff could not recover under Civ. Code § 3334(b) because the defendant did not obtain any benefit from the product that leaked from the pipelines.

The court of appeal reversed the award of damages under Civ. Code § 3334(b). The court agreed with the defendant that for purposes of determining the benefits obtained by the person wrongfully occupying the property under Civ. Code § 3334(b), "benefits" are not obtained unless the trespass provided the trespasser with a financial or business advantage (130 Cal. App. 4th 69, 77) . The court noted that not only did the gasoline leaks result in a loss of product, but the leaks also meant that the defendant had to repair or replace the pipes at substantial costs, neither of which could be viewed as a "benefit" to the defendant (130 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78) . The court also noted, however, that although avoidance of remediation costs by a trespasser who dumps material on the property cannot be recovered as a "benefit obtained" by the trespasser, the remediation costs themselves can be recovered under Civ. Code § 3334(a), which allows recovery for the reasonable costs of repair or restoration (130 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78) .

[b] Restoration Costs Recoverable Only if Reasonable

In Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 165 , plaintiff was a farm that sued an adjacent oil-producing field for a subsurface trespass. Defendant used unlined percolation pools to dispose of wastewater produced during the oil extraction process. This wastewater, which is high in salts and other minerals, seeped over time into the underground water on plaintiff's land, effectively reducing the quality of that water. A jury awarded plaintiff damages for the trespass, including damages avoided by defendant as a result of the trespass and restoration cost damages of $3.8 million. Defendant appealed, arguing that the action was time-barred as a permanent trespass. Plaintiff also appealed, arguing that the restoration cost award was insufficient and the trial court erred in excluding evidence of defendant's profits.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in so far as it held that the action was one for a continuing trespass and thus timely, but reversed for a retrial on damages. The court noted that under Civ. Code § 3334, when a trespass involves a wrongful occupation of land, restoration costs, that is, the costs to clean up the trespass, may be recovered only if reasonable (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 599-600) . The court agreed that there was no evidence in the record to support the jury's award of $3.8 million as restoration costs. The court held that on retrial, the jury should be instructed that once it resolves the factual issue of how much it might cost to restore the groundwater under plaintiff's property to its original state, it must then determine whether the restoration costs are reasonable in light of all of the competing interests, including the current value and use of the land (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 601) . While stopping short of deciding the issue as a matter of law, the court noted that the evidence of unreasonableness in the instant case was very strong. The estimated cost of restoration was more than $2 billion, while the estimated value of the water ranged from $100,000 to $10 million. In addition, even if restored to its original state, the groundwater had limited use as irrigation water because of its natural salt content (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 601-602) .

[c] Specific Evidence Linking Profit to Trespass Required to Recover Profit as Damages

The procedural and factual background of Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 165 , is described in [b], above. The trial court had excluded evidence of defendant's profits and had concluded that "benefits obtained" measure of damages found in Civ. Code § 3334 was restricted to the costs saved or avoided by defendant by virtue of the trespass. As the Legislature's goal in amending Civ. Code § 3334 in 1992 was the removal of any economic incentive to choose illegal dumping over the proper disposal of toxic waste, the court of appeal concluded that the "benefits obtained" should not be limited to costs avoided, but could include profits obtained by virtue of the decision to trespass (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 602-604) . However, the court stressed that a plaintiff is required to demonstrate a direct link between the profits and the trespass. This showing requires evidence that a portion of the profit earned by the trespasser was actually tied to the decision to trespass. This showing is not met merely by measuring the profits earned in any given time period or proportioning the profits to a particular part of the trespasser's business. For example, plaintiff could not simply take defendant's total profit for the applicable time period, determine the amount of water that was percolated through the pools adjacent to plaintiff's property as a percentage of the overall amount of wastewater created at the facility, and multiply that percentage of water by the amount of total profit. Such a showing would not account for the possibility that not all of the wastewater percolated through the adjacent pools ended up in plaintiff's subsurface basin. In addition, that method would ignore that alternate methods of disposal were available, the use of which would still allow defendant to reap a substantial profit. In fact, the evidence suggested that if defendant had utilized a more costly method for disposing of the wastewater without the trespass, defendant would still have realized over a billion dollars in profit. Thus, as the decision to trespass did not account for all of defendant's profit, plaintiff was required to present evidence sufficient to allow the trier of fact to calculate the amount of profit directly linked to the decision to trespass (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 604-606) .

[d] Gross Profits is Appropriate Measure of Benefit Obtained When Defendant Provides Evidence of Expenses Incurred

In Bailey v. Outdoor Media Group (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 778, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 322 , plaintiff was the leaseholder of a strip of land that he had subleased to an advertising company, which constructed billboards on the property. When the original sublease expired, the advertising company continued to use the property for billboard rentals, although plaintiff and the company were unable to come to an agreement on a new sublease. Plaintiff sued the advertising company for damages based on the company's continued use of the land. Plaintiff prevailed, but the court denied plaintiff's cause of action for ejectment because new billboard construction had been outlawed in the city. The company thereafter continued to use the land for billboard rentals, even though it was unable to reach a new sublease agreement with plaintiff. The advertising company then sold its right to use the property to another advertising company, falsely representing at the time that it had a current sublease when it did not. The new advertising company made monthly lease payments to plaintiff, although plaintiff returned each payment with notification that no sublease was in place. The parties attempted to reach a sublease agreement, but failed to do so, apparently because of plaintiff's exorbitant demands. Plaintiff filed another lawsuit for trespass against both advertising companies and was awarded statutory damages under Civ. Code § 3334. When calculating damages from the first advertising company, the trial court measured the company's benefits obtained based on the company's gross profits, rather than from the company's gross revenues as plaintiff had argued. Damages awarded from the second advertising company were based on the reasonable rental value of the land, rather than on the company's net profit. Plaintiff appealed, seeking a higher measure of damages from each defendant.

The court of appeal modified the damage award against the second advertising company, but affirmed the calculation of the award levied against the first company. The court held that net profit was an appropriate measure of the benefits obtained by reason of the trespass of the first advertising company under Civ. Code § 3334(b). The court reviewed the legislative history of the 1992 amendment to the statute, which added the provision allowing recovery of the benefits obtained by the trespasser, explaining that the purpose of the amendment was to eliminate the economic incentive to dump toxic waste on another's property when the rental value of the property being dumped on was cheaper than proper disposal of the waste. The court also noted, however, that the Legislature did not intend with the 1992 amendment to punish the wrongful occupier, merely discourage the dumping of toxic waste on vacant land with little or no rental value. In this context, the court concluded that it was proper to calculate the benefit obtained by calculating the trespasser's net profits from the wrongful occupation, rather than from gross revenues, at least when the defendant presents credible evidence of expenses associated with the wrongful activity, as defendant had done in this case. Absent evidence of associated costs, however, a court is free to calculate the benefits obtained based on gross revenues (155 Cal. App. 4th 778, 787-788) .

148 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
3. Compensatory Damages

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.148-225.159

[Reserved]

§§ 225.148[Reserved]

149 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
4. Damages for Trespass to Minerals or Timber

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.160

§ 225.160 Supporting Award of Damages for Production of Minerals in Trespass--Measure of Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ENTRY ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY, REMOVAL OF ORE, AND PRODUCTION OF MINERALS WAS A TRESPASS FOR WHICH THE _____ [HARSH or MILD] RULE FOR DETERMINING DAMAGES SHOULD BE APPLIED BECAUSE THE TRESPASS WAS IN _____ [BAD or GOOD] FAITH.

[EITHER, if trespass was in bad faith]

Harsh Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Bad Faith. When the production of minerals in trespass is made in bad faith, as it is when a person acts maliciously, willfully, and oppressively with full knowledge of the plaintiff's right and the injury which the plaintiff would suffer, the defendant is liable for the net value of the minerals converted, without any deduction for the expenses in wrongfully taking it (Martinez v. De Los Rios (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 102, 106, 331 P.2d 724).

[OR, if trespass was in good faith]

Mild Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Good Faith. A mining trespass is innocent when a person by mistake, or without an intention to trespass because of an honest belief that an existing right is being exercised, enters on the property of another and takes ore, coal, oil, or other minerals therefrom. When the trespass is innocent, the measure of damages is the value of the mineral in place, or the value of the mineral extracted from the ore, less the cost of mining, transportation, and smelting (Whittaker v. Otto (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 675-676, 56 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; Daly v. Smith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 598-599, 33 Cal. Rptr. 920).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award of damages for the production of minerals in trespass. When the trespass was in bad faith, the harsh rule of damages should be used (first alternative paragraph). When the trespass was in good faith, the mild rule of damages should be used (second alternative paragraph).

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for the production of minerals in trespass. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should set forth facts indicating defendant's knowledge that plaintiff owned the property and that defendant willfully removed ore without permission, damaging improvements on the property [see, e.g., Martinez v. De Los Rios (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 102, 331 P.2d 724] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to mining and mining operations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 363, Mining (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda supporting and opposing the award of tort damages, see Ch. 64, Damages: Tort .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Harsh Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Bad Faith

In Martinez v. De Los Rios (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 102, 331 P.2d 724 , plaintiff, owner of six mining claims, brought an action for damages for trespass on those mining claims, unlawful conversion of ore, and other related relief. Defendant, without plaintiff's consent, took ore from the claims, damaging improvements made. The trial court found that lessee defendant was not malicious, but that the acts of defendant companies were malicious, willful, and oppressive because they were made with full knowledge of plaintiff's rights in the premises. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff on all counts. Defendants appealed. Plaintiff cross appealed from that portion of the judgment which allowed defendants a deduction of expenses for transportation, milling, and marketing the ore.

The court of appeal modified the judgment to strike the exemplary damage award, and amended the general damage award to disallow the deduction of production expenses. The trial court had found defendants' acts to be malicious, willful, and oppressive and made with full knowledge of plaintiff's right and the injury which plaintiff would suffer. The court of appeal said that defendant had constructive notice that the claim belonged to plaintiff, and that defendant was a trespasser when defendant went on the property and removed ore that belonged to another. Under these circumstances the act was not in good faith without knowledge that the mine was the property of another, and defendant was liable for the value of the mineral taken, without any deduction for the expenses in wrongfully taking it (165 Cal. App. 2d 102,

106) . The court went on to explain that defendants ought not to be penalized twice. The rule denying deduction of production expenses is grounded on the principle of punitive damages and derives authority from Civ. Code § 3294. Examination of the trial court record indicated that there was no intent to award two separate types of punitive damages, and since the deduction could not be allowed, the special award of exemplary damages should fall. Exemplary damages ought to be reasonable. The rule depriving defendants of the production expenses deduction is a sufficiently strong penalty already without adding a special exemplary damage award (165 Cal. App. 2d 102, 107) .

[b] Mild Rule of Damages Applies if Trespass to Minerals in Good Faith

In Whittaker v. Otto (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 56 Cal. Rptr. 836 , plaintiff was lessee of some mining claims. A caretaker on the property prior to the lease executed a deed to a mining company. Plaintiff filed an action in ejectment against the caretaker. Judgment was for plaintiff, which was affirmed on appeal. Plaintiff then brought an action for trespass to the mining claims and conversion of iron ore against defendants mining company, the individual members of the company, and the purchaser of the ore. Although aware of the ejectment judgment, defendants had consulted an attorney before mining and acted on his advice. Defendants counterclaimed for the value of the improvements they made on the property. The trial court judgment was for defendants, and it denied plaintiff's motion for a new trial. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal dismissed plaintiff's appeal from the order denying a new trial as nonappealable, affirmed the judgment in favor of defendant ore purchaser, and reversed and remanded the judgment in favor of the other defendants. The court first discussed the issue of possession, finding that plaintiff had the right to maintain a trespass action and had done so successfully (248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 672-674) . The court then focused on the issue of damages. Defendants contended alternatively that plaintiff did not suffer any damage by reason of trespass, or that plaintiff did not suffer any damage by reason of defendants' acts because defendants acted in good faith and their costs exceeded their profits. There are two rules for the measure of damages for the production of minerals in trespass: mild and harsh. The mild rule, applied when the trespass is by honest mistake and inadvertence, computes the measure of damages as the value of the ore extracted less the costs incurred by the defendants in the mining, transportation, and smelting of the converted ore, since this constitutes the value of the ore in place. The harsh rule is applicable when the trespass is willful or in bad faith, and measures damages as the net value of the ore converted without deduction for defendant's cost of mining, smelting, and transportation (248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 675-676) . The good faith required for application of the mild measure of damages is something more than the trespasser's assertion of a colorable claim to the converted minerals (248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 676) . In trespass to mining claims, as with all trespasses to real property, the law presumes nominal damages. The court found that the mild rule was appropriate and ordered that it be applied on remand. If the expense of production exceeds the reasonable value of the ore converted, the loss must be borne by defendants (248 Cal. App. 2d 666, 677) .

The facts and procedural background of Daly v. Smith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 33 Cal. Rptr. 920 , are discussed in § 225.100[3][a]. The court of appeal discussed when the mild rule of damages for production of minerals in trespass applies. A mining trespass is innocent when a person by mistake, or without an intention to trespass because of an honest belief that an existing right is being exercised, enters on the property of another and takes ore, coal, oil, or other minerals therefrom. When the trespass is innocent, the measure of damages is the value of the mineral in place, or the value of the mineral extracted from the ore, less the cost of mining, transportation, and smelting. Since the trial court's finding of a good faith trespass was supported by the facts, the court found the mild rule applicable (220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 598-599) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
4. Damages for Trespass to Minerals or Timber

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.161

§ 225.161 Supporting Award of Damages for Trespass to Timber--Multiple Damages Available

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum or points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S ACTS IN ENTERING PLAINTIFF'S LAND AND _____ [REMOVING and/or CAUSING INJURY TO] TIMBER _____ [FROM and/or ON] THE PROPERTY WAS A TRESPASS, FOR WHICH PLAINTIFF IS ALLOWED TO RECOVER _____ [TREBLE or DOUBLE] DAMAGES FOR THE ACTUAL DETRIMENT.

[EITHER, if trespass is malicious]

Treble Damages for Wrongful Removal of or Injuries to Timber. The measure of damages for wrongful removal of or injuries to timber, trees, or underwood on the land of another is three times the sum that would compensate for the actual detriment. Wrongful removal or injuries to trees is evidenced by willful and malicious acts or acts in wanton and reckless disregard of and indifference to the rights of the plaintiff's interest in the land (Civ. Code § 3346(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 733; Caldwell v. Walker (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 758, 762, 766, 27 Cal. Rptr. 675 ; Roche v. Casissa (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 785, 788-789, 316 P.2d 776).

[OR, if trespass is casual]

Double Damages for Casual or Involuntary Trespass to Timber. When a trespass to timber, trees, or underwood was casual or involuntary, or when the defendant had probable cause to believe that the land trespassed on was his or her own or the land of the person in whose service or by whose direction the act was done, the measure of damages is twice the sum as would compensate for the actual detriment (Civ. Code § 3346(a); Drewry v. Welch (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 159, 179-181, 46 Cal. Rptr. 65 ; Lindroth v. Windbigler (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 844, 845-846, 43 Cal. Rptr. 355).

[Optional] B. Double Damages Mandatory When Timber Damaged by Fire Set or Spread Negligently. Under the plain language of Civil Code Section 3346(a), double damages are mandatory when trees are damaged as a result of a fire that spreads to the plaintiff's property negligently (Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 462-463, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an award of multiple damages for the trespass to plaintiff's timber, trees, or underwood. One of the alternatives for the measure of damages should be used, depending on the facts of the case indicating the intent of defendant. If defendant was malicious or willful, treble damages are available; if defendant's acts were casual or involuntary, double damages are appropriate.

It should be noted that actual damages are used as the measure when the timber was taken by the authority of highway officers for road or bridge repair [see Civ. Code § 3346(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 733]. Additionally, actual damages are used as the measure for any trespass committed while acting in reliance on an erroneous survey: if (1) the trespass was committed by a defendant, or the defendant's principal, lessor, or immediate predecessor in title, who procured the survey; and (2) the survey was made by a licensed surveyor [Civ. Code § 3346(b)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for trespass to timber. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel may allege facts indicating defendant's intent. For example, counsel should show that at the time of the trespass, defendant was aware of plaintiff's interest in the land by showing that there were "no trespassing" signs with the owner's name on them posted on the property and that plaintiff had sent written notice of his or her objections to defendant's logging operations, but defendant entered and removed timber.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to logs and timber, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 350, Logs and Timber (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.162 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages for Wrongful Removal of or Injuries to Timber

In Caldwell v. Walker (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 758, 27 Cal. Rptr. 675 , defendants contracted with plaintiffs' neighbors for the sale and logging of all the timber on their property. The contract was made by guardians of the incompetent owner, had an expiration date, and was never approved by the court or recorded. Defendants ceased operations after about a year. When the owner of the property died, plaintiffs became the eventual owners. At that time plaintiffs' attorney, after failing to locate defendants, inquired as to the status of the earlier contract and was told by the guardians that defendants had abandoned the contract and had no interest in the property. Thereafter, defendants still claimed an interest and resumed logging operations, ignoring no trespass signs and a notice sent to them by plaintiffs of their ownership. Plaintiffs brought an action against defendants seeking an injunction and treble damages. Defendants cross complained for damages for the logging which had been done by plaintiffs. Plaintiffs brought later actions in conversion against lumber purchasers. The trial court found that defendants' entry and logging was not based on any right and was an act of trespass which was willful and malicious. Judgment for plaintiffs was for treble damages, and defendants received nothing on their cross complaint. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. An award of treble damages for the cutting of, injury to, or removal of timber is authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 733 and Civ. Code § 3346. Although neither section expressly provides, to warrant such an award of treble damages it must be established that the wrongful act was willful and malicious. The statutes are permissive and not mandatory and while they prescribe the degree of penalty to be invoked, they commit to the sound discretion of the trial court the facts and circumstances under which it shall be invoked (211 Cal. App. 2d 758, 762-763) . The court reviewed the facts of the case, comparing them with the facts of earlier cases and concluded that under the circumstances any reasonable person would conclude that the owner of the property and the owner's attorney regarded him or her as a trespasser, especially after receiving written notice to that effect from the owner. Defendants did not attempt to contact the former owners or seek advice of counsel. Defendants made no real effort to determine that the title of the new owners was such that defendants were not precluded from entering thereon and resuming operations. The trial court could properly infer that defendants had acted in wanton and reckless disregard of and indifference to the rights of plaintiffs (211 Cal. App. 2d 758, 766) .

In Roche v. Casissa (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 785, 316 P.2d 776 , defendants employed a tree trimmer to top trees, including 15 trees located on plaintiffs' property. Plaintiffs brought an action for treble damages for wrongful cutting of trees against defendant and the tree trimmer. The tree trimmer cross complained against defendant for his costs. The trial court judgment was for plaintiffs for treble damages, and for cross complainant. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. After addressing defendants' contentions concerning excessive damages and the admission of evidence, the court considered defendants' contention that the evidence did not support an award of treble damages. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 733 and Civ. Code § 3346 do not condition the award on willfulness or malice, recovery of treble damages cannot be had except on such a showing. What constitutes willful or malicious conduct under this rule has not been spelled out in decisions, and generally, the question of what circumstances warrant exemplary damages under these sections is committed to the sound discretion of the trial court. When there is a real question about plaintiff's title and defendant has a right to remove substantial parts of the trees because they extend over defendant's land, an award of more than actual damages will be reversed. When plaintiff's title is clear and known to defendant, an award of treble damages is within the discretion of the trial court. In this case defendants knew, before cutting the trees, that the trees were not on their land, yet they disregarded the rights of the adjoining owner and cut the trees for the sole purpose of improving the view from their own home. Defendants' belief that the landowner would not object was no exoneration. The evidence supported the finding that these acts were wanton and willful (154 Cal. App. 2d 785, 788-789) .

[b] Double Damages for Casual or Involuntary Trespass to Timber

In Drewry v. Welch (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 159, 46 Cal. Rptr. 65 , plaintiffs contracted to sell timber to defendants' predecessors. Plaintiffs brought an action to quiet title and for an injunction and to recover damages for alleged trespass and conversion of timber. The trial court found that defendants had made false and mistaken representations as to the amount of timber removed and the date of removal, in violation of the contract, but that these acts were not malicious. It found that removal of some of the timber was a trespass for which defendants were liable for double the amount of actual detriment. The judgment of the trial court was for plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. After a thorough analysis of the contract and the rights of each party, the court rejected defendant's contention that the portion of Civ. Code § 3346 allowing double damages was invalid. The court discussed the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 733 and Civ. Code § 3346, and found that the legislature intended to place a floor on the trial court's discretion to award damages at double damages, which must be applied whether the trespass is willful and malicious or casual and involuntary. There are now three measures of damages: (1) for willful and malicious trespass, the court may impose treble damages, but must impose double damages; (2) for casual and involuntary trespass, the court must impose double damages; and (3) for trespass under authority, the court may impose actual damages (236 Cal. App. 2d 159, 179-181) . Once liability has been established, the imposition of double damages for trespass to trees without authority is mandatory (236 Cal. App. 2d 159, 181) .

In Lindroth v. Windbigler (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 844, 43 Cal. Rptr. 355 , defendants cut and removed timber from plaintiff's land without permission. Plaintiffs brought an action for treble damages, alleging malicious trespass. The trial court found that the trespass was casual and involuntary and was the result of reliance on an incorrect boundary, established by an unlicensed surveyor. Double damages were awarded plaintiffs by the trial court. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that defendants' appeal was based solely on the contention that the issue of double damages was not properly before the court. The court discussed the pleadings and proceedings which had clearly indicated that damages were the issue, and then summarized the validity of the trial court's award. Evidence was submitted by both sides on the issue of the measure of damages to apply, and the conflict between the triple and double measures was actually resolved in defendant's favor. The provision of Civ. Code § 3346 providing for actual damages when the trespasser relies on a mistaken boundary line fixed by a licensed surveyor did not apply because the boundary line in question was not fixed by a licensed surveyor (232 Cal. App. 2d 844, 845-847) .

[c] Double Damages Mandatory When Timber Damaged by Fire Set or Spread Negligently

In Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32 , plaintiff owned a 34-acre ranch that was damaged when a brush fire that was negligently sparked by defendant spread to over 20,000 acres. The fire destroyed several structures on plaintiff's ranch, as well as a number of trees. Subsequent mudslides causing further property damage resulted from the destruction of vegetation by the fire. Plaintiff sued defendant and was awarded compensatory damages to restore the property to a habitable state. As part of the award, plaintiff was awarded double the amount of actual damage to the trees pursuant to Civ. Code § 3346(a). Defendant appealed.

The Court of Appeal affirmed the doubled award for damage to plaintiff's trees, disagreeing with the 1970 opinion in Gould v. Madonna (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 404, 85 Cal. Rptr. 457 , that held that Civ. Code § 3346(a) did not apply to damage caused by a negligently spread fire. The court in the instant case concluded that the language of the statute was unambiguous and required an award of double damages for wrongful injuries to trees upon the land of another when the trespass is casual or involuntary. As there was no dispute that the fire was a trespass that was "casual or involuntary" within the meaning of the statute, double damages were properly awarded (179 Cal. App. 4th 442, 462-463) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
4. Damages for Trespass to Minerals or Timber

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.162

§ 225.162 Opposing Award of Damages for Trespass to Timber--Treble Damages Only Available for Malicious Injury or Removal of Timber

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT, IN _____ [REMOVING and/or CAUSING INJURY TO] TIMBER _____ [FROM and/or ON] PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY, DID NOT ACT WILLFULLY OR MALICIOUSLY, AND THUS SHOULD NOT BE HELD LIABLE FOR TREBLE DAMAGES.

Treble Damages Requires Malicious Intent. Treble damages may only be awarded for the wrongful removal of or injury to timber, trees, or underwood when the trespasser intentionally acts willfully or maliciously. There must be an intent to vex, harass, or annoy or injure the plaintiff; the defendant's reasonable belief that the plaintiff did not have title to the timber is evidence of a lack of malice (Sills v. Siller (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 735, 743, 32 Cal. Rptr. 621 ; Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 246, 12 Cal. Rptr. 639 ; see Civ. Code § 3346(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 733).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's request for treble damages for wrongful removal or injury to timber. The ground of opposition set forth is that treble damages are inappropriate because defendant did not act maliciously in removing timber from or causing injury to timber on plaintiff's property [see Civ. Code § 3346(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 733].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of damages for trespass to timber. These points and authorities

may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel might include facts illustrating that defendants reasonably believed they were dealing with the owners of the property when executing a contract for the logging of timber on the land and were not malicious in their acts.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities contained in § 225.161.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to logs and timber, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 350, Logs and Timber (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treble Damages Requires Malicious Intent

In Sills v. Siller (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 735, 32 Cal. Rptr. 621 , defendant, a joint enterprise, engaged to discover and obtain title to timberlands which had no ownership. In this endeavor, certain property and superficial assessor's documentation of ownership was shown to a logger employed by plaintiffs before any title had been obtained. Relying on that representation, plaintiffs paid for the timber on the land, and later discovered that property was owned by third parties. Settlement was made with the owners, but the guardian of the estate of a deceased owner was unable to obtain the consent of the superior court for a settlement. Plaintiffs brought an action against defendants for the monies paid in settlement to the owners as well as the money which would be paid to the estate, and a declaration of the amount due the estate. The guardian of the deceased owner's estate cross complained against plaintiffs for treble and punitive damages. The trial court found that plaintiffs believed they were dealing with the owners of the property and did not act with malice, and refused to award treble damages. Judgment was entered in favor of plaintiffs against defendants and in favor of cross complainant against plaintiffs. Defendants and cross complainant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on the cross complaint with directions to the trial court to increase the damages to include interest charges, and affirmed the decision in favor of plaintiffs, with directions that those damages be increased in the same amount as that of cross complainant. The court addressed defendants' contentions concerning its representations, and then discussed the damage award. Cross complainant contended that the court erred in not awarding treble damages as allowed under Civ. Code § 3346. Civ. Code § 3346 allows treble damages when the wrongdoer intentionally acted willfully or maliciously. The required intent is one to vex, harass, or annoy, and the existence of that intent is a question of fact for the trial court. The trial court finding was on substantial evidence and it did not err in refusing to award treble damages to cross complainant (218 Cal. App. 2d 735, 743) .

In Crofoot Lumber, Inc. v. Ford (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 12 Cal. Rptr. 639 , plaintiff lumber company contracted with defendant buyer for the sale of timber on plaintiff's land. The buyer breached, plaintiff rescinded the agreement, and brought suit against the buyer for rescission. While that action was pending, plaintiff discovered that the timber was being logged by defendant loggers under instructions from defendant copartners doing business as logging and lumber companies, who claimed to have obtained their right to cut the timber under a contract with defendant sellers, one of whom was the original buyer from plaintiff. Plaintiff brought a second action against all defendants, seeking an injunction against the trespass. In that action, defendant copartners cross complained against defendant sellers for indemnity for any loss arising from cutting the timber. Plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction was denied. Defendants then logged the property. Judgment in the first case was for plaintiff and declared the contract rescinded and full title to the land and timber to be in plaintiff. The trial court in the second suit found that although defendant loggers were aware of plaintiff's rescission of the contract, they believed it ineffectual, and had reasonable grounds for this belief, and were not motivated by malice or ill will (191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 244) . Judgment was for plaintiff, and it awarded damages equivalent to actual damages. Cross complainants were denied relief on their cross complaint for indemnification. Plaintiff appealed on the issue of damages, while cross complainants appealed from that part of judgment entered in favor of cross defendants.

The court of appeal reversed the earlier damage award to plaintiff and affirmed the judgment in favor of cross defendants. In appealing the measure of damages used by the trial court, plaintiff contended that it should have been awarded multiple damages pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 733 or Civ. Code § 3346, or in the alternative, that if it is not entitled to damages under Civ. Code § 3346, it would be entitled to damages under a conversion theory. Treble damages may only be awarded when the wrongdoer intentionally acts willfully or maliciously. The intent required is the intent to vex, harass, annoy, or injure the plaintiff. Intent is a question of fact for the trial (191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 246) . The question of title to the timber at the time of removal was one on which legal minds could well differ. Under these circumstances defendants were not charged with knowledge of plaintiff's title. The granting of treble damages is within the sound discretion of the trial court and failure to so provide will not be reversed except on a clear showing of abuse. Plaintiff sought to have the double damage award of Civ. Code § 3346 applied if the treble award under that section was not available. The court dismissed that argument, explaining that the double damage provision, enacted by an amendment after the acts complained of, imposed a previously nonexistent liability, and because the provision is penal, it is not retroactive, and not applicable. The court found merit with plaintiff's final contention that if Civ. Code § 3346 did not entitle it to damages, it is entitled to damages under conversion, and reversed the portion of judgment relating to the measure of damages on this ground (191 Cal. App. 2d 238, 247) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
B. Damages
4. Damages for Trespass to Minerals or Timber

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.163-225.179

[Reserved]

§§ 225.163[Reserved]

153 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.180

§ 225.180 Supporting Contention for Issuance of Prohibitory Injunction Against Trespass--Equitable Relief Warranted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE GRANTED INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AGAINST DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS BECAUSE LEGAL REMEDIES ARE INADEQUATE AND PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER IRREPARABLE INJURIES IF THE TRESPASS IS ALLOWED TO CONTINUE.

A. General Rule Regarding Availability of Injunctive Relief. Equitable relief in the form of an injunction may be granted to restrain trespasses or threatened continuing trespasses if the threatened injury would be irreparable and the legal remedy is inadequate (Harmon v. De Turk (1917) 176 Cal. 758, 762, 169 P. 680 ; Pierce v. Stablemen's Union (1909) 156 Cal. 70, 73, 103 P. 324 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)).

B. Facts of Specific Case Are Determinative. Each case must stand on its own facts in determining whether equitable relief should be granted (Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 271, 86 P.2d 127).

[Optional] C. Injunctive Relief Available if Difficulty in Estimating Damage Indicates Irreparable Injury. If the probable resultant injury of a threatened continuing trespass will be beyond any method of pecuniary estimation or will be extremely difficult to ascertain, the injury can be seen as irreparable and will warrant injunctive relief (Civ. Code § 3422(2); Code Civ. Proc. § 526; Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 52-53, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486 ; Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270-272, 86 P.2d 127).

[Optional] D. Injunctive Relief Available if Legal Remedy Inadequate. If the continued interference with the plaintiff's interest cannot be prevented by the available legal remedies such as damages, ejectment, or forcible or unlawful detainer actions, injunctive relief is appropriate (De Groot v. Peters (1899) 124 Cal. 406, 408, 57 P. 209 ; Reitz v. Wollwert (1933) 217 Cal. 406, 409-410, 19 P.2d 3 ; see Civ. Code § 3422(3)).

[Optional] E. Injunctive Relief Available to Avoid Multiplicity of Suits. When a trespass is of a continuing nature, and its constant recurrence renders the remedy at law inadequate unless by a multiplicity of suits, there is sufficient ground for relief by way of injunction (Civ. Code § 3422(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a); Slater v. Pacific Am. Oil Co. (1931) 212 Cal. 648, 655, 300 P. 31 ; State of California v. Hansen (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 604, 611, 11 Cal. Rptr. 335).

[Optional] F. Injunctive Relief Available to Prevent Creation of Easement. Equitable relief in the form of an injunction will issue to prevent a wrongful act if the continuance of that act will, in time, ripen into an easement or servitude which will deprive the owner of the use of the property or some part of it (Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 201, 323 P.2d 1001 ; City of Dunsmuir v. Silva (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 827, 317 P.2d 653).

[Optional] G. Interference With Easement. A preliminary injunction may be granted to prevent interference with the use of an easement (Continental Baking Co. v. Katz (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 512, 526-532, 67 Cal. Rptr. 761, 439 P.2d 889 ; Keith v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 521, 524-527, 103 Cal. Rptr. 314).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of injunctive relief of a prohibitory nature. Damages or ejectment is the usual remedy in a trespass action, and injunctive relief is granted only if the legal remedy is not sufficient. Optional Paragraph C should be used if the injury is irreparable because damages would be extremely difficult or impossible to estimate. Optional Paragraph D should be used if legal remedies such as damages, ejectment, or detainer actions would be inadequate. Optional Paragraph E should be used if the trespass is continuing and injunctive relief is needed to avoid a multiplicity of suits. Optional Paragraph F should be used if the trespass threatens to ripen into an easement. Optional Paragraph G should be used if preliminary injunctive relief is being sought against a trespass that is interfering with use of an existing easement.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of injunctive relief from trespass. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating that defendant's past and threatened continued trespass interferes with plaintiff's business, and, if allowed to continue, will cause damages in an amount impossible to determine.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the granting of injunctive relief, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in § 225.182 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule Regarding Availability of Injunctive Relief

In Harmon v. De Turk (1917) 176 Cal. 758 , defendants were the owners of land leased to plaintiff. The lease gave plaintiff the exclusive right of excavating and removing minerals from the land and required him to erect a suitable plant, install equipment for the work, and remove a specified amount of material per month, of which defendants received a share. Plaintiff executed contracts with builders and suppliers and anticipated buyers in reliance on the lease. When plaintiff attempted to enter the property, he found it enclosed by a locked fence. He entered and had begun to comply with the lease terms when defendant wife ordered him off the premises, saying that she would not permit him to enter for any purpose. Plaintiff brought action for an injunction to restrain defendants from interfering with the free use and occupancy of the property, alleging that, unless restrained, defendants would prevent entry and performance under the lease and the carrying out of his obligations to those with whom he had made contracts, all to his great and irreparable damage. After their demurrer was overruled, defendant wife cross complained, attacking the validity of the lease, and asserting that she owned an interest in the land. Plaintiff's demurrer to the cross complaint was sustained with leave to amend, but no amendment was made. The trial court entered judgment granting plaintiff the relief sought. Defendant wife appealed the judgment and the rulings on the demurrers.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment and dismissed the appeals from the orders overruling and sustaining the demurrers. The Court said the only issue on appeal was whether the complaint stated facts entitling plaintiff to the relief sought. Defendant contended that there was no showing of irreparable injury to plaintiff, or of inadequacy of a remedy at law as to justify an injunction. In holding to the contrary, the Court reviewed the law of injunctions. An injunction will not lie to restrain mere trespasses on land, for the simple reason that an action at law will ordinarily afford an ample and adequate remedy for the wrong (176 Cal. 758, 761) . It is not the usual practice of courts to issue injunctions for the purpose of restoring land to a claimant out of possession or to permit an injunction suit to be substituted for an action of ejectment. However, the injunction may be granted even in those cases when the threatened injury would be irreparable and the legal remedy inadequate. Defendants' actions involved more than a threat of repeated trespasses, or a bare withholding of possession. Plaintiff is entitled to enter under the lease, and makes his right dependent on performance within a limited time. He was excluded from the land by physical obstructions wrongfully erected and threaten to be maintained. An action at law would not give him an undisturbed possession in time to enable him to carry out his obligations under the lease. These facts make out a case of irreparable damages sufficient to warrant injunctive relief (176 Cal. 758, 762) .

In Pierce v. Stablemen's Union (1909) 156 Cal. 70, 103 P. 324 , plaintiff owned and operated a livery and feed stable. The officers of defendant requested plaintiff to unionize his stable. Plaintiff refused, and a strike was declared against him. Defendant's members picketed plaintiff's stable, threatening customers with boycotts of their own businesses and plaintiff's employees with bodily harm. Plaintiff brought an action for an injunction to restrain defendants from illegal interference with his business. The trial court granted an injunction ordering defendant to refrain from interfering with plaintiff's business in any way. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court directed the trial court to modify the injunction because it was too broad, but otherwise affirmed the judgment. Although equity will not attempt to restrain the commission of a crime, the fact that an act threatening irreparable injury to property rights is of itself criminal does not deprive a court of its right and power to enjoin the commission of the act. Similarly, while equity will not enjoin against a trespass as such, when the acts committed and threatened are in the nature of a continuing trespass, causing irreparable injury, they will be enjoined. The Court also discussed the union activities specifically, ultimately finding that the injunction was too broad against those activities ( 156 Cal. 70, 73-74) .

[b] Facts of Specific Case Are Determinative

In Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 86 P.2d 127 , two cases involving various plaintiffs and bankrupt defendants and their trustees were consolidated. Defendants began operations for slant drilling for oil on land adjacent to the leaseholds of plaintiffs. Plaintiff served defendants with written notice warning them that they must not cause or permit the well to cross or be within the boundary lines of plaintiffs' land. Defendants' well entered plaintiffs' land at subsurface levels with full knowledge of the course their well was taking. Plaintiffs brought an action for trespass. The trial court granted injunctive relief. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Among the many points raised by defendants on appeal was that even if a trespass took place, the damages were too inconsequential to justify the granting of injunctive relief, and that an injunction should only issue only on a showing of irreparable injury. Plaintiffs conceded that they could not prove actual damage to justify an award of damages in any specific amount. However, the court stated that this concession did not justify the conclusion that plaintiffs had suffered no injury. Citing Civ. Code § 3422(2), the court said that injunctions can be issued when it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation which would afford adequate relief. Each case must stand on its own facts in determining whether equitable relief should be granted. In some cases involving inconsequential surface encroachments, injunctive relief has been denied on the application of the maxim de minimus, but in those cases it was obvious that there was no appreciable damage or at least that the extent of the damages was easily ascertainable. In this trespass it was extremely difficult to ascertain the extent of the damages which had been suffered and which would be suffered. Under these circumstances injunctive relief should be available, especially since the trespass was of a continuing nature and might ripen into a prescriptive right, and since defendant was insolvent (30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270-272) .

[c] Injunctive Relief Available if Difficulty in Estimating Damage Indicates Irreparable Injury

The facts and procedural background of Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486 , are discussed in § 225.221[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment, and found that injunctive relief was appropriate to prevent future trespasses that would interfere and hamper plaintiff's business. The court discussed the appropriateness of injunctive relief. The threat of future interference is a proper subject for injunctive action. Injunction is a proper remedy against threatened repeated acts of trespass, particularly when the probable resultant injury will be beyond any method of pecuniary estimation and for this reason is irreparable (195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 51-52) .

Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 86 P.2d 127 , is discussed in § 225.180[3][b].

[d] Injunctive Relief Available if Legal Remedy Inadequate

In De Groot v. Peters (1899) 124 Cal. 406, 57 P. 209 , plaintiff brought an action for dissolution and for an accounting, alleging that he and defendant were partners in a tailoring business and that defendant was guilty of misconduct in the business. Defendant cross complained and requested injunctive relief. He claimed that plaintiff was his employee and had begun to neglect his duties, necessitating his discharge, and that plaintiff held himself out to the public as a partner and intruded in defendant's office and business, collected and converted money from defendant's customers, and threatened and intended to continue these acts. The trial court granted defendant an injunction. Plaintiff's motion for a dissolution of the injunction was denied. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The evidence indicated that plaintiff was a trespasser in defendant's store and assumed a control over the business, intercepted money due defendant and held himself out to the public as a partner. Bodily ejection of plaintiff from the premises would not necessarily prevent the continuance of those injuries; nor would an action for damages afford adequate relief. For this reason, among others, it would be extremely difficult to ascertain in pecuniary terms the amount of damages, and plaintiff was insolvent anyway (124 Cal. 406, 408) .

In Reitz v. Wollwert (1933) 217 Cal. 406, 19 P.2d 3 , plaintiff, a frail 80-year-old man, brought his elderly sister to live with him in his apartment house. He placed the title in her name to be held in trust for him. After defendants, his sister's daughter and son in law, attempted to obtain the title to the property, plaintiff's sister reconveyed it to him. After defendant's daughter, as guardian ad litem for her mother, attempted unsuccessfully to have the reconveyance set aside due to fraud, defendants, without plaintiff's consent and against his will, resided in the apartment house, paid no rent, and prevented plaintiff from contacting his sister. Defendants interfered with the tenants, collected rent, and otherwise obstructed plaintiff's free use of his property. Plaintiff's demand that they leave and account for the rents collected was refused. Plaintiff brought an action, requesting damages and an injunction restraining defendants from further occupation. The trial court issued a temporary restraining order, enjoining defendants from interfering with plainitff's occupancy and unobstructed use of the property. Defendants' general demurrer was overruled. The trial court rendered judgment making the injunctive relief permanent and awarding damages. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court did not agree with defendants' contentions that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law. Although defendants as trespassers did not commit injury or waste to the land, that is immaterial in view of their continued interference with all the rights of ownership, which could not be remedied by a future monetary award. Nor could plaintiff have secured adequate relief through ejectment proceedings, as defendants were at no time in possession of the property. They were occupying the rooms of the mother and plaintiff had no desire to remove her from the building. Nor could plaintiff have invoked forcible or unlawful detainer actions against defendants since they were not tenants (217 Cal. 406, 409-410) .

[e] Injunctive Relief Available to Avoid Multiplicity of Suits

In Slater v. Pacific Am. Oil Co. (1931) 212 Cal. 648, 300 P. 31 , plaintiff owned valuable farm land downhill from where defendant and several other companies operated oil wells. After a rain storm the rainwater flowing down from the hills carried oil, salt, and other substances down to plaintiff's property where they were deposited. Plaintiff brought an action for the property damage sustained. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff, awarding damages and injunctive relief. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment, denying damages and injunctive relief.

The Supreme Court affirmed the reversal of the damage award but reversed the court of appeal's denial of the injunction. The Court discussed joint tortfeasor liability and contribution, noting the difficulty in ascertaining a specific amount of damages attributable to one tortfeasor. Even with the difficulties, it was not impossible for plaintiff to offer evidence on which defendant's proportionate liability could be fairly determined. However indefinite the measure, plaintiff sufficiently established that some portion of the substances causing injury came from the operation of defendant's wells. This showing is sufficient to warrant the granting of injunctive relief. The Court reaffirmed the trial court's findings that the continuance of the wrongful acts of defendant would cause a multiplicity of judicial proceedings; that the amount of compensation to afford plaintiff adequate relief if defendant's conduct was allowed to continue would be extremely difficult to ascertain; and that the continuance of defendant's acts would cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's land and pecuniary compensation would not afford plaintiff adequate relief. It is settled that a trespass of a continuing nature, the constant recurrence of which renders the remedy at law inadequate unless by a multiplicity of suits, affords sufficient ground for relief by way of injunction (212 Cal. 648, 655) .

In State of California v. Hansen (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 604, 11 Cal. Rptr. 335 , defendant discovered a spring on a section of state-owned land completely surrounded by defendant's land. Defendant applied to the State Water Rights Board for a permit to appropriate the water from the spring. The permit was not granted. At the same time as the permit hearing, a proceeding was pending for the exchange of the spring land for other government-owned land. That proceeding was later terminated and the parcel put up for sale. Defendant went ahead and developed the spring by digging trenches, installing pipelines, and constructing a water sump. Defendant made no communication of his intent to develop the spring other than by his application. The state brought an action in trespass against defendant to eject him from the property and to enjoin him from continuing to convey water from the property. Defendant cross complained that he was given a right of way across the state land for which the state should be awarded the fair value. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff, awarding it possession of the land and damages, and enjoining defendant from removing water. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. After discussing water appropriation rights and public policy, the court dealt with defendant's assertion of plaintiff's consent for entry. Finding no consent, the court addressed defendant's contentions that an injunction was not appropriate because plaintiff had been benefited and not damaged, no irreparable injury had occurred, and an injunction will not be granted to restrain a trespasser merely because he or she is a trespasser. It is settled that a trespass of a continuing nature, its constant recurrence rendering the remedy at law inadequate unless by a multiplicity of suits, affords sufficient ground for relief by way of injunction. The facts of the case indicate the necessity for injunctive relief to avoid a multiplicity of suits (189 Cal. App. 2d 604, 611) .

[f] Injunctive Relief Available to Prevent Creation of Easement

In Fairrington v. Dyke Water Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 198, 323 P.2d 1001 , defendant purchased a parcel of real property and was given permission to erect a sign on the adjoining land owned by the grantors. After the grantors' deaths, defendant posted a sign. Plaintiffs, heirs of the grantors, succeeded to the property where the sign was posted. After defendant refused to remove the sign, plaintiffs brought an action for a mandatory injunction to require removal and to quiet title to the property. The trial court found that defendant purchased the property and spent money in installing the sign in reliance on that permission, but with full knowledge that the permission was a revocable license; that the sign was a substantial benefit to defendant in carrying on its business; that the sign constituted no substantial detriment to plaintiffs and did not interfere with any use of the property; that the license was revoked by the grantors' deaths; and that relief to plaintiffs should be withheld. The trial court judgment was for defendant, and the court retained jurisdiction to entertain future application by plaintiffs for injunctive relief. Plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court discussed considerations in granting injunctive relief, and how the trial court's analysis was mistaken. The trial court did not conclude that the removal of the sign would result in hardship to defendant, but only that the sign was a substantial benefit to defendant in the carrying on of its business. The doctrine of balancing of conveniences is often invoked as a defense in a suit for an injunction when the plaintiff, seeking to vindicate a technical and unsubstantial right, would impose an unusual hardship on the public or defendant. Deprivation of a substantial benefit, however, falls short of the imposition of substantial hardship. When a court of equity balances conveniences to determine that an injunction, otherwise warranted, should be withheld, its action approaches an exercise of the right of eminent domain in favor of a private person. Thus, proof of irreparable injury is a necessary element of a defense based on a balancing of conveniences. The Court held that the findings were insufficient to support a balancing of the conveniences as a ground for the withholding of injunctive relief (50 Cal. 2d 198, 200) . Nonetheless, the conclusion that the conveniences cannot be balanced in favor of defendant did not determine plaintiff's right to a mandatory injunction. Since the deaths of the grantors terminated the license, the presence of defendant's sign was a continuing trespass on plaintiffs' land, which might ripen into an easement. It is settled that equity will enjoin a wrongful act which, if continuous, will give rise to an easement or servitude. Defendant had shown no equitable or other defense to the suit for a mandatory injunction, nor had it advanced any reason why plaintiffs' title should not be quieted (50 Cal. 2d 198, 201) .

In City of Dunsmuir v. Silva (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 317 P.2d 653 , plaintiffs and defendants owned property abutting on an unnamed alley that belonged to plaintiff city. The alley had long been a common method of ingress and egress to their lots. Plaintiff city, over the objections of the other plaintiffs, issued a building permit to defendants for construction of a garage on defendants' premises. When completed, the garage encroached on the alley and reduced the passageway. Plaintiffs brought an action seeking injunctive relief from the encroachment. The trial court noted that any damages suffered by plaintiffs were not ascertainable and were nominal. The court declared that plaintiffs were the owners of an easement over the alley for travel purposes and granted injunctive relief against the encroachment.

Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendants argued that the encroachment was slight, as there remained a passageway for automobiles, that no damages resulted, and that under the rule de minimus the court ought not to have granted a mandatory injunction, which to be obeyed would necessitate removal of part of the garage. The court disagreed. The findings regarding the difficulty of measuring money damages and that money damage had been nominal provided no reason why defendants should be allowed to maintain their encroachment. An injunction will issue to prevent a wrongful act if the continuance of that act will, in time, ripen into an easement which will deprive the owner of the use of the property or some part thereof or take from the owner the existence of the estate although the immediate damage is inappreciable (154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 827) . The facts indicated the inapplicability of that rule. There were constant protests by plaintiffs from the beginning of construction. The permit granted gave no authority to interfere with the easement rights of plaintiffs. Defendants defiantly continued to build their garage in a manner that encroached on the rights of plaintiffs. Defendants also contended that the court should have balanced the conveniences and refused to require the removal of the encroachment. The court responded that the encroachment could be rectified at a moderate cost in view of the number of persons whose rights were being invaded by the continuance of the structure (154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 828) .

[g] Interference With Easement

In Continental Baking Co. v. Katz (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 512, 67 Cal. Rptr. 761, 439 P.2d 889 , both plaintiff and defendants sought to restrain each other from interfering with an easement. The superior court granted plaintiff a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction to restrain defendants from interfering with the use of the easement; it also issued an order denying defendants a preliminary injunction. Defendants appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the orders. The pivotal issue in the action was the nature of an easement conveyed to plaintiff by a grant deed. After ruling that the trial court had erroneously admitted certain extrinsic evidence to explain the deed, the Court was still faced with the question of whether that error required the reversal of the order granting the preliminary injunction to plaintiff. It noted that plaintiff was probably the party that would ultimately succeed in the action, and that the denial of plaintiff's motion for the injunction would have resulted in substantial injury to plaintiff as compared with any injury that might result to defendants from issuing the injunction. Thus, the Court concluded that the order granting plaintiff the preliminary injunction was not an abuse of discretion because it could not be said that a result more favorable to the defendants would have occurred if the erroneously admitted extrinsic evidence had not been admitted (68 Cal. 2d 512, 526-532) .

In Keith v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 521, 103 Cal. Rptr. 314 , plaintiffs were the owners of two homes, access to which was over an easement that had been granted to plaintiffs by a deed. Defendant owned a large tract of land surrounding plaintiffs' lots, including the land across which the plaintiffs' easement passed. Ignoring plaintiff's warnings that they would stand on their rights, defendant began building an alternate road for plaintiffs to use and intended to close the existing easement and build a retention basin where the easement was located. Plaintiffs brought an action to enjoin interference with their easement and sought a preliminary injunction. The superior court denied the preliminary injunction, and plaintiffs sought a writ of mandate in the court of appeal to compel the superior court to grant the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal granted the writ requiring the superior court to vacate its order denying the preliminary injunction, noting that plaintiff was entitled to a preliminary injunction to prohibit defendant's threatened closure of the easement. The court pointed out that denial of the injunction would leave defendant free to rip up plaintiff's road and construct a retention basin in its place; at the end of the trial, the court would be required to choose between a mandatory injunction requiring defendant to restore the premises at great expense or limit plaintiffs' recovery to monetary damages. Thus, to refuse an injunction in such a situation would be to give defendant a private right of eminent domain. The court observed that the doctrine of balancing of conveniences offered no justification for refusing to enjoin a prospective willful trespass. The fact that courts are reluctant in some cases to order the destruction of an expensive encroaching structure was, it noted, an excellent additional reason for granting a preliminary injunction before the new structure was commenced (26 Cal. App. 3d 521, 524-527) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Easement

Watson v. Heger (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 417, 120 P.2d 153 , involved the question of whether an easement of ingress and egress, that had been created by reservation in a grant deed and that had not been abandoned by acts of the present owner of the dominant tenement, entitled the present owner of the servient tenement to a permanent injunction restraining any trespass on her property beyond the strict limits of the easement. The superior court determined this question against plaintiff, but the court of appeal reversed and ordered the judgment amended to grant the injunctive relief sought. It stated that the only right that the owner of the dominant tenement had was to use the easement for ingress and egress strictly within the limits of the easement. Because the trial court specifically found that immediately prior to the time of trial defendants had continually trespassed on plaintiff's property but that the number of trespasses was unascertainable, the court of appeal held that there should have been a decree enjoining future trespasses (48 Cal. App. 2d 417, 421) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.181

§ 225.181 Supporting Contention for Issuance of Mandatory Injunction Against Encroachment--Equitable Relief Warranted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

ISSUANCE OF A MANDATORY INJUNCTION FOR REMOVAL OF DEFENDANT'S ENCROACHMENT ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE DEFENDANT WAS WILLFUL IN ERECTING THE ENCROACHMENT, WILL NOT SUFFER A DISPROPORTIONATE HARDSHIP BY ITS REMOVAL, AND PLAINTIFF WILL EXPERIENCE IRREPARABLE INJURY IF THE ENCROACHMENT IS ALLOWED TO CONTINUE.

A. Doubtful Encroachment Cases Seeking Mandatory Injunction Decided in Plaintiff's Favor. The court has some discretion in determining whether to grant or deny a mandatory injunction in an encroachment case. The court should begin with the premise that the defendant is a wrongdoer and that the plaintiff's property has been occupied, and should decide doubtful cases in favor of the plaintiff (Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562, 250 P.2d 660).

B. Mandatory Injunction Will Be Granted Unless Defendant Is Innocent, Plaintiff Will Not Suffer Irreparable Injury, and Hardships Are Disproportionate. A mandatory injunction for the removal of an encroachment should be granted unless the court makes three findings: that the defendant is innocent, that the plaintiff will not suffer irreparable injury, and that the hardship to the defendant by granting the injunction is greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused to the plaintiff (D'Andrea v. Pringle (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 695, 52 Cal. Rptr. 606 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660).

[Optional] C. Court Need Not Balance Conveniences if Defendant Acted Knowingly or if Defendant's Negligence

Is Sole Proximate Cause of Encroachment. If the defendant encroaches on the plaintiff's adjoining property, and the court finds that there is irreparable injury or that the defendant was not innocent, it should grant an injunction. When the defendants acted knowingly, or if the defendant's negligence was the sole proximate cause of the encroachment, the court need not balance the conveniences, and a mandatory injunction is appropriate (Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 858, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896 ; Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 564-565, 250 P.2d 660).

D. Willfulness or Lack of Good Faith Indicate Lack of Innocence. The defendant is not innocent if the encroachment is willful. To be willful, the defendant must not only know that he or she is building on the plantiff's land, but act without a good faith belief that he or she has a right to do so (Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 859-860, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896).

[Optional] E. Irreparable Injury Determined by Present or Future Use. In determining whether or not irreparable injury will occur, the court may look to the plaintiff's future plans for the property when those plans are affected by the encroachment (Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 860, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of equitable relief in the form of a mandatory injunction to remove an encroachment. Legal relief in the form of damages or ejectment is the usual remedy in a trespass action, and injunctive relief will be granted only when defendant is not innocent, the harm to defendant is not disproportionate, and the damage to plaintiff is irreparable.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of removal of an encroachment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating that defendant knew that defendant's building was encroaching on plaintiff's land as it was being constructed, but ignored plaintiff's protests, and completed construction of the encroachment.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to encroachments, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to easements, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 240, Easements (Matthew Bender). For discussion of Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 525-534, a procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the granting of injunctive relief, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.183 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doubtful Encroachment Cases Seeking Mandatory Injunction Decided in Plaintiff's Favor

In Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 250 P.2d 660 , plaintiff and defendants, adjoining landowners, had purchased their lots from the same person, although defendants acquired theirs some time before plaintiff. Relying on the seller's representation of the boundary, and making a measurement error, defendants constructed various structures which encroached by a small amount on plaintiff's land. All but one of the encroachments were built before plaintiff bought his lot. Although the encroachments did not adversely affect any existing use of plaintiff's unimproved land, he claimed they would interfere with unspecified future development plans. Some damage was caused by sand and water accumulating on plaintiff's land. Plaintiff brought an action for a mandatory injunction to compel removal and for damages. Defendants cross complained to quiet their title to the area occupied by the encroachments. The trial court found that the area encroached was of little value and that damage to plaintiff was minimal; that defendants were negligent in relying on the seller's statement and in their measurements; that it would be inequitable to compel defendants to remove the encroachments, the value of which greatly exceeded the land occupied; and that plaintiff's proposed use of the land would not be seriously impaired if title were quieted in favor of defendant. The trial court ruled that the encroachments were on plaintiff's land, and offered defendants an election either to accept a mandatory injunction for removal and to pay a small amount of damages, or pay a large amount of damages, accept an injunction prohibiting further intrusion, and secure a decree quieting their title. Defendants elected the latter alternative and the court entered that judgment. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court made a thorough review of the law concerning encroachments, and noted that there is authority indicating that the trial court has no discretion, may not balance the hardships between the parties, and must grant the injunction compelling removal, regardless of the fact that the relative hardship and expense to defendants far outweighs the inconvenience to plaintiff caused by the continuance of the encroachment. However, the court agreed with the weight of authority that allows the trial court some discretion to determine whether to grant or deny a mandatory injunction. In exercising that discretion, and in weighing the relative hardships, a court should consider various factors. The court should start with the premise that defendant is a wrongdoer, and that the plaintiff's property has been occupied. Thus, doubtful cases should be decided in favor of the plaintiff. In order to deny the injunction, certain factors must be present: (1) the defendant must be innocent, the encroachment must not be the result of the defendant's willful act, and perhaps not the result of the defendant's negligence; (2) if the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury by the encroachment, the injunction should be granted regardless of the injury to the defendant, except, perhaps, when the rights of the public will be adversely affected; and (3) the hardship to the defendant by the granting of the injunction must be greatly disproportionate to the hardship caused the plaintiff by the continuance of the encroachment and this must be clearly evident and proved by the defendant. If these factors exist, the injunction should be denied (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563) . Thus, for a defendant to be entitled to the benefits of the relative hardship doctrine, the trespass must not have been willful, but the result of an innocent mistake or inadvertence, which implies that the defendant must not have been negligent (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 563-564) . If the defendant is negligent and that negligence is the sole proximate cause of the encroachment, that defendant should be barred from invoking the doctrine. But when a plaintiff's conduct also contributes to the situation, the trier of fact is entitled to weigh the hardships each may suffer, and the negligence of one against the other (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 564) . In this case, the court found error with the trial court findings and resultant rulings that basically allowed defendant to choose between a mandatory injunction or damages (114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 565) .

[b] Mandatory Injunction Will Be Granted Unless Defendant Is Innocent, Plaintiff Will Not Suffer Irreparable Injury, and Hardships Are Disproportionate

In D'Andrea v. Pringle (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 52 Cal. Rptr. 606 , plaintiffs, adjoining landowners of defendants, brought an action to obtain the removal of that portion of a building constructed on adjoining land which encroached on plaintiffs' properties. Defendants were the owner of the land and his lessee, who constructed the building. Plaintiffs informed defendants of the encroachment from the time construction of the building was begun and provided copies of two surveys indicating the encroachment. Defendants claimed that their own survey revealed that the building was entirely within defendant's land and so they continued construction. The trial court found that the building did encroach, but refused to grant an injunction compelling removal and granted defendants an easement across plaintiff's property for the life of the building, subject to a payment of damages. Defendant appealed the amount of the damage award. Plaintiffs cross appealed the entire judgment.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded. The court cited the following rule: in actions between adjoining landowners, when the defendant occupies the plaintiff's property without privilege, an injunction is granted to remove the encroachment, but when the encroachment does not irreparably injure the plaintiff, was innocently made, and when the cost of removal would be great compared to the inconvenience caused the plaintiff by the continuance of the encroachment, the court may, in its discretion, deny the injunction and compel the plaintiff to accept damages (243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 695) . The court found the trial court's findings on these factors to be inconclusive, as they were not findings of ultimate fact but conclusions of law not supported by any facts found. Accordingly, they must be disregarded (243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 695-696) . The crucial issue was whether the encroachment was innocently made. A defendant is not innocent if the encroachment is willful; to be willful, a defendant must not only know that he or she is building on the plaintiff's land, but act without a good faith belief that he or she has a right to do so. The trial court made no conclusions about whether defendants' activities were done innocently or in good faith, and its findings were not determinative. It found that defendants were put on notice that construction was on plaintiffs' property and that the construction continued over their objections, which suggests a lack of good faith. Yet the finding that defendants relied on a survey by a licensed surveyor does not compel or warrant the conclusion that defendants acted innocently or in good faith. The trial court must determine whether defendants were justified in their reliance on their survey (243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 696-698) . The court also found that the damage award was not supported by the record, as no evidence was introduced as to the value of plaintiffs' land or the reasonable value of its use. The judgment must be reversed because the findings of fact as to whether the encroachment irreparably injured plaintiffs, whether it was innocently made, and whether the cost of removal would be great compared to the inconvenience caused plaintiff by the continuance were not decided by the trial court. The court ordered that they be decided on remand, and that the court may receive additional evidence (243 Cal. App. 2d 689, 698-699) .

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 225.181[3][a].

[c] Court Need Not Balance Conveniences if Defendant Acted Knowingly or if Defendant's Negligence Is Sole Proximate Cause of Encroachment

In Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896 , defendant Haun leased a building to defendant restaurant. Haun later leased adjacent property to a parking lot. Shortly thereafter defendant restaurant began using a strip of the land leased to the parking lot for storing garbage. The lessee of the parking lot did not object and erected iron posts marking the strip. Later Haun leased the parking lot to defendant store, providing that defendant restaurant could enter on the land at reasonable hours for the removal of garbage. Later defendant store subleased to plaintiff, with the same garbage provision. After the iron posts were knocked down, plaintiff painted a white line to mark the strip. After notification from the health and fire departments that the continued storage was violative of code, with the permission of defendant Haun, defendant restaurant began construction of an extension of his building to enclose the strip. Plaintiff protested the encroachment on plaintiff's property and demanded that the work be stopped. Defendant disregarded the notice and completed the extension. Plaintiff brought an action seeking a mandatory injunction compelling defendant to remove the extension and asking for a declaration of rights and duties under the lease and sublease. The trial court found that defendant had acquired no right to construct the extension. The trial court denied the injunction, but awarded damages against defendant restaurant and entered judgment for defendants Haun and defendant store. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded with instructions to determine on the basis of the evidence whether the encroachment was innocent. When a defendant without privilege occupies the plaintiff's adjoining property, an injunction is granted to remove the encroachment. But when the encroachment does not irreparably injure the plaintiff, was innocently made, and when the cost of removal would be great compared to the inconvenience caused to the plaintiff by the continuance of the encroachment, the equity court may, in its discretion, deny the injunction and compel the plaintiff to accept damages. After disagreeing with defendant's contention that granting injunctions is only appropriate for injuries to freehold interests, the Court examined the trial court's finding that none of the factors necessitating an injunction existed. Plaintiff contended that defendant restaurant was not innocent. A defendant is not innocent if the encroachment on the plaintiff's land is willful. To be willful, a defendant must not only know that he or she is building on the plaintiff's land, but act without a good faith belief that he or she has a right to do so. The evidence on the good faith issue was conflicting; defendant alleged that plaintiff induced belief of the right to act, while plaintiff alleged that defendant's continued construction after objection suggested a lack of good faith. The trial court made no conclusive findings on the conflicting evidence, but only stated that the encroachment was not mere inadvertence and that plaintiff did not expressly consent to the construction. Noting that intent does not determine innocence and express consent is not the only way to induce belief, the Court stated that the issue was whether defendant restaurant acted in good faith or in willful disregard of plaintiff's rights. Since the trial court failed to make a finding on this crucial issue, the judgment was reversed (61 Cal. 2d 855, 859-860) . Plaintiff also contended that the trial court erred in finding no irreparable injury. It argued that it might make use of the property before its lease expired, although it had not yet done so. Because plaintiff had not contended that any of its present plans were hampered by the encroachment, the trial court properly relied on the present use and nature of the land in ascertaining whether there was irreparable injury (61 Cal. 2d 855, 860) .

Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 225.181[3][a].

[d] Willfulness or Lack of Good Faith Indicate Lack of Innocence

Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896 , is discussed in § 225.181[3][c].

[e] Irreparable Injury Determined by Present or Future Use

Brown Derby Hollywood Corp. v. Hatton (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 855, 40 Cal. Rptr. 848, 395 P.2d 896 , is discussed in § 225.181[3][c].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Need Not Balance Conveniences if Defendant Acted Knowingly or if Defendant's Negligence Is Sole Proximate Cause of Encroachment

The facts and procedural background of City of Dunsmuir v. Silva (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 317 P.2d 653 , are discussed in § 225.180[3][f]. The court of appeal affirmed injunctive relief. The court said that the facts indicated the inapplicability of the doctrine of balancing hardships. There were constant protests by plaintiffs from the beginning of construction, the permit granted gave no authority to interfere with plaintiffs' easement rights, and defendants defiantly continued to build their garage as an encroachment. The encroachment could be rectified at a moderate cost in view of the number of person whose rights were being invaded by the continuance of the structure (154 Cal. App. 2d 825, 828) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.182

§ 225.182 Opposing Contention for Issuance of Prohibitory Injunction Against Trespass--Equitable Relief Not Warranted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE DENIED ANY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR THE ALLEGED TRESPASS BECAUSE _____ [THE INJURIES TO PLAINTIFF, IF ANY, ARE NOT IRREPARABLE and/or PLAINTIFF HAS AN ADEQUATE LEGAL REMEDY].

A. Injunctive Relief Only Available When Legal Remedy Is Inadequate or Injury Is Irreparable. If no irreparable injury will result from the trespass, or if there is a complete and adequate remedy at law, injunctive relief will not be granted. An irreparable injury can be indicated by the nature of the injury itself, or from the want of responsibility in the party threatening its commission (Randall v. Freed (1908) 154 Cal. 299, 302, 97 P. 669 ; Leach v. Day (1865) 27 Cal. 644, 645-647 ; see Civ. Code § 3422(1), (2); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)).

[Optional] B. Completed Trespass Does Not Warrant Injunctive Relief. A court will not interpose to restrain a trespasser simply because he or she is a trespasser, unless the evidence indicates that the trespass already committed will probably be repeated indefinitely or is of a continuing nature (Church of Christ of Long Beach v. Harper (1927) 83 Cal. App 41, 46, 256 P. 476).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that injunctive relief against a trespass is appropriate. The ground of opposition set forth is that there is no need for equitable relief as the legal remedies are adequate and the injury, if any, is not irreparable.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the adequacy of the legal remedies. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts describing an isolated incident of trespass with no threat of recurrence, as might result from an entry to recover an item of personal property on plaintiff's land.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.180.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 525-534, a procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing the granting of injunctive relief, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunctive Relief Only Available When Legal Remedy Is Inadequate or Injury Is Irreparable

In Randall v. Freed (1908) 154 Cal. 299, 97 P. 669 , plaintiff brought an action for damages for battery against defendants. Defendant counterclaimed for trespass and nuisance, alleging that plaintiff wrongfully and maliciously entered his home, disturbed the peace of his family, and attacked defendant, and that he merely defended himself against plaintiff. Defendant also alleged that plaintiff made repeated threats to enter his home. The trial court judgment was for defendant on both causes, and included an injunction enjoining plaintiff from entering defendant's home or disturbing the peace of his family. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court modified the judgment by striking the injunctive relief, but otherwise affirmed it. The Court found that the facts afforded no basis for an injunction. The threatened acts consisted merely of repeated trespasses and the use of offensive language. It did not appear that any irreparable injury would result from the commission of the threatened acts, nor that, if they were committed, defendant would not have a complete and adequate remedy at law. Before a court will interfere to restrain a trespass, it must appear that the injury to result will be irreparable (154 Cal. 299, 301-302) .

In Leach v. Day (1865) 27 Cal. 644 , defendant, under a claim of right, entered plaintiff's property, tore down some lengths of plaintiff's fence, and threatened to do it again if plaintiff should put the fence back up. Defendant's claim was based on a pretended order and was no defense. Plaintiff brought an action in trespass seeking damages and injunctive relief. Defendant's demurrer was overruled. The trial court awarded an injunction against defendant. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded. The Court discussed in great detail the law concerning equitable relief in trespass cases and how plaintiff's case did not merit equitable relief. No reasons were given as to why plaintiff did not have an adequate and complete remedy at law, as was apparently available. When there is an adequate legal remedy, equity will not interfere, but will leave plaintiff to an action at law. Defendant's acts had none of those elements which lie at the foundation of equitable interference in trespass cases. There was no ground for saying that defendant will continue his acts after the court has once determined the right under which he claimed to act. The threatened trespass was also not irreparable, either from the nature of the injury itself, or from the want of responsibility of the party threatening its commission (27 Cal. 644, 645-646) . Equity will interpose in a trespass case for the purpose of quieting a possession or preventing a multiplicity of actions, when the value of an inheritance is put in jeopardy, or when irreparable mischief is threatened. Defendant's acts did not come within any of these exceptions (27 Cal. 644, 646-647) .

[b] Completed Trespass Does Not Warrant Injunctive Relief

In Church of Christ of Long Beach v. Harper (1927) 83 Cal. App 41, 256 P. 476 , two people allegedly interfered with Sunday services in a church by both trying to lead the singing and then trying to teach the Sunday school classes. Plaintiff parishioners brought an action for trespass, seeking injunctive relief. They alleged that defendants trespassed into the church, took control, and refused to allow plaintiffs to conduct their services, and that defendants would continue to so act. Plaintiffs did not indicate that defendants ever again interfered with or threatened to interfere with the Sunday services. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiffs were not excluded from the church and the action did not cause them great or irreparable injury. An injunction should not issue if plaintiffs would not suffer great or irreparable injury if defendants were not enjoined, defendants had not threatened and did not intend to take possession of the church and exclude plaintiffs, and the only interference shown was a completed act (83 Cal. App 41, 44) . The acts of defendants amounted to no more than an act of trespass, not continuous, but completed on that day. Continuance not being threatened, the finding of the trial court was correct. A court will not interpose to restrain a trespasser simply because he or she is a trespasser, unless the evidence indicates that the trespass already committed will probably be repeated indefinitely or is of a continuing nature (83 Cal. App 41, 46) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.183

§ 225.183 Opposing Contention for Issuance of Mandatory Injunction Against Encroachment--Equitable Relief Not Warranted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ISSUANCE OF A MANDATORY INJUNCTION TO PLAINTIFF FOR REMOVAL OF AN ENCROACHMENT BY DEFENDANT IS NOT WARRANTED BY THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CASE BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED IN GOOD FAITH, PLAINTIFF SUSTAINED MINIMAL INJURIES FOR WHICH DAMAGES ARE ADEQUATE, [PLAINTIFF UNNECESSARILY DELAYED IN SEEKING AN INJUNCTION], AND DEFENDANT WOULD UNDERGO SEVERE HARDSHIP IF FORCED TO REMOVE THE ENCROACHMENT.

A. Mandatory Injunction Denied if Relative Hardships Balanced and Essential Elements for Issuance Not Satisfied. If the circumstances are appropriate to apply the doctrine of balancing the hardships, a mandatory injunction requiring the removal of an encroachment may be denied if the encroachment was innocently made, the cost of removal would be great in comparison to the inconvenience caused the plaintiff by the continuance of the encroachment, and the plaintiff is not irreparably injured by the encroachment (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375).

B. Showing of Irreparable Injury to Defendant Requires Balancing. The showing of irreparable injury to defendant will require the court to balance the hardships (Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375).

[Optional] C. Adequate Compensation in Damages Precludes Issuance of Mandatory Injunction. Mandatory injunction is a drastic remedy and when its issuance will work an inequitable burden on the defendant, the court may, in the exercise of sound discretion, refuse to grant it when the injured party may be adequately compensated in damages (Baglione v. Leue (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 731, 734, 325 P.2d 471).

[Optional] D. Promise of Prior Owner as Evidence of Good Faith. The good faith or innocence of the party causing the encroachment may be shown in various ways, among them the promise of the owner of the encroached land at the time of encroachment (Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438-439, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375).

[Optional] E. Mandatory Injunction Denied if Injury Minimal. A mandatory injunction is not appropriate when the injury is so slight as to bring it within the maxim de minimis, or when full compensation can be made in damages, since a bare legal right will not support issuance of a mandatory injunction (McKean v. Alliance Land Co. (1927) 200 Cal. 396, 399, 253 P. 134 ; Nebel v. Guyer (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 30, 32-34, 221 P.2d 337).

[Optional] F. Mandatory Injunction Denied if Delay in Assertion of Right. A mandatory injunction may be denied when there has been a long or unnecessary delay in asserting the right, coupled with an adequate legal remedy and minimal injury (Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 ; Rothaermel v. Amerige (1921) 55 Cal. App 273, 275-276, 203 P. 833).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that equitable relief in the form of a mandatory injunction is appropriate in a case of an encroachment. The ground of opposition set forth is that the relative hardships to the parties should be balanced, which shows that defendant acted innocently, that defendant's removal costs would be great in comparison to plaintiff's inconvenience, and that plaintiff is not irreparably injured by the encroachment. If appropriate, plaintiff's delay in seeking a mandatory injunction should also be raised.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the adequacy of the legal remedies or the burden to defendant of removal. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts describing a previous owner's acquiescence to the installation of pipes and the promise of execution of an easement as indications of good faith, which will require a balancing of the hardships by which defendant can show minimal injury to plaintiff and undue hardship to defendant if removal is required.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.181.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to encroachments, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to easements, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 240, Easements (Matthew Bender). For discussion of Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 525-534, a procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the granting of injunctive relief, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Relative Hardships Balanced and Essential Elements for Issuance Not Satisfied

In Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , plaintiff was the owner of a dominant tenement and defendant was the owner of the adjoining servient tenement over which a driveway easement ran. Plaintiff's predecessor constructed a house and driveway, portions of which encroached on the grantor's property. After defendant acquired the adjoining servient tenement from the grantor, she built a fence on the property line, very close to plaintiff's house, making some types of access difficult. Plaintiff brought an action, seeking both an injunction enjoining defendant from obstructing the driveway and damages. Plaintiff alleged that defendant wrongfully obstructed the driveway with the fence, interfering with her sole access from the street to her garage. Defendant cross complained, alleging wrongful construction and maintenance on her property of portions of the house and other structures. She sought a mandatory injunction ordering the removal of all alleged encroachments, and damages. The trial court rendered judgment for defendant. In addition to finding that the fence did not unreasonably interfere with plaintiff's enjoyment of the driveway easement, the court ordered plaintiff to remove all encroachments from defendant's property; no damages were awarded. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment only as to the decrees that the grant conveyed a bare right to use the easement way for ingrees and egrees of vehicular traffic, and that the fence erected by defendant did not unreasonably impede the easement rights. In all other respects the judgment was reversed and remanded. The trial court abused its discretion in ordering removal of the encroachments on defendant's property instead of awarding damages because the encroachments were causing little or nominal damage to defendant and the cost of their removal would be proportionately great to plaintiff. Removal of the encroachments would involve considerable expense as well as disfigurement of plaintiff's house, which may be an irreparable injury to plaintiff (58 Cal. 2d 513, 520) . The relative hardship doctrine, which the court found to be applicable, requires a court, in determining whether a mandatory injunction should issue ordering removal of encroachments, to consider various factors, including the good faith of the party who constructed the encroachment and the proportional hardship to the parties. Also relevant were plaintiff's delay in seeking the mandatory injunction and whether plaintiff would suffer irreparable injury from the encroachment. The various facts of the case did not support the issuance of the injunction ordering removal of the encroachments: the encroachments were not constructed negligently or in willful disregard of the property rights of defendant; the cost of removal would be disproportionate to any damages caused to defendant's property; defendant delayed eight years before seeking legal relief; and defendant's property rights would not be irreparably injured by the continued encroachments. Plaintiff obtained no rights in fee in defendant's property, since on the removal of plaintiff's present structures, any encroachment rights terminate (58 Cal. 2d 513, 520-521) .

In Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375 , plaintiffs and defendants were adjoining landowners. By an agreement between defendants' and plaintiffs' predecessors in interest a public sewer line was placed on plaintiffs' private driveway; defendants then ran their sewer line across plaintiffs' property to connect with the public sewer line. Plaintiffs' predecessors had agreed to execute an easement for recording, but never did so. After plaintiffs purchased the property they filed an action to quiet title to their property and for an injunction requiring defendants to remove their sewer line. Plaintiffs' affidavit stated that they were unaware of the sewer line at the time of purchase and that its location would greatly hamper orderly development of the property, materially reducing its value. Defendants' affidavit stated that due to the contour of the land there was no other direction for sewage from defendants' property to flow, that it was necessary that the line be located where it was, and that plaintiffs should have known of the presence of the sewer line. Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment and to strike defendants' answer was granted. The trial court judgment quieted title against any claim of defendants and ordered them to remove the sewer line from plaintiff's property. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and said it was error for the court to issue a mandatory injunction for the removal of the sewer line. When the circumstances are appropriate, the trial court should consider the doctrine of balancing the hardships. That doctrine says that when the encroachment does not irreparably injure a plaintiff, was innocently made, and when the cost of removal would be great compared to the inconvenience caused to the plaintiff by the continuance of the encroachment, the court may, in its discretion, deny the injunction and compel the plaintiff to accept damages. Defendant must show irreparable injury as a necessary element of a defense based on a balancing of hardships (200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438) . Plaintiffs' affidavit made out an encroachment but gave no information about the extent of the encroachment, or its inconvenience to plaintiffs, except through a vague reference to orderly development. Defendant's affidavit was sufficient to show that it may be appropriate to balance the hardships or conveniences. The promise of plaintiffs' grantors to allow the pipes to be built on their land and to execute an easement may show that the encroachment was innocent (200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438-439) .

[b] Showing of Irreparable Injury to Defendant Requires Balancing

Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375 , is discussed in § 225.183[3][a].

[c] Adequate Compensation in Damages Precludes Issuance of Mandatory Injunction

In Baglione v. Leue (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 731, 325 P.2d 471 , plaintiffs and defendants were adjoining landowners. Defendants' predecessors in interest had constructed a building at a point they believed to be five feet from the boundary between the properties; in fact, it was within inches of the line, and the corner eaves of the building protruded on plaintiffs' land by a little more than one foot. After a survey revealed the encroachment, plaintiffs brought an action seeking a mandatory injunction to compel the removal of the encroachment, rents for the use and occupation of the property, and, alternatively, damages. The trial court refused the injunction, granted an easement to defendants to the extent of the encroachment for the duration of the building, and awarded damages. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiffs contended that the trial court should have issued an injunction ordering removal. The court of appeal said that the remedy of injunction is a drastic one and when its issuance will work an inequitable burden on defendant, the court may, in the exercise of sound discretion, refuse to grant it when the injured party may be adequately compensated in damages. As applied in encroachment cases, if the injury suffered by the encroachment is small and the harm to be suffered by compelling its removal great, the courts have uniformly refused to issue an injunction, leaving the complaining party to an action for damages. The court cited Christensen v. Tucker (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 554, 562-563, 250 P.2d 660 [see § 225.181[3][a]], for the basic premise that when the encroachment does not irreparably injure the plaintiff, was innocently made, and the cost of removal would be great compared to the inconvenience caused the plaintiff by the continuance, the court may deny the injunction (160 Cal. App. 2d 731, 734) . The court found that the evidence supported the trial court's findings that the former owners were without fault and not negligent in constructing the building; that the encroachment was the result of a mistake; that the cost of removal would be great; that the encroachment did not interfere with the present use of the property; that plaintiffs were not suffering any damage; and that the hardship to defendants if the injunction was granted would be disproportionate to the hardship caused plaintiffs by the encroachment (160 Cal. App. 2d 731, 735) . The court also noted that it was within the court's power to protect defendants in the use of the building by granting them an easement and awarding plaintiffs damages (160 Cal. App. 2d 731, 735-736) .

[d] Promise of Prior Owner As Evidence of Good Faith

Scheble v. Nell (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 435, 438, 19 Cal. Rptr. 375 , is discussed in § 225.183[3][a].

[e] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Injury Minimal

In McKean v. Alliance Land Co. (1927) 200 Cal. 396, 253 P. 134 , plaintiffs and defendants were adjoining landowners. Relying on their understanding of the boundary between the lots, defendants erected a garage which encroached on plaintiffs' lot by one half inch, according to their measurements. Plaintiffs sued to enjoin defendants from depriving them of their property, alleging an encroachment of closer to one foot than one half inch, for abatement of the nuisance, and for damages. The evidence concerning the actual boundary was conflicting. The court found the boundary to be that asserted by defendants, the building encroaching by one half inch. The trial court awarded plaintiffs $10 in damages. Plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that as a general rule a mandatory injunction should be denied when the injury is so slight as to bring it within the maxim de minimis, or when full compensation can be made in damages. If there is an adequate remedy at law, no relief will be granted, especially when there are no appreciable damages and its issuance would require the performance of an act which would be difficult and involve considerable expense (200 Cal. 396, 399) .

In Nebel v. Guyer (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 30, 221 P.2d 337 , plaintiffs purchased the property on which they were formerly tenants. Plaintiffs participated in the measurement of the parcel, indicated by a notched fence and a pin. Defendants later purchased an adjoining lot from the former owner of plaintiffs' lot. After the purchase, defendants constructed a medical office building entirely within their lot as indicated by the markings. After the building was completed, plaintiffs had a survey taken and discovered that the lot sold to them extended three feet into the street. Plaintiffs sought to move the boundary to compensate for the three feet, thereby resulting in defendants' building encroaching on their property by approximately two feet. Plaintiffs brought an action to compel removal of that portion of the building. The court suggested that plaintiffs amend their complaint and convert their action into one for damages. Plaintiffs failed to amend. The trial court issued judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Regardless of any encroachment, plaintiffs failed to show that they were damaged by the alleged encroachment. Plaintiffs felt imposed on only after the survey, and were relying on a bare legal right unsupported by any damages shown in asking for removal of the claimed encroachment (99 Cal. App. 2d 30, 32-33) . The court said that when the encroachment is slight, the cost of removal great, and the corresponding benefit to the adjoining owner small, or compensation in damages can be had, a court will usually decline to compel removal, and will leave plaintiff to a legal remedy (99 Cal. App. 2d 30, 33-34) . The court concluded that an order for removal was properly denied because plaintiffs could be compensated adequately for actual damages suffered, if any, and that no proper grounds for compelling a removal of defendant's building had been shown (99 Cal. App. 2d 30, 34) .

[f] Mandatory Injunction Denied if Delay in Assertion of Right

Dolske v. Gormley (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 513, 25 Cal. Rptr. 270, 375 P.2d 174 , is discussed in § 225.183[3][a].

In Rothaermel v. Amerige (1921) 55 Cal. App 273, 203 P. 833 , plaintiff's predecessor in interest erected a building within two inches of a boundary line of property later acquired by defendant. Shortly afterward, defendant's predecessor in interest built a brick wall along the boundary line, which later became part of a building on defendant's land. Plaintiff's predecessor brought an action in ejectment against defendant, contending that the foundation of the wall encroached by one and one half inches. The trial court directed defendant to vacate and restore to plaintiff the encroached land. Defendant did not remove the wall, but relinquished all right to the encroaching foundation and fixtures of the wall. After plaintiff acquired the property he brought an action seeking an affirmative judgment requiring defendant to remove the encroachment. The trial court judgment ordered defendant to remove the encroachment within six months. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court characterized the action as one involving a bare legal right, unsupported by any damage shown, to be enforced by a mandatory writ requiring affirmative personal action to be taken. Plaintiff had no right to claim equitable relief. Mandatory injunctions are most frequently employed in trespasses of an irreparable nature, and as a general rule the court should not interfere by way of mandatory injunction, even though the injury is clearly established, when there has been a long delay in asserting the right and a remedy exists at law, or when the injury is so slight as to bring it within the maxim de minimus or when full compensation can be made in damages. If there is an adequate remedy at law, no relief will be granted, especially when there is no appreciable damage and the issuance of the injunction would require the performance of an act that is difficult and involve considerable expense ( 55 Cal. App 273, 275-276) .

157 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.184-225.199

[Reserved]

§§ 225.184[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
1. Consent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.200

§ 225.200 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Consent to Entry

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S LAND [WAS or WERE] NOT A TRESPASS BECAUSE THE ENTRY WAS MADE WITH PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT.

[EITHER]

A. Entry After Express Consent Is Not Trespass. A person who has the express permission of a possessor of property to enter the property does not commit a trespass. [Permission to enter may be expressly granted by contract] (Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6, 16-17, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915).

[AND/OR]

B. Entry After Implied Consent Is Not Trespass. Although not directly invited onto property, a person may be impliedly invited by the circumstances and habits of the vicinity. Custom determines the limit of an implied invitation. [A person may by implication invite others to come to his or her house as they may have proper occasion either for business, courtesy, information, or other purposes] (Duval v. Rowell (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 897, 900-901 , 269 P.2d 142 ; Cambou v. Marty (1929) 98 Cal. App 598, 601, 277 P. 365).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Consent May Be Implied Beyond Express Consent. A person's consent to an act creating an impracticable situation necessarily implies consent to the acts necessary to remedy the situation (Strodel v. Wilcox (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 781, 785-786, 291 P.2d 95).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that defendant committed a trespass by entering plaintiff's property. The ground of opposition set forth is that defendant's entry was made pursuant to an express or implied consent by plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of entry pursuant to consent. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts establishing that express consent to entry was given by plaintiff through a written agreement with defendant.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see Ch. California Forms of Pleading and Practice, 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 225.201 -225.203 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry After Express Consent Is Not Trespass

In Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , defendant executed two promissory notes in plaintiff's favor. The notes were secured by defendant's business personal property, inventory, and accounts receivable as evidenced by security agreements executed by defendant. Included in the security agreements were express provisions allowing plaintiff, in the event of default, to enter onto defendant's premises to take possession of the collateral (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6) . Following defendant's default on the notes, plaintiff sued defendant and was granted a permanent injunction by the trial court restraining defendant from preventing or interfering with plaintiff's entrance on defendant's premises. Thereafter, plaintiff entered defendant's premises to recover the collateral and defendant filed a cross-complaint seeking damages for trespass. The trial court entered summary judgment for plaintiff and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the trial court improperly entered summary judgment because there were triable issues of fact concerning whether or not plaintiff exceeded the consent to enter defendant's premises. However, the court stated that the essence of the cause of action for trespass is an unauthorized entry onto the land of another. The court noted that the security agreements expressly authorized plaintiff's entry onto defendant's premises for the purpose of recovering the collateral. Because plaintiff's entry was a consensual entry provided for by contract, no trespass occurred if plaintiff did not exceed the express consent conferred by the security agreements (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 16-17) .

[b] Entry After Implied Consent Is Not Trespass

In Duval v. Rowell (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 897 , 269 P.2d 142 , plaintiff raised chickens on a ranch owned by a third party who occasionally resided in a small house on the ranch. Defendants owned and operated a grocery store, and as they owned the only telephone in the area, were in the habit of accepting messages for their neighbors and delivering them at the end of the day. One defendant received a message for the ranch owner and drove to the ranch to transmit it. Rather than getting out of the car in the presence of two growling dogs, defendant honked the car horn. Plaintiff alleged that the horn frightened his chickens, resulting in their panic and the death of over 700 chickens. Plaintiff brought an action against defendants for damages resulting from trespass. The trial court judgment was for defendants. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. If defendant was a trespasser, his liability would result from all injurious consequences flowing from the trespass which were the natural and proximate result of his conduct. Defendant was not directly invited on the premises by plaintiff, but was impliedly invited by the circumstances and habits of the vicinity. Although defendant had never been on the premises before, his status as the owner of the only telephone in the neighborhood entitled him to assume that he would be welcome at isolated ranches for either business or social purposes. Every person, by implication, invites others to come to his or her house as they may have proper occasion for either business, courtesy, information, or other purpose. Custom must determine what the limit of that implied invitation is (124 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 897, 899-901) .

In Cambou v. Marty (1929) 98 Cal. App. 598, 277 P. 365 , plaintiffs, ranch owners and the parents of two young sons, were related to defendants, and the homes of each had always open to each other. The younger defendant came to see plaintiffs on an urgent errand. While driving off the premises, defendant ran over and killed plaintiffs' younger son. Plaintiffs brought a negligence action against defendants. The trial court judgment was for plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. In examining whether the finding of negligence was proper, the court analyzed defendant's status on plaintiffs' land, as this was important to the law of negligence at that time. The court concluded that he was not a trespasser. Every person, by implication, invites others to come to his or her house as they may have proper occasion either for business, courtesy, information, or some other purpose. Custom must determine what the limit of that implied invitation is (98 Cal. App. 598, 601) .

[c] Consent May Be Implied Beyond Express Consent

In Strodel v. Wilcox (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 781, 291 P.2d 95 , plaintiff and defendants were adjoining property owners. Defendants erected a building which encroached on plaintiff's property. Plaintiff waived the right to an injunction. During the construction and in order to meet the approval of the building inspector, the contractor attached metal flashing to the encroaching wall, extending the entire length and overlapping plaintiff's wall by two inches; this was done with the full knowledge of defendant. Plaintiff brought an action seeking a mandatory injunction compelling defendants to remove the flashing. Defendants argued that the flashing was erected and constructed with the consent of plaintiff, for the benefit of both parties, and to comply with safety provisions. The trial court found that the intruding flashing was not detrimental to plaintiff's property but was beneficial, and concluded that plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction but to a small amount of damages, and that defendants were entitled to an easement on plaintiff's property to the extent of the encroachment of the flashing. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. If the encroachment was a trespass, it was intentional, not innocent, and the trial court could not deny a mandatory injunction or balance the conveniences of the parties. The court concluded, however, that the encroachment was not a trespass, but was an act to which plaintiff consented. Although there was no evidence of any express consent being given by plaintiff to the erection of the flashing, plaintiff did consent to the sealing off of the areaway in such a manner that debris collecting therein could not be removed and that rain water would accumulate and stagnate, which would have violated heath and safety provisions. Inasmuch as the only practicable manner to avoid this condition was to cover the top to prevent the entry of debris and water, plaintiff's consent thereto was necessarily implied. The parties did not intend to create a situation which could only lead to a violation by both of them of code provisions and which would be detrimental to both of them (137 Cal. App. 2d 781, 785-786) .

159 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
1. Consent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.201

§ 225.201 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--No Consent to Entry

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S LAND [WAS or WERE] A TRESPASS BECAUSE [IT WAS or THEY WERE] MADE WITHOUT THE CONSENT OR AUTHORIZATION OF PLAINTIFF.

A. Entry Without Consent Is Trespass. One who enters the premises in possession of another without an invitation, express or implied, and does so out of curiosity, personal purposes, or convenience, and not in the performance of any duty to the owner is a trespasser (see Bauman v. Beaujean (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 384, 389, 53 Cal. Rptr. 55).

[Optional] B. Admission to Entering Property Without Consent. A person's admission to an entry on the premises of another without the permission or consent of the possessor is sufficient to support an award of damages for trespass (see Cornell v. Sennes (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 126, 136, 95 Cal. Rptr. 728).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an entry without plaintiff's consent occurred, resulting in a trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of lack of consent for entry. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating that defendant entered plaintiff's property without an invitation or any authorization from plaintiff.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention set out in § 225.200.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Without Consent Is Trespass

In Bauman v. Beaujean (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 384, 53 Cal. Rptr. 55 , plaintiffs' young daughter had been bitten by a dog while in defendant's backyard. Plaintiffs brought a personal injury action. The trial court ordered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The case was governed by Civ. Code § 3342, which specifies liability for dog bites occurring when the victim is lawfully on the defendant dog owner's premises. The court focused on whether the girl was in defendants' backyard on the express or implied invitation of the defendants. The court found no invitation and defined a trespasser as one who goes on the premises of another without invitation, express or implied, and does so out of curiosity, or for his or her own purposes or convenience, and not in the performance of any duty to the owner. It is not necessary that one making such an entry should have any unlawful intent. A child, even of tender years, may be a trespasser (244 Cal. App. 2d 384, 389) .

[b] Admission to Entering Property Without Consent

In Cornell v. Sennes (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 126, 95 Cal. Rptr. 728 , defendant owners leased their restaurant property to defendant corporation. One defendant, an officer of the company, in his individual capacity, contracted with plaintiff for the purchase and installation of air-conditioning units. The contract stated that the units were personal property, title remained in the seller until they were completely paid for, and the purchaser was to hold seller harmless for any damages in the installation or removal of the equipment. Shortly after installation, the corporation vacated the premises. Plaintiff recorded a claim of lien against the property and filed a court action. Plaintiffs entered the premises and removed the units without permission from defendant owners. Defendant officer defaulted and judgment was entered against him. He did not appeal. Defendant owners counterclaimed and cross complained, alleging that the units were affixed, plaintiffs entered wrongfully, and defendants' premises were damaged. They sought judgment for the value of the units allegedly converted by plaintiff, interest on that amount, and damages for trespass to realty. The trial court judgment was entered against defendant owners, establishing a mechanic's lien against the real property and declaring foreclosure of the lien. It ordered that defendant owners take nothing by their counterclaim and cross complaint. Defendant owners appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment as to defendant owners, and ordered a retrial to determine whether the equipment became affixed to the realty. The court reviewed the rules regarding the assessment of damages, including for trespass. Although plaintiff admitted entering the premises and removing the equipment without the permission or consent of the owners, no finding was made on this issue. Such an admission is sufficient to support an award of damages for trespass (18 Cal. App. 3d 126, 136) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
1. Consent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.202

§ 225.202 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Consent Given Was Ineffective Due to Lack of Authority

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY [WAS or WERE] A TRESPASS BECAUSE [IT WAS or THEY WERE] MADE PURSUANT TO A CONSENT THAT WAS INEFFECTIVE DUE TO LACK OF PROPER AUTHORITY.

[EITHER]

Consent to Entry by Possessor Does Not Authorize Interference With Ownership Interests. The possessor of land controls the right to possession, and unauthorized interference supports a trespass action by the possessor; the property owner may recover for damage to the ownership interest. The possessor's consent to entry does not authorize interference with the property owner's rights (Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 774-775, 778, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308).

[OR]

Owner Lacks Authority to Consent to Entry When Possessory Right Belongs to Another. Permission to enter given by the owner after the right to possession of the land has been transferred to another is ineffective. An entry pursuant to an ineffective permission is a trespass (Jensen v. Shadburne (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 624, 626, 302 P.2d 824).

[OR]

Entry Pursuant to Consent in Excess of Agent's Authority Constitutes Trespass. An invitation in excess of the authority of an agent is not a proper invitation, and an entry pursuant to that invitation is a trespass (MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 387, 74 P.2d 276).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a trespass occurred because the alleged consent was ineffective. Consent can be ineffective when given by one without proper authority, as by an owner with no right to possession or by an agent without that authority. Consent given by the possessor for entry is also ineffective to permit interference with ownership rights.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of lack of effective consent for entry. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel may allege facts indicating that the consent to enter was given by one without the proper authority, for example, consent given by the owner after the owner had transferred the right to possession to another who did not consent to the entry.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.200.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent to Entry by Possessor Does Not Authorize Interference With Ownership Interests

The facts and procedural background of Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 184 Cal. Rptr. 308 , are discussed in § 225.60[3][a]. The court of appeal addressed defendant's claim that the possessor had given consent, thereby disallowing a trespass action. The court said that the possessor's consent to entry did not justify interference with plaintiff's ownership rights. A good faith belief that entry has been authorized or permitted provides no excuse for infringement of property rights if consent was not in fact given by the property owner whose rights are at issue. By showing that they gave no authorization, plaintiffs established the lack of consent necessary to support their action for injury to their ownership interest (133 Cal. App. 3d 769, 778) .

[b] Owner Lacks Authority to Consent to Entry When Possessory Right Belongs to Another

In Jensen v. Shadburne (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 624, 302 P.2d 824 , plaintiffs' diversion works on a creek were destroyed by a storm, requiring the construction of new diversion works at a point upstream on the creek through the extension of a ditch. Permission to extend the ditch was given by the owner of the property over which the extension was to be made. Before that permission was given, the property had been leased to a lumber company. Later that lease was assigned as security to a company, which went into possession and employed defendant as its agent in actual possession. Defendant was also a beneficiary of a deed of trust on the property. Acting on the permission given by the owner, plaintiffs extended their ditch. Defendant then had the ditch filled. Plaintiffs brought suit for damages and to prevent defendant from interfering with the ditch. Defendant counterclaimed for damages from trespass. The trial court found that plaintiffs had no right to change their diversion point and that the extension of the ditch was a trespass. The court awarded defendant damages. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Trespass was committed by plaintiffs because the permission granted to enter was ineffective (145 Cal. App. 2d 624, 626) . The assignment, coupled with the right to possession of the land, was a sufficient interest to justify the possessor's repelling the trespass by reasonable means. The filling-in of the ditch was a permissible act on the part of the lessee's assignee in possession (145 Cal. App. 2d 624, 626-627) .

[c] Entry Pursuant to Consent in Excess of Agent's Authority Constitutes Trespass

The facts and procedural background of MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 74 P.2d 276 , are discussed in § 225.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court discussed the apparent authority of an agent to invite persons on defendant's property. Since plaintiff's invitation was in excess of the authority of the film company, plaintiff had not been properly invited, but was a trespasser on the premises, or one who was on the land of others without their consent and against their will. Every wrongful entry on land in the possession of the owner is a trespass (10 Cal. 2d 383, 387) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
1. Consent

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.203

§ 225.203 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Conditional Consent Given Was Exceeded

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY], MADE PURSUANT TO A CONDITIONAL CONSENT, [WAS or WERE] A TRESPASS BECAUSE [IT or THEY] EXCEEDED THE CONDITION.

A. Entry Made in Excess of Conditional Consent Constitutes Trespass. A conditional or restricted consent to enter land creates a privilege to enter only as long as the condition or restriction is complied with. Divergent conduct which exceeds the restricted consent is a trespass (Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915).

[Optional] B. Condition May Be Implied From Invitation. An invitation to enter property [and deposit materials] implies compliance with its terms, and an indiscriminate entry [and deposit] exceeds the consent to enter (Hancock v. George R. Curtis Paving Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App 624, 626-627, 300 P. 65).

[Optional] C. Entry Complying With Condition Becomes Trespass When Condition Is Violated. When a person is allowed to enter property for a particular purpose, the moment that privilege is abused or any act hostile to the interests of the possessor committed, a trespass occurs (Rogers v. Duhart (1893) 97 Cal. 500, 506, 32 P. 570).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a conditional consent for an entry was exceeded by defendant, resulting in a trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exceeding the conditional consent for entry. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts illustrating that defendant exceeded the conditional consent to enter property to protect his or her security interest by ejecting plaintiff's employees and changing the locks on the doors.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention set out in § 225.200.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Made in Excess of Conditional Consent Constitutes Trespass

The facts and procedural background of Civic W. Corp. v. Zila Indus., Inc. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 135 Cal. Rptr. 915 , are discussed in § 225.100[3][b]. The court of appeal said that a trespass may occur if a party enters property pursuant to a limited consent, for example, limited as to purpose or place, and proceeds to exceed those limits by divergent conduct on the land. A conditional or restricted consent to enter land creates a privilege to do so only in so far as the condition or restriction is complied with. The privilege conferred must be exercised at a reasonable time and in a reasonable manner (66 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17) .

[b] Condition May Be Implied From Invitation

The facts and procedural background of Hancock v. George R. Curtis Paving Co. (1931) 114 Cal. App. 624, 300 P. 65 , are discussed in § 225.140[3][b]. The court of appeal disagreed with defendant's contention that it had merely complied with plaintiffs' invitation to deposit dirt. An indiscriminate deposit of a large number of cubic yards of earth and rocks over the entire unoccupied portion of a lot was not warranted by a mere invitation to furnish dirt to fill a depression. The owners were not consulted as to the quantity or location of the deposit. The only fill which had existed on the lot was situated where the sign was, and it had been previously filled to the top. Defendant was not warranted in dumping on another portion of the lot the quantity and character of material deposited (114 Cal. App. 624, 626-627) .

[c] Entry Complying With Condition Becomes Trespass When Condition Is Violated

In Rogers v. Duhart (1893) 97 Cal. 500, 32 P. 570 , plaintiff took possession of a parcel of land under an eight-month lease. Defendant kept several thousand grazing animals on the land for several months without plaintiff's permission. Although defendant had the right to pasture his cattle on the land the previous year, in consideration of his watching over the land and keeping the cattle of all other parties off the land, he was told to remove the animals prior to the effective date of plaintiff's lease. Plaintiff brought an action in trespass seeking damages. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment and an order denying a new trial. After discussing plaintiff's ability to maintain a trespass action, the Court said that defendant had committed a trespass. Although defendant had been on the land for a particular purpose, the moment he abused the privilege, or committed any act hostile to the interests of his employer or licensor, he became a trespasser (97 Cal. 500, 506) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Entry Made in Excess of Conditional Consent Constitutes Trespass

In Mangini v. Aerojet-Gen. Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 281 Cal. Rptr. 827 , owners of real property brought an action on various theories against a party who leased the property from prior owners and who allegedly contaminated the property with hazardous waste during the lease. The defendant demurred, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. The court of appeal reversed. With regard to the plaintiffs' cause of action for trespass, the defendant contended that one cannot trespass on land in his or her own possession. The court observed, however, that the defendant's lease did not give the defendant unrestricted possession of the land. The court noted that a trespass may occur if the party, entering land pursuant to a limited consent (that is, limited as to purpose or place), proceeds to exceed those limits by divergent conduct on the land of another. Under the plaintiffs' construction of the lease, the defendant wrongfully deposited hazardous waste on the property and failed to clean it up as the lease required. These pleaded facts, concluded the court, are sufficient to state a cause of action for trespass (230 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1141) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
1. Consent

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.204-225.219

[Reserved]

§§ 225.204[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
2. Necessity

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.220

§ 225.220 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Entry by Necessity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S LAND WAS _____ [WAS or WERE] NOT A TRESPASS BECAUSE _____ [IT or THEY] REASONABLY APPEARED TO BE NECESSARY TO PREVENT SERIOUS HARM TO _____ [LIFE and/or PROPERTY] AND THUS _____ [WAS or WERE] PRIVILEGED.

A. Entry Privileged if it Appears Reasonably Necessary to Prevent Harm. A person is privileged to enter and remain on the land of another if the entry appears to be reasonably necessary to prevent serious harm to a person, land or chattels of the other party, unless the actor has reason to know that the one for whose benefit the entry is made is unwilling that the action be taken (see People v. Roberts (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 374, 377, 303 P.2d 721 ; People v. Parra (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 729, 732-733, 106 Cal. Rptr. 531).

[Optional] B. Destruction of Property May Be Justified by Necessity. Property may be destroyed to prevent the spread of a disaster; if apparent or actual necessity can be shown, it justifies an act otherwise tortious (Surocco v. Geary (1853) 3 Cal. 69, 73-74).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that defendant's entry was a trespass. The ground of opposition set forth is that defendant's entry reasonably appeared necessary to prevent serious harm to life or property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of entry privileged by necessity. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel could include facts stating that defendant heard screams coming from plaintiff's apartment, and defendant entered the apartment after his or her offers to provide assistance went unanswered.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities in § 225.221 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry Privileged if it Appears Reasonably Necessary to Prevent Harm

In People v. Roberts (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 374, 303 P.2d 721 after a music store was burglarized, the police traced defendant, who had been seen near the store, to an apartment. Police officers went to the apartment, knocked on the door, and entered the apartment after hearing several moans or groans that sounded as if a person inside was in distress. While looking for the moaning person, they noticed a new radio and noted the serial number. When they discovered the serial number to be the same as part of the stolen merchandise, the police obtained a search warrant, served it, and seized the radio. The owner of the apartment testified that defendant had given her the radio. The trial court judgment was for conviction of second degree burglary. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that the search warrant was the product of an illegal search. The court said that if the conduct of the officers in entering or searching was unlawful, the search warrant subsequently obtained was invalid. The court upheld the trial court finding that the officers reasonably believed that someone inside the apartment was in distress and in need of assistance and that they entered for the purpose of giving aid. Necessity often justifies an action which would otherwise constitute a trespass, as when the act is prompted by the motive of preserving life or property and reasonably appears to the actor to be necessary for that purpose (47 Cal. 2d 374, 377) . Because there was substantial evidence that the entry was lawful for the purpose of rendering aid, the officers were justified in entering each room of the apartment to look for someone in distress (47 Cal. 2d 374, 380) .

In People v. Parra (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 729, 106 Cal. Rptr. 531 , police officers responded to a night report that the front door of defendant's florist shop was open. The officers entered the shop to secure it, contacting the owner, and finding out if everything was all right in the shop. During the search for the owner's identity an officer opened a desk drawer and saw what appeared to be narcotics. Narcotics officers were called and confirmed the substance as heroin. When defendant arrived he was arrested. The trial court judgment was for conviction of defendant for the possession of heroin for sale. Defendant's motion to suppress certain evidence essential to establish guilt was denied. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court responded to questions about the validity of the search and seizure, saying that the officers' sole purpose in entering the shop was to provide for security. The court paraphrased the Restatement Second of Torts, noting that one is privileged to enter and remain on the land in the possession of another if it reasonably appears necessary to prevent serious harm to the land or chattels of the other party, unless the actor has reason to know that the one for whose benefit the entry is made is unwilling that the action be taken. The court stated that necessity often justifies an action which would otherwise constitute a trespass, such as an act prompted by the motive of preserving life or property that reasonably appears to the actor to be necessary for that purpose. The court found that the officers' entry to protect the shop and its contents was privileged (30 Cal. App. 3d 729, 732-733) .

[b] Destruction of Property May Be Justified by Necessity

In Surocco v. Geary (1853) 3 Cal. 69 , defendant, mayor of a city, entered plaintiffs' building which served as a residence and a store, and ordered it destroyed to prevent the spread of a fire then raging through the city. After the building was blown up and totally destroyed, plaintiffs brought an action for damages. Defendant claimed that the fire was a public nuisance, that plaintiffs' building would have been destroyed anyway, and that its destruction was necessary to prevent the spread to adjacent buildings. The trial court judgment was for plaintiffs. Defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court framed the question as whether the person who destroys the house of another in good faith and under apparent necessity during the time of a fire, for the purpose of saving the adjacent buildings, and stopping the fire's progress, can be held personally liable in an action by the owner of the property destroyed. The Court said that the common law adopts the principles of the natural law, which allows the right to destroy property to prevent the spread of disaster, and places the justification of an act otherwise tortious on the ground of necessity (3 Cal. 69, 73) . If a building is torn down without apparent or actual necessity, the actor would be liable in trespass. But in every case the necessity must be clearly shown (3 Cal. 69, 74) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
2. Necessity

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.221

§ 225.221 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Entry for Unlawful or Abusive Purpose

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] EXCEEDED ANY SEMBLANCE OF AUTHORITY OR NECESSITY AND [WAS or WERE] A TRESPASS BECAUSE [IT WAS or THEY WERE] MADE FOR AN _____ [UNLAWFUL and/or ABUSIVE] PURPOSE.

A. Entry for Unlawful or Abusive Purpose Constitutes Trespass. An entry on property in possession of another for an unlawful or abusive purpose is wrongful and constitutes a trespass (see Foley v. Martin (1904) 142 Cal. 256, 259-260, 71 P. 165 ; Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 52, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486).

[Optional] B. Unjustifiable Interference With Business Relations Is Abusive Entry. An entry for the purpose of harassing an owner, giving a business a bad reputation, compelling an owner to change lawful business policies, or unjustifiably interfering with business relations is abusive and wrongful and constitutes a trespass (Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 51-52, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an entry on property was for an unlawful or abusive purpose and was a trespass.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the unlawful purpose of the entry. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts describing defendant's conduct in interfering with plaintiff's business by harassing patrons and implying that the business attracted persons who were lawbreakers.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.220.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Entry for Unlawful or Abusive Purpose Constitutes Trespass

In Foley v. Martin (1904) 142 Cal. 256, 71 P. 165 , defendants, a sheriff and deputies, were given a summons to deliver to plaintiff. The deputies went to plaintiff's residence, and after finding the front and back doors locked, one deputy climbed through a window in a back pantry closet by using a ladder and then let the other deputy in. Both of them searched the house. Plaintiff, an invalid, was confined to his bed. When the deputies arrived at his locked bedroom door they forced open the door, breaking the door knob and woodwork, after failing to open it through chiselling and kicking. Plaintiff brought an action for damages in trespass. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendants appealed from the judgment and from an order denying a new trial.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, but reversed the exemplary damage award against the sheriff based on the malice of his deputies. The court found that defendants unlawfully entered the house and were guilty of gross and willful oppression and of willful abuse of their authority as law enforcement officers. A sheriff has no authority to break into a residence for the service of process in a civil action, and commits a trespass by so doing (142 Cal. 256, 260) .

In Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486 , plaintiff was the owner and operator of a drive-in theater. Defendants, county sheriffs, responded to a call from plaintiff to arrest a patron causing a disturbance, and ordered all patrons to leave the theater, ordered the theater closed, and searched the patrons' automobiles. Some months later defendants entered the theater, searched all the automobiles, and forced patrons to get out of their automobiles. Defendants caused the newspaper publication of two stories, one to the effect that they had closed plaintiff's theater, implying that the closure was permanent, and one describing the search in terms implying that plaintiff's patrons were habitual lawbreakers. On many occasions thereafter defendant entered the theater without invitation and without any legal process, patrolling the area, showing spotlights on the automobiles, and trespassing on plaintiff's premises. Plaintiff brought an action seeking injunctive relief, including an order enjoining threatened repeated trespasses. The trial court judgment was in favor of defendants after an order sustaining an objection to the introduction of any evidence by plaintiff on the ground that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Plaintiff appealed the judgment and the order denying plaintiff's motion for a new trial.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, finding that the complaint alleged facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against defendants, and dismissed the attempted appeal from the order denying the motion for a new trial. Plaintiff alleged that defendants went on his property, searched his patrons and ordered them to leave not for the purpose of enforcing the law but to harass plaintiff, give his business a bad reputation, and compel him to change his business operations, and that defendants' actions in entering plaintiff's premises was a trespass. Although the entry of a law enforcement officer on the land of another in the lawful discharge of duties, as a general rule, is not wrongful or actionable, an entry for the purpose of harassing the owner, giving the business a bad reputation, compelling the owner to change lawful business policy, or unjustifiably interfering with the business relations is unauthorized, wrongful, and actionable. The facts alleged, by attaching an unlawful purpose to the entry, negated its lawful character (195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 51-52) .

[b] Unjustifiable Interference With Business Relations Is Abusive Entry

Uptown Enters. v. Strand (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 45, 15 Cal. Rptr. 486 , is discussed in § 225.221[3][a].

165 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
2. Necessity

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.222-225.239

[Reserved]

§§ 225.222[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.240

§ 225.240 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Civ. Code § 3346(c); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 338(b), 349 3/4]--In General

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR TRESPASS IS BARRED BECAUSE IT WAS NOT BROUGHT WITHIN THE PERIOD ESTABLISHED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

[EITHER]

A. Action for Trespass on or Injury to Real Property Must Be Commenced Within Three Years. The period for the commencement of an action for trespass on or injury to real property is three years. If more than three years has elapsed before the commencement of the action, an action for trespass is barred (Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b); Gale v. McDaniel (1887) 72 Cal. 334, 335, 13 P. 871 ; Castelletto v. Bendon (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65, 13 Cal. Rptr. 907).

[OR]

A. Action for Trespass to Timber Must Be Commenced Within Five Years. An action for trespass or wrongful injuries to timber, trees, or underwood on another's land, or for their removal from another's land, [when committed in reliance on a survey of boundary lines made by a surveyor licensed under the laws of California], must be brought within five years after the date of trespass (Civ. Code § 3346(c)).

[OR]

A. Action for Underground Trespass by Drilling Well Must Be Commenced Within 180 Days. An action for underground trespass by means of a well drilled for oil or gas from a surface location on land other than real property in which plaintiff has some right, title, or interest must be brought within 180 days (Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4; see also Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1440-1441, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337).

[CONTINUE]

B. Application of Statute of Limitations Not Affected by Procedure Used to Enforce Right. The statutes providing periods of limitation for trespass actions refer to actions for the enforcement of various rights; the right sought to be enforced and the nature of the cause of action, not the form of procedure or action, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (Williams v. Southern P. R. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 624, 628, 89 P. 599 (trespass action barred despite request for alternative equitable relief)).

[Optional] C. Statute of Limitations Begins Running When Permanent Trespass Is Committed. When the trespass is of a permanent nature, all damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, and the entire cause of action accrues when the injury is suffered or the trespass committed. The action must be commenced within the statutory period after the doing of the wrongful act (Rankin v. DeBare (1928) 205 Cal. 639, 641, 271 P. 1050 ; Williams v. Southern P. R. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 624, 626, 89 P. 599).

[Add points and authorities, if appropriate, concerning more specific issues regarding the effect of the statute of limitation (see, e.g., § 225.241).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that defendant committed a trespass. The ground of opposition is that an action in trespass is barred by the statute of limitations. The type of trespass will determine the applicable statute of limitations.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the bar of the statute of limitations, for example, by demurrer. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that the entry took place more than three years before plaintiff commenced the action.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the limitation of actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions involving logs and timber, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 350, Logs and Timber (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to actions involving oil and gas wells, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 393, Oil and Gas (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the barring of actions by the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in §§ 225.242 and 225.243 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Trespass on or Injury to Real Property Must Be Commenced Within Three Years

In Gale v. McDaniel (1887) 72 Cal. 334, 13 P. 871 , plaintiff's stable and saloon and the personal property in them were destroyed by a fire. Plaintiff brought an action for damages against defendant. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer and entered judgment in favor of defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. More than three years elapsed before the commencement of the action. Whether it be considered as an action for trespass to real property or for injury to personal property, it was barred by limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 338. The fact that plaintiff did not know who did the wrong did not affect the running of the statute (72 Cal. 334, 335) .

In Castelletto v. Bendon (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 13 Cal. Rptr. 907 , three of defendants' buildings intruded on plaintiffs' adjoining land. Although the buildings had intruded for at least 12 years, neither defendants nor plaintiffs were aware of the intrusion. When plaintiffs learned of the intrusion they brought an action alleging trespass and nuisance, seeking the removal of the buildings. The trial court entered judgment in favor of plaintiffs, awarding damages and providing for the ultimate removal of the buildings. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Defendants alleged that the action was precluded by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(2) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]. Plaintiffs argued that the statute of limitations did not start to run until the facts were known to plaintiffs. The court responded that although that is the rule in some situations, it is not the rule in the case of this trespass. Some subsections of Code Civ. Proc. § 338 state that the cause of action is not deemed to have accrued until discovery by the aggrieved party, but the subsection controlling trespass is not one of those, and that omission is intentional. When the location of the buildings is quite apparent, the failure of the owner of the trespassed property to know of the trespass does not toll the running of the time until he was aware of the trespass (193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65-66) . Plaintiffs also argued that the trespass was not permanent in nature and did not come within the rule requiring that a trespass action be brought within three years of the trespassing act. In refuting this argument the court reviewed the cases interpreting permanent and continuing trespasses, and concluded that construction of a building partly on the land of another is a permanent encroachment and the entire cause of action for past as well as prospective damages accrues when the trespass occurs (193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 66-67) .

[b] Action for Underground Trespass by Drilling Well Must Be Commenced Within 180 Days

Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 , involved a winter storm in January 1988 that forced ocean waves over a breakwater in a city harbor, resulting in substantial damage to a nearby inn. Plaintiff, the inn's insurer, paid the loss and filed suit against the city in January 1989, claiming that the breakwater had not been constructed high enough to restrain the storm waves. Plaintiff subsequently learned that the breakwater had subsided due to oil drilling conducted beneath the harbor by defendants. In January 1992, the trial court granted plaintiff's motion to amend its complaint to add defendants and allege additional theories of recovery, including trespass. Defendants demurred to plaintiff's amended pleadings on the grounds that the 180-day statute of limitations provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4 barred the cause of action for trespass. The trial court sustained the demurrers and dismissed the action, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of the cause of action for trespass, but held that Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4 did not apply to bar plaintiff's causes of action for nuisance, negligence, dangerous condition of public property, inverse condemnation, breach of lease, strict liability for ultrahazardous activity, or violation of Harb. & Nav. Code § 294 (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1443) . The court of appeal rejected plaintiff's claim that Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4 applied only to cases, unlike plaintiff's, involving an oil driller's unintentional underground trespass caused by "slant" or "whipstocking" drilling activities that succeeded in pumping oil from the property of another (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1440-1441) . Citing both the plain language of the statute (which refers to actions for damages on account of an underground trespass by means of a well drilled for oil from a surface location on land other than real property in which the aggrieved party has some right, title, or interest) and its legislative history, the court held that plaintiff's cause of action for trespass was barred because it was not filed within the requisite 180-day period (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1441) . However, the court noted that the plaintiffs' remaining causes of action did not involve a trespass onto plaintiff's land and were therefore not barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 349 3/4; the court characterized defendants' contention that the ocean waves amounted to an indirect trespass by their drilling activity as an "artfully creative way to try and escape responsibility for their alleged misconduct under cover of Section 349 3/4" (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1442-1443) .

[c] Application of Statute of Limitations Not Affected by Procedure Used to Enforce Right

In Williams v. Southern P. R. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 624, 89 P. 599 , defendant railroad, without consent or condemnation proceedings, entered plaintiff's land while it belonged to plaintiff's predecessor, built a railroad track, and has ever since operated the railroad and occupied the land to the exclusion of plaintiff, depriving plaintiff of access to the adjoining street and diminishing the value of the premises. More than four years after the entry, plaintiff brought an action in trespass for damages or for a permanent injunction. Defendant demurrered on several grounds, among them the bar of the statute of limitations. The trial court sustained the demurrer and entered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court thoroughly discussed the statute of limitations applicable in trespass cases. Code Civ. Proc. § 338 provides that a trespass action must be brought within three years after the accruing of the cause of action (150 Cal. 624, 625) . Plaintiff sought to avoid the statutory bar by contending that the injury complained of is continuing in nature and a new cause of action arises at each moment of its continuance, and that successive actions might be brought in which plaintiff might recover damages accruing up to the time of the commencement of the action. This rule properly applies when the trespass is temporary in character, since it is not presumed that the wrongful conduct will be continued. The plaintiff in such cases can recover only the damages which have accrued up to the institution of the action. It follows that an action may be brought at any time to recover the damages which have accrued within the statutory period, although the original trespass occurred before that period, provided that the plaintiff has not permitted such time to elapse as will vest in the defendant a right by prescription (150 Cal. 624, 626) . On the other hand, when the trespass is permanent in nature, all damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, and the entire cause of action accrues when the injury is inflicted or the trespass committed. Whenever by one act a permanent injury is done, the damages are assessed once for all. The action must consequently be commenced within the statutory period after the commission of the wrongful act (150 Cal. 624, 626) . Authority indicates that the construction and operation of a railroad is permanent, and an action to recover damages must be commenced within the statutory period after the original infliction of the injury. An action is barred if not commenced within three years after the railroad was built and operated (150 Cal. 624, 626) . Plaintiff himself treated the injury as permanent by alleging that the acts of defendant diminished the value of the premises. This was intended to show a permanent injury to the land, not merely damage sustained up to the time of filing the complaint. The fact that plaintiff sought an injunction as alternative relief to damages did not affect the Court's conclusion that the action was barred. There is but one form of civil action. The sections providing periods of limitation refer to actions for the enforcement of various rights, and are to be applied so as to make the right sought to be enforced, and not a form of procedure, the test as to whether or not the statute applies.

The nature of the cause of action, and not the form of the actions, determines the applicability of the statute of limitations (150 Cal. 624, 628) .

[d] Statute of Limitations Begins Running When Permanent Trespass Is Committed

In Rankin v. DeBare (1928) 205 Cal. 639, 271 P. 1050 , plaintiff and defendant were adjoining landowners. Defendant constructed a building on his lot, and a year later enlarged it. Four years later plaintiff informed defendant that the building was encroaching on plaintiff's property by inches and demanded its removal. When defendant refused, plaintiff brought an action for damages and restitution. Defendant cross complained and sought to quiet title. The trial court found against defendant on the cross complaint and entered judgment for plaintiff, awarding damages. Defendant and plaintiff both appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. Defendant contended that the cause of action was barred by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(2) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]. The Court noted that defendant's building rested on plaintiff's lot, but was not of a character to vest title in defendant by adverse possession. The injury or trespass was permanent in character. When the injury or trespass is of a permanent nature, all damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, and the entire cause of action accrues when the injury is suffered or the trespass committed. The action for trespass was not commenced until five years after the trespass was committed, and the action was barred (205 Cal. 639, 641) .

Williams v. Southern P..R. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 624, 89 P. 599 , is discussed in § 225.240[3][c].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.241

§ 225.241 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations--Knowledge of Trespass Is Not Necessary for Statute of Limitations to Run

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with general points and authorities supporting the contention that the action is barred by the statute of limitations (see, e.g., § 225.240).]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR TRESPASS IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S PROFESSED IGNORANCE OF _____ [WHO COMMITTED THE TRESPASS and/or THE FACT THAT A TRESPASS OF A PERMANENT NATURE EXISTED] DOES NOT TOLL THE RUNNING OF THE STATUTE.

Knowledge of Trespass Is Not Necessary for Statute of Limitations to Accrue. The plaintiff's ignorance of who committed the trespass or of the fact that a permanent trespass existed does not toll the running of the statute of limitations; discovery by the aggrieved party is not necessary for the statute to run (Gale v. McDaniel (1887) 72 Cal. 334, 335, 13 P. 871 ; Castelletto v. Bendon (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65-66, 13 Cal. Rptr. 907).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that defendant committed a trespass. The ground of opposition is that an action in trespass is barred by the statute of limitations despite plaintiff's ignorance of who committed the trespass or the fact that a permanent trespass existed.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of action barred by the statute of limitations (for example, in a demurrer). They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts showing that the entry took place more than three years before plaintiff commenced the action. Counsel might also include a description of the obvious and permanent nature of the trespass, such as a large building protruding on plaintiff's property, in anticipation of plaintiff's claim that the trespass was not apparent or was continuous.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to demurrers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the limitation of actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing the barring of actions by the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in §§ 225.242 and 225.243 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge of Trespass Is Not Necessary for Statute of Limitations to Accrue

The facts and procedural background of Gale v. McDaniel (1887) 72 Cal. 334, 13 P. 871 , are discussed in § 225.240[3][a]. The Supreme Court found that the action was barred by the statute of limitations, and that plaintiff's ignorance of who did the wrong did not affect the running of the statute (72 Cal. 334, 335) .

The facts and procedural background of Castelletto v. Bendon (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 13 Cal. Rptr. 907 , are discussed in § 225.240[3][a]. The court of appeal found that plaintiff's lack of knowledge of the facts did not toll the running of the statute of limitations. Although some subsections of Code Civ. Proc. § 338 state that the cause of action is not deemed to have accrued until discovery by the aggrieved party, the subsection controlling trespass does not include the statement, and that legislative omission is intentional. When the location of the buildings is quite apparent, the failure of the owner of the trespassed property to know of the trespass does not toll the running of the time until he or she is aware of the trespass (193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65-66) . The court also held that the building was of a permanent nature in order to invoke the rule that an action accrues when the injury is suffered or the trespass committed (193 Cal. App. 2d 64, 66-67) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.242

§ 225.242 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Trespass Is Continuing

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR TRESPASS IS TIMELY AND NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S TRESPASS IS CONTINUING OR TEMPORARY AND THE ACTION WAS BROUGHT WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD FOR THE ACTS BEING ALLEGED.

A. Statute of Limitations Does Not Begin Running From Date of Original Entry When Trespass Is Continuing. When a trespass consists of an entry of a character from which it is presumed that the trespass will be temporary rather than permanent, the statute does not begin to run from the date of original entry and successive trespasses give rise to successive causes of action (Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 272 P.2d 849 ; Lindberg v. Linder (1933) 133 Cal. App 213, 218, 23 P.2d 842).

B. Recovery for Continuing or Temporary Trespass as Measured by Damages Incurred Within Statutory Period Immediately Preceding Action. In a continuing or temporary trespass, an action may be brought at any time to recover the damages which have accrued within the statutory period (Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 272 P.2d 849 ; Lindberg v. Linder (1933) 133 Cal. App 213, 218, 23 P.2d 842).

C. Right to Successive Actions Preferred. In all cases of doubt regarding the permanency of an injury resulting from a trespass, the courts are inclined to favor the right of successive actions (Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 ; Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390, 272 P.2d 849).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the statute of limitations does not bar an action for trespass to real property because the trespass consists of a continuing series of incidents, and the action is brought within the statutory period for the incident for which damages are claimed.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the effect of the continuing nature of the trespass on the period of limitations. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel may include a description of defendant's periodic trespass by describing, for example, defendant's act of driving a truck across plaintiff's fields during extensive renovation and remodeling of defendant's property.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention set out in §§ 225.240 and 225.241.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to the limitation of actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing the barring of actions by the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Begin Running From Date of Original Entry When Trespass Is Continuing

In Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 272 P.2d 849 , the land of plaintiff and her husband, owned in joint tenancy, was between defendant's land and a county road. Plaintiff's husband granted the former owner of defendant's land an easement across the property. When the easement was granted, plaintiff and her husband did not have complete title to the land, but were purchasing it, and received a deed three years later. The evidence was conflicting but indicated that the easement road was closed and barricaded intermittently by plaintiff, and was used by defendant during different periods over the course of several years. Defendant brought a quiet title action concerning the easement and obtained a decree quieting her title to the easement. That order was later discharged by the court after plaintiff, who had not been included in the action, objected. Plaintiff brought an action in trespass seeking damages and injunctive relief restraining defendant from using the road. Defendant cross complained to quiet title to the easement. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff in both actions, but awarded no damages. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that the action was barred by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(2) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]), which provides that actions for trespass must be commenced within three years, since she began to use the road five years before the action was brought. The court stated that if a trespass consists of a physical entry on the lands of another and taking possession of the land under circumstances indicating an intention that the trespass shall be permanent, the law may regard the wrong-doing as complete at the time of the original entry and the statute of limitations runs from that time. On the other hand, if from the character of the trespass it is not to be presumed that the wrongful conduct will be continued, successive trespasses give rise to successive causes of action. In this case an action may be brought at any time to recover the damages which have accrued within the statutory period although the original trespass occurred before that period, provided that the plaintiff has not permitted enough time to elapse as will vest in defendant a right by prescription. In all cases of doubt regarding the permanency of the injury, the courts are inclined to favor the right of successive actions (126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 390) . The circumstances of defendant's nonuse of the road for long periods of time seemed to negate any intention that the trespass was to be permanent. Neither she nor her predecessor built the road, and they permitted it to fall into a state of disrepair through neglect and nonuse of the road. Thus, plaintiff's action was not barred (126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 391) .

In Lindberg v. Linder (1933) 133 Cal. App. 213, 23 P.2d 842 , defendants used plaintiffs' real property for storing lumber, machinery, and rubbish. Plaintiffs' lot adjoined another lot used by defendants for the same purpose with the owner's permission. Plaintiffs brought an action for trespass. Defendants alleged that the use of plaintiffs' lot was with their consent and knowledge. Plaintiffs alleged that they had requested defendants to clear the land on several occasions. The trial court refused to grant defendant's motions for nonsuit and a new trial and damages were awarded plaintiffs. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal dismissed the appeal from the order requesting a new trial and affirmed the judgment. Among their other contentions, defendants argued that plaintiffs' action was barred by the three-year statute of limitations for trespass actions because defendants had used the property for more than six years. The court did not agree, finding that if there was a trespass, it was a continuing trespass and the statute does not begin to run from the date of original entry; recovery may be had for a period of time not exceeding the statutory period immediately preceding filing of the action (133 Cal. App. 213, 218) .

[b] Recovery for Continuing or Temporary Trespass as Measured by Damages Incurred Within Statutory Period Immediately Preceeding Action

Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 272 P.2d 849 , is discussed in § 225.242[3][a].

Lindberg v. Linder (1933) 133 Cal. App. 213, 23 P.2d 842 , is discussed in § 225.242[3][a].

[c] Right to Successive Actions Preferred

Carbine v. Meyer (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 386, 272 P.2d 849 , is discussed in § 225.242[3][a].

The facts and procedural background of Polin v. Chung Cho (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 87 Cal. Rptr. 591 , are discussed in § 225.145[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment for defendant as to two causes of action, including the first which alleged the property injury, and affirmed as to the third cause. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(2) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)] provided a three-year statute of limitations for actions for trespass or injury to real property. The statute runs from the date the cause of action accrues. Defendants claimed the action was barred because the work was done over three years before plaintiffs' action. Plaintiffs did not allege that physical entry caused any damage; instead they alleged that the rainfall since completion of the ditch caused erosion on their land. The court held the statute did not run from the time the act of diversion was committed but from the date the injury resulting from the diversion was sustained. When a trespass is deemed permanent plaintiff may recover future damages in one lawsuit on the premise that the condition will exist forever. Because the rule is for the benefit of the plaintiff, the plaintiff will not be compelled to treat a condition as permanent. Nonetheless, with respect to buildings or railroads tortiously placed on a plaintiff's land, plaintiff is not permitted to consider the trespass continuing, but is required to consider the trespass permanent as of the date of completion of construction. Courts have held a plaintiff's cause of action barred if not brought within three years of that date. But when from the character of the trespass it is not to be presumed that the wrongful conduct will be continued, successive trespasses give rise to successive causes of actions, and an action may be brought at any time to recover the damages which have accrued within the statutory period, although the original trespass occurred before that period. In cases of doubt regarding the permanency of the injury, the courts are inclined to favor the right to successive actions. Every repetition of a continuing injury is a separate wrong for which the person injured may bring successive actions for damages until the wrong is abated, even though an action based on the original wrong may be barred. In doubtful cases the plaintiff should have an election to treat it as permanent or not (8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678) . Defendants asserted that plaintiffs elected to treat the trespass as permanent since they sought future damages. The court responded that since plaintiffs sought an injunction against defendants, the future damages referred to must be construed to mean those occurring between the time of filing the action and the time of trial. If plaintiffs recover damages on the premise that the trespass is permanent, they will be deemed to have waived the invasion and consented to the continued occupancy of the land. But if they obtain an injunction which will avert further damage, they are not entitled to damages beyond the date when the injunction is granted (8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678) . The court concluded that plaintiffs had pleaded a cause of action based on injury to real property (without regard to the trespass), but that if the cause of action must be deemed to be based on a trespass, the trespass alleged is continuing in nature (8 Cal. App. 3d 673, 679) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Begin Running From Date of Original Entry When Trespass Is Continuing

In Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 165 , plaintiff was a farm that sued an adjacent oil-producing field for a subsurface trespass. Defendant used unlined percolation pools to dispose of wastewater produced during the oil extraction process. This wastewater, which is high in salts and other minerals, seeped over time into the underground water on plaintiff's land, effectively reducing the quality of that water. A jury awarded plaintiff damages for the trespass, including damages avoided by defendant as a result of the trespass and restoration cost damages. Defendant appealed, arguing that the action was time-barred as a permanent trespass. The court of appeal disagreed. The court of appeal held that the trespass was a continuing trespass, and as such, the action was not time-barred. The court noted that the subsurface trespass caused by defendant's activity was continuing even at the time of trial and the impact of the intrusion will worsen over time. In addition, the record indicated that the trespass could be abated by some means. Defendant chose to use the unlined percolation pools because it was the cheapest way to dispose of the wastewater, thus maximizing profits. While defendant argued that the pools were a large, permanent structure, the court noted that the trespass was not the pools, but the wastewater permeating through the pools that caused the trespass (153 Cal. App. 4th 583, 594-597) .

In Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 796 , a landowner sued his vendor and the vendor's tenant for damages based on nuisance and trespass in the form of toxic contamination of the soil and ground water. The contamination was caused by leakage from underground petroleum storage tanks that had been last used (by the tenant) about three years before the plaintiff purchased the land. The plaintiff did not know about the tanks until more than a year after purchasing the land. The widespread extent of the contamination became known, after extensive sampling and testing, about a year after the plaintiff learned about the tanks. A little more than three years thereafter, the plaintiff filed the complaint. The trial court granted a defense motion for summary adjudication on the ground that both the nuisance action and the trespass action were barred by the three-year limitation on actions for trespass or injury to real property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]. On the plaintiff's petition for an extraordinary writ, the court of appeal directed the trial court to vacate its order and deny the defense motion. The issue was whether the nuisance and trespass were permanent (and therefore the actions were barred) or continuing (and the actions were not barred). The complaint did not reveal whether the plaintiff was proceeding on the theory of permanent nuisance/trespass or on the theory of continuing nuisance/trespass.

The court of appeal wrote its opinion with reference to the nuisance action. but stated that its opinion was equally applicable to the trespass action. The court observed that there is a judicial preference for viewing a nuisance as continuing and that if the question is close, the plaintiff should be allowed to elect one or the other characterization of the nuisance (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 678-679) . In this case, the plaintiff expressly made that election, in favor of a continuing nuisance, at the hearing on the defense motion for summary adjudication. (Arguably the plaintiff implicitly made the election by filing the complaint after expiration of the limitations period for an action based on a permanent nuisance (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 684) .) The court of appeal concluded that the question was close and therefore the trial court should have allowed the plaintiff to proceed. This conclusion was influenced primarily by the strong policy consideration that toxic contamination should be cleaned up as promptly and thoroughly as possible. Allowing the plaintiff to proceed would encourage private clean-up of toxic contamination with appropriate financial support from responsible persons (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 682) . The alternative would be enforcement proceedings by government agencies at public expense--at least in this case, because the plaintiff was not actually harmed by the toxic contamination, but only had a legal duty to clean it up (12 Cal. App. 4th 668, 683) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.243

§ 225.243 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Action Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Damages Must Be Sufficiently Appreciable for Period of Limitation to Run

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and may be combined with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities supporting the contention that defendant committed trespass (see, e.g., § 225.20).]

PLAINTIFF'S TRESPASS ACTION IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE IT WAS COMMENCED WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD FROM THE DATE THE INJURIES CAUSED BY THE TRESPASS BECAME SUFFICIENTLY APPRECIABLE TO A REASONABLE PERSON.

Period of Limitation Begins to Run When Damage Is Sufficiently Appreciable to Reasonable Person. The period of limitation in a trespass action begins to run when the damage caused by the trespass is sufficiently appreciable to a reasonable person; to hold otherwise would eliminate the injured party's remedy before he or she can know that an injury has occurred. [Thus, an action for consequential damages resulting from an underground trespass does not arise until there is surface damage that would put a reasonable person on notice] (see Mehl v. People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 710, 717, 119 Cal. Rptr. 625, 532 P.2d 489 ; Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 255, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the statute of limitations does not bar an action for trespass to real property because the damages were not sufficiently appreciable to indicate to a reasonable person that a trespass had occurred. The case on which the contention is based involved an underground trespass, but there may be other types of trespass not readily apparent.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the period of limitations beginning when damages are appreciable. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may allege facts describing defendant's trespass and the consequential damages which did not become obvious until much later than the date of entry, as might occur in a trespass beneath the surface of plaintiff's property.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention set out in §§ 225.240 and 225.241.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to the limitation of actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing the barring of actions by the statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Period of Limitation Begins to Run When Damage Is Sufficiently Appreciable to Reasonable Person

In Mehl v. People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 710, 119 Cal. Rptr. 625, 532 P.2d 489 , the state constructed a freeway near defendants' property, and to accommodate the natural drainage and freeway runoff, constructed a culvert which flowed on defendants' property. Shortly thereafter Los Angeles County condemned a drainage easement on defendants' land. The county filed an action to determine the compensation for its drainage easement on defendants' property. Defendants cross complained against the state in inverse condemnation for partial loss of their property as a result of the freeway construction. The trial court judgment awarded defendants damages, granted the state the right to discharge water on the property, and gave the county a drainage easement. The state appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded on the issue of damages and affirmed in all other respects. The Court rejected the state's contention that the action was barred by the statute of limitations set forth in former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(2) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b)]. Defendants had asserted that the state appropriated a drainage easement over their property. The date the taking occurred is not necessarily the date on which the period of limitation started to run. Rather, the period begins to run when the damage is sufficiently appreciable to a reasonable person. Although the state argued that the taking became appreciable when freeway drainage construction was completed, five years before the action was commenced, the Court agreed with the trial court's finding that defendants first became aware of the drainage system the year before the action was filed, and that prior to that time they had been unable to accurately determine the nature and extent of the taking. When the county informed them of the construction of a drainage system, defendants visited the property, inspected the state's culvert, and observed evidence of drainage flow on the property during heavy rains (13 Cal. 3d 710, 717) .

In Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127 , plaintiffs brought an action to recover damages resulting from earth movement underlying their lot and home. Plaintiffs had acquired their home as original purchasers in a subdivision in 1956, and brought an action for negligence at the end of 1960. The action was against several defendants involved in the construction of the house. The jury returned verdicts in favor of some defendants, and returned verdicts in favor of plaintiffs and against three defendants. One defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was denied. That defendant appealed from the judgment and from the order denying the motion. Another defendant's motion for a new trial was denied, and that defendant appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal modified the compensatory damage award, but otherwise affirmed. Among other issues, both defendants contended that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. The court stated that in negligence cases, the statute of limitations ordinarily does not commence to run until the damage to plaintiff occurs. This has also been the traditional approach for cases involving damages to real property caused by removal of lateral support (267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 254) . A cause of action for consequential damages resulting from an underground trespass does not arise until there is surface damage which would put a reasonable person on notice. To require an owner to take notice of a trespass on his or her underlying real property at the time it takes place is to require an impossibility; to hold that the statute begins to run at the date of the trespass would in most cases take away the remedy of the injured party before he or she can know that an injury occurred. The initial damage caused by the slipping of the underlying soil resulting from negligent filling, compaction, and inspection was not open to view. Until there was a subsidence or lateral movement causing changes to the surface soil or structures erected on it, one could not be aware of defective filling and compaction. Only when the consequential damage is sufficiently appreciable to a reasonable person may the owner be held to a duty of expeditiously pursuing his or her remedies. The time at which the consequential damage reached this point was a question of fact. The ultimate issue of whether the cause of action for negligence was barred by the statute of limitations became a mixed question of law and fact. It was proper to submit the issue to the jury, and there was substantial evidence to support the jury's resolution (267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 255) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.244

§ 225.244 Supporting Contention That No Trespass Occurred--Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas in Public Forum

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY _____ [WAS or WERE] NOT A TRES PASS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY IS A PUBLIC FORUM AND DEFENDANT WAS EXERCISING HIS/HER CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT TO FREE EXPRESSION OF IDEAS.

A. Exercise of Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas. A person who exercises his or her right to the free expression of ideas, guaranteed by the California Constitution (Cal. Const. art. I, §§ 2, 3), does not commit a trespass if the activities occur on private property that is a public forum, are orderly and reasonable, and do not interfere with normal business operations (Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 910-911, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741).

B. Private Property Is Public Forum. Private property is a public forum if it is generally open to the public and if it functions as the equivalent of traditional public forums, such as the public streets and sidewalks of a town's or city's business center (Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908-910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant committed a trespass by entering plaintiff's property. The ground of opposition is that plaintiff's property is a public forum and that defendant was exercising his or her constitutional right to free expression of ideas.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the constitutional right to free expression of ideas in a public forum. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should assert facts establishing that the size, type, or use of the plaintiff's property made it a public forum, and that the defendant's activities were orderly and reasonable and did not interfere with normal business operations on plaintiff's property.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.245 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exercise of Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas

In Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741 , plaintiffs requested an injunction to enjoin defendant from denying them access to defendant's private property, a shopping center, for the purpose of soliciting signatures for a petition to the government. The trial court denied the request, and plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that a private shopping center could not prohibit the distribution of leaflets or the solicitation of signatures on a petition, because the California Constitution [Cal. Const. art. I, §§ 2, 3] protects these activities if they are exercised reasonably in a manner that does not interfere with the shopping center's normal business operations. Although the shopping center was private property, the Court held that its regular use by large segments of the population (25,000 people each day) and its being generally open to the public made it an invaluable and essential forum for exercising the rights of speech and petition, the suburbs' functional equivalent to the traditional town center where the right to free expression of ideas has historically been exercised and scrupulously guarded (23 Cal. 3d 899, 908-910) . However, the Court emphasized that it was not giving free rein for the dissemination of ideas, noting that it was not considering the privacy rights of an individual homeowner or the proprietors of more modest retail establishments (23 Cal. 3d 899, 910) .

[b] Private Property Is Public Forum

Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741 , is discussed in § 225.244[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.245

§ 225.245 Opposing Contention That No Trespass Occurred--No Constitutional Right to Free Expression of Ideas on Private Property That Is Not Public Forum

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT'S _____ [ENTRY or ACTS CAUSING AN ENTRY] ON PLAINTIFF'S PROPERTY _____ [WAS or WERE] A TRESPASS BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAD NO CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT TO FREE EXPRESSION OF IDEAS ON PRIVATE PROPERTY THAT WAS NOT A PUBLIC FORUM.

A. Private Property Neither Open to Public Nor Equivalent of Traditional Public Forum. Private property is not a public forum if it is not generally open to the public and if it does not function as the equivalent of traditional public forums such as the public streets and sidewalks of a city's business center (see Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908-910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741).

B. Private Property Presenting No Significant Opportunity to Disseminate Ideas. Private property is not a public forum if the property presents no significant opportunity to disseminate ideas (Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530).

C. Prohibiting Activities on Property Does Not Curtail Opportunity for Exercise of Constitutional Right. Private property is not a public forum if the realistic opportunity of citizens to exercise their constitutional right to free expression of ideas is not curtailed by prohibiting that exercise on the property (Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant's entry on plaintiff's property was a trespass because there is no constitutional right to free expression of ideas on private property that is not a public forum.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of no constitutional right to the free expression of ideas on private property that is not a public forum. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should assert facts establishing that the property was not generally open to the public or the equivalent of traditional public forums, that the property presented no significant opportunity for the dissemination of ideas, and that enjoining the defendant's activities on the property would not curtail the realistic opportunity of defendant or other citizens to exercise the constitutional right to the free expression of ideas.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.244.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Property Neither Open to Public Nor Equivalent of Traditional Public Forum

Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741 , is discussed in § 225.244[3][a].

[b] Private Property Presenting No Significant Opportunity to Disseminate Ideas

In Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530 , the trial court issued a permanent injunction prohibiting defendants' anti-abortion picketing in the private parking area of plaintiff's privately owned medical center. Defendants appealed to the court of appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed, ruling that plaintiff's property was not a public forum where defendants had a constitutional right to the free expression of ideas, because the relatively small center's architecture and use presented no significant opportunity for the dissemination of ideas and because prohibiting picketing on the premises did not curtail the realistic opportunity of citizens to exercise this right. The court distinguished this case from Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Ctr. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741 [see § 225.244[3][a]], holding that the premises involved not only were not the equivalent of a public forum, but rather resembled the modest retail establishments to which Pruneyard specifically does not apply. The court noted that the medical center's tenants offered services only to specific clientele, rather than inviting members of the public to congregate, relax, seek out entertainment, browse, and shop. Moreover, unlike even a modest retail establishment, the medical center served mainly prearranged clientele, was not fully open to the local community, and did not provide services that are essential to all community members (14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391-1392) .

[c] Prohibiting Activities on Property Does Not Curtail Opportunity for Exercise of Constitutional Right

Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530 , is discussed in § 225.245[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Property Neither Open to Public Nor Equivalent of Traditional Public Forum

In Planned Parenthood v. Wilson (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1662, 286 Cal. Rptr. 427 , the court of appeal held that a privately owned medical center was not the functional equivalent of a traditional public forum. The court noted that the medical center's six tenants exclusively offered professional and personal services to specific clientele and therefore had not been devoted to general public use in a manner that impressed on that property a constitutional burden to guarantee individuals access to the exercise of free speech (234 Cal. App. 3d 1662, 1671-1672) .

In Allred v. Shawley (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1489, 284 Cal. Rptr. 140 , the court of appeal held that a privately owned parking lot of a professional center could not be used by the general public as a forum to reach patients of an abortion clinic. The court noted that the professional center, unlike a shopping mall, was not fully open to the local community nor did it provide services that were essential to all community members. Therefore, the professional center had continually maintained the private character of its parking lot and had not invited the public generally to use the property (232 Cal. App. 3d 1489, 1501-1502) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
D. Defenses
3. Statute of Limitations

22-225 California Points & Authorities §§ 225.246-225.259

[Reserved]

§§ 225.246[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
E. Trespass to Personal Property

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.260

§ 225.260 Supporting Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT COMMITTED A TRESPASS TO PLAINTIFF'S PERSONAL PROPERTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT _____ [INTERMEDDLED WITH and/or USED and/or CAUSED DAMAGE TO] THE PROPERTY WITHOUT SUBSTANTIALLY INTERFERING WITH PLAINTIFF'S RIGHT OF POSSESSION.

A. Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property Constitutes Trespass. When the defendant's conduct consists of intermeddling with, using, or causing damage to the plaintiff's personal property, without otherwise substantially interfering with possession or the right to possession, plaintiff has a cause of action for trespass (Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 551, 176 P.2d 1).

B. Actual Damages Awarded for Trespass to Personal Property. The owner of personal property may recover the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use while the intermeddling took place. Liability for actual damages is in no way dependent on the intent or motive with which the trespass was committed (Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; Fresno Air Serv. v. Wood (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 801, 805-806, 43 Cal. Rptr. 276).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a trespass to personal property has occurred by intermeddling with, use of, or damage to the property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of trespass to personal property. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should include facts illustrating defendant's acts that intermeddled with plaintiff's possession of his or her property, as might result if defendant entered property to that plaintiff had a right to enter, removed plaintiff's property without permission, and informed plaintiff that it was available at a location other than where plaintiff had left it.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to conversion of personal property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to conversion, see Ch. 51, Conversion .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 225.261 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property Constitutes Trespass

In Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 , plaintiff was a tenant in defendant's apartment house. The lease gave defendant a right of reentry on any breach and a lien on all personal property in the apartment to secure rental payments. After plaintiff was two months in arrears defendant entered the apartment, removed the furniture to a warehouse, and refused to allow plaintiff to enter the apartment. The items stored in a warehouse were in plaintiff's name, and other items, more difficult to move, were stored in defendant's basement and held for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed an action for forcible entry and detainer and for conversion of her personal property. The jury verdict was for plaintiff on both causes. The trial court granted defendant's motion for a new trial, based on error. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting a new trial and dismissed the purported appeal from the order granting judgment nothwithstanding the verdict. Defendant did not use any of plaintiff's belongings or make any claim of ownership to them. The removal of another's property and storage of it in the owner's name without any other exercise of dominion or control is not a conversion. When the conduct complained of does not amount to a substantial interference with the possession or the right to possession, but consists of intermeddling with, use of, or damage to the personal property, the owner has a cause of action for trespass, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use. Thus, plaintiff was entitled only to actual damages in an amount sufficient to compensate her for any impairment of the property or loss of its use (55 Cal. 2d 597, 610) .

In Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal. 2d 541, 176 P.2d 1 , plaintiff had obtained title to a parcel of real property by the foreclosure of a street assessment bond. One defendant was the grantee of the same parcel in a tax deed made by the state. Plaintiff had enjoyed the quiet and peaceable possession of the premises until defendants forcibly broke into and entered the premises. A sign was posted and the locks changed. Unable to enter these premises, plaintiff could not find other housing. Defendant notified plaintiff that he could secure his personal property left on the premises by applying at defendants' attorney's office, and that if the goods were not called for within 10 days, they would be put in storage to be held at plaintiff's expense. These acts took place during a pending quiet title action between the same parties. Plaintiff sued defendants for trespass and conversion. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, with directions to redetermine the amount of damages, because the evidence did not support the damages awarded. The court found that the parties were cotenants of the parcel and defendants had committed an ouster. The court then distinguished conversion from trespass to personal property. Conversion is any act of dominion wrongfully exerted over another's personal property in denial of or inconsistent with the owner's rights. The liability of one in possession of real property for the conversion of personal property which he or she finds on it depends on a determination of whether the conduct of defendant indicates an assumption of control or ownership over the goods. Under some circumstances, refusal of one in possession of real property to permit, on demand, the owner of chattels which were left there to remove the goods constitutes conversion. If the possessor of the real estate appropriates the chattels to his or her own use in obvious defiance of the owner's rights, the possessor is liable to the owner for the conversion of them (29 Cal. 2d 541, 549-550) . However, every failure to deliver is not such a serious interference with the owner's dominion that defendant should be required to pay the full value of the goods. The act of taking possession of a building and locking it does not, of itself, constitute a conversion of the personal property in it. Nor does permission by the possessor of the realty to allow personal property to remain on the premises make him or her liable for the goods. To establish a conversion, it is incumbent on plaintiff to show an intention or purpose to convert the goods and to exercise ownership over them, or to prevent the owner from taking possession of the property. When the conduct complained of does not amount to a substantial interference with possession or the right to possession, but consists of intermeddling with, or use of, or damages to the personal property, the owner has a cause of action for trespass, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use. As plaintiff was a cotenant and had the right of possession of the realty, which included the right to keep his personal property on it, defendant's act of placing the goods in storage, although not constituting the assertion of ownership nor a substantial interference with possession to the extent of a conversion, amounted to an intermeddling. Therefore plaintiff was entitled to actual damages in an amount sufficient to compensate him for any impairment of the property or loss of its use (29 Cal. 2d 541, 550-551) .

[b] Actual Damages Are Allowed

Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 , is discussed in § 225.260[3][a].

In Fresno Air Serv. v. Wood (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 801, 43 Cal. Rptr. 276 , defendant chartered plaintiff's airplane. The pilot, having taken defendant on several occasions, was well aware that defendant had a drinking problem and was concerned about his health. Defendant had been taking flying lessons and the pilot permitted him to handle the controls of the airplane. On the return trip it was necessary to land due to fog. Both the pilot and defendant got out of the plane, the pilot leaving the keys in the plane, and not setting the brakes. When the pilot walked to a nearby house to call the weather bureau, he heard the airplane start and saw the plane go down the runway, hit two levees, land on its nose and stop in a dump. Defendant was in the plane, although he claimed to not remember starting the plane. Plaintiff filed an action for damages for destruction of the airplane. The trial court judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The question raised on appeal was whether or not assumption of the risk was a proper issue. After describing the relationship between the assumption doctrine and conversion actions, the court also described the elements of conversion and trespass to personal property. The gist of an action in the nature of trespass is injury to plaintiff or to real or personal property in his or her possession. Liability for actual damages, in an action for injury caused by a trespass, is in no way dependent on the intent or motive with which the trespass was committed. Any unlawful interference with the personal property of another or exercise of dominion over it gives rise to an action in trespass. Conversion is the wrongful exercise of dominion over personal property of another. The property need not be appropriated to the use of defendant; it may be destroyed or merely damaged. Defendant's attempt to invoke assumption of the risk as a defense was misplaced, and the court upheld the award of damages (232 Cal. App. 2d 801, 805-806) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intermeddling With, Use of, or Damage to Personal Property Constitutes Trespass

In Jamgotchian v. Slender (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122 , the court of appeal held that a triable issue of fact existed as to whether conduct by a steward of the California Horse Racing Board to prevent the owner of a horse from removing the horse from the race grounds before a race constituted intentional interference with the owner's possession of the horse sufficient to support a cause of action for trespass to chattels. In that case, the owner had attempted to pull the horse from a race on the morning of the race, which required steward approval. The steward refused to grant approval, indicated he would not allow the owner to pull the horse from the race nor remove the horse from the grounds, and ordered the posting of security officers at the horse's stable. Against the owner's will, the horse was eventually taken to the track and raced, resulting in an injury to the horse's foot that rendered the horse lame. Although the owner had not confronted the officers and tried to force removal of the horse from the grounds before the race, the court of appeals held that a triable issue existed as to whether the steward's conduct supported a cause of action for trespass to chattels (170 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 1401-1402) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
E. Trespass to Personal Property

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.261

§ 225.261 Opposing Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Insufficient Evidence of Intentional Interference With Possession of Personal Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT DID NOT COMMIT A TRESPASS TO PLAINTIFF'S PERSONAL PROPERTY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO SHOW SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE THAT THERE WAS AN INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH HIS/HERS/ITS POSSESSION OF THE PROPERTY.

Substantial Evidence of Intentional Interference Is Necessary for Trespass to Personal Property. There must be substantial evidence that there was an intentional interference with the plaintiff's possession of the personal property which proximately caused the damage complained of to sustain a recovery for trespass to personal property (Itano v. Colonial Yacht Anchorage (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 84, 90, 72 Cal. Rptr. 823).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a party's contention that defendant committed a trespass to personal property. The ground of opposition set forth is lack of substantial evidence of an intentional interference with plaintiff's property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of substantial evidence of intentional interference with personal property. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel might include facts illustrating that there is no evidence that the moving of plaintiff's boat by defendant was the proximate cause of the injury to plaintiff's boat.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.260.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to conversion of personal property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice. Ch. 150, Conversion in (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to conversion, see Ch. 51, Conversion .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Evidence of Intentional Interference Is Necessary for Trespass to Personal Property

In Itano v. Colonial Yacht Anchorage (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 84, 72 Cal. Rptr. 823 , plaintiff purchased a boat which was moored at a wharf owned by defendant. Plaintiff's payments on the mooring lease were often delinquent, and after several warnings, defendant moved the boat to a work slip where it was discovered sunk one week later. Defendant did not prevent plaintiff from using or removing his boat, nor did defendant use or make any claim of ownership to the boat. There was no evidence of the cause of the technical failure which caused the boat to sink. Plaintiff brought an action for damages, employing several theories, including conversion and trespass to personal property. The trial court denied a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and entered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court first dealt with plaintiff's allegations sounding in landlord and tenant relations, but then discussed conversion and trespass to personal property. Conversion is any act of dominion wrongfully exerted over another's personal property in denial of or inconsistent with the owner's rights. To establish a conversion it is incumbent on plaintiff to show an intention or purpose to convert the goods and to exercise ownership over them, or to prevent the owner from taking possession of the property. The act of removing personal property from one place to another, without an assertion of ownership or preventing the owner from exercising all rights of ownership in that personal property, is not enough to constitute a conversion (267 Cal. App. 2d 84, 89) . When the conduct complained of consists of intermeddling with personal property the owner has a cause of action for trespass, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use. To recover on the theory of trespass to personal property, there must be substantial evidence that there was intentional interference with the plaintiff's possession, which proximately caused the damage complained of. A defendant cannot be held liable for damages not proximately caused by its intermeddling. An essential element for a plaintiff's cause of action is that there be some reasonable connection between the act and the damages suffered by the plaintiff. The court concluded that defendant's acts did not amount to a conversion or a trespass (267 Cal. App. 2d 84, 90) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
CHAPTER 225 TRESPASS
PART II. FORMS
E. Trespass to Personal Property

22-225 California Points & Authorities § 225.262

§ 225.262 Opposing Contention That Trespass to Personal Property Occurred--Interference Did Not Cause Actual Injury or Damage to Plaintiff's Personal Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT DID NOT COMMIT A TRESPASS TO PLAINTIFF'S PERSONAL PROPERTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS DID NOT CAUSE ACTUAL INJURY OR DAMAGE TO PLAINTIFF'S PERSONAL PROPERTY.

A. Actual Damage Required. Some actual injury must have occurred to state an action for trespass to personal property or chattels (Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1351, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296).

[Optional] B. No Recovery for Mass E-Mails That Do Not Damage or Impair Functioning of Computer System. The mass sending of e-mails to the employees of a large corporation does not support a cause of action for trespass to personal property if the e-mails neither damage nor impair the functioning of the corporation's computer system (Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1347, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the defendant committed a trespass to personal property, also known as a trespass to chattels. The ground of opposition set forth is the lack of actual damage or harm to the plaintiff's personal property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the lack of actual damage. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff suffered no real damage or harm as a result of the defendant's alleged interference.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 225.260.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to conversion of personal property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to trespass, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities relating to conversion, see Ch. 51, Conversion .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actual Damage Required

In Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296 , the plaintiff was a large corporation that maintained an internal computer network that was also connected to the Internet and through which the company's employees received e-mail. Over a two-year period, a former employee sent a series of thousands of e-mails to the plaintiff's employees. These e-mails were critical of the plaintiff's employee policies and directed the recipients to the former employee's web site for more information. The employees received these e-mails through the e-mail addresses and computers provided to them by the plaintiff. The plaintiff attempted to block the e-mail messages, but the former employee was able to evade this block by transmitting from different computers. The former employee did not otherwise breach the plaintiff's internal security to send his e-mails. Each message contained information on how the recipient could be removed from the mailing list, and the former employee complied with all requests for removal. There was no evidence that the plaintiff's computer system was damaged, slowed, or impaired in any way by the messages. Nonetheless, the plaintiff sued the former employee for trespass to personal property, also known as trespass to chattels, seeking injunctive relief to prevent the further dissemination of these e-mails through its e-mail system. The plaintiff argued that the disruption of its business caused by the efforts it took to attempt to block the messages, as well as the loss of productivity caused by the time required of its employees to read and respond to the messages, was sufficient to support a cause of action for trespass. The trial court granted summary judgment for the plaintiff and issued a permanent injunction. The defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The defendant again appealed to the California Supreme Court, which reversed.

The California Supreme Court held that although a lesser interference may be actionable as a trespass to chattels than would be actionable as a conversion, some actual injury must have occurred to state a cause of action. There must be some interference with the possessor's use or possession of the personal property or interference with some other legally protected interest in that property (30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1350-1352) . The Court then held that the tort did not encompass the mass sending of e-mails to the employees of a large corporation if those e-mails neither damaged nor impaired the functioning of the corporation's computer system. The loss of employee time spent reading and responding to the messages was insufficient to support a cause of action (30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1352-1353, 1359-1360) . The Court distinguished cases in which mass e-mails sent in much greater quantities than those sent by the defendant actually adversely affected the performance of a computer system, or threatened to do so, which might support a cause of action for trespass to chattels (30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1353-1356) . The Court then declined to create a new extension of the law of trespass to chattels to cover an otherwise harmless electronic communication whose contents are objectionable (30

Cal. 4th 1342, 1360) .

[b] No Recovery for Mass E-Mails That Do Not Damage or Impair Functioning of Computer System

Intel Corp. v. Hamidi (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1342, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32, 71 P.3d 296 is discussed in § 225.262[3][a].

176 of 176 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 22 Chapters 220-229 SUBROGATION---to---TRESPASS
Chapters 226through 229 RESERVED

22-226 California Points & Authorities Chapters 226through 229

RESERVED

Chapters 226RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES

23-230 California Points & Authorities 230.syn

§ 230.syn Synopsis to Chapter 230: TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES

§ 230.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 230.02 Governing Statutes

§ 230.03 Deeds of Trust and Mortgages

§ 230.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

§ 230.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Other Related Publications

§§ 230.06-230.09 [Reserved]

§ 230.10 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose No Longer Exists When Trust Deed Has Been Extinguished by Discharge of Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trust Deed Extinguished by Discharge of Secured Obligation

[b] Right to Reconveyance After Discharge of Obligation

§ 230.11 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose Not Waived by Acceptance of Partial or Late Payment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment

[b] Late Payment

[c] Acceptance of Partial Payment After Notice of Default

§ 230.12 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose Not Affected by Tender of Partial Payments [Civ. Code § 1468]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment Is Insufficient

[b] Separately Presented Partial Payments Aggregating to Full Payment

§ 230.13 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Does Not Secure Loan in Default--Trustor Was Unaware of Co-Owner's Debt, or Debt Was Purchased From Third Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cotenant Unaware of Preexisting Debt

[b] Purchased Obligation

[c] Unusual Provision

[d] Failure Under Reliance-on-Security Test

§ 230.14 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Covers Loan in Default

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dragnet Clause Is Valid

[b] Obligations Are Related

§ 230.15 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Is Enforceable When Trustor or Successor Unreasonably Claims Unawareness of Clause's Scope or Effect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustor Had Unreasonable Intent

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustor Had Unreasonable Intent

§ 230.16 Due-On-Sale Clause--Transfer of Property Did Not Trigger Due-on-Sale Clause [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Garn Act Exemptions

§ 230.17 Due-On-Sale Clause--Transfer of Property Triggered Due-on-Sale Clause [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Garn Act Authority to Invoke Due-on-Sale Clause

§ 230.18 Merger of Interests--Trust Deed Was Extinguished by Merger

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trust Deed Extinguished by Merger

§ 230.19 Merger of Interests--Trust Deed Has Not Been Extinguished by Merger

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Merger

§ 230.20 Unintentional Impairment of Security--Beneficiary May Not Foreclose and Must Allow Trustor to Rebuild After Insured Loss

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficiary Must Allow Trustor to Rebuild When Security Would Not Be Impaired

§ 230.21 Unintentional Impairment of Security--Beneficiary May Foreclose Although Security Is Not Impaired [Civ. Code § 2924.7; Fin. Code §§ 882.020 et seq., 2911]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Control of Insurance Proceeds

§ 230.22 Limitation Period--Trust Deed Was Extinguished by Expiration of Limitation Period [Civ. Code §§ 882.020 et seq., 2911]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Application and Effect of Statute

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mortgage Limitation

[b] Limitation on Foreclosure Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Limitation

[b] Mortgage Limitation

§§ 230.23-230.29 [Reserved]

§ 230.30 Protections for Military Service Members--Stay of Foreclosure Proceedings and Relief From Installment Contract or Mortgage, Trust, or Other Security in Nature of a Mortgage on Real Property for Purchase of Real Property by Active Service Member [Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 407(a), (b), 408; 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 532, 533]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Application and Effect of State and Federal Statutes

§§ 230.31-230.39 [Reserved]

§ 230.40 Recovery of Deficiency Is Barred by Statute--Deficiency Judgment Is Barred After Nonjudicial Foreclosure Sale [Code Cov. Proc. § 580d]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When "Sale" Occurs

[b] Statute Bars Recovery From Guarantor After Private Sale

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deficiency Is Barred After Nonjudicial Foreclosure Sale

[b] Statute Bars Recovery From Guarantor After Private Sale

§ 230.41 Recovery of Deficiency Is Barred by Statute--Deficiency Judgment on Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Barred [Code Civ. Proc. § 580b]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute Bars Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

[b] Statute Applies to Residential Construction Loan by Third-Party Lender

[c] Refinancing Is Sale

[d] Loan Need Not Be Exclusively for Purchase Money

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deficiency Judgment on Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Barred

[b] Statute Bars Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

§ 230.42 Recovery of Deficiency by Sold-Out Junior Lienholder After Purchase at Senior Lienholder's Private Foreclosure Sale--Sold-Out Junior Lienholder's Recovery Is Limited by Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

[b] Purchasing Junior Lienholder's Allowable Recovery

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limitation on Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

[b] Purchasing Junior Lienholder's Allowable Recovery

§ 230.43 Recovery of Deficiency by Sold-Out Junior Lienholder After Purchase at Senior Lienholder's Private Foreclosure Sale--Sold-Out Junior Lienholder Cannot Recover Because Action Was Not Commenced Within Three Months [Code Civ. Proc. § 580a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Month Limitation Period Applies to Junior Lienholder

§§ 230.44-230.49 [Reserved]

§ 230.50 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Trust Deed Is Variant Transaction That Is Not Subject to Statutory Bar [Code Civ. Proc. § 580b]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Automatically Apply to Variant Transaction

[b] Recognized Purposes of Statute

[c] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Subordinated to Commercial Construction Loan

[d] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Covers Property Other Than That Being Purchased

[e] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchaser Cashes Out Equity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Subordinated to Commercial Construction Loan

[b] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Covers Property Other Than That Being Purchased

§ 230.51 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out or Defrauded Junior Lienholder Is Not Barred [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580d, 726]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Limitations Do Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

[b] Fraud in Inducement

[c] Statutory Bar Against Recovery Does Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Limitations Do Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

§ 230.52 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Three-Month Limitation Period in Code Civ. Proc. § 726 Does Not Apply to Mixed Collateral Creditor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Month Limitation Period Does Not Apply in Mixed Collateral Situation

§ 230.53 Trustor Waived Statutory Limitation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deficiency Limitation of Statute May Subsequently Be Waived

§ 230.54 Trustor Cannot Waive Statutory Bar

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bar of Antideficiency Statute Cannot Be Waived

§ 230.55 Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Restrict Creditor's Ability to Exhaust Multiple Items of Collateral in Series of Nonjudicial Foreclosure Proceedings

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Apply When Creditor Exercises Right to Exhaust Multiple Items of Collateral

§§ 230.56-230.69 [Reserved]

§ 230.70 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Enjoined Due to Availability of Temporary and Preliminary Injunctive Relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction

[b] Judgment Ineffective

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction

[b] Judgment Ineffective

§ 230.71 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Waiver of Right to Declare Default

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Late Payments Without Objection

§ 230.72 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Absence of Default

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Default

§ 230.73 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Gross Inadequacy of Price

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Price Coupled With Irregularity

§ 230.74 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Violation of One-Form-of-Action Rule

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute May Be Asserted in Action to Set Aside Trustee's Sale

§ 230.75 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Failure to Acknowledge Junior Lienholder's Attempted Bid

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee's Duty Extends to Bidders

[b] Failure to Acknowledge Attempted Bid

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustee's Duty Extends to Bidders

§§ 230.76-230.89 [Reserved]

§ 230.90 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Notice of Sale Was properly Given--Three-Month Reinstatement Period [Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2)] Was Not Stayed or Tolled

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Code of Civil Procedure

[b] Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Bankruptcy Code

§ 230.91 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Trustee has No Independent Duty to Give Actual Notice After Satisfying Statutory Requirements

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee's Statutory Duty to Provide Notice of Default and Sale Is Exclusive

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustee's Statutory Duty to Provide Notice of Default and Sale Is Exclusive

§ 230.92 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Trustee May Be Purchaser

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee May Be Purchaser

§ 230.93 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Buyer Was Bona Fide Purchaser

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale May Not Be Set Aside as to Bona Fide Purchaser

§§ 230.94-230.99 [Reserved]

§ 230.100 One-Form-of-Action Rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)] Does Not Bar Recovery or Foreclosure

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Application of Statute to Leasehold Mortgages

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonjudicial Foreclosure Is Not Action

[b] Collateral Third-Party Note Secured by Real Property

[c] Action Commenced by Trustor

[d] Senior and Junior Liens Assigned by One Lender to Two Different Creditors

§ 230.101 Foreclosure, Antideficiency Statutes, and One-Form-of-Action Rule Cannot Bar Lender's Recovery for Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fraud Damages Authorized

[b] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery

[c] Fraud Inducing Purchase of Beneficial Interest

[d] Fraud Inducing Subordination

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery

§ 230.102 Sanction for Violating Code Civ. Proc. § 726 Does Not Require Forfeiture of Right to Enforce Underlying Debt

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Is Permitted on Underlying Obligation

§ 230.103 Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Action for Fraud or Negligence Against Nonborrower Third Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Fraud Action Against Nonborrower Third Parties

[b] Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Action for Negligent Misrepresentation Against Nonborrower Third Parties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Full Credit Bid Does Not Bar Fraud Action Against Nonborrower Third Parties

§§ 230.104-230.109 [Reserved]

§ 230.110 One-Form-of-Action Rule Bars Foreclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]--General Rule

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Beneficiary's Options Regarding Setoff

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security

[b] Setoff Against Deposit Account

[c] Equitable Setoff

[d] Statute Overrides Permissive Cross Complaint Statutes

[e] Loss of Priority in Action on Underlying Debt

§ 230.111 One-Form-of-Action Rule Bars Foreclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]--Prior Judicial Foreclosure of Personal Property or Fixtures Securing the Debt [Com. Code § 9604(a)(3)(B), (6)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judicial Foreclosure Against Personal Property or Fixtures Securing Debt

§ 230.112 Co-Obligor Who Is Not Also Trustor May Assert One-Form-of-Action Rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security

[b] Assertion of Rule by Co-Obligor Who Is Not Also Trustor

§§ 230.113-230.119 [Reserved]

§ 230.120 Damages Are Recoverable for Waste Impairing Security Interest [Civ. Code § 2929]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Waste Impairing Security

[b] Nonassuming Grantee's Duty Not to Impair Security Interest

[c] Antideficiency Statutes Do Not Bar Recovery for Waste Committed in Bad Faith

[d] Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest

[e] Agricultural Land

§§ 230.121-230.129 [Reserved]

§ 230.130 Damages Are Not Recoverable for Waste Impairing Security Interest--No Impairment Shown

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest

[b] Beneficiary's Purchase at Foreclosure Sale on Full-Credit Bid Extinguishes Claim for Waste

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Beneficiary's Purchase at Foreclosure Sale on Full-Credit Bid Extinguishes Claim for Waste

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.01

§ 230.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities relating to proceedings based on the provisions of a deed of trust or real property mortgage [see § 230.03].

Part II, Subpart A, relating to the availability of foreclosure in general, includes forms supporting and opposing contentions that the remedy of foreclosure is available (§ 230.10 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart B, relating to the effect of antideficiency legislation, contains forms supporting and opposing contentions that a deficiency judgment is barred or limited by antideficiency legislation (§ 230.40 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart C, relating to actions to enjoin or set aside private foreclosure sales, contains forms supporting and opposing contentions that a private sale under a power of sale may be enjoined or set aside (§ 230.70 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart D, relating to the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, contains forms supporting and opposing contentions that the one-form-of-action rule bars foreclosure or recovery of a personal judgment (§ 230.100 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart E, relating to tortious impairment of security, contains forms supporting and opposing the contention that damages may be recovered for waste of the property subject to a deed of trust or mortgage (§ 230.120 et seq.).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresDeficiency JudgmentsReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresPrivate Power-of-Sale ForeclosureReal Property LawTortsWasteGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.02

§ 230.02 Governing Statutes

Real property security transactions are extensively regulated by statute. Chiefly, the governing provisions are:

- Civ. Code § 2872 et seq., relating to liens in general.
- Civ. Code § 2920 et seq., relating specifically to deeds of trust and mortgages and private sales.
- Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a et seq. and 725a et seq., relating to foreclosure actions and deficiency judgments.

Institutional lenders' actions for recovery of damages arising from fraudulently induced loans are governed by Fin. Code §§ 551, 7459, and 15102 (banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions). Their rights to foreclose for defaults that do not impair the security are governed by Fin. Code §§ 1227.2, 1227.3, 7461, and 7462.

Miscellaneous provisions include Civ. Code § 882.020 et seq., relating to theexpiration of ancient deeds of trust or mortgages; Civ. Code § 1169 et seq., relating to the recordation of security instruments and other interests in real property; Code Civ. Proc. § 564(b)(2), (4), (11), and (12), relating to the appointment of a receiver in foreclosure or assignment of rents proceedings; and the Garn Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3, relating to the enforcement of due-on-sale clauses.

In addition, in 2002 the California Legislature enacted special protections for officers and enlisted members of the National Guard called or ordered into active state or federal service and reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been called to full-time active service or duty [see 2002 Stats., ch. 60, § 1; Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. This legislation establishes special protection from foreclosure and other civil liabilities for active service members and reservists who are found by a court to need assistance because of the demands of their military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408], and it includes many provisions that are similar to those included in the federal Servicemembers Civil Relief Act [50 U.S.C. App. § 501 et seq.]. For a points and authorities and additional discussion, see § 230.30. For a general discussion of protection from foreclosure and other similar types of relief for active service members, and additional forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages

(Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresDeficiency JudgmentsReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsTransfersDue-on-Sale Clauses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.03

§ 230.03 Deeds of Trust and Mortgages

There is a formal distinction between deeds of trust and mortgages. A deed of trust is a transfer of legal title to real property by an obligor (or a potential obligor, such as a guarantor), who is the owner, to a trustee for the purpose of securing the obligation, which is usually a debt. The beneficiary of the trust is the obligee (or potential obligee), usually a creditor [see, e.g., Huckell v. Matranga (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 471, 481, 160 Cal. Rptr. 177 ; Hohn v. Riverside County Flood Control etc. Dist. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 605, 611, 39 Cal. Rptr. 647] .

A mortgage is a contract by which the owner hypothecates real property as security for the performance of an act, which is usually payment of a debt. The mortgagor is the property owner; the mortgagee is the person to whom the hypothecation is made, who is usually a creditor [see Civ. Code § 2920; Bechtel v. Wier (1907) 152 Cal. 443, 444, 93 P. 75] . The mortgage imposes a lien on the property but does not effect passage of title or any other incident of ownership [see Civ. Code §§ 2877, 2888, 2923].

Despite the formal distinction, a deed of trust is generally considered to be practically and substantially the same as a mortgage with a power of sale, because the transfer of title to a trustee carries no incident of ownership other than the power to sell the property in the event of a default [see Bank of Italy etc. Assn. v. Bentley (1933) 217 Cal. 644, 655-656, 20 P.2d 940] . Because of this functional similarity, a deed of trust is often treated as a mortgage lien, and the same statutes and rules of law that are applied to mortgages are generally applied also to deeds of trust [Domarad v. Fisher & Burke, Inc. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 543, 553, 76 Cal. Rptr. 529] .

Because of the prevalent use of deeds of trust in California and in view of their functional similarity to mortgages, this chapter uses terms applicable to deeds of trust in reference to both kinds of instruments. Thus, "deed of trust" or "trust deed"--the latter term being preferred generally--includes a mortgage, "trustor" includes a mortgagor, and "beneficiary" includes a mortgagee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawTrustsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security

InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresPrivate Power-of-Sale Foreclosure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.04

§ 230.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind is page limits: supporting memoranda must not exceed 15 pages (or 20 pages for a summary judgment motion or summary adjudication motion). A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are not included in the page limitation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A party must apply to the court for permission to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other points and authorities to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion of how to select and use the forms in this publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic and stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.05

§ 230.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and litigation forms relating to proceedings based on the provisions of a trust deed or real property mortgage, including foreclosure proceedings, proceedings to collect rents and profits, proceedings to establish equitable mortgages, and proceedings for damages or injunctive relief based on tortious impairment of the security, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and litigation forms relating to enforcement of a judgment of judicial foreclosure by writ of sale and relating to redemption of property after such a sale, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.130 et seq. and § 254.150 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

- For payment or enforcement of promissory notes, defaults under promissory notes, and defenses to actions for payment of promissory notes, see Ch. 166, Negotiable Instruments .

- For general contract principles, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

- For temporary restraining orders and preliminary and permanent injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

- For the appointment of a receiver to take possession of or manage real property subject to a trust deed or mortgage, see Ch. 200, Receivers .

[3] Other Related Publications

For additional discussion, see California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 111, Deeds of Trust and Mortgages (Matthew Bender), along with the following chapters in that set:

- Ch. 120, Representing a Client After Default.
- Ch. 121, Priorities of Liens.
- Ch. 122, Antideficiency Legislation.
- Ch. 123, Nonjudicial Foreclosure.
- Ch. 124, Judicial Foreclosure.

For additional discussion and transactional forms, see the following chapters in California Legal Forms--Transaction Guide (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 25A, Security Instruments for Real Estate Financing.
- Ch. 25B, Subordination, Assumption, and Assignment.
- Ch. 25C, Release and Reconveyance.
- Ch. 25D, Foreclosure.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesReceivershipsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresDeficiency JudgmentsReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresJudicial ForeclosuresReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresPrivate Power-of-Sale Foreclosure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.06-230.09

[Reserved]

§§ 230.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.10

§ 230.10 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose No Longer Exists When Trust Deed Has Been Extinguished by Discharge of Obligation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE TRUST DEED HAS BEEN EXTINGUISHED BY DISCHARGE OF THE OBLIGATION.

A. Trust Deed Extinguished by Discharge of Secured Obligation. Full payment of a debt secured by a trust deed discharges both the obligation and the security. Tender of the full amount due on a loan secured by a trust deed, made any time before foreclosure, extinguishes the lien on the property and halts foreclosure proceedings (Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 922, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82).

[Optional] B. Right to Reconveyance After Discharge of Obligation. When an obligation secured by a trust deed has been discharged, the trustor is entitled to a full reconveyance of the property (Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 922, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a beneficiary is not entitled to foreclose under a trust deed. The ground for the contention is that the trustor paid or tendered the full amount of the underlying debt (or otherwise discharged the obligation) before foreclosure, and the trust deed has been extinguished by that discharge of the obligation.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in a foreclosure action, this contention might be raised in a motion for summary judgment by the trustor [see, e.g., Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 914-915, 922, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should show that the trustor, before foreclosure, performed or made a tender of performance of the secured obligation.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trust Deed Extinguished by Discharge of Secured Obligation

In Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 , a trust deed secured a promissory note for $7,000 plus interest at 40 percent. The trustors defaulted after the maturity date. The beneficiaries started private foreclosure proceedings. After the reinstatement period, but before the trustee's sale, the trustors tendered the full amount of the principal plus interest at the legal rate, but the defendants refused the tender. The trustors sued to enjoin the trustee's sale, alleging that the loan was usurious. The trial court granted a temporary restraining order conditioned on the trustors' paying the principal balance. They paid, but the trial court later ruled that the loan was not usurious and denied preliminary injunctive relief. The beneficiaries proceeded with the sale, and the trustors amended their complaint to have the sale set aside and recover damages. On the beneficiaries' motion, the trial court granted summary judgment against the trustors, who appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded with directions to set aside the sale, cancel the trustee's deed and the trust deed, and quiet the trustors' title as against the beneficiaries (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 922) . Under Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1, regarding usurious loans, the loan was usurious (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 916-921) . The beneficiaries were consequently entitled to only repayment of the principal sum, and the trustors had made a valid tender exceeding that sum (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 921) . The court, in reliance on Civ. Code § 2903 et seq., concerning redemption, stated the rule that before foreclosure, a tender of the full amount properly due on a loan secured by a trust deed extinguishes the lien on the property, halting any foreclosure proceedings. The court also stated the rule, derived from Civ. Code §§ 871 and 2279, that full payment of a debt secured by a trust deed discharges both the obligation and the security, because the trust deed exists only as long as there is a valid trust purpose. Applying these rules, the court held that the trust deed was not in effect at the time of the sale; therefore, the trustors were entitled to have the sale set aside and obtain reconveyance of the property (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 922) .

[b] Right to Reconveyance After Discharge of Obligation

The facts and procedural background of Winnett v. Roberts (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 225 Cal. Rptr. 82 , are discussed in [a], above. In that case the court of appeal, citing former Civ. Code § 2941(b) and Huckell v. Matranga (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 471, 476, 160 Cal. Rptr. 177 , stated that when an obligation secured by a trust deed has been discharged, the trustor is entitled to a full reconveyance of the property. The court held that, in the case at bench, the property had been wrongfully sold at a private foreclosure sale after discharge of the secured obligation, and the trustors not only were entitled to damages under former Civ. Code § 2941(d) (now see revised Civ. Code § 2941(d)) but also were entitled to have the sale set aside and have the property reconveyed to them (179 Cal. App. 3d 909, 922) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.11

§ 230.11 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose Not Waived by Acceptance of Partial or Late Payment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY DID NOT WAIVE HIS/HER RIGHT TO _____ [DECLARE A DEFAULT or PROCEED WITH THE FORECLOSURE SALE] BY ACCEPTING A _____ [PARTIAL or LATE] PAYMENT.

[EITHER]

A. Partial Payment. A beneficiary's mere acceptance of a partial payment does not discharge the balance due or modify the terms so as to effect a waiver of the right to declare a default, without some agreement or expression of a contrary intent (R.G. Hamilton Corp., Ltd. v. Corum (1933) 218 Cal. 92, 97, 21 P.2d 413 ; Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 819-822, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4).

[OR]

A. Late Payment. A beneficiary's acceptance of a late payment does not effect a waiver of the right to declare a default in the event of subsequent late payments (Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 822-823 ; Bledsoe v. Pacific Ready Cut Homes, Inc. (1928) 92 Cal. App. 641, 645, 268 P. 697).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Acceptance of Partial Payment After Notice of Default. Even after recordation of a notice of default and election to sell, a beneficiary may accept partial payment of an amount due, without waiving the default on the balance and without affecting the beneficiary's rights under an acceleration clause, at least in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary. No implied waiver results from the mere acceptance of a partial payment (Birkhofer v. Krumm (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 513, 524, 81 P.2d 609 ; Sellman v. Crosby (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 562, 564-565, 67 P.2d 706).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the right to declare a default, or to proceed with a foreclosure sale, still exists and has not been waived by acceptance of a late or partial payment. The opposing contention that acceptance of late payments has amounted to waiver of the right to declare default is set forth in § 230.71[1].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For example, the beneficiary could use this contention in support of a motion for summary judgment in the trustor's suit to restrain or set aside a foreclosure sale [see, e.g., Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 828-830, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should describe the trustor's defaults, noting the lack of any request or agreement to modify the payment terms.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment

R.G. Hamilton Corp., Ltd. v. Corum (1933) 218 Cal. 92, 21 P.2d 413 , was an action by a trustee for a declaration of the rights and duties of the parties under a trust deed securing a $170,000 loan. The trustor had never made a full payment under the terms of the note but had made irregular payments. The judgment for the trustee declared that giving a notice of default and electing to sell the property were proper. The trustor appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The trustor, although making partial payments, was in default for more than 12 months. While it was true that the trustee could have dealt with the trustor in such a way as to estop the trustee from exercising the option to accelerate, the facts of this case indicated only an exercise of leniency and a forbearance to elect within a reasonable time (218 Cal. 92, 97) .

Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 , was an action by trustors to enjoin a private foreclosure sale on the ground that acceptance of late payments constituted a novation in the terms of the underlying note and that therefore there was no default. The trustors had missed 16 of 84 payments through December 1968, and those that were made were frequently late. The terms of the note called for payments to be increased from $250 a month to $350 a month as of January 1, 1968, but the trustors never made payments in excess of $250 a month. The beneficiary often called the trustors to request that payments be brought up to date. On March 19, 1969, the beneficiary wrote the trustors that he would no longer accept late partial payments and demanded that arrearages be paid by April 1. The trustors sent a single check for $250 on April 10. On April 11, the beneficiary recorded a notice of default and election to sell. On April 12 he returned the last check, and he returned two other checks that were tendered before commencement of the action. Judgment was for the beneficiary, but the sale was enjoined pending appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed, but allowed the trustors 13 days (the action was commenced 13 days before the expiration of the reinstatement period) to reinstate to loan. The burden of proving any novation was on the trustors (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 818) . In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, mere acceptance of partial payments of what is due on an obligation does not discharge the balance or modify the terms of its payment. There must be some consideration flowing from the obligor before modification or novation can be found (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 819) . Mere acceptance of the $250 in the absence of any agreement or expression of intent did not forgive the delinquency (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 820) .

[b] Late Payment

The facts and procedural background of Hunt v. Smyth (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 101 Cal. Rptr. 4 , are discussed in [a], above. In regard to the late payments, the court, comparing Bledsoe v. Pacific Ready Cut Homes, Inc. (1928) 92 Cal. App. 641, 268 P. 697 (discussed below), said that it is established that when a creditor has accepted late payments with notice, express or implied, of default, the provisions requiring prompt payment can be reinstated only by giving the debtor notice to that effect, and the letter of March 19 constituted an adequate notice (25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 822-823) .

Bledsoe v. Pacific Ready Cut Homes, Inc. (1928) 92 Cal. App. 641, 268 P. 697 , was an action to set aside a trustee's sale. The note and trust deed in question called for monthly payments of $69 with balloon payments of $500 due on November 1, 1924, and every six months thereafter. The monthly payments were made, but the first balloon payment was never made. Eight notices demanding payment were sent by the trustee up to February 21, 1925. On March 14, 1925, default was declared. Judgment was for the trustor, and the trustee appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The trustor contended that the $500 balloon payment had been waived. The court first stated that there was no novation in the absence of a writing and supporting consideration (92 Cal. App. 641, 644-645) . In regard to the claim of waiver, the court agreed that the trustee was first bound to make a formal demand and to allow a reasonable period for compliance with the demand before declaring a default. There was no evidence of waiver, numerous demands were made, and a reasonable period for compliance wasallowed before the default was declared (92 Cal. App. 641, 645) .

[c] Acceptance of Partial Payment After Notice of Default

Birkhofer v. Krumm (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 513, 81 P.2d 609 , was an action for a deficiency judgment after a nonjudicial foreclosure. The antideficiency provisions did not apply because the transaction in question predated their enactment (27 Cal. App. 2d 513, 524-541) , so judgment was entered for the beneficiary. The trustor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The trustor contended that the sale was in error because the beneficiary had waived the default by accepting interest payments after recordation of the notice of default and election to sell. The court disagreed, however, saying that acceptance of partial payment has been repeatedly held not to be a waiver of the breach described in the notice (27 Cal. App. 2d 513, 524) .

Sellman v. Crosby (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 562, 67 P.2d 706 , was an action to set aside a trustee's sale and cancel a trustee's deed. The underlying note called for payments of $40 a month. The trustors failed to make 11 payments up to January 1934. There were discussions between the parties concerning the delinquencies, and the trustors assured the beneficiary that they were expecting to win a lawsuit and would pay the total amount due out of the award. Although the trustors did receive some of the money they had hoped for, they did not apply it to the indebtedness owed to the beneficiary. Between January 1934 and March 1935 one payment a month was made. Each was applied to the installment longest past due. Notice of default was recorded on April 20, 1935. Thereafter, the trustors made a $40 payment in April and one each month until August, when the trustee's sale was held. Those payments were credited to the installments longest past due. Judgment was for the beneficiary, and the trustors appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. There had been no waiver of the right to accelerate (20 Cal. App. 2d 562, 564) . The trustors contended that acceptance of installments after the election to declare a default constituted waiver of default and of all rights under the acceleration clause. The court disagreed, stating that a beneficiary may accept partial payments on the amount due without waiving the default in regard to the balance and without affecting the beneficiary's rights under the acceleration clause, at least in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary. No implied waiver results from the mere acceptance of partial payments (20 Cal. App. 2d 562, 564-565) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.12

§ 230.12 Effect of Payment or Other Discharge of Secured Obligation--Right to Foreclose Not Affected by Tender of Partial Payments [Civ. Code § 1468]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE BECAUSE THE TRUSTOR'S SUBMISSION OF A PARTIAL PAYMENT DID NOT CONSTITUTE A TENDER OF THE AMOUNTS DUE.

A. Partial Payment Is Insufficient. An offer of partial performance is of no effect (Civ. Code § 1486; Gaffney v. Downey Savings and Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1165, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421).

[Optional] B. Separately Presented Partial Payments Aggregating to Full Payment. Submission of a number of partial payments that equal, in the aggregate, the full amount due does not constitute valid tender of the amount due when the borrower has made no attempt to notify the lender that payments would be submitted in that manner (Gaffney v. Downey Savings and Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1165-1166, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the right of foreclosure exists because tender of a partial payment does not cure a default. This is true even if separately submitted partial payments aggregate to a full payment, if the borrower did not inform the lender that the partial payments should be combined.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For instance, a beneficiary could use this contention to oppose a trustor's request for an injunction prohibiting the foreclosure sale. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should specify the amount of the default at the time the partial payment was tendered, attaching copies of any correspondence or notices from the lender to the beneficiary that set forth the full amount in default.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partial Payment Is Insufficient

The trustors in Gaffney v. Downey Savings and Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421 , fell behind in their installment payments and applied to another lender for another loan, to be secured by a second trust deed. They intended to use the proceeds of the second loan to pay the arrearages on the first loan. After the trustors had missed the July and August payments, the beneficiary wrote to them stating that failure to bring their loan current by September 8 would result in acceleration of all sums secured by the trust deed and commencement of foreclosure proceedings. In mid-September, the title company handling the escrow for the second loan forwarded the beneficiary a check for the July and August payments, including late charges. At the same time, the trustors forwarded a check for the September payment. Both arrived on September 16, but they were in separate envelopes and neither contained any notification that it should be combined with the other to make a complete payment. Because the beneficiary received between 5,000 and 7,000 loan payments on a given day, the two checks were not connected, and they were returned separately, each with a notice that the amount was insufficient and foreclosure was imminent, along with the name of the officer to contact for the amount due. The trustors commenced an action to extinguish their debt and the lien of the trust deed. The beneficiary commenced foreclosure after the suit was filed. The holder of the second trust deed cured the default. The trial court gave judgment for the trustors, including damages for emotional distress and punitive damages based on the conclusion that the beneficiary had breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing by filing the notice of default. The beneficiary appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court cited Civ. Code § 1486 for the proposition that an offer of partial performance is of no effect. Nothing short of the full amount due is sufficient to constitute valid tender. The tenderer must do everything that is necessary on his or her part to complete the transaction, while making known his or her purpose without ambiguity, and the act of tender must be such that it needs only acceptance by the beneficiary. The court of appeal referred to the trial court's findings that the two checks constituted a tender of the full and correct amount due, the payment was rejected due to a defect in the beneficiary's payment processing procedures, and that the beneficiary failed to exercise due care and skill by rejecting the payments. The court of appeal ruled that these findings would have required the beneficiary to coordinate all of the thousands of separate payments it received each day to discover whether two separate part payments had been submitted that together equaled the amount due on a particular loan. The imposition of such an unreasonable burden was legally unwarranted. It was the trustors' responsibility to make an unambiguous tender of the entire amount due or else suffer the consequences that the tender was of no effect (200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1165). The trustors' submission of two partial payments, without any attempt to notify the beneficiary that payments would be submitted in that manner, did not constitute a tender of the amounts due (200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1165-1166).

The trustors also claimed that notices sent with the return checks were insufficient under Civ. Code § 1501 and Code Civ. Proc. § 2076; therefore, the beneficiary had waived objection to partial payments. The court said that those provisions do not apply when the amount of the creditor's demand is known to the debtor and the amount of the tender is insufficient. Under those provisions, a notice of objection is sufficient as long as the debtor knows what is required for full performance (200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1166) .

Regarding the finding that the beneficiary had breached a duty of good faith and fair dealing, the court said that the standard for tort recovery requires a person to act with reasonable regard for the person's own interests. When the trustors stopped making payments on the loan and did not inform the beneficiary of their intention to bring the loan current with proceeds of the second loan, the beneficiary did not breach the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by recording the notice of default (200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1171-1172) .

[b] Separately Presented Partial Payments Aggregating to Full Payment

Gaffney v. Downey Savings and Loan Assn. (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 246 Cal. Rptr. 421 , is discussed in [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.13

§ 230.13 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Does Not Secure Loan in Default--Trustor Was Unaware of Co-Owner's Debt, or Debt Was Purchased From Third Party

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE OBLIGATION IN QUESTION IS NOT SECURED BY THE DRAGNET CLAUSE IN THE TRUST DEED.

[EITHER]

A. Cotenant Unaware of Preexisting Debt. A trust deed that is executed by tenants in common and contains a broadly worded dragnet clause should not be enforced to render one cotenant's interest liable for a preexisting unsecured debt of the other cotenant in the absence of evidence affirmatively establishing that the result was intended by the parties and that the cotenant whose interest is soughtto be charged had notice or actual knowledge of the other cotenant's debt (Gates v. Crocker-Anglo Nat. Bk. (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 857, 859-861, 65 Cal. Rptr. 536).

[OR]

A. Purchased Obligation. An ordinary dragnet clause does not secure repayment of notes of a third party that the trustor has endorsed and transferred to the beneficiary (Moran v. Gardemeyer (1889) 82 Cal. 96, 100-101, 23 P. 6).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Unusual Provision. When there is no evidence that the parties intended the trust deed to contain an unusual provision and no evidence that the parties discussed the unusual provision or knew that it was included in the trust deed, an unusual provision in a dragnet clause cannot be enforced (Lomanto v. Bank of America (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 669-670, 99 Cal. Rptr. 442).

[Optional] C. Failure Under Reliance-on-Security Test. One test used to determine whether the parties intended a subsequent obligation to be secured by a dragnet clause in an earlier trust deed is whether the second loan was made in reliance on the original security. When a different security is taken for the second loan, an intent cannot be inferred that the parties relied on the security for the first loan (Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 296-297 ; Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 404-405, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a trustor's contention that a dragnet clause in a trust deed does not cover a debt in question. The ground is either that the debt in question was a debt of a co-owner, of which the trustor was unaware, or that the debt in question was purchased from a third party.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exempted transfer. For example, this contention might be made in opposition to a beneficiary's motion for summary judgment in an action for a declaration that the beneficiary is entitled to all the proceeds from the sale of the real property claimed to be security. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should set forth the language of the clause in question and a description of the purchased trust deed or of the indebtedness of which the trustor was unaware.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.14[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cotenant Unaware of Preexisting Debt

Gates v. Crocker-Anglo Nat. Bk. (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 857, 65 Cal. Rptr. 536 , was an action to determine ownership of funds obtained from the sale of real property that was the subject of the trust deed in question. The plaintiffs had been co-owners of the property and sued their former co-owners and the bank that had been beneficiary of a trust deed of which all co-owners were trustors. The trust deed in question was ostensibly to secure a $60,000 note and contained a dragnet clause providing that it secured "the payment of all other moneys and indebtedness now and hereafter due or owing from Trustor or any of them to Beneficiary." Unbeknownst to the plaintiffs, at the time the trust deed was executed, the defendant owners were indebted to the bank on an unsecured personal note for $20,500 that was then in default. The trial court awarded the funds to the bank, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded. There was no evidence that the parties intended the dragnet clause to apply to the defendants' preexisting unsecured debt and no evidence that the parties discussed the clause or knew that it was included in the trust deed. The trust deed made no reference to the defendants' preexisting obligation to the bank, although both the bank and the other defendants were aware of it. The plaintiffs were unaware of the defendants' preexisting unsecured debt and presumably would not have executed the trust deed had they known that it would render them liable as sureties for the defendants' debt (257 Cal. App. 2d 857, 861) .

[b] Purchased Obligation

Moran v. Gardemeyer (1889) 82 Cal. 96, 23 P. 6 , was a mortgage foreclosure action with two causes of action on two notes. The first note, for $3,000, was secured by a mortgage that also secured "all further advances to the mortgagor by the mortgagee that may exist, arise, or be contracted before satisfaction hereof, such further advances and indebtedness not to exceed the sum of five hundred dollars, exclusive of interest." The second note, for $750, was made by a third party and payable to the mortgagor, who had endorsed it over to the mortgagee.The judgment decreed that the principal sum of $3,500 was owing, along with fixed interest, attorney's fees, and costs, and ordered foreclosure. The mortgagor appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, saying that by no fair construction of the terms of the mortgage could it be held that the mortgagee could buy up the notes of third parties on which the mortgagor was a simple endorser, and hold them as though they were secured by the mortgage (82 Cal. 96, 100-101) .

[c] Unusual Provision

Lomanto v. Bank of America (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 99 Cal. Rptr. 442 , was an action by spouses for a declaration that two notes made by the husband were not secured by a dragnet clause in the trust deed of which both spouses were the trustors. The original note and trust deed for $11,500 were made in 1965. The trust deed provided that it secured payment of "such additional amounts as may hereafter be loaned by Beneficiary or its successors to the Trustor or any of them, or any successor in interest to the Trustor." The husband alone obtained loans of $11,500 and $5,500 respectively in 1967. A judgment of dismissal was entered after the bank's demurrer was sustained without leave to amend. The spouses appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to the husband but reversed as to the wife (22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 670). For the court's discussion of the affirmance as to the husband, see § 230.15[4][a]. The spouses contended that the bank had a duty to call the dragnet clause to their attention. The court said that if the provision was in the usual form of a trust deed, there was no such duty, taking judicial notice that it was general business practice to have escrow instructions provide for delivery of a trust deed in usual form (22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 669). The critical issue was a question of fact, whether the usual form of such a clause would permit one of two trustors to further encumber the interest of the other so that the attention of the trustors need not have been drawn to the clause, whether orally, or by print of a distinctive size, or by placing it in a box with heavy borders. Saying that it would not attempt to declare what would be sufficient to state a cause of action, the court said the wife should be allowed to amend her complaint to show that the trust deed was to have been in usual form and that she was unaware of the presence of the questioned clause in the trust deed (22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 670) .

[d] Failure Under Reliance-on-Security Test

Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286 , is discussed in § 230.15[3][a].

Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , was an action by the bank on a promissory note, the third of three notes that the defendants had executed for three separate loans. The first note was secured by a first trust deed on the debtors' residence. At the time the third note was executed, a second trust deed was given to secure repayment of the third note. The first loan was used to pay off another loan on the property, with any remainder to be used in the debtors' business. The second loan was used for improvements to the property. The third loan was used to pay off the second loan, with any remainder to be applied to payments due under the first note. The first trust deed provided that it secured all sums due with interest that may be paid or advanced under its provisions and payment of additional sums and interest under those provisions then or thereafter due or owing from the trustor to the beneficiary. The residence was purchased by the bank at its private foreclosure sale of the first trust deed. Thereafter the bank commenced an action on the third promissory note. The trial court ruled in favor of the bank on the ground that the second trust deed had become valueless after the foreclosure of the first. The debtors appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the two deeds of trust merged, that the third note was secured by the first trust deed by virtue of the "dragnet" clause, and that therefore the trial court's judgment was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 405-407) . The court noted that the "reliance-on-security" test is one of the two tests used to determine whether the parties intended a subsequent obligation to be secured by a dragnet clause in an earlier trust deed. Under this test, inquiry centers on whether the second loan was made in reliance on the original security. When a different security is taken for the second loan, an intent cannot be inferred that the parties relied on the security for the first loan (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 404) . The rationale is that the dragnet clause in the trust deed constitutes a continuing offer by the borrower to secure further loans under the trust deed and that when the lender accepts a different security, it does not accept that offer (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 404-405) . The court of appeal concluded that under the reliance-on-security test, the bank relied on the real estate security in making the third loan. The defendant's offer in the dragnet clause was accepted by the bank when it specifically agreed to take the same security under the second trust deed. Having relied on the same security, the bank had no need for the execution of a second trust deed (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 405) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.14

§ 230.14 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Covers Loan in Default

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE LOAN IN DEFAULT IS SECURED UNDER THE TRUST DEED, DESPITE THE FACT THAT IT IS NOT THE PRIMARY LOAN SPECIFICALLY SECURED, BECAUSE THE TRUST DEED CONTAINS A STANDARD CLAUSE THAT HAS THE EFFECT OF MAKING IT SECURITY FOR ALL UNSPECIFIED DEBTS OWED BY THE TRUSTOR TO THE BENEFICIARY, AND BOTH PARTIES INTENDED THE LOAN TO BE SECURED PURSUANT TO THAT CLAUSE.

A. Dragnet Clause Is Valid. In a trust deed, a clause (sometimes referred to as a dragnet clause) intended to make the subject property security for the trustor's past, present, and future obligations to the beneficiary is valid (Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 398, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549).

[Optional] B. Obligations Are Related. In ascertaining whether the parties intended a subsequent obligation to be secured by a dragnet clause in a trust deed, the court will look for a connection between the obligations. For instance, if the first was a construction loan for improvements on the subject property, and the second was another construction loan for more improvements, it is likely that the two loans were intended to be secured by the one trust deed (Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295-297 ; Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 404, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a loan in default is secured under a trust deed even though it is not the primary loan specifically secured under the trust deed, on the ground that the parties intended the loan to be secured under the trust deed pursuant to a standard dragnet clause.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For example, a trustor could use this contention defensively in support of a motion for summary judgment in a creditor's suit on the underlying obligation to establish that the obligation was secured by a dragnet clause in a trust deed that was previously foreclosed; thus, the action would be barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d [see, e.g., Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 405-407, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the trustor's default in payment of an unspecified debt that is covered by a dragnet clause included in the trust deed.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.13[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dragnet Clause Is Valid

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , are discussed in § 230.13[3][d]. In discussing the dragnet clause, the court said that these clauses have the effect of making a trust deed security for the debtor's past, present, and future obligations to a particular creditor. Because a lien may be created to take immediate effect, as security for the performance of obligations not yet in existence, these clauses are valid (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 398-399) .

[b] Obligations Are Related

Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 128 Cal. Rptr. 338 , is discussed in § 230.15[3][a].

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , are discussed in § 230.13[5][d]. No witness testified concerning the intent of the parties in regard to whether the third note was to be secured by the dragnet clause in the first trust deed. The court of appeal discussed two tests for determining whether the parties intended a subsequent obligation to be secured by a dragnet clause in a trust deed. Under the "relationship-of-the-loans" test, the courts will ascertain whether there is any connection between the loans. If there is little or no connection between the loans, or the loans are too different in nature, an inference can be drawn that the parties did not intend the second loan to fall under the security of the trust deed. On the other hand, if the first loan was a construction loan for improvements on the property and the second loan was for more improvements, it is likely that the two loans were intended to be secured by the one trust deed (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 404) . Under the relationship-of-the-loans test, the parties intended the third note to be secured by the trust deed, and the inference to the contrary drawn by the trial court was wholly irreconcilable with the evidence (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 405) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.15

§ 230.15 Dragnet Clause--Dragnet Clause Is Enforceable When Trustor or Successor Unreasonably Claims Unawareness of Clause's Scope or Effect

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE DRAGNET CLAUSE IS ENFORCEABLE NOTWITHSTANDING THECLAIM THAT THE _____ [TRUSTOR or TRUSTOR'S SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST] WAS UNAWARE OF THE CLAUSE'S SCOPE OR EFFECT BECAUSE THERE IS NO REASONABLE BASIS FOR THIS CLAIM.

Trustor Had Unreasonable Intent. Implicit in holdings concerning the intention of the parties in regard to whether a loan is secured by a dragnet clause is the requirement that a party's intentions respecting the dragnet clause must not be unreasonable (Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295-297, 128 Cal. Rptr. 338).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in reply to the contention that a loan in default is not secured under a trust deed pursuant to a standard dragnet clause, when the trustor or a successor in interest claims to have been unaware of the scope or effect of the clause.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should explain how the trustor's or successor's claim of being unaware of the scope or effect of the dragnet clause was manifestly unreasonable in the circumstances.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustor Had Unreasonable Intent

Wong v. Beneficial Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 128 Cal. Rptr. 338 , was an action by owners, the successors in interest of the original trustors, of an eight-building apartment complex. They sought damages for the beneficiary's refusal to allow them to redeem four of the eight deeds of trust. When the loan was made, to take advantage of the 80-percent loan limitation of Fin. Code § 7153, rather than be restricted to the 70-percent limitation of Fin. Code § 7152, eight separate notes and deeds of trust were executed. Each trust deed contained a dragnet clause, the effect of which was to make each trust deed security for all eight loans, and conversely, to secure each loan with all eight trust deeds. After notice of default had been given with respect to all eight trust deeds, the owners sought to reinstate the notes on the four front parcels while refusing to grant easements for access to the rear parcels. The tender was refused on the ground that the eight parcels constituted a single unit. At the trustee's sale, one of the defendants purchased all eight parcels. Judgment was for the defendants, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court discussed Lomanto v. Bank of America (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 99 Cal. Rptr. 442 (discussed in § 230.13[3][c]), saying that implicit in the Lomanto holding was the necessity that a party's unawareness of the dragnet clause be reasonable and that in determining the intention of the parties, only their reasonable intention is to be considered (56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295) . The court then discussed both the relationship-of-obligations test [see § 230.14 [3][b]] and the reliance-on-security test [see § 230.13 [3][d]] (56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295-296) . Applying those principles, the court noted that although the plaintiffs testified that they were unaware of the dragnet provision, and they had not signed the notes or deeds of trust, the plaintiffs had assumed them and had made a physical inspection of the property. They could not have been misled about the "singleness" of the transaction. Although each note referred to only one trust deed, it was clear that the complex constituted an indivisible whole. Each lot depended for its market value on its access to the common facilities and on the ability of one owner to have control of maintenance, and so forth (56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 296-297) . Given these considerations, under both tests, the dragnet clauses were enforceable, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to redeem any parcel without redeeming them all (56 Cal. App. 3d 286, 297) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustor Had Unreasonable Intent

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Lomanto v. Bank of America (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 99 Cal. Rptr. 442 , are discussed in § 230.13[3][c]. In sustaining the enforcement of the dragnet clause against the plaintiff husband, who alone had signed the two otherwise unsecured notes, the court of appeal found it unreasonable for him to think that the bank would lend him $11,500 and $5,500 on unsecured notes in 1967 when it had required security for the $11,500 loan made in 1965, which was still unpaid. In regard to the husband, the court said it had no hesitation in holding there was no abuse of discretion in sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend (22 Cal. App. 3d 663, 668) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.16

§ 230.16 Due-On-Sale Clause--Transfer of Property Did Not Trigger Due-on-Sale Clause [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BASED ON A DEFAULT IN THE PAYMENT OF THE ENTIRE SECURED DEBT, HAVING IMPROPERLY EXERCISED THE OPTION TO ACCELERATE THIS DEBT AFTER A _____ [SALE or TRANSFER] THAT WAS EXPRESSLY EXEMPTED BY STATUTE FROM VIOLATINGTHE PROVISIONS OF THE TRUST DEED.

Beneficiary May Not Invoke Due-on-Sale Clause After Exempt Sale or Transfer. If the real property that is the subject of a trust deed is residential real property containing fewer than five dwelling units, [including a lien on the stock allocated to a dwelling unit in a cooperative housing association, or on a residential manufactured home], a lender may not exercise an option pursuant to a due-on-clause on the basis of a sale or transfer of the property that constitutes the creation of a lien or other encumbrance subordinate to the lender's security instrument that does not relate to a transfer of rights of occupancy in the property (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(1)).

[EITHER]

[OR]

the creation of a purchase-money security interest for household appliances (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(2)).

[OR]

a transfer by devise, descent, or operation of law on the death of a joint tenant or tenant by the entirety (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(3)).

[OR]

the granting of a leasehold interest of three years or less not containing an option to purchase (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(4)).

[OR]

a transfer to a relative resulting from the death of a borrower (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(5)).

[OR]

a transfer by which the spouse or children of the borrower become an owner of the property (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(6)).

[OR]

a transfer resulting from a decree of dissolution of marriage, legal separation agreement, or an incidental property settlement agreement, by which the spouse of the borrower becomes an owner of the property (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(7)).

[OR]

a transfer into an inter vivos trust of which the borrower is and remains a beneficiary and that does not relate to a transfer of rights of occupancy in the property (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(8)).

[OR]

a transfer or disposition described in regulations prescribed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(9)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the beneficiary is not entitled to exercise the option under a due-on-sale clause to accelerate the entire debt and foreclose based on an unauthorized transfer of the property. The ground is that the beneficiary improperly exercised the option to accelerate, because a statutory exception to the right to accelerate applies to the sale or transfer at issue [see [d], below; for coverage of an additional, "window period" exception that applies to the preemptive effect of federal law in this area but has become virtually immaterial, see § 230.17[2][d]].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of exempted transfer. For example, this contention might be raised in support of an application for a preliminary injunction to enjoin a private foreclosure sale being conducted at the request of the beneficiary. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the sale or transfer that demonstrates that it is within one of the express exemptions of 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d).

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.17[1].

[d] Garn Act Exemptions

The Garn Act [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3 (Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982)] authorizes a trust deed beneficiary to accelerate the entire secured indebtedness pursuant to the terms of a due-on-sale clause in the trust deed. This right is subject to an exception, however, with respect to sales or transfers enumerated in this form [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b), (d)].

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, in consultation with the Comptroller ofthe Currency and the National Credit Union Administration Board, is authorized to issue rules and regulations and to publish interpretations governing the implementation of the Garn Act [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(e)(1)]. FHLBB regulations limit the enumerated exemptions in the following important respects [see 12 C.F.R. § 591.5(b)]:

- The exemption under 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(1) applies only to a subordinate lien or encumbrance that was not created pursuant to a contract for a deed [12 C.F.R. § 591.5(b)(1)(I)].

- The exemptions under 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(5)-(7) apply only if the transferee occupies or will occupy the encumbered property [12 C.F.R. § 591.5(b)(1)(v)].

- The exemption under 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d)(8) applies only if the borrower remains an occupant of the encumbered property and does not refuse, as a condition precedent to the transfer, to provide the lender with a reasonable means acceptable to the lender by which the lender will be notified in a timely manner of any subsequent transfer of the beneficial interest or change in occupancy [12 C.F.R. § 591.5(b)(1)(vi)].

In addition, an exemption is lost when an event later occurs that disqualifies a transfer for a previously applicable exemption [12 C.F.R. § 591.5(b)(5)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.17

§ 230.17 Due-On-Sale Clause--Transfer of Property Triggered Due-on-Sale Clause [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED ON THE GROUND OF HAVING PROPERLY EXERCISED THE OPTION TO ACCELERATE THE ENTIRE OUTSTANDING SECURED INDEBTEDNESS AFTER (1) THE TRUSTOR _____ [SOLD or TRANSFERRED] THE REAL PROPERTY WITHOUT THE BENEFICIARY'S PRIOR WRITTEN CONSENT, IN VIOLATION OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE TRUST DEED, AND (2) THE TRUSTOR'S _____ [PURCHASER or TRANSFEREE] THEREAFTER DEFAULTED IN THE PAYMENT OF THE DEBT.

Beneficiary Is Entitled to Invoke Due-on-Sale Clause. A lender is entitled to enter into and enforce a loan transaction secured by a trust deed to real property that contains a due-on-sale clause, under which the lender has an option to declare immediately due and payable all outstanding secured sums, in the event that all or any part of the real property security is sold or transferred without the lender's prior written consent (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(a)(1)-(3), (b)(1)). Except as otherwise provided under Title 12 of the United States Code, Section 1701j-3(d), the lender may exercise its option under a due-on-sale clause in accordance with the terms of the trust deed (12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a lender is entitled to foreclose under a trust deed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 725a, 726] because the trustor sold or transferred the subject real property without the beneficiary's written consent, in violation of a due-on-sale clause in the trust deed. Counsel should be aware that some transfers do not provide a basis for exercising a due-on-sale clause [see 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d), discussed in § 230.16 [2]].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the beneficiary's right to enforce the due-on-sale clause. For example, this contention might be made in support of the beneficiary's motion for summary judgment in the trustor's action to enjoin a private foreclosure sale. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the trustor's unauthorized sale or transfer in violation of a due-on-sale clause included in the trust deed.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.16[1].

[d] Garn Act Authority to Invoke Due-on-Sale Clause

The Garn Act [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3 (Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982)] authorizes a lender to enter into and enforce a loan transaction secured by a trust deed that contains a due-on-sale clause [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)(1); see 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(a)(3)]. A "due-on-sale clause" refers to a contract provision that authorizes a lender, at its option, to declare due and payable all sums secured by the trust deed in the event that all or any part of the real property, or an interest in it, is sold or transferred without the lender's prior written consent [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(a)(1)]. A lender's exercise of its optionunder such a clause is exclusively governed by the terms of the agreement, subject only to certain limitations specified under 12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(d) [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)(2)].

All state law to the contrary is preempted by the Garn Act [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)(1)]. Preempted state law includes a line of California decisions, beginning with Wellenkamp v. Bank of America (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 943, 953, 148 Cal. Rptr. 379, 582 P.2d 970 , prohibiting enforcement of a due-on-sale clause unless the lender could demonstrate that it was reasonably necessary to protect the security from impairment or risk of default. This preemptive effect is limited only by the statutory "window period" exception [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(b)(1), (c)]. A window-period loan is one originated by an entity other than a federal association and made or assumed on or after August 25, 1978, and before October 15, 1982. The due-on-sale clause in a trust deed securing a window- period loan cannot be enforced with respect to a transfer made before October 15, 1985 [12 U.S.C. § 1701j-3(c); see Miranda v. Macias (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 188, 192, 191 Cal. Rptr. 177 ; see also 12 C.F.R. § 591.2(p)]. With the passage of time, however, this window-period exception has become virtually immaterial.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.18

§ 230.18 Merger of Interests--Trust Deed Was Extinguished by Merger

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE IT WAS EXTINGUISHED BY MERGER INTO THE BENEFICIARY'S _____ [FEE INTEREST IN THE PROPERTY or SENIOR TRUST DEED].

Trust Deed Extinguished by Merger. Although the question is one of intent, actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united, when the same person holds two or more interests in a single parcel of real property without any intermediate estate intervening, the lesser interest is merged into the greater, and is annihilated (Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 406, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 (second trust deed into first); Ralph C. Sutro Co. v. Paramount Plastering, Inc. (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 433, 438, 31 Cal. Rptr. 174 (trust deed into fee)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a beneficiary is not entitled to foreclose under a trust deed. The ground is that the beneficiary's interest under the trust deed has been merged with some other, greater interest of the beneficiary in the same property, and thus the trust deed has been extinguished.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For example, a trustor could use this contention defensively in support of an application for a preliminary injunction to enjoin a private foreclosure sale being conducted at the request of the beneficiary. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the two estates held by the beneficiary and any facts supporting the presumed intent that they merge.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.19[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trust Deed Extinguished by Merger

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Union Bank v. Wendland (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 126 Cal. Rptr. 549 , are discussed in § 230.13[3][d]. The second trust deed, the court concluded, had been merged into the first trust deed because the estates of the two trust deeds were united in the bank with no intervening interest (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 405-406) . A merger occurs when a greater estate and a lesser estate coincide in the same person in one and the same right without any intermediate estate. The question is one of intent, actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united, but the court concluded that here, Code Civ. Proc. § 580d required the inference as a matter of law that the bank intended the two instruments to merge (54 Cal. App. 3d 393, 406) .

Ralph C. Sutro Co. v. Paramount Plastering, Inc. (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 433, 31 Cal. Rptr. 174 , was an interpleader action by a lender to determine the disposition of money held by it under a construction loan agreement. The loan agreement provided for disbursement in seven installments, with the last to be paid when the borrower established that all costs of labor, materials, and other expenses had been fully paid. In this, the borrower defaulted. After notice of default was filed, the lender sold the note and trust deed at the foreclosure sale. The building had been completed and there was no dispute as to the quality ortimely completion of construction. The trial court awarded the money pro rata to those with outstanding claims for services rendered or materials delivered for construction. The note holder appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. After concluding that the materialmen were third party beneficiaries of the construction loan agreement, the court considered the note holder's contention that the undisbursed funds were to be applied to the indebtedness owing under provisions in the construction loan agreement and note. The court disagreed, saying said that the sale of the property had satisfied the secured claim and extinguished the lien of the trust deed (216 Cal. App. 2d 433, 438) . Also, a lien is extinguished under ordinary circumstances by merger of the lien and ownership of the land in one person, unless it is necessary for the protection of that person's rights that the lien be kept alive. No such necessity was found here (216 Cal. App. 2d 433, 438) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.19

§ 230.19 Merger of Interests--Trust Deed Has Not Been Extinguished by Merger

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE IT HAS NOT BEEN EXTINGUISHED BY MERGER INTO THE BENEFICIARY'S _____ [FEE INTEREST IN THE PROPERTY or SENIOR TRUST DEED].

No Merger. Merger is a question of intent of the person in whom the interests are united. Equity will prevent or permit a merger as will best serve the purposes of justice and the actual and just intent of the parties. In the absence of an expression of intention, if the interest of the person in whom the several estates have been united would best be served by keeping them separate, the intent to keep them separate will ordinarily be inferred (Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field (1905) 146 Cal. 644, 652-653, 80 P. 1080 ; Strike v. Trans-West Discount Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 743, 155 Cal. Rptr. 132).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the right of foreclosure exists on the ground that there has been no merger of the interest sought to be foreclosed with a superior interest of the beneficiary in the same property.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For example, the beneficiary could use this contention in support of a motion for summary judgment in the trustor's suit to enjoin a private foreclosure sale [see, e.g., Strike v. Trans-West Discount Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 738, 155 Cal. Rptr. 132] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the two estates held by the beneficiary and any facts showing the beneficiary's intention that they should not be merged.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.18[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Merger

Strike v. Trans-West Discount Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 155 Cal. Rptr. 132 , was an action by spouses, as trustors, to enjoin a private foreclosure sale under a trust deed that had been purchased from the original beneficiary. The defendant originally lent money to the trustors' business. In connection with those loans, the husband signed a continuing guaranty. When the company became insolvent, the husband, on the advice of counsel, executed a confession of judgment in favor of the defendant. Later, when the first trust deed on the trustors' home was in foreclosure, the defendant purchased it and entered into an agreement with the trustors (the June agreement) under which the defendant was given a grant deed to the property, the foreclosure was postponed, and the trustors were given three months to pay the combined debts with interest. The trustors did not pay as agreed. After an unsuccessful unlawful detainer action in which it was determined that the grant deed and June agreement together constituted a security device, the defendant instructed the trustee to proceed with a trustee's sale. The trustors then commenced this action and obtained a temporary restraining order preventing the foreclosure sale. Although the final judgment vacated the notice of sale, it established that on filing of another notice of default, the defendant was entitled to foreclose. The trustors appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The trustors contended that the defendant intended to merge the acquired trust deed and the confession-of-judgment lien into the June agreement and grant deed. In regard to the grant deed, the court upheldthe trial court's finding and that of the unlawful detainer judgment, ruling that it was only a security device. Merger is a question of intent of the person in whom the interests are united and does not always follow from the union of a greater and lesser estate in the same person. Equity will prevent or permit a merger as will best serve the purposes of justice and the actual and just intent of the parties. In the absence of an expression of intent, if the interest of the person in whom the several estates have been united would best be served by keeping them separate, the intent to keep them separate will ordinarily be inferred. Clearly, the defendant's interests were best served by inferring no intent to effect a merger. Additionally, merger was inconsistent with the reconveyance provisions of the June agreement. Further, if there had been a merger, the confession-of-judgment lien, being the lesser, would have merged into the trust deed lien (92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 743) .

Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field (1905) 146 Cal. 644, 80 P. 1080 , was a foreclosure action by a bank, with a cross complaint by another bank to foreclose its mortgage. After commencement of the action, the mortgagors sold the property to a third party who also purchased the plaintiff bank's note and mortgage. Judgment was for the cross-complaining bank on the ground that the mortgage had merged with the fee. The plaintiff bank and the third-party purchaser both appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding no evidence of intent on the part of the third-party purchaser to extinguish the lien of the plaintiff bank's mortgage (146 Cal. 644, 652, 655) . The instrument by which the note and mortgage were assigned contained a guaranty that the mortgage assigned was a first lien. The deed to the third-party purchaser declared that the land was subject to those two certain mortgages in favor of the two banks (146 Cal. 644, 652). The ordinary rule--when the holder of a mortgage acquires the estate of the mortgagor, the mortgage interest is merged in the fee and is extinguished--is never applied when there is an intervening lien on the property that it is in the interest of the purchaser to keep. Merger is a question of intent and will not be inferred if there is an intervening claim. Equity will keep the legal title and the mortgagee's interest separate, although they may be held by the same person, whenever necessary for the full protection of the mortgagee's just rights (146 Cal. 644, 653). The Court considered the advantage to the purchaser in there being no merger. Without a merger, the purchaser would take subject to the second mortgage but, in a foreclosure sale, would be entitled to receive out of the proceeds all the money due on the first mortgage (or could keep the property by paying only the excess it brought over the first mortgage). If there were a merger, the purchaser would have to pay the second mortgage in full in order to keep the property or obtain the proceeds of its sale (146 Cal. 644, 654) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.20

§ 230.20 Unintentional Impairment of Security--Beneficiary May Not Foreclose and Must Allow Trustor to Rebuild After Insured Loss

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE SECURITY HAS NOT BEEN IMPAIRED. THEREFORE, THE BENEFICIARY CANNOT REQUIRE INSURANCE PROCEEDS TO BE APPLIED IN PAYMENT OF THE LOAN BUT MUST ALLOW THE TRUSTOR TO REBUILD.

Beneficiary Must Allow Trustor to Rebuild When Security Has Not Been Impaired. The right of a beneficiary to apply insurance proceeds to a debt secured by a trust deed must be exercised in good faith and with fair dealing. To the extent that the security has not been impaired, the beneficiary must permit the proceeds to be used for rebuilding (Stats. 1988, ch. 179, § 3; Stats. 1987, ch. 397, § 5; Schoolcraft v. Ross (1981) 81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 77, 80-81, 146 Cal. Rptr. 57).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the beneficiary is not entitled to foreclose because of a casualty that damaged the property covered by the trust deed and must allow the insurance proceeds to be applied to pay down the loan balance. The ground is a specific declaration of legislative intent that a trustor be allowed to use insurance proceeds to rebuild unless the beneficiary can show that the security would be impaired [see Stats. 1988, ch. 179, § 3; Stats. 1987, ch. 397, § 5]. Most trust deeds will contain contradictory provisions, one requiring the trustor to repair the damage and another allowing the beneficiary to apply the insurance proceeds to pay down the loan balance. The provisions must be construed in accordance with Schoolcraft v. Ross (1981) 81 Cal.

App. 3d 75, 146 Cal. Rptr. 57 (discussed in [3][a], below) [Stats. 1988, ch. 179, § 3; Stats. 1987, ch. 397, § 5].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the beneficiary's lack of entitlement to institute foreclosure. For example, this contention might be raised in support of an application for a preliminary injunction to enjoin a private foreclosure sale being conducted at the request of the beneficiary. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts ofthe case. Thus counsel should include a factual background to support the contention that the security would not be impaired if the trustor were allowed to rebuild.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.21[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficiary Must Allow Trustor to Rebuild When Security Would Not Be Impaired

The plaintiffs in Schoolcraft v. Ross (1981) 81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 146 Cal. Rptr. 57 , purchased a home from the defendant in 1974 and executed a note for $14,500 and a trust deed in favor of the defendant in payment of the purchase price. The house was destroyed by fire in January 1975. At that time the balance on the note was $13,585. Under the trustors' insurance policy, they could either accept $8,250 in cash, which represented the cash value of the house at the time of the loss, or rebuild the house and receive reimbursement of $14,100. The trust deed contained a provision requiring the trustors to repair or rebuild and a provision allowing the defendant to apply the insurance proceeds to decrease the loan balance. The trustors decided to rebuild and so informed the insurance company. The insurance company forwarded a check payable jointly to the trustors and the defendant in the amount of $8,250 and informed the trustors that $5,850 would be paid on completion of the new house. The defendant refused to permit the proceeds to be used to rebuild. The trustors were forced to rent an apartment and to cease making monthly payments on the note. The defendant foreclosed and purchased the property at foreclosure for $600. The defendant then resold the property for $6,000. The trustors sued the defendant for damages sustained because of the defendant's refusal to let them rebuild. They introduced evidence that a new home could have been constructed for $14,100, which would have had a market value of $20,000 on completion because of rising property values. Judgment was for the trustors for $4,500 plus costs. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, relying in part on Milstein v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487, 103 Cal. Rptr. 16 , which dealt with similar issues in the context of a partial taking by eminent domain. The implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing required the beneficiary not to cut off the trustors' right to use the borrowed funds, without a showing that the security was impaired (81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 77, 80) . The two clauses of the trust deed (requiring repair and allowing payment) must be construed to accomplish the basic intentions inherent in any loan and trust deed arrangement, namely that the loan be paid in the ordinary course of events to the end that the trustor enjoy full use of the house and the borrowed funds for the period and on the terms originally contemplated. The trust deed must be construed to avoid unintended acceleration of the note. As there was no evidence that the defendant's security was impaired or that the trustors would have been unwilling or unable to continue making payments, application of the insurance proceeds to pay down the loan was improper and a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 80-81) .

The holding in Schoolcraft has been specifically declared to be a legislative exception to, or limitation on, the beneficiary's rights conferred by Civ. Code § 2924.7(b) and Fin. Code §§ 1227.3 and 7462, set forth in § 230.21[1] [Stats. 1988, ch. 179, § 3; Stats. 1987, ch. 397, § 5; see § 230.21[3]].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.21

§ 230.21 Unintentional Impairment of Security--Beneficiary May Foreclose Although Security Is Not Impaired [Civ. Code § 2924.7; Fin. Code §§ 882.020 et seq., 2911]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS [AND WAS] ENTITLED TO _____ [DECLARE A DEFAULT or PROCEED WITH THE FORECLOSURE SALE] BECAUSE OF THE TRUSTOR'S FAILURE TO _____ [specify nature of default, e.g., MAINTAIN HAZARD INSURANCE ON THE IMPROVEMENTS TO THE REAL PROPERTY ENCUMBERED BY THE TRUST DEED IN AN AMOUNT EQUAL TO THE REPLACEMENT VALUE OF THOSE IMPROVEMENTS].

[EITHER]

A. Provisions Enforceable Whether Security Is Impaired. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize any beneficiary, trustee, or mortgagee, or agent or successor in interest, to accelerate the maturity date of the principal and interest on any loan secured thereby or to exercise any power of sale or other remedy contained therein upon the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to pay, at the times provided for under the terms of the trust deed or mortgage, any taxes, rents, assessments, or insurance premiums with respect to the property or the loan, or any advances made by the beneficiary or mortgagee, or agent or successor in interest, shall be enforceable whether or not impairment of the security interest in the property has resulted from the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to pay the taxes, rents, assessments, insurance premiums, or advances (Civ. Code § 2924.7(a)).

[Optional] B. Control of Insurance Proceeds. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize any beneficiary, trustee, ormortgagee, or agent or successor in interest, to receive and control the disbursement of the proceeds of any policy of fire, flood, or other hazard insurance respecting the property shall be enforceable whether or not impairment of the security interest in the property has resulted from the event that caused the proceeds of the insurance policy to become payable (Civ. Code § 2924.7(b); see Ford v. Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corporation (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1520, 1525) .

[OR, if beneficiary is bank or successor]

A. Provisions Enforceable Whether Security Is Impaired. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize any state or nationally chartered bank to accelerate the maturity date of the principal and interest on any loan secured thereby or to exercise any power of sale or other remedy contained in the trust deed or mortgage, upon the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to pay, at the times provided under the terms of the trust deed or mortgage, any taxes, rents, assessments, or insurance premiums with respect to the real property securing the loan, or upon the failure to pay any advances made with respect to the trust deed or mortgage by the state or nationally chartered bank, shall be enforceable whether or not an impairment of the security interest in the real property has resulted from the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to pay the taxes, rents, assessments, insurance premiums, or advances (Fin. Code § 1227.2(a)). "State or nationally chartered bank" includes any person authorized by the State of California to make or arrange loans secured by real property, or a holding company of a state or nationally chartered bank or any successor in interest (Fin. Code § 1227.2(b)).

[Optional] B. Control of Insurance Proceeds. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize any state or nationally chartered bank to receive and control the disbursement of the proceeds of any policy of fire, flood, or other hazard insurance respecting the real property shall be enforceable whether or not an impairment of the security interest in the property has resulted from the event that caused the proceeds of the insurance policy to become payable (Fin. Code § 1227.3; see Ford v. Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corporation (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1520, 1525) .

[OR, if beneficiary is savings and loan association or successor]

A. Provisions Enforceable Whether Security Is Impaired. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize an association, federal association, affiliate or service corporation of an association or federal association, or any successor in interest thereto, to accelerate the maturity date of the principal and interest on any loan secured thereby or to exercise any power of sale or other remedy contained therein upon the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to pay, at the times provided for under the terms of the trust deed or mortgage, any taxes, rents, assessments, or insurance premiums with respect to the property or the loan, or any advances made by the association, federal association, affiliate or service corporation of an association or federal association, or any successor in interest thereto, shall be enforceable whether or not impairment of the security interest in the property has resulted from the failure of the trustor or mortgagor to so pay the taxes, rents, assessments, insurance premiums, or advances (Fin. Code § 7461).

[Optional] B. Control of Insurance Proceeds. The provisions of any trust deed or mortgage on real property which authorize an association, federal association, affiliate or service corporation of an association or federal association, or any successor in interest thereto, to receive and control the disbursement of the proceeds of any policy of fire, flood, or other hazard insurance respecting the property shall be enforceable whether or not impairment of the security interest in the property has resulted from the event that caused the proceeds of the insurance policy to become payable (Fin. Code § 7462; see Ford v. Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corporation (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1520, 1525) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be used to support the contention that the beneficiary may declare a default and accelerate the debt even though the security is not impaired, if the default is one of those listed in Civ. Code § 2924.7(a) (or the equivalent Fin. Code §§ 1227.2 and 7461). The example of default that is used in the point paragraph is related to Civ. Code § 2955.5, which prohibits a lender from requiring hazard insurance coverage on the property in excess of the replacement value of the improvements [see Civ. Code § 2955.5(a)].

Optional Paragraph B supports the contention that the beneficiary may enforce a provision in the trust deed or mortgage that allows receipt or control of the proceeds of any insurance on the property. This right is severely limited by the holding in Schoolcraft v. Ross (1981) 81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 146 Cal. Rptr. 57 (discussed in § 230.20[3][a]), and that decision is not abrogated insofar as it holds that the lender may not prohibit the use of insurance proceeds for restoration of the property without a showing that the security has been impaired [Stats. 1988, ch. 179, § 3; see Stats. 1987, ch. 397, § 5].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the beneficiary's right to have foreclosure or to apply insurance proceeds in payment of the debt. For example, this contention might be raised to support the beneficiary's motion for summary judgment in an action by the trustor to enjoin a private foreclosure sale. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the beneficiary's status and the particular default on which foreclosure is based.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.20[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Control of Insurance Proceeds

The plaintiff in Ford v. Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corporation (9th Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 1520 , sued the holder of the plaintiff's note and trust deed in federal court. The original amount of the note was $63,000, the purchase price. The note and trust deed were executed in July 1979. By September 4, 1980, the trustor was in default, and notice of default and election to sell were recorded. The trustor did not reinstate the loan; on the contrary, he declared bankruptcy. The holder of the note and trust deed obtained relief from the bankruptcy stay in order to conduct the foreclosure sale, but in October 1982, before the sale was held, the property was substantially damaged by a fire that was deliberately set. The insurance company issued a joint payee check for $31,100 to the trustor and the holder of the note and trust deed and agreed to pay an additional $39,000 in replacement coverage if the property was rebuilt. The trustor wanted to rebuild, but the defendant refused to allow it. The insurance proceeds were placed in a joint account and the litigation ensued. The district court gave judgment in favor of the defendant, and the trustor appealed.

The court of appeals affirmed. The court distinguished this case from Schoolcraft v. Ross (1981) 81 Cal. App. 3d 75, 146 Cal. Rptr. 57 (discussed in § 230.20[3][a]), noting that here, the long hiatus in payments had resulted in a debt balance that exceeded the original amount of the note, and that it was the trustor, not the note holder, that had frustrated the original intent of the parties, by not making payments. The defendant's security would be impaired if foreclosure were delayed while the trustor rebuilt; thus a finding that the defendant's security was not impaired would be clearly erroneous. In this situation, Schoolcraft did not require the defendant to let the trustor rebuild (831 F.2d 1520, 1525) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.22

§ 230.22 Limitation Period--Trust Deed Was Extinguished by Expiration of Limitation Period [Civ. Code §§ 882.020 et seq., 2911]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE BECAUSE THE LIEN OF THE TRUST DEED HAS EXPIRED PURSUANT TO _____; [CIVIL CODE SECTION 882.020 or CIVIL CODE SECTION 2911].

A. General Limitation. The lien of a trust deed that has not previously expired pursuant to Civil Code Section 2911 is not enforceable by _____ [a foreclosure action commenced or a power of sale exercised] after the last-expiring of the following period:

(1) If the final maturity date or the last date fixed for payment of the debt or performance of the obligation is ascertainable from the recorded evidence of indebtedness: 10 years after that date;

(2) If the final maturity date or the last date fixed for payment of the debt or performance of the obligation is not ascertainable from the recorded evidence of indebtedness, or if there is no final maturity date or last date fixed for payment of the debt or performance of the obligation: 60 years after the date the instrument that created the security interest was recorded;

(3) If an intent to preserve the security interest is recorded pursuant to Civil Code Section 880.310 et seq. and within the time prescribed in item (1) or (2): 10 years after the notice was recorded.

[Optional] B. Mortgage Limitation. A mortgage lien, and any power of sale contained in the mortgage, are extinguished by the lapse of the statutory period within which an action could be brought on the principal obligation ( Civ. Code § 2911; Faxon v. All Persons (1913) 166 Cal. 707, 715-717, 137 P. 919).

[Optional] C. Limitation on Foreclosure Action. The running of the statute of limitation on the debt secured by a trust deed bars an action to collect the debt and an action for judicial foreclosure (Civ. Code § 2911; Flack v. Boland (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 103, 106, 77 P.2d 1090 ; see Carson Redevelopment Agency v. Adam (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 608, 610-612, 186 Cal. Rptr. 615).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention thata beneficiary is not entitled to foreclose under a trust deed or mortgage. The ground is that the applicable limitation period has expired.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the trustor to restrain a private foreclosure sale, this contention might be raised in opposition to a motion for summary judgment by the beneficiary. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should show the facts by which the applicable limitation period is to be determined.

[c] Application and Effect of Statute

Civ. Code § 882.020 et seq. apply to trust deeds or mortgages executed or recorded before, on, or after the operative date of January 1, 1983 [Civ. Code § 882.040(b)]. The times prescribed by Civ. Code § 882.020(a) can be extended in the same manner and to the same extent as waiver made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5, except that the instrument is effective to extend the prescribed limitation period only if it is recorded before the expiration of the applicable period [Civ. Code § 882.020(c)]. Also, the beneficiary was allowed to record a notice of intent to preserve the security interest at any time before January 1, 1988, notwithstanding the requirement that this notice be recorded before expiration of the otherwise applicable period [Civ. Code §§ 880.370, 882.040(a)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mortgage Limitation

Faxon v. All Persons (1913) 166 Cal. 707, 137 P. 919 , was a quiet title action. The defendant bank in its amended answer claimed that it owned a portion of the property in question by virtue of a deed from the purchaser at the sale the bank conducted in 1908 pursuant to a power of sale in a mortgage by the plaintiff's predecessors in 1888. The underlying note was due in 1889. Judgment was for the plaintiff, and the bank appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, saying that at the time the bank attempted to execute the power of sale, not only were both the mortgagors dead but also the debt, note, and mortgage had become barred by the statute of limitation, and any lien created by the mortgage had been extinguished by Civ. Code § 2911 (166 Cal. 707, 715) . The power of sale is a mere incident or appurtenance of the mortgage lien, agreed on by the parties as a means of enforcing the lien, and can have no vitality or force when the lien itself no longer exists (166 Cal. 707, 716) . Further, this conclusion does not render Civ. Code § 2911 invalid for depriving the bank of rights vested under a contract. The contract of mortgage must be read in the light of the statutory provisions. There was nothing in the contract to suggest that the parties intended the power of sale to outlast the time prescribed by law for the existence of a mortgage lien (166 Cal. 707, 716-717) .

[b] Limitation on Foreclosure Action

Flack v. Boland (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 103, 77 P.2d 1090 , was a judicial foreclosure action commenced by the beneficiary's executor in 1934. The first note and trust deed were made in 1926. That note was payable in 1929. The trustors had made a second note and trust deed in favor of the cross complainant in 1931. That note was due in 1932. The trustors did not answer. The trial court rendered a decree foreclosing both trust deeds, establishing that the second trust deed had priority over the plaintiff's lien, and requiring the proceeds of the sale to be applied first to the defendant's lien, then to the plaintiff's, and that any surplus be paid to the trustors. The plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, stating that although the statute of limitation does not run against a power of sale in a trust deed, the limitation does apply to the commencement of a legal action. (The Marketable Record Title Act now provides for the eventual expiration of a power of sale [see Civ. Code § 882.020].) Further, a subsequent mortgagee or attachment lienholder can assert the statute of limitation (11 Cal. 2d 103, 106) . If the trustors had not defaulted but had answered, setting forth the defense of the statute of limitation, the plaintiff's foreclosure action would have been defeated, the plaintiff's lien would have been extinguished, and judgment would have been rendered for the trustors. Although the trustors' default constituted waiver of the statute of limitation for their own benefit, their default could not prevent the second lienholder from raising the defense (11 Cal. 2d 103, 107) . The Court disposed of the plaintiff's contention that the doctrine of election of remedies should not be applied, saying that the plaintiff chose the remedy, and even after the filing of the cross complaint, the plaintiff could have dismissed the foreclosure action and proceeded with a trustee's sale (11 Cal. 2d 103, 107-108) .

Carson Redevelopment Agency v. Adam (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 608, 186 Cal. Rptr. 615 , involved a dispute over condemnation proceeds. The trial court determined that the beneficiary of a trust deed had a compensable interest in the property and apportioned the proceeds between the holder and the trustor. The trustor claimed that the beneficiary had no right to a portion of the condemnation award because the statute of limitation had run on the underlying note.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that although the running of the limitation period on the note underlying the trust deed barred an action to enforce the note itself and an action for judicial foreclosure, the power of sale in the trust deed was not barred (136 Cal. App. 3d 608, 610) . The general rule that the beneficiary ofa trust deed has a compensable interest in an eminent domain proceeding should not be altered when the underlying note is barred by the statute of limitation (136 Cal. App. 3d 608, 613) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Limitation

In Schmidli v. Pearce (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 305, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment for plaintiffs, who brought this quiet title action to extinguish a lien on a deed of trust held by defendants against their property. Plaintiffs claimed that defendants' lien expired under the 10-year statute of limitations, which was triggered by defendant's recording of a notice of default. Defendants claimed that their notice of default did not trigger the 10-year statute, and their lien remained viable under the 60-year statute of limitations set forth in former Civ. Code § 882.020. The court agreed with the defendants that a notice of default is not "part of the record" and therefore does not trigger the 10-year statute of limitations. Defendants were entitled to the 60-year statute of limitations until they filed a notice of default, as they were required to do in order to enforce the deed of trust lien. If the notice of default made the maturity date ascertainable from the record, defendants would be compelled to surrender their right to the 60-year statute for the 10-year statute. Since all trust deed beneficiaries must file a notice of default before enforcing their lien, and since that notice must contain the obligation's maturity date, all beneficiaries would lose their right to claim the 60-year statute, and the 60-year would be rendered a nullity [178 Cal. App. 4th 305, 315]. The court followed the reasoning of Ung v. Koehler (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 186, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 311 , discussed below [178 Cal. App. 4th 305, 314-315]. The court disagreed with Slintak v. Buckeye Retirement Co., LLC, Ltd. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 575, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d

131 , discussed below, which determined that the phrase "the record" in former Section 882.020 meant any recorded document [178 Cal. App. 4th 305, 314-315].

The court in Schmidli noted that former Civ. Code § 882.020 was amended in 2007 to revised the phrase "ascertainable from the record" to read "ascertainable from the recorded evidence of indebtedness." It concluded that the amendment was intended to codify the holding in Ung. Thus, "recorded evidence of indebtedness" is a security, such as a deed of trust. A notice of default is not a security or evidence of indebtedness, but rather is an allegation of the existence of a debt, and thus cannot be an evidence of indebtedness for purposes of Section 882.020 [178 Cal. App. 4th 305, 315-316].

In Slintak v. Buckeye Retirement Co., LLC, Ltd. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 575, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 , a lis pendens recorded against a successive lender in connection with an action seeking cancellation of a trust deed to halt foreclosure on the property reset the limitations period under the Marketable Record Title Act. Under Civ. Code § 880.260, a real property interest does not expire or expire of record when (1) an action is commenced to enforce, establish, clear title to, or otherwise affect a real property interest, and (2) a notice of the pendency of the action is recorded within the original time limits of the Marketable Record Title Act. In Slintak, because the trust deed contained no due date for the obligation on the note, the running of the limitations period was reset and a new 10-year limitations period commenced on the date of recording of the lis pendens. After the expiration of the recommenced 10-year period, the power of sale in the trust deed would expire (139 Cal. App. 4th 575, 587) .

In Ung v. Koehler (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 186, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 311 , the plaintiff borrowed money from the defendant. The loan was evidenced by a promissory note that was secured by a deed of trust to two real properties. More than 11 years after the note matured, an agent for the defendant recorded a notice of default against one of the two properties. The plaintiff then filed a lawsuit to prevent the defendant from enforcing the security interest provided by the deed of trust, contending that the statutory time period for enforcement had expired. The trial court enjoined the defendant from conducting a nonjudicial sale of the property. It concluded that the defendant's right to nonjudicial foreclosure under the deed of trust had expired four years, rather than 10 or 60 years, after the note became due, pursuant to (1) Civ. Code § 882.030, which provides that "expiration of the lien of a mortgage, deed of trust, or other security interest pursuant to this chapter or any other statute renders the lien unenforceable by any means commenced or asserted thereafter," and (2) Civ. Code § 2911, which extinguishes the remedy of judicial foreclosure on expiration of a four-year statute of limitations. The court reasoned that the expiration of the lien under Civ. Code § 2911 renders a deed of trust "unenforceable by any means commenced or asserted thereafter," thereby precluding nonjudicial enforcement. The court of appeal reversed, reasoning that Civ. Code § 882.030 precludes enforcement of the security interest that has been statutorily extinguished, not necessarily the entire instrument creating the security interest (135 Cal. App. 4th 186, 196) . The reference to a "lien" in Civ. Code § 2911 has invariably been construed not to include the power of sale, which creates its security interest through passing title rather than imposing a lien (135 Cal. App. 4th 186, 196) . Giving effect to this long-standing judicial understanding of the term "lien" in § 2911, § 882.030 must be construed as making unenforceable only the right of judicial enforcement under Code Civ. Proc. § 725a, which is the only interest that is extinguished by § 2911 (135 Cal. App. 4th 186, 196) .

[b] Mortgage Limitation

Mix v. Sodd (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 386, 178 Cal. Rptr. 736 , was a quiet title action in which judgment was entered against the owner and in favor of the holder of two 36-year-old mortgages, on the ground that the owner had purchased the property with full knowledge of the two barred mortgages. The court of appeal reversed, saying that the owner was entitled to rely on Civ. Code § 2911. Although neither a mortgagor in possession, nor a transferee in privity with the mortgagor, nor one who took title before the limitation period expired, can maintain a quiet title action in the face of a debt that is unenforceable because of the statute of limitation, at some point a transferee is so removed from the original debtor that there is no good reason to disallow the remote taker from quieting title (126 Cal. App. 3d 386, 389-390) . In a state where nearly every conveyance of real property is preceded by a title search, the "bona fide purchaser" distinction relied on by the trial court would only serve to perpetuate clouds on title (126 Cal. App. 3d 386, 392) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
1. Effect of Legal Rights and Specific Clauses

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.23-230.29

[Reserved]

§§ 230.23[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
2. Protections for Military Service Members

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.30

§ 230.30 Protections for Military Service Members--Stay of Foreclosure Proceedings and Relief From Installment Contract or Mortgage, Trust, or Other Security in Nature of a Mortgage on Real Property for Purchase of Real Property by Active Service Member [Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 407(a), (b), 408; 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 532, 533]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE BECAUSE THE DEFENDANT IS AN ACTIVE MILITARY SERVICE MEMBER ENTITLED TO RELIEF FROM SUCH PROCEEDINGS PURSUANT TO _____ [MILITARY & VETERANS CODE SECTIONS 407 AND 408 or 50 UNITED STATES CODE APPENDIX SECTIONS 532 AND 533].

Court Has Authority to Stay Foreclosure Proceedings and Fashion Additional Remedies for Active Service Members. A court must stay proceedings to enforce mortgages and similar obligations on application of an active service member (or another person on the service member's behalf), and a court may stay such proceedings on the court's own motion. The court additionally has the authority to take any other action to conserve the interests of all parties if it finds that the ability of the defendant to comply with the terms of the obligation is materially affected by reason of the member's military service (Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(a), (b); 50 U.S.C. App. § 533(a), (b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for stay of foreclosure proceedings and related relief with regard to an installment contract or mortgage for the purchase of real property. They may be filed with the court by an active member of the United States military who otherwise meets the requirements for this type of relief with regard to an installment contract or mortgage, trust deed, or other security in the nature of a mortgage on real property [Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 407(a), (b), 408; 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 532, 533; see [c], below].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add arguments linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should show that defendant is an active military service member as defined by statute, specifying reasons for why the foreclosure is harmful to defendant and the exact remedy the defendant is seeking.

[c] Application and Effect of State and Federal Statutes

A court has extensive latitude in handling claims against a person who has joined military service after the date when he or she has given a deposit or paid an installment of the purchase price under a contract for the purchase of real or personal property, or purchased property secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, or other similar security [see Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 407, 408; 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 532, 533].

With regard to proceedings to enforce mortgages and similar obligations of active service members, on application by an active service member (or another person on the service member's behalf), a court must stay the proceedings and take any other action to conserve the interests of all parties if it finds that the ability of the defendant to comply with the terms of the obligation is materially affected by reason of the member's military service. The court may also take this action on its own motion [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(b); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 533(b)]. This applies to proceedings arising out of nonpayment of any sum due, or out of any other breach of the terms of the mortgage, commenced in any court during the period of military service to enforce the obligation. It covers obligations secured by a mortgage, trust deed, or other security in the nature of a mortgage on real property owned by a service member at the commencement of the period of the military service, and still owned by the service member whose obligations originated before the person's period of military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(a), (b); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 533(a), (b)].

An active service member is otherwise protected from foreclosure and similar actions. To be valid, any sale, foreclosure, or seizure of property for nonpayment of any sum due under any obligation, or for any other breach of the terms made during the member's period of military service or within three months thereafter, may only take place on an order previously granted by the court and a return made and approved by the court, except pursuant to an agreement between the parties [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(c); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 533(c)]. This is applicable to actions taken under a power of sale, a judgment entered on warrant of attorney to confess judgment contained in the warrant, or otherwise [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(c)]. Any person who knowingly makes or causes to be made any invalid sale, foreclosure, or seizure of property, or attempts to do so, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment not to exceed one year or by a fine not to exceed $1,000, or both [Mil. & Vet. Code § 408(d); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 533(d)].

Similarly, with regard to installment contracts to purchase real property, the court may use its discretion, and on its own motion make any other disposition of the case as may be equitable to conserve the interests of all parties [Mil. & Vet. Code § 407(b); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 532(c)]. If the court finds that terminating the contract and allowing the lender to resume possession of the property is an appropriate form of relief, the court may order the repayment of prior installments or deposits or any part of those as a condition of that relief [Mil. & Vet. Code § 407(b); 50 U.S.C. App. § 532(c)]. An active service member who meets the requirements for relief is protected by the law from any other actions from the lender or another party. Only by action of a court of competent jurisdiction may the selling party attempt to exercise any right or option under the contract to rescind or terminate the contract or resume possession of the property for nonpayment of any installment due, or for any other breach of its terms occurring before or during the period of the person's military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 407(a); 50 U.S.C. App. § 532(a)]. A lender or seller who knowingly resumes possession of the subject property, or attempts to do so, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment not to exceed one year or by a fine not to exceed $1,000, or both [Mil. & Vet. Code § 407(c); see 50 U.S.C. App. § 532(b)(1)].

For a general discussion of protection from foreclosure and other similar types of relief for active service members, and additional forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages (Matthew Bender).

23 of 180 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
A. Foreclosure Issues in General
2. Protections for Military Service Members

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.31-230.39

[Reserved]

§§ 230.31[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.40

§ 230.40 Recovery of Deficiency Is Barred by Statute--Deficiency Judgment Is Barred After Nonjudicial Foreclosure Sale [Code Cov. Proc. § 580d]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY MAY NOT RECOVER A DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT ON THE NOTE SECURED BY THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE REAL PROPERTY HAS BEEN SOLD UNDER THE POWER OF SALE IN THE TRUST DEED.

A. Deficiency Is Barred After Nonjudicial Foreclosure Sale. No judgment shall be rendered for any deficiency on a note secured by a trust deed on real property or an estate for years in real property in any case in which the real property or estate for years in real property has been sold by the trustee under a power of sale contained in that trust deed (Code Civ. Proc. § 580d).

[Optional] B. When "Sale" Occurs. A sale, after which recovery on the underlying note is barred by Code of Civil Procedure Section 580d, is complete when the trustee accepts a bid, regardless of whether a trustee's deed is subsequently executed and delivered (Ballengee v. Sadlier (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5, 224 Cal. Rptr. 301).

[Optional] C. Statute Bars Recovery From Guarantor After Private Sale. After a private foreclosure sale, Code of Civil Procedure Section 580d bars any further recovery, including recovery from the trustor's guarantor. While the statute does not directly bar recovery from a guarantor, it does indirectly bar recovery because, when the beneficiary has elected to conduct a private foreclosure sale that destroys the guarantor's recourse against the trustor, the beneficiary is estopped as a matter of law from seeking recovery of any deficiency from the guarantor (Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 41, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a deficiency judgment is barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, because the debt for which recovery is sought is evidenced by a note secured by a trust deed, and the real property or estate for years in real property has been sold under the power of sale contained in that trust deed.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary on the underlying debt, the contention may be raised in support of a motion for summary judgment by the trustor. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should demonstrate that the debt for which recovery is sought was evidenced by a note secured by a trust deed, and that the real property was sold at a private foreclosure sale held pursuant to a power of sale contained in that trust deed.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms relating to waiver of the guarantor's defense based on Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 (discussed in [3][b], below), see Ch. 222, Suretyship .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 230.50[1], and/or 230.51[1], or 230.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When "Sale" Occurs

The plaintiffs in Ballengee v. Sadlier (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1, 224 Cal. Rptr. 301 , were the beneficiaries under a second trust deed. The defendants defaulted in payments on notes secured by both the first and second trust deeds. The plaintiffs and the holders of the first trust deed each started separate private foreclosure proceedings under their respective trust deeds. The sale under the plaintiffs' second trust deed was conducted first. The plaintiffs were the successful bidders. The trustee executed a "Declaration of Trustee's Sale" but did not execute and deliver a trustee's deed. Later, when the property was again sold under the first trust deed, the plaintiffs brought an action against the defendants on the underlying note. The trial court entered judgment for the defendants on the ground that recovery was barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d. The plaintiffs appealed, arguing that the sale under their second trust was never completed because no deed was ever executed or delivered. Their second trust deed was therefore still in effect until it was rendered worthless by the sale under the senior trust deed, and consequently Code Civ. Proc. § 580d did not apply to them under the exception afforded to sold-out junior lienholders [see § 230.51].

The court of appeal affirmed. The sale under the second trust deed was complete when the trustee accepted the plaintiffs' bid, as evidenced by the trustee's declaration. The subsequent execution and delivery of the trustee's deed evidencing the transfer of title were merely ministerial acts not necessary for completion of the sale. Therefore, Code Civ. Proc. § 580d clearly applied to bar recovery (179 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5) .

[b] Statute Bars Recovery From Guarantor After Private Sale

In Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 , the bank lent money to a third party, who executed a note secured by a trust deed, and the defendant was the guarantor of the note. On the trustor's default, the trustor's interest was foreclosed at private sale. The bank then brought an action against the guarantor to recover the deficiency. The trial court sustained the guarantor's demurrer without leave to amend, and the bank appealed the judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. A creditor cannot recover from a guarantor the unpaid balance on a secured note after the creditor's private foreclosure sale of the property. Although the creditor's recovery was not directly barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, it was indirectly barred by principles of estoppel. Estoppel arises as a matter of law to prevent the creditor from recovering from the guarantor after the creditor has exercised an election of remedies that destroys the guarantor's subrogation rights against the principal debtor. The destruction of the guarantor's subrogation rights follows from the combination of the creditor's election to subject the property to nonjudicial sale and the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, which prevents both the creditor and the guarantor from obtaining any deficiency judgment against the debtor after the nonjudicial sale (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 41) . The creditor could have initially elected other remedies that would not have destroyed the guarantor's subrogation rights, that is, either a judicial foreclosure action in which the guarantor could have been joined, or an action on the written guaranty. Thus, the ultimate impact of loss should fall on the creditor, as the party that had the election of remedies and had a duty not to impair the guarantor's remedies against the debtor (265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 43-47) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deficiency Is Barred After Nonjudicial Foreclosure Sale

Passanisi v. Merit-McBride Realtors, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 236 Cal. Rptr. 59 (discussed in § 230.100[3][c]), considered whether the judgment for costs and attorney's fees awarded to the beneficiary in the trustor's previous action to enjoin the trustee's sale was rendered unenforceable under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d by the subsequent sale of the property. Neither the purpose nor the express language of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d made the attorney's fee award unenforceable. The judgment could not be considered a subterfuge for collection of a deficiency judgment. The award arose from an action commenced by the trustor and wasentirely removed from the problems addressed by the antideficiency legislation (190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 1509) .

[b] Statute Bars Recovery From Guarantor After Private Sale

In Consolidated Capital Income Trust v. Khaloghli (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 107, 227 Cal. Rptr. 879 , the plaintiff lent money to a corporation, which executed a note secured by a trust deed. The sole shareholder of the corporation was the guarantor of the note. On default by the corporation, the plaintiff sued on the guaranty. The plaintiff also conducted a private foreclosure sale under the trust deed during the pendency of that action. The guarantor thereafter obtained summary judgment. On appeal, the court of appeal reiterated the rule of Union Bank v. Gradsky (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 40, 71 Cal. Rptr. 64 (discussed in [3][b], above), that a creditor is estopped as a matter of law from recovering a deficiency judgment from a guarantor after the creditor has elected the remedy of private foreclosure sale that, by operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, destroys the guarantor's subrogation rights against the debtor (183 Cal. App. 3d 107, 113). However, the court went on to reverse the summary judgment, on the ground that a triable question of fact existed as to whether the guarantor had already waived his subrogation rights before the private sale (183 Cal. App. 3d 107, 113-117).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.41

§ 230.41 Recovery of Deficiency Is Barred by Statute--Deficiency Judgment on Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Barred [Code Civ. Proc. § 580b]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] MAY NOT RECOVER A DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT BECAUSE THE FORECLOSURE SALE OF THE REAL PROPERTY WAS CONDUCTED UNDER A TRUST DEED SECURING PAYMENT OF THE PURCHASE PRICE OF THE REAL PROPERTY.

A. Deficiency Judgment on Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Barred. No deficiency judgment shall lie in any event after any sale of real property or an estate for years for failure of the purchaser to complete the contract of sale, or under a trust deed given to the vendor to secure payment of the balance of the purchase price of real property, or under a trust deed on a dwelling for not more than four families given to a lender to secure repayment of a loan that was in fact used to pay all or part of the purchase price of that dwelling occupied, entirely or in part, by the purchaser. [When both a chattel mortgage and a trust deed have been given to secure payment of the balance of the combined purchase price of both real and personal property, no deficiency judgment shall lie at any time under any one of them if no deficiency judgment would lie under the trust deed on real property] (Code Civ. Proc. § 580b).

[Optional] B. Statute Bars Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder. In the case of a purchase-money trust deed, the beneficiary may look only to the property for recovery of the debt. There can be no deficiency judgment when there has been a private sale or a judicial foreclosure sale under the purchase-money trust deed or when there has been no sale under the purchase-money trust deed because the security has been rendered valueless or is exhausted as a result of foreclosure of a senior trust deed (Brown v. Jensen (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 193, 197-198, 259 P.2d 425 ; Shepherd v. Robinson (1981) 128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 623, 180 Cal. Rptr. 342).

[Optional] C. Statute Applies to Residential Construction Loan by Third-Party Lender. A trust deed in favor of a third-party lender given to secure repayment of a construction loan, if the proceeds are in fact used to pay all or part of the cost of constructing a dwelling on the real property for occupation by the owner, constitutes a purchase-money trust deed subject to Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b to the same extent as a trust deed "on a dwelling for not more than four families given to a lender to secure repayment of a loan which was in fact used to pay all or part of the purchase price of such dwelling, occupied, entirely or in part, by the purchaser" (Prunty v. Bank of America (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 430, 439-443, 112 Cal. Rptr. 370).

[Optional] D. Refinancing Is Sale. A beneficiary under a refinanced trust deed who participates in the refinancing will be a vendor within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b and will be barred from recovering a deficiency judgment after foreclosure if the refinancing transaction is otherwise subject to the antideficiency statutes (Costanzo v. Ganguly (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1090-1092, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 ; LaForgia v. Kolsky (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1112-1113, 242 Cal. Rptr. 282).

[Optional] E. Loan Need Not Be Exclusively for Purchase Money. A trust deed is a purchase-money trust deed within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b if the loan it secures is part of the consideration for, or necessary to the consummation of, a sale or exchange of real property. In order to bar a deficiency judgment, it is not necessary that all of the loan proceeds be used to pay the purchase price or expenses of the sale (Bargioni v. Hill (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 121, 123-124, 28 Cal. Rptr. 321, 378 P.2d 593 ; BMP Property Development v. Melvin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 529-532, 243 Cal. Rptr. 715).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of thecontention that a deficiency judgment is barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b because the debt for which recovery is sought is or was secured by a purchase-money trust deed.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by a sold-out junior lienholder on the underlying debt, the contention may be raised in support of the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should demonstrate that the debt for which recovery is sought is or was secured by a purchase-money trust deed subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 580b.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 230.50[1], and/or 230.51[1], 230.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute Bars Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

In Brown v. Jensen (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 193, 259 P.2d 425 , the plaintiff sold real property to the defendants. As part of the purchase price, the defendants gave two promissory notes: one, to a third-party lender, secured by a first trust deed on the property; the other, to the plaintiff, secured by a second trust deed on the property. The defendants defaulted on the notes, and the third-party lender sold the property at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale. The plaintiff, whose security had been rendered valueless, brought an action to recover on her note and obtained a judgment. The defendants appealed, contending that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred the recovery.

The Supreme Court reversed with directions to enter judgment for the defendants. The plaintiff had clearly taken a purchase-money trust deed on the property when it was purchased; therefore, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b was applicable, and she could look only to the property (41 Cal. 2d 193, 196, 197). With purchase-money trust deeds, the character of the transaction is determined at the time the trust deed is executed. Its nature is then fixed for all time, and no deficiency judgment may be obtained regardless of whether the security later becomes valueless (41 Cal. 2d 193, 197). Code Civ. Proc. § 580b expressly refers to a deficiency judgment after a sale of the property, but that language also includes situations in which a sale would be an idle act because the security has been exhausted or rendered valueless (41 Cal. 2d 193, 197-198) . In other words, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b bars recovery of a deficiency by the beneficiary of a purchase-money trust deed, whether there is a private foreclosure sale under that trust deed, a judicial foreclosure sale, or no sale because the security has become valueless or is exhausted (41 Cal. 2d 193, 198) .

In 1969, the plaintiffs in Shepherd v. Robinson (1981) 128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 180 Cal. Rptr. 342 (overruled on other grounds in DeBerard Properties, Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 671, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843), sold property to the purchasers, who executed a purchase-money note and trust deed. In 1973, those purchasers sold the property to the defendants. This sale involved refinancing in which a third-party lender took a first trust deed on the property. The proceeds of the third-party loan were used to pay down the original note. The plaintiffs took a new note secured by a second trust deed for the unpaid balance. After the plaintiffs' security was rendered worthless by foreclosure of the third-party lender's first trust deed, the plaintiffs brought an action to recover on the replacement note. The trial court granted partial summary judgment in their favor. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed to the extent that the trial court granted the plaintiffs a deficiency judgment, holding that a deficiency judgment was barred by statute (128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 627) . Under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, a seller can look only to the property for the recovery of a purchase-money debt that is secured by the property. This is equally true when the debt in question is a second trust deed and the property has been foreclosed on by the senior lienholder, leaving the security exhausted (128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 623). The plaintiffs were the sellers in the 1973 transaction because they were necessary parties to the transaction, consented to it, and participated in it (128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 623-624).

[b] Statute Applies to Residential Construction Loan by Third-Party Lender

In Prunty v. Bank of America (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 430, 112 Cal. Rptr. 370 , owners executed a trust deed to secure a construction loan for a residence on the property. The residence was constructed but was subsequently destroyed by a landslide. The owners obtained a declaratory judgment that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred the bank from recovering a deficiency judgment in the event of their default and a judicial foreclosure sale.

The court of appeal affirmed. Code Civ. Proc. § 580b bars a deficiency judgment after a sale under a trust deed on a dwelling given to a third-party lender "to secure repayment of a loan which was in fact used to pay all or part of the purchase price of such dwelling occupied, entirely or in part, by the purchaser" (37 Cal. App. 3d 430, 439-440) . Noting the liberal construction to be given to Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, the court held that this language included a trust deed onproperty given to a third-party lender to secure repayment of a loan that in fact was used to pay costs of constructing a dwelling on the property, which was occupied by the borrower (37 Cal. App. 3d 430, 440-443) .

[c] Refinancing Is Sale

In Costanzo v. Ganguly (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 , the plaintiff sold an apartment complex consisting of 11 buildings and took back a promissory note secured by a wrap-around second trust deed. The property was then sold with financing by a wrap-around third trust deed, which encompassed the first and second liens. After a default on the last note, the property was sold again with financing under which a savings and loan provided $2 million secured by a new first lien and $400,000 financed by 11 promissory notes secured by the buildings and payable to the persons who had last sold the property. The plaintiff asked to have the deal restructured to avoid the tax consequences of having her note paid, which resulted in her exchanging her note for cash and an assignment of the 11 promissory notes. The property was then sold to the defendant, who executed 11 new notes on the same terms to the plaintiff. The defendant defaulted, and the senior lienholder foreclosed, extinguishing the plaintiff's liens. She sued the defendant for the balance due on the notes. The defendant invoked the antideficiency protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. The trial court concluded that the statute was not applicable and entered judgment for the plaintiff. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The defendant contended that the notes were purchase-money notes when they were issued and remained purchase-money notes when they were assigned to the plaintiff and when they were replaced when the defendant purchased the property. According to the court, it was clear that notes retain their purchase-money character when they are assigned and when new notes on substantially similar terms are issued (12 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1089-1090) , so that the key issue was whether the original notes were purchase-money notes. A lienholder who participates in a sale transaction and agrees to extend a loan to a new purchaser in an attempt to protect a security interest is considered to be a seller. The notes were created by a party who participated in the sale to protect its interests. It was thus a seller for the purpose of the statute (12 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1090-1091). However, when the transaction is a variation of the standard purchase-money transaction, the antideficiency statute applies only to the extent necessary to promote the purposes of the statute. The primary purpose is to prevent overvaluation of land by placing the risk of inadequate security on the purchase-money lienholder. It was apparent that this property was being overvalued when the notes were created, because the amount of the first lien and the notes' lien exceeded the purchase price. Therefore, the enforcement of the antideficiency statute would effectuate its purpose. The court concluded that the plaintiff was barred from enforcing a deficiency against the defendant (12 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1091-1092).

The plaintiff in LaForgia v. Kolsky (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 242 Cal. Rptr. 282 , was originally the beneficiary of a second trust deed on residential property. The trust deed secured an improvement loan. The defendant was originally the beneficiary under a third trust deed on the same property. After notices of default had been recorded by the beneficiary of the first trust deed and the defendant, the owner declared bankruptcy. The bankruptcy court approved a refinancing arrangement, agreed to by all parties, under which the owner conveyed title to the defendant in return for $10,000 secured by a new third trust deed on the property. The first trust deed remained in place, the beneficiary's expenses were paid, and arrearages under the note were brought current. The plaintiff took a new note and second trust deed for the balance due on the original note. Later, the beneficiary of the first trust deed foreclosed, and the plaintiff sought to recover a deficiency judgment from the defendant. Judgment was for the plaintiff, and the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The refinancing amounted to a sale within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1107, 1112-1113) . The plaintiff's agent was a participant in the negotiations and discussions regarding the refinancing (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1107-1108) . Code Civ. Proc. § 580b bars recovery of a deficiency judgment against the purchaser even by the beneficiary of a junior purchase-money trust deed whose security interest is lost through foreclosure of a senior lien (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108). When a transaction involves a variation of the standard purchase-money mortgage transaction, the antideficiency statute applies if the circumstances come within the purpose of the statute. The purpose of the antideficiency statute is to prevent overvaluation of land by placing the risk of inadequate security on the lender (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1109). Here the refinanced purchase price exceeded the bankruptcy court's appraised value of the property (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1106) . The court discussed Shepherd v. Robinson (1981) 128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 623, 180 Cal. Rptr. 342 (discussed in [a], above), and acknowledged that in Shepherd the refinanced loan was originally a purchase-money trust deed, while in this case the plaintiff's original loan was not a purchase-money loan. Nevertheless, the same principles apply, namely, that the plaintiff was a necessary party in the refinancing transaction, which was for his benefit and would not have occurred without the plaintiff's participation. Thus, the plaintiff was a seller within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1109-1110) . The court also discussed and distinguished Goodyear v. Mack (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 656-659, 205 Cal. Rptr. 702 (discussed in § 230.50[3][d]), in which a second parcel, not the one originally sold by the beneficiary, was given as security for the refinancing (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1111-1112) . Here, the defendant lost both his original investment and the property and thus was in the position that Code Civ. Proc.§ 580b is designed to prevent, namely losing one's property and still being liable for the purchase price (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1112) . The interests and positions of the parties in this transaction brought it within the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b and barred a deficiency judgment (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1112-1113) .

[d] Loan Need Not Be Exclusively for Purchase Money

In Bargioni v. Hill (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 121, 28 Cal. Rptr. 321, 378 P.2d 593 , the defendant purchased a motel and gave the plaintiff, who acted as broker in the transaction, a promissory note secured by a junior trust deed on the motel. After the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale, the plaintiff sued to recover on the note. The Supreme Court rejected the defendant's contention that the judgment was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d. That statute bars recovery only on the obligation secured by the trust deed that has been foreclosed, not recovery by a junior lienholder whose security has been rendered worthless by a senior lienholder's foreclosure (59 Cal. 2d 121, 122) . However, because the plaintiff's note was clearly intended as part payment of the purchase price, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred recovery of a deficiency (59 Cal. 2d 121, 123-124) .

In BMP Property Development v. Melvin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 243 Cal. Rptr. 715 , after the first trust deeds were foreclosed, the beneficiary of five second trust deeds on five condominiums sought to have the trustors declared personally liable on the notes secured by its trust deeds. The plaintiff and the defendants had exchanged properties. The condominiums traded by the plaintiff had been unoccupied since their construction. To compensate for the negative cash flow caused by the vacancies, the plaintiff gave $10,000 cash per condominium, evidenced by a note and second trust deed. Some of the proceeds of the notes were used to pay real estate commissions, escrow fees, recording costs, and expenses. The remainder of the proceeds were used for personal obligations. Judgment was for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The trial court found that the loans were part of the consideration for the sale (198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 529) . The court cited Bargioni v. Hill (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 121, 123-124, 28 Cal. Rptr. 321, 378 P.2d 593 , discussed above, in which the proceeds of the loan were used to pay the broker's commission, for the proposition that the criterion for a purchase-money trust deed under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b is, not that the loan proceeds be used to pay the purchase price, but that the note and trust deed be integral elements in the transaction (198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530-531) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deficiency Judgment on Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Barred

In Sherwood-Trimble Medical Group v. 10001 Venice Boulevard Partnership (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 872, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 , the court of appeal held that the meaning of "vendor," for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, included a vendor of personal property (a medical practice) who sold the practice in a transaction along with a vendor of real property (the building where the practice was located). Both vendors took back from the buyer a single purchase money promissory note secured by a deed of trust on the real property and, by a security agreement, by the personal property. The court found that the deed of trust was a "deed of trust upon real property" for purposes of the antideficiency statutes despite the additional security in personal property (75 Cal. App. 4th 872, 878). The court noted that the initial note had been amended and made payable solely to Sherwood. The real property vendor (Vendunn) had liquidated and distributed its interest in the original note to its shareholders, and they had allowed their interest to go into limbo when the note was amended. Those same individuals, as partners of Sherwood, brought suit seeking a deficiency judgment that Vendunn, as the vendor of the real property, would have been denied. The court concluded that the shareholders were attempting an end run around § 580b (75 Cal. App. 4th 872, 878).

BMP Property Development v. Melvin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 243 Cal. Rptr. 715 (discussed in [3][d], above), also holds that a trust deed is a purchase-money trust deed under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b even if the sale or trade is handled through one escrow and the loan that the trust deed secures is disbursed through another escrow, when, under Civ. Code § 1642, the two escrows are parts of one transaction (198 Cal. App. 3d 526, 531-532) .

[b] Statute Bars Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

Palm v. Schilling (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 76, 244 Cal. Rptr. 600 (discussed in § 230.42[3][a]), held that a trustor cannot waive the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b as a condition of refinancing.

LaForgia v. Kolsky (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 242 Cal. Rptr. 282 (discussed in [3][c], above), holds that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b bars recovery of a deficiency judgment against the purchaser even by the beneficiary of a junior purchase-money trust deed whose security interest is lost through foreclosure of a senior lien (196 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.42

§ 230.42 Recovery of Deficiency by Sold-Out Junior Lienholder After Purchase at Senior Lienholder's Private Foreclosure Sale--Sold-Out Junior Lienholder's Recovery Is Limited by Statute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BECAUSE PLAINTIFF PURCHASED THE PROPERTY, AS A JUNIORLIENHOLDER, AT THE PRIVATE FORECLOSURE SALE UNDER THE SENIOR TRUST DEED, CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 580a LIMITS THE PLAINTIFF'S RECOVERY ON THE UNDERLYING DEBT.

A. Limitation on Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder. The fair-value provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580a limit the amount of a deficiency judgment recoverable by a sold-out junior lienholder who purchased the property at a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale (Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273-274, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425).

B. Purchasing Junior Lienholder's Allowable Recovery. When a sold-out junior lienholder, who was the purchaser at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale, sues to recover a deficiency judgment on the underlying debt, Code of Civil Procedure Section 580a limits the amount of recovery to the excess of the combined debts of the senior and junior lienholders over the fair market value of the property, or over the selling price at the foreclosure sale if that price exceeded the fair market value (Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 580a limits the amount of a deficiency judgment being sought by a sold-out junior lienholder whose security has been rendered worthless by a private foreclosure sale under a senior trust deed, because the junior lienholder was the purchaser at the senior lienholder's sale.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by a sold-out junior lienholder on the underlying debt, the contention may be raised in support of a motion for summary judgment by the defendant, if the plaintiff is entitled to no further recovery after application of the fair-value limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should demonstrate that the sold-out junior lienholder was the purchaser at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 230.51[1] or § 230.53 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

In Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425 , the plaintiff was the beneficiary under several junior trust deeds securing a loan. The trustor defaulted on the senior debt, and the property was sold at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale. The plaintiff was the purchaser. The plaintiff then sued the trustor to recover on the underlying debt. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff for the full amount of the outstanding debt. The defendant appealed, contending that the plaintiff's recovery constituted a deficiency judgment that should be either barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d or limited under Code Civ. Proc. § 580a.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded with directions to redetermine the amount of the deficiency in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 580a (176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 274) . The court noted the general rule, announced in Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 39-44, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 , that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 580d do not prevent recovery by a sold-out junior lienholder whose security had been rendered worthless by a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale (176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 271-272) . The court concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 580d should not be applied against a sold-out junior lienholder even though the junior lienholder had purchased the property at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale (176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273) . However, with respect to Code Civ. Proc. § 580a, the court distinguished the general rule, noting that previous decisions had applied it only to junior lienholders who had not purchased the property at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale, who therefore had no control over the amount of the successful bid. The court reasoned that it was equitable to apply Code Civ. Proc. § 580a to limit the recovery of a junior lienholder who was the successful bidder at the senior lienholder's sale because, in this situation, application of that statute served its general purpose to protect against a lienholder's buying the property with a bid below fair value, recovering a deficiency judgment, then achieving a recovery in excess of the debt by reselling the property at a profit. Therefore, the fair-value provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a limited the amount of the deficiency recoverable by a sold-out junior lienholder who was the purchaser at the senior lienholer's private foreclosure sale (176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273-274) .

[b] Purchasing Junior Lienholder's Allowable Recovery

The facts and procedural background of Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425 , are discussed in [a], above. In that case, the court of appeal applied the fair-value provisions of CodeCiv. Proc. § 580a to limit the amount of a deficiency judgment recoverable by a sold-out junior lienholder who was the purchaser at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. In such a case, Code Civ. Proc. § 580a limits the amount of recovery to the excess of the combined debts of the senior and junior lienholders over the fair market value of the property, or over the selling price at the foreclosure sale if that price exceeded the fair market value (176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limitation on Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

In Bank of Hemet v. United States (9th Cir. 1981) 643 F.2d 661 , the plaintiff, a junior lienholder, bought the property at a private foreclosure sale conducted by the senior lienholder. The United States, as a junior lienholder represented by the Internal Revenue Service, redeemed the property from the plaintiff under I.R.C. § 7425, tendering an amount equal to the plaintiff's bid plus statutory interest. The plaintiff sued for declaratory relief and to quiet title, challenging the IRS's redemption. The district court entered summary judgment for the defendant, and the plaintiff appealed. The court of appeals reversed and remanded with directions to redetermine the amount of the redemption to be paid by the defendant (643 F.2d 661, 670) . The major issue on appeal involved the proper amount for redemption pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2410. To resolve this issue, it was necessary, in turn, to determine the extent to which the plaintiff was entitled to recover a deficiency judgment under state law. The court examined Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, and 726 and held that when a sold-out junior lienholder purchased the property at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale, any subsequent recovery of a deficiency judgment by the junior lienholder was subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 580a, because the purpose of that statute was to prevent excess recovery by a successful underbidder (643 F.2d 661, 667-669) .

[b] Purchasing Junior Lienholder's Allowable Recovery

The facts and procedural background of Bank of Hemet v. United States (9th Cir. 1981) 643 F.2d 661 , are discussed in [a], above. In that case the court of appeals interpreted Code Civ. Proc. § 580a as it applied to limit recovery of a deficiency judgment by a sold-out junior lienholder who purchased the property at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. The court held that in such a case the amount of recovery was limited to the amount by which the combined debts of the junior and senior lienholders exceeded the fair market value of the property, but in no event could the deficiency judgment exceed the amount by which the combined debts exceeded the actual price paid by the purchasing junior lienholder (643 F.2d 661, 669) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.43

§ 230.43 Recovery of Deficiency by Sold-Out Junior Lienholder After Purchase at Senior Lienholder's Private Foreclosure Sale--Sold-Out Junior Lienholder Cannot Recover Because Action Was Not Commenced Within Three Months [Code Civ. Proc. § 580a]

[1] FORM

[The following may be in included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] MAY NOT RECOVER A DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT PURCHASED THE ENCUMBERED REAL PROPERTY AT A PRIVATE FORECLOSURE SALE UNDER THE SENIOR TRUST DEED AND DID NOT BRING THE ACTION FOR A DEFICIENCY WITHIN THREE MONTHS AFTER THE DATE OF SALE.

Three-Month Limitation Period Applies to Junior Lienholder. The three-month period for bringing an action for a deficiency in Code of Civil Procedure Section 580a is applicable to a sold-out junior lienholder who is the purchaser at a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale (Citrus State Bank v. McKendrick (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 941, 946-950, 263 Cal. Rptr. 781).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the three-month limitation period in Code Civ. Proc. § 580a is applicable to a sold-out junior lienholder who is the purchaser at a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive contention. For example, in an action by a sold-out junior lienholder who purchased at a senior lienholder's sale, the contention may be raised in support of a demurrer or a motion for a nonsuit when the action was not brought within three months of the sale.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include the date of sale and the date the complaint was filed.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Month Limitation Period Applies to Junior Lienholder

In Citrus State Bank v. McKendrick (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 941, 263 Cal.Rptr. 781 , the plaintiff was a junior lienholder who purchased the property at a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. The plaintiff sued for a deficiency judgment in an action filed more than three months after the foreclosure sale. At trial, the defendant moved for nonsuit based on Code Civ. Proc. § 580a. The trial court ruled that Code Civ. Proc. § 580a was applicable and granted the motion. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Although the limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a do not extend to sold-out junior lienholders, juniors purchasing the property at a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale are subject to the three-month limitation in that section. The fair value provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a are applicable to a junior lienholder who purchases at a senior lienholder's sale, as held in Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273-274, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425 (discussed in § 230.42[3][a]). A junior lienholder who purchases the property effectively steps into the shoes of the senior lienholder. By the purchase, the junior lienholder's security is not rendered valueless, as the junior lienholder acquires title to the property and is protected by the right to a deficiency limited by the fair-value rules (215 Cal. App. 3d 941, 946-950) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.44-230.49

[Reserved]

§§ 230.44[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.50

§ 230.50 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Trust Deed Is Variant Transaction That Is Not Subject to Statutory Bar [Code Civ. Proc. § 580b]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY MAY RECOVER ON THE UNDERLYING DEBT NOTWITHSTANDING CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 580b BECAUSE THE SECURITY TRANSACTION WAS A VARIATION OF THE STANDARD PURCHASE-MONEY TRUST DEED TRANSACTION AND IS NOT FACTUALLY WITHIN THE RECOGNIZED PURPOSES OF THE STATUTE.

A. Antideficiency Statute Does Not Automatically Apply to Variant Transaction. The antideficiency proscription of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b applies automatically only to the standard purchase-money situation. If a purchase-money security transaction is a variation of the standard, application of the statute turns on whether the particular application would serve the recognized purposes of the statute (Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 609-612, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 ; Long v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 504, 216 Cal. Rptr. 337).

B. Recognized Purposes of Statute. Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b places the risk of inadequate security on the creditor. The first purpose of the statute is to discourage the creditor from overvaluing the security, and thus to prevent precarious land schemes. The second purpose is to prevent aggravation of a depression in land values by not burdening purchasers with both the loss of the property and personal liability for the debt (Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 612, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 ; Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 42, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97).

[Optional] C. Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Subordinated to Commercial Construction Loan. A transaction in which the purchaser has purchased the property for the purpose of commercial improvement, and the seller has agreed to subordinate the purchase-money lien to a lien securing a construction loan, does not constitute a standard purchase-money security transaction in which it is expected that the purchaser will continue the same or a similar use of the property. In such a case the antideficiency proscription of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b does not bar an action on the underlying obligation by the seller after the security has been rendered worthless by foreclosure of the senior construction lien, because the recognized purposes of the statute would not be served by its application (Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 611-615, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 ; Long v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-506, 216 Cal. Rptr. 337).

[Optional] D. Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Covers Property Other Than That Being Purchased. In the standard purchase-money security transaction, it is expected that the seller will retain a security interest in the property being sold, and a purchase-money loan secured by a trust deed on property other than that being purchased is therefore a variant of the standard purchase-money security transaction. In the latter situation, if the security is rendered valueless by the foreclosure of a senior lien, Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b does not bar recovery on the underlying debt, because the recognized purposes of the statute would not be served by its application (Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 41-43, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 ; Goodyear v. Mack (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 658-659, 205 Cal. Rptr. 702).

[Optional] E. Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchaser Cashes Out Equity. When a purchaser, seizing an unusual advantage, manages to cash out all of the equity in the property by subsequent borrowing that, through a lapse of judgment by the seller, results in liens senior to the purchase-money trust deed, and the purchase-money trust deed is rendered valueless by foreclosureof the senior liens, Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b does not bar the seller's recovery on the underlying debt, because the recognized purposes of the statute would not be served by its application (Bell v. Roy (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 698-700, 232 Cal. Rptr. 83).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a beneficiary of a purchase-money trust deed is not barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b from seeking a deficiency judgment. The ground is that § 580b does not automatically apply because the security transaction involved a variation of the standard purchase-money security transaction, and application of the statute would not serve the recognized purposes of the statute. Optional paragraphs describe the following types of variant transactions, which are not subject to § 580b:

- Subordination of the purchase-money trust deed to a construction loan (Paragraph C).
- Use of some other property, not the purchased property, as security (Paragraph D).
- Refinancing maneuvers by the purchaser through which the purchase-money security is destroyed (Paragraph E).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover on the underlying debt after the security has been rendered worthless by foreclosure of a senior construction loan, the contention may be raised in support of the beneficiary's application for prejudgment attachment [see, e.g., Long v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 500-502, 216 Cal. Rptr. 337] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a description of the security transaction showing that it fits a recognized judicial exception to the standard situation for application of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 230.41[1] may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Automatically Apply to Variant Transaction

Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 , involved improved residential property that was located in a commercial zone. The sellers took a cash down payment and the purchaser's promissory note for the balance of the price, secured by a trust deed. They agreed to subordinate their trust deed to a trust deed securing a third-party lender's construction loan to the purchasers. The purchasers in turn agreed to waive the antideficiency judgment protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, so that the sellers would have recourse against them if the construction lender foreclosed on its encumbrance. Thereafter, the purchasers constructed an office building. They defaulted on the construction loans after failing to obtain tenants for the building. The third-party lender brought a judicial foreclosure action, naming the purchasers and the sellers as the defendants, and obtained a decree of foreclosure and deficiency judgment against the purchasers. The sellers filed an amended cross complaint against the purchasers to recover on their note. The trial court entered judgment for the sellers on the cross complaint, and the purchasers appealed, contending that the sellers' recovery constituted a deficiency judgment that was barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court stated the general rule, announced in Brown v. Jensen (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 193, 198, 259 P.2d 425 , that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies by its terms to sold-out junior lienholders holding a purchase-money trust deed. Nonetheless Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies automatically only to the standard purchase-money transaction. With respect to variations from the standard purchase-money transaction, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies only if the factual circumstances come within the purposes of the section (7 Cal. 3d 603, 609-611) . In determining whether the present transaction constituted such a variation, the Court concluded that in a standard transaction, the purchaser will continue the same or a similar use of the property, and the present security value of the property is therefore a reliable indicator of the actual fair market value. When, as in the present case, a seller subordinates the purchase-money trust deed to the lien of a third-party lender's commercial construction loan, the present security value of the property is not a reliable indicator of the ultimate value of the property, which is to be determined by the success or failure of the development venture. A sale of real property for commercial development, in which the seller agrees to subordinate the purchase-money trust deed to the lien of a commercial construction loan, is sufficiently different from the standard purchase-money trust deed transaction to remove it from automatic application of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. Therefore, it was necessary to examine the factual circumstances in lightof the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b to determine the applicability of the statute (7 Cal. 3d 603, 611-612) .

The Court restated the recognized purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b to discourage land sales that are unsound because the land is overvalued and, in the event of a depression in land values, to prevent the aggravation of the downturn that would result if defaulting purchasers lost the land and were burdened with personal liability as well (7 Cal. 3d 603, 612) . Application of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b would not have served the first purpose in the present case. The security value did not indicate the true market value, so as to discourage overvaluation of the security, because of a radical improvement and changed use of the property. In fact, the market value depended ultimately on the efforts of the purchaser to develop the property, and in such a case the risk of failure should be borne by the purchaser rather than the seller who agreed to a subordinated lien in order to obtain the purchase price (7 Cal. 3d 603, 613) . In addition, application of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b would not have served the second purpose. In the present case both the purchaser and the seller had lost the property, and the sole question was who should also bear the burden of the unpaid balance of the purchase price (7 Cal. 3d 603, 614) . Thus, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not bar the sellers' recovery (7 Cal. 3d 603, 614-615) .

In Long v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 216 Cal. Rptr. 337 , the plaintiff owned residential property worth approximately $150,000, which he sold for $252,000 to a builder, on the basis of its development value for the construction of five condominiums. The builder paid $134,000 down and gave a promissory note secured by a trust deed for the balance of the purchase price. The plaintiff agreed to subordinate his trust deed to a lender's trust deed securing a construction loan of $682,000. The builder constructed five condominium units, which the builder was unable to sell, and defaulted on the construction loan. The lender foreclosed, rendering the plaintiff's subordinated trust deed valueless. The plaintiff sued on the underlying note to recover the deficiency in the purchase price, but the trial court denied a motion for prejudgment attachment on the ground that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred any recovery of the deficiency. The plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate to vacate the order of denial.

The court of appeal issued a writ directing the trial court to grant the plaintiff's application for attachment (170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 508-509) . The antideficiency proscriptions of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not apply to the plaintiff's transaction with the builder because it came within the exception announced in Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 (discussed above). The court stated the rule of Spangler that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies automatically only to the standard purchase-money security transaction, in which the parties contemplate that the purchaser will continue the same or a similar use of the property, and the current value of the property is therefore a reliable indicator of its actual fair market value. In variant transactions, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies only if application would serve the recognized purposes of the statute (170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 504) . As in Spangler, the plaintiff's transaction constituted a variation of the standard purchase-money security transaction to which Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not automatically apply because the parties contemplated a radical improvement and change in use of the property, so that its present security value did not reliably indicate its ultimate market value. Further, as in Spangler, application of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b to the plaintiff's transaction would not have served the purposes of that statute. The court rejected the builder's argument that the transaction was materially distinguishable on its facts from the one in Spangler (170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-508) .

[b] Recognized Purposes of Statute

Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 , is discussed in [3][a], above.

In Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 , the defendants purchased a hotel from the plaintiff and executed three promissory notes that were each secured by second trust deeds on three other parcels owned by one of the defendants. Later those parcels were sold at a private foreclosure sale under the first trust deeds, and the plaintiff's second trust deeds were rendered valueless. The plaintiff sued to recover on the underlying notes, and the trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff. The defendants appealed, contending that the action was limited by Code Civ. Proc. § 580a or barred under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580b and 580d.

The Supreme Court affirmed. Regarding Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, the Supreme Court held that it did not bar the action on the debt. The statute contemplates the standard purchase-money security transaction, in which the seller retains an interest in the property to secure payment of part of the purchase price. Variations on this standard are subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 580b only if they come within the purpose of that statute (59 Cal. 2d 35, 41) . Code Civ. Proc. § 580b places the risk of inadequate security on the purchase-money creditor. One purpose is to discourage the seller from overvaluing the security, which in turn discourages precarious land schemes that result when the security value does not accurately reflect the true market value. If the security then proves insufficient, not from overvaluing but from a decline in property values during a general or local depression, another purpose is to prevent the aggravation of the downturn that would result if the purchasers lost the property and were also subject to personal liability (59 Cal. 2d 35, 42) . These purposes were not served by applying Code Civ. Proc. § 580b in the case at bench. There was no indication of overvaluation, and the purchaser was not in danger of losing the property while remaining liable for the price (59 Cal. 2d 35, 42-43) .

For coverage of the other components of the Court's holding in Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino, see § 230.51[3][1].

[c] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Subordinated to Commercial Construction Loan

Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 , and Long v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 499, 216 Cal. Rptr. 337 , are discussed in [3][a], above.

[d] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Covers Property Other Than That Being Purchased

Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 is discussed in [3][a], above.

In Goodyear v. Mack (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 205 Cal. Rptr. 702 (overruled on other grounds in DeBerard Properties, Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 671, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843), the defendants purchased the Henderson property, which was encumbered by a purchase-money trust deed in the plaintiff's favor, and the plaintiff started foreclosure proceedings after the sale. These parties then came to an agreement under which the plaintiff canceled the note and reconveyed the trust deed, and the defendants executed a new note, equal to the unpaid balance of the canceled note, which was secured by a junior trust deed on the defendants' Figueroa property. This security was later rendered worthless by foreclosure of a senior lien, and the plaintiff sued to recover on the underlying note. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, and the defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed because Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not bar an action on the underlying note (159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 659, 660) . The statute applies automatically only to the standard purchase-money transaction, in which the seller retains a security interest in the property being sold. In variations of this standard, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applies only if the factual circumstances come within the purposes of the statute to prevent overvaluation by placing the risk of inadequate security on the seller and to prevent aggravation of a depression in land values by not burdening purchasers with loss of the property plus personal liability (159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 658-659) . In the present case, the new note, which was used to refinance or pay off the purchase-money debt, was secured by property other than purchased property. The plaintiff retained no interest in the Henderson property, and there was no reason to burden him with the risk of the inadequacy of the Figueroa property as security, because there was no reason to assume that he had any greater knowledge of its value than the defendants. Moreover, while the defendants were burdened with personal liability under the new note, they were not also in a position to lose the Henderson property. Thus, the court concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not apply, as the transaction constituted a variation of the standard purchase-money transaction that did not come within the purposes of that statute (159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 659) .

[e] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchaser Cashes Out Equity

Bell v. Roy (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 232 Cal. Rptr. 83 , was an action to recover damages under a second trust deed given to secure $86,600 of the $200,800 purchase price. The note provided that the plaintiff would subordinate the trust deed to "new secondary refinancing" at any time. A short time later, the defendant paid $25,000 on the note, resulting in the cancellation of the original note and trust deed and their replacement by a new note and trust deed for $61,600. Then the defendant obtained a $146,700 loan from an institutional lender by representing to it that the plaintiff's note had a balance owing of $50,000 and that the proceeds were to be used for improvements on the property. At the same time, the defendant offered to make another principal payment of $7,320 on the plaintiff's note. That payment was evidenced by a reconveyance and execution of a new note and trust deed to the plaintiff for $54,280. However, the defendant did not record the replacement trust deed until after the trust deed securing the new institutional loan had been recorded as the second. The plaintiff's replacement trust deed was therefore a third, but no equity remained in the property. The defendant then sold the property for $1; the purchaser made no payments on any of the notes, and the holders of the first and second trust deeds foreclosed. Judgment was for the plaintiff, and the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The defendant contended that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b barred the plaintiff's recovery and that the fraud exception (which is an alternative point in § 230.51[1]) did not apply because the plaintiff had not pleaded a cause of action for fraud. However, whether or not the defendant was guilty of fraud, he would not be entitled to the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b unless the situation were one to which it was intended to apply (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 698) . The statute was designed to preclude the possibility that a seller might reclaim the property and yet require the purchaser to continue, vainly, to pay the price (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 699) . Citing Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 (discussed in [3][a], above, and § 230.51[3][a]), the court said that the goal of the statute was to discourage overvaluation of security and precarious land promotion schemes, with the further purpose of preventing the aggravation of the downturn that would result if defaulting purchasers were burdened with large personal liability. Another basis for Code Civ. Proc. § 580b was that the seller taking the trust deed knows the value of the property and assumes the risk that it may become inadequate. Thus, the statute is not applicable when, as in Roseleaf, both parties have equal knowledge concerning the value of the property, or, as in Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 (discussed in [3][a],above), when such a change in the use of the property is contemplated that its value at the time of the sale is not a reliable indicator of its ultimate value (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 699) . The court cited Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 101, 139 , as indicative of a third situation falling outside the intended purposes of the antideficiency statutes: tortious injury to the mortgagee's security interest (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 699-700) .

The evidence clearly demonstrated that the defendant, by means of a large, surreptitiously obtained loan, cashed out the plaintiff's equity in the property, to the defendant's own considerable profit without ever having paid the purchase price. The plaintiff's consent to subordinate to refinancing did not contemplate such radical refinancing without his receiving appropriate notice. Further, the implied term of reasonableness necessarily imposed the condition that any new financing must not render the plaintiff's security valueless, although that was exactly the improper result achieved by the defendant, and it alone was a sufficient basis for refusal to extend to the defendant the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 700) .

The plaintiff's failure to plead fraud as a separate cause of action was immaterial to the consideration of whether the purposes of the statute were applicable to the situation. If the defendant's conduct did amount to fraud, he could not escape the consequences through procedural nuances (187 Cal. App. 3d 694, 700) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Is Subordinated to Commercial Construction Loan

In Boyle v. Sweeney (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 998, 255 Cal. Rptr. 153 , the seller agreed to subordinate her trust deed, securing a $50,000 loan, to a construction loan for $580,000. The construction loan was to finance demolition of a single-family home and construction of a three-unit condominium. After the purchasers defaulted, the senior lienholder foreclosed on the property, exhausting the security. The holder of the subordinate trust deed sued for a deficiency, and the trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff. The court of appeal affirmed. The transaction was not a standard purchase-money transaction, and Code Civ. Proc. § 580b was not applicable. The fact that the residential use of the property did not change was not relevant. The key factor was whether the transaction varied from the standard purchase-money transaction. This transaction was not standard because the trust deed was subordinated to a large construction loan. In this situation, the developer should bear the risk of failure of the project (207 Cal. App. 3d 998, 1002-1004) .

In Wright v. Johnston (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 333, 253 Cal. Rptr. 418 , Wright sold his property and agreed to subordinate to loans to improve the land for farming. When a senior note was overdue, the holder of the Wright note agreed to subordinate to a new loan. After default, the trial court refused to enter a deficiency judgment. The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the transaction was not a standard purchase-money transaction in that the Wright trust deed was subordinated to a new, large loan that was available for any purpose and was largely used for purposes other than to improve the property or to resuscitate senior liens. The court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 580b is not applicable when a post-sale subordination agreement exposes the seller to new risks (206 Cal. App. 3d 333, 338) .

In Roffinella v. Sherinian (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 230, 224 Cal. Rptr. 502 , the owners of certain run-down rental property sold the property to purchasers who contemplated developing the property. Pursuant to the agreement of sale, the sellers later subordinated their purchase-money trust deed to a trust deed securing a construction loan. The purchasers defaulted on both the purchase-money debt and the construction loan, and the sellers lost their security after a private sale of the property under the senior trust deed. In an action by the construction lender against the sellers, the sellers cross complained against the purchasers to recover on the underlying note. The trial court entered judgment on the cross complaint against the purchasers. The purchasers appealed, contending that recovery was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, and the court of appeal affirmed. The transaction came within the exception announced in Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 (discussed in [3][a], above), and the statute did not apply (179 Cal. App. 3d 230, 236-240) .

[b] Antideficiency Statute Does Not Apply When Purchase-Money Trust Deed Covers Property Other Than That Being Purchased

In Scott v. Fidelity Dev. Co. (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 131, 113 Cal. Rptr. 855 , the plaintiff sold property to the defendants. As part of the purchase price, the defendants transferred other property to the plaintiff and agreed to repurchase that property on specified terms. The plaintiff later sued for specific performance of the repurchase agreement, and the defendants appealed from the judgment for the plaintiff. The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the defendants' primary contention, that the judgment violated Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. Disregarding the form of the purchase transaction and looking to its substance, the court noted that the fact situation was the same as if the defendants had purchased the one property on credit and had given the plaintiff a trust deed on the other property to secure payment of the purchase price. So viewed, the transaction was not governed by the statute. Citing Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 (discussed in [3][b], above, and § 230.51[3][a]), the court reasoned that when the security given is on property other than the property sold,the transaction is ordinarily outside the purposes of the statute (39 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.51

§ 230.51 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Deficiency Judgment for Sold-Out or Defrauded Junior Lienholder Is Not Barred [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580d, 726]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER ON THE DEBT SECURED BY THE BENEFICIARY'S JUNIOR TRUST DEED, NOTWITHSTANDING THE PROVISIONS OF _____ ; [CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTIONS 580a AND 726 or CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 580b or CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 580d], BECAUSE _____ [THE BENEFICIARY WAS FRAUDULENTLY INDUCED TO EXTEND FINANCING THAT THE PURCHASER NEVER INTENDED TO REPAY or THE BENEFICIARY'S SECURITY HAS BEEN RENDERED WORTHLESS BY FORECLOSURE OF A SENIOR LIEN].

[EITHER]

Statutory Limitations Do Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder. The one-form-of-action rule of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 does not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder, nor does the three-month limitation of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580a. The fair-value limitations of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a and 726 also do not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder (Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 39-41, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97).

[OR]

Fraud in Inducement. When a purchaser has fraudulently induced a seller to take back a note and trust deed that the purchaser never intended to pay, the seller is not barred by Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b from recovering damages, including punitive damages, for fraud or from recovering on the note (Manson v. Reed (1986) 186 Cal. App.

3d 1493, 1500-1504, 231 Cal. Rptr. 446).

[OR]

Statutory Bar Against Recovery Does Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder. The bar of Code of Civil Procedure Section 580d against a deficiency judgment after a private foreclosure sale does not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder (Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 43-44, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the recovery of a deficiency judgment is not barred or limited by one of the antideficiency statutes [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, 726]. This form may be used when the statutory provisions do not apply because the action involves a sold-out junior lienholder whose security has been rendered worthless by the foreclosure of a senior lien or because the purchaser never intended to repay the underlying obligation. Counsel should be aware, however, that the fair-value limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a applies to a junior lienholder who purchased at the senior lienholder's nonjudicial foreclosure [Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Bloxham (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 266, 273-274, 221 Cal. Rptr. 425 , discussed in § 230.42[3][a]].

With the partial exception of Manson v. Reed (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 231 Cal. Rptr. 446 , which included causes of action on the note and to recover damages for fraud, the authorities used in this form involved actions on the note. Counsel should consider the applicability of the cases and statutory authority establishing that an action to recover damages for fraud is not barred [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, 726; see also § 230.101[3][d]].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover on the underlying indebtedness after the security has been rendered worthless by foreclosure of the senior lien, the contention may be raised in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should include a showing that the beneficiary's security has been rendered worthless by the foreclosure of a senior lien.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.40[1] and § 230.42[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Limitations Do Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

The facts and procedural background of Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963)59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 , are discussed in § 230.50[3][b]. In that case a sold-out junior lienholder was suing on the underlying debt. Although the junior trust deeds secured the purchase price of a hotel, they encumbered property other than the hotel being purchased. The Supreme Court noted that the general rule is that in the absence of any contrary statute, a creditor of a defaulted debtor on a secured obligation may rely on the security or sue on the obligation or both, the obligation being an independent undertaking to pay. In California, this general rule is limited by statute. A creditor must rely on the security before enforcing the debt, under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 725a, and 726 (59 Cal. 2d 35, 38) . If the security is insufficient, the creditor's right to sue the debtor for the deficiency may be limited or barred by statute (59 Cal. 2d 35, 38-39) . Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726 require an action for a deficiency judgment to be commenced within three months after a private or judicial foreclosure sale, and they limit recovery to the difference between the total amount of secured indebtedness and the fair market value of the property at the time of the sale. The one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 does not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder, nor does the three-month limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 580a. The Court noted that there is no reason to compel a junior lienholder to go through a foreclosure sale when there is nothing left to sell. Moreover, to compel a sold-out junior lienholder to sue for a deficiency within three months after a senior lienholder's sale would unnecessarily compel acceleration of the junior obligation, to the detriment of the debtor (59 Cal. 2d 35, 39) .

The Court also held that the fair-value limitations of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726 do not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder who did not purchase at the senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. First, the express language of these statutes limits only the recovery of a deficiency by a lienholder who actually caused the property to be sold by a private or judicial foreclosure sale (59 Cal. 2d 35, 39-40) . Also, applying these limitations to a sold-out junior lienholder would not serve the purpose of the limitations, which is to prevent creditors from buying in at their own sales at deflated prices and realizing double recoveries by holding debtors liable for large deficiencies. Thus, the fair-value statutes apply only if the creditor purchases at the sale (59 Cal. 2d 35, 40) . Finally, the position of a sold-out junior lienholder is different from that of a selling senior lienholder, who may, without investing any additional funds, buy in at the sale simply by bidding the amount of the outstanding debt or the fair market value of the property, whichever is less. The junior lienholder, however, is in no better position than the debtor and must invest additional funds to redeem or buy in at the sale. Equitable considerations favor placing the burden on the debtor, because it is the debtor's default that provokes the senior lienholder's sale, and the debtor has the benefit of the bargain with the junior lienholder, who, unlike the selling senior lienholder, might otherwise end up with nothing (59 Cal. 2d 35, 41) .

[b] Fraud in Inducement

Manson v. Reed (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 231 Cal. Rptr. 446 , was an action by the sellers for fraud and to recover on a debt secured by a sold-out second trust deed. The defendants were neighbors of the plaintiffs and purchased the plaintiffs' home for $183,000, the value indicated by the first lender's appraisal. The first trust deed secured a $146,400 loan. The defendants, who were much more sophisticated than the plaintiffs in real estate matters, told the plaintiffs that creative financing would be required so they could take $46,000 cash from the transaction, which they promised to use to remodel the home. Unbeknownst to the plaintiffs, the defendants opened two escrows, mainly so that the institutional lender would not discover the cash-back. The plaintiffs received an $82,500 note and second trust deed. After making one payment on the second note and doing minimal "face lifting" on the property, the defendants abandoned the property. The holder of the first trust deed foreclosed. Judgment was for the plaintiffs, for principal, interest, attorney's fees, and punitive damages. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Although the trial court made findings that the transaction was a "hard money" transaction, not a purchase-money security transaction governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, the court of appeal said that the case did not turn on that issue (186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1501) . The evidence supported the trial court's findings of actual fraud in that the defendants executed the note and trust deed without any intention of making payments according to the terms of the note and never intended to renovate or remodel the home. Even assuming that the transaction was a purchase-money transaction, the court said, relying on Joanaco Projects, Inc. v. Nixon & Tierney Constr. Co. (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 821, 57 Cal. Rptr. 48 (discussed in § 230.101[3][d]), recovery of damages for fraud is a well recognized exception to Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applicable when the trustor has fraudulently induced the beneficiary to enter into a transaction, never intending to perform (186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1500-1504) . Also, the findings of fraud supported punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294 (186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1504-1505) . Finally, the fact that the plaintiffs recovered under the theory of fraud instead of "on the contract" did not matter; the award of attorney's fees was proper (186 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1505-1506) .

[c] Statutory Bar Against Recovery Does Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

The facts and procedural background of Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 , are discussed in § 230.50[3][b]. In that case the Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 580d does not bar recovery of a deficiency judgment by a junior lienholder whose security has been rendered worthless by a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. The express language of the statute bars only the recovery of a deficiency by a lienholder whohas caused the security to be sold by private foreclosure sale (59 Cal. 2d 35, 43) . Barring recovery by a sold-out junior lienholder would not serve the purpose of the statute, which is to achieve parity between judicial and private foreclosure remedies by protecting the debtor while preserving the election of remedies. If the creditor prefers to recover a deficiency, the judicial foreclosure sale is subject to statutory redemption rights. If, however, the creditor elects a private foreclosure sale resulting in nonredeemable title, the creditor must forgo the right to a deficiency judgment. A junior lienholder has fewer rights after a senior lienholder's private sale than after a senior lienholder's judicial sale. A nonselling junior lienholder can redeem from the senior lienholder's judicial foreclosure sale [now see Civ. Code § 2904 (applicable only before decree of foreclosure); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 729.010, 729.020 (right of redemption after deficiency is decreed can be exercised only by judgment debtor or successor)] or seek a deficiency, but the junior lienholder has no right of redemption after a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale. To apply Code Civ. Proc. § 580d against a sold-out junior lienholder would increase the disparity between junior and senior lienholders by eliminating a junior lienholder's only remedy after a senior lienholder's private foreclosure sale (namely, a deficiency). It would, in effect, deprive the junior lienholder of recovery at the whim of the senior lienholder (59 Cal. 2d 35, 43-44) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Limitations Do Not Apply to Sold-Out Junior Lienholder

In Bank of America v. Graves (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 607, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 , the defendants defaulted on loans that were secured by a second trust deed on the defendants' home. The bank recorded a notice of default and notice of trustee's sale. However, it postponed the foreclosure sale when it learned that the holder of the first trust deed on the property had also started foreclosure proceedings. The holder of the first trust deed completed the trustee's sale and was the highest bidder, having bid the amount owed on the senior debt. The bank then sued the defendants for the amount due on its loans. The trial court entered judgment for the bank, holding that the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 did not bar the action because the bank's security as the junior lienholder was extinguished by the foreclosure of the senior lien. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Relying on Roseleaf Corp. v. Chierighino (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 35, 27 Cal. Rptr. 873, 378 P.2d 97 (discussed in [3][a], above), it held that the one-form-of-action rule does not apply to a sold-out junior lienholder. Further, the bank's postponement of its trustee's sale did not deprive it of junior lienholder status. The court distinguished Hibernia S. & L. Soc. v. Thornton (1895) 109 Cal. 427, 429, 42 P. 447 , which held that a mortgagee that is deprived of the right to foreclose a mortgage by the mortgagee's own act or neglect is barred from suing on the note. The act or neglect referred to in Hibernia was the creditor's failure to file a claim with the estate of the deceased debtor, but there was no such failure to perform some legally required act in this case (51 Cal. App. 4th 607, 613) . Also, mere commencement of nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings was not an election of remedy precluding a suit for the deficiency (51 Cal. App. 4th 607, 614) .

In Schwerin v. Shostak (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 37, 28 Cal. Rptr. 332 , the beneficiary of a third trust deed sued on the underlying notes. Before trial, the senior lienholder foreclosed by a private sale, rendering the third trust deed valueless. In affirming the judgment for the plaintiff, the court of appeal said that it did not matter that the senior lienholder's sale took place after the junior lienholder's action was commenced; the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 still did not apply to the plaintiff as a sold-out junior lienholder (213 Cal. App. 2d 37, 43). To require repleading to allege the subsequent sale by the senior lienholder would needlessly delay justice and burden the courts (213 Cal. App. 2d 37, 44).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.52

§ 230.52 Deficiency Judgment Is Not Barred or Limited by Statute--Three-Month Limitation Period in Code Civ. Proc. § 726 Does Not Apply to Mixed Collateral Creditor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] MAY RECOVER A DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT EVEN THOUGH THE ACTION WAS NOT BROUGHT WITHIN THREE MONTHS OF THE SALE OF REAL PROPERTY SECURED BY THE UNDERLYING DEBT BECAUSE THE DEBT WAS SECURED BY MIXED COLLATERAL.

A. Three-Month Limitation Period Does Not Apply in Mixed Collateral Situation. When a debtor secures a single obligation with mixed collateral (i.e., with a combination of real and personal property), Commercial Code Section 9604(a)(2)(A) relieves the mixed collateral creditor entirely from complying with the three-month time limit imposed by Code of Civil Procedure Section 726. That time limit is a "provision" or "limitation" of a law respecting real property and, under Commercial Code Section 9604, such a limitation does not in any way apply to the obligation (Florio v. Lau (1998) 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409). The "obligation" is the debt that the mixed collateral secured, reduced by the amount realized from sales of the collateral or, in other words, it is the amount of money to which the creditor is entitled as a deficiency judgment. Accordingly, the three-month limitation does not apply in a mixed collateralcontext (Florio v. Lau (1998) 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a the three-month limitation period in Code Civ. Proc. § 726 for obtaining a deficiency judgment after a real property foreclosure does not apply if there is a single obligation and it is secured with mixed collateral.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, if the debtor brings a motion for a deficiency judgment, this contention may be raised as a defense if the debtor asserts the debtor's motion is barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 726.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should include a showing that mixed collateral secured the single obligation.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Month Limitation Period Does Not Apply in Mixed Collateral Situation

In Florio v. Lau (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 637, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409 , a case of first impression, a creditor obtained a judgment following the debtor's default on an obligation secured by both real and personal property. The real property was sold at a sheriff's sale and some of the personal property was sold. More than three months after the foreclosure sale, the creditor filed a motion for a deficiency judgment. The debtor asserted the motion was barred by the three-month limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The trial court found Code Civ. Proc. § 726 applies to mixed collateral but also held the three-month period does not begin to run until the date of sale of the last item of collateral. Because the motion was filed less than three months after an unsuccessful attempt to sell some of the personal property, the court found the motion was timely and entered a deficiency judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed. It began its evaluation of the case with a brief overview of the law applicable to obligations secured with mixed collateral, particularly former Com. Code § 9501(4) (now see Com. Code § 9604(a)), the so-called mixed-collateral statute. The court noted that former Com. Code § 9501(4)(b)(i) (now see Com. Code § 9604(a)(2)(A)) explicitly addressed the interplay between real property rights and remedies and the rights and remedies under the Commercial Code when there was no unified sale (68 Cal. App. 4th 637, 643). (The parties in this case agreed that the sale was not and could not have been unified.) Former Com. Code § 9501(4)(b)(i) provided in part that "provisions and limitations of any law respecting real property and obligations secured by an interest in real property or an estate therein, including, but not limited to, Section 726 of the Code of Civil Procedure ...#x2026; do not apply to either (1) any personal property or fixtures [other than personal property or fixtures as to which the secured party is proceeding by way of a unified sale], or (2) the obligation."

The court then disagreed with the trial court's conclusion that the Code Civ. Proc. § 726 three-month limitation period begins to run at the date of the sale of the last item of collateral, but held that former Com. Code § 9501(4)(b)(i) relieved a mixed-collateral creditor entirely from complying with that three-month time limit, which is a "provision" or "limitation" of a law respecting real property. Under former Com. Code § 9501, such a limitation did not in any way apply to the obligation (68 Cal. App. 4th 637, 653) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.53

§ 230.53 Trustor Waived Statutory Limitation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT SOUGHT BY THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT LIMITED UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTIONS 580a AND 726 BECAUSE THE TRUSTOR WAIVED THE STATUTORY PROTECTION FOR AN ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION, AFTER THE _____ [MAKING or RENEWAL] OF THE LOAN.

Deficiency Limitation of Statute May Subsequently Be Waived. Under Civil Code Section 2953, a trustor may not waive the deficiency-limiting provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a and 726 at the time of, or in connection with, the making or renewal of a secured loan. This rule, however, does not preclude a trustor from subsequently waiving those provisions (Salter v. Ulrich (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 263, 266-267, 138 P.2d 7 ; see Morello v. Metzenbaum (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 494, 498-499, 154 P.2d 670).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the recovery of a deficiency judgment is not barred or limited by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 726, because the trustor has effectively waived the statutory protection after the making or renewal of the secured loan.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover on the underlying debt after the security has been rendered worthless by foreclosure of the senior lien, the contention may be raised in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the circumstances showing waiver by the trustor.

This form does not include a contention that the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d may subsequently be waived because there is no case law regarding such a waiver. Counsel should be aware, however, that the Supreme Court has held that the rule prohibiting advance waiver, which applies specifically to the protections of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726 under Civ. Code § 2953, applies also to the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d as a matter of public policy [Freedland v. Greco (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 462, 467, 289 P.2d 463] . It is therefore arguable, by analogy to the authorities for waiver under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726, that the rule permitting subsequent waiver applies to the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d as well.

This form does not include a contention that the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b may be waived because the California Supreme Court, in DeBerard Properties, Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843 , resolved a conflict in state law by holding that a purchaser may not waive, by contract term, the protection against deficiency judgments conferred by § 580b in exchange for new consideration following the original purchase money sale (20 Cal. 4th 659, 662, 667) . For discussion of this decision, see § 230.54[3][a].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.40[1] and § 230.42[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deficiency Limitation of Statute May Subsequently Be Waived

In Morello v. Metzenbaum (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 494, 154 P.2d 670 , the plaintiff lent money to the defendants, who executed a note. On the defendants' default, the parties made an agreement under which the defendants gave the plaintiff a deed and assignment of oil production royalties, which the parties intended would be security for the note. By this agreement the plaintiff was empowered to sell the security after five days' prior notice to the defendant. The defendants defaulted again, and the plaintiff sold the security under the power of sale after providing the agreed notice. The plaintiff then sued to recover a deficiency judgment. The trial court entered judgment for the defendants on the ground that recovery of a deficiency was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The plaintiffs argued, among other things, that the defendants had waived their right to statutory notice before the sale under Civ. Code § 2924, but this waiver was void under Civ. Code § 2953. The plaintiff's sale was therefore ineffective and, as no valid sale had taken place, the plaintiffs were not barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580d from recovering judgment on the note. The Court rejected this argument, concluding that the sale was valid and Code Civ. Proc. § 580d properly applied. The Court noted that Civ. Code § 2953 invalidates any waiver of the provisions of Civ. Code § 2924 that has been made at the time of or in connection with the making of or renewing of a secured loan. Civ. Code § 2953 does not, however, invalidate a waiver such as that in the case at bench, which was made after the making of the loan and was not part of an agreement that constituted a renewal of the loan (25 Cal. 2d 494, 498-500) . The purpose of the waiver rule in Civ. Code § 2953 was to protect debtors from the consequences of ruinous concessions made out of necessity to obtain a loan. This protection, however, was not necessary after the making of the loan, when the rights of the parties have been established and only the enforcement of those rights remains (25 Cal. 2d 494, 499) .

Although the facts of this case concern a waiver of the notice provisions under Civ. Code § 2924, the reasoning of the case is equally applicable to all subsequent waivers of the other provisions specifically enumerated under Civ. Code § 2953, including the deficiency-limiting provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726.

In Salter v. Ulrich (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 263, 138 P.2d 7 , the defendant had lent money to a property owner, who executed a note secured by a trust deed. The defendant later sued on the note, omitting any reference to the trust deed in the complaint. The defendant obtained judgment by default and took title to the property through an execution sale. The plaintiff, meanwhile, had sued the owner to foreclose a street improvement lien on the same property but did not name or serve the defendant in that action. The plaintiff then obtained title through the foreclosure sale and sued to quiet title. The trial court found that the defendant had title through the execution sale, subject to the plaintiff's street improvement bond. The plaintiff appealed, arguing that the defendant's judgment, hence the execution sale as well, was invalid because the defendant violated the requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, which prescribes foreclosure as the one form of remedy available for recovery on a debt secured by a trust deed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court noted that the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 may not be waived in advance, because necessity often drives debtorsto make ruinous concessions to obtain a loan, and Code Civ. Proc. § 726 should be applied to protect them and to prevent a waiver in advance (22 Cal. 2d 263, 266-267) . This reasoning, however, does not apply after the loan is made, when all rights have been established and there remains only the enforcement of those rights. Furthermore, Civ. Code § 2953, which codifies the rule against waiver in advance with respect to rights specified under certain code sections, including Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 726, is entirely consistent with the right of a trustor to make a subsequent waiver (22 Cal. 2d 263, 267) . The owner's failure in this case to raise the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as an affirmative defense to the defendant's action on the note constituted an effective subsequent waiver of that protection (22 Cal. 2d 263, 267-268) . Therefore the judgment on the note was not void and was not subject to collateral attack by one who, like the plaintiff, was not the primary debtor protected by Code Civ. Proc. § 726 (22 Cal. 2d 263, 268) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.54

§ 230.54 Trustor Cannot Waive Statutory Bar

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT IS BARRED UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 580b BECAUSE THE TRUSTOR CANNOT WAIVE THE STATUTORY PROTECTION IN EXCHANGE FOR NEW CONSIDERATION AFTER THE ORIGINAL PURCHASE MONEY SALE.

Bar of Antideficiency Statute Cannot Be Waived. A purchaser may not waive, by contract term, the protection against deficiency judgments conferred by Code of Civil Procedure Section 580b in exchange for new consideration following the original purchase money sale. Merely renegotiating the sale's terms in an effort to ease the terms of the trustor's obligation and salvage the transaction does not take the transaction outside the scope of Section 580b (DeBerard Properties, Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 662, 667, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843 ; Palm v. Schilling (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 75-76, 244 Cal. Rptr. 600 ; Lawler v. Jacobs (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 723, 736-738, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in reply to the points and authorities in § 230.53, or in an original memorandum, in support of the contention that the recovery of a deficiency judgment is barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580b in spite of a purported waiver by the trustor, because the protection of the statute cannot be waived.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover on the underlying debt after the security has been rendered worthless by foreclosure of the senior lien, the contention may be raised in support of the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should attack any circumstances put forward by the adverse party as tending to show waiver by the trustor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bar of Antideficiency Statute Cannot Be Waived

In DeBerard Properties, Ltd. v. Lim (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 659, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292, 976 P.2d 843 , the defendants financed their purchase of a shopping center from the plaintiff by assuming a large debt secured by a first trust deed to a bank and executing a second trust deed as security for a smaller debt, in addition to making a substantial down payment, to the plaintiff. When the defendants were forced by economic circumstances to negotiate a refinancing of the major debt a few years later, the plaintiff cooperated in exchange for the defendants' agreement to waive their rights under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. Not long after the refinancing was in place, the defendants defaulted, and the bank's foreclosure under the first trust deed wiped out the plaintiff's second-lien security. The plaintiff sued on the defendants' note, and the trial court enforced the waiver agreement. The defendants appealed from a judgment for the plaintiff, and the court of appeal reversed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court noted the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b is plain--a vendor is barred from obtaining a deficiency judgment against a purchaser in a purchase money secured land transaction (20 Cal. 4th 659, 663) . The Court acknowledged that Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055 created a narrow exception to the scope of § 580b, but declined to create another one here (20 Cal. 4th 659, 664) . For discussion of Spangler, see § 230.50[3][a]. The DeBerard Court noted that Spangler's rule is limited to situations in which the following factors are found: (1) a pronounced intensification of the property's anticipated post-sale use requires and eventually results in construction financing that dwards the property's value at the time of sale; (2) the purchaser is in a much better position than the vendor to assess the property's possible value and to understand the risks involved in capitalizing on the property's potential; and (3) under all the circumstances of the sale, including the property's development and the financing for that development, conferring § 580b's protection would unfairly thrust therisk of the failure of the commercial development on the vendor, imposing on it a commercially unreasonable burden (20 Cal. 4th 659, 666 , citing Spangler v. Memel (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 603, 613, 102 Cal. Rptr. 807, 498 P.2d 1055). Within its narrow confines, Spangler remains the law (20 Cal. 4th 659, 667) .

The DeBerard Court found that this case was unlike Spangler. The defendants purchased and continued to operate a shopping center and the center continued to secure the note. They did not obtain a construction loan that dwarded the property's value at the time of sale and then proceed to build a more intensive use. Further, there was no dramatic change in the financial arrangements that might conceivably have brought this case within Spangler's ambit. The plaintiff "began with a relatively risky subordinated security interest, and ended in the same position." Merely renegotiating the terms of the sale in an effort to salvage the transaction did not take it outside the scope of § 580b. The Court could not justify permitting a waiver in disregard of the statutory language just because the plaintiff eased the terms of the defendants' obligation to it. Only when the transaction is sufficiently similar to that in Spangler will the vendor's relatively poor knowledge of the property's value trump the basic rule, stated in Brown v. Jensen (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 193, 197 , that the vendor is assumed to know the value of its security interest and act accordingly (20 Cal. 4th 659, 667-668) .

The Court recognized that there had been a conflict in state law on the question of the validity of such a waiver, with Russell v. Roberts (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 390, 114 Cal. Rptr. 305 holding that waiver is available, but Palm v. Schilling (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 244 Cal. Rptr. 600 holding that it is not. The Court disapproved Russell and related dicta in Goodyear v. Mack (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 654, 659-660 and Shepherd v. Robinson (1981) 128 Cal. App. 3d 615, 626 , and cited with approval the portions of the Palm decision (discussed below) that disagreed with Russell (20 Cal. 4th 659, 661, 671) .

Palm v. Schilling (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 244 Cal. Rptr. 600 , was an action on a promissory note originally secured by a sold-out junior's purchase-money trust deed. The plaintiffs had sold their home to the defendants. The defendants made a large down payment and executed notes secured by second and third trust deeds for the balance of the purchase price. The second was due four months after the purchase and sale; the third was due in two years. The defendants' original home did not sell, and when the second note was six months overdue, they obtained a loan from an institutional lender to pay it. That lender demanded priority over the plaintiffs' remaining trust deed. The plaintiffs agreed to subordinate in return for a retroactive increase in the interest rate. A year later, when the institutional loan was due, the defendants refinanced with another lender. The plaintiffs agreed to subordinate to that lender in return for a $25,000 reduction in the balance due as well as the defendants' personal guaranties and the defendants' waiver of their antideficiency protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. After one of the senior lenders foreclosed, the plaintiffs sued on the note and personal guaranties. The trial court felt compelled to follow Russell v. Roberts (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 390, 114 Cal. Rptr. 305 (discussed in the coverage of DeBerard, above) and gave judgment for the plaintiffs. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal disagreed with Russell and held that trustors cannot waive the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b as a condition of refinancing because such a waiver would be inconsistent with the explicit language of the statute and contrary to public policy (199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 68, 75-76) . In the case of a purchase-money trust deed, the character of the transaction is determined at the time the trust deed is executed and is then fixed for all time. Renegotiation of a purchase-money note, whether viewed as a renewal or a new transaction, will not support a waiver because Code Civ. Proc. § 580b does not change the character of a purchase-money trust deed (199 Cal. App. 3d 63, 75-76) .

In Lawler v. Jacobs (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 723, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 , defendant developers purchased 91 acres of raw land for $6 million down and a $3 million purchase money note secured by the real property. They agreed to waive antideficiency protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. Plaintiff vendor, in turn, subordinated his promissory note to that of a third party commercial lender. On defendants' default and the senior lender's foreclosure sale, plaintiff sued for his deficiency. Both parties claimed fraud.

The court held that none of the DeBerard factors for a permissible waiver were present, and thus the case concerned a standard transaction to which Code Civ. Proc. § 580b applied (83 Cal. App. 4th 723, 735-736) . It then held that a fraud action could not be based on the borrowers' agreement to waive the antideficiency protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b and promise to remain personally liable on the note (83 Cal. App. 4th 723, 736) . The antideficiency protections of § 580b may not be contractually waived by the debtor, and thus, the lender's fraud action was for nonperformance of an invalid waiver of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b. In seeking recovery of the $3 million deficiency the lender suffered as a sold-out junior plus punitive damages, the lender was attempting to accomplish by indirection what is prohibited by § 580b (83 Cal. App. 4th 723, 737-738) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.55

§ 230.55 Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Restrict Creditor's Ability to Exhaust Multiple Items of Collateral in Series of Nonjudicial Foreclosure Proceedings

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ANTIDEFICIENCY PROVISIONS OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTIONS 580a AND 580d DO NOT RESTRICT THE BENEFICIARY'SABILITY TO EXHAUST MULTIPLE ITEMS OF COLLATERAL IN A SERIES OF NONJUDICIAL FORECLOSURE PROCEEDINGS.

Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Apply When Creditor Exercises Right to Exhaust Multiple Items of Collateral. Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a and 580d do not restrict a creditor's ability to exhaust multiple items of collateral in a series of nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings. These provisions are not implicated when a creditor merely exercises the right to exhaust all of the real property pledged to secure an obligation. Specifically, a creditor may proceed seriatim in foreclosing against multiple items of collateral without commencing a judicial action to determine the fair market value of each item sold, and crediting that amount to the debt, before proceeding with foreclosure sales of any additional collateral (Dreyfuss v. Union Bank of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 400, 406, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 11 P.3d 383).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the statutory antideficiency provisions do not restrict a beneficiary's ability to exhaust multiple items of collateral in a series of nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, the contention may be raised in opposition to an action by the defaulting borrowers seeking monetary and other relief for alleged violations of the antideficiency provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should describe the circumstances showing the creditor holds two or more deeds of trust on separate parcels of property to secure the same debt and that he or she is foreclosing the liens on these parcels by non-judicial sales and not seeking to secure a personal judgment against the debtor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Apply When Creditor Exercises Right to Exhaust Multiple Items of Collateral

In Dreyfuss v. Union Bank of California (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 400, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 11 P.3d 383 , the plaintiff borrowers defaulted on a loan secured by separate deeds of trust on three parcels of real property. The defendant bank conducted a nonjudicial foreclosure of one of the parcels and then proceeded with serial foreclosure sales of the remaining properties. Prior to each successive sale, the defendant did not seek a judicial determination of fair market value of the property sold or purport to credit such amount to the debt. The trial court granted the defendant summary judgment on the plaintiffs' complaint, which sought monetary and other relief and contended that the defendant violated the antideficiency provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580d. The court of appeal affirmed and the plaintiffs sought review.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court considered the following question: Do the antideficiency provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 580d restrict a creditor's ability to exhaust multiple items of collateral in a series of nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings? It found the answer was no; the provisions are not implicated when a creditor merely exercises its right to exhaust all of the real property pledged to secure an obligation. Specifically, a creditor may proceed seriatim in foreclosing against multiple items of collateral without commencing a judicial action to determine the fair market value of each item sold, and crediting that amount to the debt, before proceeding with foreclosure sales of the additional collateral (24 Cal. 4th 400, 406) .

The Court noted that, by their terms, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a and 580d apply only when a personal judgment against the debtor is sought after a foreclosure (24 Cal. 4th 400, 407) . Further, it found that under settled decisional law, a creditor's resort to all security on a debt does not implicate these antideficiency provisions. It cited Hatch v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 254, 120 P.2d 869 for the proposition that Code Civ. Proc. § 580a applies only to shield a borrower from personal liability, and is not applicable when no attempt is made by the creditor to secure a personal judgment against a debtor for a deficiency remaining after a nonjudicial foreclosure (24 Cal. 4th 400, 407-408 , citing Hatch v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 254, 258, 120 P.2d 869). The Dreyfuss Court noted that this rule was subsequently reaffirmed in Freedland v. Greco (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 462, 289 P.2d 463 , which expressly referred also to Code Civ. Proc. § 580d. According to the Freedland Court, when a note is secured by multiple items of security, the creditor has the right to exhaust the additional security, and need not follow the procedure prescribed by Section 580a. Nor is the creditor prevented from exhausting the other security when the trust deed is a purchase money one. By analogy this rule also applies to Code Civ. Proc. § 580d; the pursuit of additional security is not a deficiency judgment (24 Cal. 4th 400, 408 , citing Freedland v. Greco (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 462, 466, 289 P.2d 463). Finally, the Court noted that this rule was reiterated more recently in Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 232, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 933 P.2d 507 . Specifically, the Western Security Bank Court held that a creditor that draws on additional security simply calls on all the security pledged for the debt, and by so doing does not violate the prohibition of deficiency judgments (24 Cal. 4th 400,408 , citing Western Security Bank v. Superior Court (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 232, 252, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243, 933 P.2d 507).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
B. Effect of Antideficiency Legislation

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.56-230.69

[Reserved]

§§ 230.56[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.70

§ 230.70 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Enjoined Due to Availability of Temporary and Preliminary Injunctive Relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE PRIVATE FORECLOSURE SALE _____ [SET FOR or CONTEMPLATED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE NOTICE OF DEFAULT AND ELECTION TO SELL DATED] _____ [date], SHOULD BE ENJOINED ON THE GROUND THAT _____ [specify, e.g., THE UNDERLYING OBLIGATION WAS OBTAINED BY FRAUD FOR WHICH THE TRUSTOR HAS RESCINDED THE TRANSACTION].

A. Preliminary Injunction. Because loss of the real property will usually cause the trustor to suffer irreparable harm, a preliminary injunction restraining a threatened private foreclosure sale may be issued when either (1) there is an irregularity in the notice, (2) there is a dispute regarding the existence or amount of the claimed default in the underlying obligation, or (3) the underlying obligation is void or voidable (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2); More v. Calkins (1890) 85 Cal. 177, 188-190, 24 P. 729 ; Lupertino v. Carbahal (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 742, 747-750, 111 Cal. Rptr. 112).

[Optional] B. Judgment Ineffective. When a trustor has an election between damages and rescission, the beneficiary may be restrained from proceeding with foreclosure during the pendency of the action on the ground that if the judgment should be for damages rather than rescission, it would be rendered ineffective if the trustor had by then been deprived of the subject matter of the contract (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3); Stockton v. Newman (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 564, 307 P.2d 56).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private sale may be enjoined on one or more of the grounds set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 526, such as (1) the trustor will suffer irreparable harm if the sale is not enjoined [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)], or (2) it is necessary to preserve the status quo pending the outcome of litigation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2), (3)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2) provides that an injunction may be issued when it appears by the complaint or affidavit that the commission orcontinuance of some act during the litigation would produce waste, or great or irreparable injury, to a party to the action. Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3) provides that an injunction may be granted when it appears, during the litigation, that a party to the action is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the rights of another party to the action respecting the subject matter of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual.

Specific possible grounds include some defect in the notice or other irregularity in the proceeding [see, e.g., Lupertino v. Carbahal (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 742, 749-750, 111 Cal. Rptr. 112] , a dispute as to the amount of the default [see, e.g., More v. Calkins (1890) 85 Cal. 177, 188-190, 24 P. 729] , or that the trust deed is void or voidable [see, e.g., Stockton v. Newman (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 564, 307 P.2d 56] , in whole or in part [see, e.g., Strike v. Trans-West Discount Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 744-745, 155 Cal. Rptr. 132] . In order to obtain an injunction, the trustor will have to pay or tender any undisputed amount due [Meetz v. Mohr (1904) 141 Cal. 667, 672-673, 75 P. 298] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to restrain a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's application for preliminary injunction. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Any of the grounds in § 230.10 et seq. for denying the availability of foreclosure or in § 230.71 et seq. for setting aside a foreclosure sale also may be used to establish that the foreclosure sale should be enjoined.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, if a defect in the notice of sale is the ground for relief, counsel should demonstrate the particular irregularity in the notice of sale.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and litigation forms relating to preliminary and permanent injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion and forms of points and authorities relating to procedural aspects of preliminary and permanent injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction

More v. Calkins (1890) 85 Cal. 177, 24 P. 729 , was an action for accounting, declaratory relief, and injunction based on contentions that the underlying instrument was void as not being supported by consideration and that the plaintiff could not give his consent to the contract because of his incapacity. Also there was a dispute as to the amount owing, which was one basis for the accounting. Judgment was entered for the defendant after a demurrer was sustained. The plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. Sales under powers in trust deeds are a harsh mode of foreclosing the rights of the trustor. They are to be scrutinized by courts with great care, and will not be sustained unless conducted with all fairness, regularity, and scrupulous integrity. A sale ought not to be made when the debt is uncertain or in dispute, but if made in such a case, a sale may be set aside. If there is doubt or dispute as to how much is due, or if the debt is unliquidated, a sale will be enjoined (85 Cal. 177, 188) . In this case, the complaint showed that the debt was unliquidated and uncertain and that $10,000 of the liquidated portion was claimed not to be supported by consideration (85 Cal. 177, 189) . The Court suggested that an accounting be ordered, that the sale be enjoined pending the accounting, and that the mode of sale be controlled by the trial court. The Court sustained the demurrer with respect to the count based on the decedent's incapacity and reversed with instructions to overrule the demurrer as to the other counts (85 Cal. 177, 190) .

In Lupertino v. Carbahal (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 742, 111 Cal. Rptr. 112 , trustors obtained a temporary restraining order and sought a preliminary injunction to enjoin a foreclosure sale, on the ground that they were entitled to notice at their current address, rather than their address as given in the trust deed, because the trustee knew their current address. The plaintiffs had moved from the address given in the trust deed as the address to which notice was to be sent, but they had not filed a request for notice change of address as provided in Civ. Code § 2924b. In connection with an earlier default, the beneficiary's attorney had contacted them at their new address and the trustee had sent notice of that default and election to sell to their new address. That default was cured. As to the default in question, although the trustee's file reflected the current address, notice was only sent to the original address. The trustors did not learn of the scheduled trustee's sale until after the reinstatement period had expired. The trial court vacated the temporary restraining order and denied the preliminary injunction. The trustors appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court found that although statutory notice had been given, the previous conduct of the trustee and the beneficiary had misled thetrustors to their prejudice with respect to the second default. Thus, the defendants were equitably estopped from proceeding with the sale without giving notice to the trustors at their current address (35 Cal. App. 3d 742, 747-750) .

[b] Judgment Ineffective

Stockton v. Newman (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 307 P.2d 56 , was an action for damages for fraud and for restitution. The fraud was based on misrepresentations regarding the income from and value of real property that the defendants had sold to the plaintiff and that was encumbered by the trust deed at issue. The restitution claim covered amounts that the defendants would have to return to the plaintiff in accordance with a notice of rescission previously given by the plaintiff. The plaintiff's application for preliminary injunction was made on all of the usual grounds: that a sale before trial would result in irreparable injury, that it would be difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation that would afford adequate relief, that pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief, that unless the sale were restrained a multiplicity of suits was probable, and that grave and irreparable injury would result to the plaintiff if his investment was forfeited in that he would be without any substantial assets and life savings would be lost. The preliminary injunction was issued, and the defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The defendants admitted that under Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3), an injunction may be used as a provisional or ancillary remedy to preserve the status quo pending a judgment (148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 563) . The plaintiff's notice of rescission was not a binding election. A defrauded purchaser may, in the same action, seek rescission or damages and should not be compelled to make an election during trial (148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 563-564) . It was obvious that if the judgment and election should be for damages and not rescission, it would be rendered ineffective if the plaintiff had by then been deprived of the subject matter of the contract. Making payments on the note might be construed as an affirmance of the contract and waiver of the right to rescind. Finally, being deprived of a particular piece of property is generally considered to amount to irreparable injury because in equity, each parcel of real property is considered unique. In conclusion, the court found no abuse of discretion in granting the preliminary injunction (148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 564) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction

In Strike v. Trans-West Discount Corp. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 155 Cal. Rptr. 132 (discussed in § 230.19[3][a]), the plaintiffs also contended that the June agreement was usurious in that it called for interest at two percent per month. In affirming, the court of appeal upheld the trial court's finding that the June agreement was usurious and that no interest under it could be collected by the defendant. Nevertheless, the defendant was entitled to collect interest on the trust deed and on the judgment by confession because they were not tainted (92 Cal. App. 3d 735, 744-745) .

The court of appeal in Daniels v. Williams (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 310, 270 P.2d 556 , affirmed the trial court's grant of an injunction pendente lite restraining the defendant holder of the note and trust deed from disposing of the note or foreclosing the trust deed during the pendency of the action to annul the note and trust deed on the ground that they had been procured by fraud. The court based its affirmance on Code Civ. Proc. § 526, saying that irreparable harm would be done to the plaintiffs if the note were sold or the trust deed were foreclosed during the action (125 Cal. App. 2d 310, 312-313) .

[b] Judgment Ineffective

In Jessen v. Keystone Savings & Loan Assn. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 454, 191 Cal. Rptr. 104 , the court of appeal distinguished Stockton v. Newman (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 558, 307 P.2d 56 (discussed in [3][b], above), saying that the Stockton court stressed the inadequacy of the legal remedy because of the unique nature of the property and treated the foreclosure as tending to render the potential judgment ineffectual. The Jessen court said that the trial court could have granted the preliminary injunction on those grounds. However, the court of appeal was concerned only with whether it was an abuse of discretion not to have granted the injunction. Based on several considerations, including the likelihood of the plaintiff's prevailing, the balancing of the harm to be suffered by each party on account of the granting or refusal to grant the preliminary injunction, and the ability of the plaintiff to be adequately compensated by money damages, the court of appeal upheld the denial of the preliminary injunction (142 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458-462) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.71

§ 230.71 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Waiver of Right to Declare Default

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FORECLOSURE SALE HELD ON _____ [date] SHOULD BE SET ASIDE BECAUSE THE BENEFICIARY WAIVED THE RIGHT TO FORECLOSE IN THAT THE BENEFICIARY ACCEPTED LATE PAYMENTS WITHOUT OBJECTION OR NOTICE THAT TIMELY PAYMENTS WOULD BE REQUIRED.

Acceptance of Late Payments Without Objection. A beneficiary that has lulled the trustor into a sense of security by accepting late payments without protest or objection and has not given definite notice requiring strict compliancewith the time provisions of the underlying obligation has waived the right to declare a default (Lopez v. Bell (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 398-399, 24 Cal. Rptr. 626).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a foreclosure sale should be set aside on the ground of waiver of the right to declare a default. In order to have a sale set aside, the trustor will have to pay or tender any undisputed amount that is due [Karlsen v. American Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 112, 117-121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Any of the grounds discussed in § 230.10 et seq. for denying the availability of foreclosure or in § 230.70 for restraining a foreclosure sale also may be used to establish that the foreclosure sale should be set aside.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the pattern of accepting late payments.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Late Payments Without Objection

Lopez v. Bell (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 24 Cal. Rptr. 626 , was an action to set aside a trustee's sale on the ground that the beneficiary had waived the right to declare a default by accepting late and partial payments. (An additional ground, that the price paid by the purchaser was inadequate, is discussed in § 230.73[3][a].) It was alleged that all payments were made long after they were due; that the February 16 installment was paid on June 23; that on each occasion, the defendant sent a written request for payment; that the plaintiffs were lulled into a sense of security by reason of the acceptance of the late payments without any notice from the defendant insisting on prompt future payment; and that the highest bid price was $9,500, whereas market value was $50,000. The defendant's demurrer was sustained without leave to amend, and the plaintiff appealed from the judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed. Seven semiannual payments in succession were accepted after maturity without objection or protest of any kind. Bledsoe v. Pacific Ready Cut Homes, Inc. (1928) 92 Cal. App. 641, 645, 268 P. 697 , held that after a waiver, definite notice must be given to reestablish the time element (207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 398-399) . In this case, the requests for payment did not amount to notice that strict performance of the time provisions of the note would be required in the future. To be definite enough, such a notice must state that unless payment is made on the date fixed for payment, the contract will be terminated and foreclosure will ensue; further, the notice must be given far enough in advance to give the trustor reasonable time and opportunity to comply (207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 398-399) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.72

§ 230.72 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Absence of Default

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FORECLOSURE SALE HELD ON _____ [date] SHOULD BE SET ASIDE BECAUSE IN FACT THERE WAS NO DEFAULT TO TRIGGER THE FORECLOSURE RIGHT.

No Default. A private foreclosure sale should be set aside when there was in fact no default under the trust deed at the time of the sale (Hauger v. Gates (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 752, 755-756, 269 P.2d 609 ; Bank of America N.A. v. La Jolla Group II (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 706, 712, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 825).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a foreclosure sale should be set aside on the ground that no default occurred, therefore the right to foreclose did not arise. To have a sale set aside the trustor will have to pay or tender any undisputed amount that is due [Karlsen v. American Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 112, 117-121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Any of the grounds discussed in § 230.10 et seq. for denying the availability of foreclosure or in § 230.70 for restraining a foreclosure sale also may be used to establish that the foreclosure sale should be set aside.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the circumstances and explain why no default occurred.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Default

Hauger v. Gates (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 752, 269 P.2d 609 , was an action to set aside a private foreclosure sale under a trust deed. The trust deed arose out of a purchase transaction in which the seller was required to deliver certain personal property to the purchasers. The seller never delivered the personal property. The value of the personal property exceeded the amount of the installments due at the time a default was declared and at the time of sale. Judgment was entered for the seller after demurrers were sustained. The purchasers appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. Because there were cross demands at the time notice of default was recorded and when the sale was held, even though one claim was unliquidated, neither party could be considered in default of the obligation owing to the other (42 Cal. 2d 752, 755-756) .

The seller contended that the right of setoff was not permitted to be exercised before nonjudicial foreclosure. That contention was upheld in later cases, some of which are discussed in § 230.110[3][b].

In Bank of America N.A. v. La Jolla Group II (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 706, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 825 , borrowers owned a house encumbered by a deed of trust securing a loan of $15,000. The loan went into default due to missed payments. The lender and beneficiary under the deed of trust directed the trustee to record a Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under Deed of Trust and a Notice of Trustee's Sale. The sale was scheduled for November 12. The homeowners tendered a payment at a branch of the lender on November 8. A branch employee accepted the payment and reinstated the loan. However, the lender never notified the trustee that the loan had been reinstated, and the foreclosure sale proceeded as planned. An individual, acting on behalf of a partnership, submitted the high bid of $15,500. The individual, who was in the business of buying properties at foreclosure sales, estimated that the fair market value of the house was $115,000. The trustee issued a Trustee's Deed Upon Sale purporting to convey the property to the partnership, who recorded the deed. The lender subsequently notified the partnership that the sale should not have gone forward. The partnership refused to accept a refund check tendered by the lender. The lender brought an action seeking cancellation of the Trustee's Deed. The trial court granted summary adjudication to the lender on its claims for cancellation of the Trustee's Deed and for a declaration that the trustee's sale was invalid and conveyed no interest in the property to the partnership.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court agreed with Bisno v. Sax (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 714, 718, 346 P.2d 814 that the tender and acceptance of a payment sufficient to cure a default on a loan secured by a deed of trust reinstates the loan and deprived the trustee of the power to foreclose (129 Cal. App. 4th 706, 711) . It was undisputed that the borrowers and lender entered into an agreement to cure the default. It followed that the beneficiary had no right to sell afterward. Therefore, the foreclosure sale was invalid (129 Cal. App. 4th 706, 712) . The fact that the agreement to cure the default did not take place within the time statutorily granted to a trustor to cure a default as a matter of right [Civ. Code § 2924c(a)(1), (e)]was irrelevant, because the homeowner and lender mutually consented to the cure and the loan's reinstatement (129 Cal. App. 4th 706, 712) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.73

§ 230.73 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Gross Inadequacy of Price

[1] FORM

[This form may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FORECLOSURE SALE HELD ON _____ [date] SHOULD BE SET ASIDE BECAUSE THE PRICE OBTAINED WAS GROSSLY INADEQUATE AND THE CONDUCT OF THE SALE WAS UNFAIR AND IRREGULAR.

Inadequate Price Coupled With Irregularity. Although mere inadequacy of price, standing alone, will not justify setting aside a trustee's sale, gross inadequacy of price coupled with even slight unfairness or irregularity is a sufficient basis for setting the sale aside (Millennium Rock Mortgage Inc. v. T.D. Service Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 804, 811, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544 ; Angell v. Superior Court (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 691, 699-700, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 ; Whitman v. Transtate Title Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 312, 323, 211 Cal. Rptr. 582 ; Lopez v. Bell (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 398, 24 Cal. Rptr. 626).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of the contention that a foreclosure sale should be set aside on the ground of a grossly inadequate price coupled with unfairness or irregularity in the conduct of the sale. To have a sale set aside the trustor will have to pay or tender any undisputed amount that is due [Karlsen v. American Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 112, 117-121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

This form may be combined with points pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Any of the grounds discussed in § 230.10 et seq. for denying the availability of foreclosure or in § 230.70 for restraining a foreclosure sale also may be used to establish that the foreclosure sale should be set aside.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the price was grossly inadequate compared to the value of the property.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Price Coupled With Irregularity

In Millennium Rock Mortgage Inc. v. T.D. Service Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 804, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544 , the auctioneer at a foreclosure sale read the script for a different foreclosure but erroneously called out the street address for the subject property, and as a result opened the bidding with a credit bid that was only a fraction of what was actually owed on the subject property. The trustee discovered the error the same day and sought to conduct the sale again. The successful bidder sued to quiet title to the property. The trial court issued a preliminary injunction barring the trustee from conducting a new foreclosure sale. The court of appeal reversed, holding that in conjunction with the gross inadequacy of price, the auctioneer's mistake, discovered after the close of bidding but before the issuance of the trustee's deed, constituted an "irregularity" sufficient to give the trustee the right to rescind the sale (179 Cal. App. 4th 804, 811) .

In Angell v. Superior Court (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 691, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , a bank held a single deed of trust to secure payment of two promissory notes on an apartment building. One note was for $2,750,000 and the second note was for $350,000. The debtor advised the bank that it would be unable to make payments on the loans. The bank officer in charge of the account was under the impression that each loan was secured by its own deed of trust. She therefore directed the foreclosure trustee to foreclose the presumed second deed of trust for $350,000. The notice of default recited that the amount owed was $14,850.52 and that the debt was due to one note in the sum of $350,000. The notice of sale stated that the amount due was $377,011.75. However, because the deed of trust actually included both notes, the notice of default and the notice of sale were in error. The actual reinstatement amount was $124,429.93, and the actual unpaid balance was $2,938,542.21. At the sale, the property was sold to petitioners for $340,000.01. On the afternoon of the sale, petitioners were informed by the trustee that the total obligation against the property was over $2 million. The sale was cancelled and the checks returned. Petitioners contended that the checks were returned with the understanding that they had five days to consult legal counsel and return the money and confirm the sale. They later did so, claiming the security for the $2.4 million note was extinguished by the trustee's sale. Their subsequent tender of the amount bid at the sale was refused.

Petitioners filed an action alleging they were the true owners of the property. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the defect in the notice, coupled with the gross inadequacy of price, was sufficient to set aside the sale. The conclusive presumption that petitioners were bona fide purchasers did not come into effect because the trust deed was never delivered (73 Cal. App. 4th 691, 700) .

Whitman v. Transtate Title Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 312, 211 Cal. Rptr. 582 , was an action for declaratory and injunctive relief, quiet title, specific performance, and damages based on breach of contract. The purchaser at a trustee's sale under a first trust deed sued the trustee and the purchasers at a prior foreclosure sale under the second and third trust deeds on the property.

The court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment for the trustee who had refused to deliver a deed to the plaintiff. After examining the propriety of the trustee's denial of a request for a postponement under the former version of Civ. Code § 2924g(c)(1) (subsequently amended to remove a postponement requirement), the court reviewed the adequacy of the price. The property sold for $12,960, a fraction of its estimated value of at least $65,000. While mere inadequacy of price alone will not justify setting aside a trustee's sale, gross inadequacy of price coupled with even slight unfairness or irregularity is a sufficient basis for setting aside a sale. The court found the evidence sufficient to establish gross inadequacy (165 Cal. App. 3d 312, 323) .

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Lopez v. Bell (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 24 Cal. Rptr. 626 , are discussed in § 230.71[3][a]. With respect to the contention that the final bid was inadequate, the plaintiffs conceded that mere inadequacy of price, however gross, is not alone enough to set aside a sale, but argued that the additional irregularities justified setting the sale aside. Winbigler v. Sherman (1917) 175 Cal. 270, 275-276 held that reasonable refusal by the trustee to postpone the sale in order for the trustor to obtain the money needed may constitute unfairness, which, coupled with an inadequate price, could justify setting aside the sale. Therefore, the Lopez court considered inadequacy of price in conjunction with the waiver contention discussed in § 230.71[3][a] (207 Cal. App. 2d 394, 398) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.74

§ 230.74 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Violation of One-Form-of-Action Rule

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FORECLOSURE SALE HELD ON _____ [date] SHOULD BE SET ASIDE BECAUSE OTHERWISE THE ONE-FORM-OF-ACTION RULE OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 726 WOULD BE VIOLATED.

Statute May Be Asserted in Action to Set Aside Trustee's Sale. A trustor is not restricted to raising the issue of the beneficiary's noncompliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 as an affirmative defense or by challenging the foreclosure proceedings. The issue may be raised in the trustor's action to set aside a foreclosure sale (Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 617, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a foreclosure sale should be set aside on the ground that otherwise the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 would be violated. To have a sale set aside the trustor will have to pay or tender any undisputed amount that is due [Karlsen v. American Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 112, 117-121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Any of the grounds discussed in § 230.10 et seq. for denying the availability of foreclosure or in § 230.70 for restraining a foreclosure sale also may be used to establish that the foreclosure sale should be set aside.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should explain how the one-form-of-action rule would be violated if the sale were permitted to stand.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute May Be Asserted in Action to Set Aside Trustee's Sale

The plaintiffs in Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144 , bought a mobilehome park from the defendants for $618,000. They made a down payment of $100,000 and gave a promissory note secured by a trust deed for the remainder of the purchase price. Later, the purchasers sued the sellers for fraudulent misrepresentations regarding the condition of the property and improvements on it. Meanwhile, they failed to make payments on the note. The sellers began nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings, and the purchasers obtained an injunction against the foreclosure. The purchasers recovered a judgment for $96,449. A few weeks later, the sellers obtained an order dissolving the injunction and compelling satisfaction of the judgment through setoff against payments owed by the purchasers to the sellers on the note. The day before the order, one of the purchasers filed a petition in bankruptcy, so the order was automatically stayed. After the bankruptcy court granted the sellers relief from the stay, the other purchaser filed a petition in bankruptcy. Again, the sellers moved for and were granted relief from the automatic stay. The judgment was set off against the note. Eight days after that, a trustee's sale was held under the trust deed. The sellers entered a credit bid, and the property was conveyed to them by the trustee. The purchasers then sued to cancel the trustee's deed and the note and trust deed, to quiet title in themselves, and to recover damages. They contended that under Code Civ. Proc. § 726, the equitable setoff extinguished their obligations under the note. The sellers moved for summary judgment, which was granted. The purchasers appealed, asserting that once the sellers set off the judgment against the note, Code Civ. Proc. § 726 extinguished the purchasers' further obligations under the note.

The court of appeal reversed, relying in part on the holding in Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 770-771, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 (discussed in § 230.110[3][b]), that setoff is an "action" that invokes the sanction of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 615) . (That case was subsequently disapproved on this point in Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , discussed in § 230.72[3][a].) The court of appeal, however, distinguished Daily, noting that the sellers in this case did not exercise self-help, as in Daily, but obtained a court order to enforce their equitable right of setoff. The court relied on Mark Briggs & Associates, Inc. v. Kinestar, Inc. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 483, 486, 192 Cal. Rptr. 21 , for the proposition that postjudgment proceedings to satisfy a judgment are part of an action (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 615) .

The decision in Mark Briggs & Associates, Inc. v. Kinestar, Inc. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 483, 192 Cal. Rptr. 21 , which was relied on by the court in Aplanalp for the proposition that postjudgment proceedings to satisfy a judgment are part of an action, arguably stands for the narrower proposition that a motion to enforce a judgment is an "action or proceeding" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 996.440. Moreover, under Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 (discussed in § 230.102[3][a]), it should not matter whether a setoff was an "action"; setting aside the trustee's sale and deed and quieting title in the purchasers would be justified on the basis that resort to the judgment receivable failed to satisfy the "security-first" rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726.

The sellers in Aplanalp also argued that the action to have the trustee's sale and deed set aside amounted to an invalid collateral attack on the trial court's order permitting the offset, on the ground that Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is an affirmative defense that must be affirmatively pleaded or else is waived. The sellers conceded that instead of being restricted to use as an affirmative defense, Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is available as a sanction, but they contended that as a sanction, Code Civ. Proc. § 726 had to be raised in a challenge during the foreclosure proceedings. The court of appeal, citing Walker v. Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329 (discussed in § 230.111[3][a]), found this contention meritless, and reversed the judgment for the sellers (225 Cal. App.3d 609, 617) . (The court in Aplanalp cited Walker as if it were only an action to set aside the trustee's sale, whereas in Walker the trustor-debtor had commenced an action to quiet title and to enjoin the trustee's sale.)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.75

§ 230.75 Private Foreclosure Sale Should Be Set Aside--Failure to Acknowledge Junior Lienholder's Attempted Bid

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE FORECLOSURE SALE HELD ON _____ [date] SHOULD BE SET ASIDE BECAUSE IT WAS UNFAIRLY CONDUCTED, WITH THE RESULT THAT THE PLAINTIFF, A JUNIOR LIENHOLDER, WAS DEPRIVED OF THE RIGHT TO BID ON THE PROPERTY.

A. Trustee's Duty Extends to Bidders. The trustee's duty at a sale conducted pursuant to a power of sale in a trust deed is to conduct the sale in a fair and open manner and to secure the best price for the trustor's benefit; and that duty extends to bidders (Bank of Seoul & Trust Co. v. Marcione (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 118, 244 Cal. Rptr. 1).

B. Failure to Acknowledge Attempted Bid. Given the negligible difficulty that pursuing a fair and open procedure would have imposed on the trustee, and the severe detriment incurred by the junior lienholder, the trustee's failure resulting in the junior lienholder's being unable to complete a bid constitutes a ground to set aside the sale (Civ. Code § 2924h(g); Bank of Seoul & Trust Co. v. Marcione (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 119-120, 244 Cal. Rptr. 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a foreclosure sale should be set aside on the ground that the trustee ignored a bid, albeit one that was incomplete or improperly phrased, or denied the plaintiff the opportunity to complete a bid [see Civ. Code § 2924 et seq.; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 725a, 726]. Civ. Code § 2924h(g) provides in part that it is unlawful for any person to fix or restrain bidding in any manner, at a sale of property conducted pursuant to a power of sale in a trust deed or mortgage.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, the substance of the attempted or incomplete bid should be set forth as well as what the plaintiff would have said if allowed to complete its bid.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee's Duty Extends to Bidders

The plaintiff in Bank of Seoul & Trust Co. v. Marcione (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 244 Cal. Rptr. 1 , was the beneficiary of a junior trust deed securing a loan of more than $200,000. The defendants were beneficiaries of a senior trust deed on the same property. At a trustee's sale under the senior trust deed, only the plaintiff's representative and the defendants attended. Before the sale was complete, the plaintiff's representative said to the trustee, "We bid ...#x2026;," but the trustee ignored that attempt to bid and declared the property sold to the defendants for a $107,349 credit bid. The fair market value of the property was $330,000. The plaintiff sued to have the trustee's sale set aside, to cancel the trustee's deed, for damages, and for unjust enrichment. Judgment was entered for the defendants after their demurrer was sustained. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that the trustee's duty to conduct a fair and open sale and to obtain the best price for the trustor's benefit is a duty that extends to bidders as well (198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 118) . Under Civ. Code § 2924h(a) the statement of the plaintiff's representative, "We bid ...#x2026;," was not a valid bid because it did not include a statement of the amount bid (198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 118-119) . Thus, it was not effective to cancel the previous bid. However, it would have taken no more than a few minutes for the trustee to explain that to the plaintiff's representative. That would have ensured that the trustee satisfied the primary duty to create a free market for the property and to protect the interests of all parties to the sale. Given the negligible difficulty that pursuing a fair and open procedure would have imposed on the trustee, and the severe detriment incurred by the junior lienholder, the trustee's conduct was sufficiently unfair and irregular to provide a ground to set aside the sale. The trustee's wrongdoing could be imputed to the defendants (198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 119-120) .

[b] Failure to Acknowledge Attempted Bid

Bank of Seoul & Trust Co. v. Marcione (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 113, 244 Cal. Rptr. 1 , is discussed in § 230.75[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustee's Duty Extends to Bidders

In Ostayan v. Serrano Reconveyance Co. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 1411, 1420,92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577 , the court of appeal held that the trustee's duty to conduct the sale fairly and openly does not extend to a duty to bidders to provide detailed explanations concerning recorded encumbrances. Thus, a successful bidder could not state a cause of action for negligence based on the trustee's failure to provide specific details concerning a senior lien on the property. The bidder disregarded the following statement by the auctioneer: "We believe there is a senior lien outstanding on this property. ...#x2026; This lien is believed to have priority over the subject lien being foreclosed upon." The bidder assumed that the auctioneer's statement was unfounded, based on the bidder's erroneous conclusions derived from his own due diligence investigations. The trustee owed no duty to protect the bidder from his own erroneous legal and economic conclusions (77 Cal. App. 4th 1411, 1419-1420) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.76-230.89

[Reserved]

§§ 230.76[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.90

§ 230.90 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Notice of Sale Was properly Given--Three-Month Reinstatement Period [Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2)] Was Not Stayed or Tolled

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE TRUSTOR MAY NOT _____ [ENJOIN or SET ASIDE] THE PRIVATE SALE ON THE GROUND THAT THE NOTICE OF SALE WAS GIVEN BEFORE EXPIRATION OF THE THREE-MONTH REINSTATEMENT PERIOD REQUIRED UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 2924(a)(2) BECAUSE THAT PERIOD IS NOT STAYED OR TOLLED BY _____ [CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 312 ET SEQ. or BANKRUPTCY CODE SECTION 362(a)], AND THE NOTICE OF SALE WAS OTHERWISE TIMELY UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 2924(a)(2).

[EITHER]

A. Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Code of Civil Procedure. The statutes of limitation, and particularly the provisions for staying or tolling, in Part II, Title 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure apply only to civil actions or proceedings. They do not apply to other statutory procedural time limits, such as the three-month reinstatement period required under Civil Code Section 2924 (Napue v. Gor-Mey West, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615-616, 220 Cal. Rptr. 799).

[AND/OR]

B. Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Bankruptcy Code. During the pendency of a bankruptcy case, the automatic stay provision of Title 11 of the United States Code, Section 362(a), does not stay or toll the three-month reinstatement period required under Civil Code Section 2924(a)(2) (Napue v. Gor-Mey West, Inc. (1985)

175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617-619, 220 Cal. Rptr. 799).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private sale should not be enjoined or set aside, when the ground asserted for that relief is that, because of the tolling of the three-month reinstatement period required under Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2), the notice of sale was defective in that it was given before the expiration of that period. The ground for this contention is that the reinstatement period was not tolled or stayed, either by the tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 312 et seq. or by the automatic stay provision of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action to restrain a private sale, the contention may be raised in opposition to a trustor's motion for a preliminary injunction. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the notice of sale was otherwise properly given at least three months after the recordation of the notice of default [see Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2)].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.70 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Code of Civil Procedure

In Napue v. Gor-Mey West, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 220 Cal. Rptr. 799 , the trustors defaulted in the payment of the secured debt, and the trustee recorded and mailed a notice of default and election to sell under the trust deed. Two of the trustors then filed petitions in bankruptcy. One trustor received a discharge in bankruptcy. In the other trustor's bankruptcy case, the court terminated the automatic stay to allow the foreclosure sale to proceed. After thedischarge and termination of the stay, the private sale was held. The trustors thereafter sued the beneficiaries, the trustee, and the purchasers at the private sale, to set aside the private sale and to quiet title. The trial court entered a judgment for the trustors conditioned on their making certain payments to the defendants. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded. The judgment was based on the trial court's conclusion that the trustors had not been provided with a three-month reinstatement period as required under Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2), because this period had been tolled during the pendency of the bankruptcy cases pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 356 (175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615) . This conclusion was erroneous because the statutes of limitation in Code Civ. Proc. § 312 et seq., including the tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 356, fix the time within which civil suits or proceedings must be commenced, but do not apply to the procedural time limits of Civ. Code § 2924 governing nonjudicial foreclosure sales (175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 616) . In fact, the reinstatement period, including an extension provided under 11 U.S.C. § 108(b), had expired without the trustors' having cured the default, and the private sale was therefore not untimely (175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 620) .

[b] Reinstatement Period Is Not Stayed or Tolled Under Bankruptcy Code

The facts and procedural background of Napue v. Gor-Mey West, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 220 Cal. Rptr. 799 , are discussed in [a], above. In that case, the court of appeal rejected the contention that the three-month reinstatement period required under Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2) is stayed or tolled during the pendency of a bankruptcy case by the automatic stay provision of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a). That provision operates to stay automatically the commencement or continuation of a judicial or administrative proceeding, the enforcement of a judgment, or any other act to obtain property or enforce a lien against property of the debtor. The court reasoned that the running of the reinstatement period required under Civ. Code § 2924 was not an act, proceeding, or enforcement of a right within the meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a). Moreover, another section of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 108(b), expressly provided for a limited extension of statutory reinstatement periods. The court therefore held that 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) did not stay or toll the reinstatement period required under Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2) (175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617-619) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.91

§ 230.91 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Trustee has No Independent Duty to Give Actual Notice After Satisfying Statutory Requirements

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE PRIVATE SALE CONDUCTED BY THE TRUSTEE MAY NOT BE CHALLENGED ON THE GROUND THAT THE TRUSTEE GAVE INADEQUATE NOTICE OF THE _____ [DEFAULT or SALE] BECAUSE THE TRUSTEE SATISFIED ALL STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS FOR NOTICE AND HAS NO INDEPENDENT DUTY TO PROVIDE ACTUAL NOTICE.

Trustee's Statutory Duty to Provide Notice of Default and Sale Is Exclusive. The statutory requirements for providing notice of a default or sale in a nonjudicial foreclosure proceeding are exclusive, and the trustee under a trust deed has no independent duty arising under common law agency principles to provide the trustor or the successors in interest with actual notice of the default or sale (I.E. Associates v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 281, 283, 285-289, 216 Cal. Rptr. 438, 702 P.2d 596).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private sale should not be enjoined or set aside on the asserted ground that the trustee failed to provide the trustor with actual notice of default or sale. The ground for this contention is that the trustee had no duty except to satisfy the requirements in Civ. Code § 2924b.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by a trustor against a trustee to restrain a private foreclosure sale, the contention may be raised by the beneficiary in opposition to the trustor's application for a temporary restraining order. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should include a description of the notice given by the trustee showing compliance with the requirements for notice provided under Civ. Code § 2924b.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.70 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee's Statutory Duty to Provide Notice of Default and Sale Is Exclusive

In I.E. Associates v. Safeco Title Ins. Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 281, 216 Cal. Rptr. 438, 702 P.2d 596 , the trustee conducted a nonjudicial foreclosure sale of the real property following a default. The trustor subsequently sued for damages based on the trustee's alleged negligence and breach of trust in failing to take reasonable steps to provide the trustor with prior notice of the default and sale. The trustee moved for summary judgment, alleging compliance with the statutory requirements for notice, and the trial court granted the motion. The trustor appealed, arguing chiefly that the trustee, as common agent of both the trustor and the beneficiary under the trust deed, had an independent duty under common law agency principles to take reasonable steps to provide actual notice of the default and sale to the trustor.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The trustee had properly mailed notices of default and sale to the trustor's last known address in compliance with Civ. Code § 2924b(b) (39 Cal. 3d 281, 284-285) . The Court held that a trustee's statutory duty to provide notice of a default or sale is exclusive (39 Cal. 3d 281, 283, 285-289) . A nonjudicial foreclosure procedure constitutes private, not state, action, and is therefore exempt from the due process constraints of the federal and state constitutions (39 Cal. 3d 281, 286-287) . The Court noted the lack of any authority for the proposition that a trustee owes any duties with respect to the exercise of the power of sale beyond those specified in the trust deed and the statutes (39 Cal. 3d 281, 287-288) . Policy considerations militate against any judicial expansion of a trustee's statutory duty to provide notice of a default or sale. Trustees, to perform efficiently, should have clearly defined responsibilities. In addition, a duty requiring the trustee to take reasonable steps to discover the trustor's current address would result in undue costs and uncertainty, particularly when the beneficiary is required to notify the trustee of any known change of address by the trustor and when the trustor may also easily do the same (39 Cal. 3d 281, 288-289) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trustee's Statutory Duty to Provide Notice of Default and Sale Is Exclusive

In Diediker v. Peelle Financial Corp. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 288, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442 , a title insurance company that issued a policy without excepting an Internal Revenue Service lien despite its knowledge of the lien's existence could not recover the amount eventually paid to the IRS on behalf of its policyholder from the trustee who, lacking knowledge of the existence of the lien, had conducted a foreclosure sale years earlier without providing notice to the IRS. State law does not require notice to be sent to the IRS. Further, the trustee was not required to notify the IRS under the terms of a federal statute providing that when a property on which the United States has or claims a lien or title under the IRS code is transferred pursuant to a nonjudicial sale, the sale is "made subject to and without disturbing such lien or title, if notice of such lien was filed or such title recorded in the place provided by law for such filing or recording more than 30 days before such sale and the United States is not given notice of such sale ...#x2026;" [26 U.S.C. § 7425(b)(1)]. The federal statute does not require the trustee to give notice to the United States, but merely provides that the lien will not be extinguished if the United States is not given notice of the sale. Because notice was not required, the trustee did not violate a duty owed under law by failing to give it (60 Cal. App. 4th 288, 294) . The court declined to impose a common law duty on trustees owed to all future purchasers of property and their title insurers to locate all IRS liens of record and give notice to the IRS prior to conducting a foreclosure sale, on the ground the rights and powers of trustees in nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings are strictly limited and defined by the contract of the parties and the statutes (60 Cal. App. 4th 288, 296-297) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.92

§ 230.92 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Trustee May Be Purchaser

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE TRUSTOR MAY NOT SET ASIDE A PRIVATE SALE ON THE GROUND THAT THE TRUSTEE WAS THE PURCHASER.

Trustee May Be Purchaser. A trustee under a trust deed is not prohibited from purchasing the trust property at the trustee's own sale. As long as there is no fraud, irregularity, or misconduct on the part of the trustee, a trustee's sale at which the trustee purchases the property is not invalid (Stephens, Partain & Cunningham v. Hollis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 955-956, 242 Cal. Rptr. 251).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private sale should not be set aside merely because the trustee purchased theproperty. The authorities are applicable when there is no showing of fraud, irregularity, or misconduct on the part of the trustee.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the trustee is entitled to purchase the property. For example, in an action to set aside a private sale, the contention may be raised in opposition to a trustor's motion for a summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the sale was conducted fairly and openly so that the highest possible price was obtained.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.70 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trustee May Be Purchaser

Stephens, Partain & Cunningham v. Hollis (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 242 Cal. Rptr. 251 , was an unlawful detainer action. The plaintiff was a partnership composed of officers of a corporation that arranged a loan and acted as trustee under the trust deed securing the loan. The defendants were the borrowers. After the loan was in default and a notice of default had been recorded, the corporation hired a trust deed service company to conduct the sale and purchased the property at the trustee's sale. The corporation then sold the property to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff commenced the unlawful detainer action. Judgment was for the plaintiff, and the defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, first noting that at the time of the sale, neither the plaintiff nor the corporation was acting as a real estate loan broker for the defendants (196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 952-953) . A trustee under a trust deed is not an ordinary trustee. A trustee under a trust deed has neither the powers nor the obligations of a strict trustee but is a kind of common agent for the parties. It has long been recognized that a trustee under a trust deed is not prohibited from purchasing the trust property at the trustee's own sale (196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 955) . As long as there is no fraud, irregularity, or misconduct on the part of the trustee, a trustee's sale at which the trustee purchases the property is not invalid. In fact, the creditor may rightfully act as trustee and properly purchase at the sale. There was no evidence in this case that the trustee acted in any manner contrary to the interests of the defendants in conducting the foreclosure sale. The defendants' only cognizable interest at the time of the sale was to have the sale conducted fairly and openly, so that the highest possible price could be obtained (196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 955) . The trustee did that (196 Cal. App. 3d 948, 956) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.93

§ 230.93 Private Foreclosure Should Not Be Enjoined or Set Aside--Buyer Was Bona Fide Purchaser

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE TRUSTOR MAY NOT SET ASIDE THE PRIVATE SALE BECAUSE THE BUYER IS A BONA FIDE PURCHASER OF THE REAL PROPERTY FOR VALUE WITHOUT NOTICE OF ANY ADVERSE INTEREST OR IRREGULARITY IN THE SALE PROCEEDINGS.

Sale May Not Be Set Aside as to Bona Fide Purchaser. The trustor may not set aside a private foreclosure sale when the buyer is a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of any adverse interest or of any irregularity in the sale proceedings, even if the buyer has experience in foreclosure sales and has purchased the property at less than fair market value (Melendrez v. D & I Investment Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1255, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 413).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private sale should not be set aside, when the ground asserted for that relief is that the buyer was not a bona fide purchaser for value because the buyer is experienced in foreclosure sales and purchased the property for substantially less than market value.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the buyer parted with consideration in exchange for the property and that the buyer had no knowledge or notice of any adverse interest or irregularity in the sale proceedings.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be submittedin opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.70 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale May Not Be Set Aside as to Bona Fide Purchaser

In Melendrez v. D & I Investment Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 413 , the borrowers defaulted on a loan secured by residential real property, and the lender initiated foreclosure proceedings. After receiving notice of the foreclosure sale, the borrowers contacted the lender and arranged to cure the default. The lender sent the borrowers a Repayment Agreement, which provided that the lender would not proceed with the trustee's sale provided that the borrowers made all payments required under the terms of the agreement and all other payments required under the promissory note. The borrowers believed that the agreement subsequently was orally modified to allow them to postpone one of the payments. Nevertheless, the trustee's sale was held when the borrowers missed that payment. The buyer, a licensed real estate broker with experience in buying properties at foreclosure sales, paid $197,100 for the property. The parties agreed that the property was worth approximately $380,000. The borrowers brought an action seeking to have the sale declared invalid on the ground it was conducted in violation of the repayment agreement.

The court of appeal affirmed a judgment for defendants. The court held that the trial court properly determined that the buyer was a bona fide purchaser for value ("BFP"). The conclusion flowing directly from that fact was that the trustee's sale was unassailable as to the buyer in the absence of fraud. Since there was no evidence of fraud chargeable to the buyer, the trial court properly rejected the borrowers' request to void the trustee's sale (127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1242) .

The court declined to hold that an experienced foreclosure buyer cannot qualify as a BFP if he or she buys property for substantially less than its value at a foreclosure sale. The court saw no reasoned basis for such a rule (127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1253) . It concluded that the proper standard to determine whether a buyer at a foreclosure sale is a BFP is whether the buyer (1) purchased the property for value, and (2) had no knowledge or notice of the asserted rights of another. The court found that the buyer qualified as a BFP under this test (127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1255) .

The court noted that Civ. Code § 2924 provides that when the trustee delivers a deed to a bona fide purchaser at the foreclosure sale, and the deed recites that all procedural requirements for the default notice and sale notice have been satisfied, there is a statutory rebuttable presumption that such requirements have been fulfilled [see Civ. Code § 2924(c)]. The court concluded that this presumption applies only to challenges to statutory compliance with regard to default and sales notices, and did not preclude the borrowers' challenge to the foreclosure sale (127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1256) . Nevertheless, the court concluded that the buyer's status as a BFP rendered the sale invulnerable to the borrowers' challenge. There was no evidence that the buyer knew about either the Repayment Agreement or the alleged modification. Further, there were no facts sufficient to put the buyer on notice of the Agreement or its alleged modification. Finally, the buyer was not chargeable with any alleged fraud. The court therefore affirmed the judgment against the borrowers (127 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1258) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions to Enjoin or Set Aside Private Foreclosure Sale

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.94-230.99

[Reserved]

§§ 230.94[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.100

§ 230.100 One-Form-of-Action Rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)] Does Not Bar Recovery or Foreclosure

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS ENTITLED TO _____ [specify, e.g., JUDICIALLY FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED] BECAUSE THE _____ [specify, e.g., PRIOR NONJUDICIAL FORECLOSURE] DID NOT _____ [INVOLVE A DEBT SECURED BY A MORTGAGE ON REAL PROPERTY or CONSTITUTE AN ACTION FOR THE RECOVERY OF THE DEBT] WITHIN THE MEANING OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 726.

A. One-Form-of-Action Rule. There can be but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or the enforcement of any right secured by a mortgage on real property or an estate for years therein, which action must be in accordance with the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 725a et seq. In the action the court may, by its judgment, direct the sale of the encumbered property or estate for years therein (or so much of it as may be necessary) and application of the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the costs of the court, the expenses of levy and sale, and the amount due the plaintiff, including, when the mortgage provides for the payment of attorney's fees, such sum as the court shall find reasonable, not exceeding the amount named in the mortgage (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)).

[Optional] B. Nonjudicial Foreclosure Is Not Action. A nonjudicial foreclosure is not an action for the recovery of the debt within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 and thus does not bar a subsequent judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure of separate real property securing the same obligation (Hatch v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 254, 258-262, 120 P.2d 869).

[Optional] C. Collateral Third-Party Note Secured by Real Property. An obligation that is secured by the note of a third party that is itself secured by a trust deed is not considered to be a debt secured by real property within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726. Thus a personal judgment on the primary obligation is proper (1) without first requiring foreclosure of the trust deed, or (2) unless and until the primary obligee succeeds to the obligor's equity (Bank of California v. Leone (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 444, 447-448, 112 Cal. Rptr. 394).

[Optional] D. Action Commenced by Trustor. An action commenced by the trustor is not an action for the recovery of the debt within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 and thus does not bar a subsequent judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure. This rule applies even if the beneficiary is considered the prevailing party in the action, for example, by virtue of being awarded a judgment for attorney's fees and costs (Passanisi v. Merit-McBride Realtors, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 1505-1507, 236 Cal. Rptr. 59).

[Optional] E. Attachment Is Not Action. In an action to foreclose a mortgage or trust deed on real property or an estate for years in real property, pursuit of any remedy authorized by law relating to attachment does not constitute an action for the recovery of a debt secured by a mortgage or trust deed under Code of Civil Procedure Section 726(a) or a failure to comply with other statutory or judicial requirements to proceed first against security (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.012).

[Optional] F. Senior and Junior Liens Assigned by One Lender to Two Different Creditors. When a creditor that holds both the senior and junior liens on property assigns the liens to two different creditors, the one-form-of-action rule in Code of Civil Procedure Section 726(a) does not bar a separate action by the junior lienholder to recover its debt following the senior lienholder's judicial foreclosure of the property (National Enterprises, Inc. v. Woods (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1234, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 37).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the one-form-of-action rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 726] does not apply. Paragraph A states the one-form-of-action rule. The remainder of the form consists of the following optional provisions:

- Paragraph B establishes that a prior nonjudicial foreclosure against one property does not bar a subsequent foreclosure against separate real property.

- Paragraph C is for use when a third-party note secured by real property has been pledged as security.

- Paragraph D makes clear that an action commenced by the trustor is not an action within the meaning of the one-form-of-action rule.

- Paragraph E establishes that pursuit of an attachment remedy does not constitute an impermissible action for the recovery of a debt secured by a mortgage or trust deed under the one-form-of-action rule or a failure to comply with other statutory or judicial requirements to proceed first against security.

- Paragraph F is for use when a lender holds both senior and junior liens on the property and subsequently assigns the liens to two different creditors.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in a beneficiary's action for judicial foreclosure, the contention may be raised in support of the beneficiary's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the situation that allegedly constitutes the "one action" or the "debt secured by a mortgage on real property."

[c] Application of Statute to Leasehold Mortgages

The statement of legislative intent in Stats. 1989, ch. 698, which added the phrase "or estate for years therein" to Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a), is that the one-form-of-action rule applies to leasehold mortgages. The act states that it is specifically intended to abrogate the holding in Taylor v. Bouissiere (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1197, 1199-1200, 241 Cal. Rptr. 253 , that the enforcement of rights in leasehold mortgages is governed by the rules regarding personal property, which holding is inconsistent with the legislative history of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 and other statutes and would result in a gap in the method of enforcement because the rules regarding enforcement of personal property interests are specifically made inapplicable to leasehold mortgages. However, the amendments made by Stats. 1989, ch. 698, are not to be construed to affect the applicability of the code sections amended by that chapter to the lien of mortgages or trust deeds in estates in real property specified in Civ. Code § 761(1) (estates of inheritance or perpetual estates) and Civ. Code § 761(2) (life estates) [Stats. 1989, ch. 698, § 15].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonjudicial Foreclosure Is Not Action

Hatch v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 254, 120 P.2d 869 , involved four consolidated actions to quiet title to real and personal property. The plaintiffs' mother died indebted to the bank on several loans. In a refinancing, the plaintiffs, as executors, delivered a note and trust deed on the estate's real property. On a subsequent renewal, they provided individual guaranties. In February 1937 the bank recorded a notice of default and an election to sell. Then the bank commenced actions on the individual guaranties, attaching the guarantors' property. The bank and the guarantors reached an agreement to postpone the trustee's sale until at least November 15, 1938, releasing the plaintiffs from personal liability on the guaranties, dismissing the bank's suits on the guaranties, and requiring the plaintiffs to execute a trust deed as individuals on parcels owned by them individually as additional security for the refinanced loan to the estate. In accordance with that agreement, the plaintiffs, as executors and with approval of the probate court, also pledged personal property of the estate as additional security. After nonjudicial foreclosure of the trust deed on the estate real property in December 1938, $128,000 remained due. Sale of the pledged estate personal property in February 1939 realized only $9,000. After application of the proceeds of the trustee's sale conducted in March 1939 under the plaintiffs' individual trust deed, $46,000 remained due, but the bank claimed no further security or right of action. The present action was to quiet title to the estate personal property and to the plaintiffs' individual real property. Judgment was for the plaintiffs on the ground that the February and March 1938 sales were invalid because the bank had taken no action pursuant to statute to establish a deficiency after the trustee's sale of the estate's real property. The bank appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The bank contended that because there was no attempt to obtain a personal judgment for the deficiency, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 725a, and 726 did not apply. The Court first stated that because there was no judicial foreclosure, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 725a and 726 had no direct application (19 Cal. 2d 254, 258) . Code Civ. Proc. § 726 requires a lender to exhaust any security before obtaining a personal judgment against the borrower. The lender may do so in either of two ways--by judicial foreclosure or by exercise of a power of sale under a trust deed or mortgage (19 Cal. 2d 254, 259) . The plaintiffs contended that once a lender resorts to judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure, the lender can take no further steps unless it proceeds within three months under one of those code sections to establish the existence of an actual deficiency in the amount realized from the foreclosed security. The Court, however, agreed with the bank, that when a creditor seeks merely to realize on additional security and not to obtain a personal judgment against the debtor for any unpaid balance, the statutes impose no such requirement (19 Cal. 2d 254, 260-262) .

[b] Collateral Third-Party Note Secured by Real Property

Bank of California v. Leone (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 444, 112 Cal. Rptr. 394 , was an action on three promissory notes. Two of the notes were secured by the defendant's reversionary interest as lessor in two leases of vending machines. U.C.C. financing statements were filed, and the lessee made the lease payments directly to the bank until 1970. The third note was originally unsecured, but to induce forbearance in collection efforts after the note matured, the defendant assigned to the bank as collateral a note payable to the defendant executed by a third party and secured by a trust deed on real property in Solano County. The bank tried to repossess the vending machines, but they could not be found. Judgment on all three notes was for the bank, and the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. As to the notes secured by the vending machines, the defendant contended that the attempts at repossession were inadequate and thus recovery on those notes was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The courtdisagreed, citing former Com. Code § 9501(1) (now see Com. Code § 9601(a)) to the effect that a secured party under a security agreement may reduce the claim to judgment, foreclose, or otherwise enforce the security interest by any available remedy. Code Civ. Proc. § 726 does not apply to a debt secured only by personal property and thus does not require exhaustion of security before obtaining a personal judgment (37 Cal. App. 3d 444, 446-447) . As to the note secured by the third party's note, the court said that note would not be governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 726 unless and until the bank succeeded to the defendant's equity and undertook to recover from the third party (37 Cal. App. 3d 444, 448) . The court discussed former Com. Code § 9102(3) (now see Com. Code § 9109(b)) and the reporter's comment to that section, and the court concluded that the bank had a note secured by an instrument, not one secured by an interest in real property, and thus Code Civ. Proc. § 726 did not apply. Thus, it was proper to give judgment on the note without requiring the bank to exercise its right as holder of the third-party note and foreclose the trust deed (37 Cal. App. 3d 444, 448) .

[c] Action Commenced by Trustor

In Passanisi v. Merit-McBride Realtors, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 236 Cal. Rptr. 59 , the plaintiffs had previously sued to enjoin a trustee's sale after the defendants had recorded notice of default. The plaintiffs were not successful in that action, and the defendants were awarded costs and attorney's fees. The trustee's sale was held, and the defendants were the successful bidders. The plaintiffs contended that the foreclosure sale discharged all of their debts to the defendants, including the judgment for costs and attorney's fees, and moved to compel the defendants to acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment. The motion was denied, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded. The plaintiffs' contentions on appeal included the claim that the foreclosure sale was void as violating Code Civ. Proc. § 726, in that the action to enjoin the foreclosure sale was a prior action within the meaning of that section. The court disagreed, saying that an action commenced by the trustor is not an action for the recovery of the debt within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 (190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 1505-1507) . The defendants were not required to forgo their right to the judgment for costs and attorney's fees in order to rely on the security to satisfy the secured debt (190 Cal. App. 3d 1496, 1507) .

[d] Senior and Junior Liens Assigned by One Lender to Two Different Creditors

National Enterprises, Inc. v. Woods (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 37 concerned two notes secured by two deeds of trust on the same property and held by one creditor (County Savings). The borrower defaulted on the loans. The Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) was appointed receiver to liquidate County Savings in 1992. RTC assigned the first note and first deed of trust to State Street Bank and retained the second note and the second deed of trust. In 1993, State Street commenced a judicial foreclosure action with regard to the first deed of trust. The court entered a judgment of foreclosure and ordered the property sold. It also found the borrowers (a general partnership) personally liable for the debt and subject to a deficiency judgment to be determined pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The partners settled the deficiency for $500,000.

In 1996, the FDIC (RTC's successor) sold the second loan to NEI. In 1996, NEI brought an action against the borrowers for nonpayment of the second note. The court of appeal reversed a judgment for the defendants. It held that the one-form-of-action rule (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)) did not bar recovery by the junior lienholder (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1232) . The court stated that the one-form-of-action rule has not been, and should not be, applied to require two different creditors who hold separate debts to join in a single action, even if the two debts were once held by a single creditor--at least in the absence of evidence of a scheme to circumvent the rule (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1232) .

The court stated that neither the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 nor its purpose requires two debts owed by the same borrower and secured by the same property to be treated as one, merely because they once were held by the same creditor. First, the court stated that § 726 refers to a single debt or mortgage: It allows "but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or the enforcement of any right secured by mortgage." The court stated that by its plain language, § 726 does not prohibit separate actions to recover separate but related debts assigned to independent parties. Thus, the court stated that unless the separate debts are a subterfuge, two debts held by different creditors but owed by the same party cannot be deemed a single debt even if they are secured by the same property. If it were otherwise, § 726 would obligate two independent creditors to share and coordinate a single action to collect separate debts secured by the same property, simply because the two debts were once held by a single creditor (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1233) .

Second, the court stated that the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 would not be furthered by treating two bona fide debts as one when held by independent creditors, simply because they were once held by a single creditor. The purpose of limiting a secured creditor to only one lawsuit to enforce its security interest and collect its debt would not be upset by allowing one suit per debt, unless the two debts were a subterfuge for one. Furthermore, § 726's purpose of compelling the exhaustion of all security before the entry of a deficiency judgment would not be thwarted if an independent junior lienholder were permitted to bring an action after the senior lienholder had exhausted the security. In such an instance, the security has already been exhausted, and no purpose would be served in requiringthe junior lienholder to go through a meaningless foreclosure procedure (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1234) .

The court held that the fact that NEI's predecessors-in-interest allowed State Street to foreclose did not require a different outcome (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1234-1235) . The court cited Bank of America v. Graves (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 607, 613, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 288 (discussed in § 230.51[4][a]), in which a bank holding a second deed of trust on a residence permitted the holder of the first deed of trust on the property to complete its nonjudicial foreclosure first. The court of appeal rejected the debtors' claim that the bank's separate suit was barred by § 726, stating that "the sold-out non-purchase-money junior is free to pursue any remedy on the note without regard to the one-form-of-action limitation [Code Civ. Proc. § 726], fair market value deficiency limitation [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 726, 580a], and nonjudicial sale deficiency prohibitions [Code Civ. Proc. § 580d]." The court acknowledged that the facts differed in Woods because the debts were not only secured by the same property but also were once held by a single creditor at the time of the default. The court recognized that a single lender might structure a single debt into several promissory notes to preserve the right to bring multiple actions, but stated that this was not the case here because the two debts originated two years apart (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1235) .

Finally, the court rejected the borrowers' argument that because NEI was a successor in interest of County Savings and of the RTC, it took the note and deed of trust subject to all defenses that the borrowers had against County Savings and RTC (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1237) . The court stated that although an assignee acquires the rights and liabilities of the assignor and is subject to the defenses that could be asserted against the assignor, the restrictions arising from the one-form-of-action rule under § 726 cannot logically be triggered before the one action is commenced. In this case, at the time the first judicial foreclosure action was commenced by State Street, there were two bona fide creditors holding the two debts. Thus, at the time State Street brought and completed the judicial foreclosure action, the RTC (which held the second note) was under no disability concerning the right to bring a separate action under § 726 and it could assign (or its successor could assign) the loan free of any such restriction (94 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1237) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.101

§ 230.101 Foreclosure, Antideficiency Statutes, and One-Form-of-Action Rule Cannot Bar Lender's Recovery for Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BECAUSE THE _____ [BENEFICIARY WAS FRADULENTLY INDUCED TO MAKE A LOAN SECURED BY REAL PROPERTY or PLAINTIFF PURCHASED (A PORTION OF THE) INTEREST OF A BENEFICIARY IN A FRADULENTLY INDUCED LOAN], THE _____ [BENEFICIARY or PLAINTIFF] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER ACTUAL AND EXEMPLARY DAMAGES [AFTER FORECLOSURE UNDER ANY TRUST DEED SECURING THE LOAN].

[EITHER]

A. Fraud Damages Authorized. Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 726, [a successor in interest to] a person authorized by the State of California to make or arrange loans secured by real property, that originates, acquires, or purchases, in whole or in part, any loan secured directly or collaterally, in whole or in part, by a mortgage or trust deed on real property or an estate for years therein, may bring an action to recover damages, including actual damages and exemplary damages not to exceed 50 percent of the actual damages, against a borrower if the action is based on fraud under Civil Code Section 1572 and the fraudulent conduct of the borrower induced the original lender to make the loan, provided the loan is not secured by single-family, owner-occupied residential real property, when the property is actually occupied by the borrower as represented to the lender in order to obtain the loan and the loan is for $150,000 or less, as adjusted annually, commencing on January 1, 1987, to the Consumer Price Index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(f), (g); Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1237-1238, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 ; Guild Mortgage Co. v. Heller (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1511-1514, 239 Cal. Rptr. 59).

[Optional] B. Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery. Any action maintained under Code of Civil Procedure Section 726(f) for damages shall not constitute a money judgment for a deficiency, or a deficiency judgment, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a, 580b, and 580d (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(h); Guild Mortgage Co. v. Heller (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1511-1514, 239 Cal. Rptr. 59).

[OR, if lender is bank]

A. Fraud Damages Authorized. Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 or any other provision of law to the contrary, [a successor in interest to] a state or nationally chartered bank, or its subsidiaries or affiliates transacting business in California, that originates, acquires, or purchases, in whole or in part, any loan secured directly or collaterally, in whole or in part, by a mortgage or trust deed on real property, or any interest therein, may bring an action to recover damages, including actual damages and exemplary damages not to exceed 50 percent of the actual damages, against a borrower if the action is based on fraud under Civil Code Section 1572 and the fraudulent conduct of the borrowerinduced the original lender to make the loan, provided the loan is not secured by single-family, owner-occupied residential real property, when the property is actually occupied by the borrower as represented to the lender in order to obtain the loan and the loan is for $150,000 or less, as adjusted annually, commencing on January 1, 1987, to the Consumer Price Index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor (Fin. Code § 551(a), (b)).

[Optional] B. Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery. Any action maintained under Financial Code Section 551 for damages shall not constitute a money judgment for a deficiency, or a deficiency judgment, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a, 580b, and 580d (Fin. Code § 551(c)).

[OR, if lender is savings and loan association]

A. Fraud Damages Authorized. Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 or any other provision of law to the contrary, [a successor in interest to] an association, a federal association, an affiliate of an association or federal association, or a service corporation, that originates, acquires, or purchases, in whole or in part, any loan secured directly or collaterally, in whole or in part, by a mortgage or trust deed on real property, or any interest therein, may bring an action to recover damages, including actual damages and exemplary damages not to exceed 50 percent of the actual damages, against a borrower if the action is based on fraud under Civil Code Section 1572 and the fraudulent conduct of the borrower induced the original lender to make the loan, provided the loan is not secured by single-family, owner-occupied residential real property, when the property is actually occupied by the borrower as represented to the lender in order to obtain the loan and the loan is for $150,000 or less, as adjusted annually, commencing on January 1, 1987, to the Consumer Price Index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor (Fin. Code § 7460(a), (b)).

[Optional] B. Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery. Any action maintained under Financial Code Section 7460 for damages shall not constitute a money judgment for a deficiency, or a deficiency judgment, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a, 580b, and 580d (Fin. Code § 7460(c)).

[OR, if lender is credit union]

A. Fraud Damages Authorized. Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 or any other provision of law to the contrary, [a successor in interest to] a credit union, an affiliate of a credit union, or a credit union service organization, that originates, acquires, or purchases, in whole or in part, any loan secured directly or collaterally, in whole or in part, by a mortgage or trust deed on real property, or any interest therein, may bring an action to recover damages, including actual damages and exemplary damages not to exceed 50 percent of the actual damages, against a borrower if the action is based on fraud under Civil Code Section 1572 and the fraudulent conduct of the borrower induced the original lender to make the loan, provided the loan is not secured by single-family, owner-occupied residential real property, when the property is actually occupied by the borrower as represented to the lender in order to obtain the loan and the loan is for $150,000 or less, as adjusted annually, commencing on January 1, 1987, to the Consumer Price Index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor (Fin. Code § 15102(a), (b)).

[Optional] B. Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery. Any action maintained under Financial Code Section 15102 for damages shall not constitute a money judgment for a deficiency, or a deficiency judgment, within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a, 580b, and 580d (Fin. Code § 15102(c)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Fraud Defined. Actual fraud consists of _____ [the suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true or the positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, even though the person believes it to be true or the suppression of that which is true, by one having knowledge or belief of the fact or a promise made without any intention of performing it or any act fitted to deceive, such as _____ (describe defendant's act in present case)], committed by a party to the contract, or with a party's connivance, with the intent to deceive another party to the contract, or to induce that other party to enter into the contract (Civ. Code § 1572).

[Optional] D. Fraud Inducing Purchase of Beneficial Interest. The holder of the beneficial interest under a [second] trust deed, who was induced by fraudulent misrepresentations, concerning the value of the trust deed and the note that it secures, to purchase the note and beneficial interest is not prohibited by the antideficiency statutes from recovering damages for fraud (Lassar & Gross International Inc. v. Dunham (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501-502, 241 Cal. Rptr. 854).

[Optional] E. Fraud Inducing Subordination. The beneficiary of a trust deed who was induced by fraud to subordinate that trust deed to another trust deed on the same property is not prohibited by the antideficiency statutes from recovering damages for fraud (Joanaco Projects, Inc. v. Nixon & Tierney Constr. Co. (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 821, 831-832, 57 Cal. Rptr. 48).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of thecontention that the recovery of damages for fraud in the inducement to make or purchase a loan secured by a trust deed or mortgage is not barred by the antideficiency statutes or the one-form-of-action rule [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580d, 726]. When the lender or investor seeks recovery of a judgment on the underlying debt in situations involving fraud or foreclosure of a senior lien, this form may be combined with the authorities in § 230.51[1].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover damages for fraud, the contention may be raised in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should set forth the substance of the misrepresentations.

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities relating to a full-credit bid as not barring an action for fraud or negligence against nonborrower third parties, see § 230.103.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fraud Damages Authorized

Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 , is discussed in § 230.103[3][a].

In Guild Mortgage Co. v. Heller (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 239 Cal. Rptr. 59 , the plaintiff made a $108,300 purchase-money loan to the defendants after they represented that they were making a $21,200 cash down payment and that they would retain the property for investment purposes. No down payment was made, and the defendants sold the property to the tenants. The plaintiff sold the loan to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation. Neither the borrowers nor their grantees made payments on the loan, so the FHLMC foreclosed, acquired title to the property, and required the plaintiff to repurchase it. The plaintiff sustained a $50,000 loss on resale and sued the original sellers, the purchaser-borrowers, the ultimate purchasers, the escrow company, and the brokers for breach of contract, fraud, and conspiracy. The demurrer of the purchasers-borrowers was sustained without leave to amend, and judgment was entered for the defendants. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The defendants argued that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580d, and 726 prohibited recovery in that the plaintiff was limited to what was realized on the foreclosure. The court first distinguished First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Lehman (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 537 , on the basis that in that case, no causal connection was shown between the misrepresentations and the lender's loss (193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1510) . The antideficiency statutes have long been held not to preclude suit for fraud because neither the intent nor the purpose of those statutes is frustrated by allowing a creditor to recover damages for fraud in the inducement of a loan (193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1511-1512) . The court noted the enactment of Financial Code sections [see Fin. Code §§ 551, 7460, 15102] that allow banks, saving and loan associations, and credit unions to maintain actions for damages for fraud. Those sections, to avoid ambiguity, expressly excepted actions under them from application of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580a, 580b, 580c, and 726. The legislative history of those Financial Code sections also makes clear that the Legislature disapproved the judicial use of the antideficiency statutes to insulate mortgagors from liability for fraudulently induced loan transactions. A separate action for fraud in no way frustrates the purpose of the antideficiency statutes (193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1513) . Therefore, the action for fraud could be maintained even though the misrepresentations did not go directly to the value of the property securing the loan (193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1514) . Even if a fraud action could not be maintained against the defendant-borrowers, a conspiracy cause of action could still be maintained (193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1514-1515) .

[b] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery

Guild Mortgage Co. v. Heller (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 239 Cal. Rptr. 59 , is discussed in [a], above.

[c] Fraud Inducing Purchase of Beneficial Interest

In Lassar & Gross International Inc. v. Dunham (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 241 Cal. Rptr. 854 , the plaintiff purchased a note and the beneficial interest under a second trust deed from the defendant, the original beneficiary of the second trust deed. Other defendants included the purchasers-borrowers on the note and the broker. All the defendants conspired to and did induce an institutional lender to make a loan secured by a first trust deed on the property, by misrepresenting the purchase price and that the purchasers had made a cash down payment. The second note was for $33,500 and was sold to the plaintiff for $20,000 after the defendant misrepresented to the plaintiff that the purchasers were occupying the property and had $33,550 equity in it. After the plaintiff's interest was rendered worthless by foreclosure of the first trust deed, the plaintiff brought this action for damages for fraud and misrepresentation. The trial court gave judgment for the defendants after their motions for summary judgment were granted on the basis of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580b, 580d, and 726.

The court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal distinguished First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Lehman (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 537 , which denied recovery to the beneficiary of a purchase-money first trust deed, on the ground that the firstlender, an institution, had been better able to protect itself, compared with the individual purchaser of a second trust deed. The institutional lender made an independent appraisal of the property. Regardless of whether the other parties to the transaction lied about the down payment, the lender's appraisal could have protected it. In addition, the no-down arrangement in Lehman appeared to be a single transaction, whereas in this case, the transaction was alleged to be one of many spawned by the original conspiracy between the seller-developer and the broker (196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 499-501) . The misrepresentations pertained to the value of the second trust deed note. If the court allowed the antideficiency statutes to become a shield for this type of fraudulent scheme, similar conspiracies would mushroom (196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501) . The antideficiency statutes are in no way frustrated by permitting a lender to pursue a separate action against a borrower for fraud (196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 502) . The court stated that Lehman was no longer controlling in view of the enactment of Financial Code sections [see Fin. Code §§ 551, 7460, 15102] that allow banks, saving and loan associations, and credit unions to maintain actions for damages for fraud, including punitive damages, against a borrower who fraudulently induced the loan (196 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501-502) .

[d] Fraud Inducing Subordination

Joanaco Projects, Inc. v. Nixon & Tierney Constr. Co. (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 821, 57 Cal. Rptr. 48 , was an action for damages for fraud and unjust enrichment against a corporate trustor and individual principals. The plaintiff sold two lots to the corporation for $18,750 each, taking back a note and trust deed on each for $12,500. The plaintiff agreed to subordinate each to a construction loan of not more than $35,000 on each lot, and did so. The homes constructed on the lots were inferior to others in the neighborhood. Combined construction costs amounted to only $35,200. The defendants retained the balance of $34,800 for themselves. No payments were made on any of the trust deeds, and the holder of the first trust deeds foreclosed. Judgment was for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Without discussing Code Civ. Proc. § 580b (except to say that it prevented a deficiency judgment on the notes), the court of appeal allowed recovery for fraud based on an interpretation of the promise in the subordinated trust deeds that required all of the proceeds of the construction loans to be used for improvements on the property and the fact that the defendants never intended to devote all or substantially all of the construction loan proceeds to the improvements (248 Cal. App. 2d 821, 831-832) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Antideficiency Provisions Do Not Prohibit Recovery

In Webber v. Inland Empire Investments (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 902, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 , the plaintiff held a junior deed of trust and note on certain property. The mortgage company that held title to property had the funds to pay off the note secured by the junior deed of trust, but the owner of the mortgage company instead decided to (1) transfer title to another corporation he controlled, (2) use a third corporation he controlled (Inland) to purchase the senior note from the bank, (3) have the mortgage company default on the note, and (4) then have Inland foreclose on the property, eliminating the junior security on the parcel. The court held that the antideficiency provisions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 580b did not preclude plaintiff's action for conspiracy to intentionally interfere with contract. The court characterized these transactions as a "sham foreclosure" (74 Cal. App. 4th 884, 902-903) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.102

§ 230.102 Sanction for Violating Code Civ. Proc. § 726 Does Not Require Forfeiture of Right to Enforce Underlying Debt

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE BENEFICIARY _____ [SUED BEFORE FORECLOSURE or APPLIED OTHER ASSETS OF THE TRUSTOR TO REDUCE THE DEBT], HE/SHE/IT IS STILL ENTITLED TO PURSUE AN ACTION ON THE UNDERLYING OBLIGATION.

A. One-Form-of-Action Rule. There can be but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or the enforcement of any right secured by a mortgage on real property or an estate for years therein, which action must be in accordance with the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 725a et seq. In the action the court may, by its judgment, direct the sale of the encumbered property or estate for years therein (or so much of it as may be necessary) and application of the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the costs of the court, the expenses of levy and sale, and the amount due the plaintiff, including, when the mortgage provides for the payment of attorney's fees, such sum as the court shall find reasonable, not exceeding the amount named in the mortgage (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)).

B. Action Is Permitted on Underlying Obligation. A beneficiary who violates Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 [by proceeding against other assets of the trustor without first foreclosing under the trust deed] waives the security interest but is allowed to seek a judgment for the full balance of the underlying obligation. Allowing the beneficiary to sue on the underlying obligation does not violate the fundamental purposes of the statute (Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 1004-1006, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a beneficiary who has violated

Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is still entitled to pursue an action on the underlying debt.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to waiver of security and loss of priority suffered by a beneficiary who violates Code Civ. Proc. § 726, see § 230.110[1].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Is Permitted on Underlying Obligation

Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , a four-to-three decision, was an action by the bank to enforce the defendants' personal guaranties of an unsecured corporate obligation. No aspects of that obligation were involved in the litigation. The personal guaranties were originally secured by a trust deed on the defendants' residence. The bank set off $2,804.82 in the defendants' demand deposit and savings accounts and $110,635.19 in the corporation's demand deposit accounts, leaving a balance due of $976,575.95. Thereafter, the corporation declared bankruptcy, and the defendants contended that the setoff against their personal accounts constituted waiver by the bank of its security interest in their home. The bank apparently agreed, because it reconveyed the trust deed, and commenced the action for personal judgment on the guaranties. Both parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment. The defendants, relying on Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 (discussed in § 230.110[3][b]), contended that the setoff constituted not only waiver of the security interest but also waiver of the right to enforce the underlying obligation. The trial court granted judgment for the defendants. The court of appeal affirmed.

The Supreme Court reversed, distinguishing and disapproving in part the opinion in Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 (51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 1003-1004, 1006) . The Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 726 may be interposed by the debtor as an affirmative defense or may operate as a sanction. If the debtor successfully raises Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as an affirmative defense, the creditor will be forced to exhaust the security before obtaining a personal judgment for any deficiency. If the debtor does not raise Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as an affirmative defense, the debtor may still invoke it as a sanction against the creditor on the ground that the creditor, by not foreclosing on the security in the action brought to enforce the debt, made an election of remedies and waived the security (51 Cal. 3d 991, 997) . Thus, the Court described Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as establishing two rules: the one-form-of-action rule and the security-first rule. The Court then considered the definition of "action" in Code Civ. Proc. § 22 and concluded that exercise of a setoff right is not an action within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The defendants were right, the Court said, but for the wrong reason. The setoff was a violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 but was not an "action" (51 Cal. 3d 991, 998) . Previous decisions invalidated bank setoffs, not because they were "actions" but because the security had not first been exhausted (51 Cal. 3d 991, 999) . The Court discussed Mckean v. German-Am. Savings Bank (1897) 118 Cal. 334, 50 P. 656 and its progeny, which have construed bank setoffs as subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 726, but none of them involved an action to enforce the underlying obligation. The long-standing rule under Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is that a bank may not take a unilateral setoff of funds in a depositor's demand account against a debt secured by the depositor's interest in real property (51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 1000) . (On this point the Court disapproved Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , discussed in § 230.110[3][b], to the extent that it construed a setoff to be an action.)

The most important question was the effect of an improper setoff on the underlying debt and security interest. The Court noted that its opinion was limited to the facts of the case. The defendants never asked to have their accounts credited; and the plaintiff, by reconveying the trust deed, implicitly agreed that its unilateral offset constituted waiver of its security. The Court stressed that it did not decide whether a bank that perhaps inadvertently set off funds and voluntarily recredited the account could proceed with foreclosure. Furthermore, the bank's voluntary reconveyance effectively disposed of the question of whether a setoff in violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 constitutes a waiver of the security interest (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1001) . Nevertheless, the bank contended that reimbursement of the funds, with interest and compensatory damages, should be sufficient sanction for the setoff. The Court said that such a solution would undermine the purpose of the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, which is to protect the debtor against having to defend multiple actions. In addition, the fact that the setoff was likely to be for an insignificant amount compared to the amount of the underlying debt, and the fact that the debtor would likely be without any liquid assets after the funds were taken, made it highly unlikely that the debtor would be able to obtain counsel to attack the setoff (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1002) .

The Court noted that no case had ever held that a bank's improper setoff requires a forfeiture of the underlying debt (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1002) . Mckean v. German-Am. Savings Bank (1897) 118 Cal. 334, 50 P. 656 , was an action by the debtor's assignee to recover the amount set off (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1002-1003) . Similarly, Woodruff v. California Republic Bank (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 108, 141Cal. Rptr. 915 , and Gnarini v. Swiss American Bank (1912) 162 Cal. 181, 121 P. 726 , held that the setoffs were ineffective but did not hold or even suggest that the debts were unenforceable. Although there was dictum in Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , that the balance of the debt is waived by the creditor's failure to exhaust its security, Daily was an action for foreclosure of the bank's security interest (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1003) . Accordingly, the question was one of first impression (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1004) .

The Court, citing Salter v. Ulrich (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 263, 268, 138 P.2d 7 (discussed in § 230.52[1]), found that when a secured creditor sues only on the underlying debt without seeking to foreclose on the security, the creditor is precluded by Code Civ. Proc. § 726 from proceeding against the security in a subsequent action. The creditor is deemed to have waived the security. However, the judgment on the debt is unaffected by the creditor's failure to comply with the chronology required by Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The Court noted, citing Walker v. Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329 (discussed in § 230.111[3][a]), that if the creditor has multiple security interests for a debt and proceeds against fewer than all of them in a judicial foreclosure action and obtains a deficiency judgment, the creditor cannot thereafter foreclose on the excluded security. In this case, the bank's setoff was not a judicial action, and the bank therefore did not obtain a judgment for the full amount of the debt (as in Salter) or for any deficiency after sale of the collateral (as in Walker). In both Salter and Walker, the creditors failed to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 726, but in each case, the creditor obtained a judgment for the full amount of the debt. The only sanction was that the creditors lost their preferred position as secured creditors, a drastic sanction in the marketplace. By parity of reasoning, the Court said, the bank in this case also must be allowed to seek a judgment for the full balance of the debt (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1004) . The particular facts of the case also demonstrate that allowing the bank to recover on the debt is consistent with the purpose and operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The operation of that statute is largely within the control of the debtor (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1004) . If the debtor interposes the statute as an affirmative defense, the debtor can require the creditor to exhaust the security before obtaining a personal judgment. If the debtor does not raise the statute as a defense, the creditor's action on the debt is allowed to go to judgment, but the creditor is precluded thereafter from foreclosing on the security. When in the present case the bank set off the defendants' accounts, the defendants were in the same functional position as a debtor defending a judicial action on the debt. They could have demanded that the bank proceed against the security before resorting to the defendants' personal assets. Instead, they notified the bank that in their view, the setoff had waived the security interest. The defendants then accepted reconveyance, and by doing so, they voluntarily relinquished the protection of the security-first rule. To allow the defendants now to claim that they were deprived of the benefits of the rule would be to encourage gamesmanship. Demanding reconveyance of the security and then demanding that the creditor resort to the security would be inconsistent (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1005) .

Allowing the bank to sue on the debt did not violate the two fundamental purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, which are to prevent multiple suits against the debtor and to require exhaustion of the security before a creditor resorts to the debtor's unencumbered assets. The present action was the only suit against the defendants, and they freely chose not to have the bank foreclose on the security interest (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1005) .

Finally, the result advocated by the defendants would have allowed them to evade their debt almost entirely and would have been a gross injustice to the bank and a corresponding windfall to the defendants (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1005) . The result advocated by the defendants would have constituted a penalty against the bank 300 times greater than the amount of the setoff (51 Cal. 3d 991, 1006) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.103

§ 230.103 Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Action for Fraud or Negligence Against Nonborrower Third Parties

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BECAUSE _____ [BENEFICIARY or PLAINTIFF] MADE A FULL CREDIT BID FOR MORE THAN THE VALUE OF THE PROPERTY IN RELIANCE ON DEFENDANT[S]' [FRAUDULENT or NEGLIGENT] MISREPRESENTATIONS AS TO THE PROPERTY'S VALUE, _____ [BENEFICIARY or PLAINTIFF] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER ACTUAL [AND EXEMPLARY] DAMAGES.

[EITHER]

A. Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Fraud Action Against Nonborrower Third Parties. A lender's acquisition of the collateral by a full-credit bid at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale does not bar the lender from maintaining a fraud action to recover damages from nonborrower third parties who fraudulently induced the lender to make the loan (Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1246-1248, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 ; First Commercial Mortgage Co. v. Reece (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 742-744, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23).

[Optional] B. Fraud Defined. Actual fraud consists of _____ [the suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true or the positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, even though the person believes it to be true or the suppression of that which is true, by one having knowledge or belief of the fact or a promise made without any intention of performing it or anyact fitted to deceive, such as _____ (describe defendant's act in present case)], committed by a party to the contract, or with a party's connivance, with the intent to deceive another party to the contract, or to induce that other party to enter into the contract (Civ. Code § 1572).

[OR, if reliance is based on negligence]

A. Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Negligence or Negligent Misrepresentation Claim Against Nonborrower Third Parties. A lender's acquisition of the collateral by a full-credit bid at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale does not bar the lender from maintaining an action for negligence or negligent misrepresentation to recover damages from nonborrower third parties whose negligence induced the lender to make the loan (Kolodge v. Boyd (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 371-372, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 ; First Commercial Mortgage Co. v. Reece (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 742-744, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23).

[Optional] B. Negligent Misrepresentation Defined. Negligent misrepresentation consists of the positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, though he or she believes it to be true, such as _____ [describe defendant's act in present case] (Civ. Code §§ 1572(2), 1710(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a lender who made a full credit bid for more than the actual value of the property is not barred from recovering damages for fraud or negligent misrepresentation from a nonborrower third party on whose valuation of the property the lender relied in making the bid.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by the beneficiary to recover damages for fraud, the contention may be raised in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should set forth the substance of the misrepresentations.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities relating to a foreclosure, antideficiency statute, or the one-form-of-action rule as not barring a lender's recovery for fraud, see § 230.101.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Fraud Action Against Nonborrower Third Parties

In Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 , the plaintiff was induced to make loans on nine properties by the defendants' fraudulent misrepresentations including fictitious borrowers and false and misleading descriptions of the properties. After defaults, the plaintiff purchased many of the properties at foreclosure sales with full-credit bids then sued on claims of intentional and negligent misrepresentation, breach of contract, and breach of fiduciary duty. The trial court granted the defendant title company and title insurer judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the full-credit bids barred claims for damages resulting from fraudulent representations as to the security's adequacy. The court of appeal reversed, and the defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the lender's acquisition of security property by full-credit bid at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale did not bar the lender from maintaining a fraud action to recover damages from third parties who fraudulently induced the lender to make the loans (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1246-1248) . The Court rejected the defendants' argument that the full-credit bids meant that the plaintiff could not show justifiable reliance. A lender generally bears the burden and risk of making an informed bid, but being materially misled by fiduciaries or agents as to the value of the property before even making the loan is not within the realm of that risk (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1246) . To establish reliance, the plaintiff only had to demonstrate that making full-credit bids was a proximate result of the defendants' fraud, and that in the absence of fraud the plaintiff would not, in all reasonable probability, have made the bids (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1246-1247) .

Generally, a full-credit bid establishes the value of the security as being equal to the outstanding debt and does not impair security (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1242) . However, to the extent that the plaintiff's full-credit bids were proximately caused by the defendants' fraudulent misrepresentations, and insofar as the plaintiff's reliance without independent or additional inquiry was either appropriate given the context of the relationship or not otherwise manifestly unreasonable, the plaintiff's bids could not be deemed an admission of the properties' value. Thus, the full-credit-bid rule would not apply (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1247) . Alternatively, if the plaintiff's full-credit bids were not proximately caused by the defendants' fraudulent misrepresentations, or reliance was either inappropriate given the context of the relationship or otherwise manifestly unreasonable, the full-credit-bid rule would apply, and the plaintiff's bid would constitute an irrevocable offer to purchase the property for that amount, under Civ. Code § 2924h(a) (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1247) . In these circumstances, the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover the difference between the bid and the actual value of the property but would stillbe able to recover any other damages flowing from the defendants' fraud (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1247-1248) .

The defendants also argued that the plaintiff failed to allege actual damages because the measure of damages for fraudulent inducement of a loan is the impairment of the lender's security or the balance of the outstanding debt. The Court disagreed. The plaintiff did not allege that the defendants impaired security or caused the value of the properties to decrease after the loans were made, but rather alleged that the defendants' intentional misrepresentations regarding the properties' characteristics and values induced the plaintiff to make loans that far exceeded the properties' actual worth at the time the loans were made, and as a result of these misrepresentations the plaintiff purchased the properties. In other words, the defendants did not damage or impair the plaintiff's security interest but rather deceived the plaintiff at the outset as to what that security was. The Court distinguished Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 606-607, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 (discussed in § 230.130[3][b]), which held that a full-credit bid extinguishes a claim for waste, on the ground a lender's suit against fiduciaries or agents for fraudulent inducement to make loans and purchase property is a completely separate cause of action from a suit for impairment of security (10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1249) .

In First Commercial Mortgage Co. v. Reece (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23 , the plaintiff made a $207,593 purchase money loan secured by a deed of trust on real property. The plaintiff alleged it was induced to make the loan, in part, by an appraisal report that grossly inflated the property's value. The plaintiff sold the loan to Nationwide. After the borrowers defaulted, Nationwide foreclosed and acquired title to the property by making a full credit bid. Pursuant to contract, the plaintiff repurchased the loan so as to reimburse Nationwide for its loan loss. Nationwide reconveyed the property to the plaintiff, who subsequently sold the property and recovered $79,252. In holding that the plaintiff's causes of action for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of contract against the appraiser and the loan broker were not barred, the court of appeal noted that the plaintiff did not allege that it was fraudulently induced to make a full credit bid--the full credit bid was made by Nationwide. Rather, the plaintiff alleged it was fraudulently induced to make the loan by way of a misleading appraisal, and was damaged when it reacquired the property as a consequence of its alleged contractual obligation to indemnify Nationwide. The court stated that, under Alliance, the plaintiff's damages resulting from the compelled repurchase were incurred as a direct consequence of the fraud, and neither the repurchase nor the full credit bid by Nationwide precluded it from pursuing a fraud claim against the defendants (89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 742-744) .

[b] Full-Credit Bid Does Not Bar Action for Negligent Misrepresentation Against Nonborrower Third

Parties

In Kolodge v. Boyd (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 , the plaintiff made a series of three loans in the total amount of $660,000, secured by two parcels of real property. Defendant appraised the value of the two properties at $1.8 million. When the borrower filed for bankruptcy, plaintiff's counsel obtained a new appraisal of the properties which stated that the combined value of both properties was $985,000. Plaintiff foreclosed on the third loan of $180,000. The "Trustee's Deed Upon Sale" stated that the $180,000 was "in full satisfaction of the indebtedness then secured by said Deed of Trust." Plaintiff then brought this action against defendant, alleging causes of action for negligence and negligent misrepresentation. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment, ruling that plaintiff's full credit bid barred his claims under Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 . The trial court also held that plaintiff's action was barred because he did not reasonably rely on defendant's allegedly negligent misrepresentations at the time plaintiff entered his bid.

Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed and remanded the action. The court first held that there was a triable issue as to whether plaintiff had in fact made a full credit bid in foreclosing on only one of the loans. In so holding, the trial court had relied on the recitals in the "Trustee's Deed Upon Sale." The court ruled that nothing bars a party from rebutting a recital in a trustee's deed pertaining to the amount of unpaid debt at the time of the trustee's sale by evidence showing that the amount was different from that stated in the deed (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 359) .

The court further held that if on remand, the trial court determined that plaintiff had made a full credit bid, the full credit bid rule as construed by the Supreme Court in Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell, discussed in [a], above, did not as a matter of law bar plaintiff's causes of action for negligence and negligent misrepresentation (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 371-372) . The court stated that although Alliance decided only that full credit bids do not as a matter of law bar claims for fraudulent misrepresentations as to the adequacy of the security, the rationale of Alliance as well as the authorities on which it relied strongly suggested that such bids also do not as a matter of law bar any other tort claims against third parties who are not borrowers or the successor in interest to a borrower (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 364) . The court stated that the full credit bid rule is not concerned about the relationship between the lender and third parties but only the relationship between the lender and the borrower or a successor whose interests are also subject to the lien of a mortgage, citing Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1238, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 ("it is clear that the Legislature intended that a properly conducted [nonjudicial] foreclosure sale should constitutea final adjudication of the rights of the borrower and the lender"). The court concluded that this language indicates that the bar of the full credit bid rule does not apply in actions that are not on the note, for damages not caused by breach of the loan agreement, from persons who are not borrowers or otherwise party to that agreement or the successor in interest of such a person (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 365-366) . In so holding, the court refused to follow Pacific Inland Bank v. Ainsworth (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 277, 283, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , which concluded that Alliance applied only to fraud claims (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 369-370) .

The court further held that even if it agreed that Alliance applied only to "fraud" claims, the type of negligent misrepresentation pled in this case was a type of "fraud" within the meaning of Alliance (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 372) .

Finally, the court found that defendant had not conclusively negated the possibility that plaintiff would be able to establish the reasonableness of his reliance on defendant's appraisal. Accordingly, the court held there was a triable issue as to this matter (88 Cal. App. 4th 349, 377) .

The facts of First Commercial Mortgage Co. v. Reece (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23 are discussed in [a], above. In holding that a repurchasing lender could state a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation against an appraiser and loan broker, the court in First Commercial distinguished Pacific Inland Bank, above, on the ground that unlike in Pacific Inland, the plaintiff in First Commercial was not the lender that made the full credit bid but rather was a lender that sustained damages from a compelled repurchase of the loan. Under those circumstances, the rationale for applying the full credit bid rule was absent (89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 744) . Furthermore, because the plaintiff's damages were incurred as a result of the compelled repurchase, there was no issue as to whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendants' representations in making a full credit bid, or whether the full credit bid operated as an admission of the property's value by the plaintiff (89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 744) .

In addition, the court stated that Pacific Inland Bank was inapposite because the tort of negligent misrepresentation is a form of deceit, without the element of scienter. Thus, the court stated that if a repurchasing lender can show justifiable reliance for purposes of intentional fraud by demonstrating it relied on false representations in extending the loan and then selling it to another lender, by a parity of reasoning the same showing would be sufficient to establish justifiable reliance for purposes of a negligent misrepresentation claim. Similarly, the court stated that irrespective of whether the cause of action was intentional or negligent misrepresentation, the plaintiff in First Commercial could show it sustained damages as a consequence of the compelled repurchase, notwithstanding Nationwide's full credit bid. Therefore, the court held that Nationwide's full credit bid did not bar the plaintiff's cause of action for negligent misrepresentation (89 Cal. App. 4th 731, 744-745) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Full Credit Bid Does Not Bar Fraud Action Against Nonborrower Third Parties

In Michelson v. Camp (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 955, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539 , the court held that the lenders could not recover for the alleged fraud of an appraiser who they claimed had misrepresented the value of the property at the time of the loan. Citing Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1246-1247, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 , the court stated that to avoid the full credit bid rule, a lender must have been induced to enter into the loan by the false representation, and must have still been under the mistaken belief that the representation was true at the time it made the full credit bid. Fraud damages are not recoverable when the lender's reliance at the time of the full credit bid is manifestly unreasonable (72 Cal. App. 4th 955, 969-970) . The Michelson court held that the lenders' reliance on the old appraisal was manifestly unreasonable because a more recent one had been prepared and submitted in bankruptcy proceedings on the lenders' behalf (72 Cal. App. 4th 955, 969-970) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.104-230.109

[Reserved]

§§ 230.104[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.110

§ 230.110 One-Form-of-Action Rule Bars Foreclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]--General Rule

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO [JUDICIALLY] FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE BENEFICIARY'S _____ [specify, e.g., APPLICATION OF THE TRUSTOR'S DEPOSIT ACCOUNT TO PAY ARREARAGES] CONSTITUTED A VIOLATION OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 726 [AND THUS WAS A WAIVER OF THE BENEFICIARY'S SECURITY AND RIGHT TO FORECLOSE].

A. One-Form-of-Action Rule. There can be but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or the enforcement of any right secured by a mortgage on real property or an estate for years therein, which action must be in accordance with the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 725a et seq. In the action the court may, by its judgment, direct the sale of the encumbered property or estate for years therein (or so much of it as may be necessary) and application of the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the costs of the court, the expenses of levyand sale, and the amount due the plaintiff, including, when the mortgage provides for the payment of attorney's fees, such sum as the court shall find reasonable, not exceeding the amount named in the mortgage (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)).

B. Waiver of Security. The sanction for a violation of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 is that the creditor is held to have waived the security. The statute may be invoked as a sanction against the creditor [even if the beneficiary has not raised the statute as an affirmative defense], on the ground that the creditor, by not foreclosing on the security in the action to enforce the debt, made an election of remedies and waived the security (Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 997, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772-773, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , disapproved on other grounds, Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; Scalese v. Wong (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 869, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 40 ; see C.J.A. Corp. v. Trans-Action Financial Corp. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 664, 671-673, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538).

[Optional] C. Setoff Against Deposit Account. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 726, a bank is not allowed to take a unilateral setoff of funds in a depositor's demand account against a debt secured by the depositor's interest in real property. Such a setoff constitutes a violation of the statute and a waiver of the security. Thereafter, the bank cannot foreclose (Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 1000, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 771, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , disapproved on other grounds, Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557).

[Optional] D. Equitable Setoff. When the trustor and the beneficiary have cross demands, and the beneficiary obtains an order in a judicial proceeding compelling satisfaction of the claim against the beneficiary through setoff against the payments owed by the beneficiary on the note, that setoff constitutes a violation of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726. Thereafter, the beneficiary may not foreclose (see Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 615, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144).

[Optional] E. Statute Overrides Permissive Cross Complaint Statutes. Code of Civil Procedure Section 428.10 is subject to and qualified by Code of Civil Procedure Section 726. Thus, one may file a cross complaint on an unsecured claim or a cross complaint to foreclose and use any resulting deficiency judgment as a setoff (Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 616, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144).

[Optional] F. Loss of Priority in Action on Underlying Debt. A creditor, by suing on the note to obtain a personal judgment in disregard of the security, makes an election of remedies that constitutes, under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580a and 726, a waiver of the lien and thus a waiver of the right to foreclose on the security or to proceed against the security in a subsequent action. A creditor in that position forfeits the priority of the lien and, in any action on the underlying debt, is relegated to the position of an ordinary judgment creditor (Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 1004, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; James v. P.C.S. Ginning Co. (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 19, 22-23, 80 Cal. Rptr. 457).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a trust deed may not be foreclosed. The ground is that some act by the beneficiary constitutes a violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 and thus amounts to waiver of the security.

This form may be combined with other forms of points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in a beneficiary's action for judicial foreclosure, the contention may be raised in support of a trustor's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should describe the act that constitutes the "one action."

[c] Beneficiary's Options Regarding Setoff

When a beneficiary that is a financial institution unilaterally exercises a right of setoff against an account of the trustor, to apply those funds to the obligation secured by the trust deed, the trustor may require repayment of the funds taken from the account [Mckean v. German-Am. Savings Bank (1897) 118 Cal. 334, 339-341, 50 P. 656 ; Woodruff v. California Republic Bank (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 108, 110-112, 141 Cal. Rptr. 915] . It is apparently an open question whether immediate return of the funds by the financial institution will allow the creditor to proceed against the security [see Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 1001, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 (discussed in § 230.102[3][a])].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security

Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 230.102[3][a].

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , disapproved on other grounds, Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , are discussed in [b], below. In discussing the sanction for the bank's violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, the court noted that the fairest sanction would be to make the bank return the money from the checking account and to allow it to proceed with foreclosure. That would prevent the defendants from unfairly benefitting from the bank's action by being relieved of their obligation to pay the full amount of a debt for which they had personal liability (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772) . The fairest solution, however, would encourage future violations of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, thereby diluting the statutory protections afforded debtors (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 773) . The classic sanction for violation of the one-form-of-action rule is that the creditor is held to have waived the security (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772) . In attempting to collect a projected deficiency before judicial foreclosure and before any hearing to establish the fair market value of the security, the bank reduced the likelihood that it would ever seek a later money judgment. This approach not only deprived the defendants of their funds pending an eventual judicial determination of deficiency, but it also reduced the bank's incentive to seek the highest possible price for the property at a foreclosure sale. Although that defect could be corrected if the bank later attempted to obtain a personal judgment, the bank's action placed the entire financial burden pending foreclosure on the defendants, contrary to the primary purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 726. By its setoff, the bank waived its right to foreclose. It also became liable for attorney's fees and costs (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 773) .

In Scalese v. Wong (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 40 , the creditor, who held a note and deed of trust on the property, filed a complaint against the debtors that requested the alternate relief of specific performance and damages or judicial foreclosure. When forced by the trial court to make an election of remedies, the seller chose to pursue a personal judgment against the debtors. The trial court granted judgment for the seller.

On appeal, the court of appeal rejected the debtors' contention that the judgment had to be reversed because it constituted a deficiency judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 580b and the seller's sole remedy at trial was foreclosure against the security. Citing Walker v. Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329 (discussed in § 230.111[3][a]) and Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 (discussed in § 230.102[3][a]), the court stated that when the creditor sues the debtor seeking a money judgment before foreclosing on the property, the creditor has elected a personal action, and has thereby waived the security interest in the property (84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 869) . If the debtor raises the security interest as a defense, the creditor will be required to exhaust the security (i.e., go through with foreclosure proceedings) before proceeding against the debtor personally, assuming there is no bar to a deficiency (84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 869) . In Scalese, because the debtors did not assert Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as a defense to the complaint and voiced no objection when the seller made the election at trial, they gave up their right to have the security exhausted before becoming potentially personally liable for any shortfall (84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 869) . Thus, because the seller elected to pursue a money judgment and because the debtors did not raise Code Civ. Proc. § 726 as a defense, Code Civ. Proc. § 580b never came into play (84 Cal. App. 4th 863, 870) .

In C.J.A. Corp. v. Trans-Action Financial Corp. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 664, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538 , Trans-Action acquired property subject to a first deed of trust given to secure a loan on the property and held by Bank of America. Trans-Action obtained a loan secured by a second deed of trust. Trans-Action defaulted on the loan secured by the first deed of trust and Bank of America filed an action for judicial foreclosure against entities including Trans-Action and the holder of the second deed of trust (First Republic). First Republic cross-complained against Trans-Action and its general partners for breach of the note and second deed of trust and for judicial foreclosure. Bank of America subsequently dismissed its complaint. First Republic then assigned its loan to CJA, who brought the cross-complaint to trial and obtained a judgment of judicial foreclosure pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 726.

Thereafter Revere, to whom the Bank of America had assigned its loan, filed a second action for judicial foreclosure on the first deed of trust. After evidence was taken and the matter was under submission, Revere's attorney asked the trial court not to issue a decision. The action was dismissed. Revere's attorney then substituted in as attorney of record for junior lienholder CJA and, acting as trustee under the first deed of trust, noticed a trustee's sale of the property. Revere purchased the property at the trustee's sale. The attorney then filed a motion on behalf of CJA to convert CJA's judgment of judicial foreclosure from a judgment ordering foreclosure by sale with a possible monetary deficiency into a money judgment for the entire amount of the debt. CJA asserted that the modification of the judgment was appropriate because, as a result of the sale of the security at the trustee's sale, CJA was now a sold-out junior lien holder. After hearing, the trial court granted CJA's motion and ordered that the previously entered judgment of judicial foreclosure and order of sale be converted to a money judgment. Trans-Action appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court stated that for its own tactical reasons, CJA elected to proceed by way of judicial foreclosure, knowing full well that the senior lienholder could foreclose first, thereby effectively terminating its judgment rights. The court held that once CJA pursued that remedy to judgment, it was estopped from changing course to the detriment of Trans-Action (86 Cal. App. 4th 664, 671) . In addition, the modification sought by CJA concerned issues that were not before the court in thejudicial foreclosure action. CJA sought to modify the judgment because, 15 months after judgment was entered, the senior lien holder, represented by the same attorney as CJA, foreclosed on the property, terminating CJA's right to enforce the judgment by sale. Based on these events, CJA contended it was a sold-out junior lien holder, entitled to avoid the one action rule. The court stated that to avail itself of the sold-out junior lien holder exception to the one action rule, CJA was required to prove that it had lost its security through no fault of its own (86 Cal. App. 4th 664, 672). The court stated that in the most fundamental way, the postjudgment modification based on issues beyond the scope of the trial absolved CJA of its burden of proving that it lost the security through no fault of its own and deprived Trans-Action of its right to present a defense (86 Cal. App. 4th 664, 673).

[b] Setoff Against Deposit Account

Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 230.102[3][a].

In Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , the bank lent the defendants $340,000 in 1960. The loan was secured by a pledge of common stock. When the pledged stock declined in value, the defendants gave as additional security a trust deed on their 10-percent interest in a 245-acre ranch. The obligation was renewed until 1970. When the note went into default, the bank sold the pledged stock at private sale, realizing approximately $257,000, which it applied to the principal balance. Next, the bank set off from the defendants' checking account approximately $10,400 for accrued interest for the period from June 12 to October 16, 1970. Then the bank commenced the present foreclosure action. The trial court found that approximately $83,000 in principal and $88,200 in interest were due on the note and entered a judgment of foreclosure, retaining jurisdiction to determine the amount of any deficiency. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal first considered whether the setoff was an "action" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, and determined that it was (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 771) . This portion of the court's holding was later disapproved in Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 998-1000 n.7, 275 Cal.

Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 (discussed in § 230.102[3][a]), which acknowledged that a setoff against a deposit account is a violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 726, and stated that other decisions have invalidated bank setoffs, not because they were "actions" but because the security had not first been exhausted. The Bank of America court concluded that when a depositor's obligation to a financial institution is represented by a note secured by a mortgage or trust deed, Code Civ. Proc. § 726 prevents the institution from exercising a right of setoff; the institution must exhaust the security (152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 771) .

The portion of the decision considering the effect of the bank's violation of the one-form-of-action rule is discussed in [1], above.

[c] Equitable Setoff

The facts, procedural background, and relevant portion of the opinion in Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144 , are discussed in § 230.74[3][a].

[d] Statute Overrides Permissive Cross Complaint Statutes

The facts and procedural background of Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144 , are discussed in § 230.74[3][a]. The defendants relied in part on Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10 and 431.70, arguing that those sections provide that when cross demands exist, equitable setoff is available to a creditor, regardless of Code Civ. Proc. § 726. However, the court pointed out that the Law Revision Commission report on Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 places no restrictions on the right of a defendant to assert by way of cross complaint either an unsecured claim if the original action is to foreclose a mortgage or a cause of action to foreclose on a secured claim subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 726. The court interpreted that language to mean that if a secured creditor cross complains on its secured claim, its must follow the procedures specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 726, and if it fails to do so, it is subject to the sanctions inherent in Code Civ. Proc. § 726. Requiring a party to follow Code Civ. Proc. § 726 in raising a cross complaint would not invalidate Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 because the party would still have the right to raise the cross complaint. Moreover, as the Law Revision Commission indicated, if any conflict exists, the legislature intended Code Civ. Proc. § 726 to prevail (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 616) .

Even if Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 permits the filing of a cross complaint to foreclose under Code Civ. Proc. § 726 and using any resulting deficiency judgment as a setoff, Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 did not apply to the facts of this case. The defendants did not file an action to foreclose and to request determination of a deficiency under Code Civ. Proc. § 726, nor did they file any cross complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10 (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 616) .

Nor did Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70 assist the defendants. The court cited Woodruff v. California Republic Bank (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 108, 111, 141 Cal. Rptr. 915 , for the proposition that Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70 does not entitle a creditor to foreclose on a trust deed after having taken funds from the debtor's deposit account to offset past-due payments on a note secured by a trust deed on real property, because the cross demand referred to in Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70 presumes a lawful and proper cross demand, which in this context can only arise after a judgment of foreclosure has been obtained and a deficiency judgment has been entered (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 616-617) . The court of appeal also distinguished Hauger v. Gates (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 752, 754-755, 269 P.2d 609 (discussed in § 230.72[3][a]), in which the creditor refused to set off money the creditor owed the debtor against payments due on the note, saying that when the debtor asserts the right to setoff, Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is not implicated. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10 and 431.70 did not change the result in this case (225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 617) .

[e] Loss of Priority in Action on Underlying Debt

Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 230.72[3][a].

In James v. P.C.S. Ginning Co. (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 19, 80 Cal. Rptr. 457 , the plaintiffs sought to quiet their title against the judgment lien of the defendant. The defendant lent money to the plaintiffs, for which they executed a promissory note and a crop mortgage. As additional collateral, they executed security agreements that were, in effect, personal property mortgages covering farm equipment and that listed, along with the equipment, "equity in house." Later the plaintiffs filed a declaration of homestead on their house. When the plaintiffs defaulted on the loan, the defendant filed an action against them alleging the execution of the notes secured by the two agreements, and seeking possession of the items of personal property, but making no mention of the "equity in house." The plaintiffs defaulted, and a money judgment was entered for the defendant that also granted possession of the farming equipment and the $10,000 "equity in house." The plaintiffs then brought the present action to quiet their title to the home as against the defendant's purported purchase at the execution sale. Judgment was for the plaintiffs, and the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court defined the question as whether the defendant, by electing to file a personal action and reduce the indebtedness to a personal judgment, made an election of remedies that, by operation of law, waived the equitable lien priority over the subsequent declaration of homestead. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 726, when a creditor elects to obtain a personal judgment rather than enforce the mortgage, the effect of the election is to waive the right to foreclose (276 Cal. App. 2d 19, 22) . Such a creditor loses all right to the security and is relegated to the position of an ordinary judgment creditor (276 Cal. App. 2d 19, 23) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

19-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.111

§ 230.111 One-Form-of-Action Rule Bars Foreclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]--Prior Judicial Foreclosure of Personal Property or Fixtures Securing the Debt [Com. Code § 9604(a)(3)(B), (6)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE BENEFICIARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO FORECLOSE UNDER THE TRUST DEED BECAUSE THE BENEFICIARY'S JUDICIAL FORECLOSURE AGAINST THE _____ [PERSONAL PROPERTY or FIXTURES] SECURING THE DEBT CAUSED THE LIEN ON THE REAL PROPERTY NOT INCLUDED IN THAT ACTION TO BECOME UNENFORCEABLE.

Judicial Foreclosure Against Personal Property or Fixtures Securing Debt. When a single debt is secured by both real property and personal property or fixtures, and the creditor first proceeds against only the personal property or fixtures in a judicial action in which the creditor also seeks a personal judgment on the debt, that action constitutes an action within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726. When the personal judgment on the debt is obtained, the lien on the real property not included in that action is rendered unenforceable (Com. Code § 9604(a)(3)(B),(6); Walker v. Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 741, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a trust deed may not be foreclosed. The ground is that the beneficiary's judicial foreclosure judgment regarding the personal property security for the same obligation released the real property security [see Com. Code § 9604(a)(3)(B)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in a trustor's action to restrain foreclosure under the trust deed, the contention may be raised in support of the trustor's application for preliminary injunction [see, e.g., Walker v.

Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 741, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should attach a copy of the personal property judicial foreclosure judgment.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judicial Foreclosure Against Personal Property or Fixtures Securing Debt

In Walker v. Community Bank (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 729, 111 Cal. Rptr. 897, 518 P.2d 329 , the bank lent money to the plaintiff's predecessor, and the loan was secured by a chattel mortgage on equipment and trucks as well as a trust deed on the real property that was later sold to the plaintiff. After the bank commenced ajudicial foreclosure action under the chattel mortgage, the trustor sold the property covered by the trust deed. The bank caused notice of default and an election to sell to be recorded regarding the trust deed, and thereafter a deficiency judgment for the bank was entered in the personal property foreclosure action. The plaintiff, purchaser of the real property, commenced the present action to quiet title and enjoin the trustee's sale. The trial court granted a temporary injunction barring the foreclosure, which was dissolved on entry of judgment for the bank. The plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, concluding that when there is a single debt secured by both real and personal property, and the creditor elects to judicially foreclose only on the personal property, the creditor thereby loses the security interest in the real property as against all parties, even though the debtor did not raise the one-form-of-action rule as an affirmative defense in the judicial foreclosure proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 729, 741) .

Subsequent legislation amending former Com. Code § 9501 (now see Com. Code § 9604(a)(3)(B), (5), and (6)) narrowed the application of the holding in Walker to situations in which a personal judgment against the debtor has been entered in the personal property judicial foreclosure action.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.112

§ 230.112 Co-Obligor Who Is Not Also Trustor May Assert One-Form-of-Action Rule [Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AS A CO-OBLIGOR WHO IS NOT ALSO A TRUSTOR, THE _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] MAY CLAIM THE BENEFIT OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 726 TO PRECLUDE THE IMPOSITION OF PERSONAL LIABILITY ON THE UNDERLYING OBLIGATION.

A. One-Form-of-Action Rule. There can be but one form of action for the recovery of any debt or the enforcement of any right secured by a mortgage on real property or an estate for years therein, which action must be in accordance with the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 725a et seq.. In the action the court may, by its judgment, direct the sale of the encumbered property or estate for years therein (or so much of it as may be necessary) and application of the proceeds of the sale to the payment of the costs of the court, the expenses of levy and sale, and the amount due the plaintiff, including, when the mortgage provides for the payment of attorney's fees, such sum as the court shall find reasonable, not exceeding the amount named in the mortgage (Code Civ. Proc. § 726(a)).

B. Waiver of Security. The sanction for a violation of Code of Civil Procedure Section 726 is that the creditor is held to have waived the security. The statute may be invoked as a sanction against the creditor [even if the beneficiary has not raised the statute as an affirmative defense], on the ground that the creditor, by not foreclosing on the security in the action to enforce the debt, made an election of remedies and waived the security (Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 997, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772-773, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , disapproved on other grounds, Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557).

C. Assertion of Rule by Co-Obligor Who Is Not Also Trustor. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 726, a co-maker of a note who is not also a trustor of the trust deed that secures the note does not make an absolute promise to pay the obligation but makes only a conditional promise to pay any deficiency that remains if a [judicial] foreclosure of the property does not discharge the debt. Such a co-maker has the right to require the beneficiary to seek repayment first from the property. If the beneficiary fails to do that, the co-maker is absolved of any personal obligation on the note (Pacific Valley Bank v. Schwenke (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 134, 140-146, 234 Cal. Rptr. 298).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a payee of a note and beneficiary under a trust deed cannot recover a personal judgment against a co-maker of the note who is not also a trustor of the trust deed securing it. The ground is that the one-form-of-action rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 can be asserted even by one who is not a trustor (Paragraph C).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in a beneficiary's action to impose personal liability, the contention may be raised in support of a co-maker's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the waiver or reconveyance of the property in order to make clear that the co-maker did not agree to waive the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 726.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security

Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 275 Cal.Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 230.102[3][a].

Bank of America v. Daily (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 767, 199 Cal. Rptr. 557 , disapproved on other grounds, Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 999-1000 n.7, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 , is discussed in § 230.110[3][a].

[b] Assertion of Rule by Co-Obligor Who Is Not Also Trustor

In Pacific Valley Bank v. Schwenke (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 134, 234 Cal. Rptr. 298 , the bank made a loan to a partnership. The note was signed by two partners as co-makers, and one of those partners executed a trust deed on two of his individual properties to secure the note. About the time the partnership was breaking up and the bank was making other unsecured loans to the trustor-partner, the bank reconveyed the property to the trustor-partner. Later, the bank sued on the note. The former trustor-partner allowed his default to be entered. Judgment was for the bank against both co-makers. Only the nontrustor co-maker appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Code Civ. Proc. § 726 prevents an action against a co-maker of a promissory note after the beneficiary has reconveyed the real property to the other co-maker. A corollary principle of Code Civ. Proc. § 726 is that, by signing a note secured by a trust deed, the borrower does not make an absolute promise to pay the obligation but makes only a conditional promise to pay any deficiency that remains if a judicial foreclosure of the encumbered property does not discharge the debt (189 Cal. App. 3d 134, 140). A co-maker who is not also a trustor still has the right to require the creditor to look to the property first (189 Cal. App. 3d 134, 141-144). The bank's failure to do that absolved that co-maker of any personal obligation on the note (189 Cal. App. 3d 134, 146).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
D. One-Form-of-Action Rule

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.113-230.119

[Reserved]

§§ 230.113[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
E. Tortious Impairment of Security

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.120

§ 230.120 Damages Are Recoverable for Waste Impairing Security Interest [Civ. Code § 2929]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR DEFENDANT'S WASTE RESULTING IN SUBSTANTIAL IMPAIRMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S SECURITY INTEREST.

A. Duty Not to Impair Security Interest of Mortgagee. No person whose interest is subject to the lien of a mortgage may do any act that will substantially impair the mortgagee's security (Civ. Code § 2929).

B. Action for Waste Impairing Security. Pursuant to the rule codified in Civil Code Section 2929, the holder of any security interest in real property may maintain an action to enjoin, or may recover damages for, waste that substantially impairs the security interest (see Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 597-599, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981).

[Optional] C. Nonassuming Grantee's Duty Not to Impair Security Interest. Although a nonassuming grantee is not personally liable on the underlying debt, or to comply with the obligations of the trust deed, a nonassuming grantee is under a duty not to commit waste that substantially impairs the beneficiary's security interest (Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 596, 599, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981).

[Optional] D. Antideficiency Statutes Do Not Bar Recovery for Waste Committed in Bad Faith. Code of Civil Procedure Sections 580b and 580d do not bar recovery for waste that substantially impairs the security interest if the waste was not a result of economic pressures of a market depression but was committed in bad faith, that is, as a result of reckless, intentional, or malicious conduct. The determination of the extent to which waste resulted from a general decline in real estate values or to what extent it was caused by bad-faith acts of the trustor is to be made on a case-by-case basis (Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 602-605, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 ; Hickman v. Mulder (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 908-910, 130 Cal. Rptr. 304).

[Optional] E. Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest. The measure of damages for bad-faith waste that substantially impairs the security interest is the amount by which the value of the security is less than the outstanding debt, that is, the extent to which the security is rendered inadequate (Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 606, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981).

[Optional] F. Agricultural Land. To preserve the quality of agricultural lands requires affirmative effort, and a failure to do what is needed can uniquely be described as willful. Failure to cultivate, irrigate, fertilize, fumigate, prune, and do all other acts necessary to preserve the growing things is waste (Hickman v. Mulder (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 908-909, 130 Cal. Rptr. 304).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the beneficiary under a trust deed is entitled to recover damages for bad-faith waste under Civ. Code § 2929. Paragraph A sets forth the statutory obligation not to commit waste. Paragraph B establishes that the statutory duty applies regardless of the particular type of security device used. Optional provisions provide for the following:

- Paragraph C establishes that the duty is owed by successors in interest of the original trustor.

- Paragraphs D and E set forth two important limitations on the beneficiary's right of recovery, namely, that only bad-faith waste, as opposed to waste resulting from market decline, is compensable (Paragraph D), and only to the extent that the security becomes inadequate (Paragraph E).

The most drastic implication of this last requirement, which is the subject of § 230.130, is that purchase by the beneficiary at foreclosure for a full-credit bid will negate any impairment of security and bar recovery. Thus, a beneficiary seeking to recover for waste can do so only in a judicial foreclosure action [see, e.g., Easton v. Ash (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 530, 538-539, 116 P.2d 433] or after purchase for less than a full-credit bid at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale [see, e.g., Hickman v. Mulder (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 908-910, 130 Cal. Rptr. 304] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by a beneficiary for damages for waste, against the trustor or the successor in interest, the points in this form could be used in support of the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should describe the acts constituting waste and the degree to which the security has been impaired.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.130.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Waste Impairing Security

In Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , the plaintiff, a beneficiary under a purchase-money trust deed on a single-family residence, alleged two causes of action for damages against the trustors' successors in interest, one for breach of contract and the other for waste impairing the security under Civ. Code § 2929. The defendants moved for summary judgment. In support of their motion they declared, among other things, that the plaintiff had caused the property to be sold at a private foreclosure sale and had purchased the property at this sale on a full-credit bid. The plaintiff filed no counteraffidavits. The trial court entered summary judgment for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court first discussed the defendant's status as a nonassuming grantee and the language of Civ. Code § 2929, stating that even though that statute refers only to "the lien of a mortgage" and to the impairment of "the mortgagee's security," it applies equally to a trust deed. Because the statute imposes the duty on any "person whose interest is subject to the lien," even a nonassuming grantee who is not personally liable on the debt is under the duty not to commit waste (15 Cal. 3d 590, 599) . Similarly, the Court continued, even though a nonassuming grantee is not personally liable on the underlying debt or to comply with the obligations of the trust deed, a nonassuming grantee is under a duty not to commit waste that substantially impairs the beneficiary's security interest (15 Cal. 3d 590, 596, 599) .

[b] Nonassuming Grantee's Duty Not to Impair Security Interest

Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , is discussed in [a], above.

[c] Antideficiency Statutes Do Not Bar Recovery for Waste Committed in Bad Faith

The facts and procedural background of Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , are discussed in [a], above. The defendant contended that even assuming that he was under a duty not to commit waste and that his action constituted waste so impairing the value of the property as to render it inadequate security for the debt, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 580b and 580d barred recovery because any recovery would amount to a deficiency judgment. In considering this contention the Court said that a deficiency judgment is a personal judgment against the debtor for the difference between the fair market value of the property and the outstanding debt (15 Cal. 3d 590, 603) . After reviewing thehistory of the antideficiency statutes, the Court said that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b, which is to prevent aggravation of depression in land values that would result if purchasers were personally liable on default, would in some instances be frustrated if damages for waste could be recovered following a foreclosure sale of property subject to a purchase-money mortgage. The Court considered the example of a purchaser compelled in the normal course of events to forgo general maintenance and repair of the property in order to keep up payments on the mortgage debt. When such a purchaser eventually defaults and loses the property, the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580b would be frustrated if in addition the purchaser could be held liable for waste (15 Cal. 3d 590, 603-604) . Thus, the Court concluded that damages for waste following a foreclosure sale are only recoverable if the waste is committed in bad faith, that is, as a result of reckless, intentional, or malicious conduct (15 Cal. 3d 590, 604) . The determination of the extent to which erosion of the property's value resulted from a general decline in real estate vales or to what extent it was caused by bad-faith acts of the trustor is to be made on a case-by-case basis (15 Cal. 3d 590, 604) .

The Court noted that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 580d was to put judicial and nonjudicial foreclosures on a parity by allowing the beneficiary a deficiency judgment after a judicial foreclosure sale but exacting in return the burden of statutory redemption (15 Cal. 3d 590, 604) . To maintain that parity, the Court concluded, in situations arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 580d, recovery for waste following a nonjudicial foreclosure sale is also barred when the waste actually results from the depressed condition of the general real estate market but not when the waste is caused by the bad-faith acts of the mortgagor (15 Cal. 3d 590, 605) .

[d] Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest

The facts and procedural background of Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , are discussed in [a], above. In considering whether the plaintiff's purchase at the foreclosure sale on a full-credit bid barred recovery for waste (which is discussed in § 230.130[3][b]), the Court cited Robinson v. Russell (1864) 24 Cal. 467, 473 , for the rule that the measure of damages for waste is the extent of the impairment of the security, that is, the amount by which the value of the security is less than the outstanding debt (15 Cal. 3d 590, 606) .

[e] Agricultural Land

In Hickman v. Mulder (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 130 Cal. Rptr. 304 , the plaintiffs sought to recover damages for waste after purchasing grapefruit orchards and vineyards at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale for less than the full amount of the debt. The orchards and vineyards were subject to a purchase-money trust deed of which the plaintiffs were the beneficiaries. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants had failed to cultivate, irrigate, fertilize, fumigate, prune, and do all other acts necessary to preserve the citrus trees and vines, and also alleged willful mismanagement. The defendants' demurrer was sustained without leave to amend. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The defendants contended that allegations of affirmative behavior were required in order to plead bad-faith waste and that the plaintiffs' allegations of only omissions amounted to neglect of general maintenance and repair and did not bring them within the bad faith concept (58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 908-909) . The court of appeal disagreed, saying that waste arises in many ways by inaction when agricultural lands are concerned. To preserve the quality of agricultural lands requires affirmative effort, and a failure to do what is needed can uniquely be described as willful. Citing other cases for examples, the court noted that allowing arable land to lie untilled and become weed-infested is waste, failure to care for an orchard is waste, and failure to irrigate can be waste (58 Cal. App. 3d 900, 909) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
E. Tortious Impairment of Security

23-230 California Points & Authorities §§ 230.121-230.129

[Reserved]

§§ 230.121[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 230 TRUST DEEDS AND REAL PROPERTY MORTGAGES
PART II. FORMS
E. Tortious Impairment of Security

23-230 California Points & Authorities § 230.130

§ 230.130 Damages Are Not Recoverable for Waste Impairing Security Interest--No Impairment Shown

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO RECOVER DAMAGES FOR WASTE SUBSTANTIALLY IMPAIRING THE SECURITY INTEREST BECAUSE PLAINTIFF PURCHASED THE PROPERTY AT THE PRIVATE SALE BY MAKING A FULL-CREDIT BID, AND CONSEQUENTLY DEFENDANT'S WASTE, IF ANY, DID NOT IMPAIR PLAINTIFF'S SECURITY INTEREST AS A MATTER OF LAW.

A. Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest. The measure of damages for bad-faith waste that substantially impairs the security interest is the amount by which the value of the security is less than the outstanding debt, that is, the extent to which the security is rendered inadequate (Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 606, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981).

B. Beneficiary's Purchase at Foreclosure Sale on Full-Credit Bid Extinguishes Claim for Waste. If the beneficiary acquires the property at a foreclosure sale by entering a full-credit bid, that is, a bid equal to the unpaid principal and interest of the secured debt, together with the costs, fees, and other expenses of the foreclosure sale, the beneficiary cannot recover damages for waste, because the purchase at a fair market value equal to the amount owed on the underlying debtestablishes as a matter of law that there has been no impairment of the security interest (Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 606-607, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 ; Schumacher v. Gaines (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 994, 999-1000, 96 Cal. Rptr. 223).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the beneficiary under a trust deed is not entitled to recover damages in an action for waste under Civ. Code § 2929, on the ground that the beneficiary purchased the property on a full-credit bid and consequently cannot show any impairment of the security.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue. For example, in an action by a beneficiary for damages for waste, against the trustor or the successor in interest, the points in this form could be used in support of the defendant's motion for summary judgment, to show that the plaintiff suffered no damages and therefore has no cause of action [see, e.g., Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 593, 608, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981] . This form also may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus counsel should show the beneficiary's purchase of the real property at a foreclosure sale by means of a full-credit bid. For instance, if the trustee's deed recites the price paid, a copy of the recorded deed could be attached.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 230.120.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Measure of Damages for Waste Impairing Security Interest

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , are discussed in § 230.120[3][a]. In considering whether the plaintiff's purchase at the foreclosure sale on a full-credit bid barred recovery for waste, the Court cited Robinson v. Russell (1864) 24 Cal. 467, 473 , for the rule that the measure of damages for waste is the extent of the impairment of the security, that is, the amount by which the value of the security is less than the outstanding debt (15 Cal. 3d 590, 606) .

[b] Beneficiary's Purchase at Foreclosure Sale on Full-Credit Bid Extinguishes Claim for Waste

The facts, procedural background, and disposition of Cornelison v. Kornbluth (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 590, 125 Cal. Rptr. 557, 542 P.2d 981 , are discussed in § 230.120[3][a]. The Supreme Court concluded that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain an action for damages under Civ. Code § 2929 because she had purchased the real property at a foreclosure sale with a full-credit bid. The Court reasoned that by making a full-credit bid, that is, a bid equal to the unpaid principal and interest of the secured debt, together with the costs, fees, and other expenses of the foreclosure sale, the plaintiff in effect established the value of the security as being equal to the outstanding debt and extinguished the security interest. Thus, even if the defendants had committed waste, the plaintiff was precluded from showing any impairment of her security entitling her to an award of damages (15 Cal. 3d 590, 606-607) .

In Schumacher v. Gaines (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 994, 96 Cal. Rptr. 223 , the plaintiff was the beneficiary of a purchase-money trust deed on a 840-acre ranch. She purchased the property at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale on a full-credit bid, after having filed an action for waste, declaratory relief, mental suffering, and fraud the day before the sale. A jury awarded the plaintiff damages for waste and breach of contract. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The beneficiary had discharged the debt by purchasing the property at the trustee's sale for the full amount due. Therefore, she could not recover damages for impairment of the security (18 Cal. App. 3d 994, 999-1000) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Beneficiary's Purchase at Foreclosure Sale on Full-Credit Bid Extinguishes Claim for Waste

In Evans v. California Trailer Court, Inc. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 540, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 646 , the plaintiffs held two trust deeds on real property. The plaintiffs exercised their power of sale under the senior trust deed and acquired the property with a bid that was less than the total indebtedness secured by the two trust deeds. The plaintiffs then sued seeking to recover damages under various theories, including waste. The trial court granted the defendants judgment on the pleadings, on the ground that the plaintiffs' causes of action were barred by the antideficiency statutes. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with respect to the plaintiffs' tort claims, including waste. The trial court had concluded that the plaintiffs made a full-credit bid when foreclosing their senior trust deed, thereby eliminating any claims for damages arising from waste. The court held that the plaintiffs did not make a full-credit bid,that is, one equivalent to the entire outstanding debt, because the bid did not include any portion of the debt secured by the junior lien (28 Cal. App. 4th 540, 555) . The court stated that the plaintiffs' exercise of their power of sale under the senior trust deed wiped out any lien of the junior lienholder, and thus the plaintiffs were not entitled to the equitable rule allowing a sold-out junior lienholder to seek judgment for the obligation secured by the junior trust deed (28 Cal. App. 4th 540, 552) . See § 230.51[1] for authorities discussing recovery by a sold-out junior lienholder. However, the court concluded, treating the two trust deeds as merged for purposes of the antideficiency statutes did not justify ignoring the full amount of the obligation for purposes of the recovery of tort damages to the extent that the security interest had been impaired (28 Cal. App. 4th 540, 555) .

In Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 229 Cal. Rptr. 719 , the bank made a construction loan to the developer/owner. After default, the bank purchased the property at a nonjudicial foreclosure sale for a full-credit bid. After the purchase, the bank discovered design and structural defects in retaining walls, drainage systems, roofs, abnormal cracking of concrete, and inadequate waterproofing. It expended $400,000 to correct the defects then sued for breach of contract, waste, fraud, negligence, and violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. Judgment of dismissal entered after a demurrer, and the bank appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to all causes of action except negligence. The general rule is that a beneficiary who enters a full-credit bid at the foreclosure sale cannot recover damages for waste (185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220) . The bank argued that its full-credit bid was induced by the defendant's intentional concealment of the defects. The court said the bank was not entitled to rely on representations or nondisclosures occurring in the loan transaction or during the trustee's sale. A borrower in that situation cannot be characterized as a seller and is under no duty to disclose defects. The lender and trustor are not subject to the normal seller-purchaser relationship (185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 221-222) . The full-credit-bid rule exemplifies a policy determination to place the risk of loss on the creditor-purchaser, with the burden to assess accurately the value of the property. If the property is overvalued because of unknown defects, the creditor cannot recover a deficiency because the trustor owes no duty to disclose defects at a foreclosure sale (185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 225) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
Chapters 231through 233 RESERVED

23-231 California Points & Authorities Chapters 231through 233

RESERVED

Chapters 231RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES

23-234 California Points & Authorities 234.syn

§ 234.syn Synopsis to Chapter 234: ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES

§ 234.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 234.02 Governing Law

§ 234.03 Plaintiff's Comparative Fault as Defense

§ 234.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 234.05 Related Points and Authorities

§§ 234.06-234.19 [Reserved]

§ 234.20 Supporting Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Injury Caused by Ultrahazardous Activity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Imposition of Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activity

[b] Definition of Ultrahazardous Activity

[c] Definition of Common Usage

[d] Determination of Strict Liability Is Question of Law for Court

[e] Issue of Whether Activity Ultrahazardous Cannot Be Decided on Demurrer

[f] Blasting in Populated Areas Is Ultrahazardous Activity

[g] Rocket Motor Testing Is Ultrahazardous Activity

[h] Drilling Oil Well Is Ultrahazardous Activity

[i] Use of Poisonous Gas Is Ultrahazardous Activity

[j] Welding on Waste Oil Tank Is Ultrahazardous Activity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Imposition of Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activity

[b] Definition of Ultrahazardous Activity

§ 234.21 Opposing Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Activity Carried On in Pursuance of Public Duty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Carried On in Pursuance of Public Duty

§ 234.22 Opposing Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Activity Not Proximate Cause of Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Not Proximate Cause

§ 234.23 Opposing Contention That Activity Is Ultrahazardous--Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of

Care

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care

[b] Blasting in Remote Areas Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[c] Operation of Airplane Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[d] Earth-Movement Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[e] Subterranean Tunneling Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[f] Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care

§ 234.24 Opposing Contention That Activity Is Ultrahazardous--Matter of Common Usage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Matter of Common Usage

[b] Definition of Common Usage

[c] Earth-Moving Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[d] Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[e] Construction Work Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Matter of Common Usage

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.01

§ 234.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities relating to the imposition of strict liability for damages caused by ultrahazardous activities. It includes points and authorities supporting the contention that strict liability should be imposed for an ultrahazardous activity [see § 234.20]. Also included are points and authorities opposing the contentions that defendant should be held strictly liable [see §§ 234.21, 234.22], and that the activity in question is ultrahazardous [see §§ 234.23, 234.24].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsStrict LiabilityAbnormally Dangerous ActivitiesGeneral Overview

63 of 180 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.02

§ 234.02 Governing Law

This area of law is governed solely by case law, and there are no specifically applicable statutes. The leading case involving strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity is Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsStrict LiabilityAbnormally Dangerous ActivitiesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.03

§ 234.03 Plaintiff's Comparative Fault as Defense

Historically, plaintiff 's ordinary contributory negligence was not a defense to an action based on strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity [see Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 499, 190 P.2d 1 ; see also Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521, 523]. However, plaintiff's assumption of the risk and certain intentional or reckless acts, for example, intentionally causing the activity to miscarry, were complete defenses [see Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 499, 190 P.2d 1].

It is not clear what effect the adoption of the rule of comparative negligence will have on these traditional defenses. No California case has expressly held the doctrine applicable to actions based on strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity, although it was held applicable to strict products liability actions in Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162 . However, it seems likely that the courts would find strict products liability sufficiently similar to ultrahazardous strict liability to warrant applying the doctrine to the latter. Under comparative negligence, plaintiff's ordinary contributory negligence would be a defense to the action, as would plaintiff's assumption of risk and intentional contributory acts such as causing the activity to miscarry [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 (defining comparative negligence as assignment of liability in direct proportion to negligence of each party)]. However, these defenses would only reduce plaintiff's recovery; they would not completely bar the action [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 (under comparative negligence, contributory negligence of plaintiff will not bar recovery, but will reduce amount of damages)]. For points and authorities relating to the defense of plaintiff's comparative negligence, see Ch. 165, Negligence .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsNegligenceDefensesAssumption of RiskGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceIntentional & Reckless ConductTortsStrict LiabilityAbnormally Dangerous ActivitiesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.04

§ 234.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms relating to strict liability for specific types of ultrahazardous activities, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 256, Explosives , and Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of tort liability generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 380, Negligence (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of strict liability in general for other types of conduct, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 23, Animals , and Ch. 460, Products Liability (Matthew Bender). See also the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender) dealing with activities covered in this chapter, but discussing liability based on negligence:

Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners.

Ch. 391, Nuisance.

Ch. 421, Premises Liability.

Ch. 550, Trespass.

Ch. 575, Waters.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Environmental LawHazardous Wastes & Toxic SubstancesCERCLA & SuperfundEnforcementCost Recovery ActionsStrict LiabilityEnvironmental LawLitigation & Administrative ProceedingsNuisances, Trespasses & Strict LiabilityReal Property LawAdjoining LandownersGeneral OverviewTortsProducts LiabilityStrict LiabilityTortsStrict LiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.05

§ 234.05 Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities pertaining to strict liability for defective products, see Ch. 190, Products Liability . Points and authorities that may also be useful in actions involving ultrahazardous activities may be found in the following chapters:

Ch. 165, Negligence.

Ch. 167, Nuisance.

Ch. 178, Premises Liability.

Ch. 225, Trespass.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Environmental LawLitigation & Administrative ProceedingsNuisances, Trespasses & Strict LiabilityReal Property LawTortsNuisanceGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsTrespass to Real PropertyTortsProducts LiabilityStrict LiabilityTortsStrict LiabilityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-234 California Points & Authorities §§ 234.06-234.19

[Reserved]

§§ 234.06[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART II. FORMS

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.20

§ 234.20 Supporting Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Injury Caused by Ultrahazardous Activity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT SHOULD BE HELD STRICTLY LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S INJURY BECAUSE THE INJURY WAS DIRECTLY AND LEGALLY CAUSED BY AN ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITY CARRIED ON BY DEFENDANT.

A. Imposition of Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activity. A person who carries on an ultrahazardous activity is liable for any harm directly and legally caused by the activity if the person knew or should have known that injury was likely to result, even though the utmost care was exercised to prevent harm (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 500, 190 P.2d 1).

B. Definition of Ultrahazardous Activity. An activity is ultrahazardous if: it (1) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm to the person, land, or chattels of others, which cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care; and (2) is not a matter of common usage (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1 ; Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 ; but see Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337).

C. Definition of Common Usage. An activity is a matter of common usage if it is customarily carried on by the great mass of mankind or by many people in the community (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1).

D. Determination of Strict Liability Is Question of Law for Court. Whether a case is a proper one for imposing strict liability is a question of law for the court (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 496, 190 P.2d 1 ; Balding v. D.B. Stutsman, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 559, 564, 54 Cal. Rptr. 717).

[Optional] E. Issue of Whether Activity Ultrahazardous Cannot Be Decided on Demurrer. A court determines whether a particular activity is ultrahazardous by considering various factors and the weight each merits according to the facts in evidence; thus, by its very nature, the issue of whether a particular activity is ultrahazardous cannot properly be decided on demurrer (Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337).

[Optional] F. Blasting in Populated Areas Is Ultrahazardous Activity. Blasting in populated areas constitutes an ultrahazardous activity (Alonso v. Hills (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 783, 214 P.2d 50 ; see Colton v. Onderdonk (1886) 69 Cal. 155, 158-159, 10 P. 395).

[Optional] G. Rocket Motor Testing Is Ultrahazardous Activity. Rocket motor testing is an ultrahazardous activity (Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128).

[Optional] H. Drilling Oil Well Is Ultrahazardous Activity. Drilling of an oil well is an ultrahazardous activity (see Green v. General Petroleum Corp. (1928) 205 Cal. 328, 333-334, 270 P. 952 ; see also Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337).

[Optional] I. Use of Poisonous Gas Is Ultrahazardous Activity. Use and release of a poisonous gas is an ultrahazardous activity (see Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 494-495, 498, 500, 190 P.2d 1 (hydrocyanic acid gas)).

[Optional] J. Welding on Waste Oil Tank Is Ultrahazardous Activity. Welding on a waste oil tank is an ultrahazardous activity (Garcia v. Estate of Norton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 420-421, 228 Cal. Rptr. 108).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that strict liability should be imposed because plaintiff's injury was caused by an ultrahazardous activity carried on by defendant.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of strict liability. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion showing that defendant knew or should have known that injury was likely to result from the performance of the ultrahazardous activity in question. Additionally, counsel should present facts establishing that the activity in question meets the definition of an ultrahazardous activity because it poses a risk of serious harm despite the exercise of the utmost care and is not a matter of common usage.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms and discussion regarding strict liability for ultrahazardous activities, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 256, Explosives (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers,see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in §§ 234.21 -234.24 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Imposition of Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activity

Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , was an action for personal injuries from hydrocyanic acid gas poisoning caused by defendant when he released hydrocyanic acid gas while fumigating the basement of a connected commercial building where plaintiff worked. Judgment was granted for plaintiff on his cause of action for strict liability, and defendant appealed.

On appeal, one of defendant's contentions raised the question of whether the case was a proper one for imposing strict liability. Relying on the Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521 and 523, the Supreme Court set forth the rule that a person who carries on an ultrahazardous activity is liable for harm proximately resulting when the person knew or should have known that harm was likely to result, even though the utmost care was exercised to prevent harm (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 500) . The Court held that defendant's use of hydrocyanic acid gas in a commercial building with a large number of tenants constituted an ultrahazardous activity for which strict liability should be imposed (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 500) . The judgment was affirmed (31 Cal. 2d 489, 502) .

[b] Definition of Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court was presented with the question of whether strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity should be imposed. The activity in question was the use and release of hydrocyanic acid gas during fumigation. Quoting from the Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521 and 523, the Court stated that an activity is ultrahazardous if it: (1) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm to the person, land, or chattels of others, which cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care; and (2) is not a matter of common usage (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498) . The Court held that the use and release of hydrocyanic acid gas in the basement of a commercial building with a large number of tenants was an ultrahazardous activity (31 Cal. 2d 489, 500) .

Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 , was an action for damage to real property caused by seismic vibrations activated by a static firing rocket motor test conducted by defendant on adjoining land. Plaintiffs' complaint was based on negligence and strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. Defendant's motion for nonsuit was granted, and plaintiffs appealed.

In determining whether to impose strict liability, the court of appeal quoted the definition of an ultrahazardous activity found in the Restatement of Torts § 520. The court concluded that rocket motor testing was an ultrahazardous activity (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785-786) and therefore reversed the part of the judgment concerning strict liability (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 792) .

Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 , involved a winter storm that forced ocean waves over a breakwater in a city harbor, resulting in substantial damage to a nearby inn. Plaintiff, the inn's insurer, paid the loss and filed suit against the city, claiming that the breakwater had not been constructed high enough to restrain the storm waves. Plaintiff subsequently learned that the breakwater had subsided due to oil drilling conducted beneath the harbor by defendants. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion to amend its complaint to add defendants and allege additional theories of recovery, including strict liability for ultrahazardous activity. Defendants demurred to plaintiff's amended pleadings on the grounds that oil drilling was not, as a matter of law, ultrahazardous. The trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action on other grounds, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order of dismissal of plaintiff's cause of action for strict liability for ultrahazardous activity. Refusing to rule as a matter of law that defendants' oil drilling was not, as a matter of law, ultrahazardous, the court noted that determining whether an activity is ultrahazardous depends on consideration of the following factors: the existence of a high degree of risk of harm, the likelihood that resulting harm will be great, the inability to eliminate the risk by the exercise of reasonable care, the extent to which the activity is not a matter of common usage, the inappropriateness of the activity to the place where it is carried on, and the extent to which the activity's value to the community is outweighed by its dangerous attributes (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444) .

[c] Definition of Common Usage

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court was presented with the question of whether strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity should be imposed. After setting forth the definition of an ultrahazardous activity, the Court, quoting from Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521 and 523, stated that an activity is a matter of common usage if it is customarily carried on by the great mass of mankind or by many people in the community (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498) .

[d] Determination of Strict Liability Is Question of Law for Court

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal.2d 489 , 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court was presented with the question of whether strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity should be imposed. In deciding that issue, the Court stated that it was well settled that the question of whether a case is a proper one for imposing strict liability is one of law for the court (31 Cal. 2d 489, 496) .

Balding v. D.B. Stutsman, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 559, 54 Cal. Rptr. 717 , was an action for personal injuries caused by a blasting operation carried on by defendant. Plaintiff's case rested on the theory of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. Judgment was entered for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

On appeal, defendant conceded that blasting in a residential area requires the imposition of strict liability but argued that the question of whether the area was residential was one of fact for the jury. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that the determination of whether a case is a proper one for the imposition of strict liability is one of law for the court (246 Cal. App. 2d 559, 564) . All defendant's other contentions were denied, and the judgment was affirmed (246 Cal. App. 2d 559, 565) .

[e] Issue of Whether Activity Ultrahazardous Cannot Be Decided on Demurrer

The facts and procedural background of Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][b]. The court of appeal reversed the order of dismissal of plaintiff's cause of action for strict liability for ultrahazardous activity, rejecting defendants' argument that their oil drilling was not, as a matter of law, ultrahazardous. The court noted that determining whether an activity is ultrahazardous depends on consideration of six factors, each of which must be given the weight that it merits, based on the facts in evidence. The essential question is whether the risk created is so unusual that imposition of strict liability is justified despite the activity's being carried on with all reasonable care, or, in other words, whether the activity's dangers and inappropriateness for its locality outweigh any usefulness to the community. Because of this interplay of factors, the court held that the issue of whether a particular activity is ultrahazardous cannot, by its very nature, be properly decided on demurrer (28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1444) .

[f] Blasting in Populated Areas Is Ultrahazardous Activity

Colton v. Onderdonk (1886) 69 Cal. 155, 10 P. 395 , was one of the first cases to enunciate the doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. The case involved an action for damage to real property caused by defendant blasting out rocks on his adjoining lot. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied, and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court ruled that defendant's use of large quantities of gunpowder, a violent and dangerous explosive, to blast out rocks on his lot that was contiguous to another lot in a large city, was an unreasonable, unusual, and unnatural use of his own property, for which no care or skill in so doing could excuse him from liability for the damages proximately resulting (69 Cal. 155, 158-159) . The Court rejected defendant's contention that he had a right to blast the rocks on his own lot provided that he used care and skill in the act (69 Cal. 155, 159) . The Court modified the amount of damages and affirmed the judgment in all other respects (69 Cal. 155, 160) .

Alonso v. Hills (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 214 P.2d 50 , was an action for damage to real property and personal injuries caused by defendants' continual blasting operations in a nearby quarry. Plaintiff also sought an injunction to stop the blasting. Judgment awarding damages and an injunction was granted for plaintiff against one defendant, who subsequently appealed.

On appeal, defendant contended that because plaintiff pleaded negligence, he was restricted to that theory. The court of appeal disagreed, finding that the negligence allegation could be considered merely surplusage because the complaint also stated a cause of action for strict liability based on an ultrahazardous activity (95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 783-784) . The court determined that blasting in populated surroundings, in the vicinity of dwelling places or places of business, is considered an ultrahazardous activity for which strict liability is imposed regardless of the degree of care exercised (95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 783) . The court found that plaintiff's allegations were sufficient to come within that definition (95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 783-784) . The judgment was affirmed (95 Cal. App. 2d 778, 789) .

[g] Rocket Motor Testing Is Ultrahazardous Activity

Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 , was an action for damage to real property caused by seismic vibrations activated by a static firing rocket motor test conducted by defendant on adjoining land. Plaintiffs' complaint was based on negligence and strict liability for ultrahazardous activity. The trial court granted defendant's motion for nonsuit, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal held that rocket motor testing constitutes an ultrahazardous activity (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785-786) . The court rejected defendant's contention that strict liability should not be imposed because the testing was conducted in a remote area. Although the test site was in a generally undeveloped area, the court noted that portions of defendant's property bordered plaintiffs' land and that defendant was fully cognizant of the risk of harm to plaintiffs' property (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 786-787) .

[h] Drilling Oil Well Is Ultrahazardous Activity

Green v. General Petroleum Corp. (1928) 205 Cal. 328, 270 P. 952 , was anaction for damage to real property caused when an oil well that defendant was drilling suffered a "blow out" due to the pressure of underground gas. Plaintiffs' adjoining property was damaged by a stream of oil, gas, mud, and rocks that poured into the air for more than 24 hours. Judgment was awarded to plaintiffs on their cause of action for trespass based on strict liability, and defendant appealed.

On appeal, defendant contended that it was absolved from all liability because the trial court expressly found that it was not guilty of negligence in performing the drilling operation. However, the Supreme Court held that defendant was strictly liable for the damage proximately resulting from the drilling of the oil well, including the damage caused by the accidental "blow out" (205 Cal. 328, 332-334) . The Court stated that a person who does an act under known conditions and with knowledge that injury may result should be required to compensate any other person who is injured as a direct and proximate consequence of the act, however carefully the act is performed (205 Cal. 328, 334) . In reaching its decision, the Court relied upon the maxim, "One must so use [his or her] own rights as not to infringe upon the rights of another" [see Civ. Code § 3514] (205 Cal. 328, 333-334) . The Court denied defendant's other contentions and affirmed the judgment (205 Cal. 328, 335, 338) .

NOTE:
Although the Court did not use the language "ultrahazardous activity," the Green case has generally been interpreted as one involving the doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity [see Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 784, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128].

Travelers Indem. Co. v. City of Redondo Beach (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 337 , is discussed in §§ 234.20[3][b] and 234.20[3][e].

[i] Use of Poisonous Gas Is Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the use and release of hydrocyanic acid gas in the basement of a commercial building with a large number of tenants, as part of a fumigation operation, constituted an ultrahazardous activity (31 Cal. 2d 489, 500) .

[j] Welding on Waste Oil Tank Is Ultrahazardous Activity

Garcia v. Estate of Norton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 228 Cal. Rptr. 108 , was an action brought against a decedent's estate for personal injuries resulting when the decedent put a welding torch to the tank of a waste oil tanker truck without ascertaining whether the tank had been emptied. Plaintiff, who worked for decedent, was standing on the tank at the time and was injured in the ensuing explosion. The decedent had assured plaintiff that the tank was clean but failed to inspect the inside visually and smell for gasoline vapors. The trial court ruled that the activity of welding with a blowtorch on a waste oil tank was ultrahazardous and judgment was awarded to plaintiff. Decedent's estate appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, upholding the trial court's ruling that the activity of welding with a blowtorch on a waste oil tank was ultrahazardous (183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 418) . The court found that (1) the activity was incredibly dangerous to defendant and anyone else within a relatively large area, and (2) the activity was neither commonplace or customary (183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 419-420) . The court also held that, even if the doctrine of comparative negligence applies to cases involving ultrahazardous activities, there was no evidence to support a jury instruction on the plaintiff's comparative negligence or assumption of risk (183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 422) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Imposition of Strict Liability for Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Garcia v. Estate of Norton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 228 Cal. Rptr. 108 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][j]. The court rejected the contention that strict liability for ultrahazardous activities cannot be applied when the defendant is unaware of the abnormally dangerous condition or activity and has voluntary engaged in or permitted it. Whether or not the defendant has actual knowledge of the true extent of the danger involved, the court held, one who carries on an ultrahazardous activity is liable for injuries to a person whom the actor reasonably should recognize as likely to be harmed by a miscarriage of the activity, even though the utmost care is exercised to prevent the harm (183 Cal. App. 3d 413, 420-421) .

[b] Definition of Ultrahazardous Activity

Nola v. Orlando (1932) 119 Cal. App 518, 6 P.2d 984 , was an action for damages to fixtures on plaintiffs' land, which were injured when water escaped from a cement irrigation flume on defendants' nearby property. Judgment was awarded to plaintiffs on the theory of strict liability, and defendants appealed.

On appeal, the court upheld the imposition of strict liability, stating that the escape of water was caused solely by reason of the manner of the construction and maintenance of the irrigation flume and the act of pumping water through it (119 Cal. App 518, 519) . The court indicated that liability was predicated on the fact that defendants brought the water upon their land by an artificial rather than a natural means (119 Cal. App 518, 519-520) . The judgment was affirmed (119 Cal. App 518, 520) .

NOTE:

However, in Clark v. Di Prima (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 823 , which was decided after Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , the court of appeal, applying the doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity set forth in Luthringer, held that the normal and customary irrigation of crops, by transporting water along a ditch or canal, does not constitute an ultrahazadous activity for which strict liability should be imposed. For other reasons, the judgment in that case was reversed Clark v. Di Prima (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829] .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART II. FORMS

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.21

§ 234.21 Opposing Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Activity Carried On in Pursuance of Public Duty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT SHOULD NOT BE HELD STRICTLY LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S INJURY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY WAS CARRIED ON IN PURSUANCE OF A PUBLIC DUTY IMPOSED ON DEFENDANT AS A _____ [PUBLIC OFFICER or PUBLIC EMPLOYEE or COMMON CARRIER].

Activity Carried On in Pursuance of Public Duty. The doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity does not apply if the activity is carried on in pursuance of a public duty imposed on the actor as a public officer or employee or as a common carrier (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 499, 190 P.2d 1 (dictum)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that strict liability should be imposed for an ultrahazardous activity when the activity was carried on in pursuance of a public duty imposed on defendant as a public officer or employee or as a common carrier.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of strict liability. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion showing that the activity in question was done by defendant in pursuance of a public duty, and that defendant was acting as a public officer or employee or as a common carrier while performing the duty in question.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 234.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Carried On in Pursuance of Public Duty

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court was presented with the question of whether strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity should be imposed. Quoting from the Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521 and 523, the Court stated, in dictum, that the rule of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity does not apply if the activity is carried on in pursuance of a public duty imposed upon the actor as a public officer or employee or as a common carrier (31 Cal. 2d 489, 499) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART II. FORMS

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.22

§ 234.22 Opposing Contention That Strict Liability Should Be Imposed--Activity Not Proximate Cause of Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT SHOULD NOT BE HELD STRICTLY LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S INJURY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY WAS NOT THE PROXIMATE CAUSE OF THE INJURY.

Activity Not Proximate Cause. Liability, strict or otherwise, cannot be imposed against defendant if defendant's activity or conduct was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury (Rozewski v. Simpson (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 515, 520, 71 P.2d 72 ; see Sutliff v. Sweetwater Water Co. (1920) 182 Cal. 34, 37-39, 186 P. 766).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that strict liability should be imposed for an ultrahazardous activity when defendant's activity is not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of strict liability. The points and authorities set forth in this formmay also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion showing that defendant's conduct or activity was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 234.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Activity Not Proximate Cause

Rozewski v. Simpson (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 515, 71 P.2d 72 , was an action for water damages allegedly caused by defendants' irrigation water overflowing onto plaintiffs' property. Judgment was entered for defendants, and after the denial of their motion for a new trial, plaintiffs appealed.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended that defendants were strictly liable for damages resulting from the keeping of water on their land, apparently relying upon the old English case of Fletcher v. Rylands (1868) 3 H.L. 330 (applying maxim, later adapted into doctrine of strict liability for ultrahazardous activity, that one must so use one's own property as not to infringe upon rights of another) [see Clark v. Di Prima (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 828 (doctrine of strict liability is generally presumed to stem from Fletcher)]. The Supreme Court ruled that it did not have to decide whether defendants' liability was strict or predicated on negligence because it was clear that it was the acts of plaintiffs themselves that caused the flooding of water onto their own property (9 Cal. 2d 515, 520) . The evidence showed, the Court stated, that the proximate and immediate cause of the flooding was not the impounding of water upon defendants' land, but the escape of the water through a hole cut in defendants' levees by plaintiffs in order to allow plaintiffs to take water from defendants' land (9 Cal. 2d 515, 520-521) . For this and other reasons, the judgment was affirmed (9 Cal. 2d 515, 521) .

Sutliff v. Sweetwater Water Co. (1920) 182 Cal. 34, 186 P. 766 , was an action for damages caused when defendant's reservoir broke during an extraordinary and unprecedented flood. Judgment was awarded to defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that defendant should be held strictly liable under the principles of the old English case of Fletcher v. Rylands (1868) 3 H.L. 330). The Supreme Court held that the rule of Fletcher was not applicable (182 Cal. 34, 36-39) . The Court stated that the proximate and immediate cause of the flooding was not the existence of defendant's reservoir or the manner of its use, but the overflowing of the reservoir by an agency beyond defendant's or anybody's control, that is, nature (182 Cal. 34, 37) . For this and other reasons, the judgment was affirmed (182 Cal. 34, 40) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART II. FORMS

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.23

§ 234.23 Opposing Contention That Activity Is Ultrahazardous--Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT SHOULD NOT BE HELD STRICTLY LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S INJURY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY WAS NOT ULTRAHAZARDOUS BECAUSE THE RISK OF HARM CREATED BY THE ACTIVITY WAS A RISK THAT COULD BE ELIMINATED BY THE EXERCISE OF CARE.

A. Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care. In order for an activity to be ultrahazardous, it must necessarily involve a risk of serious harm to the person, land, or chattels of others, which cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care (see Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1). Thus, an activity that ordinarily can be safely carried on if reasonable care is used is not an ultrahazardous activity (Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 841-842, 286 P.2d 503).

[Optional] B. Blasting in Remote Areas Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. Blasting in a remote area is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co. (1907) 152 Cal. 500, 504-506, 93 P. 82 ; Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 786, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128).

[Optional] C. Operation of Airplane Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. The operation of an airplane is not an ultrahazardous activity (Boyd v. White (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 641, 655, 276 P.2d 92).

[Optional] D. Earth-Movement Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. Earth movement operation conducted by bulldozing and grading is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 841-842, 286 P.2d 503).

[Optional] E. Subterranean Tunneling Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. Subterranean tunneling is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Marin Mun. Water Dist. v. Northwestern Pac. R.R. Co. (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 83, 98, 61 Cal. Rptr. 520).

[Optional] F. Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. A landlord's conduct in furnishing water to its tenant is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Shanander v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 510-512, 229 P.2d 864).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that strict liability should be imposed for an ultrahazardous activity when the activity complained of is not ultrahazardous because the risk of harm created by it is a risk that can be eliminated by the exercise of care.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of strict liability. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion showing that the activity in question was one that ordinarily could be safely carried on if reasonable care was used.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 234.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court set forth the doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. Quoting from the Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521 and 523, the Court defined an ultrahazardous activity as one that: (1) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm to the person, land, or chattels of others, which cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care; and (2) is not a matter of common usage (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498) .

Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 286 P.2d 503 , was an action for personal injuries and property damage incurred when streams of mud, rock, and debris inundated plaintiffs' property during heavy rainfalls. Plaintiffs alleged that the damage was caused by defendants' bulldozing and grading of the lots above plaintiffs' property. Judgment was entered for plaintiffs, and five of the seven defendants appealed.

On appeal, one of defendants' contentions was that the trial court erred in instructing the jury on strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. Relying on the definition of an ultrahazardous activity in the Restatement of Torts § 520, definition of an ultrahazardous activity, the court of appeal found that defendants' earth-movement operation, incident to subdividing and grading hills and slopes into building sites, was not an ultrahazardous activity (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 841-842) . The court stated that if the activity was one that ordinarily could be safely carried on, if reasonable care was used, then it was not ultrahazardous (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 842) . The court found that the earth-movement operation could be done in such a manner as to pose no risk of harm (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 842) . Accordingly, the judgment was reversed (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 843) .

[b] Blasting in Remote Areas Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co. (1907) 152 Cal. 500, 93 P. 82 , was a negligence action for wrongful death caused by a blasting operation conducted by a contractor whom defendant had engaged. The blasting was part of a road-building project in a remote mountainous area, and the decedent was traveling on a nearby unused foot trail. Judgment was awarded to plaintiffs, and defendant appealed.

On appeal, defendant contended that the contractor was an independent contractor for whose negligence defendant was not liable. However, the Supreme Court found it unnecessary to decide that issue because it determined that certain jury instructions were erroneous in that they allowed the jury to find defendant liable regardless of the status of the contractor (152 Cal. 500, 502) . The jury instructions stated that defendant was liable if the jury found that the work being done by the contractor was intrinsically dangerous or would probably result in injury, regardless of any negligence by the contractor. The Court found that the facts did not warrant the instruction, stating that the weight of authority seems to be that blasting, without reference to the particular locality in which it is carried on, is not so intrinsically dangerous as to be ipso facto a nuisance so that the blaster is liable for injury whether or not he or she is guilty of any negligence (152 Cal. 500, 505) . Accordingly, the judgment was reversed (152 Cal. 500, 505) . Although the Court decided the case on a nuisance theory, it has generally been cited for the rule that strict liability may not be imposed for blasting in remote areas [see Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 786, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128].

The facts and procedural background of Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 56 Cal. Rptr. 128 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][b]. On appeal, defendant contended that strict liability should not be imposed because the rocket motor testing in question was conducted in a remote area. In discussing the issue, the court noted that blasting in a developed area calls for strict liability, while blasting in an isolated area may not, citing Houghton v. Loma Prieta Lumber Co. However, the court stated, the case was distinguishable from Houghton, because although the test site was in a generally undeveloped area, portions of defendant's property bordered plaintiffs' land and defendant was fully cognizant of the risk of harm to plaintiffs' property (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 786-787) . Therefore, the court of appeal held that the rocket motor testinginvolved in this case constituted an ultrahazardous activity (247 Cal. App. 2d 774, 785-786) .

[c] Operation of Airplane Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

Boyd v. White (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 641, 276 P.2d 92 , was an action for personal injuries and property damage caused when an airplane owned by defendant crashed into plaintiff's home. One of plaintiff's causes of action was for trespass based on strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. A judgment of nonsuit was entered, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reviewed the general law, which at that time held that aviation was an ultrahazardous activity, noting that the modern trend was away from that designation. The court ruled that the operation of an airplane in the year 1954 was not such a dangerous activity that it could be placed in the category of ultrahazardous activities (128 Cal. App. 2d 641, 655) . For this and other reasons, the judgment was affirmed.

[d] Earth-Movement Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 286 P.2d 503 , are discussed in § 234.23[3][a]. The court of appeal determined that an earth-movement operation conducted by bulldozing and grading incident to subdividing hills and slopes into building sites was not an ultrahazardous activity. The court found that the earth-movement operation could be done in such a manner as to pose no risk of harm (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 842) .

[e] Subterranean Tunneling Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

Marin Mun. Water Dist. v. Northwestern Pac. R.R. Co. (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 83, 61 Cal. Rptr. 520 , was an action for damage to plaintiff's water pipes caused by the collapse of defendant's underground railroad tunnel located below the pipes. A judgment of dismissal was entered on the ground that plaintiff's complaint did not state any causes of action, and plaintiff appealed.

Plaintiff's fourth cause of action was based on strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. The court of appeal ruled that plaintiff's bare allegation, that construction and maintenance of the tunnel was inherently dangerous, was not sufficient to bring the case within the rule of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity. In addition, the court stated that it could not hold as a matter of law that subterranean tunneling was so hazardous an activity as to warrant application of the rule. Thus, the court ruled, the fourth cause of action was correctly dismissed. Since the other counts were also properly dismissed, the judgment was affirmed (253 Cal. App. 2d 83, 98) .

[f] Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

Shanander v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 229 P.2d 864 , was an action by a tenant against a landlord for property damage suffered when the water pipes broke in the apartment above plaintiff's broke. Judgment was entered for plaintiff, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal was asked to decide whether the instructions relating to strict liability were proper. Relying on the definition of an ultrahazardous activity in the Restatement of Torts § 520, definition of an ultrahazardous activity, the court found that there was nothing in defendant's conduct of furnishing water to its tenants that necessarily involved a risk of injury to plaintiff's property (103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 510-511) . Thus, the judgment was reversed (103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 512) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Risk of Harm Can Be Eliminated by Exercise of Care

Ramsey v. Marutamaya Ogatsu Fireworks Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 140 Cal. Rptr. 247 , was a negligence action for personal injuries suffered as a result of a premature explosion of fireworks at a public display. Plaintiffs were awarded judgment, in addition to awards on several cross complaints, and defendants appealed.

In ruling on the case, the court of appeal stated, in dictum, that a fireworks display is not an ultrahazardous activity (72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 528 n.2). Relying on the definition of an ultrahazardous activity in the Restatement of Torts § 520, definition of an ultrahazardous activity, the court stated in further dictum that the risk of serious harm from the discharge of fireworks, such as the aerial bombs in this case, was one that could have been eliminated had the fireworks been manufactured in a nonnegligent manner (72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 528 n.2).

NOTE:

Several other cases have held, without stating the reasons for the decision, that the activity in question was not an ultrahazardous activity [Reida v. Lund (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 698, 704, 96 Cal. Rptr. 102 (use of firearm); McKenzie v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 731, 736, 19 Cal. Rptr. 628 (maintenance of electric power lines)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 234 ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITIES
PART II. FORMS

23-234 California Points & Authorities § 234.24

§ 234.24 Opposing Contention That Activity Is Ultrahazardous--Matter of Common Usage

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT SHOULD NOT BE HELD STRICTLY LIABLE FOR PLAINTIFF'S INJURY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITY WAS NOT AN ULTRAHAZARDOUS ACTIVITY BECAUSE IT WAS A MATTER OF COMMON USAGE.

A. Matter of Common Usage. An activity is not ultrahazardous if it is a matter of common usage (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 645, 295 P.2d 958).

B. Definition of Commmon Usage. An activity is a matter of common usage if it is customarily carried on by the great mass of mankind or by many people in the community (Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498, 190 P.2d 1).

[Optional] C. Earth-Moving Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. Earth-moving operation conducted by bulldozing and grading is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 841-842, 286 P.2d 503).

[Optional] D. Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. A landlord's conduct in furnishing water to its tenant is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Shanander v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 510-512, 229 P.2d 864).

[Optional] E. Construction Work Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity. Construction work is not an ultrahazardous activity (see Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 645, 295 P.2d 958 (construction of garages in apartment building)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that strict liability should be imposed for an ultrahazardous activity when the activity complained of is not ultrahazardous because it is a matter of common usage.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of strict liability. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a discussion showing that the activity in question was a matter of common usage.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 234.20.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Matter of Common Usage

Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 295 P.2d 958 , was a trespass action for personal injuries suffered when a piece of plaster fell from plaintiff's ceiling and struck her. Plaintiff alleged that the plaster fell as a result of vibrations caused when a contractor engaged by defendant-landlord started construction of garages in the basement of the apartment building where plaintiff was a tenant. Defendant's motion for nonsuit was granted, and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, plaintiff asserted that defendant was strictly liable for the trespass caused by the contractor's work regardless of negligence. The court of appeal stated the general rule that there is no liability for trespass unless it was intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of engaging in an ultrahazardous activity. Quoting from the Restatement of Torts § 520, the court defined an ultrahazardous activity as one that (1) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm, and (2) is not a matter of common usage. The court held that the construction of garages in an apartment building was a matter of common usage (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 645) . Since the court also found that there was no negligence and no intentional trespass, it affirmed the judgment (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 646) .

[b] Definition of Common Usage

The facts and procedural background of Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 190 P.2d 1 , are discussed in § 234.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court set forth the definition of an ultrahazardous activity, relying on the Restatement of Torts §§ 519-521, and 523 (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498-499) . Quoting further from the Restatement, the Court stated that an activity is a matter of common usage if it is customarily carried on by the great mass of mankind or by many people in the community (31 Cal. 2d 489, 498) .

[c] Earth-Moving Operation Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Beck v. Bel Air Props., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 286 P.2d 503 , are discussed in § 234.23[3][a]. The court of appeal determined that an earth-movement operation conducted by bulldozing and grading incident to subdividing hills and slopes into building sites was not an ultrahazardous activity (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 842) . Besides finding that the riskof harm imposed by the operation could be eliminated by the exercise of reasonable care, the court also found that defendant's activities were a matter of common usage (134 Cal. App. 2d 834, 842) .

[d] Landlord's Furnishing of Water to Tenant Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Shanander v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 229 P.2d 864 , are discussed in § 234.23[3][f]. The court of appeal held that defendant-landlord's conduct of furnishing water to its tenants was not an ultrahazardous activity (103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 510-511) . In addition to ruling that no risk of harm was involved, the court also ruled that defendant's activity was a matter of common usage (103 Cal. App. 2d 507, 511) .

[e] Construction Work Is Not Ultrahazardous Activity

The facts and procedural background of Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 295 P.2d 958 , are discussed in § 234.24[3][a]. The court of appeal held that under the definition of an ultrahazardous activity in the Restatement of Torts § 520, the construction of garages in an apartment building was a matter of common usage and thus not an ultrahazardous activity (140 Cal. App. 2d 638, 645) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Matter of Common Usage

The facts and procedural background of Ramsey v. Marutamaya Ogatsu Fireworks Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 140 Cal. Rptr. 247 , are discussed in § 234.23[4][a]. The court of appeal stated, in dictum, that a fireworks display is not an ultrahazardous activity (72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 528 n.2). Besides indicating that fireworks did not meet the requirement of a risk of serious harm, the court also noted that fireworks displays are a matter of common usage on appropriate occasions such as the Fourth of July (72 Cal. App. 3d 516, 528 n.2).

Clark v. Di Prima (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829, 51 Cal. Rptr. 49 , was an action for water damage to plaintiff's almond trees caused when defendant's irrigation ditch on adjoining land broke. Judgment was awarded to defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that the trial court erred in refusing to instruct on strict liability. The court of appeal dismissed plaintiff's contention, holding that the normal and customary irrigation of crops, that is, by transporting water along a ditch or canal, does not constitute an ultrahazadous activity for which strict liability should be imposed (241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829) . Applying the doctrine of strict liability for an ultrahazardous activity set forth in Luthringer v. Moore (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 489, 498-499, 190 P.2d 1 , the court found that normal irrigation activities are a matter of ordinary and customary practice (241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 828-829) . For other reasons, the judgment was reversed (241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829) .

NOTE:

By contrast, in Nola v. Orlando (1932) 119 Cal. App 518, 519, 6 P.2d 984 , the court of appeal imposed strict liability for damage caused by water escaping from a cement flume used by defendants for irrigation purposes. The court indicated that liability was predicated on the fact that defendants brought the water upon their land by an artificial rather than a natural means. In addition, the court of appeal in Clark v. Di Prima (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 823, 829, 51 Cal. Rptr. 49 expressly left open the question of whether irrigation by impounding water, that is, by means of a dam or a reservoir, is an ultrahazardous activity. However, in Sutliff v. Sweetwater Water Co. (1920) 182 Cal. 34, 38-39, 186 P. 766 , the Supreme Court held that strict liability will not be imposed for damages caused when a reservoir or ditch is broken by a natural flood. The Court appeared to decide the case on the fact that the escape of water was caused by an act beyond defendant's control..

Several other cases have held, without stating the reasons for the decision, that the activity in question was not an ultrahazardous activity [Reida v. Lund (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 698, 704, 96 Cal. Rptr. 102 (use of firearm); and McKenzie v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 731, 736, 19 Cal.

Rptr. 628 (maintenance of electric power lines)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION

23-235 California Points & Authorities 235.syn

§ 235.syn Synopsis to Chapter 235: UNFAIR COMPETITION

§ 235.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 235.02 Governing Law

§ 235.03 Notice of Appeal in Unfair Competition Actions

§ 235.04 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act

[1] Civil Actions

[2] Jurisdiction

§ 235.05 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

§ 235.06 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 235.07 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 235.08-235.19 [Reserved]

§ 235.20 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Locality Discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[c] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exception Need Not Be Negatived in Initial Pleading

§ 235.21 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Locality Discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Seller Must Discriminate Between Sales in Two or More of Seller's Own Business Locations

[b] Prohibition Against Locality Discrimination Protects Only First-Line Competition

[c] Intent to Destroy Competition With Person Creating Locality Discrimination

§ 235.22 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Schemes Prohibited

[b] Allegation Based on Information and Belief Regarding Costs Sufficient

§ 235.23 Supporting Contention That Fully Allocated Cost Method Establishes Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 Supports Use of Fully Allocated Cost Method

[b] Fully Allocated Cost Method Described

[c] Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

[d] Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Preempted by Federal Law

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fully Allocated Cost Method Described

§ 235.24 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]--Service Furnished by Publicly Owned Public Utility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Activity Outside Exemption

§ 235.25 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]--Failure to Allege Purpose Was to Injure Competitors or Destroy Competition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Allegation of Purpose Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Allegation of Purpose Required

§ 235.26 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043] and Use of Loss Leaders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]--Failure to Allege Facts Showing Sale Below Cost

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale Below Cost Required

§ 235.27 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Use of Loss Leader May Include Sale of Service or Output of Trade

[b] Expansive Definition of Sale

§ 235.28 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]--Failure to Allege Purpose Was to Injure Competitors or Destroy Competition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Wrongful Purpose Required

§ 235.29 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Secret Payment or Allowance of Rebate, Refund, Commission, or Unearned Discount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Protection Not Restricted to Competitors of Person Allowing an Unearned Discount

[b] Only Special Services or Privileges Not Extended to All Purchasers Require Proof That Purchase Was on Like Terms and Conditions

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Protection Not Restricted to Competitors of Person Allowing an Unearned Discount

§ 235.30 Supporting Contention That Requisite Intent Exists for Violation of Unfair Practices Act--Presumptive Evidence of Intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 235.31 Opposing Contention That Requisite Intent Exists for Violation of Unfair Practices Act--No Presumption of Intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071] Absent Proof of Injurious Effect of Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Presumptive Evidence of Intent Absent Proof of Injurious Effect

§ 235.32 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Is Available to Enjoin Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17078]--Unclean Hands Doctrine Inapplicable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unclean Hands Doctrine Inapplicable

§ 235.33 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Is Available to Enjoin Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17078]--Preliminary Injunction Is Available to Enjoin Sale or Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Against Loss Leader

§ 235.34 Supporting Contention That Treble Damages May Be Recovered for Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Proof of Malice or Other Qualifying Condition Required

[b] Motion for New Trial Not Condition Precedent to Appeal

§ 235.35 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Elect Punitive Damages [Civ. Code § 3294] or Treble Damages for Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082]--Treble Damages as Mandatory When No Other Remedy Was Pursued

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Election When Only One Cause of Action Was Pursued

§§ 235.36-235.49 [Reserved]

§ 235.50 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized

[b] Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Limited to Anticompetitive Business Practices

[c] Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

[d] Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition

[e] Determination of Fraudulent or Deceptive Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

[f] Buyer May Be Liable for Unfair Competition

[g] Personal Liability of Controlling Shareholder and Responsible Officer

[h] Unfair Insurance Practices Act Does Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action

[i] Insurance Code Sections 12414.26 and 12414.29 Do Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action Brought Against Title Insurer

[j] Restitution is Available Independent of Injunction

[k] Nonresident Business May Be Liable for Unfair Competition

[l] Conduct Not Constituting Violation of Unfair Business Practices Act May Nonetheless Be Subject to Action Under Unfair Competition Law

[m] Reliance on Specific Statements in Advertising Claim Not Required to Show Fraudulent Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Limited to Anticompetitive Business Practices

[b] Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

[c] Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition

[d] Determination of Fraudulent or Deceptive Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

[e] Personal Liability of Controlling Shareholder and Responsible Officer

[f] Unfair Insurance Practices Act Does Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action

§ 235.51 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]--Unlawful Business Practice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unlawful Business Practice May Be Based on Violation of Virtually Any State, Local, or Federal Law

[b] Ongoing Wrongful Conduct

[c] Intent Unnecessary

[d] Forest Practice Act Violations

[e] Conditional Use Permit Violations

[f] Violations of Temporary Restraining Order

[g] Action Based on Transacting Insurance Without License Permitted

[h] Action Based on Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act

[i] Action Based on Federal Violations Not Preempted

§ 235.52 Supporting Contention That Preliminary Injunction Is Proper to Enjoin Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]--Misleading Advertising

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misleading Use of Another Person's Advertising

§ 235.53 Supporting Contention That Restitution and Disgorgement of Profits Are Authorized Remedies for Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restitution and Disgorgement of Profits as Appropriate Remedies

[b] Business and Professions Cod Section 17203 Is Not Unconstitutionally Vague

[c] Back Wages May Be Recovered as Restitution

[d] Retail Consumer May Recover Restitution From Manufacturer

[e] Restitution May Be Based on Money Paid to Defendant's Agent

§ 235.54 Supporting Contention That Statutory Action for Unfair Competition May Be Prosecuted as Class Action and Seek Disgorgement of Profits Into Fluid Recovery Fund [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Unfair Competition Claim May Be Brought as Class Action

[b] Only Named Class Representatives Must Show Standing

[c] Class Certification Supports Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund as Remedy

§ 235.55 Supporting Contention That Action for Injunction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203] Is Not Barred by Federal Preemption--Unfair Marketing Activities by Health Maintenance Organization Soliciting Medicare-Eligible Individuals

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Regulation of Marketing Activities by Health Maintenance Organizations as Not Barring Injunctive Relief Under State Law

§ 235.56 Supporting Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Barred by Res Judicata--Private Plaintiff May Bring Action Subsequent to Action Brought by Public Prosecutor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Does Not Preclude Action

§ 235.56A Supporting Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition is Not Barred by Litigation Privilege--Plaintiff Was Not Party to Underlying Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Privilege Not Defense if Plaintiff Was Not Party in Underlying Litigation

§ 235.57 Opposing Contention That Private Plaintiff May Recover Money Damages [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Money Damages by Private Plaintiff Is Not Authorized

[b] Restitution Is Measured by Defendant's Gain

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery of Money Damages by Private Plaintiff Is Not Authorized

§ 235.58 Opposing Contention That Private Plaintiff May Maintain Action For Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Release Form Not Unlawful

[b] Liquidated Damages Clause Not Unlawful

[c] Unwitting Distribution of Contaminated Pet Food Not Act of Unfair Competition

[d] Conduct Specifically Lawful Under Other Statute May Not Be Basis for Action Under Unfair Competition Law

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Conduct Specifically Lawful Under Other Statute May Not Be Basis for Action Under Unfair Competition Law

§ 235.59 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Insurance Code Bars Action Against Insurance Company Based on Ratemaking Decisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unfair Business Practices Claim for Disgorgement of Allegedly Excessive Insurance Premiums Barred

§ 235.59A Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Failure to Bring Claim Alleging Violation of Talent Agencies Act With Labor Commissioner Bars Unfair Competition Claim [Lab. Code § 1700.44]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to File Timely Claim WIth Labor Commissioner Bars Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Based on Violation of Talent Agencies Act

§ 235.60 Opposing Contention That Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Is Authorized Remedy in Non-Class-Action Representative Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Is Not Authorized Remedy in Representative Action

§ 235.61 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Recover Disgorgement of Profits That Is Not Restitutionary [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disgorgement of Profits Must Be Restitutionary

[b] Nonrestitutionary Disgorgement Prohibited in Class Action Suit

[c] Unpaid Wages Not Recoverable as Restitution From Employer's Owners, Officers, or Managers

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disgorgement of Profits Must Be Restitutionary

§ 235.62 Opposing Contention That Nonaggrieved Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Plaintiff Must Suffer Actual Injury to Have Standing to Sue

[b] Proposition 64 Applicable to Pending Actions

[c] Standing Not Conferred By Incurring Litigation-Related Expenses

[d] Eligibility for Restitution Required to Have Standing to Sue

[e] Standing to Sue Not Assignable

[f] Associational Standing Doctrine Inapplicable to Unfair Competition Actions

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Plaintiff Must Have Actual Injury to Have Standing to Sue

§ 235.62A Opposing Contention That Representative Action May Be Brought Under Unfair Competition Statute Without Meeting Requirements for Class Action [Bus. & Prof. Code 17203]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representative Action Must be Brought as Class Action

§ 235.63 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof.

Code § 17200]--Insufficient Evidence of Causal Connection Between Defendant's Conduct and Harm

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Causal Connection Required

[b] Plaintiff Alleging Fraud Must Show Actual Reliance

[c] Showing of Reliance Required in Action for Unlawful Business Practices Based on Misrepresentations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Alleging Fraud Must Show Actual Reliance

§ 235.64 Opposing Contention That Litigant May Maintain Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Conduct Within Scope of Litigation Privilege [Civ. Code § 47(b)] Not Actionable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Privilege May be Asserted as Defense in Unfair Competition Action

[b] Attorney Solicitation Falling Within Litigation Privilege Not Enjoinable

§ 235.65 Opposing Contention That Non-Resident Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Injury-Causing Conduct Occurred Outside California

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Non-Resident Plaintiff May Not Bring Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Against Defendant Whose Headquarters and Principal Place of Business is Out-of-State for Injuries Caused Out-of-State

§ 235.66 Opposing Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200] May Be

Based on Securities Transactions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unfair Competition Statute Inapplicable to Securities Transactions

§ 235.67 Opposing Contention That Jury Trial is Guaranteed in Action Brought Solely Under Unfair Competition Statute [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Jury Trial

§§ 235.68-235.79 [Reserved]

§ 235.80 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Based on Unfair Competition Is Preempted by Federal Patent and Copyright Law--State Law Attempts to Prohibit Copying of Unpatented and Uncopyrighted Article

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Preemption of State Law That Interferes With Federal Patent Laws

[b] Federal Law Preempts Any State Law That Attempts to Prohibit Copying of Unpatented and Uncopyrighted Article

[c] State Unfair Competition Claim Must Have "Extra Element" to Avoid Preemption

§ 235.81 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Based on Unfair Competition Is Preempted by Federal Patent and Copyright Law--State Law May Protect Business in Use of Trademarks or Labels to Prevent Confusion of Content or Source

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] State Protection From Confusion of Content or Source

[b] State Protection From Palming Off

[c] Federal Law Does Not Preempt State Laws Prohibiting Reverse Palming Off

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.01

§ 235.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities relating to actions based on unfair business practices or unfair competition. Sections 235.20 et seq. concern actions under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.). They include: forms supporting [see §§ 235.20, 235.22, 235.27, 235.29] and opposing [see §§ 235.21, 235.24 -235.26, 235.28] the contention that a complaint states a cause of action under the Act; a form supporting the contention that the fully allocated cost method establishes sales below cost [see § 235.23]; forms supporting [see § 235.30] and opposing [see § 235.31] the contention that the requisite wrongful intent exists in an action under the Act; forms supporting the contention that an injunction should be issued [see §§ 235.32, 235.33]; a form supporting the contention that the plaintiff is entitled to treble damages [see § 235.34], and a form opposing the contention that a successful plaintiff may elect punitive damages or treble damages [see § 235.35].

Section 235.50 et seq. concerns actions for statutory unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.), and include forms supporting the contention that a cause of action for statutory unfair competition exists [see §§ 235.50 -235.52], supporting the contention that restitution and disgorgement of profits are authorized remedies for unfair competition [see § 235.53], supporting the contention that an unfair competition claim may be brought as a class action and seek disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund [see § 235.54], supporting the contention that an action for an injunction is not federally preempted [see § 235.55], supporting the contention that res judicata does not prevent a private plaintiff from prosecuting an action after a public prosecutor has pursued an action under the statute [see § 235.56], supporting the contention that the litigation privilege does not bar an action for statutory unfair competition if the plaintiff was not a party to the underlying litigation [see § 235.56A], opposing the contention that a private litigant may recover money damages [see § 235.57] or maintain an action [see §§ 235.58, 235.59, 235.62, 235.65, 235.66], opposing the contention that disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund is an authorized remedy in a non-class-action representative action [see § 235.60], opposing the contention that an individual plaintiff may recover the disgorgement of profits that is not restitutionary [see § 235.61], opposing the contention that a plaintiff may pursue a cause of action for unfair competition without evidence of a causal connection between the defendant's conduct and the harm [see § 235.63], and opposing the contention that a litigant may maintain an action for conduct that is protected by the litigation privilege [see § 235.64].

Section 235.80 et seq. concerns actions based on common law unfair competition, and include forms supporting [see § 235.80] and opposing [see § 235.81]the contention that an action for common law unfair competition is preempted by federal patent and copyright law. For additional points and authorities relating to the preemption of state actions by federal copyright law, see Ch. 146, Literary Property, Copyright, and the Protection of Ideas .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationClaimsAntitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationCoverageCivil ProcedureClass ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.02

§ 235.02 Governing Law

Particular unfair business practices are actionable under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.). Actions for unfair competition are governed generally by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. Actions based on common law theories of tort liability for unfair competition are governed by decisional law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationClaimsAntitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationCoverage

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.03

§ 235.03 Notice of Appeal in Unfair Competition Actions

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17209 requires a party appealing a statutory unfair competition judgment to serve notice of the appeal, including a copy of appellant's opening brief or petition, on the Attorney General and on the district attorney of the county in which the lower court action or proceeding was originally filed, within three days after the commencement of the appellate proceeding, unless the time is extended for good cause. This statute is not jurisdictional and has been interpreted to mean that the Attorney General and local district attorney must be served with the appellant's opening brief within three days of its being filed. If the Attorney General and/or the local district attorney are not served with the opening briefs within three days of their being filed, and if time for serving the brief has not been extended for good cause shown, no judgment or relief may be granted by the court (Californians for Population Stabilization v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 273, 285, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationClaimsCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionState Court Review

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.04

§ 235.04 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act

[1] Civil Actions

In addition to the remedies discussed in this chapter, counsel may also wish to consider whether the facts of the case would give rise to a civil action under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) (18 U.S.C.S. § 1961 et seq.). Although the object of the act is to prevent and punish racketeering activity, its broad definitions may extend to otherwise law-abiding business persons and their respected and legitimate enterprises, that is, to conduct of legitimate business persons who engage in "garden variety" commercial fraud [see Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 909, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 ; see also Douglas v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 155, 159, 263 Cal. Rptr. 473] .

The act authorizes a civil action by any person injured in his or her business or property by reason of a violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962 for treble damages and costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee [18 U.S.C.S. § 1964(c)]. For a full discussion of RICO and the available civil remedies authorized by it, see Smith & Reed, Civil RICO (Matthew Bender).

[2] Jurisdiction

RICO provides that any person injured in his or her business or property by reason of a violation of 18 U.S.C.S. § 1962 may sue in any appropriate United States District Court. This provision is not exclusive. State courts have concurrent jurisdiction over the civil action for damages authorized by 18 U.S.C.S. § 1964(c) [Tafflin v. Levitt (1990) 493 U.S. 455, 456-458, 467, 110 S. Ct. 792, 107 L. Ed. 2d 887 ; Lou v. Belzberg (9th Cir. 1987) 834 F.2d 730, 736-739 ; Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 907-916, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375] . Civil RICO claims are arbitrable when the transaction is covered by an agreement that provides for arbitration of disputes between the parties [Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. McMahon (1987) 482 U.S. 220, 238-242, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationClaimsTortsBusiness TortsFraud &

MisrepresentationActual FraudGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.05

§ 235.05 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind concerns page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda filed in discovery motion proceedings may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

Forms in this chapter are in the form of contentions based on substantive points of law, and may be combined with each other depending on the facts and issues involved. These substantive contentions may also be combined with any appropriate procedural forms, depending on the context in which they are raised. For example, the forms supporting or opposing the contention that a particular cause of action is stated would commonly be raised in the context of a demurrer or summary judgment proceeding, and in that context might be combined with appropriate procedural forms in Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments . The contentions may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief, or be used to research office memoranda and jury instructions. Whatever procedural context or paper is involved, counsel should add argument to the points and authorities being used,showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

For a discussion of the format requirements governing memoranda generally, including page limits, discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a complete memorandum or brief, and a form of skeletal overall memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion

PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.06

§ 235.06 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms relating to actions for unfair competition and actions under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms concerning related actions based on other wrongful business practices, see the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 14, Advertising.
- Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit.
- Ch. 340, Libel and Slander.
- Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright.
- Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions.
- Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names.
- Ch. 565, Unfair Competition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawTrade Practices & Unfair CompetitionState RegulationClaimsCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsRemediesGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsDefamationGeneral OverviewTrademark LawFederal Unfair Competition LawGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.07

§ 235.07 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For forms of points and authorities concerning actions based on other wrongful business practices, see the following chapters in this publication:

- Ch. 14, Advertising.
- Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit.
- Ch. 122, Interference.
- Ch. 146, Literary Property, Copyright, and the Protection of Ideas.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionFalse AdvertisingState RegulationCopyright LawCivil Infringement ActionsGeneral OverviewCopyright LawSubject MatterIdeasGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-235 California Points & Authorities §§ 235.08-235.19

[Reserved]

§§ 235.08[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.20

§ 235.20 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Locality Discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR LOCALITY DISCRIMINATION BECAUSE IT ALLEGES DEFENDANT CREATED A LOCALITY DISCRIMINATION WITH THE INTENT TO DESTROY OR PREVENT COMPETITION.

A. Locality Discrimination Unlawful. It is unlawful for any person engaged in the production, manufacture, distribution, or sale of any article or product of general use or consumption, with intent to destroy the competition of any regular established dealer in the article or product, or to prevent the competition of any person who in good faith intends and attempts to become the dealer, to create locality discriminations (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040).

B. Locality Discrimination Defined. Locality discrimination means a discrimination between different sections, communities, or cities or portions thereof, or between different locations in the sections, communities, cities, or portions thereof in California, by selling or furnishing an article or product, at a lower price in one section, community or city, or any portion thereof, or in one location in the section, community, city, or any portion thereof, than in another (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17031).

C. Article or Product Defined. Article or product includes any article, product, commodity, thing of value, service, or output of a service trade (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024).

[Optional] D. Exception Need Not Be Negatived in Initial Pleading. The exception to liability for locality discrimination set out in Business and Professions Code Section 17041 need not be negatived in the initial pleading (G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 273, 195 Cal. Rptr. 211).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention thata complaint states a cause of action for locality discrimination [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040, 17070; G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 273, 195 Cal. Rptr. 211] . They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 235.21 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exception Need Not Be Negatived in Initial Pleading

In G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 195 Cal. Rptr. 211 , a retail record store and its owners brought an action against three large retail record enterprises to seek remedies based on several causes of action alleging various state statutory antitrust violations. Defendants filed demurrers to all causes of action, contending, inter alia, that the cause of action for locality discrimination under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 was vague and defective. Defendants asserted lack of essential allegations that the price differences were not justified by differences in grade, quality, quantity, or cost of transportation, pursuant to the exception to liability provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041. The trial court sustained demurrers to all causes of action without leave to amend, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to some causes of action, including that for locality discrimination (147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 280) . The court stated that, generally, a statutory cause of action must allege facts supporting each requirement of the statute on which it is based. When, however, an exception is found in a subsequent section, it need not be negatived in the initial pleading. Liability for locality discrimination is provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040, and the exception for differences in grade, quality, quantity, or cost of transportation is provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041 (147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 272) . Consequently, the plaintiffs were not required to negative the exception under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041, and their complaint was sufficient to withstand demurrer without such allegations (147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 273-274) .

83 of 180 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.21

§ 235.21 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Locality Discrimination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR LOCALITY DISCRIMINATION BECAUSE IT DOES NOT ALLEGE _____ [PROHIBITED PRICE DISCRIMINATION or INTENT TO DESTROY OR PREVENT COMPETITION].

[EITHER]

A. Seller Must Discriminate Between Sales in Two or More of Seller's Own Business Locations. To fall within the prohibition of Sections 17031 and 17040 of the Business and Professions Code, a seller must have at least two different places of business and must sell at a lower price in one than in the other (Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 460, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139).

[AND/OR]

B. Prohibition Against Locality Discrimination Protects Only First-Line Competition. The Unfair Practices Act operates horizontally, and protects only first-line competition, that is, those in competition with the alleged discriminator, against predatory price cutting on an area basis. It does not proscribe price discriminations that only injure second or third-line competition, that is, those who are the alleged discriminator's customers or ultimate consumers (Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 461, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139 ; Plotkin v. Tanner's Vacuums (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458, 125 Cal. Rptr. 697).

[AND/OR]

C. Intent to Destroy Competition With Person Creating Locality Discrimination. Section 17040 of the Business and Professions Code applies only to discriminations that are made with the intent to destroy the competition of a dealer who competes with the person creating the discrimination, that is, the person engaged in the sale who creates the discrimination by selling at a lower price. The legislature did not intend to proscribe a sale at a lower price in one locality than in another when there is no intent to destroy competition with the person who makes the sale (Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 460-461, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for locality discrimination [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031, 17040; Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 460-462, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139] . They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.20.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Seller Must Discriminate Between Sales in Two or More of Seller's Own Business Locations

In Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139 , a retail record store owner brought an action against several record companies and a subdistributor to seek damages and injunctive and declaratory relief under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101). Plaintiff bought records from defendant record companies at the standard dealer discount. Defendant subdistributor received a greater discount than the plaintiff because he was a rack-jobber, who places records in stores in which records are an incidental sales item. He opened his own record store near plaintiff's, and priced records considerably lower than plaintiff. The complaint alleged that the subdistributor was allowed to buy his stock at a special discountfor distribution purposes, yet sold the goods as a retailer, thereby underselling plaintiff and damaging his business. Plaintiff contended, inter alia, that defendants created an unlawful locality discrimination in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031 and 17040. The action against defendant subdistributor was dismissed after his business became insolvent. The trial court granted motions for summary judgment in favor of defendant record companies, and plaintiff appealed the judgment entered in their favor.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that there was no legal theory on which defendants could be held liable to plaintiff (64 Cal. 2d 454, 456) . Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17031 and 17040 prohibit selling at a lower price in one location than in another. To violate their provisions, a seller must have at least two different places of business and must sell at a lower price in one than in the other. The two outlets involved in the instant case are owned not by defendants, but by their retail customers, that is, by plaintiff and the subdistributor, among others (64 Cal. 2d 454, 460) . Additionally, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 is intended to apply only to competition on the same level as the person allegedly creating the locality discrimination, as distinguished from competition between those who purchase from the alleged discriminator. In other words, it applies to primary, rather than secondary competition. Therefore, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 applies only to discriminations that are made with intent to destroy the competition of a dealer who competes with the person creating the discrimination by selling at a lower price (64 Cal. 2d 454, 460) . The Legislature did not intend to declare unlawful a sale at a lower price in one locality than in another absent an intent to destroy competition with the person who was creating the locality discrimination (64 Cal. 2d 454, 460-461) . Nothing in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17040 prohibits the meeting in good faith of a competitive price. A wholesaler is not in competition with a retailer. The Unfair Practices Act was enacted to discourage practices that harm the seller's competitors, while allowing the seller to meet competition's prices in good faith. Therefore, the act constitutes a horizontal concept of price regulation. It protects only first-line competition against predatory price cutting on an area basis and does not make illegal price discriminations that only injure second or third-line competition at the buyer level or lower. A seller can lawfully discriminate in favor of one purchaser to help that purchaser to meet competition, so long as there is no intent on the part of the seller to prevent or destroy the competition of other sellers at the seller's level (64 Cal. 2d 454, 461-462) .

[b] Prohibition Against Locality Discrimination Protects Only First-Line Competition

Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139 , is discussed in § 235.21[3][a].

In Plotkin v. Tanner's Vacuums (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 125 Cal. Rptr. 697 , a retail vacuum cleaner company and its owner brought an action against a vacuum cleaner manufacturer and a retail store owner to seek remedies under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101). Plaintiffs purchased vacuum cleaners directly from the manufacturer's factory and enjoyed credit and other privileges. Subsequently, the manufacturer named defendant retail store the exclusive distributor for the area encompassing plaintiffs' business. They informed plaintiffs to place all orders with the distributorship, and ultimately removed plaintiffs' name from the list of authorized service stations. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the Act, although liberally construed, does not protect plaintiffs from the conduct described (53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457) . Plaintiffs' complaint is based only on the fact that the manufacturer classified the retail store as its sole distributor in plaintiffs' geographical area. The manufacturer's action was simply vertical confinement of sales of its own merchandise, which is not prohibited under the Act (53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 459) . The Act protects only first-line competition against predatory price cutting on an area basis and does not prohibit price discriminations that only injure second or third-line competition at the buyer level or lower (53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458) . The court also disallowed plaintiffs' cause of action under former Civ. Code § 3369 (now see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200) (unfair competition). The essential test of unfair competition is whether the challenged activity is likely to deceive the public (53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 459) . Plaintiffs are not competitors of the manufacturer. Further, there are no allegations that the consumer has been damaged or that the distributorship is outside the scope of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17042 (functional classifications permitted) of the manufacturer's right to vertical confinement in selling its product. Consequently, plaintiffs failed to state a cause of action under the Act (53 Cal. App. 3d 454, 460) .

[c] Intent to Destroy Competition With Person Creating Locality Discrimination

The facts and procedural background of Harris v. Capitol Records Distrib. Corp. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 454, 50 Cal. Rptr. 539, 413 P.2d 139 , are discussed in § 235.21[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.22

§ 235.22 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR SALES BELOW COST BECAUSE IT ALLEGES SALES BELOW COST FOR THE PURPOSE OF INJURING COMPETITORS OR DESTROYING COMPETITION.

A. Sales Below Cost Prohibited. It is unlawful for any person engaged in business within California to sell any article or product at less than the cost thereof to the vendor, or to give away any article or product, for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043).

B. Article or Product Defined. [See § 235.20[1], Paragraph C.].

[Optional] C. Schemes Prohibited. The prohibitions of the Unfair Practices Act against sales below cost embrace any scheme of special rebates, collateral contracts, or any device of any nature whereby the discrimination or sale below cost is in substance or fact effected in violation of the spirit and intent of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17049; Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 500-501, 117 Cal. Rptr. 42).

[Optional] D. Allegation Based on Information and Belief Regarding Costs Sufficient. A complaint that fails to allege a definite cost of doing business may be sufficient to support a cause of action for sales below cost if plaintiff asserts on information and belief that the prices charged were below defendant's stated invoice costs plus the unstated cost of doing business, and plaintiff is unable to speculate on a supposed cost figure (G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 275-276, 195 Cal. Rptr. 211).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for sales below cost [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17024 (article or product defined), 17043 (sales below cost prohibited); 17049 (schemes prohibited); 17070 (authorizing action for violation of act)]. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 235.24 -235.26 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contentions supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Schemes Prohibited

In Paramount Gen. Hosp. Co. v. National Med. Enters., Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 117 Cal. Rptr. 42 , the owners of a hospital complex brought an action against owners of a medical building to seek damages and injunctive relief under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101). Plaintiffs rent office space to physicians and provide them with various services. Defendants were constructing a medical building near plaintiffs' facilities. They offered office space and services to several physicians, some of which accepted or intended to accept the offer. Plaintiffs allege that defendants are either giving away or selling below cost the office space and services, for the purpose of destroying competition from plaintiffs, in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043. The trial court sustained defendants' general demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint stated a cause of action under the Act (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 504) . The court noted that the Act prohibits, inter alia: (1) selling below cost or giving away any article or product for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043); and (2) selling or using any article or product as a loss leader (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044). The Legislature provided that the Act be liberally construed to serve its beneficial purposes (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17002) (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 500) . Further, the prohibitions of the Act against sales below cost embraceany scheme of special rebates, collateral contracts or any device of any nature whereby the sale below cost is in substance or fact effected in violation of the spirit and intent of the Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17049) (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 500-501) . The court rejected defendants' contention that their offer involves nothing but leases to real property to which transactions covered by the Act are incidental (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 500) . Defendants' offer includes a variety of sophisticated, specialized services in competition with plaintiffs as well a lease. Every definition relevant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 is framed in terms of what the concept defined includes (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501) . For example, "article or product" includes any article, product, commodity, thing of value, service, or output of a service trade (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501-502) . With respect to the Act's purpose to foster and encourage competition, it cannot matter which element of a package is functionally ancillary to the other. What is vital is whether the part of the package clearly covered by the Act is so substantial that cost-cutting with respect to it can be used as a means to injure or destroy competition. Defendants' lease-service package fits into the inclusive definition of "article or product" of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024 (42 Cal. App. 3d 496, 503) .

[b] Allegation Based on Information and Belief Regarding Costs Sufficient

The facts and procedural background of G.H.I.I. v. MTS, Inc. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 195 Cal. Rptr. 211 , are discussed in § 235.20[3][a]. The court of appeal overruled a demurrer to a complaint with regard to a cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17041 (locality discrimination), holding that the complaint need not negative exceptions to liability, because the exceptions are embodied in a subsequent section of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.). The court also overruled the demurrer with respect to causes of action for sales below cost. Pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17026 and 17029, cost means invoice cost plus either the vendor's full cost of doing business or six percent. Therefore, to satisfy the pleading requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, the various costs must be stated in other than conclusionary terms. The complaint, although specifically alleging the price at which defendants sold their products and invoice costs, did not allege a definite cost of doing business, but rather asserted on information and belief that the prices charged were below defendants' stated invoice costs plus the unstated cost of doing business (147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 275) . The court reasoned that, because plaintiffs were in a poor position to speculate on a supposed cost figure, it would serve no useful purpose to require a speculative allegation of cost that adds nothing to the notice given by the pleadings. Accordingly, the pleadings were sufficient to support a cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 (147 Cal. App. 3d 256, 276) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.23

§ 235.23 Supporting Contention That Fully Allocated Cost Method Establishes Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS PROVED THAT DEFENDANT'S SALES WERE FOR PRICES BELOW ITS FULLY ALLOCATED COST AND DEFENDANT HAS NOT DEMONSTRATED ANY OTHER COST ALLOCATION METHOD THAT WOULD RESULT IN A PROFIT.

A. Sales Below Cost Prohibited. [See § 235.22[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 Supports Use of Fully Allocated Cost Method. Because Sections 17026 and 17029 of the Business and Professions Code define cost to include all variable and fixed costs, it appears that the Unfair Practices Act employs a fully allocated cost or fully distributed cost standard to determine whether a sale violated Section 17043 of the Business and Professions Code (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 819-820, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856).

C. Fully Allocated Cost Method Described. Variable costs are costs that vary with changes in output, while fixed costs are those that do not vary with changes in output. The concept of fully allocated cost has been equated with average total cost, which reflects that portion of the firm's total costs--both fixed and variable--attributable on an average basis to each unit of output. [A defendant is free to demonstrate to the trier of fact that its fully allocated cost, using another reasonable allocation method other than that used by plaintiff, is actually lower than plaintiff alleges and lower than defendant's sales or bid price. However, to be legally acceptable, the allocation of indirect and fixed overhead costs to a particular product or service must be reasonably related to the burden the product or service imposes on the overall cost of doing business] (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transportation, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 820, 822-823, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856).

[Optional] D. Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable. The fully allocated cost method, when viewed in conjunction with the injurious intent requirement of Section 17043 of the Business and Professions Code, is rationally related to the valid legislative purpose enunciated in Section 17001 of the Business and Professions Code, which is to guard against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and of fostering and encouraging competition (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 823, 826, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856).

[Optional] E. Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Preempted by Federal Law. There is no actual conflict between federal antitrust law and the application of the fully allocated cost method. Thus, the application of the fully allocated cost method is not preempted by federal antitrust law (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 825-826, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the fully allocated cost method is the proper method for establishing that a sale was below cost and in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043. Paragraph B establishes that the fully allocated cost method is the cost allocation formula contemplated by the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.). Paragraph C describes the fully allocated cost method. Optional Paragraphs D and E are for use if the fully allocated cost method is being challenged as arbitrary or unreasonable or as having been preempted by federal law. Note that one reason the fully allocated cost method has not been preempted is that there is no clear federal standard for determining whether pricing is predatory in that the federal circuit courts disagree on the appropriate cost method, and the United States Supreme Court has not made a determination [see Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 825, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856] . Thus, counsel should confirm that the holding in Paragraph E has not been abrogated by later cases.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 Supports Use of Fully Allocated Cost Method

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17026 provides that "cost" as applied to production includes the cost of raw materials, labor, and all overhead expenses of the producer. "Cost" as applied to distribution means the invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, of the article or products to the distributor or vendor, plus the cost of doing business by the distributor and vendor and, in the absence of proof of cost of doing business, a markup of six percent on the invoice or replacement cost. "Cost" as applied to warranty service agreements includes the cost of parts, transporting the parts, labor, and all overhead expenses of the service agency.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17029 provides that "cost of doing business" over "overhead expense" means all costs of doing business incurred in the conduct of the business and includes, without limitation, the following items of expense: labor (including salaries of executives and officers), rent, interest on borrowed capital, depreciation, selling cost, maintenance of equipment, delivery costs, credit losses, all types of licenses, taxes, insurance, and advertising.

Plaintiff in Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 , sued a competitor for selling bus transportation services below its cost of providing those services for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043. The services involved were transportation of handicapped school children in San Joaquin County for the years 1978-1979, 1979-1980, 1980-1981, and 1981-1982. Defendant claimed it did not maintain records that allocated overhead and profits on a per contract basis, although a former area controller testified that figures which would establish per contract costs were destroyed after the operating statements were prepared at the end of each year. Plaintiff established that defendant's bid was below its cost of providing contract services in each year by analyzing defendant's operating statements and allocating defendant's operating expenses per mile travelled. Defendant's operating costs for the year were divided by the total miles travelled to yield an average cost per mile. That figure was then multiplied by the contract mileage to determine the contract cost. The former executive vice president of defendant's transportation group testified that defendant's overall policy was to penetrate the market and to bid at any cost, even below cost, to eliminate competition. True cost figures would be submitted by the bidding division to the group transportation office, where they would be reduced to make it appear that the bid was above cost. The loss would be reallocated to some other profit-making division. Other officers of defendant testified that defendant was concerned with making a profit on each contract.

The trial court ruled that the claim for the 1978-1979 school year was barred by the statute of limitations, and that treble damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082 were barred by a one-year limitation period except for the claim relating to the 1981-1982 school year. The jury awarded plaintiff compensatory damages of $259,568 for contract years 1979-1980 and 1981-1982, nothing for 1980-1981, and $1 million in punitive damages. Plaintiff was allowed to elect to receive compensatory and punitive damages instead of treble damages. Defendant appealed, challenging application of the fully allocated cost method as unconstitutionally arbitrary and unreasonable and as preempted by federal law, and challenging the election of punitive damages.

The court of appeal found the use of the fully allocated cost method proper, but held that plaintiff was only entitled to trebled damages and reversed for a new trial limited to the issue of damages. Defendant contended that the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) violates the due process clause of the California and United States Constitutions because its method for determining whether a service is sold below cost is arbitrary and irrational. The court of appealsaid that because Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17026 and 17029 define cost to include all variable and fixed costs, it appears that the Unfair Practices Act employs a fully allocated cost or fully distributed cost standard to determine whether a sale violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 819-820) .

[b] Fully Allocated Cost Method Described

The facts and procedural background of Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 , are discussed in § 235.23[3][a]. The court of appeal went on to describe the fully allocated cost method, saying that variable costs are costs that vary with changes in output, while fixed costs are those that do not vary with changes in output. The concept of fully allocated cost has been equated with average total cost, which reflects that portion of the firm's total costs--both fixed and variable--attributable on an average basis to each unit of output (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 820) .

[c] Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

The facts and procedural background of Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 , are discussed in § 235.23[3][a]. In considering the constitutional challenge, the court of appeal went on to discuss federal authorities that question the use of the fully allocated cost method or average total cost method to determine the costs below which a business may not sell its goods or services for federal antitrust purposes and instead propose the use of the average variable cost or long-run incremental cost method (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 820) . Average variable cost is the sum of all variable costs divided by output. Long-run incremental cost measures all of the fixed and variable costs of adding a new product or service, but, unlike fully allocated cost, only measures those costs that are causally related to the service or product in question (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 821) . There are variations even within the fully allocated cost method. Those variations account for one criticism of the method. For example, if a railroad transports gold, lead, and feathers and attempts to calculate its costs on a fully distributed cost basis, it would reach radically different results depending on whether it allocated joint and common costs on the basis of value, weight, or bulk of the commodities shipped. The Ninth Circuit has not adopted any particular cost method, but has held that whatever method is used only affects the burden of proof. If the plaintiff establishes that the defendant sold its product below its average total cost but above its average variable cost, then the plaintiff has the burden of proving defendant did so with a predatory intent. If the plaintiff establishes that the defendant sold its product below its average variable cost, then the defendant has the burden of negating that it had a predatory intent [William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co. (9th Cir. 981) 668 F.2d 1014, 1035-1036] (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 821) . Even prices exceeding average total cost may be considered predatory if plaintiff provides clear and convincing evidence of defendant's predatory intent [Transamerica Computer Co., Inc. v. IBM Corp. (9th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1377, 1387-1388] (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 821-822) .

One criticism of the fully allocated cost method is that it improperly favors smaller, less efficient, single-product competitors. Under another method, such as the variable cost method, the multi-product competitor could allocate major indirect or fixed costs disproportionately among its products, and thus, for one or more products, claim a cost of manufacture far below that of a single-product competitor. After having driven the single-product competitor from the market, the multi-product competitor could reallocate its fixed costs to attack some other product line or market (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 822-823) . The court of appeal dismissed this as nothing more than a challenge to the economic wisdom of the statute, a matter more properly addressed to the legislature. The court concluded that the fully allocated cost method, when viewed in conjunction with the injurious intent requirement of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, is rationally related to the valid legislative purpose enunciated in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17001, which is to guard against the creation or perpetuation of monopolies and of fostering and encouraging competition (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 823, 826) . A defendant is free to demonstrate to the trier of fact that its fully allocated cost, using a reasonable allocation method other than that used by plaintiff, is actually lower than plaintiff alleges and lower than defendant's sales or bid price (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 822-823) . However, to be legally acceptable, the allocation of indirect and fixed overhead costs to a particular product or service must be reasonably related to the burden the product or service imposes on the overall cost of doing business (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 822) .

[d] Fully Allocated Cost Method Is Not Preempted by Federal Law

The facts and procedural background of Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 , are discussed in § 235.23[3][a]. Defendant also contended that the fully allocated cost method was preempted by the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq.) because application of the fully allocated cost method prohibits conduct that is not injurious to competition, specifically that it makes rational, profitable, and nonpredatory pricing above long-run incremental cost presumptively unlawful (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 823-824) . The court of appeal noted that state law is preempted to the extent that it actually conflicts with federal law. Such a conflict arises when compliance with both federal and state regulation is a physical impossibility or when state law stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 824) . The history of the Sherman Act makes clear that Congress did not intend that federal legislation preempt parallel state efforts to control unfair competitive practices. The possibility of proscription by California of conduct that federal law mightpermit is not sufficient to warrant preemption [William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 668 F.2d 1014, 1049] (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 824) . The difference between the California and federal approaches is really only a matter of allocation of evidentiary burdens as follows: assuming proof of injury to a competitor has been made, California allows plaintiffs to establish a prima facie case with proof of prices below average total cost. The defendant then has the burden of negating the interference of illegal intent or establishing an affirmative defense. Under federal law, the plaintiff who relies on prices below average total cost, but above average variable cost, has not created a presumption of illegal intent. To establish such a presumption under federal law, the plaintiff must show that no legitimate business reason for the below-cost price exists. It follows that a price below average total cost but above average variable cost does not always violate California law, nor is such a price a guarantee of immunity under federal law [William Inglis & Sons Baking Co. v. ITT Continental Baking Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 668 F.2d 1014, 1049-1050] (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 824-825) . Further, the federal circuit courts disagree on the appropriate cost method, and the United States Supreme Court has not made a determination that any particular formula or cost method should be used in determining whether pricing is predatory. Thus, there is no clear federal standard with which the Unfair Practices Act may be said to conflict (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 825) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fully Allocated Cost Method Described

In Western Union Fin. Servs., Inc. v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 , plaintiff sought injunctive relief against defendant, alleging that defendant sold its domestic money transfer services below cost in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 and 17044. Plaintiff introduced evidence showing that the total costs of domestic money transfers exceeded the amount that defendant was charging for such transfers. In response, defendant introduced evidence that it made a profit on its California money transfer operations as a whole (both domestic and international operations). The trial court denied plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction, and the court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff claimed that the trial court erred because it failed to treat domestic money transfers as a separate "article" or "product" within the meaning of the Unfair Practices Act and to consider only those costs and charges directly associated with such transfers. In rejecting plaintiff's contention, the court explained the fully-allocated cost rule, as discussed in Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transportation, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 [see § 235.23[3][a]-[d]]. The court noted that the purpose of the rule is to prevent a large multiproduct company from allocating costs disproportionately among its products and then reducing its prices for an item manufactured by a small single-product competitor in order to drive that competitor out of business (20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 1537) . The court noted that no such potential exists in this case because both companies are large multiproduct companies, and there was no evidence that the defendant attempted to shift costs from its money transfer business to any other products or services. The court saw no reason why plaintiff should be permitted to foist ts own accounting procedures on its competitors and require them to separately account for costs of domestic and international money transfers (20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 1537-1538) . The court concluded that defendant's classification of all money transfers as one product was permissible and that defendant was not required to allocate costs according to some artificial subproduct standard dictated by its competitor (20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 1538) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.24

§ 235.24 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]--Service Furnished by Publicly Owned Public Utility [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR SALES BELOW COST BECAUSE THE SERVICE IS FURNISHED BY A PUBLICLY OWNED PUBLIC UTILITY, AND THE COMPLAINT DOES NOT ALLEGE THAT DEFENDANT'S BUSINESS ACTIVITY IS OUTSIDE THE STATUTORY EXEMPTION.

A. Nonapplicability to Publicly Owned Public Utility. Nothing in the Unfair Practices Act applies to any service, article, or product sold or furnished by a publicly owned public utility and on which the rates would have been established under the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission of California if the service, article, or product had been sold or furnished by a public utility corporation, or installation and repair services rendered in connection with any services, articles, or products (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2)).

B. Failure to Allege Activity Outside Exemption. Allegations in a complaint concerning unfair competition do not state a cause of action against a public entity when they fail to show that defendant's business activity is outside the exemption contained in section 17024 of the Business and Professions Code (Hladek v. City of Merced (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591, 138 Cal. Rptr. 194).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for sales below cost pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, when the complaint is against a public entity and fails to allege that defendant's business activity is outside the exemption of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2) [see Hladek v. City of Merced (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591, 138 Cal. Rptr. 194] . They may be combined, if appropriate, with other specific grounds for opposition in §§ 235.25 and 235.26. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.22.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Activity Outside Exemption

In Hladek v. City of Merced (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 138 Cal. Rptr. 194 , owners of a taxi service brought an action against a city to seek damages for inverse condemnation and unfair competition under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000-17101). Plaintiffs alleged that they operated a "dial-a-bus, dial-a-ride" service in defendant city for several years, and that defendant then commenced operating a "dial-a-ride" transportation service in direct competition with plaintiffs, and at a loss, forcing plaintiffs to close their business. The trial court sustained a general demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with respect to the cause of action for unfair competition, and remanded the matter with directions to the trial court to give plaintiffs leave to amend their complaint (69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591-592) . Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2) states that nothing in the Act applies to any service sold or furnished by a publicly owned public utility and on which the rates would have been established under the jurisdiction of the California Public Utilities Commission if the service had been sold or furnished by a public utility corporation (69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 589-590) . Defendant's transportation system appears to be a publicly owned public utility. Consequently, the pivotal issue is whether the Public Utilities Commission would have the jurisdiction to establish the rates for the service if it had been sold or furnished by a privately owned public utility. Plaintiffs failed to state a cause of action because they failed to allege that defendant's conduct is outside the exemption of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024(2), pursuant to relevant provisions in the California Constitution and Public Utilities Code (69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 590-591) . However, it is an abuse of discretion fora trial court to sustain a general demurrer without leave to amend if there is any reasonable possibility that the defect can be cured by amendment. Therefore, plaintiffs should be allowed to amend their complaint to attempt to state a cause of action against defendant for unfair competition (69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 591) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.25

§ 235.25 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043]--Failure to Allege Purpose Was to Injure Competitors or Destroy Competition

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR SALES BELOW COST BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT DEFENDANT'S PURPOSE WAS TO INJURE COMPETITORS OR TO DESTROY COMPETITION.

Wrongful Purpose Required. In order to violate Business and Professions Code Section 17043, a defendant must have acted purposely (that is, with a desire to injure a competitor or destroy competition), and it is not enough that the defendant may have acted with knowledge that competitors may be injured by its actions in selling below cost (Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 174-175, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for sales below cost pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, when the complaint fails to allege defendant's purpose was to injure competitors or destroy competition. They may be combined, if appropriate, with other specific grounds for opposition in §§ 235.24 and 235.26. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.22.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565,Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Allegation of Purpose Required

In Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , plaintiffs were cellular telephone retailers that brought suit against a company that sold cellular telephones below cost in order to increase the number of subscribers to its cellular telephone services, and thus, to increase its overall profits. At the time relevant to the lawsuit, defendant shared a government-protected "duopoly" status with one other regional provider of cellular telephone service. Plaintiffs alleged that, because they were not allowed to also provide cellular telephone services, they could not compete fairly with defendant's strategy of selling telephones below cost and recovering the losses through increased profits on sales of its services. Plaintiffs alleged causes of action under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) as well as under the unfair competition law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.). The action under the Unfair Practices Act alleged violations of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 for unlawfully engaging in below-cost sales and violations of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044 for use of loss leaders. After plaintiffs presented their case before the court, and before defendants offered their defense, the trial court entered judgment for defendant. While the court found that defendant did engage in below-cost sales and used loss leaders, and that these actions harmed plaintiffs, the court also found that defendant did not intend to harm plaintiffs, but only to compete with its duopoly competitor for cellular telephone services. Thus, the trial court ruled that defendant lacked the requisite intent to injure plaintiffs necessary to prove a violation of the Unfair Practices Act. The trial court also ruled that the action brought under the unfair competition law necessarily failed as well. Plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal reversed as to the cause of action brought under the unfair competition law, finding that defendant's conduct may have violated that statute even if a violation of the Unfair Practices Act was not shown, but otherwise affirmed. Both parties appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the court of appeal. In considering the defendant's potential liability under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, the Supreme Court noted that the language of the statute provides for liability only when the below-cost sales are made "for the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition." Plaintiffs argued that this language did not mandate that they demonstrate that defendant desired to injure them, but merely that defendant believed or knew that harm was substantially certain to result or that the manifest probability of harm was great. The Court noted that earlier court opinions often used the more general term "intent," or simply repeated the statutory phrasing, without defining the required mental state. After analyzing distinctions between the terms "purpose," "intent," and "knowledge" as used in the Model Penal Code and the Restatement of Torts, the Supreme Court concluded that the statutory use of the term "purpose" had a precise meaning that could not be equated with the more expansive terms "intent" or "knowledge." Thus, the Court held that in order to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, a defendant must have acted with the desire of injuring competitors or destroying competition. Since plaintiffs did not contend that defendant acted with that desire, judgment for the defendant on that cause of action was proper (20 Cal. 4th 163, 172-175) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Allegation of Purpose Required

The factual and procedural background of Western Union Fin. Servs., Inc. v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 , is discussed in § 235.23[4][a]. In affirming the denial of plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction, the court also rejected plaintiff's contention that the trial court erred in failing to find that defendant intended to injure plaintiff or to destroy competition. The court noted that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 and 17044 each require an intent to injure competitors or destroy competition (20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 1539-1540 & n.10). The court observed that under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 [see § 235.30], proof of one or more acts of selling or giving away any article or product below cost or at discriminatory prices, together with proof of the injurious effect of those acts, is presumptive evidence of the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition. However, the court held, even assuming that defendant had sold a product below cost and that plaintiff had proved damages, the obvious and only effect of the presumption created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 was to require defendant to go forward with proof to negate the presumption of wrongful intent. The court ruled that defendant had done so by presenting evidence of its good faith intent to use its promotional pricing of domestic money transfer services to increase and maintain its customer base. The court concluded that once the presumption is rebutted, the burden shifts back to the plaintiff to offer actual proof of injurious intent and that plaintiff's evidence did not meet this burden (20 Cal. App. 4th 1530, 1540) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.26

§ 235.26 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Sales Below Cost [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043] and Use of Loss Leaders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]--Failure to Allege Facts Showing Sale Below Cost

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR SALES BELOW COST BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING A SALE BELOW COST.

Sale Below Cost Required. The omission of allegations that a sale below cost occurred prevents a complaint from stating a cause of action under either section 17043 or 17044 of the Business and Professions Code (Independent Journal Newspapers v. United W. Newspapers, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 587, 93 Cal. Rptr. 299).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for sales below cost pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043, when the complaint fails to allege facts showing a sale below cost [see Independent Journal Newspapers v. United W. Newspapers, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 587, 93 Cal. Rptr. 299] . They may be combined, if appropriate, with other specific grounds for opposition in §§ 235.24, 235.25, and 235.28. They may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contentions supported by the points and authorities in §§ 235.22 and 235.27.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sale Below Cost Required

In Independent Journal Newspapers v. United W. Newspapers, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 93 Cal. Rptr. 299 , one newspaper corporation brought an action against another for injunctive and monetary relief for alleged violations of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 (sales below cost) and 17044 (prohibiting loss leaders). Plaintiff and defendants were in direct competition with each other in the publishing of weekly throwaways, and the sale of advertising for these publications. Plaintiff alleged that defendants offered free advertising in their weekly throwaways to those who purchase classified advertising in their daily newspaper. Plaintiff pleaded on information and belief that defendant sold advertising space below cost with the intent of injuring competitors and destroying competition. Defendants filed a special demurrer for uncertainty as to both causes of action. The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend, and plaintiff failed to amend within the time specified. The trial court dismissed the complaint for failure to amend, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that in order to have a violation of either Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 or Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, a sale below cost must occur (15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 587) . Plaintiff's conclusion regarding defendant's sale below cost is meaningless unless its factual basis lies in specific facts (15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 586) . Plaintiff pleaded no facts tending to show a sale of classified advertising space by defendants in their weekly newspapers, thereby preventing it from stating a cause of action under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101) (15 Cal. App. 3d 583, 587) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.27

§ 235.27 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR UNLAWFUL USE OF A LOSS LEADER BECAUSE IT ALLEGES THE SALE OR USE OF AN ARTICLE OR PRODUCT AS A LOSS LEADER AS DEFINED UNDER SECTION 17030 OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE.

A. Loss Leader Unlawful. It is unlawful for any person engaged in business within California to sell or use any article or product as a loss leader as defined under section 17030 of the Business and Professions Code (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044).

B. Loss Leader Defined. Loss Leader means any article or product sold at less than cost: (1) if the purpose is to induce, promote, or encourage the purchase of other merchandise; (2) if the effect is a tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers; or (3) if the effect is to divert trade from or otherwise injure competitors (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17030).

C. Article or Product Defined. [See § 235.20[1], Paragraph C.].

[Optional] D. Use of Loss Leader May Include Sale of Service or Output of Trade. The sale or use of an article or product as a loss leader prohibited under Business and Professions Code sections 17030 and 17044 includes the sale or use of a service or output of trade (Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 107, 35 Cal. Rptr. 693).

[Optional] D. Expansive Definition of Sale. The broad definition of "article or product" requires a corresponding expansion of the word "sell" within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Sections 17043 and 17044 (Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 573, 80 Cal. Rptr. 321).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for sale or use of a loss leader [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044, 17070]. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should note that, although not expressly specified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, wrongful intent is a necessary allegation in an action for unlawful use of a loss leader [see Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 513, 516-517, 98 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; see also § 235.28[3][a]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 235.26 and 235.28 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Use of Loss Leader May Include Sale of Service or Output of Trade

In Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 35 Cal. Rptr. 693 , the owner and operator of a barber shop brought an action against a barbers' trade union to seek injunctive relief based on defendant's use and sale of loss leaders. Members of defendant union approached potential customers of plaintiff outside plaintiff's shop and handed them paper redeemable at union shops for cash discounts. With the discount, a union shop undersold not only plaintiff, but also the minimum price set by the state board, as well as the minimum price agreed on by proprietor union members in that area. Plaintiff alleged that, as a result of defendant's activities, many of plaintiff's prospective customers are diverted to union shops for the purpose of injuring plaintiff as a competitor and destroying competition between him and the proprietor union members. The trial court overruled defendant's demurrer to the complaint, and granted a preliminary injunction enjoining defendant union from inducing any prospective customers ofplaintiff to patronize another barber shop by promise of cash discounts or rebates. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that defendant's activities constituted use or sale of a loss leader within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030 and 17044, because the activity of selling a haircut involves a service or output of a service trade. The court noted that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044 prohibits any person from selling or using any article or product as a loss leader. The court rejected defendant's contention that only a commodity or product can be used as a loss leader, and that the labor of cutting one's hair is not a commodity. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17024, which defines an article or product, concerns not the actual work of the barber in cutting the hair, but rather the purchase and sale of a haircut, which clearly amounts to a service or output of a service trade (223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 107) . Since defendant's plan, admittedly employed as a competitive method, has injured plaintiff as a competitor and destroyed competition, the haircut that is undersold at a competitor union barber shop is a loss leader (223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 107-108) .

[b] Expansive Definition of Sale

In Los Angeles Check Sellers Ass'n v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 80 Cal. Rptr. 321 , a check sellers' trade association brought an action against a bank to obtain injunctive and related relief for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 (sales below cost) and 17044 (sale or use of loss leaders). Plaintiffs' members are licensed to sell and cash checks and money orders to the public through agents who are usually independent businesses such as retail stores. The public pays fees depending on the size of the check. The selling agent retains a portion of the fee as a commission, the amount of which is negotiated, and remits the remainder to the seller. Defendant began selling money orders through agents in the same geographical area as that served by plaintiffs, at the same price as plaintiff. However, defendant retained a smaller amount than plaintiffs' sellers, thereby allowing its sales agents to retain a larger commission than that of plaintiffs' agents. Plaintiffs allege that defendant's percentage is less than its cost of doing business, that defendant acted without regard whether it made a profit, for the purpose of attracting banking customers. Some of plaintiff's former customers allegedly patronize defendant in order to yield a greater commission. The trial court entered a judgment of dismissal after sustaining defendant's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint alleged a cause of action under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101) (275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 574) . The court rejected defendant's contention that its conduct does not come within the Act because it does not "sell" anything. The statute is designed to cover a great variety of transactions other than the conventional sale of real or personal property. The broad definition of "article or product" compels a corresponding expansion of the word "sell" as used in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 and 17044. A money order is a "thing of value," and the issuer renders a service by paying the face value to the holder of the instrument on presentation. According to the legislature's liberal interpretation of the statute, defendant is engaged in selling a product within the meaning of the Act (275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 573) . The court also addressed defendant's assertion that both plaintiffs and defendant sell money orders at the same price. The actions of plaintiffs' members are irrelevant. The commission earned by defendant's sales agents is part of defendant's cost. If the amount that defendant allegedly nets after paying the sales commission is too small, then the sale is below cost (275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 574) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.28

§ 235.28 Opposing Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044]--Failure to Allege Purpose Was to Injure Competitors or Destroy Competition

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR UNLAWFUL USE OF A LOSS LEADER BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT DEFENDANT'S PURPOSE WAS TO INJURE COMPETITORS OR TO DESTROY COMPETITION.

Wrongful Purpose Required. In order to violate Business and Professions Code Section 17044, defendant's use of a loss leader must have been done purposely, that is, with a desire to injure a competitor or destroy competition (Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 178, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for unlawful use of a loss leader pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, when the complaint fails to allege defendant's purpose was to injure competitors or destroy competition. They may be combined, if appropriate, with other specific grounds for opposition in § 235.26. They should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.27.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Wrongful Purpose Required

The facts and procedural background of Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , are discussed in § 235.25[3][a]. In upholding the court of appeal's conclusion that the trial court was correct in entering judgment for the defendant on the action brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044, the Supreme Court noted that, while the language of the statute does not suggest that a particular mental state is required in order to find a violation, California courts had since 1952 interpreted the statute as requiring the same mental state as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043. The failure of the legislature to amend the statute to overrule those court holdings when it had the opportunities to do so, along with the longevity and unanimity of the holdings, convinced the Court that it was the responsibility of the legislature to amend the established rule if it so desired. Thus, since Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 required that a defendant act with the purpose of injuring competitors or destroying competition, which required that the defendant have acted with the desire to injure competitors or destroy competition [see § 235.25[3][a]], that same purpose or desire was necessary to constitute an illegal use of a loss leader under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17044 (20 Cal. 4th 163, 178) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.29

§ 235.29 Supporting Contention That Complaint States Cause of Action for Secret Payment or Allowance of Rebate, Refund, Commission, or Unearned Discount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR VIOLATION OF THE UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT BECAUSE IT ALLEGES USE OF AN UNEARNED DISCOUNT BY A SELLER IN A MANNER THAT INJURED COMPETITION.

A. Secret Payments or Discounts Which Tend to Destroy Competition Unlawful. The secret payment or allowance of rebates, refunds, commissions, or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or secretly extending to certain purchasers special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers purchasing upon like terms and conditions, to the injury of a competitor and where such payment or allowance tends to destroy competition, is unlawful (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045).

[Optional] B. Protection Not Restricted to Competitors of Person Allowing an Unearned Discount. The prohibition of secret rebates under Business and Professions Code Section 17045 is not restricted to competitors of the person allowing an unearned discount (the "primary" line of commerce), but applies as well to competitors of the person receiving it (the "secondary" line of commerce) (ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1254, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112).

[Optional] C. Only Special Services or Privileges Not Extended to All Purchasers Require Proof That Purchase Was on Like Terms and Conditions. It is not necessary to purchase "on like terms and conditions" in order to state a claim under Business and Professions Code Section 17045 that a competitor received a secret rebate or unearned discount, because that phrase only attaches to the phrase "special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers" (Eddins v. Sumner Redstone (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 290, 332, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a complaint states a cause of action for use of an unearned discount by a seller [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which this issue is raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence of a secret payment, rebate, refund, commission, or unearned discount, and should argue that this payment or allowance resulted in injury of a competitor or tended to destroy competition [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Protection Not Restricted to Competitors of Person Allowing an Unearned Discount

In ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112 , plaintiff, a wholesale distributor, brought a cause of action for violation of the Unfair Practices Act against a manufacturer. Plaintiff alleged that defendant gave secret unearned discounts to other distributors, and that this discount tended to destroy competition among wholesalers in that favored wholesalers were able to offer retailers lower prices than those offered by disfavored wholesalers. Plaintiff contended that this practice violated the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 prohibition against paying secret rebates not extended to all purchasers, to the injury of a competitor, where the payment tends to destroy competition. Defendant contended that the class of "competitors" protected under the statute is restricted to competitors of the person allowing an unearned discount (the "primary" line of commerce) as opposed to competitors of the person receiving the discount (the "secondary" line of commerce). The trial court granted defendant's demurrer, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that for purposes of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 the term "competition" includes competition among retailers, wholesalers, or producers (14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1262) . The court initially noted that the statutory language has no express restriction to the level of competition to be protected, and the court did not find an implied restriction by the absence of a specific reference (14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1255) . The court then reviewed the statutory purposes and historical background of the statute, and concluded that it was intended primarily to protect against competitive injury in the secondary line of commerce, which was just the injury alleged by the plaintiff (14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1262) .

[b] Only Special Services or Privileges Not Extended to All Purchasers Require Proof That Purchase Was on Like Terms and Conditions

In Eddins v. Sumner Redstone (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 290, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863 , the plaintiffs were independent video retailers who brought suit against a large chain-store competitor, its parent company and controlling shareholder, and the home-video affiliates of five major movie studios, based on an alleged conspiracy between the defendants to deny plaintiffs the same favorable terms and conditions that the studios provided to the large chain store. The suit alleged violations of the Cartwright Act, the Unfair Practices Act, and the California unfair competition statute. All of the causes of action were based on output revenue-sharing agreements entered into between each studio and the chain store retailer under which the retailer purchased video cassettes of the studio's movies for rental to consumers. Under the agreements, the retailer purchased videotapes at a much lower initial price than regularly charged to retailers, in exchange for providing to the studios a portion of the rental revenues and a long-term commitment to purchase the entire output of movies from each studio. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants conspired with each other to deny the same favorable terms of purchase to smaller independent retailers such as themselves, in violation of the Cartwright Act, and that the agreements constituted a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 because by failing to offer comparable terms to other distributors, the studios effectively provided secret unearned discounts to the chain-store retailer. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants on all causes of action. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment on the cause of action alleging a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045. As to that cause of action, the court of appeal held that the trial court erred in requiring that the plaintiffs show that they purchased "on like terms and conditions" in order to state a claim that each studio had given a secret, unearned discount to the chain store. The court concluded that if a purchaser has no choice but to purchase on fundamentally different terms and conditions, because the terms given to the favored purchaser are neither available to nor known by the disfavored purchaser, then it is difficult not to conclude that some form of price discrimination has occurred. If a supplier were free to give secret rebates or unearned discounts to select purchasers, and this was unknown to those purchasing under another, less favorable plan, the purpose behind the prohibition on price discrimination would be undermined. Therefore, purchasers, such as the plaintiffs, that bring an action based on the prohibition against secret rebates or unearned discounts need not show that they were purchasing "on like terms and conditions," because the very nature of their claim is that they were not given the opportunity to purchase on like terms and conditions. The court concluded that the phrase "on like terms and conditions" in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 only attaches to the phrase "special services or privileges not extended to all purchasers," and that this conclusion was in accord with the only other court opinion to directly address the issue, with the plain language of the statute, and with the legislative directive that the Unfair Practices Act must be liberally construed (134 Cal. App. 4th 290, 332-335) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Protection Not Restricted to Competitors of Person Allowing an Unearned Discount

The factual and procedural background of Eddins v. Sumner Redstone (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 290, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 863 , is discussed in § 235.29[3][b] . Several of the movie studios also argued that each one entered into the revenue-sharing agreements with the retailer chain in order to meet the competition of the other studios, and therefore their conduct tended to preserve rather than destroy competition. The studios argued that without a showing that their conduct tended to harm competition, no violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 could be proved. The court of appeal disagreed. The court noted that although a competitor in a "primary" line of commerce may have taken a business action to remain competitive, such as enter into a revenue-sharing agreement or participate in a secret rebate or discount, this is not necessarily a defense to an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045. This so-called "meeting the competition" defense does not establish as a matter of law that the conduct does not tend to destroy competition in a "secondary" line of commerce, and harm to this type of competition would be sufficient to overcome the defense. In this particular case, the court of appeal held that the trial court erred by not considering whether the revenue-sharing agreements tended to destroy competition in a secondary line of commerce. Specifically, the trial court should have considered the harm to competition between the large video rental retailer and the smaller, independently owned rental outlets that were not doing business with the studios under the same revenue-sharing agreements (134 Cal. App. 4th 290, 338-340) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.30

§ 235.30 Supporting Contention That Requisite Intent Exists for Violation of Unfair Practices Act--Presumptive Evidence of Intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THERE IS PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE OF DEFENDANT'S INTENT TO INJURE COMPETITORS OR DESTROY COMPETITION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS PROVED (1) ONE OR MORE ACTS OF SELLING OR GIVING AWAY AN ARTICLE OR PRODUCT BELOW COST OR AT DISCRIMINATORY PRICES AND (2) THE INJURIOUS EFFECT OF THOSE ACTS.

Presumptive Evidence of Intent. In all actions under the Unfair Practices Act, proof of one or more acts of selling or giving away any article or product below cost or at discriminatory prices, together with proof of the injurious effect of those acts, is presumptive evidence of the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the requisite intent, in an action under the Unfair Practices Act, has been shown by proof of facts giving rise to a presumption of intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071]. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, the contention might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a motion of summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to motions for summary judgment generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 235.31 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.31

§ 235.31 Opposing Contention That Requisite Intent Exists for Violation of Unfair Practices Act--No Presumption of Intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071] Absent Proof of Injurious Effect of Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THERE IS NO PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE OF DEFENDANT'S ALLEGED INTENT TO INJURE COMPETITORS OR DESTROY COMPETITION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO PROVE ANY INJURIOUS EFFECT OF DEFENDANT'S ACTS.

No Presumptive Evidence of Intent Absent Proof of Injurious Effect. If there is insufficient evidence to find that one's conduct diverted trade from or otherwise injured defendant's competitors generally, or plaintiff in particular, no presumption of the purpose or intent to injure competitors or destroy competition arises pursuant to section 17071 of the Business and Professions Code (Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 513, 517, 98 Cal. Rptr. 543).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that the requisite intent, in an action under the Unfair Practices Act, has been shown by proof of facts giving rise to a presumption of intent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071]. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, the contention might be combined with general points and authorities opposing a motion of summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.30.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to motions for summary judgment generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Presumptive Evidence of Intent Absent Proof of Injurious Effect

The facts and procedural background of Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Mkts., Inc. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 513, 98 Cal. Rptr. 543 , are discussed in § 235.28[3][a]. In an action under the Unfair Practices Act involving use of a loss leader, the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the defendant after holding that there was insufficient evidence to find that defendants' conduct diverted trade from or otherwise injured their competitors generally or plaintiff in particular. Consequently, the presumption of evidence of intent under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17071 did not apply because plaintiff failed to prove one or more sales of an article or product below cost, together with the injurious effect of that practice (21 Cal. App. 3d 513, 517) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.32

§ 235.32 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Is Available to Enjoin Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17078]--Unclean Hands Doctrine Inapplicable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE DOCTRINE OF UNCLEAN HANDS IS INAPPLICABLE TO PREVENT THE ISSUANCE OF _____ [A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER or A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION or AN INJUNCTION] TO ENJOIN ACTS THAT ARE PROHIBITED BY THE UNFAIR PRACTICES ACT.

A. Action for Injunctive Relief Authorized. Any person or trade association may bring an action to enjoin and restrain any violation of this chapter and, in addition, thereto, for the recovery of damages (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17070).

B. Issuance of Injunction. It if appears to the court on any application for a temporary restraining order, or on the hearing of any order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued, or on the hearing on any motion for a preliminary injunction, or if the court shall find, in any action, that any defendant therein is violating, or has violated, the Unfair Practices Act, then the court shall enjoin the defendant from doing all acts that are prohibited by the section or sections violated (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17078).

C. Unclean Hands Doctrine Inapplicable. The unclean hands doctrine, which states that equity will not aid one party or another to a transaction that is illegal or contrary to public policy if the parties are equally at fault, does not apply to prevent the granting of the preliminary injunction based on violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Kofsky v. Smart & Final Iris Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 530, 531, 281 P.2d 5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that the equitable doctrine of unclean hands does not apply in an action under the Unfair Practices Act to prevent the issuance of injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17078 [see Kofsky v. Smart & Final Iris Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 530, 531, 281 P.2d 5] . They may be combined, in an appropriate case, with additional points and authorities supporting the issuance of injunctive relief in § 235.33. They may be also combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may be combined with general points and authorities supporting an application for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to injunctive relief generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to issuance of injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unclean Hands Doctrine Inapplicable

Kofsky v. Smart & Final Iris Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 530, 281 P.2d 5 , was an action between competitors in the wholesale tobacco business, in which the trial court entered an order granting a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from violating Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 (sales below cost). Defendant appealed, contending that the unclean hands doctrine, which states that equity will not aid one party or another to a transaction that is illegal or contrary to public policy if the parties are equally at fault, applies to prevent the granting of the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the unclean hands doctrine does not apply to prevent the granting of a preliminary injunction based on violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101). The purpose of the Act is to prevent activities that the legislature declares to be against the public interest. The Act's provisions should be liberally construed. Pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17078, plaintiff was entitled to a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from violating the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 pending the trial of the action (131 Cal. App. 2d 530, 531) . The unclean hands doctrine has no application when the failure to restrain an act because the parties are in pari delicto would result in permitting an act declared by statute to be void or against public policy. Therefore, since in the instant case the acts that defendant was restrained from doing were against public policy, the rule is applicable, and theissue whether plaintiff had unclean hands is irrelevant (131 Cal. App. 2d 530, 532) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.33

§ 235.33 Supporting Contention That Injunctive Relief Is Available to Enjoin Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17070, 17078]--Preliminary Injunction Is Available to Enjoin Sale or Use of Loss Leader [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN THE SALE OR USE OF ANY ARTICLE OR PRODUCT AS A LOSS LEADER.

A. Action for Injunctive Relief Authorized. [See § 235.32[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Issuance of Injunction. [See § 235.32[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Loss Leader Unlawful. [See § 235.27[1], Paragraph A.]

D. Loss Leader Defined. [See § 235.27[1], Paragraph B.]

E. Injunction Against Loss Leader. A preliminary injunction may be granted to restrain the sale or use of an article or product as a loss leader (Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 107-108, 35 Cal. Rptr. 693).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a preliminary injunction should be issued to restrain the sale or use of any article or product as a loss leader [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17030, 17044, 17070, 17078; Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union (1963) 223 Cal.

App. 2d 101, 107-108, 35 Cal. Rptr. 693] . They may be combined, in an appropriate case, with additional points and authorities supporting the issuance of injunctive relief in § 235.32. They may be also combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may be combined with general points and authorities supporting an application for a preliminary injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damagesbased on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to injunctive relief generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to issuance of injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Against Loss Leader

The facts and procedural background of Garner v. Journeyman Barbers', Hairdressers', Cosmetologists' & Proprietors' Int'l Union (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 35 Cal. Rptr. 693 , are discussed in § 235.27[3][a]. The court of appeal held that an article or product includes a service or output of a service trade, which encompasses the sale of a haircut. The court also held that defendant's activity, under the guise of peaceful picketing, is carried on by unlawful means, for which plaintiff is entitled to a preliminary injunction, without bond, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17078 (223 Cal. App. 2d 101, 108) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.34

§ 235.34 Supporting Contention That Treble Damages May Be Recovered for Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO TREBLE DAMAGES BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS PROVED ACTUAL DAMAGES, AND PLAINTIFF NEED NOT PROVE MALICE OR ANY OTHER QUALIFYING CONDITION ON THE PART OF DEFENDANT.

A. Action for Damages Authorized. Any person or trade association may bring an action to enjoin and restrain any violation of this chapter and, in addition, thereto, for the recovery of damages (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17070).

B. Recovery of Treble Damages. In any action under the Unfair Practices Act, in addition to injunctive relief, any plaintiff in any action shall be entitled to recover three times the amount of the actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff, as well as three times the actual damages, if any, sustained by any person who has assigned to the plaintiff his claim for damages resulting from a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082).

C. No Proof of Malice or Other Qualifying Condition Required. On plaintiff's proof of actual damages in an action under the Unfair Practices Act, Section 17082 of the Business and Professions Code requires the imposition of treble damages without regard to malice or any other judicially imposed qualifying condition (Uneedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 942, 150 Cal. Rptr. 596).

[Optional] D. Motion for New Trial Not Condition Precedent to Appeal. Failure to move for a new trial does not preclude a party from raising on appeal the issue of entitlement to treble damages under Section 17082 of the Business and Professions Code (Uneedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 943, 150 Cal. Rptr. 596).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that plaintiff is entitled to treble damages after proving actual damages in an action brought under the Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082]. They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may be combined with generalpoints and authorities supporting a motion for summary judgment. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and a form of complaint for injunctive relief and treble damages based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17000-17101), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of points and authorities relating to motions for summary judgment generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Proof of Malice or Other Qualifying Condition Required

Uneedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 150 Cal. Rptr. 596 , was an action brought by one corporation against another to seek damages and injunctive relief for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17043 (sales below cost). After nonjury trial, the court awarded plaintiff judgment for general damages and attorney's fees. The court denied plaintiff's request for treble damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082, on the ground that defendant did not act with malice or oppression toward plaintiff, and the acts were not of such magnitude to warrant imposition of treble damages. Plaintiff appealed from the court's ruling denying treble damages.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082 requires treble damages in actions brought pursuant to the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) without regard to malice or any other judicially imposed qualifying condition (86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 941-942) . The court rejected defendant's contention that proof of actual damages qualifies a plaintiff for treble damages but does not automatically allow their award. Rather, a plaintiff qualifies for the right to mandatory treble damages after proving actual damages (86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 943) .

[b] Motion for New Trial Not Condition Precedent to Appeal

The facts and procedural background of Uneedus v. California Shoppers, Inc. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 150 Cal. Rptr. 596 , are discussed in § 235.34[3][a]. The court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082 requires treble damages in actions brought pursuant to the Unfair Practices Act without regard to malice or any other judicially imposed qualifying condition. The court noted that a motion for new trial is generally a condition precedent to raising the issue of inadequacy of damages on appeal. However, the general rule involves evaluation of the evidence, and does not apply to issues involving the interpretation of a statute (86 Cal. App. 3d 932, 943) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.35

§ 235.35 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Elect Punitive Damages [Civ. Code § 3294] or Treble Damages for Violation of Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082]--Treble Damages as Mandatory When No Other Remedy Was Pursued

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS ONLY ENTITLED TO TREBLED DAMAGES AND MAY NOT ELECT PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

A. Recovery of Treble Damages. [See § 235.34[1], Paragraph B.]

B. No Election When Only One Cause of Action Was Pursued. A plaintiff who has pursued a single cause of action under the Unfair Practices Act and has established a malicious or oppressive violation of that Act is not entitled to elect whether to take punitive damages under Section 3294 of the Civil Code or treble damages under Section 17082 of the Business and Professions Code, but is only entitled to treble damages because both penalties serve the same purpose and Section 17082 is mandatory (Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826-827, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted to oppose the contention that a successful plaintiff who has pursued but one cause of action may elect between punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294] and trebled damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should refer to the pleadings and the record to establish that no common law tort cause of action was pursued by plaintiff, because this authority would be inapplicable in that case [see Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal.

App. 3d 408, 419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Election When Only One Cause of Action Was Pursued

The facts and procedural background of Turnbull & Turnbull v. ARA Transp., Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 268 Cal. Rptr. 856 , are discussed in § 235.23[3][a]. Defendant challenged plaintiff's right to elect compensatory and punitive damages instead of treble damages. The court of appeal agreed. The court said that ordinarily the fact that a statutory penalty is imposed for a wrongful act does not preclude recovery of punitive damages in a tort action when the necessary malice or oppression is shown. If the purpose of the statutory penalty is the same as that of punitive damages, however, the plaintiff cannot obtain double recovery and must elect to have judgment entered in an amount that reflects either the statutory trebling or the compensatory and punitive damages (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826) . An exception to this rule is that when a new right, not existing at common law, is created by statute and the statutory remedy for infringement of that right is provided, that remedy is exclusive of all others unless it is inadequate (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 826-827) . The treble damages of provision of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082 is punitive and similar in purpose to Civ. Code § 3294; thus, plaintiff was not entitled to both. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17082 is mandatory, and plaintiff was relying solely on that statutory remedy. The court of appeal distinguished Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392 , which upheld a plaintiff's right to an election, on the ground that plaintiff in Marshall was pursuing two causes of action, one for slander and one authorized by Lab. Code §§ 1050, 1054. In this case, the plaintiff had not alleged or pursued any alternative theory of liability, and had not pursued a common law tort cause of action that existed prior to the enactment of the Unfair Practices Act. Thus, plaintiff was limited to recovery of treble damages (219 Cal. App. 3d 811, 827) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
A. Actions Based on Unfair Practices Act

23-235 California Points & Authorities §§ 235.36-235.49

[Reserved]

§§ 235.36[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.50

§ 235.50 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY OBTAIN RELIEF UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17203, FOR ANY ACT OR PRACTICE BY DEFENDANT THAT CONSTITUTES UNFAIR COMPETITION AS DEFINED UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. Any person who engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage in unfair competition may be enjoined in any court of competent jurisdiction. The court may make such orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, as may be necessary to prevent the use by any person of any practice that constitutes unfair competition, as defined in Chapter 5 of Part II, Division 7 (commencing with Section 17200) of the Business and Professions Code, or as may be necessary to restore to any person in interest any money or property, real or personal, that may have been acquired by means of the unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203).

B. Statutory Unfair Competition Defined. As used in Chapter 5 of Part II, Division 7 (commencing with Section 17200), of the Business and Professions Code, unfair competition shall mean and include any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice, and unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising and any act prohibited by Chapter 1 (commencing with Section 17500) of Part 3 of Division 7 of the Business and Professions Code (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200).

[Optional] C. Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Limited to Anticompetitive Business Practices. Unfair competition, as defined under Business and Professions Code Section 17200, is not limited to anticompetitive business practices, but is equally directed toward the right of the public to protection from fraud and deceit (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 209, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; Consumers Union of United States, Inc. v. Fisher Dev., Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 1439, 257 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see also Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 110-111, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 (decided under prior law)).

[EITHER]

[Optional] D. Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition. The determination of whether a particular business practice is unfair, and thus comes within the definition of unfair competition under Business and Professions Code Section 17200, necessarily involves an examination of its impact on its alleged victim, balanced against the reasons, justifications, and motives of the alleged wrongdoer. The court must weigh the utility of the defendant's conduct against the gravity of the harm to the alleged victim (Motors, Inc. v. Times Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 740, 162 Cal. Rptr. 543).

[OR]

[Optional] D. Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition. In order to show that a business has engaged in "unfair" conduct sufficient to support a cause of action for unfair competition under Business and Professions Code Section 17200, a consumer must show (1) substantial injury, (2) the injury is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition, and (3) the injury is not one that consumers themselves could reasonably have avoided (Camacho v. Automobile Club of So. California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1403, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770).

[OR, IF ACTION BROUGHT BY DIRECT COMPETITOR OF DEFENDANT]

[Optional] D. Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition. When a plaintiff claims to have suffered injury from a direct competitor's "unfair" act or practice, as that term is defined for purposes of Business and Professions Code Section 17200, conduct is "unfair" if it threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of an antitrust law because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition (Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 187, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] E. Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition. Unfair competition, within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Section 17200, includes anything that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law (People v. McKale (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 626, 634, 159 Cal. Rptr. 811, 602 P.2d 731 ; Consumers Union of United States, Inc. v. Fisher Dev., Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 1438, 257 Cal. Rptr. 151 ; see also Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 113, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 (decided under prior law)). [It is not restricted to deceptive or fraudulent conduct, but extends to any unlawful business practice (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660)].

[Optional] F. Determination of Fraudulent or Deceptive Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition. To state a cause of action for deceptive business practice constituting unfair competition within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Section 17200, it is necessary only to show that members of the public are likely to be deceived. Allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance, and damage are unnecessary (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 211, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 ; Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 451, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872). [It is not necessary to plead the exact language of every deceptive statement. It is sufficient for plaintiff to describe a scheme to mislead customers, and allege that each misrepresentation to each customer conforms to that scheme (Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 212-213, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660)].

[Optional] G. Buyer May Be Liable for Unfair Competition. Nothing in Business and Professions Code Section 17200 prohibits it from being appliedagainst a buyer (Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 449-450, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872).

[Optional] H. Personal Liability of Controlling Shareholder and Responsible Officer. When a majority stockholder and chief executive officer is responsible for ambiguously written contracts and misleading presentations of selling agents, he or she may be personally liable for violations of Business and Professions Code Section 17200 (People v. Dollar Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 119, 132, 259 Cal. Rptr. 191).

[Optional] I. Unfair Insurance Practices Act Does Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action. The Unfair Insurance Practices Act (Insurance Code Section 790 et seq.) does not supersede or displace insurance industry-related claims under the Unfair Competition Act (Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 257, 263, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 895 P.2d 56).

[Optional] J. Insurance Code Sections 12414.26 and 12414.29 Do Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action Brought Against Title Insurer. In an action brought against a title insurer, Insurance Code Sections 12414.26 and 12414.29 do not supersede or displace claims brought under the Unfair Competition Act when the claims do not involve ratemaking practices (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 43-46, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513).

[Optional] K. Restitution is Available Independent of Injunction. The availability of restitution under Business and Professions Code Section 17203 is not contingent on the issuance of an injunction (ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1271, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112).

[Optional] L. Nonresident Business May Be Liable for Unfair Competition. Nonresident as well as resident businesses can be held to account for wrongful business conduct affecting California employers and employees under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 (Application Group, Inc. v. Hunter Group, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 908, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73).

[Optional] M. Conduct Not Constituting Violation of Unfair Business Practices Act May Nonetheless Be Subject to Action Under Unfair Competition Law. Conduct that is not specifically actionable under Business and Professions Code Section 17000 et seq. may nonetheless be actionable under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq., so long as no provision of law specifically provides that the challenged conduct is lawful (Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 187-188, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527).

[Optional] N. Reliance on Specific Statements in Advertising Claim Not Required to Show Fraudulent Conduct. If an unfair competition claim is based on fraud stemming from alleged false advertising and misrepresentations made to consumers, while the plaintiff must plead and prove actual reliance to satisfy requirements for standing to bring the action, the plaintiff need not show that those misrepresentations were the sole or even decisive cause of the injury and need not necessarily plead and prove individualized reliance on specific misrepresentations or false statements when those misrepresentations and false statements were part of an extensive and long-term advertising campaign (In re Tobacco Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 328, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 ; Morgan v. AT&T Wireless Services, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 1258, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 768).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a cause of action exists for statutory unfair competition, that is, a cause of action for relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 for unfair competition as defined under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with the additional points and authorities in § 235.52. They may also be combined with the points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For further discussion of statutory unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For a form of complaint for injunctive relief and restitution based on false advertising, including a count for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender). For a form of complaint for injunctive relief based on trade name infringement, including a count for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 549, Trademarks and Tradenames (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For a form of points and authorities opposing a private plaintiff's right to recover damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, see § 235.57.

For a form of points and authorities opposing a private plaintiff's cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, see § 235.58.

For a form of points and authorities supporting a plaintiff's right to a judgment ordering restitution and/or disgorgement of profits in an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, see § 235.53.

For a form of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a complaint based on unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 and false advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500 on the ground that neither statute applies to political election campaign practices, see Ch. 14, Advertising . For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For forms of points and authoritiesrelating to issuance of injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For forms of points and authorities relating to the appointment of receivers generally, see Ch. 200, Receivers .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized

Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 authorizes a private action for unfair competition within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, and provides for injunctive relief as well as any other order or judgment, including the appointment of a receiver, that may be necessary to prevent the use or enjoyment by a person of any practice constituting unfair competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 authorizes restitution and disgorgement of profits [see § 235.53]. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206 and 17207 also provide for civil penalties recoverable by public officers.

Although a private plaintiff may not recover money damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 [see § 235.57], counsel might consider seeking damages under some other provision and injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, as was done successfully in Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872 [see § 235.50[3][e]], in view of the provision that the remedies under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208 are cumulative to all other remedies [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205].

[b] Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Limited to Anticompetitive Business Practices

In Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , several organizations and individuals brought an action against a food manufacturer, a retail store, and advertising agencies to seek damages, injunctive relief, and related remedies for violation of the unfair competition law (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208), fraud, and deceptive advertising. In their cause of action for unfair competition, plaintiffs alleged that defendants engaged in a sophisticated advertising and marketing program designed to induce children to consume products that, although promoted and labeled as cereals, are in fact only sugar products. Plaintiffs listed many representations allegedly made in television commercials aimed at children. Plaintiffs asserted that defendants concealed material facts (for example, the sugar content of the products) and made affirmative misrepresentations, rendering the advertisements misleading and deceptive. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend, and dismissed the complaint, on grounds that the allegations did not identify with specificity the representations made or the particular media used. Plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the matter for further proceedings. The Court concluded that, although the common law tort of unfair business competition required a competitive injury, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is not confined to anticompetitive business practice, but is equally directed toward the right of the public to protection from fraud and deceit (35 Cal. 3d 197, 209) . Further, the proscription of unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is not restricted to deceptive or fraudulent conduct, but rather extends to any unlawful business practice (35 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210) . The Legislature apparently intended to permit courts to enjoin ongoing wrongful business conduct in whatever context the activity might occur (35 Cal. 3d 197, 210) . To state a cause of action under the consumer protection statutes for injunctive relief, it is necessary only to show that members of the public are likely to be deceived. Allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance, and damage are unnecessary. The court may also order restitution without individualized proof of deception, reliance, and injury if it determines that the remedy is necessary to prevent the use of the unfair practice (35 Cal. 3d 197, 211) . Therefore, a plaintiff need not plead the exact language of every deceptive statement. It is sufficient for plaintiff to describe as scheme to mislead customers, and allege that each misrepresentation to each customer conforms to that scheme (35 Cal. 3d 197, 212-213) . Since there is no doubt as to what advertisements or deceptive practices are at issue, the allegations are sufficient to notify the defendants of the claim made against them, and to frame the issues for litigation (35 Cal. 3d 197, 213) .

Consumers Union of United States, Inc. v. Fisher Dev., Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 257 Cal. Rptr. 151 . The court of appeal held that housing discrimination constituted unfair competition (208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 1438-1441) .

In Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 , retail store customers brought an action against a collection agency to seek injunctive and related relief on several theories of liability, including unfair competition under former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208]. Plaintiffs alleged that large retail establishments assigned their customers' obligations to defendant for collection. Defendant allegedly filed actions in improper counties, pursuant to statutorily inadequate complaints, in order to increase its number of default judgments. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, and entered a judgment dismissing the action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed with respect to the cause of action seeking injunctive relief under statutory unfair competition. Plaintiffs' allegations, if proved, would show that defendant is engaged in a mass abuse of process.

Moreover, defendant's behavior, when utilized as a general practice by a collection agency whose primary business is litigation, additionally constitutes anunlawful business practice. Therefore, the conduct may be enjoined under former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208] (7 Cal. 3d 94, 103) . The Court rejected defendant's contention that the statute's prohibition is confined to practices involving competitive injury, that is, injury to a competitor, and therefore does not apply to an injury to a consumer. Although under common law competitive injury was an element of unfair competition, the legislature broadened the scope of legal protection against wrongful business practices generally, and consequently extended to the entire consuming public the protection once afforded only to business competitors. Statutory unfair competition demonstrates a clear design to protect consumers as well as competitors, and is at least as equally directed toward the right of the public to protection from fraud and deceit as toward the preservation of fair business competition (7 Cal. 3d 94, 110) .

[c] Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

The facts and procedural background of Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , are discussed in § 235.25[3][a]. Recognizing that the unfair competition law was written in intentionally broad terms in order to allow courts flexibility in determining whether specific conduct was unfair under the particular circumstances of the case, the Supreme Court concluded that businesses needed further guidance as to what was permissible under that statute. Turning to the analogous provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act that govern "unfair methods of competition" [see 15 U.S.C.S. § 45(a)], the Supreme Court held that when a plaintiff claims to have suffered injury from a direct competitor's "unfair" act or practice, as that term is defined for purposes of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, conduct is "unfair" if it threatens an incipient violation of an antitrust law, or violates the policy or spirit of an antitrust law because its effects are comparable to or the same as a violation of the law, or otherwise significantly threatens or harms competition (20 Cal. 4th 163, 185-187) . Under the procedural context of the case, the Court had no occasion to apply the standard, and the case was remanded to the trial court for litigation of the issue of whether defendant's conduct violated the unfair competition law (20 Cal. 4th 163, 189) .

In Camacho v. Automobile Club of So. California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 , plaintiff was an uninsured motorist who rear-ended an insured driver. The insurer for the other motorist paid its insured's claim and then assigned to a debt collection company the responsibility for collecting over $9,000 from plaintiff. Plaintiff paid $500 towards the claim, but then filed a class action suit under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 against the insurer, the collection agency, and related entities. Plaintiff alleged that the collection agency engaged in unfair business practices by sending harassing and misleading letters to uninsured motorists in order to intimidate them into paying asserted claims, even when there has been no determination in a court of law or by an arbitrator that the claim is actually owed. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants on the grounds that the complaint failed to allege that the gravity of the harm to plaintiff outweighed the utility of the defendants' conduct, and that even if the defendants' conduct was theoretically unfair, plaintiff could not allege that he was actually harmed by the conduct. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, although the court held that the trial court employed an incorrect standard for determining whether defendants' conduct was "unfair" under the unfair competition statute. The court of appeal noted the Supreme Court's admonition in Cel-Tech to avoid earlier standards for determining what constitutes unfair conduct that were too amorphous and provided too little guidance to courts and businesses, as well as the Supreme Court's approval of considering standards adopted under the Federal Trade Commission Act (FTCA) when fashioning standards under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1400-1401) . The court also concluded that tethering a finding of unfairness in consumer cases to a violation of specific provisions was too restrictive, given the broad scope of the unfair competition statute and the fact that separate provision is made in the statute for "unlawful" conduct. Moreover, while it might make sense to tie unfair, anticompetitive conduct among competitors to antitrust laws, the same cannot be said when the action is brought by a consumer, as the range of potentially unfair, harmful conduct is more broad (142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1402-1403) . The court concluded that the appropriate standard was the one used for consumer actions brought under the FTCA and held that in order to show that a business has engaged in "unfair" conduct sufficient to support a cause of action for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, a consumer must show (1) substantial injury, (2) the injury is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition, and (3) the injury is not one that consumers themselves could reasonably have avoided (142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1403) . Applying this test to the facts of the case, the court concluded that plaintiff could not show that he was injured by defendants' conduct, in light of the fact that plaintiff was actually at fault for the underlying car accident and owed the debt that the collection agency sought to collect. The court also concluded that plaintiff could not meet the second prong of the test, because the "injury" of paying a debt that was actually owed could not be outweighed by the benefit of actually collecting that debt. Finally, plaintiff could have avoided the "injury" by obtaining and carrying automobile insurance as required by law (142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1405-1406) .

In Motors, Inc. v. Times Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 162 Cal. Rptr. 543 , a wholesale distributor of automobile products brought an action against a newspaper publisher to seek damages and injunctive relief for unfair competition, pursuant to former Civ.Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208], and unreasonable restraint of trade. Plaintiff purchased stock from manufacturers, and resold it to jobbers who sell to consumers and others. A newspaper published by defendant sold display advertising according to a two-tiered rate system, based on whether the advertiser was a wholesale or retail concern. Plaintiff alleged that defendant's practice was unfair because, inter alia, the newspaper was the dominant print medium in defendant's geographical area, and the practice was discriminatory and unfairly rewarded large retail chains. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint and entered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with respect to the cause of action for unfair competition, holding that, in determining whether defendant's practice was an unfair business practice constituting statutory unfair competition, the court must weigh the utility of the defendant's conduct against the gravity of the harm to the alleged victim (102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 740) . The court reasoned that in permitting the restraining of all unfair business practices, former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208] establishes only a wide standard to guide courts of equity. Given the creative nature of the scheming mind, the legislature evidently concluded that a less inclusive standard would not be adequate (102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 739-740) . The determination of whether a particular business practice is unfair necessarily involves an examination of its impact on its alleged victim, balanced against the reasons, justifications, and motives of the alleged wrongdoer (102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 740) .

NOTE:

The standard articulated by the California Supreme Court in Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , was specifically limited to claims of unfair competition brought by a competitor. It does not apply to actions brought by consumers or to actions brought by competitors alleging other kinds of violations of the unfair competition law, such as actions alleging fraudulent or unlawful business practices or unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising [Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 187 n.12, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527] . The standard articulated in cases such as Motors, Inc. v. Times Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 162 Cal. Rptr. 543 , arguably still applies in contexts other than an action brought by a competitor alleging unfair practices. However, although the standard of Motors, Inc. may still be appropriate in some cases, it would no longer apply to a fact situation such as that involved in the Motors, Inc. decision itself. That case involved a claim of unfair practices brought by a direct competitor, and any similar claim would now be subject to the standard set out in Cel-Tech Communications.

In fact, some more recent court of appeal opinions have questioned whether the earlier formulations for determining what constitutes unfair conduct in an action brought by a party who is not a competitor are now too broad in light of the Supreme Court's analysis in Cel-Tech Communications. These court opinions have suggested that to ensure that a court in an action brought by a party who is not a competitor will not merely apply its own subjective conception of fairness, the conduct alleged to be unfair must be tethered to a specific constitutional, statutory, or regulatory provision, at least if the claim of unfairness is predicated on an alleged violation of public policy [see, e.g., Scripps Clinic v. Superior Court (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 917, 939-940, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101 ; Gregory v. Albertson's, Inc. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 845, 854, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389] .

The court of appeal in Camacho v. Automobile Club of So. California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 , eschewed this path and adopted the test in consumer actions that is applicable in similar cases brought under the Federal Trade Commission Act, requiring the consumer to show (1) substantial injury, (2) the injury is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition, and (3) the injury is not one that consumers themselves could reasonably have avoided [Camacho v. Automobile Club of So. California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1403, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770] .

[d] Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition

Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 235.50[3][b].

People v. McKale (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 626, 159 Cal. Rptr. 811, 602 P.2d 731 , involved a public civil action brought against individuals operating a mobile home park, to seek civil penalties and injunctive relief under various causes of action,including unfair competition pursuant to former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200-17208]. The alleged acts of misconduct concerned defendants' operation of the park, for example, dumping of waste water on the premises and imposition of unlawful fees on tenants, in violation of various statutes under different statutory schemes. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend, and entered judgment in favor of defendants. The People appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded with respect to the causes of action for unfair competition, holding that what constitutes unfair competition or unfair or fraudulent business practice under any given set of circumstances is a question of fact, and the essential test is whether the public is likely to be deceived (25 Cal. 3d 626, 635) . The Court noted that it is difficult to see any other legislative purpose for enacting former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208] than to extend the meaning of unfair competition to anything that can properly be called a business practice that at the same time is forbidden by law (25 Cal. 3d 626, 634) .

The facts and procedural background of Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 , are discussed in § 235.50[3][b]. The Court held that a complaint need not allege competitive injury to state a cause of action for statutory unfair competition under former Civ. Code § 3369 [now see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208]. The section does not limit its coverage to traditional deceptive or fraudulent practices, but instead explicitly extends to any unlawful, unfair, or deceptive business practice, thereby intending to permit tribunals to enjoin ongoing wrongful business conduct in whatever context the activity might occur (7 Cal. 3d 94, 111) . The statute applies to anything that can properly be called a business practice that at the same time is forbidden by law (7 Cal. 3d 94, 113) .

In Consumers Union of United States, Inc. v. Fisher Dev., Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 257 Cal. Rptr. 151 , the court of appeal held that housing discrimination constituted an unlawful business practice (208 Cal. App. 3d 1433, 1439-1441) .

[e] Determination of Fraudulent or Deceptive Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , is discussed in § 235.50[3][b].

In Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872 , plaintiff, a grape growers cooperative, and defendant entered into a contract under which plaintiff was to supply defendant 30,000 tons of grapes per year. In 1982, the year of the largest grape crop in California history, defendant breached the contract by refusing to accept grapes or by downgrading them, thus paying lower prices for them. Plaintiff sued defendant on several theories, seeking damages under Com. Code § 2706 and injunctive relief for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. The trial court found defendant's practice of downgrading the grapes to be unfair, fraudulent, and in violation of Food & Agric. Code §§ 55872, 55878, and 55879. Plaintiff was awarded damages under Com. Code § 2706 and injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that its downgrading of the grapes could not constitute a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 because it was a mere buyer, not a seller, and that the downgrading could not be fraudulent because there was no evidence that it had any tendency to induce plaintiff or others to enter into sales transactions. The court of appeal reviewed the history of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 and its predecessor, former Civil Code § 3369, and concluded that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 covers any practice that is unlawful or unfair or deceptive, and that nothing prevents an action being brought under that section against a buyer (203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 449-450) .

Regarding defendant's contention that the downgrading was not fraudulent, the court of appeal cited Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 211, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 , for the proposition that actual deception, reliance, and damage are not necessary to establish a violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Nor does a practice have to be both unfair and fraudulent. It is enough that the practice is unfair. Here the evidence showed that defendant was attempting to play the market when it overcontracted with growers, including plaintiff. Its downgrading practice was unconscionable and clearly unfair. Even if the trial court's finding that the practice was fraudulent was incorrect, the holding could be sustained on the basis of the unfairness (203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 451) .

[f] Buyer May Be Liable for Unfair Competition

Allied Grape Growers v. Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872 , is discussed in § 235.50[3][e].

[g] Personal Liability of Controlling Shareholder and Responsible Officer

People v. Dollar Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 119, 259 Cal. Rptr. 191 , was an action against several companies and their controlling shareholder and chief executive officer for violations of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17535 (false and misleading advertising), challenging several practices, including (1) charging a "retail repair rate" to the renter even though defendant rental company only paid the wholesale repair rate, and (2) ambiguous written contracts and misleading oral sales presentations relating to collision damage waivers. There were well over 500,000 misleading transactions and over1,500 false repair invoices. Judgment imposed a civil penalty of $100,000 under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206 and 17536. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that any violation of the false advertising statutes necessarily constitutes unfair business practices within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (211 Cal. App. 3d 119, 129) . Regarding the imposition of the civil penalty on the majority shareholder and chief executive officer, the court noted that this person was the majority shareholder and chief executive officer of all the defendant companies; he was the one responsible for the terms and conditions of the collision damage waivers; he had authority to approve and did approve the ambiguous rental agreements; he either knew or reasonably should have known that the agents were selling collision damage waivers and customers were buying them without being properly advised of its purpose and limitations; he more than anyone else was responsible for the confusion over the collision damage waivers; he authorized the practice of billing customers more than the actual repair costs; and he personally approved the continued use of the deceptive and ambiguous rental agreements. Because of this control over the policies and procedures followed by defendant corporations, the individual defendant participated in the unlawful practices as if he had personally made the misrepresentations, and thus the imposition of personal liability was proper (211 Cal. App. 3d 119, 132) .

[h] Unfair Insurance Practices Act Does Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action

In Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 257, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 895 P.2d 56 , an insurance agency asserted statutory causes of action against various insurance companies for violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16720 and 17200. The complaint alleged that plaintiff operated an insurance brokerage and consulting business in which it advised attorneys regarding settlement annuities, and that after it disclosed to those clients the actual costs of such annuities the defendant insurance companies boycotted plaintiff's brokerage. The complaint asserted that defendants' conduct was a per se violation of the Cartwright Act, constituted an unreasonable restraint intended to monopolize the business of insurance in violation of the Unfair Insurance Practices Act (UIPA), and thus involved unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business practices which violated the Unfair Competition Act (UCA). Defendants demurred, contending that the insurance industry is exempt from any antitrust and unfair business practices legislation other than the UIPA. The trial court sustained the demurrers with respect to the Cartwright Act causes of action, but overruled the demurrers with respect to the UCA and UIPA claims. In a consolidated review of appeals by both parties, the court of appeal held that the UIPA does not supersede or displace actions under the Cartwright Act, and that a private cause of action may be stated under the UCA for violations of the Cartwright Act, but not for violations of the UIPA.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. The Court rejected defendants' contention that in adopting the UIPA the legislature intended that only the Insurance Commissioner be authorized to remedy unlawful conduct by insurance companies, noting that this construction would render UIPA references to civil and criminal liability meaningless (10 Cal. 4th 257, 273) . The Court also noted that the applicable section of the UIPA was patterned after a draft of the Model Unfair Insurance Practices Act, which has been construed in other states as preserving remedies already available at the time the UIPA was adopted (10 Cal. 4th 257, 276) .

[i] Insurance Code Sections 12414.26 and 12414.29 Do Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action Brought Against Title Insurer

In Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , plaintiffs, who were engaged in the holding, ownership, and financing of real property, brought suit against the only companies offering real estate title insurance in their county. Defendants had an established practice of refusing to issue title insurance on properties acquired at tax sales, despite the fact that titles of parcels purchased by tax sale are deeded free and clear by operation of law. This refusal, along with defendants' efforts to convince the public that title insurance was a necessity, caused a great reduction in the value and marketability of plaintiffs' land bought at tax sales and resulted in the attempted rescission and breach of contracts for sale of plaintiffs' land to third-party purchasers. In the suit, plaintiffs alleged, inter alia, that defendants had agreed among themselves to "redline" all property acquired by tax sale, had engaged in a scheme to deny title insurance to parcels of land purchased at a land auction when the seller of the parcels had acquired title at a tax sale, and had conspired together to deny title insurance to property obtained by tax sale. They also asserted that, by agreeing to refuse to issue title insurance to such property while making efforts to convince members of the public that title insurance was necessary, defendants had manipulated the market in the county area in which they were the only title insurers. One cause of action asserted that in three specific sales, defendants had engaged in unlawful, unfair, and fraudulent business practices actionable under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, without economic, actuarial, or other justification. The case was dismissed by stipulation as to two of the three defendants, and the remaining defendant successfully demurred to the remaining causes of action brought against it. The court of appeal affirmed, holding in part that Ins. Code § 12414.26 limited actions against insurers for unlawful business practices to the remedies provided in that code and that, since the legislature had not made Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 expressly applicable toinsurers, no cause of action could be stated under that act.

The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal. The Court held in part that the title insurers were subject to the Unfair Competition Law, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. Reaffirming the principles of Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 257, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 895 P.2d 56 [see § 235.50[3][h]], the Court rejected the conclusion that Ins. Code §§ 12414.26 and 12414.29, which expressly limits the actions that can brought title insurers, exempted title insurers from actions brought under the Unfair Competition Law, concluding that the Insurance Code provisions related only to ratemaking and rate regulation. In addition, the language of the provisions demonstrated a clear Legislative intent to preempt only local regulations and ordinances, not other state laws (19 Cal. 4th 26, 44-46) .

[j] Restitution is Available Independent of Injunction

The facts and procedural background of ABC Int'l Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Elec. Corp. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112 , are discussed in § 235.29[3][a]. Plaintiff also brought a cause of action for restitution, alleging that defendant violated the unfair competition law. Defendant contended that restitution is available under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 only when it is requested ancillary to an injunction. Since no prayer was made for an injunction, defendant claimed that restitution was unavailable. The Supreme Court began its analysis by stating that nothing in the language of the statute indicates the availability of restitution is contingent on the issuance of an injunction. On its face, the statute appears to authorize injunctive relief and/or restitution. Furthermore, cases relied upon by defendant did not specifically hold that restitution was contingent on injunctive relief (14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1269) . Finally, the court reasoned that defendant's interpretation of the statute would frustrate the deterrent purposes of restitution by allowing a defendant who successfully opposed an injunction to retain its illicit profit (14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1271) . The court thus reversed the judgment of the court of appeal which had affirmed the granting of a demurrer.

[k] Nonresident Business May Be Liable for Unfair Competition

In Application Group, Inc. v. Hunter Group, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73 ; a Maryland corporation appealed from a trial court judgment declaring that covenants not to compete contained in the employment contracts of their consultant's who did not reside in California were illegal in the circumstances of this case, and could not be enforced against a California-based corporation, and a Maryland resident and former consultant who was recruited to work for the California-based corporation.

The court of appeal concluded that the trial court did not err in finding that the Maryland corporation's use of covenants not to compete in its employment agreements with employees who were not California residents, in order to prevent them from obtaining employment in California, violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 908) . The trial court had expressly found that the noncompetition agreement was an unenforceable contract to restrain trade, use of which constituted unfair competition in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The court stated that California law has recognized that an employer's business practices concerning its employees are within the scope of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The twist in this case was that the employer whose practice was being challenged as unfair competition, was not a California-based employer. However, the court found no authority which held or suggested that nonresident businesses could not be held to account for wrongful business conduct affecting California employers and employees (61 Cal. App. 4th 881, 908) .

[l] Conduct Not Constituting Violation of Unfair Business Practices Act May Nonetheless Be Subject to Action Under Unfair Competition Law

The facts and procedural background of Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , are discussed in § 235.25[3][a]. In upholding the court of appeal's conclusion that the trial court was in error in entering judgment for the defendant on the action brought under the unfair competition law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.], the Supreme Court rejected the defendant's argument that, since its conduct was not in violation of the Unfair Practices Act, that same conduct cannot constitute a violation of the unfair competition law. The Court noted that the Unfair Practices Act proscribes specific conduct and provides stronger remedies, while the unfair competition law proscribes a broader range of anticompetitive practices, albeit in more general terms, but provides less severe sanctions than those provided under the Unfair Practices Act. The Court also noted that, under the language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 of the unfair competition law, a practice may be deemed "unfair" even if it is not specifically "unlawful" or "fraudulent," and that the legislature intended to keep the standards for determining liability under the unfair competition law flexible in order to respond to the innumerable range of unfair and anticompetitive business practices that might be challenged (20 Cal. 4th 163, 179-181) . However, the Court recognized that the scope of the unfair competition law, while broad, was not unlimited, and the courts could not declare conduct to be in violation of the statute if other legislation has specifically declared the conduct to be legal. The Court further concluded, however, that an action is not prohibited under the unfair competition law merely because some other statute on the subject does not, itself, provide for the action or prohibit the challenged conduct; rather, the other provision must actually bar suit or clearly permit the challenged conduct in order to prohibit an action under the unfair competition law (20 Cal. 4th 163, 182-184) .

Turning to the case before it, the Court concluded that the trial court erred in entering judgment for defendant on plaintiffs' claim brought under the unfair competition law merely because the conduct was not unlawful under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043 and 17044. The Court concluded that those provisions of the Unfair Practices Act neither outlaw not affirmatively permit all nonpurposeful below-cost sales, and thus they do not preclude a court from finding such nonpurposeful conduct to be unfair under the unfair competition law. The Court contrasted those provisions with the "safe harbor" of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17026.1, which specifically provides that cellular phone service providers may sell cellular phones below cost if such sales are a good-faith attempt to meet the legal market prices of a competitor in the same locality or trade area (20 Cal. 4th 163, 187-188) . Since judgment was granted at trial before the defendant presented any evidence, the Court remanded to the trial court for litigation of the issue of whether defendant's conduct was unfair under the unfair competition law, requiring application of these principles and a new standard articulated by the Court for determining whether the challenged conduct violated the unfair competition law [see § 235.50[3][c]] (20 Cal. 4th 163, 188-189) .

[m] Reliance on Specific Statements in Advertising Claim Not Required to Show Fraudulent Conduct

The factual and procedural background of In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 , is provided in § 25.54[3][b]. After concluding that in a class action brought under the unfair competition statute, only the class representatives must demonstrate that they meet the requirements for standing (46 Cal. 4th 298, 321) , the California Supreme Court next addressed the issue of causation and the meaning of the provision that a statutory unfair competition may only be brought by a private person "who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition" contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204. While declining to provide a meaning of the language "as a result of" that would govern in all cases, the Court held that if the unfair competition claim is based on fraud stemming from alleged false advertising and misrepresentations made to consumers, this statutory language means that the plaintiff must plead and prove actual reliance to satisfy requirements for standing to bring the action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 328) . However, the Court concluded that while a plaintiff in those circumstances must allege that the defendant's misrepresentations were an immediate cause of the injury, the plaintiff need not show that those misrepresentations were the sole or even decisive cause. Moreover, the plaintiff is not required to necessarily plead and prove individualized reliance on specific misrepresentations or false statements when those misrepresentations and false statements were part of an extensive and long-term advertising campaign. Finally, the Court suggested that an allegation of reliance is not defeated merely because there was alternative information available to the plaintiff that might have countered the defendant's alleged misrepresentations (46 Cal. 4th 298, 328) . The Supreme Court then remanded the case for further proceedings to determine whether the named plaintiffs could establish standing to bring the action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 329) .

In Morgan v. AT&T Wireless Services, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 768 , plaintiffs had purchased a specific cellular telephone along with extended network service plans of one or two years. Plaintiffs alleged that they purchased this specific telephone after extensive research on the Internet and through talking with other people. Plaintiffs also alleged that their purchase decisions were based on extensive advertising by defendant wireless carrier that promoted the capabilities of the telephone, which included Bluetooth and international roaming capability, and the accompanying network. However, shortly after purchase, the service available on the telephone began to deteriorate because defendant was making changes to its network to enable the use of frequency transmissions that were incompatible with the telephone purchased by plaintiffs. Plaintiffs alleged that when these network changes were made, their recently-purchased telephones became essentially useless. In addition, after the network changes were implemented, defendant sent purchasers of plaintiffs' telephone a new telephone that defendant referred to as an "upgrade," although it was actually a substantially cheaper telephone that lacked some of the advanced features that had been incorporated into plaintiffs' now-obsolete telephone. Plaintiffs brought a class action suit against defendant, which included a statutory unfair competition claim based on defendant's alleged misrepresentations about the capabilities of the telephone and future improvements to the wireless network that would support and improve the functioning of their telephone, as well as on the failure to disclose defendant's plans to alter its network to utilize frequencies that were known to be incompatible with and would in fact interfere with the performance of the telephone plaintiffs purchased. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer, but plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that plaintiffs had alleged sufficient facts to support an unfair competition claim based on alleged deceptive advertisements and other statements. The court of appeal noted that for purposes of the unfair competition statute, a fraudulent business practice is a practice that will tend to mislead or deceive members of the public, which can include statements that will tend to deceive based on the failure to reveal other relevant information. The court also noted that an unfair competition action based on fraud, unlike common-law fraud, does not require allegations of actual falsity and reasonable reliance pleaded with specificity (177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 1254-1257) . The court also held that plaintiffs had alleged sufficient facts to support standing to sue under the changes imposed by Proposition 64. The court cited the analysis of the California Supreme Court in In re Tobacco II Cases, described above, and concluded that plaintiffs' allegations of reliance on defendant's advertising campaign when deciding to purchase their telephone were sufficient to show standing to sue (177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 1258) .

NOTE:

As individualized proof of reliance and injury are not generally required for nonrepresentative class members when a class action seeks restitution for alleged misrepresentations in extensive, long-term advertising campaigns, as described above in In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 , issues concerning reliance by and injury to unnamed class members will not foreclose a class action in that context [McAdams v. Monier, Inc. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 174, 192, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 704] . However, in advertising campaigns of shorter duration, for example, a campaign lasting only six months, evidence that many or most of the proposed class members were never actually exposed to alleged misrepresentations can defeat an attempt to certify a class by showing that there was no class-wide injury [Pfizer Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 622, 631-633, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 795] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Limited to Anticompetitive Business Practices

In Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 162 Cal. Rptr. 194 , a tenant brought an action against her landlords to obtain injunctive and related relief based on several causes of action, including unfair competition, to remedy defendants' inadequate maintenance of the premises. The trial court struck all causes of action except that for breach of warranty of habitability, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed the judgments, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is not confined to anticompetitive business practice, but is equally directed toward the right of the public to protection from fraud and deceit (101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 927) .

[b] Determination of Unfair Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

In Davis v. Ford Motor Credit Co. LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 581, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 697 , plaintiff brought an unfair competition action against a car dealer based on the dealer's billing practices under a retail installment sales contract. Plaintiff had missed a month's payment, was assessed a late fee, made a single payment the following month that was applied to the earlier month, and was assessed another late fee for the new month. Plaintiff alleged that the defendant was effectively charging more than one late fee for the one delinquent payment, in violation of Civ. Code § 2982(k). The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer, and the Court of Appeal affirmed. The Court of Appeal held that the dealer's conduct in allocating payments received to the earliest period for which a payment was due, and charging a single late fee for a more recent delinquent period if the amount received did not cover that period as well, did not violate Civ. Code § 2982(k). Because the statute was not violated, plaintiff's unfair competition claim based on "unlawful" conduct failed (179 Cal. App. 4th 581, 591-592) . The court also rejected plaintiff's claim that the conduct was actionable as "unfair" conduct under the unfair competition statute. The court adopted the test for unfair conduct articulated by the court of appeal in Camacho v. Automobile Club of So. California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 , which is discussed in [3][c], above. Under that test, a consumer seeking to recover for unfair conduct must show (1) substantial injury, (2) the injury is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition, and (3) the injury is not one that consumers themselves could reasonably have avoided. The court concluded that because plaintiff could have avoided the alleged injury simply by making timely payments under the sales contract, plaintiff failed to show any unfair conduct under that test (179 Cal. App. 4th 581, 597-598) .

In Progressive W. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 263, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 , an insurance company had filed an action against its insured to recover money that the company had paid to the insured under a first-party medical payments provision of the insured's automobile insurance, after the insured had recovered damages from the person who caused the automobile accident. The insured filed a cross-complaint for breach of contract, bad faith, and unfair business practices against the insurance company. The insured argued that the insurance company, consistent with its general practice, sought to recover 100 percent of the money it paid out to the insured under the medical payments provision, despite the fact that the insurance company may have been restricted under California law from recovering the full 100 percent, and that the insurance company engaged in no investigation before attempting to recover the full amount that it had paid out. The court of appeal ruled that a demurrer to the cross complaint should have been sustained on the contractual and bad-faith claims, but concluded that the insured had stated a cause of action for fraudulent or unfair business practices. The court of appeal noted that court opinions, after Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 [see § 235.50[3][c]], had struggled with determining the appropriate test for deciding what constitutes an unfair business practice in an action brought by a consumer. However, the court was convinced that the test after Cel-Tech was the same as it had been before that opinion was issued. Therefore, determination of whether a business practice is "unfair" in a suit brought by a consumer requires examination of the effect of the practice or act on its victim, balanced against the reasons, justifications, and motives of the alleged wrongdoer (135 Cal. App. 4th 263, 285-286) . The court then held that it was premature to apply the test to the facts as developed in the current record of the case, and upheld the trial court's decision to overrule the demurrer as to that cause of action (135 Cal. App. 4th 263, 287) .

In Pastoria v. Nationwide Ins. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 , the plaintiffs brought an action against their health insurer for unfair competition, fraud, and negligent failure to disclose. The plaintiffs based their claims on the fact that the insurer failed to disclose to them before they purchased their policy that the insurer was about to make substantial changes to the policy line, including new deductibles, new and increased co-payments, reduced drug benefits, and increased premiums. The defendant successfully demurred, arguing that its compliance with Ins. Code § 10199.1, which requires only 30 days notice before changing insurance benefits and premiums, precluded the action. The court of appeal reversed, concluding that given the procedural posture of the case, it was error for the trial court to sustain the defendant's demurrer. The court noted that the plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant had a duty to disclose the impending changes under Ins. Code §§ 330, 331, 332, 334, and 361, and the court concluded that the plaintiffs' argument was not without merit under the literal language of those statutes. In addressing the plaintiffs' specific claim that the conduct was "unfair" under the meaning of the unfair competition statute, the court of appeal held that determining unfairness in an action brought by a consumer under the unfair competition statute required weighing the competing interests of the effect of the defendant's conduct on the alleged victim against the reasons, justifications, and motives of the alleged wrongdoer. However, because the demurrer had been sustained, the defendant had not yet presented evidence of its motives and justification. Therefore, this determination would have to be made on remand (112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1498) .

[c] Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition

The factual and procedural background of Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guar. Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 26, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 960 P.2d 513 , is discussed in § 235.50[3][i]. In reversing the sustaining of defendant's demurrer, the Court held that plaintiffs sufficiently pleaded an alleged combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Cartwright Act, and that this alleged violation was a recognized basis for a civil action for damages and other relief under the Unfair Competition Law (19 Cal. 4th 26, 42-43, 48-51) .

In Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 257, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220, 895 P.2d 56 , an insurance agency sued various insurance companies, alleging conduct that was a per se violation of the Cartwright Act, and thus involved unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business practices which violated the Unfair Competition Act. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers with respect to the Cartwright Act. The court of appeal then held that a private cause of action may be stated under the UCA for violations of the Cartwright Act, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Supreme Court agreed with the reasoning of the court of appeal that an Unfair Competition Act cause of action may be predicated on a violation of the Cartwright Act because the Unfair Competition Act defines unfair competition as any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business practice, and a violation of the Cartwright Act is such a practice (10 Cal. 4th 257, 267-268) .

In Perdue v. Crocker Nat'l Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 , a bank depositor brought a class action against a bank on several causes of action, including statutory unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208), based on charges imposed for checks drawn on accounts without sufficient funds. The trial court sustained all demurrers without leave to amend; plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is intended to protect consumers as well as business competitors, and its prohibitory reach is not limited to deceptive or fraudulent conduct, butextends to any unlawful business conduct (38 Cal. 3d 913, 929-930) .

People v. Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , is discussed in § 235.53[3][a]. The court held that each sale of a condominium unit designated part of the city's low-income and moderate-income housing stock at a price exceeding the established ceiling constituted a violation of the San Francisco Subdivision Code, and thus an unfair business practice within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq. (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 338-339) .

In California Serv. Station & Auto. Repair Ass'n v. Union Oil Co. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 44, 283 Cal. Rptr. 279 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of trade association enjoining a petroleum products franchisor's policy of allowing three-year franchises with renewal options to franchisees who had previously held a franchise with the franchisor but only allowing one-year franchises terminable at any time for any reason to persons who had not previously held one of its franchises. The policy was found to violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 21148 because its effect was to prevent franchisees from selling or assigning the unexpired portions of their franchises to anyone except persons who were or had previously been franchisees of the same franchisor (232 Cal. App. 3d 44, 56-58) .

In Courtesy Temp. Serv., Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's order denying plaintiff's petition for a preliminary injunction to prevent defendant from using plaintiff's confidential customer list and related information. The trial court had held that the customer list was not a protectable trade secret within the meaning of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act (Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.), but the court of appeal found that it was (222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1287-1291) . In addition, the court of appeal said that whether or not the customer list is a trade secret, a former employee's use of confidential information obtained from his or her former employer to compete with the former employer and to solicit the business of the former employer's customers is also regarded as unfair competition and an unfair and deceptive business practice under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1291-1292) .

In Shadoan v. World Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 97, 268 Cal. Rptr. 207 , the court of appeal sustained the defendant's demurrer and dismissed the action because the allegations that financing without the challenged prepayment penalty was unavailable were conclusional rather than factual. However, the court provided an explanation of the relationship between unconscionability [Civ. Code § 1670.5] and unfair business practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. Unconscionability is a defense to enforcement of a contract or contract term. A plaintiff who has performed or complied with the offending term cannot bring an action for restitution or injunction under Civ. Code § 1670.5. After having performed or complied with the offending term, one may, however, seek redress under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 on the ground that the offending term constitutes an unfair business practice (219 Cal. App. 3d 97, 101) .

In BILJAC Assocs. v. First Interstate Bank (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1410, 267 Cal. Rptr. 819 , the court of appeal affirmed judgments in favor of some defendants, but noted that a cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 would be stated if the defendants' conduct violated the Cartwright Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16720] (218 Cal. App. 3d 1410, 1422-1423) .

In People v. Landlords Professional Services (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1599, 264 Cal. Rptr. 548 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment imposing civil penalties against an eviction service that cloaked itself with an aura of expertise and provided more than clerical services by assisting clients in advancing their legal rights. The eviction service was engaged in unauthorized practice of law [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6125, 6126], which constituted unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. (215 Cal. App. 3d 1599, 1608-1610) .

In Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment holding that the challenged conduct was not an unfair business practice. However, the challenge was based not on a statute, but on a constitutional provision [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1 (privacy)] and on a regulation [2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3) (inquiry into employee's physical or mental condition must be related to job safety)]. The employer's practice of conditioning acceptance of offers of employment on the prospective employee's successful completion of a physical examination that included drug and alcohol testing was held not to violate the right to privacy or the regulation (215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1052-1053) .

In Hernandez v. Stabach (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 309, 193 Cal. Rptr. 350 , tenants filed a class action based on statutory unfair competition laws against their landlord, and the trial court ordered preliminary injunctions against defendant, prohibiting him from evicting plaintiffs, and mandating him to make certain repairs. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that unfair competition as the term is used in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 includes any business practice that is forbidden by law, and therefore encompasses defendant's activity of alleged retaliatory eviction (145 Cal. App. 3d 309, 314) .

Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 903, 162 Cal. Rptr. 194 , is discussed in § 235.50[4][a]. The court of appeal stated that the proscription of unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is not restricted to deceptive or fraudulent conduct, but extends to any unlawful business practice, and that the legislature apparently intended to permit courts to enjoin ongoing wrongful business conduct in whatever context the activity might occur (101 Cal. App. 3d903, 927) .

[d] Determination of Fraudulent or Deceptive Business Practice Constituting Statutory Unfair Competition

In Williams v. Gerber Prods. Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 523 F.3d 934 , plaintiff parents brought suit under the California unfair competition statute and other statutes for deceptive advertising against the manufacturer of "fruit juice snacks" made for toddlers. The product box showed pictures of a number of different fruits, and statements on the box suggested that the product was made with "fruit juice and other all natural ingredients" and was "nutritious." However, the first two ingredients listed on the side panel nutrition information were corn syrup and sugar, and the only juice used was white grape juice from concentrate. The trial court dismissed the suit, but the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed. The Court held that under the "reasonable consumer" standard, the plaintiffs had stated a cause of action under the applicable statutes because the elements of the packaging would likely deceive a reasonable consumer. The picture on the box potentially suggested that the juice of the fruits shown were contained in the product when they were not. Similarly, the statement that the product was made with "fruit juice and other all natural ingredients" could easily be interpreted to mean that the product was made with all-natural ingredients, which appeared to be false. Finally, the statement suggesting that the product was "nutritious" only added to the potential deception. The Court concluded that a reasonable consumer would not be expected to look beyond misleading representations on the front of the box to scan the small print of the ingredients list in order to discover the truth about the composition of the product (523 F.3d 934, 938-940) .

The facts and procedural background of Perdue v. Crocker Nat'l Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 , are discussed in § 235.50[4][c]. The Court held that because the plaintiff sought only injunctive relief under the cause of action for unfair competition, he need not show that he himself was misled; he need only prove that members of the public are likely to be deceived (38 Cal. 3d 913, 929-930) .

The facts and procedural background of Morgan v. AT&T Wireless Services, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 768 , are discussed in § 235.50[3][m]. The court of appeal held that plaintiffs had alleged sufficient facts to support an unfair competition claim based on alleged deceptive advertisements and other statements. The court of appeal noted that for purposes of the unfair competition statute, a fraudulent business practice is a practice that will tend to mislead or deceive members of the public, which can include statements that will tend to deceive based on the failure to reveal other relevant information. The court also noted that an unfair competition action based on fraud, unlike common-law fraud, does not require allegations of actual falsity and reasonable reliance pleaded with specificity (177 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 1254-1257) .

In Blakemore v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 36, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 , the plaintiffs were Avon sales representatives who brought suit against Avon under the Unfair Competition Statute and other common law theories. The suit was based on Avon's alleged practice of shipping unordered products to their sales representatives, charging their accounts for the unordered products, and forcing the representatives to either keep and pay for the products or pay to ship the items back to Avon. In addition, despite Avon's stated policy of accepting unordered items for return with a full credit, Avon allegedly had a practice of refusing to credit their representatives for the returns and then turning these delinquent accounts over to collection agencies. The trial court sustained demurrers for Avon, but the court of appeal reversed. Addressing the claims brought under the Unfair Competition Statute, the court held that the operative complaint sufficiently pleaded conduct that constituted an unfair or fraudulent business practice. The court noted that proving a fraudulent or deceptive business practice only required a showing that members of the public are likely to be deceived, and unlike common law fraud, does not require allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance, and damage. In addition, because the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to state a claim based on fraudulent or deceptive practices, they were also sufficient to state a claim for unfair business practices (129 Cal. App. 4th 36, 49) .

In Podolsky v. First Healthcare Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 632, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 , plaintiffs sued a nursing home operator on their own behalf and on behalf of the general public, contending that the nursing home's proposed third party guarantee agreement for private pay residents was deceptive and thus violated the Unfair Competition Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants and plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal reversed and remanded for further proceedings, holding that the guarantee agreement was deceptive. The agreement provided that the guarantor's signature was optional but that if they did sign they were personally guaranteeing payment to the home for all care, supplies or services provided to the resident. The court examined the existing protections afforded to family members of nursing home residents under federal and state law and concluded that because the agreement offered little or no more protection than family members were already entitled to, the absence of any information about those protections rendered the guarantee agreement deceptive (50 Cal. App. 4th 632, 651) . In addition to finding the agreement itself deceptive, the court ruled that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether the manner in which the original guarantee agreements were presented and explained to potential guarantors, was deceptive. Declarations portrayed an admissions process in which a stack of documents was hurriedly presented to family members with little or no explanation. The court found that this procedure was likely to deceive consumers who would not be made aware of its provisions or who might be misled into believing that their signature was required (50 Cal. App. 4th 632, 651) .

[e] Personal Liability of Controlling Shareholder and Responsible Officer

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206(b) and 17536(b) provide that in assessing a civil penalty, a court shall consider any one or more of the following: the nature and seriousness of the misconduct, the number of violations, the persistence of the misconduct, the length of time over which the misconduct occurred, the willfulness of the defendant's misconduct, and the defendant's assets, liabilities, and net worth. Those amendments were not intended to change the decisional law regarding the methods of determining the number of violations on which an award of civil penalties is based [Stats. 1992, ch. 430, § 6].

[f] Unfair Insurance Practices Act Does Not Supersede or Displace Statutory Unfair Competition Action

In AICCO, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 579, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 , the plaintiffs brought an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. after the defendant, an insurance company seeking to jettison its liability under unprofitable asbestos and environmental coverage policies that it had issued, had divided into two entities as permitted under Pennsylvania law and transferred its obligations under those policies to the newly-created entities. Because the defendanthad not obtained the consent of its policyholders when making the transfer of obligations, the plaintiffs argued that the defendant's conduct was unlawful under Civ. Code § 1457, which provides that the burden of an obligation may only be transferred with the consent of the party entitled to its benefit. The court of appeal agreed with the plaintiffs that they had pleaded a violation of Civ. Code § 1457, which in turn was adequate to allow the plaintiffs to proceed under the theory that this was unlawful conduct under the unfair competition statute (90 Cal. App. 4th 579, 588-589) . In addition, the court concluded that the notice that the defendant had sent to its policyholders was deceptive and misleading and could support an action under the unfair competition statute based on fraud. The court also held that the unfair competition action was not barred merely because the acts that form the basis for the complaint might also violate the Unfair Insurance Practices Act, Ins. Code § 790 et seq. (90 Cal. App. 4th 579, 589) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.51

§ 235.51 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Exists for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]--Unlawful Business Practice

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANTS CONDUCT IN _____ [specify, e.g., CUTTING DOWN TREES TO CARRY OUT ITS PLAN TO DEVELOP ADDITIONAL SKI RUNS], WHILE A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER PROHIBITING SUCH ACTIVITY WAS IN EFFECT, CONSTITUTED AN UNLAWFUL BUSINESS PRACTICE UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200, ENTITLING PLAINTIFF TO STATUTORY RELIEF.

A. Statutory Unfair Competition Defined. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph B].

B. Unlawful Business Practice Constitutes Statutory Unfair Competition. Unlawful competition includes unlawful business practices (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200).

C. Unlawful Business Practice May Be Based on Violation of Virtually Any State, Local, or Federal Law. An action for an unlawful business practice may be based on the violation of virtually any state, federal, or local law, unless the defendant's conduct is privileged, the defendant's conduct is immunized by another statute, or the underlying statute expressly bars its enforcement under the unfair competition statute (Stevens v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 603-604, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370).

D. Ongoing Wrongful Conduct. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 is directed at a pattern of ongoing wrongful conduct (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 519, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

E. Intent Unnecessary. Intent to engage in an unlawful business practice is not an element of unfair competition violation (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 520, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

[Optional] F. Forest Practice Act Violations. Violations of Forest Practice Act provisions constitute unlawful business practices under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 530, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

[Optional] G. Conditional Use Permit Violations. Violations of a conditional use permit can properly form the basis for a claim of unlawful business activity (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 532, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

[Optional] H. Violations of Temporary Restraining Order. Violations of a temporary restraining order may be prosecuted as an unlawful business practice (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 535, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

[Optional] I. Monetary Penalties. Persons who have engaged in acts of unfair competition are liable for civil penalties up to $2,500 for each unlawful business practice committed (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206(a)).

[Optional] J. Injunctive Relief Authorized. The court may make such orders or judgment as may be necessary to prevent the use or employment by any person of any practice which constitutes unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203).

[Optional] K. Action Based on Transacting Insurance Without License Permitted. An action may be brought by a private plaintiff for unlawful business practices based on violations of Ins. Code § 1631 and 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2110 et seq., which require that insurance agents, brokers, and automobile dealers be licensed to transact insurance (Stevens v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 604, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370).

[Optional] L. Action Based on Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act. An action for injunctive relief may be brought under the unfair competition statute if an employer is guilty of age discrimination under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 782, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477).

[Optional] M. Action Based on Federal Violations Not Preempted. An unfair competition action based on a violation of federal law will not generally be preempted by federal law, because the plaintiff is not seeking to impose different or additional requirements beyond those imposed under federal law (McKell v. Washington Mutual, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1485-1486, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a cause of action exists for statutory unfair competition based on an unlawful business practice. These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with the additional points and authorities in § 235.52. They may also be combined with the points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they may combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that defendant engaged in an ongoing course of conduct and argue that the conduct constituted an unlawful business practice within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of statutory unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities supporting a plaintiff's cause of action for statutory unfair competition generally, see § 235.50.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities opposing a private plaintiff's right to recover damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, see § 235.57.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unlawful Business Practice May Be Based on Violation of Virtually Any State, Local, or Federal Law

In Stevens v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370 , The plaintiff brought two related actions for unlawful business practices under the unfair competition statute on behalf of the general public against an insurance company, its agent, a car dealership, and others. The plaintiff based its actions on allegations that the defendants' program for providing physical damage insurance to uninsured car purchasers violated the provisions of Ins. Code § 1631 and 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2110 et seq., which require that insurance agents, brokers, and automobile dealers be licensed to transact insurance. In the two actions, the plaintiff sought restitution and disgorgement of profits, as well as injunctive relief. The trial court sustained demurrers in one action and entered a judgment of dismissal in the other, concluding that the legislature did not intend to allow a private right of action for violation of the Insurance Code provisions. The plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate challenging the sustaining of the demurrers in the first action and appealed the dismissal in the second action. The cases were consolidated for purposes of review.

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's ruling and granted the writ petition. The court of appeal reviewed case law precedent establishing that an action for an unlawful business practice may be based on the violation of virtually any state, federal, or local law, unless the defendant's conduct is privileged, thedefendant's conduct is immunized by another statute, or the underlying statute expressly bars its enforcement under the unfair competition statute (75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 602-604) . Therefore, an action for an unlawful business practice could be brought under the unfair competition statute based on violation of the licensing provisions, regardless of whether those latter provisions expressly create a private right of action, so long as those provisions do not expressly bar a private action under the unfair competition statute. The court then concluded that an action under the unfair competition statute was not barred, taking into consideration the language and statutory history of Ins. Code § 1631 (75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 604-605) . The court also rejected the argument that the predicate insurance provisions could not support a private action under the unfair competition statute because the provisions were regulatory in nature, noting that the violation of a regulation may form the basis for an action under the unfair competition statute (75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 606) .

[b] Ongoing Wrongful Conduct

Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , involved a continuing dispute between defendant Squaw Valley Ski Corporation and objecting parties over the development of ski runs in an area of Squaw Valley ski resort known as the "Tram Basin Bowl." When litigation threatened the planned project defendant in essence resorted to self-help and cut down more than 1800 trees. The trial court found defendant had engaged in unfair competition by committing unlawful business practices by violating provisions of the Z'berg-Nejedly Forest Practice Act (FPA), violating provisions of a conditional use permit and violating terms of a temporary restraining order. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. On appeal defendant contended that the court erroneously equated a business practice with multiple violations of law predicated on a single project, the development of one ski run. The court found this characterization misconceived. According to the court, the phrase "business practice" in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 indicated that the statute was directed at on-going wrongful conduct. In this case the court determined that: (1) the defendant's actions did not involve one event or a single episode, but instead, a large number of trees were cut over three different time periods; (2) these multiple violations related to a course of conduct, not one isolated incident; and (3) these actions could properly be termed business practices for purposes of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 520) .

[c] Intent Unnecessary

Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.51[3][b]. The defendant contended that it could not be guilty of violating Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 because it lacked the intent to engage in an unlawful business practice. The court ruled that such an intent was not an element of this violation. According to the court, the statute imposed strict liability and it was not necessary to show that the defendant intended to injure anyone. Here, defendant intended to cut down the trees and did so. The fact that it may have believed its conduct was lawful, was not a defense (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 520) .

[d] Forest Practice Act Violations

Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.51[3][b]. The trial court concluded that because defendant intended to sell the cut timber, a timber operation had taken place, necessitating a timber harvesting plan and a timberland conversion permit. The trial court found defendant's failure to obtain an approved timber harvesting plan violated the Forest Practice Act (FPA), Public Resources Code § 4511 et seq. and thus was an unlawful business practice. The court of appeal affirmed this ruling, concluding defendant's violations of FPA provisions constituted unlawful business practices (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 530) .

[e] Conditional Use Permit Violations

Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.51[3][b]. The trial court concluded that defendant had violated several conditions outlined in the conditional use permit issued to it. On appeal defendant contended that violations of a conditional use permit could not be deemed unlawful conduct because it does not have the force of law. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that defendant's violations of the conditional use permit could properly form the basis for a claim of unlawful business activity (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 532) . The court stated first that the unlawful practices prohibited by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 are any practices forbidden by law, be it civil or criminal, federal, state, or municipal, statutory, regulatory or court made. Then the court explained that because conditional use permits were part of local zoning laws, a violation of a permit's conditions was also a violation of the zoning law, and was therefore invalid. Lastly, the court cited a county code provision that expressly made unpermitted uses within a zoning district unlawful.

[f] Violations of Temporary Restraining Order

Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.51[3][b]. The defendant contended that violation of the temporary restraining order (TRO) issued against it in this case could not form the predicate for an unlawful business activity because the TRO was a nullity at the time it was allegedly violated and further suggested that any violation should have been addressed in contempt proceedings, not in an action for unlawful business practices. The court of appeal found neither contention to have merit. It held that defendant's violation of a temporary restraining order which was issuedimmediately after the trees were cut, could be prosecuted as an unlawful business practice (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 535) .

[g] Action Based on Transacting Insurance Without License Permitted

Stevens v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 594, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370 is discussed in § 235.51[3][a].

[h] Action Based on Violation of Fair Employment and Housing Act

In Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 , the plaintiff successfully sued his former employer for age discrimination in an action brought under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. (FEHA). The plaintiff also asserted a cause of action under the unfair competition statute for the same discriminatory conduct. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff on the age discrimination claim, and the following day the trial court, sitting without a jury by stipulation, heard the unfair competition claim. The court issued an injunction under the unfair competition statute permanently enjoining the defendant from discriminating on the basis of age, requiring the defendant to issue a repudiation of a prior company memo that directed the company to focus its energy on finding and promoting "young people," and requiring the defendant to disseminate a copy of the judgment to all company employees. After numerous post-trial motions were denied, the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court addressed the question of whether age discrimination in violation of the FEHA could be the basis for remedies under the unfair competition statute. The court concluded that the statute could be applied to conduct such as age discrimination, at least if the remedy sought is injunctive relief, which was the only remedy at issue in this particular case. The court noted that actionable conduct under the unfair competition statute includes conduct that is "unlawful" and that remedies under the unfair competition statute are cumulative rather than exclusive. The court also noted that the practice of age discrimination can provide an unfair competitive advantage, because it allows an employer to promote younger employees at salaries that are generally lower than the salaries of older employees with more seniority (109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 789-790) .

[i] Action Based on Federal Violations Not Preempted

In McKell v. Washington Mutual, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 227 , plaintiffs brought suit against a mortgage company and its subsidiaries, alleging that defendants overcharged plaintiffs for underwriting, tax services, and wire transfer fees in conjunction with home loans in violation of an implied agreement to charge only the amount that defendants paid for these services. Plaintiffs asserted a cause of action under the unfair competition statute, arguing that defendants' conduct constituted an unlawful business practice. Plaintiffs' claimed that defendants' conduct violated various statutory provisions, including the federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA) and related HUD regulations. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer, without leave to amend, in part on the grounds that defendants were not obligated to charge borrowers only the amount defendants paid for the relevant services. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to the cause of action for unfair competition. The court held in part that plaintiffs had stated a cause of action for unlawful business practices based on a violation of RESPA and that the unfair competition claims were not preempted by RESPA or other related federal provisions. While noting that the issue was unsettled, the court concluded that RESPA prohibited defendants from charging more for the underwriting, tax, and wire transfer services than the services cost the defendants (142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1476-1479) . On the issue of possible preemption by federal law, the court noted that RESPA and related regulations contained preemption clauses stating that state law is not preempted except to the extent that state law is inconsistent with federal law (142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1481) . Defendants also argued that plaintiffs claims were preempted under the federal Home Owners' Loan Act, which preempts the application of certain state law if that application would effectively regulate the lending practices of a federally chartered savings association (142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1485-1486) . However, the court concluded that, under the circumstances present in this case, an unfair competition action based on a violation of federal law would not be preempted, because plaintiffs were not seeking to impose different or additional requirements on defendant lenders beyond those imposed under federal law. The court noted that courts addressing other federal statutes had reached a similar conclusion (142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1485-1486) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.52

§ 235.52 Supporting Contention That Preliminary Injunction Is Proper to Enjoin Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203]--Misleading Advertising

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE GRANTED TO RESTRAIN, AS UNFAIR COMPETITION, THE MISLEADING USE OF ANOTHER PERSON'S ADVERTISING THAT HAS ACQUIRED A SECONDARY MEANING.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Statutory Unfair Competition Defined. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Misleading Use of Another Person's Advertising. The use of another person's advertising and publicity developments in a misleading manner is afforded protection within the law of unfair competition, and a preliminary injunction may be granted to enjoin the use of such advertising and publicity if it has acquired a secondary meaning (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Lee (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 23, 28-32, 27 Cal. Rptr. 833 (decided under prior law)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that preliminary injunctive relief is available under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 to enjoin unfair competition within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, specifically, the use of another's advertising and publicity is a misleading manner. They may be combined, in an appropriate case, with the points and authorities generally supporting the existence of a cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17203 that are set out in § 235.50. They may also be combined with the points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which they are raised. For example, they would most commonly be combined with general points and authorities supporting an application for a preliminary injunction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

The primary discussion of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203 and 17535 in the context of false or deceptive advertising is in Ch. 14, Advertising. Additional points and authorities from that chapter should be incorporated when applicable to the particular type of deceptive advertising involved.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For further discussion of statutory unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200-17208, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For a form of complaint for injunctive relief and restitution based on false advertising, including a count for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17203, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 14, Advertising (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to injunctive relief generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For a form of points and authorities supporting a demurrer to a complaint based on unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 and false advertising under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500, see Ch. 14, Advertising . For forms of points and authorities relating to issuance of injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misleading Use of Another Person's Advertising

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Lee (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 23, 27 Cal. Rptr. 833 , plaintiffs were coproducers of a film. They brought the action to enjoin, as unfair competition, the use by defendants of an advertising slogan that they claimed traded and capitalized on advance publicity covering the title adopted for their film. Defendants' slogan was designed to advertise a film arising from the same subject matter as plaintiffs' film. The superior court granted plaintiffs a preliminary injunction, and defendants appealed on the ground that there was no evidence showing that the plaintiffs' title had acquired a secondary meaning that would entitle plaintiffs to its exclusive use for their film.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court concluded that under the circumstances, the trial court had not abused its discretion in deciding that sufficient public association arose from plaintiffs' publicity so that a secondary meaning existed entitling plaintiffs' to a preliminary injunction. In view of the virtually unlimited availability to defendants of other words and phrases to advertise their film, there was no abuse of discretion when the trial court enjoined the use of a phrase that had been adopted and used extensively by plaintiffs, because it appeared that irreparable damage might result to plaintiffs and there would be no corresponding damage to defendants (212 Cal. App. 2d 23, 28-32) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.53

§ 235.53 Supporting Contention That Restitution and Disgorgement of Profits Are Authorized Remedies for Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

SECTION 17203 OF THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE CONTEMPLATES SUCH BROAD REMEDIES AS RESTITUTION AND DISGORGEMENT OF PROFITS FROM DEFENDANTS WHO HAVE ENGAGED IN UNFAIR BUSINESS PRACTICES.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Restitution and Disgorgement of Profits as Appropriate Remedies. The broad range of remedies provided for in Section 17203 of the Business and Professions Code includes restitution or disgorgement of profits or both. The statute expressly entitles a court to take whatever action is necessary to prevent the use by any person of any unfair business practice, and to restore to any person in interest any property acquired by means of the unfair business practice. Restitutionary relief may be necessary to accomplish complete justice and to deter unfair practices by not allowing wrongdoers to keep their illicit profits (People v. Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 339-341, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34).

[Optional] C. Business and Professions Code Section 17203 Is Not Unconstitutionally Vague. Section 17203 of the Business and Professions Code is not unconstitutionally vague in permitting "disgorgement to the State." The wrongdoer is not entitled to be made aware to whom restitution might later be made. A statute is not void for indefiniteness if it contains a reasonably adequate disclosure of the legislative intent regarding the evil to be combated in language that gives fair notice of the proscribed practices (People v. Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 343, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34).

[Optional] D. Back Wages May Be Recovered as Restitution. As restitution under Business and Professions Code

Section 17203, a defendant may be compelled to pay back wages that were unlawfully withheld from employees (Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Prods. Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 163, 176-178, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518, 999 P.2d 706).

[Optional] E. Retail Consumer May Recover Restitution From Manufacturer. A plaintiff who purchases a product because of false or misleading advertisements or product packaging statements is entitled to recover from the product manufacturer as restitution the revenue obtained from the sale of the product, even if the plaintiff purchased the product from a retailer rather than directly from the manufacturer (Shersher v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 1494, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 634).

[Optional] F. Restitution May Be Based on Money Paid to Defendant's Agent. A defendant may be ordered to pay restitution even if plaintiff did not pay the money directly to that defendant, as for example, when the money was paid to an agent for the defendant or otherwise was paid to an enterprise of which defendant was an integral part and defendant directly benefited financially from the payments (Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 589).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that restitution and disgorgement of profits are remedies authorized by Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. Paragraph B sets forth the general statement of the law, while the optional paragraphs make additional points that may be used if appropriate.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

Counsel may wish to incorporate authorities from Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions, § 41.71, dealing with the fluid class recovery concept, which is one way of implementing judgments for restitution and disgorgement. The California Supreme Court has held that disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund is authorized only in a class action suit and may not be used in a representative action that has not been certified as a class action [Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 137, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 ; see § 235.60].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restitution and Disgorgement of Profits as Appropriate Remedies

People v. Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , was a decision issued after the Supreme Court vacated the original appellate decision and retransferred the matter for reconsideration. The underlying action was brought by the San Francisco district attorney against two related corporations for violation of San Francisco's Subdivision Code by selling seven condominium units designated as part of the city's low- or moderate-income housing stock at prices in excess of the ceiling. The district attorney sought injunctive relief, disgorgement of profits, restitution, an order requiring defendants to provide moderate-income housing in San Francisco equal to that removed from the city's stock by the defendants, and a penalty of $2,500 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206] for each of the seven units. The trial court enjoined the corporations from further violations of the Subdivision Code and assessed the civil penalties, but did not believe it had authority to order disgorgement of profits, restitution, or replacement of the lost units. Both parties appealed, defendants contending that they were not bound by the 1979 amendments to San Francisco's Subdivision Code, and the district attorney seeking disgorgement and restitution.

The court of appeal agreed that the 1979 amendments controlled the situation, but held that relief under Bus. & Prof.

Code § 17203 need not be limited to injunction and civil penalties, and so reversed only to that extent and remanded for further proceedings. The apartment building to be converted into condominiums was owned by a partnership controlled by Dr. Powers. In 1978, as a condition of approval of the project, and one which the partnership agreed to, the planning commission required that the units remain part of the city's low- or moderate-income housing stock. The Subdivision Code was amended in 1979 to specify that the price ceilings for units designated as part of the city's low- or moderate-income housing stock applied to resales as well as to the initial sale after conversion. After tentative map approval, the partnership sold all its equity in the units to Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc., which took out a building permit and completed the work necessary for final map approval, which was given in May 1980. After the state issued the final subdivision report in September 1980, Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. sold the units in bulk to another corporation formed by Dr. Powers at $61,531 each, which comported with the low- and moderate-income ceiling then in effect. That corporation, also a defendant in the action, sold one unit at the restricted price and the remaining seven at prices ranging from $80,000 to $99,000. Because each sale was a violation of the San Francisco Subdivision Code, each was an unfair business practice within the meaning of Bus. &Prof. Code § 17000 et seq. (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 338-339) . The court of appeal said that the trial court was not required to limit relief to injunction and civil remedies and that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 contemplates the type of relief sought by the district attorney. The court also noted that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 permits prosecution of a 17203 action by a district attorney such as San Francisco's (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 339) .

The court felt there was little question but that the broad range of remedies provided for in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 includes restitution or disgorgement of profits or both restitution and disgorgement. The statute expressly entitles a court to take such actions as may be necessary to prevent the use by any person of any unfair business practice, and to restore to any person in interest any property acquired by means of the unfair business practice. Further, although it was not aware of any case that had decided if restitution and disgorgement could be ordered in an action brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, the court found it to be clear, from Fletcher v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 442, 153 Cal. Rptr. 28, 591 P.2d 51 , that those remedies are proper in an action brought for false advertising, which is also an unfair practice (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 340) . Fletcher was decided under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, the language of which is substantially similar to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. The court of appeal cited extensively from Fletcher for the proposition that the statutory language was intended by the legislature to arm trial courts with broad discretionary power to order restitutionary relief to accomplish complete justice and to deter unfair practices, which could not be done by allowing wrongdoers to keep their illicit profits (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 340-341) . The court of appeal concluded that as a general rule a trial court in ruling on an unfair trade practice has the power to order disgorgement, restitution, or both as relief ancillary to an injunction (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 341) . The court noted that restitution and disgorgement are not the same as damages, thus distinguishing Industrial Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 257 Cal. Rptr. 655 [see § 235.57] (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 341 n.8).

[b] Business and Professions Cod Section 17203 Is Not Unconstitutionally Vague

The facts and procedural background of People v. Thomas Shelton Powers, M.D., Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , are discussed in § 235.53[3][a]. Defendants also urged that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 was unconstitutionally vague in permitting "disgorgement to the State." The court said this presumably amounted to a claim that a wrongdoer not only was entitled to be made aware that its wrongful act is wrong, but was entitled to know to whom restitution might later be made. The court was aware of no authority to support such a theory. Rather, a statute will not be declared void for indefiniteness if it contains a reasonably adequate disclosure of the legislative intent regarding the evil to be combated in language that gives fair notice of the proscribed practices (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 343) . Nor did the court agree that its construction of Section 17203 in any way deprives defendants of property without notice (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 343-344) . That property having been gained wrongfully, the defendant has no valid ownership interest in it (2 Cal. App. 4th 330, 344) .

[c] Back Wages May Be Recovered as Restitution

In Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Prods. Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518, 999 P.2d 706 , the plaintiff filed an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 and various Labor Code provisions seeking restitution, penalties, and attorney's fees from her former employer. These claims stemmed from the employer's failure to pay the plaintiff and other employees overtime wages allegedly owed for the years after the employer switched the work week from five 8-hour days to four 10-hour or longer days. The plaintiff alleged that under an applicable Industrial Welfare Commission wage order, overtime pay at a rate of time-and-a-half was owed for all hours worked in excess of eight on any day, and at double the rate of pay for hours worked in excess of 12, but that the employer had failed to pay this overtime. As part of her action, the plaintiff sought restitution to her and the other employees of the unpaid overtime under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. The trial court found that the defendant had failed to prove that it was exempt from the applicable wage order and awarded plaintiff the overtime pay, interest, and penalty she sought on her own behalf. However, the trial court denied the requested injunction, because the practice complained of had been discontinued, and denied restitution to the other employees, believing that such restitution could only be ordered ancillary to an injunction. Both parties appealed. Before the appeal was heard, the Supreme Court ruled in another case that restitution could be ordered under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 even without an injunction. The defendant conceded that the Supreme Court's opinion overruled the trial court's basis for denying restitution to the other employees, but argued that the judgment should be upheld because the plaintiff lacked standing to seek restitution for the other employees and that a judgment ordering payment of unpaid overtime wages would be an award of damages not permitted under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203.

The court of appeal reversed that part of the trial court's judgment that had denied restitution for the other employees. The appellate court rejected the defendant's challenge to the plaintiff's standing to seek relief for the other employees, ruling that a class action was not required under the facts of the case. The court of appeal also rejected the defendant's argument that an award of the unpaid wages would be an impermissible damage award. The defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the court of appeal. In addressing the question of whether an award of back wages wrongfully withheld would constitute an impermissible award of damages, the Court ruled that it would not. The Court noted that although damages are not recoverable under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, the statute specifically authorizes recovery of restitution so that a plaintiff may recover money or property obtained from the plaintiff, or persons represented by the plaintiff, through unfair or unlawful business practices (23 Cal. 4th 163, 173) . The Court also noted that a monetary damage award in some tort cases may include an element of restitution. However, the Court concluded that an order for payment of wages that were unlawfully withheld from an employee could constitute restitution that is permissible under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 and would not constitute an award of damages. Restitution, as used in the unfair competition law, is not limited to the return of moneyor property that was once in the possession of the plaintiff, but may include earned wages that are due and payable and have been earned in exchange for the labor of the employee (23 Cal. 4th 163, 176-178) .

[d] Retail Consumer May Recover Restitution From Manufacturer

In Shersher v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 634 , plaintiff purchased wireless computer router products built by Microsoft Corp. These products contained statements on their packaging indicating that they were capable of wireless data transmission of either 11 Megabits per second or 54 Megabits per second, although the packaging did not reveal that the actual transmission speeds of these products were lower. Plaintiff brought suit for himself and other similar consumers under the unfair competition statute and related statutes based on these alleged false advertisements and misrepresentations, seeking, among other remedies, restitution under the unfair competition statute. Microsoft moved to strike the claim for restitution on the basis that the California Supreme Court had stated in Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1149, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 , that "[a]ny award that plaintiff would recover from defendants would not be restitutionary as it would not replace any money or property that defendants took directly from plaintiff." Because plaintiff had purchased through a retailer, rather than directly from Microsoft, Microsoft argued that recovery of revenue they derived from the sale of the wireless products would not be restitutionary as the revenue was not derived directly from plaintiff and the members of his class. The trial court agreed and struck the claim for restitution. Plaintiff filed a petition for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the writ and ordered the trial court to reinstate the restitution claim. The court concluded that the trial court had read the Supreme Court's statement in Korea Supply too broadly, and that the proper lesson to be learned from that case was that "restitution means the return of money to those persons from whom it was taken or who had an ownership interest in it" (154 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 1497) . However, the court of appeal read nothing in that case to suggest that consumers would be precluded from seeking the return of money that they paid for a product that was not as represented by the manufacturer. The court noted that plaintiff and other members of the putative class clearly had held an ownership interest in the money sought to be recovered, even though the products were purchased from a retailer rather than directly from Microsoft (154 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 1498-1500) .

[e] Restitution May Be Based on Money Paid to Defendant's Agent

In Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 589 , plaintiff filed a class action under the unfair competition statute alleging that defendant insurance entities violated Ins. Code § 381(f) by charging a $5 monthly "service charge" when an insured selected the insurer's monthly billing plan for automobile insurance. Plaintiff argued that this service charge constituted part of the premium, and as such, was required to be stated on the face of the policy. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of plaintiff class and ordered restitution of $115,556,827 based on the amount of the service charges paid by the class during the relevant period. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court first affirmed the trial court's finding that the service charge was properly considered part of the premium for the insurance provided by defendants and therefore should have been revealed on the policy in accordance with Ins. Code § 381(f) (171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1323-1333) . The court also held that an action under the unfair competition statute could be based on this violation of the Insurance Code (171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1336) . The court then held that the insurance entities could be ordered to pay restitution even though the monthly service charges were paid not to them, but to a separate entity created in order to handle the processing of monthly payments. The court noted that the servicing entity was incorporated and wholly owned by one of the insurance entities, and to the extent that the servicing entity profited by the service charges, its net worth increased and that value was passed on to the insurance entity through increased stock value. In addition, the record showed that the servicing entity paid the insurance entity for the use of equipment and personnel needed to perform the servicing. Thus, it could be inferred that the insurance entity actually received a substantial amount of the service charges, albeit indirectly. The court also noted that because the servicing entity was acting as the insurance entity's billing and collecting agent, the insurance entity could be ordered as a principal to pay restitution for the payments made to its agent (171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1340-1342) . However, the court concluded that plaintiff had not sufficiently alleged in the operative pleading that the Insurance Code violation caused him to lose money, that is, he had not alleged or shown that he would not have paid the service charges had the service charges been stated on the policy. Due to this failure, summary judgment in favor of plaintiff was inappropriate (171 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1350) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.54

§ 235.54 Supporting Contention That Statutory Action for Unfair Competition May Be Prosecuted as Class Action and Seek Disgorgement of Profits Into Fluid Recovery Fund [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A CLAIM UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE MAY BE PROSECUTED AS A CLASS ACTION, IF THE STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION ARE MET, AND IF A CLASS HAS PROPERLY BEEN CERTIFIED, PLAINTIFFS MAY SEEK DISGORGEMENT OF PROFITS INTO A FLUID RECOVERY FUND AS A REMEDY.

A. Statutory Unfair Competition Claim May Be Brought as Class Action. An action brought under the unfair competition statute may be prosecuted as a class action, if the requirements for class certification are met (Corbett v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 654-655, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46).

B. Only Named Class Representatives Must Show Standing. So long as a class is otherwise properly certified, only the named class representatives must specifically show standing to bring the action and unnamed class members need not do so (In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 321, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20).

C. Class Certification Supports Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund as Remedy. If an unfair competition action is prosecuted as a certified class action, the plaintiffs in that action may seek as a remedy the disgorgement of illegal profits into a fluid recovery fund (Corbett v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 655, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a claim under the unfair competition statute may be prosecuted as a class action if the requirements for class certification are met, and that if a class is properly certified, the plaintiffs may properly seek disgorgement of illegal profits into a fluid recovery fund. It should be noted that pursuant to amendments made by Proposition 64, passed by the voters in 2004, representative actions under the unfair competition statute must be filed as class actions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203; Code Civ. Proc. § 382; see Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 980, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In the appropriate procedural context, the plaintiffs may want to include facts that would support the certification of a class of plaintiffs.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the contention that disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund is available as a remedy in a representative action under the unfair competition statute that has not been certified as a class action, see § 235.60.

For memoranda of points and authorities dealing with the fluid class recovery concept, and with class and representative actions generally, see Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Unfair Competition Claim May Be Brought as Class Action

In Corbett v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 , the plaintiff filed a class action suit against a car dealership and a bank based on allegations that when the dealership arranged car financing for the plaintiff and other buyers, the bank approved the financing at a rate approximately five percentage points below the rate the dealership charged the buyers, with the bank and the dealershipsharing the difference in the interest charges. Based on this practice, which was not revealed to the buyers, the plaintiff alleged multiple causes of action, including a cause of action under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The car dealership filed a motion relating to the unfair competition claim to strike the plaintiff's allegations seeking disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund, arguing that such a remedy was not allowed under the unfair competition statute. The trial court granted the motion, ruling in part that the court could not as a matter of law certify a class to pursue a claim under the unfair competition statute, and without class certification, disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund was not permitted under the unfair competition statute. When the plaintiff's motion for class certification on the remaining claims was denied, the plaintiff filed a petition for writ of mandate, arguing that class certification was available under the unfair competition statute.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to vacate its order refusing to consider class certification under the unfair competition statute. The court recognized that although many courts had presumed that class certification was appropriate in an action brought under the unfair competition statute, no court had directly addressed the question of whether this presumption was correct. Faced squarely with the issue, the court of appeal held that a plaintiff may prosecute a claim brought under the unfair competition statute as a class action, if the requirements for class certification under Code Civ. Proc. § 382 are met, and if a class is properly certified, a plaintiff may seek disgorgement of unlawful profits into a fluid recovery fund pursuant to the statutes governing class actions that provide for such a remedy (101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 654-655) . The court reviewed the California Supreme Court's opinion in Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 [see § 235.60[3][a]]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund was not an appropriate remedy in a representative action brought under the unfair competition statute that was not a class action. However,the court of appeal rejected the defendants' argument that the Supreme Court's holding precluded prosecution of a class action under the unfair competition statute. The court of appeal interpreted the holding in Kraus as standing only for the proposition that in the absence of actual class certification, disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund was not available as a remedy. In fact, the court of appeal noted, the Supreme Court in an earlier case had implicitly agreed that an unfair competition claim could be brought as a class action by holding, in another case brought under the unfair competition statute, that the trial court had erroneously rejected class certification on the grounds that the plaintiff could not prove that each individual borrower lacked knowledge of a bank's unfair practice (101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 658-661) .

The court of appeal also reviewed the relevant legislative history and found no legislative intention to preclude the prosecution of unfair competition claims as class actions (101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 663-670) . Finally, the court concluded that allowing class certification and disgorgement of unlawful profits into a fluid recovery fund in a class action brought under the unfair competition statute was consistent with the purposes of the unfair competition statute and would not unduly burden defendants beyond the fact that it could force them to relinquish all profits they obtained through their illegal practices (101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 671) .

[b] Only Named Class Representatives Must Show Standing

In In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 , plaintiffs brought a class action suit against multiple tobacco companies based on allegations that the companies had violated the unfair competition and false advertising statutes by conducting a decades-long campaign of deceptive advertising and misleading statements designed to hide both the addictive nature of nicotine contained in cigarettes and the relationship between smoking and disease. Prior to the passage of Proposition 64 in 2004, the trial court certified a plaintiff class of those persons that smoked one or more cigarettes in California between June 1993 and April 2001 and were exposed to defendants' marketing and advertising activities in California. After passage of Proposition 64 and amendment to the standing requirements, however, the trial court decertified the class and concluded that each class member must show individually that he or she met the requirements for standing, that is, that he or she had suffered injury in fact and lost money or property as a result of defendant's conduct. The court of appeals affirmed this decertification.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that after passage of Proposition 64, assuming a proper class may otherwise be certified, only the named class representatives are required to show that they meet the requirements for standing to bring the action. Under the language used in the amended version of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, only the person pursuing the representative claim must meet the requirements for standing, although he or she must also meet the requirements for bringing a class action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 315-316) . Moreover, the Court concluded that nothing in the express language of Proposition 64 altered the accepted principles of class action procedure, under which the issue of standing applies only to class representatives and not to absent class members (46 Cal. 4th 298, 316-317) . The Court also noted the absence of any indication in the ballot pamphlet materials for Proposition 64 suggesting that an alteration in class action procedures was an intended result (46 Cal. 4th 298, 318-319) . Moreover, according to the court, requiring all class members to demonstrate standing is not necessary to prevent suits from being brought by attorneys without any plaintiff who was actually harmed by defendant's conduct, the problem that Proposition 64 was intended to address (46 Cal. 4th 298, 321) . The Court also noted that imposing a requirement that all class members demonstrate standing would effectively prevent the class action mechanism from being used in unfair competition actions, a result that would undermine the promise made by the proponents of Proposition 64 that the changes made by the proposition would not undermine the ability of the unfair competition statute to vindicate consumer rights (46 Cal. 4th 298, 321) . Finally, the Court noted that the remedies provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, left unchanged by Proposition 64, provide for restitution to any person in interest of any money or property that "may have been acquired" by means of the actionable conduct, and this language imposes a less strenuous burden than the requirements for demonstrating standing to bring the action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 320) .

NOTE:

When certifying a plaintiff class under the current requirements imposed by Proposition 64, even though only the named plaintiff must meet the requirements to establish standing, the class certification process still necessarily includes an inquiry into whether the material questions of law or fact common to the members of the class are substantially similar and predominate over questions affecting the individual class members [Steroid Hormone Product Cases (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 145, 158, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329] . However, class certification should not be denied on the grounds that factual issues surrounding actual injury and causation are not substantially similar among the unnamed class members if those inquiries are not necessary to establishing a right to the remedy sought [Steroid Hormone Product Cases (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 145, 154-155, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329] .

[c] Class Certification Supports Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund as Remedy

Corbett v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 , is discussed in § 235.54[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.55

§ 235.55 Supporting Contention That Action for Injunction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203] Is Not Barred by Federal Preemption--Unfair Marketing Activities by Health Maintenance Organization Soliciting Medicare-Eligible Individuals

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACTION FOR AN INJUNCTION UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17203 TO PREVENT UNFAIR COMPETITION BY A HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATION (HMO) IN SOLICITING MEDICARE-ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS AND MEDICARE SUPPLEMENTAL COVERAGE IS NOT BARRED, UNDER THE PREEMPTION DOCTRINE, BY FEDERAL REGULATION OF HMO MARKETING ACTIVITIES DIRECTED AT MEDICARE-ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Federal Regulation of Marketing Activities by Health Maintenance Organizations as Not Barring Injunctive Relief Under State Law. An action for injunctive relief to prevent violations of state unfair trade practices laws (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17500; Civ. Code § 1770) in a health maintenance organization's marketing of subscriptions and Medicare supplemental plans to Medicare-eligible individuals (elderly and disabled individuals) is not preempted by federal regulation (42 U.S.C.S. § 1395mm; 42 C.F.R. § 417.223) of HMO activities in that area (Solorzano v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1139-1149, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an action for an injunction under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, to prevent unfair competition by a health maintenance organization (HMO) in soliciting Medicare-eligible individuals for subscriptions and Medicare supplemental coverage, is not barred, under the preemption doctrine, by federal regulation of HMO marketing activities directed at Medicare-eligible individuals.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Regulation of Marketing Activities by Health Maintenance Organizations as Not Barring Injunctive Relief Under State Law

In Solorzano v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 , elderly individuals sued a health maintenance organization (HMO) for injunctive relief and damages, alleging violations of unfair trade practices laws [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17500; Civ. Code § 1770] in the HMO's marketing activities by which the plaintiffs were induced to become members of the HMO and subscribe to a Medicare-supplemental plan sponsored by the HMO. The HMO obtained an order granting its motion for judgment on the pleadings with respect to the claim for injunctive relief, on the ground that the federal preemption doctrine barred state-law actions for injunctive relief.

In a mandate proceeding the court of appeal directed the trial court to vacate that order, holding that federal regulation of HMO marketing activities directed at Medicare-eligible individuals [42 U.S.C.S. § 1395mm; 42 C.F.R. § 417.223] does not preempt state-law actions for injunctive relief under unfair trade practices laws (10 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1139-1149) . The court concluded that the federal regulation is not pervasive, the state laws in question do not conflict with the federal laws, and there is no evidence that Congress intended to preempt the field of regulating HMO marketing activities (10 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1146-1149) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.56

§ 235.56 Supporting Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition Is Not Barred by Res Judicata--Private Plaintiff May Bring Action Subsequent to Action Brought by Public Prosecutor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A PRIVATE PLAINTIFF MAY MAINTAIN AN ACTION UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE EVEN THOUGH AN EARLIER ACTION WAS BROUGHT UNDER THE STATUTE BY A PUBLIC PROSECUTOR, IF THE PLAINTIFF DID NOT RECEIVE RESTITUTION FROM THE DEFENDANT THROUGH THE EARLIER ACTION.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Res Judicata Does Not Preclude Action. Because an unfair competition action brought by a public prosecutor is a law enforcement action primarily for the benefit of the public, res judicata principles do not prevent a person who has been defrauded from seeking restitution in a separate unfair competition suit brought subsequent to an action brought by a public prosecutor, at least if the private plaintiff did not receive restitution from the earlier action brought by the prosecutor (Payne v. National Collection Sys., Inc. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1047, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a private plaintiff may bring an action under the unfair competition statute even though an earlier action was prosecuted under the statute by the Attorney General or another public prosecutor. Under these circumstances, principles of res judicata do not prevent a private plaintiff from following an action brought on behalf of the people by a public prosecutor with an action to recover restitution for losses sustained by the plaintiff, at least if the private plaintiff did not recover restitution as a result of the earlier action.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff did not receive restitution through the earlier actionbrought by the public prosecutor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Does Not Preclude Action

In Payne v. National Collection Sys., Inc. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 260 , the plaintiffs were 23 individuals who filed a class action against TWA Airlines and a collection corporation. The plaintiffs alleged that TWA advertised that jobs were available, although in fact immediate openings were not actually being offered. Instead, TWA required applicants to attend a training course, charged $2,800 for the course, and convinced applicants to enter into credit agreements for the costs of the course if they could not pay for it. However, TWA controlled who graduated form the course and who received jobs, even though all applicants who began the course and entered into the credit agreements were obligated to repay the costs of the course, often at high rates of interest. The collection corporation then acted as TWA's collection agency and aggressively pursued payment for the course, despite its knowledge of illegal and unfair conduct by TWA in running the course. The plaintiffs' suit alleged a cause of action under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The defendants successfully demurred to the class action on the grounds that judgments had already been rendered against them for the same conduct in a representative action brought by the Attorney General and a district attorney. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that principles of res judicata did not apply to preclude the private action under the circumstances of the case. An unfair competition action brought by a prosecutor is a law enforcement action primarily for the benefit of the public, and as such, a defendant is not entitled to the same safeguards to protect against multiple civil suits. Therefore, res judicata principles do not prevent a person who has been defrauded from seeking restitution in a separate unfair competition suit brought subsequent to the action brought by a public prosecutor (91 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1046-1047) . Because none of the private plaintiffs who were members of the proposed class had received restitution through the earlier action brought by the prosecutor, they were entitled to seek restitution through a private action brought under the unfair competition statute (91 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1047) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.56A

§ 235.56A Supporting Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition is Not Barred by Litigation Privilege--Plaintiff Was Not Party to Underlying Litigation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE LITIGATION PRIVILEGE OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 47(b) IS NOT A DEFENSE IN AN ACTION BROUGHT UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200 AGAINST AN ATTORNEY IF THE PLAINTIFF WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE EARLIER LITIGATION IN WHICH THE ALLEGEDLY PRIVILEGED CONDUCT OCCURRED.

Litigation Privilege Not Defense if Plaintiff Was Not Party in Underlying Litigation. The litigation privilege is not a defense in an unfair competition action brought against an attorney if the plaintiff was not a party to the earlier litigation in which the allegedly protected conduct occurred (American Prods. Co., Inc. v. Law Offices of Geller, Stewart & Foley, LLP (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1346, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 93).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that an attorney being sued for unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 may not defend the action by asserting the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) if the plaintiff in the unfair competition action was not a party to the underlying litigation in which the allegedly privileged conduct occurred.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the point of law stated and the facts of the case. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff was not a party to the underlying litigation in which the defendant's allegedly privileged conduct occurred.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 235.64.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Privilege Not Defense if Plaintiff Was Not Party in Underlying Litigation

In American Prods. Co., Inc. v. Law Offices of Geller, Stewart & Foley, LLP (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 93 , the plaintiff was the manufacturer of after-market automotive accessories sold by California retailers. The defendant, a law firm representing a consumer who bought some of these accessories, sent demand letters to two retailers alleging that the purchased accessories sold by the retailers were illegal to use in California. The letter requested payment of $2,500 to the consumer and $10,000 to the law firm. When the retailers failed to comply with the demands, the law firm filed suit against the retailers for violations of the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code§ 17200. After being notified of the litigation, the plaintiff filed suit against the law firm, also basing this action on alleged violations of the unfair competition statute. The plaintiff alleged that the law firm had a practice of sending demand letters to, and then suing, California businesses without a good faith basis in order to coerce them into settlements. The defendant successfully moved for summary judgment, arguing that its conduct was absolutely privileged under the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b). Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court reviewed the California Supreme Court's decision in Rubin v. Green (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1187, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 847 P.2d 1044 [see § 235.64[3][b]]. In that opinion, the Supreme Court held that the litigation privilege was a defense to an action seeking an injunction under the unfair competition statute. In the course of its decision, the Supreme Court emphasized its concern with avoiding derivative litigation based on tactics taken in prior litigation between the same parties, and also noted that its holding did not fully protect a defendant because other parties who were not adversaries in the underlying litigation would have standing to bring suit under the unfair competition statute. A court of appeal opinion subsequent to Rubin, Kashian v. Harriman (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 892, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 , interpreted the Supreme Court's statements to mean that the litigation privilege would not be a defense if the party asserting the unfair competition claim was not a party to the underlying litigation in which the allegedly privileged conduct took place. The court of appeal in this particular case agreed with that conclusion. The court of appeal held that the litigation privilege did not protect the law firm from the unfair competition suit because the plaintiff was not a party to the underlying litigation and the Supreme Court's analysis in Rubin was specifically limited to unfair competition actions brought by plaintiffs who had been parties to the underlying litigation. After concluding that the litigation privilege did not apply, the court ruled that the evidence failed to support summary judgment for the defendant (134 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1346) .

NOTE:

The continued vitality of the court of appeal holding in American Prods. Co., Inc. v. Law Offices of Geller, Stewart & Foley is suspect, as the California Supreme Court, while not mentioning the case, subsequently rejected a broad exception to the litigation privilege for parties who did not participate in the underlying litigation [Action Apartment Assn., Inc. v. City of Santa Monica (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 1232, 1248, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 398, 163 P.3d 89 ; see People ex rel. Gallegos v. The Pacific Lumber Co. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 950, 961 & n.5, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.57

§ 235.57 Opposing Contention That Private Plaintiff May Recover Money Damages [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17203 DOES NOT AUTHORIZE AN AWARD OF MONEY DAMAGES TO A PRIVATE PLAINTIFF.

A. Private Action for Relief From Statutory Unfair Competition Authorized. [See § 235.50[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Recovery of Money Damages by Private Plaintiff Is Not Authorized. Business and Professions Code Section 17203 does not authorize a court to award damages as well as injunctive relief to a private plaintiff (Heller v. Norcal Mut. Ins. Co. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 30, 45, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 876 P.2d 999 ; Industrial Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096-1097, 257 Cal. Rptr. 655).

[Optional] C. Restitution Is Measured by Defendant's Gain. Because a plaintiff is not entitled to damages under Business and Professions Code Section 17203, the proper measure of restitution is the amount received by the defendant as a result of the improper conduct, even if the amount of monetary damages suffered by the plaintiff as a consequence of the conduct is greater (Inline, Inc. v. Apace Moving Sys., Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 895, 903-904, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a private litigant may recover money damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. Note, however, that remedies under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. are cumulative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205], so a private litigant may recover damages under some other provision and injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, as was done successfully in Allied Grape Growers v.

Bronco Wine Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 432, 249 Cal. Rptr. 872 [see § 235.50[3][e]]. Similarly, a private litigant may recover "restitutionary" damages pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 [see Bronco Wine Co. v. Frank A. Logoluso Farms (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 699, 704, 721, 262 Cal. Rptr. 899 (that portion of award was not challenged)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Money Damages by Private Plaintiff Is Not Authorized

In Heller v. Norcal Mut. Ins. Co. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 30, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 876 P.2d 999 , plaintiff had sued defendants for damages, alleging violations of statutory and constitutional privacy rights and numerous common law torts arising out of allegedly improper ex parte discussions about plaintiff's medical condition between her treating physician and an insurance company that was defending a separate medical malpractice action brought by plaintiff against another physician. Among other things, plaintiff's complaint included a cause of action for conspiring to commit unfair business practices in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. With little discussion, the Supreme Court held that the court of appeal had properly affirmed the trial court's judgment sustaining the defendants' demurrer to this cause of action. The Court noted that damages are not available for claims under the Unfair Business Practices Act (8 Cal. 4th 30, 45) .

In Industrial Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 257 Cal. Rptr. 655 , the plaintiffs (real parties) were members of a homeowners association who owned a mobile home that was damaged by a mudslide. They sued the homeowners association, and the association's insurer defended and settled the lawsuit. Then plaintiffs brought an action against the insurer seeking compensatory and punitive damages alleging many causes of action, including one for violation of the Business and Professions Code provisions forbidding unfair competition, and one for violation of their rights as third-party beneficiaries under Ins. Code § 790.03(h). The insurer's motion for summary judgment was denied as to these causes of action, and it sought review by writ of mandate.

The court of appeal directed issuance of a peremptory writ directing that the order denying summary judgment on those causes of action be vacated and an order granting summary adjudication of those issues be entered. The court first considered the language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, and noted that it is very similar in wording and purpose to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, which prohibits false and misleading statements in advertising, and that both provisions were derived from former Civ. Code § 3369. The Supreme Court has held in Chern v. Bank of Am. (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 866, 875, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310 , that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535 does not support the award of compensatory damages to private individuals, but limits their relief to equitable remedies, namely injunction and restitutionary damages. The court noted two federal cases [Kates v. Crocker Nat'l Bank (9th Cir. 1985) 776 F.2d 1396, 1398 ; Newport Components v. NEC Home Elec. (C.D. Cal. 1987) 671 F. Supp. 1525, 1550-1551] that held that if the Chern ruling was true of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17535, it must also be true of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 (209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096) .

The cases cited by plaintiffs did not compel a contrary result. In Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 215, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 [see § 235.50[3][b]], the Supreme Court said it was not deciding whether or not damages were available to a private litigant under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 (209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096) . In United Farm Workers of Am. v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 334, 343-345, 120 Cal. Rptr. 904 (which was decided under former Civ. Code § 3369), damages were allowed, but only on the theory that the existence of a penal or regulatory statute made for the benefit of the class of consumers gave members of that class a right to sue in tort (209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1096-1097) . Even if that principle retains some validity in other areas of the law, the court said it is no longer valid in the present context after Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 , which destroyed the private right of action under Ins.

Code § 790.03(h) (209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1097) .

[b] Restitution Is Measured by Defendant's Gain

In Inline, Inc. v. Apace Moving Sys., Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 895, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 , the plaintiff was a judgment creditor seeking to attach assets owned by the judgment debtor, but many of these assets were hidden under an incorporated entity owned by the debtor's brother. These assets, which included several hundred thousand dollars worth of electronics equipment and office furniture, were eventually sold at a warehouseman's lien auction for $20 in an attempt to recover unpaid storage fees. The plaintiff subsequently purchased them from a third party for $100,000. The plaintiff then sued the warehouse, arguing that the auction was commercially unreasonable under U.C.C. § 7210, and sought restitution under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. The trial court found that the auction was commercially unreasonable, but limited restitution to the $20 received for the goods by the warehouse at auction. The plaintiff appealed, arguing that he was entitled, as restitution, to the $100,000 that he was required to pay to gain possession of the goods.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that the plain language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 did not permit recovery of more than $20 in restitution from the defendant. The court noted that the statute permitted recovery of amounts "necessary to restore to any person ... money or property ... [that] may have been acquired by means of such unfair competition." The only amount acquired by the defendant by means of the unfair competition--in this case, the commercially unreasonable auction--was the $20 paid for the goods at auction. To allow the plaintiff to recover the $100,000 that he paid to a third party to gain possession of the goods, even if payment of this amount was a consequence of the unreasonable auction, would be tantamount to allowing the plaintiff to recovercompensatory damages, which are not authorized under the statute (125 Cal. App. 4th 895, 903-904) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery of Money Damages by Private Plaintiff Is Not Authorized

E.W. French & Sons, Inc. v. General Portland, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 1392 , involved pendent state claims of unfair competition. The jury found that defendants had engaged in unfair, unlawful, and fraudulent business practices, and awarded the plaintiff $175,000. On appeal, that award was reversed. The court of appeals concluded that it was bound to apply the reasoning of Chern v. Bank of Am.(1976) 15 Cal. 3d 866, 127 Cal. Rptr. 110, 544 P.2d 1310 , that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 does not authorize an award of compensatory damages to a private plaintiff, despite equivocal dicta in Committee on Children's Television, Inc. v. General Foods (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 197, 197 Cal. Rptr. 783, 673 P.2d 660 (885 F.2d 1392, 1401-1402) .

In Bank of the West v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 1254, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538, 833 P.2d 545 , the California Supreme Court determined whether an insurance policy covering "advertising injuries," including unfair competition, covered a settlement the insured paid to private plaintiffs. After tracing the history of the unfair competition statutes, the Court noted that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 provides for disgorgement and restitution, but does not allow a private plaintiff to recover damages (2 Cal. 4th 1254, 1272-1273) .

In Safeco Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 265 Cal. Rptr. 585 , the court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate compelling the superior court to grant the real party-defendant-insurance company's motion for summary judgment against the plaintiff, who was injured by defendant's insured. The court of appeal agreed that Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Cos. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 287, 305-313, 250 Cal. Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58 , abolished a third party's private right of action for unfair claims settlement practices under Ins. Code § 790.03(h) (216 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1493) . Consequently, plaintiff had no cause of action against the insurer for damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (216 Cal. App. 3d 1491, 1494) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.58

§ 235.58 Opposing Contention That Private Plaintiff May Maintain Action For Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S ACTION WAS NOT AN UNLAWFUL, UNFAIR, OR FRAUDULENT BUSINESS ACT OR PRACTICE AS DEFINED UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200.

A. Statutory Unfair Competition Defined. As used in Chapter 5 of Part II, Division 7 (commencing with Section 17200), of the Business and Professions Code, unfair competition means and includes any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice, and unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising and any act prohibited by Chapter 1 (commencing with Section 17500) of Part 3 of Division 7 of the Business and Professions Code (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200).

[Optional] B. Liability Release Form Not Unlawful. Business and Professions Code Section 17200 does not prohibit releases which do not expressly include strict liability claims or which exclude claims prohibited by law (Olsen v. Breeze, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 608, 620, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818).

[Optional] C. Liquidated Damages Clause Not Unlawful. The inclusion of a liquidated damages clause terms in an employment contract is not an unlawful business practice under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (Californians for Population Stabilization v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 273, 290, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621).

[Optional] D. Unwitting Distribution of Contaminated Pet Food Not Act of Unfair Competition. The unwitting distribution of contaminated pet food into the stream of commerce is neither illegal, unfair nor fraudulent within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Section 17200 (Klein v. Earth Elements, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 965, 967, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623).

[Optional] E. Conduct Specifically Lawful Under Other Statute May Not Be Basis for Action Under Unfair Competition Law. A plaintiff may not recover under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq. if some other provision of law specifically legalizes the challenged conduct (Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 184, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition toa contention that a private plaintiff has stated a cause of action for statutory unfair competition as defined under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to address the issue of whether plaintiff has stated a cause of action for statutory unfair competition. For example, they may be combined with general points and authorities in support of a general demurrer to a complaint, or a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the wording of the release, and should argue that the release either does not expressly include strict liability claims or that it excludes claims prohibited by law.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgment generally, see Ch. 21, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

If appropriate, the points and authorities in § 235.50 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Release Form Not Unlawful

In Olsen v. Breeze, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 608, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 , plaintiff brought an action for unfair competition based on a requirement by a ski shop that he sign a form release as a condition of the return of his ski equipment. Plaintiff had taken his skis to defendant to have the ski bindings adjusted. As a condition for the return of his equipment, plaintiff was required to sign a form releasing defendant from any liability for injury resulting from use of the equipment, including injury caused by negligence, breach of warranty, or product defect. Plaintiff brought an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, contending that the release was unlawful and could not be enforced, and thus constituted unfair competition. The trial court granted a motion by defendant for summary adjudication of the unfair competition cause of action, and entered a judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal, noting that when the public interest is not implicated, private parties are free among themselves to shift a risk elsewhere than where the law would otherwise place it (48 Cal. App. 4th 608, 619) . In an earlier case [Westlye v. Look Sports, Inc. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1715, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781] , the court had held that the public interest does not preclude enforcement of an agreement to bar claims for negligent adjustment of ski bindings. However, the court also held in that case that an express disclaimer of liability will not insulate a distributor of ski equipment from strict liability for injuries caused by defective products. Plaintiff contended that defendant's release was unlawful because it was ambiguous regarding product defect or strict liability claims, and that the release must expressly exclude such claims. However, the court held that defendants are under no duty to outline in their releases the details of their customers' legal rights, and that as long as the releases do not expressly include strict liability claims or, alternatively, do exclude claims prohibited by law, they comply with the requirements of Westlye.

[b] Liquidated Damages Clause Not Unlawful

In Californians for Population Stabilization v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 273, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 621 , the defendant, a company that supplies Indian software engineers to California high tech corporations, was sued by a public interest group for statutory unfair competition under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Plaintiff contended that the $30,000 liquidated damages provision contained in defendant's employment agreements violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 as well as Civ. Code §§ 1670.5 and 1671. It maintained that the inclusion of unlawful terms in a form contract constituted unfair competition and violated under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. The trial court concluded that defendant's use of the liquidated damages clause did not constitute an unlawful business practice.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that given the current statutory policy which favors the validity of liquidated damages agreements except in certain consumer transactions, and which casts the burden on the opposing party to prove unreasonableness, the trial court correctly determined that defendant's use of the liquidated damages clause did not constitute an unlawful business practice. (58 Cal. App. 4th 273, 290) .

[c] Unwitting Distribution of Contaminated Pet Food Not Act of Unfair Competition

In Klein v. Earth Elements, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 965, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623 , plaintiff argued that a pet food distributor committed an act of unfair competition within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 when it unwittingly caused contaminated pet food to be distributed into the stream of commerce. The trial court determined that defendant had not engaged in any prohibited conduct under the statute and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the distributor's conduct was neither illegal, unfair nor fraudulent within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 (59 Cal. App. 4th 965, 967) . Plaintiff first argued that liability imposed under the doctrines of strict products liability and breach of the implied warranty of fitness, would support an independent action under the "unlawful" prong of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. The court determined that while these doctrines did provide for civil liability, they did not by themselves, describe acts or practices that were illegal. In its view the unintentional distribution of a defective product was beyond the scope of the "unlawful" prong of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. Plaintiff next argued that defendant's conduct was unfair. The court said that determination of whether a business practice was unfair entailed an examination of the impact of the practice on its victim, balanced against the reasons, justifications and motives of the alleged wrongdoer. Under this test, defendant's conduct was not unfair; while dogs got sick, the company's act was accidental and once discovered, it moved quickly to abate the harm. Finally, plaintiff argued that defendant's conduct was fraudulent because consumers would be deceived by a label on the defective product which assured them that they could feed the product to their pet with confidence that they were doing something good for their pet. The court responded that there was no deception here because defendant did nothing to cause the consuming public to accept the contaminated food as uncontaminated; indeed, by instituting a speedy and extensive recall effort, the company did what it could to inform the public of the problem (59 Cal. App. 4th 965, 970) .

[d] Conduct Specifically Lawful Under Other Statute May Not Be Basis for Action Under Unfair Competition Law

Cel-Tech Commc'ns, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548, 973 P.2d 527 , is discussed in § 235.50[3][l].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Conduct Specifically Lawful Under Other Statute May Not Be Basis for Action Under Unfair Competition Law

In Olszewski v. Scripps Health (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 798, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 69 P.3d 927 , the plaintiff, a Medi-Cal beneficiary, brought a class action suit against her medical care provider based on the provider's assertion of a lien under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 14124.791 and 14124.74. Those statutes allow a health care provider to assert a lien against any recovery from a third-party tortfeasor for the value of the health care provided to the Medi-Cal beneficiary, so long as the health care provider first reimburses the state for the amount of any Medi-Cal benefits received. The plaintiff, arguing that the lien was unenforceable because the state statutes conflicted with federal Medicaid law, brought several tort claims and a claim under the unfair competition statute. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer, the court of appeal affirmed as modified, and the California Supreme Court reversed in part and affirmed in part. The Supreme Court held that the plaintiff was correct that a lien asserted under the state statutes is invalid and unenforceable because it conflicts with federal provisions that restrict the right of health care providers to collect directly from Medi-Cal beneficiaries (30 Cal. 4th 798, 819-821) . However, the Court then held that the trial court was correct in dismissing the plaintiff's suit. According to the Court, the plaintiff's cause of action under the unfair competition statute could not be successfully prosecuted because the state statutory provisions authorizing the lien created a safe harbor protecting the defendant. After rejecting the plaintiff's claim that the asserted lien violated any federal law that was applicable to the health care provider, the Court rejected the attempt to apply retroactively its decision that the state statutes relied on by the defendant were invalid. The Court concluded that the defendant had a right to rely on the state statutes, and their presumed constitutionality, when deciding to assert the lien, and penalizing the defendant for that reliance would raise serious due process concerns (30 Cal. 4th 798, 828-829) . The Court then rejected the plaintiff's other tort claims on the grounds that the assertion of the statutory lien was protected by the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) (30 Cal. 4th 798, 831) .

In Chavez v. Whirlpool Corp. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 363, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 , the plaintiff was a consumer who brought an action against an appliance manufacturer and a retail dealer alleging violations of the Cartwright Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq., and the unfair competition law, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The plaintiff alleged that the manufacturer had announced minimum resale prices for its dishwashers, that it would refuse to sell to retailers who did not comply with the pricing policy, and that it would take steps to monitor which retailers were in compliance with the policy. The plaintiff also alleged that the retail dealer agreed to implement the manufacturer's policy, even though that retailer normally discounted its prices. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal held that under established case law, the conduct alleged by the plaintiff was not an unreasonable restraint of trade under the Cartwright Act, but was in fact conduct that a manufacturer was permitted to take (93 Cal. App. 4th 363, 373) . Because the conduct was specifically allowed under case law interpreting the antitrust laws, the plaintiff could not bring an action under the unfair competition law alleging that the same conduct violated that statute because it unreasonably restrained competition and harmed consumers (93 Cal. App. 4th 363, 374-375) .

In Shvarts v. Budget Group, Inc. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722 , the court of appeal was faced with the same issue and agreed with the analysis of an earlier case [Schnall v. Hertz Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439] , but the court rejected a claim based on fraud because the amount of the refueling surcharge was clearly printed on the first page of the car rental agreement (81 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1159-1160) .

In Schnall v. Hertz Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439 ,the plaintiff brought a class action against a car rental company from which the plaintiff had rented a car. The action sought damages and injunctive relief under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., based on a car refueling surcharge imposed but avoidable under the company's standard rental agreement. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court that Civ. Code § 1936(m)(2) [(now see Civ. Code § 1936(n)(2)], which permits rental car companies to impose charges for optional services if the car renter knows that the charge may be avoided, provided the rental car company with a "safe harbor" from claims under the unfair competition statute based on imposition of the refueling surcharge and the amount of the surcharge (78 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 1156, 1162) . By contrast, the court held that Civ. Code § 1936 did not protect the company from a claim under the unfair competition statute that the company unfairly or fraudulently advised its customers of the fuel service surcharge in a manner designed to induce the customers to incur the charge (78 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 1170) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.59

§ 235.59 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Insurance Code Bars Action Against Insurance Company Based on Ratemaking Decisions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURANCE CODE SECTIONS 1860.1 AND 1860.2 BAR AN ACTION BROUGHT UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200 FOR DISGORGEMENT OF ALLEGEDLY EXCESSIVE INSURANCE PREMIUMS IF THE STATE INSURANCE COMMISSIONER PREAPPROVED THE AMOUNT OF THOSE PREMIUMS.

Unfair Business Practices Claim for Disgorgement of Allegedly Excessive Insurance Premiums Barred. Because Insurance Code Sections 1860.1 and 1860.2 give exclusive jurisdiction over issues relating to insurance ratemaking to the insurance commissioner, actions under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 for disgorgement of allegedly excessive premium amounts are barred if the charged rates resulted from the administrative ratemaking process, the commissioner approved the rates, and the statutory procedures for challenging the commissioner's decision were not used (Walker v. Allstate Indem. Co. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 750, 754-759, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that an action may be brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 against an insurance company for disgorgement of allegedly excessive insurance premiums. The basis for the opposition is that Ins. Code §§ 1860.1 and 1860.2 give exclusive jurisdiction over issues relating to insurance ratemaking to the insurance commissioner, that the insurance commissioner approved the rates charged pursuant to the appropriate administrative procedures, and that no challenges to the commissioner's decision were brought as specifically provided by the governing statutes.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the rates charged were the rates approved by the insurance commissioner and that the specified statutory procedures for challenging thecommissioner's decision were not used.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unfair Business Practices Claim for Disgorgement of Allegedly Excessive Insurance Premiums Barred

In Walker v. Allstate Indem. Co. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 750, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 , the plaintiffs were representatives of a putative class of automobile insurance customers who brought suit against over 70 insurance companies and the state insurance commissioner. The claims against the insurance companies were based on allegedly excessive automobile insurance premiums and included claims brought under the Insurance Code, violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, unjust enrichment, and fraud. The defendants' demurrer to the complaint was granted without leave to amend. The trial court concluded that the case was essentially a ratemaking case and that because the Insurance Code gives exclusive jurisdiction over issues relating to insurance ratemaking to the insurance commissioner, challenges to rate applications must be timely raised during the administrative process and not through a class action brought long after the time for challenging an individual rate application has passed. The plaintiffs dismissed the insurance commissioner from the suit and appealed the judgment against two of the insurers.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court agreed that the plaintiffs' claims were barred by Ins. Code § 1860.1, which provides generally that actions taken pursuant to authority of the statutes governing insurance rates and rating practices could not be the basis for prosecution or civil proceedings brought under any other law that did not specifically refer to insurance, and by Ins. Code § 1860.2, which provides generally that the administration and enforcement of the relevant ratemaking statutes is governed solely by the provisions of those statutes and that no other statute applies unless that other statute expressly so provides that it applies to the insurance ratemaking procedures. The court noted that these provisions have historically been interpreted to provide exclusive original jurisdiction over ratemaking to the insurance commissioner, and the court concluded that such exclusive jurisdiction was not abrogated by Proposition 103, an insurance overhaul approved by the voters in 1989 (77 Cal. App. 4th 750, 754-756) . The court held that there was no violation of the law to support a claim brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, because the rates charged were the result of the appropriate administrative process and were approved by the insurance commissioner, no challenges were brought as specifically provided by the governing statutes, and the insurance companies then charged the approved rates (77 Cal. App. 4th 750, 759) . The court also concluded more generally that the charging of an approved rate cannot be deemed tortious, or "illegal" or "unfair" for purposes of the Unfair Business Practices Act (77 Cal. App. 4th 750, 756) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.59A

§ 235.59A Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Failure to Bring Claim Alleging Violation of Talent Agencies Act With Labor Commissioner Bars Unfair Competition Claim [Lab. Code § 1700.44]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT PURSUE AN ACTION UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE BASED ON A VIOLATION OF THE TALENT AGENCIES ACT WITHOUT FIRST FILING A TIMELY CLAIM FOR DECISION ON THAT ALLEGED VIOLATION WITH THE LABOR COMMISSIONER.

Failure to File Timely Claim With Labor Commissioner Bars Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Based on Violation of Talent Agencies Act. The Talent Agencies Act vests exclusive original jurisdiction in the Labor Commissioner for all claims arguably coming under its provisions, and failure to meet this jurisdictional hurdle will bar an action under the unfair competition statute for a violation of the Act (Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 364-365, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710 ; see Lab. Code § 1700.44).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff may bring an action under the unfair competition statute based on a violation of the Talent Agencies Act [see Lab. Code § 1700 et seq.] without first bringing a timely claim for violation of that Act with the Labor Commissioner for decision.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the contention that the unfair competition action is barred. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing both that the unfair competition claim is based on facts arguably covered by the Talent Agencies Act and that plaintiff did not first file a timely claim with and receive a decision by the Labor Commissioner before suing under the unfair competition statute.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to File Timely Claim WIth Labor Commissioner Bars Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Based on Violation of Talent Agencies Act

In Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710 , plaintiff client sued a law firm and individual attorneys that represented him in underlying proceedings against the client's former business associate alleging violations of the Talent Agencies Act (TAA), Lab. Code § 1700 et seq. Plaintiff alleged that he lost the right to seek repayment of over $10,000,000 allegedly owed by the former business associate because the attorneys failed to file a timely claim under the TAA with the Labor Commissioner as required by that Act, and this failure was motivated by the desire to generate more attorney's fees. At trial, the jury found that defendant attorneys were liable and awarded plaintiff compensatory and punitive damages, as well as interest, costs, and attorneys fees. Defendants appealed, arguing that because the client could have recovered the same compensation from the former business associate under the unfair competition statute without first filing a claim for decision by the Labor Commissioner, the attorneys' failure to file a timely claim with the Commissioner did not cause the client's damages.

The court of appeal reversed for a new trial on other grounds, but disagreed with defendants that plaintiff could have recovered under the unfair competition statute for a violation of the TAA without first having filed a claim for decision with the Labor Commissioner. The court noted that the TAA contains an unambiguous requirement in Lab. Code § 1700.44 that actions colorably arising under the TAA must first be presented within one year to the Labor Commissioner for a ruling, thus providing to the Labor Commissioner exclusive original jurisdiction over all such claims under the TAA. The court held that the client's failure to comply with the procedural requirement was an absolute bar to an action based on such a violation even if brought under the unfair competition statute (171 Cal. App. 4th 336, 364-365) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.60

§ 235.60 Opposing Contention That Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Is Authorized Remedy in Non-Class-Action Representative Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

IN AN ACTION BROUGHT UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE, DISGORGEMENT INTO A FLUID RECOVERY FUND IS AUTHORIZED AS A REMEDY ONLY IN A CLASS ACTION SUIT AND MAY NOT BE USED IN A REPRESENTATIVE ACTION THAT HAS NOT BEEN CERTIFIED AS A CLASS ACTION.

Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Is Not Authorized Remedy in Representative Action. Although restitution and disgorgement of profits are appropriate to prevent a defendant from profiting from unfair business practices in an action brought under Business and Professions Code Section 17200, disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund is authorized only in a class action suit and may not be used in a representative action that has not been certified as a class action (Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 137, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund is an appropriate remedy in a non-class-action representative action brought under the unfair competition statute. Disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund is only available as a remedy under the unfair competition statute if the statutory requirements for class certification are met and the action is prosecuted as a class action [Corbett v. Superior Court (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 649, 654-655, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] .

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the action has not been certified as a class action and that the remedy sought amounts to disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund.

[b] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For memoranda of points and authorities dealing with the fluid class recovery concept, and with class and representative actions generally, see Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Is Not Authorized Remedy in Representative Action

In Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 , six individual plaintiffs initiated an action on behalf of themselves and other present and former tenants of the defendants, who owned and managed rental properties in San Francisco. The plaintiffs had been required to pay a $100 non-refundable security and administrative fee at the time of entering into their leases, and those plaintiffs who had terminated their leases and vacated prior to lease expiration had been assessed liquidated damages equal to one month's rent and unpaid rent for the balance of the one-year lease term prior to sublease or release of the apartments. A security deposit equal to one-month's rent that each tenant was also required to pay was routinely applied to offset any liquidated damages. One of the causes of action alleged that the defendants' practice of assessing the $100 fee, and the practice of assessing both liquidated damages and the remainder of the rent when tenants terminated early, were unlawful and unfair business practices that violated the unfair competition statute.

The trial court found that the challenged practices constituted unfair business practices that violated the unfair competition statute, and the court ordered two of the defendants to disgorge almost $900,000 combined, which represented the sums unlawfully collected within the four-year statute of limitations period, plus interest. From that amount, after awarding $2,655 paid to the plaintiffs, the court ordered restitution of the $100 fee paid to those individuals who had been charged the fee, to the extent that those individuals could be located with due diligence. The judgment directed that the disgorged funds be placed into a fluid recovery fund organized and administered as a trust fund "for the purpose of providing financial assistance for the advancement of legal rights and interests of residential tenants in the City and County of San Francisco." The defendants appealed, arguing in part that the court did not have the authority to order payment into a fluid recovery fund in an action not certified as a class action. As pertinent to this issue, the court of appeal held that class certification was not required before disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund could be ordered. The defendants again appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that to the extent the trial court ordered the defendants to make any refunds other than to refund money to tenants and former tenants, the award was not authorized by the unfair competition statute. The Court recognized that it had never before addressed the question of whether, in a representative action under the unfair competition statute, the statuteauthorizes a fluid recovery remedy, which is necessary only if a defendant must disgorge money that is not to be returned to the persons from whom it was obtained. Two prior court of appeal decisions had held that it was an appropriate remedy. The Supreme Court noted that the legislature had authorized the use of a fluid recovery remedy in class actions in 1993, although it had not expressly authorized fluid recovery in actions brought under the unfair competition statute if restitution to a person in interest was the only monetary remedy authorized (23 Cal. 4th 116, 127-128) .

Construing the relevant remedial language of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, the Court concluded that nothing in the legislative history of the unfair competition statute suggested that fluid recovery was contemplated, even when the legislature added restitution as a remedy in 1976. Moreover, the Court recognized that although the concept of putting charitable trust funds to their next best use if the trust purpose can no longer be accomplished is well established, the extension of that principle into other areas of civil litigation was a relatively recent judicial development that had only been approved by the legislature in the context of class actions (23 Cal. 4th 116, 129-132) . The Court declined to hold that disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund was within the broad equitable powers of the trial court when fashioning an appropriate remedy under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. Because the legislature has not expressly authorized monetary relief other than restitution in actions brought under the unfair competition statute, but has authorized disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund in class actions, the Court concluded that further extension of the use of a fluid recovery fund to representative actions that have not been certified as a class action should come from the legislature (23 Cal. 4th 116, 137) . The Court also noted that allowing fluid recovery in representative actions might implicate due process concerns raised by the defendants, concerns stemming from the fact that absent persons would not be bound by the judgment if there has been no class certification and that a defendant would be faced with the possibility of numerous future lawsuits based on the same conduct and for which liability has already been adjudicated (23 Cal. 4th 116, 126, 137) . Finally, the Court added that because representative actions are not subject to the same level of judicial scrutiny as class actions, disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund on behalf of absent persons in a representative action may not actually serve the public (23 Cal. 4th 116, 137) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.61

§ 235.61 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Recover Disgorgement of Profits That Is Not Restitutionary [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

IN AN ACTION BROUGHT UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE, PLAINTIFF MAY ONLY SEEK DISGORGEMENT OF PROFITS AS A REMEDY TO THE EXTENT THAT THE DISGORGEMENT IS RESTITUTIONARY, AND PLAINTIFF MAY NOT SEEK DISGORGEMENT OF PROFITS THAT WERE NOT RECEIVED FROM THE PLAINTIFF OR IN WHICH THE PLAINTIFF OTHERWISE HAS NO OWNERSHIP INTEREST.

A. Disgorgement of Profits Must Be Restitutionary. A defendant in an action under the unfair competition statute cannot be ordered to disgorge profits to an individual plaintiff if those profits were not taken from the plaintiff or if the plaintiff does not otherwise have an ownership interest in those profits, because disgorgement of profits in the absence of an ownership interest by the plaintiff goes beyond the restitution that is authorized by the statute (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1144-1148, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937).

[Optional] B. Nonrestitutionary Disgorgement Prohibited in Class Action Suit. Nonrestitutionary disgorgement of profits is not available as a remedy in a class action lawsuit brought under the unfair competition statute (Feitelberg v. Credit Suisse First Boston, LLC (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1016-1020, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 592).

[Optional] C. Unpaid Wages Not Recoverable as Restitution From Employer's Owners, Officers, or Managers. Although wages may be recovered from the actual employer, wages may not be recovered as restitution from the employer's owners, officers, or managers, unless the labor was performed for such persons personally or those persons appropriated funds from the employer that would otherwise have been used to pay the unpaid wages (Bradstreet v. Wong (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1440, 1460-1461, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 253).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a defendant in an action under the unfair competition statute may be ordered to disgorge profits to a plaintiff if those profits were not taken from that plaintiff or if the plaintiff otherwise has no ownership interest in them.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts necessary to show that the plaintiff has no ownership claim to profits that are the subject of an order for disgorgement sought by the plaintiff.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing the contention that disgorgement of profits into a fluid recovery fund is available as a remedy in a representative action under the unfair competition statute that has not been certified into a class action, see § 235.60.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disgorgement of Profits Must Be Restitutionary

In Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 , the plaintiff was a business that represented a company that competed for a contract to provide the Republic of Korea with military radar systems. Even though the plaintiff's client's bid was $50 million lower and its equipment allegedly superior, the contract went to a competing company. After evidence emerged suggesting that the contract was awarded because an agent for the competing company had extended bribes and sexual favors to key Korean officials, the plaintiff brought suitagainst the company that won the contract and the offending agent, asserting causes of action for conspiracy, intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, and unfair competition. The plaintiff alleged that but for the bribes and sexual favors extended by the agent, conduct that violated the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, the contract would have been awarded to the plaintiff's client, and the client would have paid the plaintiff a commission of over $30 million. Moreover, the plaintiff alleged that the defendants knew of the plaintiff's relationship with its client and that the illegal conduct would cause the plaintiff substantial financial loss. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer to all counts. The court of appeal reversed, finding that the plaintiff had sufficiently stated causes of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage and statutory unfair competition.

The California Supreme Court granted review to address two specific issues, one of which was whether an individual plaintiff in an action under the unfair competition statute may seek disgorgement of profits even if the disgorgement sought does not represent restitution of money or property in which the plaintiff has an ownership interest. Contrary to the holding of the court of appeal, the Supreme Court held that this remedy was not available. The Court first reviewed its own recent case law on the remedies available under the unfair competition statute, including its decision in Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 [see § 235.60[3][a]]. Concluding that the court of appeal had misinterpreted language from that opinion, the Court held that only disgorgement of profits that is restitutionary may be ordered as a remedy under the unfair competition statute. The Court, noting that restitution is the only monetary remedy expressly authorized by the statute, rejected the plaintiff's claim that disgorgement of profits that were not taken from the plaintiff or in which the plaintiff does not otherwise have an ownership interest may be justified under a court's broad authority to fashion an equitable remedy. The Court concluded that nothing in the legislative history indicated an intent to provide courts with such broad equitable powers. Although that history evidenced an intent to deter unfair competition, that history also demonstrated an intent only to restore to a plaintiff what was taken from that plaintiff--that is, to provide for restitution (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1144-1148) .

The Court then rejected the plaintiff's claim that the disgorgement of profits that the defendant obtained from the illegally-procured contract was a type of restitution. The money was not paid by the plaintiff, nor was it money that the plaintiff had any proprietary interest in. At most, the plaintiff had an expectancy of a commission to be paid by its own client, contingent on the awarding of the contract to the client. However, such an attenuated expectancy could not support the relief sought by the plaintiff (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1149-1150) . Finally, the Court noted that the unfair competition statute, with its liberal standing requirements and relaxed liability standards, was not intended to be an all-purpose substitute for a tort or contract action. Therefore, its remedies are more limited, and due process concerns might arise if a potentially unlimited number of individual plaintiffs, without the traditional limits on standing provided in tort actions, all sought to recover non-restitutionary disgorgement (29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1150-1152) .

[b] Nonrestitutionary Disgorgement Prohibited in Class Action Suit

In Feitelberg v. Credit Suisse First Boston, LLC (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 997, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 592 , the plaintiff brought a class action on behalf of himself and other stockholders against the defendant for allegedly issuing biased stock research reports designed to gain favor with investment banking clients. According to the plaintiff, these reports contained exaggerated or unwarranted claims regarding certain stocks, effectively depriving holders of those stocks of a sound basis for evaluating their investments. The complaint alleged violations of the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., and sought class certification, injunctive relief, and disgorgement of profits. The trial court held that the plaintiff could not recover disgorgement of profits because defendant did not obtain those profits from the plaintiff class, and in the absence of an injury that could be remedied under the statutory remedies available, sustained the defendant's demurrer with leave to amend. The plaintiff chose not to amend, and the court dismissed the complaint. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Relying on the Supreme Court's analysis in Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. [see § 235.61[3][a]], the court held that nonrestitutionary disgorgement of profits is not available as a remedy under the unfair competition statute, even if the suit is brought as a class action. Although an unfair competition complaint may be pursued as a class action, assuming the requirements for class certification are met, class action status does not enlarge the substantive remedies that are available under the unfair competition statute. As the Supreme Court made clear in its Korea Supply opinion, the unfair competition statute only provides for disgorgement of profits if that remedy is restitutionary in nature. Therefore, nonrestitutionary disgorgement of profits remains unavailable even in the class action context. Because the plaintiff was not seeking the disgorgement of profits that had been taken from the proposed plaintiff class, the remedy he sought was unavailable, and the trial court was correct to dismiss the action (134 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1016-1020) .

[c] Unpaid Wages Not Recoverable as Restitution From Employer's Owners, Officers, or Managers

In Bradstreet v. Wong (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1440, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 253 , three garment manufacturers, which were closely-held corporations owned and managed by a husband and wife, failed to meet their payroll obligations or pay other expenses. These companies told their employees that there was inadequate cash to pay wages, but that they would eventually be paid and encouraged them to keep working. Employees eventually complained to the Department of Labor, eventually resulting in the closing of the corporations and the seizure of assets. The corporations subsequently filed for bankruptcy. The California Labor Commissioner eventually filed suit for the unpaid wages, seeking to hold personally liable the husband and wife, as well as one other corporate director who also performed accounting duties for the corporations. A complaint in intervention was filed by an association and two former employees seeking unpaid wages under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. The trial court found for defendants, holding that there were no facts to justify "piercing the corporate veil" and the individual defendants could not be heldpersonally liable for unpaid wages owed by the corporate employers.

The court of appeal affirmed. As to the unfair competition claims brought by the former employees, the court held that the individual defendants could not be held personally liable for restitution under that statute. The court noted that the defendants were not themselves the actual employers and the employees made no claims that they had performed work for the defendants in their individual capacities. Moreover, there was no evidence that the defendants had taken any money from the corporations that would otherwise have been used to pay the unpaid wages. To the contrary, the evidence showed that the defendants had paid money to their corporations during the relevant period to try to keep the businesses solvent. Under those circumstances, the court concluded that the defendants had never personally obtained anything from the individual employees that could be returned to the employees as restitution (161 Cal. App. 4th 1440, 1460-1461) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disgorgement of Profits Must Be Restitutionary

In Reid v. Google, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744 , plaintiff was terminated from his employment allegedly as a result of age discrimination. He sued his former employer under various legal theories, which included a cause of action brought under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., and a claim for restitution under that statute to recover stock options that had not yet vested at the time plaintiff was terminated. The trial court struck plaintiff's prayer for restitution to recover the stock options and the court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that unvested stock options are not owned by the option holder. While plaintiff may have had an expectancy interest in the options, such interest did not constitute ownership for purposes of restitution. Because an ownership interest was required to seek restitution under the unfair competition statute, the court concluded that the trial court was correct in striking the claim for relief (155 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1351-1352) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.62

§ 235.62 Opposing Contention That Nonaggrieved Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF DOES NOT HAVE STANDING TO PURSUE AN ACTION UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF WAS NOT PERSONALLY INJURED BY DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT

A. Private Plaintiff Must Suffer Actual Injury to Have Standing to Sue. A private person may bring an action under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq. only if that person has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204).

[Optional] B. Proposition 64 Applicable to Pending Actions. The changes to the requirements for standing enacted by Proposition 64 apply to unfair competition actions that were pending when Proposition 64 was passed (Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's, LLC (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 223, 232-233, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 57, 138 P.3d 207).

[Optional] C. Standing Not Conferred By Incurring Litigation-Related Expenses. A plaintiff may not effectively avoid the changes made by Proposition 64 by claiming the expenses incurred in pursuing litigation against the defendant as "injury in fact" or money lost "as a result of the unfair competition" (Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 815-818, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543).

[Optional] D. Eligibility for Restitution Required to Have Standing to Sue. Alleged damage for which no restitution could be recovered under the unfair competition statute is not a loss of "money or property" sufficient to confer standing to sue (Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 22, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455).

[Optional] E. Standing to Sue Not Assignable. An injured party who would have standing cannot assign the right to sue under the unfair competition statute to another party who does not otherwise meet the requirements for standing to sue (Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 1002, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937).

[Optional] F. Associational Standing Doctrine Inapplicable to Unfair Competition Actions. An association, such as a labor union, does not have standing to sue on behalf of its individual members when the association itself cannot meet the requirements for standing (Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 1003-1004, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a plaintiff who was not personally injured by defendant's conduct may bring an action under the unfair competition statute.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Therefore, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff was not personally injured by the defendant's allegedly actionable conduct.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Plaintiff Must Suffer Actual Injury to Have Standing to Sue

As amended by Proposition 64, which was passed by the voters in 2004, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 provides that a private person may bring an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. only if that person has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of unfair competition. Prior to the passage of Proposition 64, the standing requirements for a private plaintiff were much more liberal, and a private person or entity could sue for the interests of that person or entity, its members, or the general public, without necessarily having suffered actual injury [see former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204; Stop Youth Addiction, Inc. v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 553, 561, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 731, 950 P.2d 1086] . If the action is brought by a private plaintiff on behalf of others, the requirements for pursuing the action as a class action must now be met [Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 980, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203; Code Civ. Proc. § 382]. However, assuming that a plaintiff class is properly certified, only the class representatives are required to show that they have standing to bring the action and unnamed class members are not required to do so [In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 321, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 ; see § 235.54].

[b] Proposition 64 Applicable to Pending Actions

In Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's, LLC (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 223, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 57, 138 P.3d 207 , plaintiff was a nonprofit organization that brought a lawsuit under the unfair competition statute against a store chain based on allegations that the store's aisles were not wide enough for persons with disabilities who need assistance from devices such as wheelchairs or walkers. The trial court entered judgment for the store chain and plaintiff appealed. While the appeal was pending, Proposition 64, which is discussed in [a], above, was passed. However, the court of appeal held that the changes made by Proposition 64 did not apply to pending cases. Defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court held that the changes to the requirements for standingenacted by Proposition 64 apply to unfair competition actions that were pending when Proposition 64 was passed (39 Cal. 4th 223, 232-233) . The Court noted that in recent opinions, it had established that application of a change in law to pending cases is not considered to be "retroactive" if the new law does not change the legal consequences of past conduct by imposing new or different liabilities based on that past conduct. Thus, a statute that establishes rules for the conduct of pending litigation without changing the legal consequences of past conduct is not "retroactive" merely because it draws on facts existing prior to the new enactment (39 Cal. 4th 223, 231) . The Court then applied this principle to the changes in standing enacted with Proposition 64 and concluded that applying the new standing requirements to pending litigation is not retroactive because Proposition 64 does not change the legal consequences of past conduct by imposing new or different liabilities based on such conduct. The substantive rules governing unfair competition were not changed. Proposition 64 does prevent uninjured persons from suing on behalf of others, but the Court noted that application of Proposition 64 to pending litigation is consistent with the established rule that standing must exist at all times until judgment, not just when the complaint is first filed (39 Cal. 4th 223, 232-233) .

NOTE:

In a companion case to Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's, LLC, the California Supreme Court also held that the ordinary rules governing the amendment of complaints and their relation back to the original complaint apply to lawsuits pending when Proposition 64 was passed [Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235, 239, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66, 138 P.3d 214] . Thus, a complaint brought by a plaintiff who no longer has standing under Proposition 64 may be amended to name a new plaintiff who does meet the standing requirements, so long as the proposed new plaintiff is not stating facts that give rise to a wholly distinct and different cause of action against the defendant [Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235, 243, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66, 138 P.3d 214 ; see, e.g., Foundation For Taxpayer & Consumer Rights v. Nextel Communications, Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 131, 136, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 836 (abuse of discretion for trial court to refuse to allow amendment)]. For purposes of meeting the applicable statute of limitations, any amendment would relate back to the original complaint if the amended complaint rests on the same general set of facts, involves the same injury, and refers to the same instrumentality as the original complaint [Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235, 244, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66, 138 P.3d 214] .

Significantly, a plaintiff who has been given an opportunity to amend but cannot meet the requirements for standing, and who has not identified a substitute plaintiff who does meet the requirements for standing, may not have a right to precertification discovery in an attempt to locate an appropriate representative to continue the original plaintiff's action as a class action [see, e.g., Cryoport Systems v. CNA Ins. Companies (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 627, 633-634, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358] . However, when a class action is brought, a plaintiff who is not a class member or is otherwise unqualified to serve as a class representative may, in appropriate cases, move for pre-certification discovery for the purposes of identifying a proper class representative [Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Superior Court (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 814, 828, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 814]. The absence of a reasonable, good-faith belief that the plaintiff had standing under the law in effect at the time the plaintiff was first named as a plaintiff will ordinarily compel denial of a motion for pre-certification discovery. In other circumstances, however, a trial court should exercise its sound discretion to determine whether the potential for abuse in allowing pre-certification discovery outweighs the rights of the parties in the particular circumstances of the case [Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Superior Court (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 814, 833, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 814].

If a plaintiff suffered actual injury sufficient to meet the requirements for standing under Proposition 64, but prior to the passage of Proposition 64 entered into a settlement agreement under which plaintiff released all claims for that injury at least partly in exchange for the right to pursue a claim for injunctive relief, the general rule applying the changes made by Proposition 64 to actions pending at the time of its passage in November 2004 does not bar such a plaintiff from prosecuting the action for injunctive relief [Zermeno v. Precis, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 773, 780, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 360] .

In addition, as in class actions brought outside the unfair competition context [see, e.g., Watkins v. Wachovia Corp. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1576, 1590, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 409] , if a defendant in a class action brought under the unfair competition statute unilaterally pays to the named plaintiff after the lawsuit is filed an amount that compensates that plaintiff for the damage caused by the defendant's actionable conduct, that plaintiff may still serve as the class representative if the court determines that the named plaintiff met the requirements for standing when the action was filed and he or she can still continue fairly to represent the class in light of the individual relief offered by the defendant [Wallace v. GEICO General Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 1390, 1398-1402, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 375] .

[c] Standing Not Conferred By Incurring Litigation-Related Expenses

In Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543 , plaintiff was the executive director of a women's law center who purchased skin creams and lotions made by defendants that contained chemicals regulated by the Food and Drug Administration. By her own admission, plaintiff purchased these products because of suspicions that the manufacturers had improperly suppressed the fact that the products contained potentially unsafe chemicals and otherwise marketed the products as safe and healthful. When satisfied that her suspicions were well-founded, she brought suit against the manufacturers for fraud and related statutory causes of action, including a cause of action under the unfair competition statute. She admitted that she purchased the products with the intent to sue and that her only actual damages were the costs she paid for the products. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the cause of action for unfair competition, the court held that plaintiff could not meet the requirements for standing under the changes made by Proposition 64. The court noted that, according to the text of Proposition 64, the "injury in fact" requirement was modeled on the standing requirements of the United States Constitution. The court of appeal adopted the majority view under those requirements that costs incurred to pursue litigation, in and of themselves, are insufficient injury to confer standing. Because plaintiff admitted that she purchased the products in order to facilitate litigation, the court of appeal held that this did not constitute "injury in fact" under the unfair competition statute (155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 815-816) . The court went on to conclude that the costs plaintiff incurred in purchasing the products was not money or property lost "as a result of the unfair competition." In reaching this conclusion, the court concluded that a plaintiff had to be eligible for restitution in order to meet the "money or property lost" requirement. Referencing the Restatement of Restitution, the court noted that eligibility for restitution requires that a plaintiff have expended money due to mistake, coercion, or request. Because plaintiff admitted she purchased the products only to facilitate litigation, she could not demonstrate an eligibility for restitution (155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 817-818) .

[d] Eligibility for Restitution Required to Have Standing to Sue

In Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455 , plaintiff was the manufacturer of "high-end" clothing that sold its products only to retailers that plaintiff believed would convey a prestigious image and provide a high level of customer service. Plaintiff learned that some of its clothing was being sold by a large warehouse-style retail chain, even though plaintiff had not sold clothing to that chain and believed that the chain did not represent the image that plaintiff tried to foster when choosing its retailers. Plaintiff informed the chain that it believed that the clothing might be stolen merchandise and asked the chain to identify its sources for the clothing. The chain refused to identify its sources. Plaintiff then brought suit against the chain, alleging a statutory action for selling stolen goods, fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud, and statutory unfair competition. Plaintiff sought to compel discovery of the identity of defendant's sources, but the trial court denied this request on the grounds that defendant had shown that the supplier information was a protectable trade secret and plaintiff had failed to establish entitlement to the information. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed in part and reversed in part. While the court held that plaintiff had stated a statutory cause of action for selling stolen goods sufficient to withstand demurrer (171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 16-20) , the court agreed that plaintiff had failed to show a need for discovery of the identity of the chain's sources, as plaintiff could identify whether the clothing was stolen from its own customers simply by asking them whether they had suffered any theft of plaintiff's brand of clothing (171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 12-16) . The court also agreed that plaintiff had not alleged a fraud cause of action with sufficient particularity to withstand demurrer (171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 20-21) . As to the unfair competition cause of action, the court concluded that plaintiff did not have standing to sue under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204. The harm alleged by plaintiff on the unfair competition claim was damage to its business goodwill. Because this was not the type of damage that would allow plaintiff to recover restitution from defendant under the unfair competition statute, the court held that the damage was not a loss of "money or property" as needed to confer standing to sue under that statute (171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 22) .

[e] Standing to Sue Not Assignable

In Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937 , seventeen individual plaintiffs and two labor unions brought an action against three employers alleging unpaid wages and failure to provide meal and rest breaks. Plaintiffs asserted causes of action under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., as well as under the Labor Code. The labor unions alleged that they represented the employees of the defendants, that they were standing in as plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all aggrieved industry employees currently or formerly employed by defendants, and that over 150 employees or former employees of the defendants had assigned to the unions their rights under the unfair competition statute and the Labor Code. The trial court ruled that the labor unions lacked standing to prosecute an action under the unfair competition statute because the unions had not suffered actual injury, that the employee assignment of rights did not confer standing to sue, and that the representative unfair competition claims had to be prosecuted as class actions. The labor unions petitioned for a writ of mandate, which the court of appeal denied. The California Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. With respect to effectiveness of the assignment of rights, the Court held that a person with standing to sue under the unfair competition statute cannot effectively assign that right to sue to another party who does not otherwise have standing. The Court concluded that allowing an uninjured assignee on an unfair competition claim to stand in the shoes of the original, injured claimant would confer standing on the assignee in direct violation of the express statutory standing requirements imposed by the voters when passing Proposition 64, which limits the right to of private persons to bring an unfair competition action to only those persons who have suffered injury in fact and lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition (46 Cal. 4th 993, 1002) .

[f] Associational Standing Doctrine Inapplicable to Unfair Competition Actions

The factual and procedural background of Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937 , is described in [3][e], above. The Supreme Court also held that labor unions could not pursue an action under the unfair competition statute on behalf of union members under the doctrine of associational standing. Under that doctrine, developed under federal law, an association that does not have standing in its own right may sue on behalf of its members, so long as the interests the association seeks to protect are germane to its organizational purposes. The Court rejected application of this doctrine to suits brought under the unfair competition statute, concluding that the amendments to the standing requirements of the unfair competition statute passed by Proposition 64 were inconsistent with the federal doctrine of associational standing, as Proposition 64 made explicitly clear that only plaintiffs who themselves had suffered injury in fact as a result of unfair competition have standing to sue (46 Cal. 4th 993, 1003-1004) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Plaintiff Must Have Actual Injury to Have Standing to Sue

In Peterson v. Cellco Partnership (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 316 , cell phone purchasers brought suit under the unfair competition statute against their cell phone equipment vendor after the vendor sold cell phone insurance policies to plaintiffs in conjunction with the sale of cell phones. Plaintiffs predicated their suit on defendant's act of selling the insurance contracts without being licensed to sell insurance in California. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer and dismissed the suit on the grounds that plaintiffs did not have standing to sue under the unfair competition statute because they had not sustained actual injury as a result of the defendant's conduct. The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiffs argued that they had sustained actual injury because defendant received a commission from each insurance sale, this commission came from the money plaintiffs paid during their transaction with defendant, and defendant could not legally receive this commission. The court rejected this argument. The court noted that plaintiffs did not allege that they paid more for the insurance due to the act of defendant collecting a commission, nor did they allege that they could have bought the same insurance for a lower price either directly from the insurer or from a licensed agent. Because plaintiffs received the insurance they bargained for at the price they agreed to pay, they suffered no actual injury from defendant's alleged violation of the Insurance Code and thus had no standing to sue under the unfair competition statute (164 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1590-1591) .

In Medina v. Safe-Guard Products, Internat., Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 105, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 672 , plaintiff purchased a tire and wheel service contract when he purchased a new car. Such a service contract may be considered an insurance contract, and unknown to plaintiff, the contract provider was not licensed to sell insurance in California. The Insurance Commissioner proceeded against the contract provider, who eventually paid a large fine. Plaintiff then filed a class action suit against the contract provider under the unfair competition statute, but the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on the grounds that plaintiff had not suffered injury in fact or lost money or property as a result of the defendant selling a service contract to plaintiff without a license. The court of appeal affirmed. The court first concluded that the lack of a license to sell insurance would not prevent plaintiff or other similarly situated consumers from enforcing the service contract against defendant (164 Cal. App. 4th 105, 109-112) . The court then rejected plaintiff's argument that paying for the service contract was, in and of itself, "injury in fact" sufficient to confer standing. The court noted that plaintiff had not alleged that he did not want the service contract coverage, was provided unsatisfactory service under the contract, had a claim denied, or paid more for the contract than it was worth, because of defendant's unlicensed status. Moreover, plaintiff had not alleged causation, that is, he had not alleged that he had relied on defendant actually having a license as required by law when he purchased the service contract (164 Cal. App. 4th 105, 114-115) .

In Hall v. Time Inc. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 847, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466 , plaintiff filed suit under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. against defendant publishing company, alleging that while defendant advertised that customers had a 21-day free trial period for reviewing books sent by defendant before deciding whether to keep the book, defendant billed customers immediately if they did not pay the invoice that accompanied each book and these bills misleadingly failed to mention the customer's free review period. However, plaintiff did not allege that he did not want the book sent to him or that it was unsatisfactory, nor did he pay for the book because of the quick billing. In fact, plaintiff did not pay for his book until 10 months after receipt. The trial court held that plaintiff did not meet the requirements for standing under the unfair competition statute and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that plaintiff had not alleged an injury in fact as required by the statute, as he received the book heordered, it was satisfactory to him, and he eventually paid for it. The court also held that plaintiff failed to allege that he lost money or property "as a result of" the alleged wrongful conduct, that is, that any injury was caused to him by the immediate billing without notice of the free trial period (158 Cal. App. 4th 847, 855) .

In Trujillo v. First American Registry, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 628, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 , plaintiffs had submitted apartment rental applications that had been denied. As part of the tenant screening process, defendant credit reporting agency had provided tenant screening reports to the relevant property managers. While the reports correctly indicated that the plaintiffs had been the subject of unlawful detainer actions in the past, the reports failed to show that those actions had been dismissed. Plaintiffs sued under various statutes, including the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., arguing that the incomplete reports had caused their applications to be rejected. The trial court granted summary adjudication and a final judgment in favor of defendant in light of uncontroverted evidence from the property managers that the applications would have been rejected even had the reports provided complete information about the fate of the unlawful detainer actions. The court of appeals affirmed. As to the unfair competition claims, the court held that plaintiffs had not raised a triable issue as to whether they suffered injury in fact or lost money or property as a result of the incomplete reports. To the contrary, the evidence showed that the rental applications would have been rejected even had the reports been complete (157 Cal. App. 4th 628, 639) .

In Daro v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716 , plaintiffs were the tenants of an apartment building that was sold to new owners, who planned to remodel the 6 units and resell most of them as individual units. When plaintiffs were given notice of evictions, they filed suit under the unfair competition statute. Plaintiffs alleged that the new owners failed to comply with the Subdivided Lands Act, which required defendants to notify the Real Estate Commissioner of the intention to sell subdivided interests and obtain a public report from the Department of Real Estate before creating the subdivided interests and offering them for sale. The court of appeal held that plaintiffs had no standing to sue for an unlawful business practice under the unfair competition statute because they suffered no injury in fact, nor did they lose money or property, as a result of the alleged unlawful conduct. The court held that the tenants were not among the class of persons protected by the Subdivided Lands Act, and they suffered no harm caused by the alleged violation. The tenants loss of their leaseholds resulted from the owners' invocation of their statutory right to evict, which was not illegal. Moreover, there was nothing in the record indicating that defendants would be unable to comply with the Subdivided Lands Act. The mere fact that the owners' legal conduct in evicting plaintiffs was part of a larger course of conduct, some of which was illegal, was an insufficient basis for standing under the unfair competition statute if the illegal conduct did not actually cause plaintiffs any actual injury (151 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 1098-1099) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.62A

§ 235.62A Opposing Contention That Representative Action May Be Brought Under Unfair Competition Statute Without Meeting Requirements for Class Action [Bus. & Prof. Code 17203]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT PURSUE A REPRESENTATIVE ACTION UNDER THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE WITHOUT MEETING THE REQUIREMENTS FOR A CLASS ACTION.

Representative Action Must be Brought as Class Action. Pursuant to amendments made by Proposition 64, passed by the voters in 2004, representative actions under the unfair competition statute must be filed as class actions (Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 980, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203; Code Civ. Proc. § 382).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a private plaintiff bringing a representative action under the unfair competition statute is not required to bring the action as a class action.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that plaintiff's representative claim must meet the requirements for a class action. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that plaintiff is seeking relief in a representative capacity for other private persons without first complying with the procedures for certifying the action as a class action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representative Action Must be Brought as Class Action

In Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 , plaintiff brought an action against his former employer alleging, among other things, that the employer failed to pay overtime wages that were owed and that he had received no meal periods or rest breaks during his shifts. Plaintiff's action was brought under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., as well as under the Labor Code, and plaintiff sought damages and injunctive relief in a representative capacity for other current and former employees of the defendant. The trial court granted defendant's motion to strike the representative causes of action because plaintiff had failed to comply with the requirements for pleading a class action. Plaintiff filed for a writ of mandate. The court of appeal denied the writ as it pertained to the representative cause of action brought under the unfair competition statute, but granted it as to the representative cause of action under the Labor Code. The California Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. The Court held that pursuant to amendments made to Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 by Proposition 64, passed by the voters in 2004, representative actions under the unfair competition statute must be pursued as class actions. The Court recognized that Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203 merely states that a private plaintiff pursuing a representative claim or relief on behalf of others must "compl[y] with Section 382 of the Code of Civil Procedure," and while Code Civ. Proc. § 382 authorizes representative claims, it does not in and of itself mandate that the class action mechanism be utilized. However, the Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 382 has always been the primary statutory authority for class action in California. In addition, because the statutory language was arguably ambiguous, the Court resorted to the voters' intent as expressed in the official ballot pamphlet for Proposition 64, which clearly indicated that the intent of the change was to require that representative actions brought by private plaintiffs under the unfair competition statute be brought as class actions (46 Cal. 4th 969, 977-980) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.63

§ 235.63 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Insufficient Evidence of Causal Connection Between Defendant's Conduct and Harm

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE PLAINTIFF MAY NOT MAINTAIN AN ACTION FOR UNFAIR COMPETITION AGAINST THE DEFENDANT IN THE ABSENCE OF EVIDENCE SHOWING THAT THE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT ACTUALLY CAUSED THE HARM OF WHICH THE PLAINTIFF COMPLAINS.

A. Causal Connection Required. In an action under the unfair competition statute, a plaintiff is required to provide evidence of a causal connection between a defendant's business practices and the alleged harm--that is, that the defendant's conduct caused or was likely to cause substantial injury (In re Firearm Cases (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 959, 982-982, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659).

[Optional] B. Plaintiff Alleging Fraud Must Show Actual Reliance. If an unfair competition claim is based on fraud, the plaintiff must plead and prove actual reliance to satisfy requirements for standing to bring the action (In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 328, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20).

[Optional] C. Showing of Reliance Required in Action for Unlawful Business Practices Based on Misrepresentations. The actual reliance requirements applicable to fraud-based actions apply not just to actions brought under the fraudulent business practices category of the unfair competition statute, but also to actions brought under the unlawful business practices category if based on alleged misrepresentations (Hale v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1385, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669 ; Durell v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1363, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 682).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that an action may be maintained under the unfair competition statute even in the absence of evidence that the defendant's conduct actually caused the harm of which the plaintiff complains.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law raised. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff lacks evidence of a causal connection between the defendant's allegedly unfair or unlawful business practices and the alleged harm.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Causal Connection Required

In In re Firearm Cases (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 959, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 659 , the plaintiffs were several California cities and counties that brought consolidated suits under the unfair competition statute against multiple manufacturers, distributors, and retailers of handguns, as well as their trade associations. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants' conduct of distributing firearms in a manner that enables criminals to acquire them constituted a pattern of unfair conduct that violated the unfair competition statute. More specifically, the plaintiffs alleged that the defendants marketed handguns using practices that encouraged sales to unauthorized users without adequately monitoring distributors and dealers or setting standards for distributors and dealers regarding how to legally and responsibly sell handguns. The trial court granted summary judgment for many of the manufacturers and distributors on the grounds that the plaintiffs failed to demonstrate any evidence showing a causal connection between the actions of these defendants and the alleged harm of criminalspossessing handguns. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the plaintiffs' argument that an action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 requires only evidence that the defendant's conduct has created an unreasonable risk of harm to the public. Relying on principles applicable in cases brought under the Federal Trade Commission Act, the court instead held that a plaintiff is required to provide evidence of a causal connection between a defendant's business practices and the alleged harm--that is, that the defendant's conduct caused or was likely to cause substantial injury (126 Cal. App. 4th 959, 980-981) . The court noted that the only relevant business practice engaged in by these defendants was the manufacture, marketing, and sale of firearms in a lawful manner to federally-licensed dealers. The plaintiffs' evidence failed to show that any of these defendants had actual knowledge that specific retailers were illegally supplying guns to the crime gun market, and failed to show that these defendants took any action to aid or encourage that activity. At best, the plaintiffs' evidence showed inconclusive statistics linking illegal firearm trafficking to a small minority of retailers. Although this evidence might support further fact-finding and a trial against those retailers, it was insufficient evidence of causation to support an action against the manufacturers and distributors (126 Cal. App. 4th 959, 984-985) .

[b] Plaintiff Alleging Fraud Must Show Actual Reliance

The factual and procedural background of In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 , is provided in § 25.54[3][b]. After concluding that in a class action brought under the unfair competition statute, only the class representatives must demonstrate that they meet the requirements for standing (46 Cal. 4th 298, 321) , the California Supreme Court next addressed the issue of causation and the meaning of the provision that a statutory unfair competition may only be brought by a private person "who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition" contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204. While declining to provide a meaning of the language "as a result of" that would govern in all cases, the Court held that if the unfair competition claim is based on fraud stemming from alleged false advertising and misrepresentations made to consumers, this statutory language means that the plaintiff must plead and prove actual reliance to satisfy requirements for standing to bring the action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 328) . However, the Court concluded that while a plaintiff in those circumstances must allege that the defendant's misrepresentations were an immediate cause of the injury, the plaintiff need not show that those misrepresentations were the sole or even decisive cause. Moreover, the plaintiff is not required to necessarily plead and prove individualized reliance on specific misrepresentations or false statements when those misrepresentations and false statements were part of an extensive and long-term advertising campaign. Finally, the Court suggested that an allegation of reliance is not defeated merely because there was alternative information available to the plaintiff that might have countered the defendant's alleged misrepresentations (46 Cal. 4th 298, 328) . The Supreme Court then remanded the case for further proceedings to determine whether the named plaintiffs could establish standing to bring the action (46 Cal. 4th 298, 329) .

[c] Showing of Reliance Required in Action for Unlawful Business Practices Based on Misrepresentations

In Hale v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669 , plaintiff brought a putative class action suit against a hospital based on allegations that the hospital required plaintiff, who did not have health insurance, to sign an admission agreement stating that she would pay the hospital for the services rendered "in accordance with the regular rates and terms of the hospital." Plaintiff alleged, however, that the hospital charged her and other uninsured patients much more for the services than was normally accepted as payment from patients covered by Medicare or private insurance. The alleged misrepresentations made by defendant based on this disparity in rates formed the basis for plaintiff's suit, which included causes of action under the unfair competition statute, Consumer Legal Remedies Act, and contract law. After the filing of a second amended complaint, the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without further leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to the statutory causes of action, but affirmed on the contractual claims. The trial court had concluded that plaintiff failed to allege that she relied on defendant's charging its "regular rates" when she received treatment, but the court of appeals disagreed. The court of appeals reviewed the basic principles articulated by the Supreme Court in In re Tobacco II Cases, discussed in [b], above, under which a plaintiff much plead and prove actual reliance when pursuing a fraud claim under the unfair competition statute. Plaintiff argued that those requirements applied only to claims brought under the fraudulent business practices prong of the statute, and thus were inapplicable to her claims under the unlawful business practices prong alleging that defendants conduct violated specific Civil Code provisions. The court disagreed, holding that the requirements applicable to fraud-based actions applied not just to a cause of action based on the fraudulent business practices prong, but also to a cause of action based on the unlawful business practices prong to the extent the cause of action was based on alleged misrepresentations (183 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1385) . However, the court agreed with plaintiff that she had reasonably pled reliance when pleading that, at the time she signed the admission contract, she was "expecting" to be charged regular rates and not the "grossly excessive" rates that she was subsequently billed. While this allegation was included only in the part of the complaint articulating the contractual claims, the unfair competition part of the complaint incorporated the allegations of all other causes of action (183 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1385-1386) .

In Durell v. Sharp Healthcare (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 682 , plaintiff brought a putative class action suit against a hospital based on allegations that when plaintiff was taken to defendant's emergency room, he was required to sign agreements stating that he would pay the hospital's "usual and customary charges for ... services." However, plaintiff, who did not carry health insurance at the relevant times, did not bay the bills and his account was referred for collection. Plaintiff alleged that the hospital charged him and other uninsured patients up to four times more for the services than was normally accepted as payment from patients covered by Medicare or private insurance. Alleged misrepresentations made by defendant on its services forms and on its Internet site based on this disparity in rates formed the basis for plaintiff's suit, which included causes of action under the unfair competition statute, Consumer Legal Remedies Act, and contract law. After the filing of a second amended complaint, the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without further leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff had alleged that defendant's conduct was unlawful, unfair, and fraudulent under the unfair competition statute. Plaintiff based his claim of unlawful conduct on defendant's alleged violation of the Consumer Legal Remedies Act caused by misrepresentations published on the Internet site and on the services agreements concerning the usual and customary rates that would be charged. The court held, however, that plaintiff had not alleged that he relied on any of these alleged misrepresentations when choosing to receive treatment. The court of appeals reviewed the basic principles articulated by the Supreme Court in In re Tobacco II Cases, discussed in [b], above, under which a plaintiff much plead and prove actual reliance when pursuing a fraud claim under the unfair competition statute. The court held that the requirements applicable to fraud-based actions applied not just to a cause of action based on the fraudulent business practices prong of the unfair competition statute, but also to a cause of action based on the unlawful business practices prong to the extent the cause of action was based on alleged misrepresentations. As plaintiff had not alleged that he relied on the statements in the services form or on the Internet site when going to defendant's hospital or accepting treatment there, he had not alleged a causal nexus between the alleged misrepresentations and his harm and dismissal of the claims based on unlawful business practices was proper (183 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1363) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Alleging Fraud Must Show Actual Reliance

In Princess Cruise Lines, Ltd. v. Superior Court (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 36, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 323 , plaintiffs who had been passengers on a cruise line brought a class action suit against the cruise line under the unfair competition statute, other statutes, and general tort law, for allegedly unfair conduct in charging more for ship-to-shore excursions than the cost to the cruise line of providing the excursions. The trial court denied summary judgment on the statutory causes of action, but the court of appeal vacated the order and remanded with instructions to grant summary judgment in favor of the defendant. Pursuant to the California Supreme Court's decision in In re Tobacco II Cases, discussed in [3][b], above, the plaintiffs conceded that actual reliance must be demonstrated in an unfair competition action based on fraud. The Court of Appeal then held that the discovery responses of one of the plaintiffs, who handled the purchasing for all of the named plaintiffs, demonstrated that she did not rely on any representations made by the defendant cruise line when electing to purchase the shore excursions as part of the cruise package. This plaintiff stated during discovery that no one from the cruise line made any representations to her prior to the cruise, and when her travel agent asked her if she wanted to book the shore excursions, this plaintiff stated that she wanted to book the same excursions that her traveling group had booked, whatever the cost. Under those circumstances, plaintiffs could not show that they relied on any representations directly or indirectly made by the cruise line (179 Cal. App. 4th 36, 40-44) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.64

§ 235.64 Opposing Contention That Litigant May Maintain Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Conduct Within Scope of Litigation Privilege [Civ. Code § 47(b)] Not Actionable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE LITIGATION PRIVILEGE OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 47(b) MAY BE ASSERTED AS A DEFENSE TO AN ACTION BROUGHT UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200 ET SEQ.

A. Litigation Privilege May be Asserted as Defense in Unfair Competition Action. The litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) may be asserted as a defense to a cause of action brought under the unfair competition statute (People ex rel. Gallegos v. The Pacific Lumber Co. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 950, 958-963, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501).

[Optional] B. Attorney Solicitation Falling Within Litigation Privilege Not Enjoinable. A party against whom civil litigation is pending may not obtain an injunction under Business and Professions Code Section 17204 for the purpose of preventing an attorney from soliciting other potential plaintiffs for that litigation because the absolute privilege of Civil Code Section 47(b) for statements made in the course of a judicial proceeding applies to such solicitation (Rubin v. Green (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1204, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 847 P.2d 1044).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that that the litigation privilege does not apply when plaintiff brings a cause of action under the unfair competition statute.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Privilege May be Asserted as Defense in Unfair Competition Action

In People ex rel. Gallegos v. The Pacific Lumber Co. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 950, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 , a county district attorney brought suit seeking civil penalties and other relief under the unfair competition statute on behalf of the State of California against a lumber company. The state alleged that the lumber company presented knowingly false information during administrative proceedings conducted pursuant to the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) in order to gain approval for more timber harvesting than it would otherwise have received in conjunction with an agreement to sell ancient redwood forests to the state and federal governments. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer in part on the grounds that defendant was immune from liability under the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b). The State appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that the State's action under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., was premised on allegedly fraudulent conduct in communicating information to government agencies during the CEQA administrative proceedings held in conjunction with approval of the land sale agreements, and such conduct fell squarely within the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b). The court rejected the State's argument that the privilege did not apply because suit was brought under the unfair competition statute rather than under general tort law. The court noted that an action under the unfair competition statute cannot be maintained when some other statute specifically shields the defendant from liability. In this case, the litigation privilege provided such a "safe harbor" for the lumber company (158 Cal. App. 4th 950, 958-959) . The court also rejected the argument that an exception to the litigation privilege existed in government enforcement actions, finding no basis for such an exception in either statutory or case law (158 Cal. App. 4th 950, 962-964) .

[b] Attorney Solicitation Falling Within Litigation Privilege Not Enjoinable

In Rubin v. Green (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1187, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 847 P.2d 1044 , the plaintiff, a party defendant in an impending civil case, brought an action for tort damages and equitable relief against defendants on the ground that defendants wrongfully "solicited" the impending litigation against him. Plaintiff was the co-owner of a mobile home park. Defendants included a resident of the park and severalattorneys hired by the resident to represent her and other residents concerning grievances about park maintenance. Plaintiff's civil action against the resident and the attorneys sought, among other things, to enjoin the defendants from speaking with other park residents. Plaintiff hoped to prevent defendants from obtaining additional clients with respect to the residents' impending suit against him. Defendants demurred, claiming that their conduct was privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b), which provides an absolute privilege for publications or broadcasts made in any judicial proceeding. The trial court sustained the general demurrer without leave to amend. A divided court of appeal reversed the judgment, ruling that the § 47(b) privilege did not apply to the defendants' acts. Defendants appealed to the California Supreme Court. On appeal, plaintiff contended that he was entitled to pursue injunctive relief against defendants because Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 grants any member of the public standing to seek such relief against "unfair competition."

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal. A four-judge majority of the Court held that the acts of the defendants as alleged by plaintiff were communicative within the meaning of Civ. Code § 47(b), and that the acts therefore were within the scope of the litigation privilege and immune from tort liability (4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1193) . The Court noted that plaintiff's claims were founded essentially on alleged misrepresentations made by defendants to residents of the park in the course of discussions over park conditions and the possibility of being retained to prosecute the failure-to-maintain action, and the subsequent filing of pleadings in the lawsuit itself. Whether the acts amounted to wrongful attorney solicitation or not, they were communicative within the privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) (4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1196) . The Court opined that the immunity under Civ. Code § 47(b) would be undermined by permitting the defendants' communicative acts, which were absolutely immune from tort liability, to be the subject of an injunctive relief proceeding under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 (4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1203) . If the policies underlying Civ. Code §

47(b) are sufficiently strong to support an absolute privilege, stated the Court, the resulting immunity should not evaporate merely because the plaintiff discovers a conveniently different label for pleading what is in substance an identical grievance arising from the identical conduct as that protected by Civ. Code § 47(b) (4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1203) . The Court noted in dicta that any improper solicitation that may have occurred could be remedied by multiple parties other than plaintiff under the broad standing provision of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204; such parties would include an overreached client, the Attorney General, district attorneys, and certain city attorneys (4 Cal. 4th 1187, 1204) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.65

§ 235.65 Opposing Contention That Non-Resident Plaintiff May Bring Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]--Injury-Causing Conduct Occurred Outside California

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE CALIFORNIA UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE, BEGINNING AT BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200, MAY NOT BE APPLIED TO A DEFENDANT WHOSE HEADQUARTERS AND PRINCIPAL PLACE OF OPERATION ARE OUTSIDE CALIFORNIA IF THE INJURIES ARE SUFFERED BY A PERSON WHO IS NOT A CALIFORNIA RESIDENT AND ARE CAUSED BY CONDUCT OCCURRING OUTSIDE CALIFORNIA.

Non-Resident Plaintiff May Not Bring Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Against Defendant Whose Headquarters and Principal Place of Business is Outside California for Injuries Caused Outside California. To meet due process concerns, the California unfair competition statutes may not be applied to a defendant whose headquarters and principal place of operation are outside California if the injuries are suffered by a person who is not a resident of California and are caused by conduct occurring outside California (Norwest Mortgage, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 222-227, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a plaintiff who is not a California resident may bring an action under the California unfair competition statute against a defendant whose headquarters and principal place of operation are outside California if the injuries are caused by conduct occurring outside California.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law

stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff is not a California resident, that the defendant is not headquartered in California, that California is not the defendant's principal place of operation, and that the conduct that allegedly caused injury to the plaintiff took place outside California.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Non-Resident Plaintiff May Not Bring Action Under Unfair Competition Statute Against Defendant Whose Headquarters and Principal Place of Business is Out-of-State for Injuries Caused Out-of-State

In Norwest Mortgage, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 , the plaintiffs were borrowers who brought a class action against the defendant, a mortgage company. The complaint alleged that the defendant violated the California unfair competition statute by charging the plaintiffs inflated premiums for replacement insurance it procured for the plaintiffs upon lapse or cancellation of the insurance that the plaintiffs were required to maintain as borrowers. The defendant was incorporated in California, although its principal place of business was in Iowa and all decisions regarding the insurance program at issue were made in Iowa or Minnesota. The plaintiffs were California residents seeking nationwide class certification for similarly situated California residents and non-residents of California allegedly injured by the defendant's practices in charging for the replacement insurance. The trial court granted the motion for certification of the nationwide class, concluding that the California statute could constitutionally be applied to the claims brought by non-residents of California because the defendant did not show that the statute was in conflict with the laws of any other state in a manner that would affect the outcome of the litigation. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the nationwide class certification, holding that class members who were not California residents could not bring claims against the defendant under the California unfair competition law based on injury-producing conduct that occurred outside California. The court rejected the argument that a 1992 amendment to the statute evinced the legislature's intent to expand the unfair competition law to encompass extraterritorial conduct by a defendant, concluding instead that the amendment merely clarified the scope of injunctive relief available to a plaintiff who was already entitled to pursue a claim under the unfair competition laws (72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 223-224) . The court also distinguished the California Supreme Court's holding in Diamond Multimedia Sys., Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1036, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 968 P.2d 539 , which stood merely for the proposition that California statutory remedies could be invoked by out-of-state parties who are injured by wrongful conduct that occurs in California (72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 224-225) .

Finally, the court of appeal concluded that allowing non-resident plaintiffs to assert California statutory claims against the defendant for conduct occurring outside California would raise significant constitutional due process problems. The court rejected the plaintiffs' claim that the fact that the defendant was incorporated in California and conducted business in the state was sufficient toallow the application of California law under the circumstances. The court of appeal stressed that although the defendant's California connections might be sufficient to give California courts personal jurisdiction over the defendant, the United States Supreme Court has specifically admonished that the existence of personal jurisdiction over a defendant is insufficient by itself to permit application of forum law to the claims of a nonresident plaintiff (72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 226) . The court then concluded that under the facts of the case, application of the California unfair competition law to the claims of those non-resident plaintiffs who were injured by conduct occurring outside of California would be arbitrary, unfair, and violate due process limitations (72 Cal. App. 4th 214, 227) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.66

§ 235.66 Opposing Contention That Action for Statutory Unfair Competition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200] May Be Based on Securities Transactions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE CALIFORNIA UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE, BEGINNING AT BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200, DOES NOT APPLY TO SECURITIES TRANSACTIONS.

Unfair Competition Statute Inapplicable to Securities Transactions. The California unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., is inapplicable to securities transactions (Bowen v. Ziasun Techs., Inc. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788-790, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 522).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the unfair competition statute applies to securities transactions.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law raised. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff's cause of action under the unfair competition statute is based on a securities transaction.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unfair Competition Statute Inapplicable to Securities Transactions

In Bowen v. Ziasun Techs., Inc. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 777, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 522 , the plaintiffs were two securities investors, one from Norway and one from Australia, who brought separate lawsuits in California against a Nevada corporation and other individuals based on alleged securities fraud. Both plaintiffs asserted essentially that they were deceived by a securities brokerage house into buying into a "pyramid" scheme--that is, that they were deceived into buying shares of stock in companies that had little or no market value, engaged in illegal activities, and paid returns only from the funds of new investors. Both plaintiffs included causes of action under the California unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. Based on their similarity, the trial court consolidated the two actions. One of the defendants, a company in which one of the plaintiffs invested and which was allegedly involved in the so-called "pyramid" scheme, brought a motion for summary judgment on all causes of action. The trial courtgranted the motion, holding as to the causes of action brought under the unfair competition statute that the statute did not apply to securities transactions. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, agreeing with the trial court in the published portion of the opinion that the California unfair competition statute is inapplicable to securities transactions. The court noted that the FTC has never applied the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C.S. § 45 et seq., on which the California statute was based, to securities transactions. In addition, federal court decisions, some published, have held that the California statute does not apply to securities transactions, and the courts of at least 15 other states have held that their own consumer protection statutes, similar or identical to the California unfair competition statute, did not apply to securities transactions. These authorities stressed that state consumer protection laws are usually designed to protect consumers from relatively small commercial injuries, and are not designed to deal with securities fraud, which falls under the comprehensive regulatory authority of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The court was convinced by these authorities that the California statute should not be applied to securities transactions (116 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788-790) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.67

§ 235.67 Opposing Contention That Jury Trial is Guaranteed in Action Brought Solely Under Unfair Competition Statute [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THERE IS NO RIGHT TO A JURY TRIAL IN AN ACTION THAT IS BROUGHT SOLELY UNDER BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 17200.

No Right to Jury Trial. There is no right to a jury trial in an action that is brought solely under the unfair competition statute, even if a jury trial would be available in an action to enforce directly a statute the violation of which forms the basis for the unfair competition action (Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 284, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a party has a right to a jury trial in an action brought solely under the unfair competition statute.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law raised. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that only causes of action under the unfair competition statute are alleged.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Jury Trial

In Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519 , class action plaintiffs were current and former workers' compensation claims adjustors who brought suit against insurance entities following a failure of those entities to pay overtime pay to the adjustors. Plaintiffs alleged that the overtime pay was owed under the Labor Code, although defendants argued that the adjustors were exempt from the overtime pay requirements. Plaintiffs asserted causes of action directly under the relevant Labor Code provisions, as well as under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, based on unlawful conduct premised on those same Labor Code violations. The case was tried to a jury, but a mistrial was declared after the jury was unable to reach a verdict. Plaintiffs then amended the complaint to state only the cause of action under the unfair competition statute in order to get a bench trial, rather than a jury trial. The trial court ruled that defendants were entitled to a jury trial, and plaintiffs filed a petition for writ of prohibition.

The court of appeal issued the writ restraining the trial court from enforcing its order granting the defendants a jury trial. The court of appeal held that there is no right to a jury trial in an action that is brought solely under the unfair competition statute, even if a jury trial would be available in an action to enforce directly a statute the violation of which forms the basis for the unfair competition action. The court noted that an action brought under the unfair competition statute is a separate cause of action, providing equitable, rather than legal, remedies. As such, no right to a jury trial exists (145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 284-285) . Defendants argued that a jury trial was guaranteed because they were asserting an affirmative defense requiring resolution of disputed factual issues related to the relevant Labor Code provisions. The court concluded, however, that because only equitable relief was being sought by plaintiffs, the existence of triable issues of fact relating to an affirmative defense was insufficient reason to require a jury trial (145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 285-287) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
B. Actions Based on Statutory Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities §§ 235.68-235.79

[Reserved]

§§ 235.68[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions Based on Common-Law Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.80

§ 235.80 Supporting Contention That Cause of Action Based on Unfair Competition Is Preempted by Federal Patent and Copyright Law--State Law Attempts to Prohibit Copying of Unpatented and Uncopyrighted Article

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION IS BASED ON STATE UNFAIR COMPETITION LAW THAT SEEKS TO PROTECT AGAINST THE COPYING OF AN UNPATENTED AND UNCOPYRIGHTED ARTICLE, AND IS THEREFORE PREEMPTED BY FEDERAL LAW.

A. Federal Preemption of State Law That Interferes With Federal Patent Laws. A state cannot encroach on the federal patent laws directly, or give protection of a kind that clashes with the objectives of the federal patent laws (Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 156-157, 162-163,167-168 ; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 231, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661).

B. Federal Law Preempts Any State Law That Attempts to Prohibit Copying of Unpatented and Uncopyrighted Article. When an article is unpatented and uncopyrighted, federal patent and copyright laws preclude a state from prohibiting the copying of the article itself or awarding damages therefor (Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 156-157, 162-163, 167-168, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 ; Compco Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting (1964) 376 U.S. 234, 237, 84 S. Ct. 779, 11 L. Ed. 2d 669 ; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 232-233, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661).

C. State Unfair Competition Claim Must Have "Extra Element" to Avoid Preemption. To determine whether a state-law unfair competition claim is preempted by federal patent or copyright law, the court must analyze whether the state-law claim contains an element not shared by the federal law, i.e., an extra element that changes the nature of the action so that it is qualitatively different from a copyright or patent infringement claim. If copying the plaintiff's product in itself infringes the state-created right, then the state-created right is preempted (Summit Mach. Tool Mfg. v. Victor CNC Sys. (9th Cir. 1993) 7 F.3d 1434, 1439-1440, 1442 ; Balboa Ins. Co. v. Trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal.

App. 3d 1327, 1339-1340, 267 Cal. Rptr. 787).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a cause of action based on state unfair competition law is preempted by federal patent and copyright laws [17 U.S.C.S. § 101 et seq.; 35 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq.], when the state law on which it is based seeks to prohibit the copying of an article that is unpatented and uncopyrighted [see Compco Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting (1964) 376 U.S. 234, 237, 84 S. Ct. 779, 11 L. Ed. 2d 669 ; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 231-233, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the points are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities opposing a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of common law unfair competition and the extent to which it is preempted by federal patent and copyright law, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion relating to federal patent and copyright laws, generally, including preemption of conflicting state laws, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright , and Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities relating to the preemption of state actions by federal copyright law, see Ch. 146, Literary Property, Copyright, and the Protection of Ideas . For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 235.81 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Federal Preemption of State Law That Interferes With Federal Patent Laws

In Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 , the U.S. Supreme Court granted certiorari to resolve the conflict between Interpart Corp. v. Italia (Fed. Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 678, 685 , which upheld the validity of former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300, and a Florida Supreme Court decision invalidating an almost identical statute (489 U.S. 141, 143-144) . Both statutes are referred to as "antidirect molding" statutes and prevent the use of the "direct molding process" to duplicate unpatented articles placed in commerce by their author or inventor. The U.S. Supreme Court said that a state law that substantially interferes with the enjoyment of an unpatented utilitarian or design concept that has been freely disclosed by its author to the public at large impermissibly contravenes the ultimate goal of public disclosure and use, which is the centerpiece of federal patent policy (489 U.S. 141, 156-157) . Such state statutes threaten the national uniformity promoted by the patent law and raise the specter of state-created monopolies in a host of useful shapes and processes for which patent protection has been denied or is otherwise unobtainable (489 U.S. 141, 163, 168) . Indeed, a federal decision to forego regulation in a given area may imply an authoritative federal decision that the area is best left unregulated, and in that event would have as much preemptive force as a decision to regulate (489 U.S. 141, 151-152) .

Interpart Corp. v. Italia (Fed. Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 678 had upheld former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300 on the grounds that it prevents unscrupulous competitorsfrom obtaining a product and using it to make a mold, and that it did not prohibit copying the design of a product in any other way, thus leaving products that were in the public domain free for anyone to make, use, or sell. The U.S. Supreme Court said that appending the conclusionary label "unscrupulous" to the competitive behavior merely endorses a policy judgment that patent laws do not leave the States free to make. When an item in general circulation is unprotected by patent, reproduction of a functional attribute is legitimate competitive activity (489 U.S. 141, 164) . That includes reproduction by "reverse-engineering" (489 U.S. 141, 160) .

The U.S. Supreme Court concluded that antidirect molding statutes are invalid, as preempted by the Supremacy Clause (U.S. Const. art. VI) because they offer patent-like protection for ideas deemed unprotected under the federal patent scheme (489 U.S. 141, 168) .

NOTE:

In response to the Court's holding in Bonito Boats, former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300 was repealed, effective January 1, 1992 [see Stats. 1991, ch. 647, § 4]. Bonito Boats also apparently abrogates Gladstone v. Hillel (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 977, 989-990, 250 Cal. Rptr. 372 , to the extent that Gladstone upheld an injunction for violation of former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17300.

In Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661 , a lamp manufacturer brought an action against a retail corporation to seek an injunction and damages for unfair competition. Plaintiff designed and manufactured a particular lamp. Defendant subsequently marketed a substantially identical lamp and sold it for a price roughly equivalent to plaintiff's wholesale cost. Plaintiff brought an action in the federal district court, claiming patent infringement and unfair competition under state law, by reason of confusion in the trade as to the source of the lamps. The trial court held the patents invalid, but found in favor of plaintiff on the cause of action for unfair competition. It enjoined defendant from selling or attempting to sell the articles, and ordered an accounting and damages. The court of appeals affirmed. Plaintiff filed a writ of certiorari, which the Supreme Court granted.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that, just as a state cannot encroach on the federal patent laws directly, it cannot, under some other law, such as that forbidding unfair competition, give protection of a kind that clashes with the objectives of the federal patent laws (376 U.S. 225, 231) . The court of appeals had held defendant liable under state law for doing no more than copying and marketing an unpatented article (376 U.S. 225, 227) . U.S. *Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8,*empowers Congress to enact patent laws (376 U.S. 225, 228-229) . State law that touches on the area of federal statutes may not interfere with the federal policy, or deny its benefits (376 U.S. 225, 229) . An unpatentable article is in the public domain and may be made and sold by anyone. Defendant had every right under federal patent laws to copy plaintiff's design and sell the articles (376 U.S. 225, 231) . To allow a state, by use of its unfair competition law, to prevent the copying of an unpatentable article would be to permit the state to deny the public something that federal law has said belongs to them (376 U.S. 225, 231-232) . Mere inability of the public to tell two identical articles apart is not enough to support an injunction against or an award of damages for copying that which the federal patent laws permit to be copied. A state may, however, in appropriate circumstances, require that goods, whether patented or unpatented, be labeled, or that other precautionary steps be taken to prevent customers from being misled as to the source. Similarly, it may protect businesses in the use of their trademarks, labels, or distinctive dress in the packaging of goods so as to prevent others, by imitating the markings, from misleading purchasers as to the source of the goods. However, when an article is unpatented and uncopyrighted, federal laws preclude a state from prohibiting the copying of the article itself or awarding damages therefor (376 U.S. 225, 232-233) .

[b] Federal Law Preempts Any State Law That Attempts to Prohibit Copying of Unpatented and Uncopyrighted Article

Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.80[3][a].

In Compco Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting (1964) 376 U.S. 234, 84 S. Ct. 779, 11 L. Ed. 2d 669 , one manufacturer of fluorescent lighting fixtures brought an action against another to seek an accounting and injunction based on state unfair competition laws. Plaintiff secured from the Patent Office a design patent of a certain reflector. It sought, but was refused, a mechanical patent on the same device. After plaintiff began selling its fixture, defendant's predecessor began making and selling fixtures very similar to plaintiff's. Plaintiff brought an action in federal district court alleging patent infringement and unfair competition based on confusion as to the source of the article. The trial court held the design patent invalid, but found for plaintiff on the cause of action for unfair competition. The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that a design that identifies its maker to the trade is a protectable right under state law, even though the design is unpatentable. Plaintiff filed a writ of certiorari, which the Supreme Court granted.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that when an article is unprotected by a patent or a copyright, state law may not forbid others to copy that article. To forbid copying would interfere with the federal policy in U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8, and in the implementing federal statutes, allowing free access to copy whatever the federal patent and copyright laws leave in the public domain. Plaintiff's fixture has been held not to be entitled to a design or mechanical patent (376 U.S. 234, 237) . Under the federal patent laws it is, therefore, in the public domain and can be copied in every detail by anyone. Although the trial court found that theconfiguration of plaintiff's fixture acquired a secondary meaning by which the design was associated with plaintiff, if the design is not entitled to a patent or other federal statutory protection, it can be copied at will. Although the federal patent laws prevent a state from prohibiting the copying and selling of unpatented articles, they do not prohibit state law, statutory or decisional, that requires those who make and sell copies to identify their products as their own. A state has power to impose liability on those who, knowing that the public is relying on an original manufacturer's reputation for quality and integrity, deceive the public by palming off their copies as the original. Moreover, a state cannot hold a copier accountable in damages for failure to label or otherwise to identify goods unless the failure is in violation of valid state statutory or decisional law requiring the copier to label or take other precautions to prevent confusion of customers as to the source of the goods (376 U.S. 234, 238-239) .

Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661 , is discussed in § 235.80[3][a].

[c] State Unfair Competition Claim Must Have "Extra Element" to Avoid Preemption

The plaintiff in Summit Mach. Tool Mfg. v. Victor CNC Sys. (9th Cir. 1993) 7 F.3d 1434 had entered into a contract with a Chinese corporation (ZMTW), under which ZMTW was to manufacture lathes from plaintiff's designs. The agreement provided that plaintiff had the exclusive right to sell outside of China all lathes manufactured by ZMTW in accordance with plaintiff's design. A few years later, defendant purchased seven lathes from ZMTW for resale in the United States. When plaintiff learned of the purchase by defendant, it notified defendant of its contract and demanded that defendant cease reselling the lathes. When defendant refused to do so, plaintiff brought suit against defendant, alleging unfair competition in violation of the federal Lanham Act (15 U.S.C.S. § 1125(a)) and California statutory and common law, as well as California tort claims for interference with contract and prospective economic advantage. The trial court found the lathes purchased and resold by defendant were not substantially similar to the lathes produced by ZMTW for plaintiff. On that basis, the court found against the plaintiff on its federal and state unfair competition claims for "reverse palming off." The court also held that the state-law unfair competition claims were preempted by federal patent and copyright laws to the extent that they sought to prevent defendant from copying plaintiff's designs.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit affirmed. With regard to the state unfair competition claims, the court noted that federal patent and copyright laws limit the states' ability to regulate unfair competition (7 F.3d 1434, 1439) . The court observed that preemption analysis involves determining whether the state law claim contains an element not shared by the federal law--that is, an element that changes the nature of the action so that it is qualitatively different from a copyright or patent infringement claim. Therefore, if copying the lathe or the plans for the lathe in itself infringes the state-created right, the state-created right is preempted (7 F.3d 1434, 1439-1440) .

The court noted that California unfair competition law has myriad branches each of which involve different elements and issues and each of which must be analyzed separately for preemption purposes. Plaintiff argued that it had been injured because defendant, rather than taking the time, effort, and expense to copy plaintiff's lathes, had instead simply purchased and marketed at a lesser cost lathes that were developed by plaintiff at considerable expense and effort (7 F.3d 1434, 1440) . The court observed that the common law tort of misappropriation is one branch of California's unfair competition law. The tort has three elements: (1) the plaintiff has invested substantial time and money in development of its property; (2) the defendant has appropriated the property at little or no cost; and (3) the plaintiff has been injured by the defendant's conduct. The court noted that an unfair competition action for misappropriation of time and effort may be congnizable if it contains an extra element that changes its nature from that of a copyright or patent infringement claim. Turning to plaintiff's claims, the court stated that to the extent that plaintiff complained that defendant had misappropriated the fruits of plaintiff's labor by marketing plaintiff's lathe with defendant's name on it, such a claim is really a claim for reverse palming off. State unfair competition laws that seek to prevent reverse palming off contain the requisite extra element and are not preempted by federal law (7 F.3d 1434, 1441) . However, the court concluded that plaintiff's state-law claim for reverse palming off failed for the same reason that its federal Lanham Act claim failed, i.e., because the trial court had found that the lathes purchased and marketed by defendant were not substantially similar to the lathes developed by plaintiff and hence there was no "bodily appropriation" of plaintiff's lathes (7 F.3d 1434, 1438-1439, 1441-1442) . The court further held that to the extent that plaintiff complained that defendant had "pirated" this lathe by employing a particularly unfair method of copying, such a claim is preempted by federal law (7 F.3d 1434, 1442) .

In Balboa Ins. Co. v. Trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 267 Cal. Rptr. 787 , a company (CPIS) had developed a computer program to help lenders track the insurance status of property that was collateral for loans. When CPIS defaulted on a loan obligation to plaintiff, CPIS agreed to give plaintiff's affiliate company (NMC) a perpetual, nonexclusive license to use the CPIS software. The agreement also gave NMC the right to modify the software and provided that any modification made by NMC would remain property of NMC. After the agreement was signed, NMC took over CPIS's loan tracking operations and hired a CPIS employee, Maashoff, to manage the operations. During this period, NMC made a number of enhancements to the CPIS software. Defendant and CPIS later formed a joint venture to establish a competing collateral insurance tracking service. CPIS licensed its software to defendant and hired Maashoff torun its operations. However, CPIS had not kept a copy of its base system when it licensed the program to NMC, and as a result the software licensed to defendant contained a number of the enhancements that had been developed by NMC. Defendant then began operating its center, using the CPIS software with NMC enhancements, and solicited some of plaintiff's employees to go to work for defendant. Defendant also solicited some of plaintiff's customers to switch their business to defendant. Plaintiff brought an action for unfair competition against defendant, seeking damages and injunctive relief. The trial court found that defendant had competed unfairly with plaintiff in several ways, including its use and sale of plaintiff's software modifications without its authorization, and entered judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed in part. Defendant argued on appeal that federal copyright law preempted plaintiff's unfair competition claim. Citing 17 U.S.C.S. § 301(a), the court noted that federal copyright law expressly preempts state laws that aim to protect legal or equitable rights that are equivalent to any of the exclusive rights granted under the federal copyright law. Quoting from Nimmer on Copyright, § 1.01[B] (Matthew Bender), the court stated that a right that is "equivalent to copyright" is one that is infringed by the mere act of reproduction, performance, distribution, or display (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1339) . Thus, according to Nimmer, if under state law the act of reproduction, performance, distribution, or display will in itself infringe the state-created right, then the state-created right is preempted. However, if other elements are required, in addition to or instead of the acts of reproduction, performance, distribution, or display, in order to constitute a state-created cause of action, then the state cause of action is not preempted (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1339-1340) . The court observed that courts have generally accepted Nimmer's test, but have also required that the extra element be one that changes the nature of the action so that it is qualitatively different from a copyright infringement claim. Thus, to survive preemption, plaintiff's complaint for unfair competition must allege an element beyond unauthorized duplication or transfer of its software (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1341) .

The court noted that unfair competition includes a broad range of claims and that copyright law preempts only some of the claims included in the term "unfair competition." Among the theories included are tort theories of breach of confidential relationship and fiduciary duty, interference with contract and prospective economic advantage, trade secrets, and misappropriation (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1341) . Examining the allegations of plaintiff's complaint, the court noted that plaintiff claimed a right in certain confidential information essential to its business, of which the computer software was only a part. The court observed that the harm allegedly done to plaintiff was from the defendant's use of this confidential information to lure plaintiff's clients and employees and render valueless the consideration that CPIS had paid to plaintiff to settle the earlier debt. Plaintiff did not allege an improper reproduction, performance, distribution, or display; instead, plaintiff alleged that the knowledge gained from the confidential information allowed defendant an improper head start in its competition with plaintiff (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1343-1344) . The court determined that the complaint arguably raised claims for breach of confidential relationship, breach of fiduciary duty, trade secrets, and misappropriation (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1344-1345) . After discussing numerous cases from other jurisdictions, the court concluded that the breach of fiduciary duty and confidential relationship claims, as well as the trade secret claims, were not preempted by federal copyright law because they all generally involved the extra element of damages flowing from the disruption of an important relationship and breach of confidence (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1347-1352) . The court concluded, however, a common law misappropriation claim for unauthorized use or transfer of the software was preempted because it added nothing to a potential copyright infringement claim (218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1353) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 235 UNFAIR COMPETITION
PART II. FORMS
C. Actions Based on Common-Law Unfair Competition

23-235 California Points & Authorities § 235.81

§ 235.81 Opposing Contention That Cause of Action Based on Unfair Competition Is Preempted by Federal Patent and Copyright Law--State Law May Protect Business in Use of Trademarks or Labels to Prevent Confusion of Content or Source

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION IS NOT PREEMPTED BY FEDERAL PATENT LAW BECAUSE IT IS NOT BASED ON STATE LAW THAT SEEKS TO PROTECT AGAINST THE COPYING OF AN UNPATENTED AND UNCOPYRIGHTED ARTICLE, BUT RATHER IS BASED ON STATE UNFAIR COMPETITION LAW THAT PROTECTS THE CONSUMER FROM BEING MISLED AS TO THE ARTICLE'S CONTENT OR SOURCE.

A. State Protection From Confusion of Content or Source. A state may protect a business in the use of trademarks or labels by requiring that appropriate steps be taken to prevent the consumer from being misled as to the content or source of the product (Allied Artists Pictures Corp. v. Friedman (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 127, 133, 137 Cal. Rptr. 94 ; see Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 154-155, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 (dicta)).

B. State Protection From Palming Off. State law, statutory or decisional, may in some circumstances grant relief when deceptive or fraudulent competitive practices are conducted, such as when one palms off products as those of a competitor, or unfairly appropriates for profit the valuable efforts of a competitor (Capitol Records, Inc. v. Erickson (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 537-538, 82 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; see Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 165-166, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 (dicta)).

[Optional] C. Federal Law Does Not Preempt State Laws Prohibiting Reverse Palming Off. State unfair competition laws that seek to prevent reverse palming off (acquiring and marketing a competitor's goods under one's own name) are not preempted by federal copyright or patent law (Summit Mach. Tool Mfg. v. Victor CNC Sys. (9th Cir. 1993) 7 F.3d 1434, 1441) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that a cause of action based on state unfair competition law is preempted by federal copyright (17 U.S.C.S. § 101 et seq.) or patent laws (35 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq.), when the state law on which it is based does not seek to prohibit the copying of an article that is unpatented and uncopyrighted, but rather seeks to protect consumers from confusion concerning the source or content of the article [see Allied Artists Pictures Corp. v. Friedman (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 127, 133, 137 Cal. Rptr. 94 ; Capitol Records, Inc. v. Erickson (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 537-538, 82 Cal. Rptr. 798] . They may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the substantive points are raised. For example, they might be combined with general points and authorities supporting a general demurrer to a complaint. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Optional Paragraph C should be included when the alleged unfair competition consists of "reverse palming off" (the acquisition and unauthorized marketing of a competitor's product under one's own name).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of common law unfair competition and the extent to which it is preempted by federal patent and copyright law, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender). For discussion relating to federal patent and copyright laws, generally, including preemption of conflicting state laws, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright , and Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions (Matthew Bender). For discussion of federal and state trademark laws, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities relating to the preemption of state actions by federal copyright law, see Ch. 146, Literary Property, Copyright, and the Protection of Ideas . For forms of points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used to oppose the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 235.80.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] State Protection From Confusion of Content or Source

The facts and procedural background of Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 , are discussed in § 235.80[3][a]]. The U.S. Supreme Court invalidated the statute under review, butportions of the opinion discussing the lack of conflict between the federal patent and copyright laws and legitimate state trade secret and unfair competition laws may be useful in arguing to uphold a particular state law. The U.S. Supreme Court acknowledged that its holdings in Compco Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting (1964) 376 U.S. 234, 84 S. Ct. 779, 11 L. Ed. 2d 669 [see § 235.80[3][b]], and Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661 [see § 235.80[3][a]], had been the subject of heated scholarly and judicial debate, and that their broadest reading would prohibit the states from regulating deceptive simulation of trade dress or the tortious appropriation of private information (489 U.S. 141, 154) . However, the Court stated that this broad reading is inappropriate; the holdings in Bonito Boats, Sears, and Compco do not preclude all state restriction of unfair competition and trade secrets; and the states remain free to place limited regulations on the circumstances in which unpatentable designs are used in order to prevent consumer confusion regarding source, and to prohibit the tortious appropriation of private information (489 U.S. 141, 154-155) . The Court noted that the law of unfair competition has its roots in the common law tort of deceit; its general concern is with protecting consumers from confusion as to source. The common law of unfair competition is limited, however, to protection against copying nonfunctional aspects of consumer products that have acquired secondary meaning so that they operate as a designation of source. The Court said that Judge Learned Hand captured the distinction well in Crescent Tool Co. v. Kilborn & Bishop Co. (2d Cir. 1917) 247 F. 299, 301 , in which he wrote "the plaintiff has the right not to lose its customers through false representations that those are its wares which in fact are not, but it may not monopolize any design or pattern, however trifling. The defendant, on the other hand, may copy plaintiff's goods slavishly down to the minutest detail, but may not represent itself as the plaintiff in their sale" (489 U.S. 141, 157) . The Court also noted that Section 43(a) of the Lanham Act (15 U.S.C.S. § 1125(a)) is an affirmative indication from Congress that both the law of unfair competition and trade secret protection are consistent with the balance struck by the patent laws (489 U.S. 141, 165-166) .

In Allied Artists Pictures Corp. v. Friedman (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 127, 137 Cal. Rptr. 94 , a distributor of a foreign film brought an action for unfair competition against the distributor of a domestic film whose title was similar to that of the English title of the foreign film. The films are similar with regard to the general theme and name of the principal character, which appears in both titles. Plaintiff alleged that defendant's use of the similar title was calculated to deceive the public into believing that defendant's film was in fact plaintiff's film, which was widely publicized. After hearing, the trial court found that plaintiff had established a secondary meaning between the foreign film and the English title, and that the title of defendant's film was confusingly similar. The court granted plaintiff's petition for a temporary and permanent injunction preventing defendant from using its title, or any other confusingly similar title. The court also required defendant to include a phrase distinguishing the two films in all of its advertisements in California. Defendant appealed, and plaintiff cross-appealed, contending that the injunction should extend beyond the boundaries of California and should require defendant to change the name of his film.

The court of appeal affirmed with respect to the judgment's application to California, and remanded the matter for further consideration with regard to nationwide application. The court noted that the state's power to protect literary titles, which are not afforded protection by federal copyright laws, cannot be based on any theory of appropriation of a property right. A title of a literary product is, like a label on other types of products, simply a means of identifying a product. Anyone may use a title if there is no secondary significance. However, palming off one's goods as those of another constitutes unfair competition. A state may protect a business in the use of trademarks or labels by requiring that appropriate steps be taken to prevent the consumer from being misled as to the content or source of the product (68 Cal. App. 3d 127, 133) . Plaintiff, by virtue of its exclusive right to market the film in the United States, has a property right in the film sufficient to entitle it to protection against unfair competition, including protection against the use of deceptive or misleading titles (68 Cal. App. 3d 127, 134) .

[b] State Protection From Palming Off

Bonito Boats v. Thunder Craft Boats (1989) 489 U.S. 141, 109 S. Ct. 971, 103 L. Ed. 2d 118 , is discussed in § 235.81[3][a].

In Capitol Records, Inc. v. Erickson (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 82 Cal. Rptr. 798 , a major recording company brought an action against a company that recorded and sold plaintiff's products for injunctive relief based on unfair competition. Defendant purchased on the open market records and tapes of musical performances produced, recorded, and sold by plaintiff. Defendant then made master recordings from the records and tapes, and produced tape cartridges to sell to the general public. Defendant did not obtain permission from or remunerate plaintiff or the recording artists; and included a statement to that effect on the back of its packages. However, defendant did not alter the performances, the album title, or the performers' names. The trial court granted plaintiff's application for preliminary injunction, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that state law, statutory or decisional, may in some circumstances grant relief if deceptive or fraudulent competitive practices are conducted, for example, when one palms off products as those of a competitor, or when one unfairly appropriates for profit the valuable efforts of a competitor (2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 537-538) . The court rejected defendant's contention that the holdings in Compco Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting (1964) 376 U.S. 234, 84 S. Ct. 779, 11 L. Ed. 2d 669 , and Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co. (1964) 376 U.S. 225, 84 S. Ct. 784, 11 L. Ed. 2d 661 , preclude a state court from enjoining itsconduct on any theory, including that of unfair competition. Although these holdings preclude a state law from forbidding the copying of an article that is unprotected by a patent or copyright, an author or proprietor of an unpublished work is entitled to common law protection, and the application of state law of unfair competition in that field remains unaffected by those decisions and the principles set forth therein (2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 530-535) . Defendant's avoidance of expending skill and money in acquiring the artists and recording their performances constitutes unfair appropriation of plaintiff's efforts to produce artistic performances, and constitutes unfair competition. The disclaimer on defendant's products of itself does not negate unfair competition. Defendant's packages contain the same titles and names as appear on plaintiff's tapes and records, creating a question of fact whether defendant's conduct constitutes palming off or confusion as to the source of the recorded performances (2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 537) . Defendant erroneously considered plaintiff's right against the public, instead of the rights of plaintiff and defendant as competitors in business. Defendant not only copied discs or tapes, but also appropriated the product itself, e.g., performances embodied on the records, as well as the titles and names of the performers, entitling plaintiff to a preliminary injunction (2 Cal. App. 3d 526, 538) .

[c] Federal Law Does Not Preempt State Laws Prohibiting Reverse Palming Off

Summit Mach. Tool Mfg. v. Victor CNC Sys. (9th Cir. 1993) 7 F.3d 1434 , is discussed in § 235.80[3][c]. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit Court observed that "reverse palming off" occurs with the direct misappropriation of the services or goods of another. "Express reverse palming off" occurs when one party purchases or otherwise obtains a second party's goods, removes the second party's name, and then the markets the product under its own name. A defendant may also be guilty of reverse palming off by selling or offering for sale another's product that has been modified slightly and then labeled with a different name (7 F.3d 1434, 1437) . With respect to plaintiff's state-law unfair competition claims, the court stated that to the extent that plaintiff complained that defendant had misappropriated the fruits of plaintiff's labor by marketing plaintiff's lathe with defendant's name on it, such a claim is really a claim for reverse palming off. State unfair competition laws that seek to prevent reverse palming off are not preempted by federal patent and copyright laws (7 F.3d 1434, 1441) . However, the court concluded that plaintiff's state-law claim for reverse palming off failed for the same reason that its federal Lanham Act claim failed, i.e., because the trial court had found that the lathes purchased and marketed by defendant were not substantially similar to the lathes developed by plaintiff and hence there was no "bodily appropriation" of plaintiff's lathes (7 F.3d 1434, 1438-1439, 1441-1442) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER

23-236 California Points & Authorities 236.syn

§ 236.syn Synopsis to Chapter 236: UNLAWFUL DETAINER

§ 236.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 236.02 Governing Statutes

§ 236.03 Acts Constituting Unlawful Detainer

§ 236.04 Affirmative Defenses

[1] Possession of Property

[2] Background: Equitable vs. Legal Classification

[3] Relief in Addition to Recovering Possession

§ 236.04A Stay of Unlawful Detainer Proceedings During Active Military Duty

§ 236.05 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 236.06 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 236.07-236.09 [Reserved]

§ 236.10 Supporting Motion to Quash Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)]--Five-Day Summons

Insufficient When Additional Causes of Action Are Pleaded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Five-Day Summons Is Insufficient to Confer Jurisdiction

§ 236.11 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege Service of Three-Day Notice When Required [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(2)-(4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service of Notice

[b] Lease Provision Ineffective

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Service of Notice

[b] Lease Provision Ineffective

§ 236.12 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege That Three-day Notice Was Written [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(2)-(4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

§ 236.13 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Fails to Demand Precise Amount Due [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[c] Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due

[d] Demand for "Rent" Is Insufficient

[e] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

[f] Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[b] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

§ 236.13A Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Fails to State to Whom Payment Must Be Made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[c] Three-day Notice Must State to Whom Rent Payment Must Be Made

§ 236.14 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Not in the Alternative [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2), (3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[c] Nonalternative Demand Is Insufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[b] Nonalternative Demand Is Insufficient

§ 236.15 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Equivocal Demand for Possession in Three-Day Notice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[c] Unequivocal Demand for Possession Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

§ 236.16 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege Landlord-Tenant Relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)-(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Landlord-Tenant Relationship Must Be Alleged

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Landlord-Tenant Relationship Must Be Alleged

§ 236.17 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Describe Premises With Reasonable Certainty [Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 236.18 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--30-Day Notice Fails to Meet Statutory Requirements [Civ. Code §§ 789, 1946]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defective 30-Day Notice

[b] Notice in the Alternative

§ 236.19 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege that Tenant Remains in Possession of Premises [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Allegation that Tenant Remains in Possession

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Allegation That Tenant Remains in Possession

§ 236.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)]--Failure to Allege Whether Lease Is Written or Oral or Implied by Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lease as Contract

§ 236.21 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Cross Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Striking Cross Complaint in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

[b] Cross Complaint Is Improper in Unlawful Detainer

[c] Cross Complaint Is Improper When Possession Is at Issue

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Improper in Unlawful Detainer

§ 236.22 Supporting Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter From Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Prayer for Nonallowable Damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 1174]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Recovery

[b] Lack of Statutory Authorization for Damages

[c] Recoverable Damages

[d] Strict Construction

[e] Damages During Period of Unlawful Detention

[f] Damages Before Unlawful Detention

[g] Future Damages

[h] Damages Before End of Tenancy Terminated by 30-Day Notice

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages During Period of Unlawful Detention

[b] Future Damages

§ 236.23 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense Not Related to Issue of Possession

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Unrelated to Possession Is Irrelevant

[b] Defense of Title Defect Is Improper

[c] Defense of Retaliatory Eviction for Strike Is Improper

§ 236.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Compel Court to Vacate

Order Continuing Trial of Unlawful Detainer Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Order Continuing Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Order Continuing Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

§ 236.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Compel Court to Hear or Sustain Defense in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Refusal to Hear Defense

[b] Review of Refusal to Sustain Defense

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Refusal to Hear Defense

§ 236.26 Supporting Application for Relief From Forfeiture [Code Civ. Proc. § 1179]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Willful Breach Does Not Preclude Relief

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Willful Breach Does Not Preclude Relief

§ 236.27 Supporting Contention That Unlawful Detainer Complaint Filed Prematurely--Time to Pay Rent Under Three-Day Notice Was Extended by Holiday

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three Days Extended By Legal Holiday

§§ 236.28-236.39 [Reserved]

§ 236.40 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required When Periodic Tenancy Terminated by Notice Under Civil Code Section 1946 [Civ. Code § 791]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Termination of Periodic Tenancy

§ 236.41 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required When Tenant Fails to Deliver Possession After a Notice of Termination or Written Offer of Surrender [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 236.42 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required After Expiration of Fixed-Term Lease [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Expiration of Fixed Term

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Expiration of Fixed Term

§ 236.43 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required to Remove Former Servant, Employee, Agent, or Licensee [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 236.44 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Not Required to Be in Alternative [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(3), (4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Zoning Ordinance Is an Unlawful Purpose

§ 236.45 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Premises Described With Reasonable Certainty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Description by Name Is Reasonably Certain

[b] Description Under Which Possession Was Taken Is Sufficient

[c] Reasonable Certainty Despite Error

§ 236.46 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Complaint Was Filed More Than Three Days After Service of Three-Day Notice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to Comply Is Not Extended When Three-Day Notice Is Posted and Mailed

[b] Service Is Effective When Posted and Mailed

§ 236.46A Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)Opposing Demurrer to Complaint []--Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Not Insufficient []

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand of Rent Due for More than One Year Does Not Invalidate Notice

§ 236.47 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Cross Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Defendant Has Vacated and Possession Is Not in Issue [Civ. Code § 1952.3(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Proper When Possession Is No Longer Issue Because Tenant Surrendered Possession

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Proper When Possession Is No Longer Issue Because Tenant Surrendered Possession

§ 236.48 Opposing Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter From Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Prayer for Damages for Fraud, Force, or Violence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 236.49 Opposing Application for Relief From Forfeiture [Code Civ. Proc. § 1179]--Hardship on Respondent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hardship to Respondent Precludes Relief

[b] Factors to Be Considered When Covenant Breached Is Provision in Commercial Lease Against Assigning or Subletting Without Lessor's Prior Consent

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hardship to Respondent Precludes Relief

§§ 236.50-236.59 [Reserved]

§ 236.60 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense Directly Related to Issue of Possession--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

§ 236.61 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Breach of the Warranty of Habitability

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[c] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper

[d] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper Because Dwelling Has Been Declared Substandard

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper

§ 236.62 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Retaliatory Eviction [Civ. Code § 1942.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[b] Eviction in Retaliation for Participation in Tenant Organization or Exercise of Other Legal Rights

[c] Frustration of Public Policy by Retaliatory Eviction

[d] Frustration of Statutory Rights by Retaliatory Eviction

[e] Retaliatory Eviction Defense Is Available to Commercial Tenant

[f] Affirmative Defense of Retaliatory Eviction Is Available Without Exercise of Repair-and-Deduct Remedy or Complaints to Governmental Authorities

§ 236.63 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Racial Discrimination

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[c] Defense of Racial Discrimination Is Proper

§ 236.64 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense That Notice Fails to Demand Precise Amount Due [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

[c] Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due

[d] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

[e] Demand in Excess of Judgment

[f] Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient

§ 236.65 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Waiver of Breach

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[b] Waiver of Breach Bars Judgment for Possession

[c] Conduct Supporting Inference of Waiver

[d] Acceptance of Benefits Under Lease Constitutes Waiver

[e] Acceptance of Rent With Knowledge of Breach Constitutes Waiver

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Rent With Knowledge of Breach Constitutes Waiver

§ 236.66 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance With Condition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance Is Proper

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance Is Proper

§ 236.67 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Lessor's Bad Faith in Causing Breach

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[b] Lessor's Bad Faith in Causing Breach Precludes a Forfeiture

§ 236.68 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Fraud in Inducing Person Already in Possession to Enter Into Lease

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

[c] Defense of Fraud After Defendant Is in Possession Is Proper

§ 236.69 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Part Performance of Oral Agreement to Lease

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Oral Agreement to Lease Is Proper

§ 236.70 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§

435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Performance of Agreement for Purchase of Business With Lease as Part Consideration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Lease as Part Consideration for Purchase of Business Is Proper

§ 236.71 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Relationship Involving Sale of Interest in Property to Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Relationship Involving Sale of Interest in Property to Defendant Is Proper

§ 236.72 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Plaintiff Has Raised Issue of Title

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Challenge to Plaintiff's Title Is Proper When Plaintiff Has Raised Issue

§ 236.73 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Relationship Is a Partnership

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Partnership Is Proper

§ 236.74 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Landlord's Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation by Landlord Is Proper Defense

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation by Landlord Is Proper Defense

§ 236.75 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Invalid Title in Action Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Invalid Title Is Proper to Extent Provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a

[b] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3)

[c] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3)

[b] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.01

§ 236.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities for use in actions involving landlord and tenant unlawful detainer proceedings. Part II includes the following forms:

- A form supporting a motion to quash service of a five-day summons [§ 236.10];
- Forms supporting [§§ 236.11-236.20] and opposing [§§ 236.40-236.46] a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer action;
- A form supporting a plaintiff's motion to strike a cross complaint in an unlawful detainer action [§ 236.21];
- Forms supporting a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an unlawful detainer proceeding [§§ 236.22-236.23];
- Forms supporting a petition for a writ of mandate [§§ 236.24-236.25];
- Forms supporting [§ 236.26] and opposing [§ 236.49] an application for relief from forfeiture;
- A form supporting the contention that an unlawful detainer action was filed prematurely [§ 236.27];
- A form opposing a plaintiff's motion to strike a cross complaint [§ 236.47] and a form opposing a motion to strike irrelevant matter from a complaint [§ 236.48]; and
- Forms setting forth affirmative defenses in unlawful detainer actions [§§ 236.60-236.75].

For a discussion and sample forms showing how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a complete memorandum of points and authorities or brief, and for further discussion of law and motion procedure and strategy, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Numerous landlord-tenant related forms, including forms supporting and opposing the imposition of damages, are set forth in Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeIrrelevant MattersCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.02

§ 236.02 Governing Statutes

Unlawful detainer is governed generally by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161-1179a. Except as specifically provided in those sections, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 307 et seq., which govern civil actions generally, are applicable to and constitute the rules of practice in unlawful detainer proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 1177].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Real Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.03

§ 236.03 Acts Constituting Unlawful Detainer

As originally enacted, the unlawful detainer statutes applied only to parties having the relationship of landlord and tenant. However, with the addition of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a, the summary remedy has been expanded to include purchasers at an execution or foreclosure sale against a judgment debtor or mortgagor, or against a vendor who refuses to surrender possession of the premises. Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1) was also amended providing the remedy to employers against employees, principals against agents, and licensors against licensees.

There are at least 13 different classes of persons and acts that constitute unlawful detainer, including the following:

- A tenant who continues in possession after expiration of his or her term or termination of his or her tenancy [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)];

- A person who became the occupant of the premises as a servant, employee, agent, or licensee, and continues in possession after termination of the employment, agency, or license [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after default in payment of rent and service on him or her of a three-day notice requiring payment of rent or surrender of possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after a curable breach of covenant and service of a three-day notice to cure the breach or surrender possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after a noncurable breach of covenant and service on him or her of a three-day notice to surrender possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after subleasing, assigning, or committing waste contrary to covenants of the lease and service on him or her of a three-day notice demanding surrender of possesssion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after committing, or permitting the maintenance or commission of, a nuisance on the demised premises or using the premises for an unlawful purpose and service on him or her of a three-day notice to surrender possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)];

- A tenant who continues in possession after terminating his or her tenancy either by proper notice or an offer to surrender possession accepted by the landlord in writing and expiration of the time specified in the notice or offer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5)];

- A judgment debtor who continues in possession after sale had been held under execution levied against him or her, title of the purchaser at the execution sale has been perfected, and he or she has been served with a three-day notice to surrender possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(1)];

- A mortgagor who continues in possession after mortgage foreclosure sale, the purchaser's title at the foreclosure sale whether by court foreclosure or power of sale has been perfected, and a three-day notice has been served on him or her requiring surrender of possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(2)];

- A trustor under a deed of trust who continues in possession after title of a purchaser at a power of sale foreclosure sale has been perfected and a three-day notice has been served on him or her requiring surrender of possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(3)];

- A person who sold real property and continues in possession of the property after title under the sale has been perfected and a three-day notice has been served on him or her requiring surrender of possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(4)]; and

- A person whose property has been sold in accordance with Health & Safety Code § 18037.5 under the default provisions of a conditional sales agreement or security agreement executed by that person, or a person under whom that person claims, when the title under the sale has been duly perfected, and a three-day written notice to quit has been served on the person [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(5)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionWrits of ExecutionReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresJudicial ForeclosuresReal Property LawFinancingMortgages & Other Security InstrumentsForeclosuresPrivate Power-of-Sale ForeclosureReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.04

§ 236.04 Affirmative Defenses

[1] Possession of Property

A defense normally permitted because it arises out of the subject matter of the original suit is generally excluded in an unlawful detainer action if this defense is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possesssion, which the unlawful detainer procedure seeks speedily to resolve. However, a tenant is not prohibited from interposing a defense that does directly relate to the issue of possession and, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises [Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168] .

[2] Background: Equitable vs. Legal Classification

Formerly, a distinction was made based on the characterization of a defense as equitable or legal [see, e.g., Union Oil Co. v. Chandler (1970)4 Cal. App. 3d 716, 721-722, 84 Cal. Rptr. 756] . But this was inaccurate for two reasons. First, past cases did not permit the interposition of any conceivable equitable defense, but allowed only those defenses that, if established, would preclude the landlord from recovering possession of the property. For example, a court refused to permit a tenant to raise the equitable defense that the lease under which she held possession had been obtained by fraud, because even if the tenant established the lease's invalidity, she would not have been entitled to retain possession. Rather, she could only have rescinded and obtained damages [see Smith v. Whyers (1923) 64 Cal. App. 193, 195, 221 P. 387] . In contrast, a tenant was permitted to defend an unlawful detainer action on the ground that the lease was obtained by fraud because the tenant had been in possession before the lease and thus by demonstrating its invalidity would have been entitled to retain possession [see Johnson v. Chely (1872) 43 Cal. 299, 305 ; Rishwain v. Smith (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 524, 531-533, 175 P.2d 555] .

A second objection to the equitable/legal classification of defenses is based on the fact that decisions have permitted the introduction of legal defenses whenever such defenses, if proven, would have preserved possession in the tenant. Several of the early cases permitted defenses that they characterized as equitable but that would more appropriately be termed legal [see, e.g., Knight v. Black (1912) 19 Cal. App. 518, 526, 126 P. 512] . Even when the defense has been recognized as legal, that has not been a complete bar to its introduction in unlawful detainer cases. For example, a tenant was permitted to raise the legal defense of partial eviction [see Giraud v. Milovich (1938) 29 Cal. App. 2d 543, 547-549, 85 P.2d 182] .

[3] Relief in Addition to Recovering Possession

If the plaintiff seeks relief in addition to recovery of possession, for example, the recovery of back rent, any affirmative defense to the relief that the defendant may have may, of course, be asserted. Thus, in Gruzen v. Henry (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 515, 517-519, 148 Cal. Rptr. 573 , a proceeding in unlawful detainer, defendants contended that their rental agreement with the plaintiff landlord was void because plaintiff had not previously secured the certificate of occupancy required by city ordinance. The contention was rejected by the trial court, which rendered judgment for plaintiff. On appeal, the appellate court modified the judgment to delete the provisions for a money judgment and affirmed the judgment as modified. The court held that the city ordinance was, as construed by it in a prior opinion, valid. Because the purpose of the ordinance was to insure that property met the health and safety requirements of the city's code and hence was primarily for public protection, the landlord's failure to comply with its provisions rendered the rental agreement void. Further, while defendants were not entitled, without compensation, to continue to occupy the premises, plaintiff was not entitled to an award of rent. Similarly, in Espinoza v. Calva (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1400, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 492 , the lack of a certificate of occupancy rendered the lease illegal, and therefore the trial court erred in awarding a judgment for the landlord for past due rent.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral OverviewReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.04A

§ 236.04A Stay of Unlawful Detainer Proceedings During Active Military Duty

State legislation offers temporary protection from the enforcement of civil liabilities for officers and enlisted members of the National Guard called or ordered into active state or federal service and reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been on full-time active service or duty since September 11, 2001 [see 2002 Stats., ch. 60, § 1; Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.]. If premises are occupied primarily for dwelling purposes by the spouse, children, or other dependents of a service member called to active service or duty, no eviction or distress can be made until 30 days after the service member is released from active service or duty, except on leave of court granted on application therefor or granted in an action or proceeding affecting the right of possession [Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(a); see Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a) ("service member" defined), (b) ("military service" defined)]. Any person who knowingly takes part in any eviction or distress other than as permitted by Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(a), or who attempts to do so, is guilty of a misdemeanor [Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(c)].

The court, on its own motion or on application, may stay the eminent domain proceedings for the period specified in Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(a) [Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(b)]. Rather than granting a complete stay, the court may require the tenant to make regular partial payments during the service member's period of military service, or the court may make any other order that it finds to be just [Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(b)]. The court may deny the stay if it finds that the ability of the tenant to pay the agreed rent is not materially affected by the military service [Mil. & Vet. Code § 406(b)].

These protections apply to service members on active service or duty since September 11, 2001. However, the protections apply prospectively from June 20, 2002 (date bill was signed into law) [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.11]. Dependents of service members are also entitled to these benefits unless the court finds that the dependents' ability to comply with the terms of the obligation has not been materially impaired by the military service of the person on whom the applicants are dependent [Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.5].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsStays of ProceedingsGeneral OverviewMilitary & Veterans LawServicemembersHousingReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction

ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.05

§ 236.05 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind is page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages (or 20 pages in a summary judgment or summary adjudication proceeding). Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are not included in the page limitation. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other points and authorities to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion of how to select and use the forms in this publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic and stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.06

§ 236.06 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed discussion and forms of notices, allegations, complaints, defenses, claims for damages, orders, and judgments involving landlord-tenant disputes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chs. 330-335, Landlord and Tenant (Matthew Bender). In particular:

- Unlawful detainer actions are covered in Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions ;
- Damages are discussed in Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages ; and
- Rent contol issues are covered in Ch. 335, Landlord and Tenant: Rent Control .

For discussion and forms for use in particular circumstances that may involve unlawful detainer, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice:

- Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination.
- Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing.
- Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations.
- Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse.
- Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions.
- Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories.
- Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence.

- Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions.
- Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations.
- Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information.
- Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence.
- Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders.
- Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments.
- Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.
- Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments.
- Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process.
- Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers.
- Ch. 537, Summary Judgment.

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For landlord-tenant related points and authorities, including forms supporting and opposing the imposition of damages and supporting and opposing the constitutionality of rent control ordinances, see Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant .

Related points and authorities that may be useful in particular cases where unlawful detainer is involved may be found in the following chapters in this publication:

- Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders.
- Ch. 155, Motions After Trial.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsDefaultDefault JudgmentsReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerReal Property LawLandlord & TenantRent RegulationGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTitle QualityAdverse Claim ActionsUnlawful Detainer

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-236 California Points & Authorities §§ 236.07-236.09

[Reserved]

§§ 236.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.10

§ 236.10 Supporting Motion to Quash Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)]--Five-Day Summons Insufficient When Additional Causes of Action Are Pleaded

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO QUASH SER-
vs.	)	VICE OF SUMMONS
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION TO QUASH SERVICE OF THE FIVE-DAY SUMMONS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE IT IS INSUFFICIENT TO CONFER JURISDICTION IN THIS CASE SINCE PLAINTIFF HAS PLEADED CAUSES OF ACTION IN ADDITION TO UNLAWFUL DETAINER.

A. Motion to Quash in Unlawful Detainer. A motion to quash service of summons is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1177).

B. Motion to Quash. On or before the last day of his/her time to plead, or within any further time that the court may for good cause allow, a defendant may serve and file a notice of motion to quash service of summons on the ground of the court's lack of jurisdiction over him/her (Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)).

C. Five-Day Summons Is Insufficient to Confer Jurisdiction. When a complaint pleads another cause of action in addition to one for unlawful detainer, a five-day summons is insufficient to confer jurisdiction in an unlawful detainer proceeding (see Tropical Inv. Co. v. Brown (1919) 45 Cal. App. 205, 210, 187 P. 133).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a motion to quash service of summons in an unlawful detainer action when the five-day summons was served but when additional causes of action were pleaded, requiring a summons designating longer time in which to respond.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide an analysis of the allegations in plaintiff's complaint that demonstrates the complaint pleads a cause of action in addition to one for unlawful detainter.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of a notice of motion to quash service of a summons, a declaration in support of such a motion, and an order quashing service, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances (Matthew Bender). For alternative forms of this type of notice and order, and for a form of petition for writ of mandate to compel a lower court to quash service of summons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Five-Day Summons Is Insufficient to Confer Jurisdiction

In Tropical Inv. Co. v. Brown (1919) 45 Cal. App. 205, 187 P. 133 , the plaintiff filed a complaint containing two counts--the first in ejectment, the second based on unlawful detainer. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff, awarding damages. On appeal, the defendant contended that since the complaint contained a count in ejectment and a count in unlawful detainer, the three-day summons to appear [now five days; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1167] was insufficient. The court stated that when the defendant's demurrer to the complaint was overruled and she filed an answer within the four days thereafter required by the court, she appeared in the action (45 Cal. App. 205, 210) . The court conceded that the defendant was entitled to a longer time in which to appear on the count in ejectment. But having appeared generally and submitted to the court's jurisdiction without objection, she could not on appeal complain of the fact that the summons served was insufficient as to the time given her to appear. She should have moved to quash the summons (45 Cal. App. 205, 210) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.11

§ 236.11 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege Service of Three-Day Notice When Required [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(2)-(4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COM-
vs.	)	PLAINT
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE SERVICE OF A THREE-DAY NOTICE AS REQUIRED BY STATUTE.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. A defendant may demur in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1170).

B. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face of the complaint [or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice], the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

C. Basis for Recovery. A complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding must set forth the facts on which the plaintiff seeks to recover (Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(a)(2)).

D. Service of Notice. A complaint in unlawful detainer must allege service of a three-day notice on the defendant in an unlawful detainer proceeding when this notice is required (Zucco v. Farullo (1918) 37 Cal. App. 562, 568, 174 P. 929 (dictum)).

[EITHER]

E. Notice Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(2). Service of a three-day notice to pay rent or quit is necessary for a cause of action for unlawful detainer under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(2) (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)).

[OR]

E. Notice Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(3). Service of a three-day notice to perform or quit is necessary for a cause of action for unlawful detainer under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(3) (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)).

[OR]

E. Notice Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(4). Service of a three-day notice to quit is necessary for a cause of action for unlawful detainer under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(4) (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)).

[OR]

E. Notice Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a. Service of a three-day notice to quit is necessary for a cause of action for unlawful detainer under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a).

[Optional] F. Lease Provision Ineffective. A three-day notice required by statute must be served even if the lease contains a provision that purports to dispense with this requirement (Haydell v. Silva (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 23, 19 Cal. Rptr. 705).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the plaintiff has failed to allege service of a three-day notice in a situation when the notice is required by statute.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument should establish that an analysis of the allegations in plaintiff's complaint demonstrates that the plaintiff failed to allege service of a three-day notice on the defendant.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 236.40 -236.43 may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to allege service of the three-day notice and supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service of Notice

Zucco v. Farullo (1918) 37 Cal. App. 562, 174 P. 929 , was an action primarily in unlawful detainer in which the defendant defaulted and judgment was entered for the plaintiff for possession of the premises and for damages. The defendant appealed, arguing that three causes of action were improperly united in the compaint. The unlawful detainer action was based on the breach of covenants to water and care for trees and the grounds and to furnish vegetables to the plaintiff from such grounds, and other covenants. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that, since the defendant failed to object to a misjoinder of causes of action on appeal, the judgment would not be reversed (37 Cal. App. 562, 564) . Further, the notice to quit was sufficient, although not in the alternative, because the defendant's breaches could not be cured. In dictum, the court noted that the allegations of the contents of the three-day notice were sufficient since it is not necessary to set out in full the notice served. It may be alleged either literally or according to its legal effect (37 Cal. App. 562, 568) . Also, the service was sufficiently alleged. It is only necessary for the plaintiff to allege that notice in writing was served on the defendant, not the method (37 Cal. App. 562, 568) .

[b] Lease Provision Ineffective

Haydell v. Silva (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 19 Cal. Rptr. 705 , was an action for wrongful termination of a lease and for recovery of personal property remaining on the leased premises. The defendant cross complained for payment of a promissory note. The court entered a judgment in the defendant's favor both in the original action and on his cross complaint. The plaintiff was a tenant of the defendant. The defendant claimed she had failed to pay her rent for one month and on the first of the following month he padlocked the premises and posted a notice of the lease's termination on the outside of the premises. The lease contained a provision allowing reentry by the lessor in the event of a default in the payment of rent.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, holding that the attempted lease termination was not legally effective for any purpose. A lessor is not entitled to take possession by forcible entry under a provision in the lease to the effect that, if rent is due and unpaid, the lessor may enter and remove all persons from the demised premises. The failure of the tenant to pay rent does not automatically work a forfeiture of the leasehold; it merely gives the lessor the right to terminate the lease in the manner provided by law. Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) requires a three-day notice in writing requiring the payment of rent, stating the amount due, or possession of the property, and this notice must be served on the tenant (201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 23) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Service of Notice

In Kwok v. Bergren (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 596, 181 Cal. Rptr. 795 , plaintiff had recognized two defendants as tenants in possession. Thereafter, when rent was not timely paid, plaintiff served a three-day notice on a person who was allegedly the manager of the premises but not on either defendant. After a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed. It held that a three-day notice had to be served on tenants in possession and that it had not been properly served on such tenants. The superior court was directed to enter judgment in favor of defendants (130 Cal. App. 3d 596, 600-601) .

[b] Lease Provision Ineffective

Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 78 Cal. Rptr. 344 involved an action for damages for forcible entry and detainer. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. The plaintiff leased the premises from the defendants and fell behind in rent payments. The lease provided that, in the event the lessee was 10 days in arrears in rental payments, the lessors would have the right to reenter and take possession without written notice. The plaintiff received two registered letters about the late payments, including one which notified her that her tardy rental payments constituted defaults under the lease and that, if all rents then due and payable were not received by October 14th, the lessor would take possession of the property without further notice. In mid-October the plaintiff visited the defendant Masciotra to obtain his consent to a lease assignment. Defendant refused to discuss the matter and later on that day had the locks changed on the premises. As a result, the plaintiff was unable to operate her business on the premises.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and held that a tenant is entitled to a three-day notice to pay rent or quit and this notice is valid and enforceable only if the lessor strictly complies with the specifically described notice conditions (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713) . Unless the tenant cannot be found at the premises, the lessor must introduce evidence that the notice was personally served on the lessee. This was not done in this case and the registered letter was insufficient (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713-714) . Further, a landlord's summary reentry on leased premises for nonpayment of rent is not warranted, even though a clause expressly authorizing reenty appears in the lease unless the statutory three-day written notice is properly served on the tenant (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 714) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.12

§ 236.12 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege That Three-day Notice Was Written [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(2)-(4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT THE THREE-DAY NOTICE WAS WRITTEN AS REQUIRED BY STATUTE.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Basis for Recovery. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph C.]

D. Failure to State Cause of Action. When an insufficient three-day notice is served, the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 675, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

E. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy of unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

F. Written Notice Required. The three-day notice required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(2) through (4), and Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a must be written (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(2)-(4), 1161a).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer action when the complaint fails to allege that the three-day notice required by statute was written.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's complaint does not allege that the three-day notice was written.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to support a demurrer to complaint when it affirmatively appears on the face of the complaint that the notice was not written.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and a general form of demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiffs' complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was stated and the period of the alleged delinquency was not mentioned.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on him or her. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory. The remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674-675) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 78 Cal. Rptr. 344 , involved an action for damages for forcible entry and detainer. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. The plaintiff leased the premises from the defendants and fell behind in rent payments. The lease provided that in the event the lessee was 10 days in arrears in rental payments the lessor would have the right to reenter and take possession without written notice. The plaintiff received two registered letters about the late payments, including one which notified her that her tardy rental payments constituted defaults under the lease and that if all rents then due and payable were not received by October 14th the lessor would take possession of the property without further notice. In mid-October the plaintiff visited the defendant Masciotra to obtain his consent to a lease assignment. Defendant refused to discuss the matter and later on that day had the locks changed on the premises. As a result, the plaintiff was unable to operate her business on the premises. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The court held that a tenant is entitled to a three-day notice to pay rent or quit which may be enforced by summary legal proceedings, but that this notice is valid and enforceable only if the lessor strictly complies with the specifically described notice conditions (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713) . In the instant case, the registered letter was not sufficient service of the notice. Unless the tenant cannot be found at the premises, the lessor must introduce evidence that the notice was personally served on the lessee (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713-714) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.13

§ 236.13 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Fails to Demand Precise Amount Due [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THE THREE-DAY NOTICE DOES NOT DEMAND THE PRECISE AMOUNT OF RENT DUE.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Failure to State Cause of Action. When an insufficient three-day notice is served, the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 675, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

D. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy of unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

E. Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due. When an unlawful detainer is based on a default in the payment of rent, the notice to pay rent or quit must demand the exact amount of rent claimed to be due (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

[Optional] F. Demand for "Rent" Is Insufficient. A demand for "the rent" is insufficient to support a forfeiture (J.B. Hill Co. v. Pinque (1919) 179 Cal. 759, 762-763, 178 P. 952).

[Optional] G. Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient. A notice in which the demand for rent exceeds the amount due is insufficient (Johnson v. Sanches (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 118, 132 P.2d 853).

[Optional] H. Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient. A notice in which demand exceeds rent owed for more than one year is insufficient (Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 698, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint that the three-day notice failed to demand the precise amount of rent due. This defect would appear on the face of the complaint if the notice is attached and incorporated by reference or if the complaint alleges the notice's contents in specific terms. This form may be used in any of the following circumstances:

- When the notice fails to demand any specific sum;

- When the amount demanded exceeds the amount owed and this is apparent from the face of the complaint (as when the lease is incorporated by reference); or

- When the amount demanded includes charges other than rent and the demand states that the amount is for rent and these other charges.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's three-day notice does not demand the precise amount of rent due or that the amount demanded is more than the amount owed.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of a general form of demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiff's complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was stated and the period of the alleged delinquency was not mentioned. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on the tenant. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory. The remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[c] Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[d] Demand for "Rent" Is Insufficient

J.B. Hill Co. v. Pinque (1919) 179 Cal. 759, 178 P. 952 , involved an action to recover the possession of certain premises, together with damages. Judgment was entered in the plaintiff's favor. The plaintiff alleged nonpayment of rent. The trial court found that the plaintiff demanded an exact sum of rent. The appellant contended that the evidence did not sustain the finding that such a demand was made. In reversing, the Supreme Court held that the plaintiff's demand for rent was insufficient to authorize a forfeiture of the lease. A demand for payment of the exact sum due is a necessary prerequisite to a forfeiture of a lease for nonpayment of rent. When the plaintiff just asks for the "rent" and does not demand any specified amount, it falls short of the specific demand required by law (179 Cal. 759, 762) . The evidence showed that the refusal was not absolute, but that the tenant merely declined to pay pending an adjustment of a dispute concerning the plaintiff's right to make certain changes in the premises. But even if the defendant had flatly refused to pay the rent, this would not authorize a forfeiture of her lease in the absence of a proper demand. The plaintiff failed to establish a ground for the forfeiture of the lease and recovery of the premises for nonpayment of rent (179 Cal. 759, 762) .

[e] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

In Johnson v. Sanches (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 132 P.2d 853 , the plaintiff brought an action for unlawful detainer after serving a three-day notice to pay rent or surrender possession. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff. The defendant had leased two parcels from the plaintiff, one of 100 acres and the other was for 38 acres. The monthly rental for the 100-acre parcel was $208.34 and the annual rental for the 38-acre parcel was $950. The three-day notice demanded rent in the amount of $1,550.38. Included in the demand was $750 claimed to be due on the 38-acre parcel. The trial court found that $750 of the amount demanded was not owed by defendant. The court of appeal reversed the judgment holding that, to work a forfeiture of a lease for nonpayment of rent, the landlord must demand of the tenant the payment of the exact sum due (56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 116-117) . The notice in the instant case did not comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 in that the amount demanded as rent was $750 in excess of the amount then due (56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 118) .

[f] Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient

In Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635 , the landlord filed an unlawful detainer action following service on the tenant of a three-day notice. The notice demanded payment of more than one year's rent. The court of appeal held that the notice was insufficient to support the unlawful detainer action because it did not correctly state the amount that is due and because it was not served within one year after the rent become due, both of which are required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) (27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 697-698) . The facts consitituting ineffective notice appeared on the face of the notice, that is, the demand included rent owed more than one year before the three-day notice was served. Accordingly, the tenant was not required to plead his theory of ineffective notice as an affirmative defense. The court noted that the tenant had raised the issue of ineffective notice in its trial brief, and that there was no assertion by the landlord that he was unfairly surprised or prejudiced by the tenant's failure to raise the issue as an affirmative defense (27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 698) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 78 Cal. Rptr. 344 , involved an action for damages for forcible entry and detainer. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. The plaintiff leased the premises from the defendants and fell behind in rent payments. The lease provided that in the event the lessee was 10 days in arrears in rental payments the lessor would have the right to reenter and take possession without written notice. The plaintiff received two registered letters about the late payments, including one which notified her that her tardy rental payments constituted defaults under the lease and that if all rents then due and payable were not received by October 14th the lessor would take possession of the property without further notice. In mid-October the plaintiff visited the defendant Masciotra to obtain his consent to a lease assignment. Defendant refused to discuss the matter and later on that day had the locks changed on the premises. As a result, the plaintiff was unable to operate her business on the premises. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The court held that a tenant is entitled to a three-day notice to pay rent or quit, which may be enforced by summary legal proceedings, but that this notice is valid and enforceable only if the lessor strictly complies with the specifically described notice conditions (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713) . In this case, the registered letter was not sufficient service of the notice. Unless the tenant cannot be found at the premises, the lessor must introduce evidence that the notice was personally served on the lessee (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713-714) .

[b] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

In Werner v. Sargeant (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 833, 264 P.2d 217 , an action for unlawful detainer based on nonpayment of rent, the defendant appealed from a summary judgment entered for the plaintiff. That judgment granted rent to the plaintiff at $300 a month, while the demand and notice to quit filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 had demanded rent at $350 per month. An affirmative defense that incorporated the lease and disputed the amount of actual "rent" being paid was struck on the grounds that such a defense could not be asserted in an unlawful detainer action. In fact, the demand for payment had been for seven months' rent at $350 per month, less several hundred dollars paid to the plaintiff or credited on defendant's obligation, while the judgment was for eight months' rent, without deductions of any kind, at $300 per month. Because, so far as the record was concerned, the notice to pay rent or quit did not correctly set forth the amount of rent due as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161, judgment was reversed by the court of appeal.

The court, emphasizing that the summary judgment process is purely statutory and to be employed only in cases when no material issue of fact is presented, held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 requires that to work a forfeiture of a lease for nonpayment of rent the landlord must demand the precise sum due, and that a demand in excess of the judgment will not support the judgment (121 Cal. App. 2d 833, 837) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.13A

§ 236.13A Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Fails to State to Whom Payment Must Be Made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THE THREE-DAY NOTICE DOES NOT SPECIFY TO WHOM THE RENT PAYMENT MUST BE MADE.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Failure to State Cause of Action. When an insufficient three-day notice is served, the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 675, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

D. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy of unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

E. Three-day Notice Must State to Whom Rent Payment Must Be Made. When an unlawful detainer is based on a default in the payment of rent, the three-day notice to pay rent or quit must set forth the name, telephone number, and address of the person to whom the rent payment is to be made, and the usual days and hours that person will be available to receive the payment or the number of an account or the name and street address of a financial institution into which the rental payment may be made. If an electronic funds transfer procedure has been previously established, the notice must state that payment may be made pursuant to that procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint that the three-day notice failed to specify to whom the rent payment must be made and how such payment may be made. This defect would appear on the face of the complaint if the notice is attached and incorporated by reference or if the complaint alleges the notice's contents in specific terms.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's three-day notice does not specify to whom payment must be made.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of a general form of demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiff's complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was stated and the period of the alleged delinquency was not mentioned. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on the tenant. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory. The remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[c] Three-day Notice Must State to Whom Rent Payment Must Be Made

Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) requires that the notice set forth the name, telephone number, and address of the person to whom the rent payment is to be made. If the payment may be made personally, the notice must state the usual days and hours the person will be available to receive the payment or the number of an account and the name and street address of a financial institution into which the rental payment may be made (provided that the institution is located within five miles of the rental property). If an electronic funds transfer procedure has been previously established, the notice must state that payment may be made pursuant to that procedure.

If the address for payment does not allow for personal delivery, it will be conclusively presumed that on the mailing of any rent or notice to the owner by the tenant to the name and address provided, the notice or rent is deemed received by the owner on the date posted, if the tenant can show proof of mailing to the name and address provided by the owner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.14

§ 236.14 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Not in the Alternative [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2), (3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THE DEMAND IN THE THREE-DAY NOTICE WAS NOT IN THE ALTERNATIVE AS REQUIRED BY STATUTE.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Failure to State Cause of Action. If an insufficient three-day notice is served, the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 675, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

D. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy of unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

[EITHER]

E. Alternative Demands Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(2). When an unlawful detainer action is based on a default in rent, the three-day notice must include a demand for the payment of rent and, in the alternative, a demand to quit the premises (Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(2)).

[OR]

E. Alternative Demands Required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(3) for Curable Breach of Covenant. When an unlawful detainer action is based on a breach of a condition or covenant of the lease when the breach can be cured, the three-day notice must include a demand to cure the breach and, in the alternative, a demand to quit the premises (Code Civ. Proc. § 1162(3)).

F. Nonalternative Demand Is Insufficient. When the demand in a three-day notice is required to be framed in the alternative, a notice that merely directs the tenant to quit is insufficient to render the tenant guilty of unlawful detainer on his/her continued possession (Hinman v. Wagnon (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 24, 28-29, 341 P.2d 749).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a defendant's demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when it appears on the face of the complaint that the demand contained in the required three-day notice is not in the alternative as prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) (default in payment of rent) and Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3) (breach of covenant when breach is curable). This defect would appear on the face of the complaint if the notice is attached and incorporated by reference or if the complaint alleges the contents of the notice in specific terms.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the three-day notice demand did not include an alternative.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to support a motion for summary judgment based on an affirmative defense which alleges that the three-day notice is insufficient because the demand for possession was not in the alternative as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) or (3).

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and a general form of demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and PracticeCh. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.44 (notice not required to be in alternative) may be used to oppose the demurrer to the complaint (notice not in alternative) supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiff's complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was stated and the period of the alleged delinquency was not mentioned.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on him or her. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory and the remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, the court found that it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[c] Nonalternative Demand Is Insufficient

In Hinman v. Wagnon (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 24, 341 P.2d 749 , the trial court entered a judgment of dismissal in an unlawful detainer proceeding after a demurrer to the second amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend. The plaintiff had leased property to the defendant and in the action alleged that the defendant failed to comply with various terms of the lease with respect to rental payments and other covenants. The plaintiff sent a written notice to the defendant demanding that he deliver up possession of the premises. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court stated that for a person to avail himself or herself of the summary remedy of unlawful detainer, he or she must bring himself or herself within the terms of the statute establishing this relief (172 Cal. App. 2d 24, 27) . In the instant case, the plaintiff anchored his right of action on Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) and (3), alleging that the defendant defaulted in the payment of rentals and did not comply with other covenants of the lease. The court found that the notice required under these two subdivisions must be framed in the alternative: pay the rent or quit, perform the covenant or quit. Accordingly, it then held that a notice which merely directs the tenant to quit is insufficient to render the tenant guilty of unlawful detainer on his or her continued possession (172 Cal. App. 2d 24, 28-29) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 78 Cal. Rptr. 344 , involved an action for damages for forcible entry and detainer. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. The plaintiff leased the premises from the defendants and fell behind in rent payments. The lease provided that in the event the lessee was 10 days in arrears in rental payments the lessor would have the right to reenter and take possession without written notice. The plaintiff received two registered letters about the late payments, including one which notified her that her tardy rental payments constituted defaults under the lease and that if all rents then due and payable were not received by October 14th the lessor would take possession of the property without further notice. In mid-October the plaintiff visited the defendant Masciotra to obtain his consent to a lease assignment. Defendant refused to discuss the matter and later on that day had the locks changed on the premises. As a result, the plaintiff was unable to operate her business on the premises. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The court held that a tenant is entitled to a three-day notice to pay or quit which may be enforced by summary legal proceedings, but that this notice is valid and enforceable only if the lessor strictly complies with the specifically described notice conditions. In the instant case, the registered letter was not sufficient service of the notice. Unless the tenant cannot be found at the premises, the lessor must introduce evidence that the notice was personally served on the lessee (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713-714) .

[b] Nonalternative Demand Is Insufficient

Feder v. Wreden Packing & Provision Co., Inc. (1928) 89 Cal. App. 665, 265 P. 386 , involved an unlawful detainer action in which there was judgment for the plaintiffs. The defendants had leased floor space in plaintiffs' storeroom for use as a store. The lease was for five years and the rent was to be 75 percent of the net profits made by the defendant in the store. The lease provided for the method of determining the amount of rent, including a requirement that stock in the store be inventoried at the actual cost prices to the defendant. This arrangement was satisfactory for a year and a half and then the plaintiffs served notice to quit and deliver up possession of the premises based on violation of covenants, including the computation of the profits.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 clearly requires that notice be given to the tenant that in the event of failure to pay delinquent rent or perform a defaulted covenant the landlord will exercise his or her right under the law to regain possession of the premises. The notice set forth in the complaint in this case did not meet these requirements and thus did not state a cause of action (89 Cal. App. 665, 670) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.15

§ 236.15 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Equivocal Demand for Possession in Three-Day Notice

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THE DEMAND FOR POSSESSION IN THE THREE-DAY NOTICE WAS EQUIVOCAL.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Failure to State Cause of Action. When an insufficient three-day notice is served, the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 675, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

D. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy to unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

E. Unequivocal Demand for Possession Required. A demand for possession contained in a three-day notice must be unequivocal and without ambiguity (Horton-Howard v. Payton (1919) 44 Cal. App. 108, 112, 186 P. 167).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when it appears on the face of the complaint that the demand for possession contained in the required three-day notice is equivocal. This defect would appear on the face of the complaint if the notice is attached and incorporated by reference or if the complaint alleges the contents of the notice in specific terms.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the demand for possession in the three-day notice was ambiguous.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to support a motion for summary judgment based on an affirmative defense which alleges that the three-day notice is insufficient because the demand for possession was equivocal.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and a general form of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiffs' complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was stated and the period of the alleged delinquency was not mentioned.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on the tenant. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory. The remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [a], above.

[c] Unequivocal Demand for Possession Required

In Horton-Howard v. Payton (1919) 44 Cal. App. 108, 186 P. 167 , the plaintiff brought an action for unlawful detainer but judgment was entered for the defendants. The defendants leased a ranch from the plaintiff, agreeing to plant the entire ranch in beets and pay the lessors one-fourth of all the crops raised. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants breached their covenant to plant the beets and also that the defendants committed waste in diverting water from the leased premises. The plaintiff's attorney sent a letter to the defendants stating that they had repeatedly violated the terms of the lease and that the plaintiff demanded possession. The letter also asked the defendants to make a full statement giving details of water sold from the premises and asked to hear from the defendants at once.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that no demand for possession as required by the statute was ever served on the defendants (44 Cal. App. 108, 110) . Service of such a demand is a condition precedent to the forfeiture of the defendants' leasehold interest. Since forfeitures are not favored by the courts, every intendment and presumption is against the person seeking to enforce the forfeiture. Statutes creating forfeitures must be strictly construed, and one who seeks the summary remedy of unlawful detainer allowed by the statute must bring himself or herself clearly within its terms. A sufficient notice to quit must clearly, positively, and unequivocally disclose the intention of the landlord to repossess the premises. It must be positive, decisive, and without ambiguity (44 Cal. App. 108, 112) . In this case, the letter with its requests to remit a statement of the water sold and asking to hear from the defendants was not unequivocal but might suggest some alternative arrangement, inviting the defendants to express themselves in regard to it. The letter was not a sufficient demand for possession (44 Cal. App. 108, 113-114) .

It should be noted that in Horton-Howard the notice required was not in the alternative since the action was based on waste [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)] and the breach of a covenant that could not be cured [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 78 Cal. Rptr. 344 , involved an action for damages for forcible entry and detainer. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. The plaintiff leased the premises from the defendants and fell behind in rent payments. The lease provided that in the event the lessee was 10 days in arrears in rental payments the lessor would have the right to reenter and take possession without written notice. The plaintiff received two registered letters about the late payments, including one which notified her that her tardy rental payments constituted defaults under the lease and that if all rents then due and payable were not received by October 14th the lessor would take possession of the property without further notice. In mid-October the plaintiff visited the defendant Masciotra to obtain his consent to a lease assignment. Defendant refused to discuss the matter and later on that day had the locks changed on the premises. As a result, the plaintiff was unable to operate her business on the premises.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and held that a tenant is entitled to a three-day notice to pay rent or quit which may be enforced by summary legal proceedings, but that this notice is valid and enforceable only if the lessor strictly complies with the specifically described notice conditions. In the instant case, the registered letter was not sufficient service of the notice. Unless the tenant cannot be found at the premises, the lessor must introduce evidence that the notice was personally served on the lessee (273 Cal. App. 2d 709, 713-714) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.16

§ 236.16 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege Landlord-Tenant Relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)-(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT A LANDLORD-TENANT RELATIONSHIP EXISTED BETWEEN THE PARTIES.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Landlord-Tenant Relationship Must Be Alleged. A complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding must plead the fact that a landlord-tenant relationship exists between the parties (Fredericksen v. McCosker (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 114, 117-118, 299 P.2d 908).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to plead that a landlord-tenant relationship exists between the parties but that this relationship is a prerequisite to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)-(5).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the complaint did not allege a landlord-tenant relationship between the parties.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting general demurrer on grounds no cause of action stated).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Landlord-Tenant Relationship Must Be Alleged

Fredericksen v. McCosker (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 114, 299 P.2d 908 , was an action in unlawful detainer in which judgment was entered for the defendants. Plaintiffs appealed the finding of the trial court which had held that because the defendants were not, in fact, tenants, the unlawful detainer action could not be maintained. The court of appeal affirmed the finding and the judgment. The court of appeal first discussed the nature of defendants' claim on the land of the plaintiffs. It found that the defendants were in possession as owners under a claim of title, and that a recorded judgment to that effect supplied the appellants with constructive notice of that fact. Because no tenancy had ever existed between the parties, the plaintiffs did not have a cause of action in unlawful detainer against the defendants (143 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116-117) . The burden, the court continued, was on the plaintiffs to prove the relationship of landlord and tenant, and a holding over after its termination. Failure to do so precluded the bringing of an unlawful detainer proceeding, for such an action is limited to those cases in which the tenant is estopped to deny the landlord's title (143 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116-117) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Landlord-Tenant Relationship Must Be Alleged

Francis v. West Va. Oil Co. (1917) 174 Cal. 168, 162 P. 394 , was an unlawful detainer proceeding in which judgment was rendered for the defendant. Plaintiff contended on appeal that when the defendant corporation defaulted in one of its payments on the purchase price, pursuant to a contract of sale, that it immediately became a tenant at will subject to removal from the land through an unlawful detainer action. The Supreme Court rejected the plaintiff's argument and cited the rule that while it is not necessary to show an express demise or letting of lands to sustain an unlawful detainer action, the facts must show impliedly at least that the defendant occupies as tenant of the plaintiff, and that this must be something more than a mere quasi-tenancy (174 Cal. 168, 169) . The appellant also argued that since the contract in question did not in set terms give the defendant the right of possession of the property, its entry on the premises was merely permissive and therefore that of a tenancy at will. The Court also rejected this contention because the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant had clearly contemplated possession and occupancy of the land by the vendee. The Court concluded by saying that a vendee in possession is not a tenant in any sense of the word, and only a tenant could be sued under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1), and that failure of performance of the vendee's part of the contract of sale by the vendee in possession does not make the vendee a tenant (174 Cal. 168, 170-171) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.17

§ 236.17 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Describe Premises With Reasonable Certainty [Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO DESCRIBE THE PREMISES WITH REASONABLE CERTAINTY.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Description Required. A complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding must describe the premises with reasonable certainty (Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(a)(3)).

D. Description of Land. In an action for the recovery of real property, the property must be described in the complaint with such certainty as to enable an officer, on execution, to identify it (Code Civ. Proc. § 455).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the complaint fails to describe the premises with reasonable certainty.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the complaint failed to give any reasonable description of the premises.

[c] Related Uses

It has been suggested that a three-day or 30-day notice would be open to objection if it omitted a description of the premises [see Moskovitz et al., California Eviction Defense Manual, Ch. 6, Three-Day Notice, § 6.12, Ch. 7, 30-Day Notice, § 7.17 (2d ed. 1993)].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting general demurrer on grounds no cause of action stated).

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.45 may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint for failure to describe premises with reasonable certainty supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.18

§ 236.18 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--30-Day Notice Fails to Meet Statutory Requirements [Civ. Code §§ 789, 1946]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT THE 30-DAY NOTICE FAILS TO MEET STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Defective 30-Day Notice. When a 30-day notice fails to conform to the statutory requirements, it is ineffective to terminate a tenancy and may not support a cause of action for possession (Turney v. Collins (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 381, 392, 119 P.2d 954).

[EITHER]

D. Termination of Tenancy at Will. A tenancy at will may be terminated by the landlord's giving written notice to the tenant to remove from the premises within a specified period of not less than 30 days (Civ. Code § 789).

[OR]

D. Termination of Periodic Tenancy. A hiring of real property for an unspecified term may be terminated if one of the parties gives written notice to the other of his/her intention to terminate the hiring, at least as long before the expiration of the term implied by law as the term itself, not exceeding 30 days (Civ. Code § 1946).

[EITHER]

[Optional] E. Written Notice. The notice required to terminate a tenancy at will must be written (Civ. Code § 789).

[OR]

[Optional] E. Written Notice. The notice required to terminate a periodic tenancy must be written (Civ. Code § 789).

[Optional] F. Notice in the Alternative. A 30-day notice is ineffective if it does not simply demand possession but is in the alternative (Turney v. Collins (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 381, 392, 119 P.2d 954).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on its face that the 30-day notice fails to meet statutory requirements and the action is based on the termination of a tenancy at will or periodic tenancy. This defect would appear on the face of the complaint when the 30-day notice is incorporated by reference or when it is alleged in specific terms.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the 30-day notice was not given to the tenant in writing.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a motion to strike an affirmative defense based on a defective 30-day notice when the defect does not appear on the face of the complaint.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defective 30-Day Notice

Turney v. Collins (1941) 48 Cal. App. 2d 381, 119 P.2d 954 , involved an action to recover the possession of property in which the trial court entered judgment in the defendant's favor. The plaintiffs held the property in joint tenancy subject to both a trust deed and a chattel mortgage, securing a note in the principal sum of $22,000, held by the defendant. The defendant was placed in possession by the plaintiffs. A dispute arose as to payments due the defendant and the plaintiff gave notice to the defendant to yield possession of the property to them at once and stating that if she did not do so she would be required to pay rent of $4,500 per month for each month during which she retained possession. One of the points considered on appeal was the effect of this notice. The court of appeal noted that the defendant was a tenant at will whose tenancy could only be terminated by the service of a 30-day notice on her. The notice in this case was ineffective for two reasons. First, it specified a removal "forthwith." Second, the notice canceled itself out when, on the one hand, it purported to demand possession and, on the other hand, demanded a specific sum if the defendant continued in possession. The court held that there was thus no foundation for a cause of action for possession based on that notice (48 Cal. App. 2d 381, 392) .

[b] Notice in the Alternative

Turney v. Collins (1941) (48 Cal. App. 2d 381, 119 P.2d 954 , is discussed under [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.19

§ 236.19 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Failure to Allege that Tenant Remains in Possession of Premises [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.11[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT THE DEFENDANT TENANT REMAINED IN POSSESSION OF THE PREMISES AT THE TIME OF THE ACTION'S COMMENCEMENT.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph B.]

C. Requirement of Allegation that Tenant Remains in Possession. Since an action in unlawful detainer involves a forfeiture of the tenant's right to possession, one of the matters that must be pleaded and proved for unlawful detainer is that the tenant remains in possession of the premises (Briggs v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 906, 126 Cal. Rptr. 34 ; Fontana Indus. v. Western Grain Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 408, 412, 334 P.2d 611).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the complaint's face, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the plaintiff has failed to allege that the defendant remained in possession of the premises at the time the action was filed.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's complaint does not allege that the defendant was in possession of the premises at the time the complaint was filed.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to support a motion for judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 631.8 made at the close of plaintiff's case in an unlawful detainer action [see Fontana Indus. v. Western Grain Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 408, 411, 334 P.2d 611 , discussed under [3][a], below].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds that no cause of action has been stated).

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

For a related form opposing a plaintiff's motion to strike a defendant's cross complaint on the grounds that the defendant had vacated the premises and that therefore, possession was not in issue, see § 236.47.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Allegation that Tenant Remains in Possession

In Briggs v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 126 Cal. Rptr. 34 , defendant tenant appealed from a judgment for plaintiffs for damages in an unlawful detainer action. Plaintiffs had served defendant with a three-day notice to pay rent or quit after defendant had failed to pay the rent due for three months, and had served a copy of his notice on defendant's sublessee. Defendant's basic contention in plaintiff's subsequent unlawful detainer action was that it was not in possession of the subject premises at the time the action was filed and, therefore, the action was not properly maintainable against it. The trial court, in giving judgment for damages for nonpayment of the rent, including penalty damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 1178, found that defendant had not relinquished possession of the leased premises up to the date of trial. The court of appeal reversed the judgment.

The court found that in response to the three-day notice to pay rent or quit, defendant had done everything it could to surrender the premises to plaintiffs, which in this case was sending a letter to plaintiffs stating that it was not in possession of the subject premises and had surrendered to plaintiffs any and all right to possession which it had and, in addition, notifying defendant's sublessee that it had surrendered the premises and that further leasing arrangements would have to be made with plaintiffs (53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 904-905) . The court stated that defendant was not required further to oust the sublessee because no notice to pay rent or quit had been served on the sublessee by the landlord. Thus, the action came within the basic rule that, if a tenant vacates the premises and surrenders possession to the landlord before the time of the complaint's filing, then no action for unlawful detainer will lie even though the premises were not surrendered during the notice period (53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 905-906) . The court added with regard to this general rule that, since an action in unlawful detainer involves a forfeiture of the tenants right to possession, one of the matters which must be pleaded and proved for unlawful detainer is that the tenant remains in possession of the premises. Since plaintiffs could not establish this when defendant had surrendered the premises before the complaint's filing, the court held that the trial court had erred in treating the action as one in unlawful detainer (53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 906) .

It should be noted that the court in Briggs did not, however, completely reverse the trial court. Rather, without comment it sustained that portion of the judgment which gave damages to plaintiffs for nonpayment of the rent (53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 906) . It did hold, though, that with respect to the penalty damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 1174, since the action was not properly an unlawful detainer action, the trial court was in error in assessing such damages (53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 907) .

Fontana Indus. v. Western Grain Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 408, 334 P.2d 611 , was an action for unlawful detainer and damages, in which plaintiff sought to regain possession of certain premises that had been leased to defendants. Plaintiff's complaint included an allegation that defendants had abandoned the premises in their entirety, but had failed to remove certain buildings that defendants had promised to remove. In addition to damages for unpaid rent, plaintiff sought damages for the costs of removal. At the close of plaintiff's case, the trial court granted a nonsuit (now a motion for judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 631.8) and plaintiff appealed from the judgment which was then entered. The court of appeal affirmed.

In pertinent part, the court stated that the statutory unlawful detainer proceedings are summary in nature. They are designed to determine or protect the landlord's right to possession in those situations specified in the statute and cannot be used for any other purpose. In this regard, the recovery of rent is a mere incident to the main object, and when that object fails, so do the incidents (167 Cal. App. 2d 408, 411) . The court held, therefore, that, because there was no pleading or proof that defendant was in possession of the subject property at the time the action was filed or that the defendant wrongfully or otherwise withheld possession of the property from plaintiff at that time, a judgment of nonsuit was proper (167 Cal. App. 2d 408, 412) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Allegation That Tenant Remains in Possession

Markham v. Frakick (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 221 , was an action in unlawful detainer. Defendants had been in default in the payment of rent and taxes on the property in controversy. They were in possession of the property only through their subtenants. Plaintiff, the property's owner, served a written notice on defendants to pay the rent and taxes or quit, but served no such notice on the subtenants. Defendants, thereafter, served notice on plaintiff of their surrender of the premises and had notified their agent not to collect any further rent from the subtenants. Defendants relied on as an affirmative defense to plaintiff's action their notice to plaintiff and the subtenants. The trial court found in accordance with this defense and rendered judgment in favor of defendants. On plaintiff's appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court found that defendants had done all that was within their power to comply with plaintiff's demand for the surrender of the premises, except to oust their subtenants and turn over to plaintiff the premises in an absolutely vacant and tenantless condition (2 Cal. 2d 221, 223-224) . The Court found that, with respect to the subtenants, the failure to serve a three-day notice on the subtenants was a waiver of plaintiff's right to the possession of the premises insofar as the subtenants were concerned. Therefore, the Court concluded that, because plaintiff had waived any right to object to the fact of the subtenant's occupancy of the property, defendants were not in possession of the premises at the date of the action's commencement. In such circumstances, the Court held that an action of unlawful detainer will not lie (2 Cal. 2d 221, 224-225) .

It should be noted that the plaintiff in Markham made the further contention on appeal that, even though an action of unlawful detainer will not lie when defendants had vacated the premises, she was entitled to prosecute the action for the recovery of rent and taxes due under the lease. The Court rejected this contention, stating that since the primary purpose of an unlawful detainer action was the recovery of the possession of the property, and that the recovery of rent is a mere incident to the main object, when the main object of the action fails, the incidents must fall with it (2 Cal. 2d 221, 227) . It should also be noted, however, that this holding is inconsistent with the procedure followed in Briggs v. Electronic Memories and Magnetics Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 900, 126 Cal. Rptr. 34 , discussed in [3][a], above, where the court of appeal upheld, in effect, the trial court's judgment awarding plaintiffs damages for the unpaid rent, even though the plaintiffs were found not to be in possession of the premises at the time of the commencement of the plaintiff's suit.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.20

§ 236.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)]--Failure to Allege Whether Lease Is Written or Oral or Implied by Conduct

[1] FORM

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COM-
COUNTY OF _____	)	PLAINT
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE DEMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED WHEN IT CANNOT BE ASCERTAINED FROM THE COMPLAINT WHETHER THE LEASE IS WRITTEN OR ORAL OR IMPLIED BY CONDUCT.

A. Demurrer in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.11]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, to the complaint on the ground that it cannot be ascertained from the complaint whether the contract on which the action is founded is written or oral or implied by conduct (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face of the complaint (or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice), the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

C. Lease as Contract. A lease has a dual character of contract and conveyance (Medico-Dental Bldg. Co. of Los Angeles v. Horton & Converse (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 411, 418, 132 P.2d 457).

[EITHER]

D. Breach of Lease as Basis for Unlawful Detainer Action. A tenant's breach of the covenant to pay rent is a basis for an unlawful detainer action (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)).

[OR]

D. Breach of Lease as Basis for Unlawful Detainer Action. A tenant's breach of conditions or covenants of the lease other than payment of rent is a basis for an unlawful detainer action (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)).

[OR]

D. Breach of Lease as Basis for Unlawful Detainer Action. A tenant's breach of a covenant or condition against assigning, subletting, or committing waste on the demised premises is a basis for an unlawful detainer action (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the complaint fails to allege whether the lease is written or oral or implied by conduct and the proceeding is based on a breach of that lease.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's complaint does not allege that the lease was written or oral or implied by the conduct of the parties.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general form of special demurrer on the grounds that it cannot be determined whether the contract is written or oral, or implied by conduct, see Ch. California Forms of Pleading and Practice206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (supporting demurrer to complaint on grounds it cannot be ascertained from complaint whether contract was written or oral or implied by conduct).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lease as Contract

In Medico-Dental Bldg. Co. v. Horton & Converse (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 411, 132 P.2d 457 , plaintiff brought a suit for rent due under a lease, for the amount of an electricity charge, and for money for renovation following defendant's removal from the premises. The trial court found that plaintiff's breach of a restrictive covenant in the lease prevented the maintenance of the action except as to the electricity charge and rendered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff had argued that a lease is a conveyance as distinguished from a contract so that any covenant on the part of the lessor is independent of the lessee's obligation to pay rent and the remedy for breach of covenant is an action for damages.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, holding that while it is true that a lease is primarily a conveyance in that it transfers an estate to the lessee, it also presents the aspect of a contract. This dual character creates two distinct sets of rights and obligations. Those features of the lease which are strictly contractual in their nature should be construed according to the rules for the interpretations of contracts generally. In this case, the restrictive covenant by which the lessor agreed not to lease any other part of the building for use as a drug store ran to the entire consideration of the lease. The covenant not to lease for drug store purposes and the covenant to pay rent were mutual and dependent and the plaintiff's breach excused defendant's performance (21 Cal. 2d 411, 419-420) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.21

§ 236.21 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Cross Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO STRIKE
vs.	)	CROSS COMPLAINT
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE THE CROSS COMPLAINT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THIS IS AN UNLAWFUL DETAINER ACTION IN WHICH POSSESSION IS AT ISSUE.

A. Motion to Strike Cross Complaint. A cross complaint is subject to a motion to strike the whole cross complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 435).

B. Striking Cross Complaint in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. A court may strike a cross complaint as improper in an unlawful detainer proceeding when possession is an issue (Knowles v. Robinson (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 620, 625-627, 36 Cal. Rptr. 33, 387 P.2d 833).

C. Cross Complaint Is Improper in Unlawful Detainer. Generally, a cross complaint is not permissible in a proceeding for unlawful detainer (Knowles v. Robinson (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 620, 625, 36 Cal. Rptr. 33, 387 P.2d 833).

[Optional] D. Cross Complaint Is Improper When Possession Is at Issue. A cross complaint is improper in an unlawful detainer action, even when a defendant has surrendered possession before trial, if the defendant still claims the right to possession (Erbe Corp. v. W & B Realty Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 773, 778, 63 Cal. Rptr. 462).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff_____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a plaintiff's motion to strike a cross complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when possession is an issue.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the defendant has filed a cross complaint in an unlawful detainer action.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and a moving party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (supporting motion to strike whole or part of complaint).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.47 may be used to oppose a plaintiff's motion to strike a cross complaint supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Striking Cross Complaint in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

Knowles v. Robinson (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 620, 36 Cal. Rptr. 33, 387 P.2d 833 , involved an unlawful detainer proceeding in which defendants filed a cross complaint seeking to bring in new parties who were alleged to have conspired with plaintiff to deprive defendants of certain rights under a partnership agreement. The trial court granted a motion to strike the cross complaint and judgment was entered for plaintiff. The defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that no cross complaint may survive in a proceeding for unlawful detainer if it is objected to. The Court explained that the remedy of unlawful detainer is designed to provide a summary proceeding to secure possession of premises that are wrongfully withheld from the owner. The summary character of the action would be defeated if, by cross complaint, issues irrelevant to the right of immediate possession could be introduced. A cross complaint may not be properly filed in a suit for unlawful detainer, even though the alleged cause of action grows out of the subject matter involved in the original suit. Thus, the motion to strike the cross complaint was properly granted (60 Cal. 2d 620, 625) .

[b] Cross Complaint Is Improper in Unlawful Detainer

Knowles v. Robinson (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 620, 36 Cal. Rptr. 33, 387 P.2d 833 , is discussed under [a], above.

[c] Cross Complaint Is Improper When Possession Is at Issue

In Erbe Corp. v. W & B Realty Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 773, 63 Cal. Rptr. 462 , defendants leased a parking lot from plaintiff. Before the expiration of defendants' lease, plaintiff entered into a new lease with a third party. Even though informed of this fact, defendants' agents and employees prevented the new lessee from taking possession on the expiration of defendants' lease. For three months no parking business was conducted on the lot after the police had directed that the lot could not be operated until the dispute was settled, and plaintiff received no rent. At the end of the three-month period, defendants notified plaintiff that they were giving up possession due to continued interference by employees of plaintiff. However, they still maintained their right to possession of the premises. Plaintiff instituted an unlawful detainer proceeding. Defendants' cross complaint for forcible entry was struck by the trial court. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that the trial court was correct in striking the cross complaint. Although a cross complaint is permitted when a defendant surrenders possession before trial, in this case defendants steadfastly maintained their legal right to possession. An unlawful detainer action is the appropriate means to test any question of immediate possession to real property, whether defendant is in actual physical possession or merely claims the legal right to immediate possession. Thus, since defendants had not abandoned their claim to possession a cross complaint was improper as irrelevant to the right of immediate possession (255 Cal. App. 2d 773, 778) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Improper in Unlawful Detainer

Turem v. Texaco, Inc. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 758, 46 Cal. Rptr. 389 , was an action for forcible entry and conversion in which the trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment. Before this action, defendants had prevailed in an unlawful detainer proceeding against plaintiff. In that proceeding, which in the instant case was set up as a defense of res judicata, the trial court had struck the present plaintiff's cross complaint alleging forcible entry and eviction. Plaintiff argued the invalidity of that action.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, stating that when possession is an issue, the trial court has jurisdiction to strike a cross complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1170 provides that the defendant may answer or demur. This limits the defendant to an answer or demurrer and a cross complaint is inadmissible in an action in unlawful detainer. Moreover, former Code Civ. Proc. § 442 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 422.10], which authorized the filing of a cross complaint, applied only to actions, not special proceedings. Therefore, no cross complaint would be authorized in unlawful detainer, a special proceeding (236 Cal. App. 2d 758, 762-763) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.22

§ 236.22 Supporting Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter From Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Prayer for Nonallowable Damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 1174]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO STRIKE IR-
vs.	)	RELEVANT MATTER FROM COMPLAINT
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION TO STRIKE SHOULD BE GRANTED WHEN THE COMPLAINT CONTAINS A PRAYER FOR DAMAGES NOT OCCASIONED BY THE ALLEGED UNLAWFUL DETAINER.

A. Motion to Strike in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. A motion to strike is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1177).

B. Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter. The court may, on motion made under Code of Civil Procedure Section 435, or at any time in its discretion, and on terms it deems proper, strike from any pleading any irrelevant, false, or improper matter inserted in the pleading (Code Civ. Proc. § 436).

C. Limitation on Recovery. The mode and measure of the plaintiff's recovery in an unlawful detainer proceeding are limited to that expressly provided by statute (Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 360, 174 P. 116).

D. Lack of Statutory Authorization for Damages. In the absence of a statutory provision expressly authorizing it, damages cannot be recovered in an unlawful detainer action (Harris v. Bissell (1921) 54 Cal. App. 307, 313, 202 P. 453).

E. Recoverable Damages. A plaintiff in an unlawful detainer proceeding may recover only damages occasioned by the unlawful detainer (Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(b); Ben Lomond Wine Co. v. Sladky (1904) 141 Cal. 619, 622-623, 75 P. 332).

F. Strict Construction. Unlawful detainer statutes, including provisions dealing with damages, are strictly construed (Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 360, 174 P. 116).

G. Damages During Period of Unlawful Detention. Only those damages accruing during the actual period of the unlawful detention are recoverable (Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 360, 174 P. 116).

[Optional] H. Damages Before Unlawful Detention. Damages accruing before the unlawful detention may not be recovered in the unlawful detainer proceeding (Harris v. Bissell (1921) 54 Cal. App. 307, 313, 202 P. 453).

[Optional] I. Future Damages. Future damages for use and occupation after trial are not authorized in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Cavanaugh v. High (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 714, 722-723, 6 Cal. Rptr. 525).

[Optional] J. Damages Before End of Tenancy Terminated by 30-Day Notice. When a 30-day notice is used to terminate a month-to-month tenancy, and a default in the payment of rents to that time is not claimed in a three-day notice to pay rent or quit, damages consisting of rents accrued and unpaid before the end of the tenancy may not be recovered in the unlawful detainer proceeding (Castle Park No. 5 v. Katherine (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 6, 12 , 154 Cal. Rptr. 498).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a motion to strike irrelevant matter from a complaint in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is a prayer for damages which are not recoverable in such a proceeding.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff's complaint includes a request for damages that was not the result of the alleged unlawful detainer.

[c] Related Uses

It has been suggested that a prayer for nonallowable damages may also be challenged by a motion to quash service of the five-day summons on the basis that the action is a nonsummary one which calls for a 30-day summons [see Moskovitz et al., California Eviction Defense Manual, Ch. 11, Service of Summons and Complaint; Motion to Quash Service of Summons, § 11.30 (2d ed. 1993)]. The points and authorities in [1], above, may be adapted to support such a motion.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and a moving party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (supporting motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from complaint).

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.48 may be used to oppose the motion to strike supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Recovery

In Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 174 P. 116 , the plaintiff brought an unlawful detainer action against the defendants for failure to pay rent. A judgment was entered in the plaintiff's favor. The plaintiff had leased the premises to defendant Peters for 99 years. Four years later he assigned the lease to the Peters Investment Co. During that year, neither defendant paid taxes in the amount of $3,132.28. The plaintiff asked and was allowed judgment for the amount of the taxes, as well as for accrued rental.

The court of appeal modified the judgment entered by deducting the amount shown to have been awarded for this failure to pay taxes. The court noted that the summary proceeding provided for obtaining possession of real property is special and must be restricted in its use to the particular purposes expressed in the statutory provisions covering it (37 Cal. App. 358, 360) . The mode and measure of the plaintiff's recovery are therein limited and the law on this subject is construed with strictness (37 Cal. App. 358, 360) . Only those damages accruing during the actual period of the unlawful detention are recoverable. The statute does not authorize the recovery of any money, the right to which accrued before the unlawful detention began, except arrears of rents. The court held that the tax charges could not be recovered in an unlawful detainer suit. They could not be classed as damages, for damages could arise only after the retention of possession had become unlawful (37 Cal. App. 358, 360) .

[b] Lack of Statutory Authorization for Damages

Harris v. Bissell (1921) 54 Cal. App. 307, 202 P. 453 , involved an action brought for unlawful detainer for breach of a covenant of the lease. The plaintiffs were given judgment awarding them damages as well as the amount of rent stipulated in the lease. The defendants had expressly covenanted to use the premises for sheep pasture purposes only but they raised a crop of grain on half of the land leased.

The court of appeal held that it was error to give judgment for both the value of the crop and the agreed rent, and reversed. The court noted that, in the absence of some statutory provision expressly authorizing it, damages cannot be recovered. Damages accruing before the unlawful detention may not be recovered in the proceeding. Code Civ. Proc. § 1174 provides for the recovery of any rent due only in case of default in the payment of rent. In this case, the unlawful detainer was not based on any default in paying rent but on the breach of a covenant limiting the use of the premises. Therefore, rent accruing before the unlawful detainer would have to be recovered in an independent action (54 Cal. App. 307, 313) .

[c] Recoverable Damages

In Ben Lomond Wine Co. v. Sladky (1904) 141 Cal. 619, 75 P. 332 , one of the defendants in an unlawful detainer action was the assignee of the original tenant. He had assigned his interest to another defendant. The action was tried with a jury which rendered a special verdict. Judgment in the defendants' favor was entered but the trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for a new trial. The defendants appealed from that order.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court noted that it was immaterial whether or not the defendant Sladky had been guilty of a violation of covenants of the lease during the time he was in possession of the premises (141 Cal. 619, 622) . An action for unlawful detainer will not lie against the assignee of a lease who has himself or herself assigned and delivered possession to an assignee. Not being guilty of an unlawful detainer, Sladky could not be liable for damages in the summary proceeding provided by statute as the only damages recoverable in such a proceeding are the damages caused by the unlawful detainer. For damages suffered by the plaintiff by reason of any breach of the covenants of the lease by Sladky while he was a tenant under the lease, the plaintiff must resort to an ordinary action and cannot take advantage of the summary proceeding designed solely to enable him or her to speedily recover possession of the premises (141 Cal. 619, 622-623) .

[d] Strict Construction

Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 174 P. 116 , is discussed under [a], above.

[e] Damages During Period of Unlawful Detention

Chase v. Peters (1918) 37 Cal. App. 358, 174 P. 116 , is discussed under [a], above.

[f] Damages Before Unlawful Detention

Harris v. Bissel (1921) 54 Cal. App. 307, 202 P. 453 , is discussed under [b], above.

[g] Future Damages

In Cavanaugh v. High (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 714, 6 Cal. Rptr. 525 , judgment was entered for the plaintiff. The judgment included an award of $66 per month beginning on January 25, 1959, until the defendant surrendered possession to the plaintiff. The plaintiff contended that this was authorized by Civ. Code § 3283 providing that damages may be awarded for detriment certain to result in the future.

The court of appeal modified the judgment to strike this award. The court noted that in cases of this character a defendant may hold possession, under certain conditions, pending appeal and that it may be months or even years before the defendant is required to surrender possession. The value of the use and occupation may be greater or less than at the time of the trial and such future damages are not certain (182 Cal. App. 2d 714, 722-723) .

[h] Damages Before End of Tenancy Terminated by 30-Day Notice

Castle Park No. 5 v. Katherine (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 6 , 154 Cal. Rptr. 498 , was a joint appeal prosecuted by plaintiffs in two consolidated unlawful detainer cases. The issue presented was whether a landlord who terminates a month-to-month tenancy may recover rent before the termination in the unlawful detainer proceeding. The appellate department of the superior court of Los Angeles stated that when a 30-day notice is used to terminate a month-to-month tenancy, and a default in the payment of rents to that time is not claimed in a three-day notice to pay rent or quit, the unlawful detainer proceeding thereon is not founded on a default in the payment of rent within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(b). Thus, damages for the detention of the premises commencing with the end of the tenancy may be recovered, but rents accrued and unpaid before the end of the tenancy may not be recovered in the unlawful detainer proceeding.

The court held that the landlord could not recover such rent and affirmed the two trial courts (91 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 6, 12) . Emphasizing the language in Code Civ. Proc. § 1174(b) that the jury or court is to assess the damages occasioned by plaintiff in an unlawful detainer proceeding "and find the amount of any rent due, if the alleged unlawful detainer be after default in the payment of rent" and the lessor must clearly show that the statute allows rents as an incident to the primary purpose of trying the right to possession, the court reasoned that evidence respecting payment of rent is not relevant to the right to possession in an action based on a 30-day notice terminating a month-to-month tenancy. Thus, allowing recovery of pretermination rents in such a proceeding would enlarge the issues (91 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 6, 11) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages During Period of Unlawful Detention

In Roberts v. Redlich (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 566, 244 P.2d 933 , an action was brought to recover damages caused by the defendant's holding over after termination of his lease. The defendant raised a prior unlawful detainer action as a bar to the award of damages. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the former action was not a bar to the action at hand (111 Cal. App. 2d 566, 570) . The damages awarded accrued after the period of detention of the property by defendant and after the submission of that case and thus were not recoverable in the former action. The damages recoverable in an unlawful detainer are limited, when there are no circumstances of fraud, force, or violence, to those occasioned by the detention itself and which occur during the detention up to the time of trial (111 Cal. App. 2d 566, 569-570) .

[b] Future Damages

Pfitzer v. Candeias (1921) 53 Cal. App. 737, 200 P. 839 , involved an unlawful detainer action in which the plaintiffs were given judgment. The award was for damages to the lands leased and those occasioned by the unlawful withholding of the lands after the default on which the complaint was made. The court of appeal modified the judgment to exclude an award of $4.05 per day for each day after the judgment that the defendant occupied the premises. The court noted that there was no authority authorizing a judgment for future damages of this kind. The trial court would be unable to determine what damages are certain to result in the future since the value of the use and occupation would vary in the months or years pending appeal before the defendant surrendered possession (53 Cal. App. 737, 741) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.23

§ 236.23 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense Not Related to Issue of Possession

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO STRIKE IR-
vs.	)	RELEVANT MATTER IN ANSWER
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ANSWER CONTAINS AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE EXTRINSIC TO THE ISSUE OF POSSESSION.

A. Motion to Strike in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. [See § 236.22]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter. The court may strike irrelevant matter inserted in a pleading (Code Civ. Proc. § 436).

C. Affirmative Defense Unrelated to Possession Is Irrelevant. An affirmative defense is irrelevant and must be excluded in an unlawful detainer action if the defense is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession (Cheney v. Trauzettel (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 158, 159-160, 69 P.2d 832).

[Optional] D. Defense of Title Defect Is Improper. Equitable defenses attacking the plaintiff's title are not permissible in an unlawful detainer action (Cheney v. Trauzettel (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 158, 160, 69 P.2d 832).

[Optional] E. Defense of Retaliatory Eviction for Strike Is Improper. An affirmative defense that plaintiff is unlawfully seeking to evict the defendants in retaliation for going on strike against the plaintiff is improper in an unlawful detainer action (S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 723, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a plaintiff's motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the answer contains an affirmative defense which is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession.

It should be noted that the Supreme Court has, perhaps, further refined the issues involved when a trial court is faced with the question of whether an affirmative defense may be included in a defendant's answer in an unlawful detainer action. In S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 724, 728-729, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 , the Court stated that, in an action involving the affirmative defense of retaliatory eviction, it must engage in a balancing process and determine whether the public policies furthered by protecting the defendants from eviction outweigh the interests in preserving the summary nature of unlawful detainer proceedings. For a further discussion of S.P. Growers, see § 236.62[3][c] and [3][c], below.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the defendant's answer includes an affirmative defense that is not related to the issue of possession of the premises.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and general form of the notice of motion to strike and the order granting such a motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (supporting motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.48 and §§ 236.60 -236.75 may be used to oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer supported by the points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Unrelated to Possession Is Irrelevant

In Cheney v. Trauzettel (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 158, 69 P.2d 832 , a purchaser of property brought an unlawful detainer proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a. The defendants answered and cross complained, setting up the pendency of a quiet-title suit between the parties involving the same property as one of several defenses. The trial court on motion struck out the cross complaint and special defenses and gave judgment for plaintiff. The Supreme Court affirmed on appeal.

The Court held that irrespective of the merits of the defenses raised by the answer, the grounds of attack on the plaintiff's title had no place in the unlawful detainer proceeding. If such issues were permissible, the proceeding would lose its summary character. Although a purchaser under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a must prove his or her acquisition of title by purchase, it is only to this limited extent that the title may be litigated in the proceeding. Matters affecting the validity of a trust deed or other defects in the plaintiff's title are not properly raised in a summary proceeding for possession (9 Cal. 2d 158, 159-160) .

[b] Defense of Title Defect Is Improper

The background of Cheney v. Trauzettel (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 158, 69 P.2d 832 , is discussed under [a], above. The Supreme Court noted that although a purchaser at a trustee's sale who proceeds under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a must prove his or her acquisition of title by purchase at the sale, it is only to this limited extent that the title may be litigated in such a proceeding. Matters affecting the validity of the trust deed or primary obligation itself or other basic defects in the plaintiff's title are not properly raised in a summary proceeding for possession (9 Cal. 2d 158, 160) .

[c] Defense of Retaliatory Eviction for Strike Is Improper

In S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 , defendants were agricultural workers under plaintiff, a farm labor contractor, who provided housing for defendants. Defendants went on strike and shortly thereafter filed suit against plaintiff in a federal district court charging violation of the federal Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act [7 U.S.C. §§ 2041-2055]. Plaintiff then immediately served defendants with eviction notices and, when defendants failed to leave the premises, filed unlawful detainer actions. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion in the subsequent unlawful detainer action to exclude evidence regarding two affirmative defenses, one of which was that plaintiff was unlawfully seeking to evict them in retaliation for their strike. Judgment was entered for plaintiff and defendants appealed.

Although the Supreme Court reversed, and defendants had in their petition for hearing before the Court and in oral argument abandoned this affirmative defense, the Court considered this defense and disposed of it summarily. The Court stated that in the circumstances shown, it was no defense to the unlawful detainer action that plaintiff had sought possession of the premises because defendants were on strike. It commented that while defendants have a right to strike, plaintiff may hire replacements and, as a corollary, may reserve company housing for those who are working (17 Cal.

3d 719, 723) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.24

§ 236.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Compel Court to Vacate Order Continuing Trial of Unlawful Detainer Action

[1] FORM

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DIVISION
[DIVISION _____]
[OR]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE [CITY AND] COUNTY OF _____,	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]
[OR]	)	Date: _____
THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE _____ [JUDICIAL OR MUNICIPAL COURT] DISTRICT,	)	Time: _____
Respondent[,]	)	Location: _____
[_____ (name), Real Party in Interest].	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE IS PROPER TO REVIEW AN ORDER CONTINUING AN UNLAWFUL DETAINER PROCEEDING.

A. Review of Order Continuing Unlawful Detainer Proceeding. A writ of mandate is proper to test the validity of an order which continues an unlawful detainer proceeding, and a writ will be issued commanding the court to vacate the order and proceed with the trial of the action when the order constituted an abuse of discretion (Kartheiser v. Superior Court (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 617, 623, 345 P.2d 135).

B. Priority of Unlawful Detainer Action. In an unlawful detainer proceeding, the court in which the action is pending is required to give the action precedence over all other civil actions, except actions to which special precedence is given by law, in setting same for hearing or trial and in hearing the same, to the end that all such actions be quickly heard and determined (Code Civ. Proc. § 1179a).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a petition for a writ of mandate on appeal from a trial court decision when the trial court has continued an unlawful detainer action.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that an order continuing the unlawful detainer proceeding has been obtained and one of the parties is seeking to vacate that order and proceed with the trial.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition (supporting petition for writ of mandate to correct abuse of discretion by inferior court).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Order Continuing Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

In Kartheiser v. Superior Court (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 617, 345 P.2d 135 , the petitioner-plaintiff sought a writ of mandate requiring the respondent court to vacate its order continuing the trial of an unlawful detainer action for 90 days. The court of appeal concluded that the action of the trial court was an abuse of its discretion and ordered that a peremptory writ issue directing that court to vacate its order of continuance and to proceed with the trial of the unlawful detainer action. The trial court had granted the continuance because of the pendency of an appeal in a declaratory relief action which, when final would be res judicata between the parties as to the validity of the plaintiff's purchase of the premises at a trustee's sale. However, another issue was not common to the two cases--the effect of a provision in the trust deed that the recital in the deed of any matters would be conclusive proof of the truthfulness of those matters. This issue remained open for the trial of the unlawful detainer action.

The court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1179a grants precedence to unlawful detainer actions. The purpose for the continuance was to await the outcome of the appeal to decide those issues common to both actions, but there was no certainty that the appeal would be decided within the time allowed or that such decision would not then be appealed to the Supreme Court. In any event, the petitioner would have been deprived of his right to early trial for an inordinate period in the face of Code Civ. Proc. § 1179a. The court concluded that it would not be sound discretion on its part to deny the writ and that the action of the trial court was an abuse of its discretion (174 Cal. App. 2d 617, 623) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Order Continuing Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

Lori, Ltd., Inc. v. Superior Court (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 442, 168 P.2d 982 , involved an application for a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to give precedence to an unlawful detainer action. The court of appeal granted the writ. The trial judge had signified his intention to continue the trial abiding final judgment in a reformation suit between the parties. Counsel for the petitioners declared at the hearing on the writ, his intention to appeal from the judgment rendered in the reformation suit. At least one issue presented by the plaintiffs' complaint for unlawful detainer was not tried in that case, a cause of action predicated on waste and the maintenance of a nuisance. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1179a, proceedings brought to recover possession of real property are entitled to a preference in the matter of setting the same for hearing or trial, and in hearing the same, to the end that all such actions be quickly heard and determined. Thus, the court ordered that the peremptory writ issue directing the respondent judge to place the unlawful detainer action on his trial calendar and assign it for trial on May 15, or as soon thereafter as a trial department was available (74 Cal. App. 2d 442, 443) .

148 of 180 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.25

§ 236.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Compel Court to Hear or Sustain Defense in Unlawful Detainer Proceeding

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.24[1].]

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE IS PROPER TO COMPEL A TRIAL COURT TO PERMIT THE DEFENDANT IN AN UNLAWFUL DETAINER CASE TO RAISE A CRUCIAL DEFENSE.

[EITHER]

Review of Refusal to Hear Defense. A writ of mandate is proper to compel a court to permit a defendant in an unlawful detainer proceeding to raise a crucial defense when the defendant would otherwise be deprived of his or her only opportunity to litigate the action fully on its merits (Schweiger v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 507, 517-518, 90 Cal. Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97).

[OR]

Review of Refusal to Sustain Defense. A writ of mandate is proper to compel a court to sustain an affirmative defense based on the landlord's violation of local rent control legislation (see Gross v. Superior Court (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 276, 217 Cal. Rptr. 284).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a petition for a writ of mandate when a trial court has refused to allow a crucial defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the trial court has ruled against the defendant by refusing to allow him or her to raise a particular defense.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition (supporting petition for writ of mandate to correct abuse of discretion by inferior court).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Review of Refusal to Hear Defense

In Schweiger v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 507, 90 Cal. Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97 , the petitioner sought a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to hear his defense based on the retaliatory motivation of his landlord in bringing an unlawful detainer action. The Supreme Court ordered that a peremptory writ of mandate issue. The Court determined that a defense of retaliatory eviction was valid and that the petitioner was entitled to relief by way of an extraordinary writ. The Court held that (1) the superior court committed reversible error in refusing to recognize the petitioner's defense, (2) that the petitioner had no adequate remedy by way of appeal to correct the error since the court of appeal refused to transfer the case despite certification by the superior court, and (3) that the effect was to deny petitioner a full hearing on the merits of his cause thus constituting an abuse of discretion (3 Cal. 3d 507, 517-518) .

The Schweiger decision established the common-law defense of retaliatory eviction. The Court took note of former Civ. Code § 1942.5, which had been recently enacted, but did not construe the statute because it became effective after the case was filed (see 3 Cal. 3d 507, 516 n.4). Former Civ. Code § 1942.5 was repealed and the present Civ. Code § 1942.5 was enacted in 1979 (Stats. 1979, Ch. 652). Civ. Code § 1942.5(h) expressly states that the remedies provided by Civ. Code § 1942.5 shall be in addition to any other remedies provided by statutory or decisional law. Hence, both the common-law doctrine of retaliatory eviction and the statutory doctrine coexist [see Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 244, 250, 251, 178 Cal. Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582 ; Western Land Office, Inc. v. Cervantes (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 724, 734-740, 220 Cal. Rptr. 784] .

[b] Review of Refusal to Sustain Defense

The facts and procedural background of Gross v. Superior Court (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 217 Cal. Rptr. 284 , are discussed in § 236.74[4][a]. In Gross both the municipal and superior courts had ruled in favor of plaintiff on the ground that the municipal rent control legislation asserted as a defense by defendants had been preempted by state law (171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 268) . Defendants filed a petition for writ of mandate. The court of appeal issued the writ of mandate directing the trial court not only to vacate its judgment but to enter judgment in favor of defendants (171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 276) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Review of Refusal to Hear Defense

Carter v. Superior Court (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 350, 298 P.2d 598 (disapproved on other grounds by Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 637, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063), involved an action to recover damages for an alleged assault and battery. Petitioner-defendant had attempted to plead the defense that plaintiff had filed a claim with the Industrial Accident Commission and thereby had deprived the superior court of jurisdiction. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate requiring the trail court to reinstate the petitioner's defense. The court pointed out that the facts pleaded would constitute the defense of an election of remedies or of res judicata if the plaintiff could not prove facts constituting a waiver or estoppel. The excluded plea, if proven, would have compelled a judgment for the petitioner-defendant and therefore the superior court abused its discretion in striking the defense (142 Cal. App. 2d 350, 358-360) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.26

§ 236.26 Supporting Application for Relief From Forfeiture [Code Civ. Proc. § 1179]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF APPLICATION FOR RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE
_____ [name(s)], Respondent(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE APPLICATION FOR RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE A FORFEITURE WOULD WORK A HARDSHIP ON THE PETITIONER.

A. Application for Relief From Forfeiture. The court may relieve a tenant against a forfeiture of a lease, and restore the tenant to his/her former estate, in case of hardship (Code Civ. Proc. § 1179).

[Optional] B. Willful Breach Does Not Preclude Relief. The fact that the court at trial finds the breach of covenant in the lease to have been willful does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to hear the application for relief under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1179 (Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 71, 202 P.2d 378).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support an application for relief from forfeiture of a lease when the forfeiture would work a "hardship" on the petitioner. This application is proper only after a forfeiture has been declared by a trial court's judgment in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The application may be made by a tenant or subtenant, or a mortgagee of the term, or any person interested in the continuance of the term [Code Civ. Proc. § 1179].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that his or her client has undergone a particular hardship.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 236.49 may be used to oppose the application supported by the memorandum of points and authorities in [1], above.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Willful Breach Does Not Preclude Relief

In Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 202 P.2d 378 , defendant appealed from an adverse judgment in an unlawful detainer proceeding and an order dismissing a petition for relief from forfeiture of the lease. The trial court had awarded judgment for restitution of the premises, attorney's fees, and declaring a forfeiture of the lease on the grounds that defendant had violated the lease's terms by operating a real estate business on the leased premises.

The court of appeal upheld the judgment but reversed the order dismissing the petition. It held that the trial court had erred in refusing to consider the petition on the grounds that it lacked jurisdiction because the breach had been willful. The appellate court distinguished Code Civ. Proc. § 1179 from Civ. Code § 3275 in holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1179 is special in nature, applying only to unlawful detainer actions, and that Code Civ. Proc. § 1179 requires that even a willful breach be "balanced" in the court's consideration of the relative hardships involved in a lease's forfeiture (90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 71) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Willful Breach Does Not Preclude Relief

Thrifty Oil Co. v. Batarse (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 220 Cal. Rptr. 285 , involved a gasoline station that had been leased to an oil company. The oil company subleased the station to one of the defendants. The sublease prohibited the sublessee from assigning the sublease or subletting the premises without the sublessor's prior written consent but did not prohibit the sublessor from unreasonably withholding consent. The sublease further provided that the sublessee's failure to observe and perform any provision of the sublease would be deemed a default and breach of the sublease. Some 28 months later, the sublessor assigned its leasehold estate to plaintiff oil company, which accepted the assignment and agreed to be bound by the obligations and duties of the sublease. The sublessee was given notice of the assignment. Some 20 months later, the sublessee, without notifying the assignee or seeking its consent, sublet his interest in the station to his codefendants. The assignee then served a written notice to quit the premises on the sublessee and the sublessee's sublessees and, on their failure to vacate the premises, sued them for unlawful detainer. Judgment was for plaintiff. The original sublease was declared forfeited and defendants' petition to be relieved of the forfeiture was denied. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment with regard to the unlawful detainer on the ground that the sublessee, by subletting without having sought plaintiff's consent or notifying plaintiff of the subletting, had breached the covenant against subletting, but remanded the case for further consideration of the petition to be relieved of the forfeiture (174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 775-776, 778) . The court said the failure of a lessee to gain consent from a lessor relative to an assignment when required to do so by the lease will not be an absolute bar to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 1179, but, rather, is one of many important factors to consider in a weighing process to determine whether it would be manifestly unjust to grant relief (174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 777) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.27

§ 236.27 Supporting Contention That Unlawful Detainer Complaint Filed Prematurely--Time to Pay Rent Under Three-Day Notice Was Extended by Holiday

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief .]

THE UNLAWFUL DETAINER COMPLAINT WAS FILED PREMATURELY BECAUSE THE TIME TO PAY RENT IN THE THREE-DAY NOTICE WAS EXTENDED BY A LEGAL HOLIDAY AND THE COMPLAINT WAS FILED BEFORE THE TIME EXPIRED.

A. Three-Day Notice Required. A tenant is guilty of unlawful detainer when he/she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent and three days notice requiring the payment of rent has been served on him/her (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)).

B. Three Days Extended By Legal Holiday. When the last day of a three-day notice to pay rent falls on a legal holiday, the time to pay rent is extended through the first full day thereafter that is not a legal holiday (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 12, 12a; Lamanna v. Vognar (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 4, 7-8 , 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities support a party's contention that an unlawful detainer complaint was filed prematurely because the time to pay rent is extended when the last day of the three-day notice to pay rent falls on a legal holiday.

These points and authorities may be combined with a memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the argument that an unlawful detainer complaint was filed prematurely because the time to pay rent was extended by a legal holiday. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that a legal holiday should have extended the time to respond to the three-day notice to pay rent.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three Days Extended By Legal Holiday

In Lamanna v. Vognar (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 4 , 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 , the tenant failed to pay rent and the landlord served a three-day notice on May 20, 1992, a Wednesday. The third day to pay rent was thus Saturday, May 23. Monday, May 25 was Memorial Day, a legal holiday. The unlawful detainer complaint was filed on Tuesday, May 26. The trial court entered a judgment for the landlord.

The Superior Court Appellate Department reversed. It held that a cause of action for unlawful detainer does not arise until the three days required for notice have expired without the tenant paying the rent (17 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 4, 6) . Code Civ. Proc. § 12 provides that the time in which any act provided by law is to be done is computed by excluding the first day and including the last, unless the last is a holiday and then it is excluded. Code Civ. Proc. § 12a provides that legal holidays are Saturday, Sunday, and those provided in the Government Code, which includes Memorial Day. The Appellate Department held that the tenant's right to pay overdue rent was a right provided by law within the meaning of § 12 (17 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 4, 7) . The right may not be waived and is a condition precedent to the filing of an unlawful detainer complaint. The court found that the third day after service of the notice was a Saturday, which was therefore excluded as a holiday, as was the next day Sunday. Monday, Memorial Day, was also a legal holiday. Therefore, the three-day notice expired at the end of the next day that was not a holiday, Tuesday. The complaint filed on that Tuesday was thus premature because the tenant had the right to pay rent on that day. The court reversed the judgment (17 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 4, 7-8) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART A. Supporting Motions, Demurres, and Petitions

23-236 California Points & Authorities §§ 236.28-236.39

[Reserved]

§§ 236.28[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.40

§ 236.40 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required When Periodic Tenancy Terminated by Notice Under Civil Code Section 1946 [Civ. Code § 791]

[1] FORM

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO DEMURRER TO COM-
COUNTY OF _____	)	PLAINT
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE A THREE-DAY NOTICE IS NOT REQUIRED WHEN A PERIODIC TENANCY HAS BEEN TERMINATED BY 30 DAYS' NOTICE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1946.

A. Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Termination of Periodic Tenancy. When an unlawful detainer action is based on a tenant's holding over after the termination of his/her periodic tenancy by 30 days' notice under Civil Code Section 1946, a three-day notice to quit is not necessary (Civ. Code § 791).

B. Notice Terminating Periodic Tenancy. A periodic tenancy may be terminated if one of the parties gives written notice to the other of his/her intention to terminate the tenancy at least as long before the expiration of the tenancy as the term of the hiring itself, but not exceeding 30 days (Civ. Code § 1946).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it fails to allege service of a three-day notice to quit, but when the case involves a holding over after termination of a periodic tenancy by 30 days' notice under Civ. Code § 1946.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff/landlord, served the requisite 30 days' notice on the holdover tenant, even though he or she did not serve a three-day notice to quit.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for the failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to allege service of a three-day notice and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.11.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Termination of Periodic Tenancy

In Hennessy v. Gleason (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 616, 184 P.2d 913 , the unsuccessful defendant in an unlawful detainer action sought a writ of prohibition to restrain a sheriff from executing a writ of possession and the superior court from proceeding further in the matter. The court of appeal denied the petition. One of the points raised by the petitioner-defendant was that no notice was given to him other than a 30-day notice to vacate and terminating the month-to-month tenancy which had previously existed. The court noted that Civ. Code § 791 provides that no three-day notice is necessary when the hiring of real property is for a term not specified by the parties, and when this hiring was terminated under and in accordance with the provisions of Civ. Code § 1946. The latter section provides that unless the rental agreement itself provides for a shorter notice period, a month-to-month tenancy may be terminated by a month's notice. Thereafter, an unlawful detainer action may be maintained under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1) without the necessity of first serving an additional three-day notice (81 Cal. App. 2d 616, 620) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.41

§ 236.41 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required When Tenant Fails to Deliver Possession After a Notice of Termination or Written Offer of Surrender [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE A THREE-DAY NOTICE IS NOT REQUIRED WHEN THE TENANT HAS GIVEN WRITTEN NOTICE OF HIS/HER INTENT TO TERMINATE OR WHEN THE TENANT HAS MADE A WRITTEN OFFER TO SURRENDER WHICH HAS BEEN ACCEPTED IN WRITING BY THE LANDLORD.

A. Three-Day Notice Unnecessary When Tenant Terminates or Surrenders Possession. When an unlawful detainer action is commenced following a tenant's giving written notice, as provided in Civil Code Section 1946, of his/her intention to terminate the hiring of the property, or a tenant's making a written offer to surrender which is accepted in writing by the landlord, and the tenant's failure to deliver up possession at the time specified in the notice, a three-day notice to quit is not necessary (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5)).

B. Notice Terminating Periodic Tenancy. [See § 236.40]1], Paragraph B.]

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it fails to allege service of a three-day notice to quit, but when the case falls within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(5). This would include the situations when a tenant gives written notice as provided in Civ. Code § 1946 of his or her intention to terminate the hiring of the real property, or makes a written offer to surrender which is accepted in writing by the landlord, but then fails to deliver up possession at the time specified in the written notice without the landlord's permission.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the tenant has given written notice to the landlord of his or her intent to terminate the lease.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to allege service of the three-day notice and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.11.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.42

§ 236.42 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required After Expiration of Fixed-Term Lease [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE A THREE-DAY NOTICE IS NOT REQUIRED AFTER THE EXPIRATION OF A FIXED-TERM LEASE.

Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Expiration of Fixed Term. When an unlawful detainer action is based on a tenant's holding over after the expiration of a term fixed by a lease, a three-day notice to quit is not necessary (Ryland v. Appelbaum (1924) 70 Cal. App. 268, 270, 233 P. 356).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it fails to allege service of a three-day notice to quit, but when the case involves a holding over after termination of a fixed-term lease that does not require a three-day notice to quit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the tenant has held over after his or her fixed-term lease has expired.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for the failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to allege service of the three-day notice and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.11.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Expiration of Fixed Term

Ryland v. Appelbaum (1924) 70 Cal. App. 268, 233 P. 356 , was an unlawful detainer action in which the plaintiffs were given judgment for restitution of the premises and damages. The plaintiffs leased property to the defendants for a term of three years under a written lease which provided for a surrender of the premises at the term's expiration. Four months before the lease was to expire the plaintiffs served the defendants with written notice that they would be required to vacate the premises at the end of the term, and that the lease would not be renewed. The defendants continued in possession after that date.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the defendants' contention that a three-day notice had to be served before the suit could be properly commenced was wholly without merit (70 Cal. App. 268, 270) . It is the duty of a tenant, as soon as his or her tenancy expires by its own limitations, to surrender the possession of the premises. No notice of termination is necessary. If the tenant continues in possession without the landlord's permission, he or she is guilty of unlawful detainer and an action may be commenced against him or her at once under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1) without the service of any notice (70 Cal. App. 268, 270) .

It should be noted that if a tenant holds over after the expiration of his or her term and the landlord accepts monthly rental payments in the amount of the payments that the tenant had been making under the lease, the tenant becomes a month-to-month tenant [Renner v. Huntington-Hawthorne Oil & Gas Co. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 93, 102, 244 P.2d 895 ; see Civ. Code § 1945].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Three-Day Notice Unnecessary on Expiration of Fixed Term

In Lee Chuck v. Quan Wo Chong & Co. (1891) 91 Cal. 593, 28 P. 45 , the defendant appealed from an order denying his motion for a new trial. On appeal the Supreme Court reversed on several grounds. However, the Court stated that in an action based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1), when the defendant holds over as a tenant at sufferance, no three-day notice is required (91 Cal. 593, 597) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.43

§ 236.43 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Three-Day Notice Not Required to Remove Former Servant, Employee, Agent, or Licensee [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE A THREE-DAY NOTICE IS NOT REQUIRED WHEN A _____ [SERVANT or EMPLOYEE or AGENT or LICENSEE] HOLDS OVER AFTER THE RELATION OF _____ [MASTER AND SERVANT or EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE or PRINCIPAL AND AGENT or LICENSOR AND LICENSEE] HAS BEEN LAWFULLY TERMINATED.

Three-Day Notice Unnecessary to Remove Former Servant, Employee, Agent, or Licensee. When an unlawful detainer action involves removing a person who became the occupant of the premises as a servant, employee, agent, or licensee and the relation of master and servant, employer and employee, principal and agent, or licensor and licensee has been lawfully terminated, a three-day notice to quit is not necessary (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1)].

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action, in that it fails to allege service of a three-day notice to quit, but when the case involves a holding over by a servant, employee, agent, or licensee after the relationship of master and servant, employer and employee, principal and agent, or licensor and licensee has been lawfully terminated.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that a servant, employee, agent, or licensee has held over.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on a failure to allege service of the three-day notice and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.11.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.44

§ 236.44 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Notice Not Required to Be in Alternative [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161(3), (4), 1161a]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE THE DEMAND IN THE THREE-DAY NOTICE IS NOT REQUIRED TO BE IN THE ALTERNATIVE.

[EITHER]

A. Notice to Quit for Noncurable Breach of Covenant Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(3). When an unlawful detainer action is based on a breach of a condition or covenant when the breach cannot be cured, the three-day notice need not demand performance of the violated condition or covenant of the lease as an alternative to the demand to quit the premises (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(3)).

[OR]

A. Notice to Quit Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161(4). When an unlawful detainer action is based on _____ [a breach of a condition or covenant against (assigning or subletting or committing waste) or permitting the maintenance or commission of a nuisance or using the premises for an unlawful purpose], the three-day notice is sufficient if it makes a demand to quit the premises (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(4)).

[OR]

A. Notice to Quit Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a. When an unlawful detainer action is based on a holding over after sale of the property, the three-day notice is sufficient if it makes a demand to quit the premises (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a).

[Optional] B. Acts Constituting Nuisance. Anything that is injurious to health, including, but not limited to, the illegal sale of controlled substances, or is indecent, or offensive to the senses, or is an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, is a nuisance (Civ. Code § 3479).

[Optional] C. Violation of Zoning Ordinance Is an Unlawful Purpose. The use of demised premises in violation of a zoning ordinance is an unlawful purpose (Haig v. Hogan (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 876, 877, 187 P.2d 426).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it shows on its face that the demand in the three-day notice was not in the alternative but when the case involves a situation where a demand in the alternative is not required.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord has instituted the unlawful detainer proceeding because of the tenant's breach of an incurable condition.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a motion for summary judgment based on an affirmative defense which alleges that the three-day notice is insufficient because the demand for possession was not in the alternative but when the case involves a situation where a demand in the alternative is not required.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for the failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, Ch. 375, *Motions to Strike, and*Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to complaint for the failure to state a cause of action (three-day notice not in the alternative) supported by the points and authorities in § 236.14.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Zoning Ordinance Is an Unlawful Purpose

Haig v. Hogan (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 876, 187 P.2d 426 , was an unlawful detainer action tried before the court without a jury in which there was a judgment in the plaintiff's favor. The plaintiff gave a three-day notice to vacate the property to the defendant after the plaintiff purchased the property. The property was located in a zone which permitted use for single-family residences only. The defendant, in violation of the zoning ordinance, operated the premises as a hotel, and rooming and boarding house.

The court of appeal affirmed. One question on appeal was whether the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action without complying with the federal rent regulations then in effect. The court held that it was unnecessary to comply with those provisions of the regulations if the party in possession was using the housing accommodations for an illegal purpose. The defendant's violation of the zoning ordinance was such an unlawful purpose (82 Cal. App. 2d 876, 877) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.45

§ 236.45 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Premises Described With Reasonable Certainty

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE THE PREMISES WERE DESCRIBED WITH REASONABLE CERTAINTY.

[EITHER]

Description by Name Is Reasonably Certain. Real estate is described with reasonable certainty if the property is known by some particular name and is described by that name (Hildreth v. White (1885) 66 Cal. 549, 550-551, 6 P. 454).

[OR]

Description Under Which Possession Was Taken Is Sufficient. If a defendant takes possession of property under a certain description, that description is sufficient to inform him/her what property the plaintiff demands (Olcovich v. Deremberg (1915) 27 Cal. App. 194, 196, 149 P. 375).

[OR]

Reasonable Certainty Despite Error. The premises are described with reasonable certainty despite an error in the description if it was easily intelligible to the defendant what premises were demanded and if the defendant was not misled by its inexactness (King v. Connolly (1872) 44 Cal. 236, 238-239) .

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it fails to describe the premises with reasonable certainty, but when the premises were in fact described with a reasonable certainty.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord seeks to terminate the lease and he or she in fact describes the premises in a clear manner by, for example, providing the tenant with the address of the premises.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer for the failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[D] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to describe the premises with reasonable certainty and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.17.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Description by Name Is Reasonably Certain

Hildreth v. White (1885) 66 Cal. 549, 6 P. 454 , was an action for ejectment in which judgment was entered for the plaintiffs. The defendants contended that the complaint was defective as to the property's description. The complaint described the property as real estate in Mendocino County, California, on the southwestern portion of the Round Valley Indian Reservation, the lands on which the house and corral known as "McKay's winter quarters" was situated.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that this description was adequate. The Court noted that it could not say that an officer, having a writ of restitution, could not find the property and deliver possession. A piece of real property known by some name may be sufficiently described by the use of the name. A deed containing the words, for example, "[t]he land on which the Occidental Hotel, in San Francisco, is situated" would contain a sufficient description (66 Cal. 549, 550-551) .

[b] Description Under Which Possession Was Taken Is Sufficient

Olcovich v. Deremberg (1915) 27 Cal. App. 194, 149 P. 375 , involved an action for unlawful detainer in which judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. The main point on which the defendant relied for a reversal was that the lease sued on was void by reason of an impossible description of the premises and that until it was reformed by an independent equitable action the summary proceeding of unlawful detainer could not be maintained.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that if the description afforded the defendant sufficient information to find his way in, it ought to be sufficient to enable him to find his way out. In other words, since the description was sufficient to enable the defendant to take possession of the property and to continue possession and pay rent during six months, it ought to be sufficient to enable him to know what property the plaintiff demanded that he surrender (27 Cal. App. 194, 196) .

[c] Reasonable Certainty Despite Error

In King v. Connolly (1872) 44 Cal. 236 , an unlawful detainer action, the trial court entered judgment for the defendant. The notice to quit described the property as part of Mission Block, No. 24 of the City and County of San Francisco, beginning at the junction of Market and Guerrero Streets and running southwesterly along Market Street 130 feet, then east to Guerrero Street, and then north along the westerly line of Guerrero, 130 feet, more or less. The trial court excluded the notice on the ground that it did not describe the premises demised to the defendant. The premises were correctly described as included in Mission Block, No. 24, and as lying on Guerrero and Market Streets. However, the exact distances should have read 140 feet.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for a new trial. The Court held that the only question was whether or not the notice effected the purpose for which it was intended or whether the defendant was misled by its inexactness. The Court noted that although the length of the lot was erroneously given, the notice nevertheless indicated with reasonable certainty, and to a certainty easily intelligible to the defendant, that the premises involved in the action were the premises demanded of him (44 Cal. 236, 238-239) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.46

§ 236.46 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Complaint Was Filed More Than Three Days After Service of Three-Day Notice

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED, BECAUSE _____ [THE TIME TO RESPOND WAS NOT EXTENDED BY MAIL SERVICE and/or SERVICE IS EFFECTIVE WHEN MAILED, NOT RECEIVED], AND THUS THE COMPLAINT WAS FILED MORE THAN THREE DAYS AFTER SERVICE OF THE THREE-DAY NOTICE.

[EITHER]

A. Time to Comply Is Not Extended When Three-Day Notice Is Posted and Mailed. Code of Civil Procedure Section 1013(a), which extends the time to respond when a notice is served by mail, does not apply to three-day notices in unlawful detainer proceedings (Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15, 17-19 , 277 Cal. Rptr. 316).

[AND/OR]

B. Service Is Effective When Posted and Mailed. Service of a three-day notice is effective when it is posted and mailed, not when the tenant actually receives notice (Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15, 19-20 , 277 Cal. Rptr. 316).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because it was prematurely filed because of the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a), which extends the time for responding to service for five days when service is made by mail. The extension provided for under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) applies in the absence of a specific exception provided for under the statute or by another statute or rule of court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the plaintiff/landlord is seeking to regain possession of his or her premises in accordance with the statutory unlawful detainer procedure.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the demurrer to complaint for failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to Comply Is Not Extended When Three-Day Notice Is Posted and Mailed

In Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15 , 277 Cal. Rptr. 316 , the tenants failed to pay rent, and the landlord posted a three-day notice to pay rent or quit and mailed a copy to the tenants on November 13, 1989. The landlord filed an unlawful detainer action on November 17, 1989. The tenants contended that the action was filed prematurely because the time to comply with the three-day notice was extended by Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a), which provides that the time to respond to a notice or other paper served by mail is extended by five days. The tenants also contended that service of the three-day notice was not effective until the notice was received. The trial court dismissed the unlawful detainer action.

The Superior Court Appellate Department reversed. It found that Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) applies only to motions in pending actions and does not apply to three-day notices. The court held that extending time to respond would be contrary to the purpose of the unlawful detainer law, which is to create a summary procedure to allow landlords to remove defaulting tenants in an expedited manner (226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15, 17-19) .

[b] Service Is Effective When Posted and Mailed

The facts and procedural background of Walters v. Meyers (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15 , 277 Cal. Rptr. 316 , are discussed under [a], above. The Superior Court Appellate Department held that a three-day notice is effective when it is served and posted, not when it is actually received by the tenant. The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1162 provides for various methods of substituted service for a three-day notice, and held that these would be rendered meaningless by an interpretation that service was effected only when actually received. Additionally, the court found that since mailing and posting may be employed only when the tenant is absent, it could not have been the Legislature's intent to require actual receipt to be effective (226 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 15, 19-20) .

Counsel should note that Davidson v. Quinn (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9 , 188 Cal. Rptr. 421 , holds that a three-day notice is not effective until it is actually received on due process grounds (138 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9, 14) . However, the Walters court found the reasoning in Davidson to be unpersuasive (226 Cal. App. 3d. Supp. 15, 19) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.46A

§ 236.46A Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)Opposing Demurrer to Complaint []--Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Not Insufficient []

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.40[1]]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD NOT BE SUSTAINED BECAUSE A THREE-DAY NOTICE DEMANDING PAYMENT OF RENTS DUE WITHIN ONE YEAR IS NOT INVALIDATED WHEN THE NOTICE ALSO DEMANDS RENT DUE MORE THAN A YEAR BEFORE THE NOTICE.

Demand of Rent Due for More than One Year Does Not Invalidate Notice. A three-day notice that demands payment of rents due within one year is not invalidated when the notice also demands rent due more than a year before the notice (Levitz Furniture Co. v. Wingtip Communications, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1041, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 656).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a demurrer to a complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the demurrer alleges that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it shows on its face that the three-day notice demands rent due more than a year before the notice, when the three-day notice not only demands rent due more than a year before the notice but also demands rent due within one year.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the plaintiff/landlord demanded rent due within a year of the three-day notice.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of a demurrer to a complaint for the failure to state a cause of action and a plaintiff's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (opposing general demurrer to complaint based on failure to state a cause of action).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used to oppose a demurrer to a complaint based on a demand in excess of one year's rent and supported by the points and authorities in § 236.13.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand of Rent Due for More than One Year Does Not Invalidate Notice

In Levitz Furniture Co. v. Wingtip Communications, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 656 , a commercial lessor served a three-day notice on July 30, 1999, which stated that rent was due in the "reasonably estimated sum of $99,025.40." That sum was derived from a single payment of $6,646 due in December 1997 and 12 payments of $7,310, due each month from August 1998 through July 1999. When the lessee neither paid the rent nor quit the premises, the lessor sued for unlawful detainer, seeking restoration of the premises and rent of $99,025.40. The trial court granted the lessee's motion for judgment on the pleadings without leave to amend, on the ground the inclusion of the December 1997 rent invalidated the three-day notice and precluded the wrongful detainer action.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that a three-day notice that includes a demand for payment of rents due within one year is not automatically invalidated because the notice also demands rent due more than a year before the notice (86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1041) . The court stated that its conclusion was not based on the fact that a three-day notice for a commercial lease may estimate the amount of rent due (86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1040-1041) . Rather, the court concluded that invalidation of an otherwise proper notice because it includes a demand for rent due for more than a year is not required by the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2), the policy underlying that statute, or the case law (86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1041) . The court stated that Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635 (discussed in § 236.13[3][f]) does not establish the rule that the mere inclusion of rent due more than a year before a three-day notice automatically invalidates the notice, because that point was conceded by the lessor (86 Cal. App. 4th 1035, 1040) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.47

§ 236.47 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Cross Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Defendant Has Vacated and Possession Is Not in Issue [Civ. Code § 1952.3(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO STRIKE
vs.	)	CROSS COMPLAINT
_____ [name (s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE THE CROSS COMPLAINT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAS VACATED THE PREMISES AND POSSESSION IS NOT IN ISSUE.

Cross Complaint Is Proper When Possession Is No Longer Issue Because Tenant Surrendered Possession. A cross complaint is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding when, prior to the joining of issues of fact, the tenant voluntarily surrenders possession of the premises and the issue of possession is removed from the case (Civ. Code § 1952.3(a); Medford v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 189 Cal. Rptr. 227 (decided under statute); Heller v. Melliday (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 689, 696, 141 P.2d 447 (decided under common law)).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike a cross complaint in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the defendant has surrendered possession of the premises and possession is not an issue in the proceeding [see Civ. Code § 1952.3(a)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the defendant has already surrendered possession of the property.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike whole or part of complaint).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike a cross complaint supported by the points and authorities in § 236.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Proper When Possession Is No Longer Issue Because Tenant Surrendered Possession

In Medford v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 189 Cal. Rptr. 227 , plaintiff instituted an unlawful detainer proceeding, alleging that defendant owed back rent on her apartment. Defendant moved out of the apartment shortly before the trial. The trial court required defendant to deposit with it the sum alleged to be owed as back rent as a condition for her filing a cross complaint. Defendant did so, and later moved to have the money returned to her. The trial court denied the motion.

The court of appeal granted a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to vacate its orders and return defendant's money (140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 242) . The court said that in an unlawful detainer proceeding, a cross complaint by the tenant is not allowed so long as he or she remains in possession of the premises. Here, once the tenant moved out, she became eligible to file a cross complaint under Civ. Code § 1952.3. The court observed that, although leave of court might be required before filing a cross complaint in other situations under Code Civ. Proc. § 428.50, Civ. Code § 1952.3 could be interpreted to mean that a defendant may file a cross complaint as a matter of right. However, it rendered no opinion on that issue, since it had not been raised (140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239) . The court also held that the trial court abused its discretion in requiring defendant to make the deposit, because requiring a tenant to deposit into court alleged back rent or accrued damages has the same effect as a prejudgment attachment, which is prohibited by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c) (140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239-240) .

In Heller v. Melliday (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 689, 141 P.2d 447 , plaintiff instituted an unlawful detainer proceeding against defendant to recover possession of and to collect unpaid rent for an apartment house leased to defendant. Defendant filed a cross complaint alleging that plaintiff had procured the lease through false representations. The jury verdict in favor of defendant was reduced with her consent. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that it was not error for the trial court to allow a cross complaint for damages (60 Cal. App. 2d 689) . Although it is the general rule that a cross complaint is not permissible in an action in unlawful detainer, the purpose of the rule is to prevent tenants who have violated the covenants of their leases from frustrating the summary remedy provided by statute for the restitution of the premises. However, that rule is not absolute, and a cross complaint may be maintained when it appears that before the joining of the issues of fact the tenant has voluntarily surrendered possession of the premises, removing the issue of possession from the case (60 Cal. App. 2d 689, 696) . In this case, as completely as was possible for her to do so, defendant, at the time she asked leave to file the cross complaint, had relinquished possession of the property and the only issue was her liability for the payment of four months' rent. The filing of the cross complaint did not in any manner frustrate the lessor's remedy for restitution of the premises. The court further noted that the rule disallowing cross complaints in unlawful detainer is itself an exception to the general rule allowing such a pleading to be filed in other cases, and that this exception should not be extended beyond the reason which lies behind it (60 Cal. App. 2d 689, 697) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint Is Proper When Possession Is No Longer Issue Because Tenant Surrendered Possession

Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , was an unlawful detainer proceeding that involved the warranty of habitability as a defense. In its opinion, the California Supreme Court observed that a defense normally permitted because it arises out of the subject matter of the original suit is generally excluded in an unlawful detainer action if that defense is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession, which the unlawful detainer proceedings seek speedily to resolve (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-633) . However, an exception to that rule arises when the tenant has voluntarily surrendered possession of the premises before the trial of the unlawful detainer proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633 n.18).

Green was decided before the 1977 enactment of Civ. Code § 1952.3.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.48

§ 236.48 Opposing Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter From Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Prayer for Damages for Fraud, Force, or Violence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO STRIKE IR-
vs.	)	RELEVANT MATTER FROM COMPLAINT
_____ [name (s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION TO STRIKE SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A PRAYER FOR DAMAGES ARISING FROM CIRCUMSTANCES OF FRAUD, FORCE, OR VIOLENCE IS PROPER.

Damages Arising From Fraud, Force, or Violence. The plaintiff in an unlawful detainer proceeding may set forth in his/her complaint any circumstances of fraud, force, or violence that may have accompanied the alleged unlawful detainer and may claim damages therefor (Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in a complaint in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is a prayer for damages, but when the prayer is proper because the damages were occasioned by circumstances of fraud, force, or violence accompanying the unlawful detainer.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff is seeking damages because of the defendant's alleged fraud.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from complaint).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.22.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.49

§ 236.49 Opposing Application for Relief From Forfeiture [Code Civ. Proc. § 1179]--Hardship on Respondent

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO APPLICATION FOR RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE
_____ [name(s)], Respondent(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE APPLICATION FOR RELIEF FROM FORFEITURE SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE SUCH RELIEF WOULD WORK A HARDSHIP ON RESPONDENT.

A. Hardship to Respondent Precludes Relief. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1179, the court in balancing the equities should take into consideration not only the circumstances of the case and the hardship, if any, to the lessee from the forfeiture, but also the hardship, if any, to the lessor from relieving the lessee from that forfeiture (Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 70-71, 202 P.2d 378).

[Optional] B. Factors to Be Considered When Covenant Breached Is Provision in Commercial Lease Against

Assigning or Subletting Without Lessor's Prior Consent. In determining whether to grant relief from forfeiture, the trial court should consider the following: (1) the nature and character of the breach; (2) the hardship, if any, to the lessee from the forfeiture; (3) the hardship, if any, to the lessor from relieving the lessee from the forfeiture; (4) if consent was not sought, the reasons why it was not sought; (5) if consent was not sought, the knowledge (or whether there should have been knowledge) on the part of the assignee or sublessee that it was not requested; (6) the good faith or lack of it on the part of any party, whether lessor, lessee, assignee, or sublessee; (7) the extent of bad faith, if any, on the part of any party, whether lessor, lessee, assignee, or sublessee; (8) the degree of arbitrariness or unreasonableness on the lessor's part, if such exists, in not honoring the assignment or subletting; and (9) any other similar factors relevant to the issues to be resolved (see Thrifty Oil Co. v. Batarse (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 775, 220 Cal. Rptr. 285).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Respondent _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose an application for relief from forfeiture of a lease when the granting of such relief would work a greater "hardship" on the lessor.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts indicating that the landlord will suffer a particular hardship if the tenant is allowed to continue the lease.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to an application supported by the points and authorities in § 236.26.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hardship to Respondent Precludes Relief

In Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 202 P.2d 378 , defendant appealed from an adverse judgment in an unlawful detainer proceeding and an order dismissing a petition for relief from forfeiture of the lease. The trial court had awarded judgment for restitution of the premises, attorney's fees, and declaring a forfeiture of the lease on the grounds that defendant had violated the lease's terms by operating a real estate business on the leased premises.

The court of appeal upheld the judgment but reversed the order dismissing the petition. The trial court was instructed to hear and determine the petition. The court held that, although the willful breach of the lease covenant did not leave the trial court without jurisdiction to hear the petition, it did provide a weighty factor in the balancing of the equities required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1179. It concluded by pointing out that, under that section, the trial court in balancing the equities should take into consideration not only the circumstances of the case and any hardship to the lessee from the forfeiture, but also any hardship to the lessor from relieving the lessee from the forfeiture (90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 70-71) .

[b] Factors to Be Considered When Covenant Breached Is Provision in Commercial Lease Against Assigning or Subletting Without Lessor's Prior Consent

The factual background of Thrifty Oil Co. v. Batarse (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 220 Cal. Rptr. 285 , is discussed in § 236.26[4][a]. In remanding the case for further consideration of the petition to be relieved of the forfeiture, the court in Thrifty Oil said that in determining whether to grant relief, the trial court should engage in a weighing process to determine whether denying relief would be manifestly unjust. The court said that examples of such considerations to be examined in the weighing process include the following (174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 778) :

- The nature and character of the breach;
- The hardship, if any, to the lessee from the forfeiture;
- The hardship, if any, to the lessor from relieving the lessee from the forfeiture;
- The reasons why consent for assignment was not sought;
- The knowledge (or whether there should have been knowledge) on the sublessee's part that consent for the sublease was not requested;
- The good faith or lack of it on the part of any party, whether lessor, lessee, or sublessee;
- The extent of bad faith, if any, on the part of any party, whether lessor, lessee, or sublessee;
- The degree of arbitrariness or unreasonableness on the lessor's part, if such exists, in not honoring the assignment; and
- Any other similar factors relevant to the issues to be resolved.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hardship to Respondent Precludes Relief

The factual background of Thrifty Oil Co. v. Batarse (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 220 Cal. Rptr. 285 , is discussed in § 236.26[4][a]. In remanding the case to the trial court for further consideration of the petition for relief from forfeiture, the court, quoting Hignell v. Gebala (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 61, 70-71, 202 P.2d 378 , said that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1179, the court in balancing the equities should take into consideration the following (174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 777) :

- The circumstances of the case;
- The hardship, if any, to the lessee from the forfeiture;

- The hardship, if any, to the lessor from relieving the lessee from the forfeiture; and
- The willful or other character of the breach.

The court should then use its best discretion in determining whether relief will be granted (174 Cal. App. 3d 770, 777) .

In Superior Motels v. Rinn Motor Hotels, Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1052-1055, 241 Cal. Rptr. 487 , the trial court had refused to relieve a sublessee from forfeiture. The sublessee had not breached the sublease, but the lessee had breached the lease by the appointment of a receiver for the lessee. The effect of the receivership was to destroy the lessor's security for the lease. The court of appeal held that the trial court had not abused discretion in refusing to relieve the sublessee from forfeiture. The sublessee was bound by the terms of the original lease (195 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1065) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART B. Opposing Motions

23-236 California Points & Authorities §§ 236.50-236.59

[Reserved]

§§ 236.50[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.60

§ 236.60 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense Directly Related to Issue of Possession--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO STRIKE IR-
vs.	)	RELEVANT MATTER FROM ANSWER
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT DIRECTLY RELATES TO THE ISSUE OF POSSESSION IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute. The statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings do not prohibit the assertion of an affirmative defense (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 632, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense directly relates to the issue of possession, and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant_____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense that is directly related to the issue of possession.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that one of the defendant's affirmative defenses directly relates to the defendant retaining possession of the premises.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10 Cal. 3d 616, 620) . The Court noted that absolutely nothing in the statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings prohibits the assertion of any defense. Code Civ. Proc. § 1170 provides that in summary unlawful detainer proceedings the defendant may appear and answer or demur, and under Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30 an answer may contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense but may not claim affirmative relief. Thus, a defendant is not precluded from interposing an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) .

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

The procedural background of Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , is discussed under [a], above. The Supreme Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense that directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the Court found that the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 634) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

The California Supreme Court has, perhaps, further refined the issues involved when a trial court is faced with the question of whether an affirmative defense may be included in a defendant's answer in an unlawful detainer action. In S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 , the Court stated that, in an action involving the affirmative defense of retaliatory eviction, it must engage in a balancing process and determine whether the public policies furthered by protecting the defendants from eviction outweigh the interests in preserving the summary nature of unlawful detainer proceedings (17 Cal. 3d 719, 724) . The Court cited as authority the opinion in Union Oil Co. v. Chandler (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 716, 84 Cal. Rptr. 756 . Although the issue involved was the affirmative defense of retaliatory eviction, it is arguable that in deciding whether to permit the raising of an affirmative defense, in addition to inquiring into the question of whether the affirmative defense directly relates to the issue of possession, the trial court should also determine whether the public policies furthered by defendant's affirmative defense outweigh the interests in preserving the summary nature of the unlawful detainer proceedings (17 Cal. 3d 719, 724) .

For a further discussion of S.P. Growers, see § 236.62[3][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.61

§ 236.61 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Breach of the Warranty of Habitability

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF BREACH OF THE WARRANTY OF HABITABILITY IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute. The statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings do not prohibit assertion of an affirmative defense (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 632, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense is directly related to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

C. Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper. A warranty of habitability is implied by law in residential leases and the breach of this warranty may be raised as a defense in an unlawful detainer action (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 637, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

[Optional] D. Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper Because Dwelling Has Been Declared Substandard. A landlord may not issue a three-day notice to quit based on nonpayment of rent when the dwelling has been inspected by a public officer or employee and declared to be substandard (Civ. Code § 1942.4(a)).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense that alleges plaintiff's breach of the warranty of habitability.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the tenant has raised the breach of the implied warranty of habitability in his or her answer because the plaintiff has failed to maintain the habitability of the premises.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer) and Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant (affirmative defense of breach of the warranty of habitability).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10

Cal. 3d 616, 620) . The Court noted that absolutely nothing in the statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings prohibits the assertion of any defense. Code Civ. Proc. § 1170 provides that in summary unlawful detainer proceedings the defendant may appear and answer or demur, and under Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30 an answer may contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense but may not claim affirmative relief. Thus, a defendant is not precluded from interposing an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) .

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

The procedural background of Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , is discussed under [a], above. The Supreme Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense which directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the Court found that the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 634) .

[c] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper

The procedural background in Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , is discussed under [a], above. The Court held that a warranty of habitability is implied by law in residential leases in California and that the breach of such a warranty may be raised as a defense in an unlawful detainer action (10 Cal. 3d 616, 620) . Under this implied warranty, a residential landlord covenants that the premises he or she leases for living quarters will be maintained in a habitable state for the lease's duration. This warranty does not require that a landlord ensure that the leased premises are in perfect, aesthetically pleasing condition, but it does mean that bare living requirements must be maintained (10 Cal. 3d 616, 637) . The Court noted that there was no reason why the availability of a warranty of habitability defense should frustrate the summary procedure of an unlawful detainer action when the availability of other defenses relevant to the issue of possession has not. In this case, the tenant had already quit the premises and the only matter to be determined, on remand, was the question of money damages owing to the landlord (10 Cal. 3d 616, 639) .

In dictum, however, the Court stated that in unlawful detainer actions generally, if the trial court determines that the landlord's breach of warranty is total and that the tenant owes no rent, the court should enter judgment for the tenant. If the trial court determines that the damages from the breach of warranty justify only a partial reduction in rent, the tenant may maintain possession of the premises only if he or she pays that portion of the back rent that is owing, as directed by the court. If the tenant fails to pay this sum, the landlord is entitled to a judgment for possession (10 Cal. 3d 616, 639) .

[d] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper Because Dwelling Has Been Declared Substandard

Civ. Code § 1942.4 was amended in 2003 to provide that a landlord may not issue a three-day notice to quit based on nonpayment of rent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)] if the dwelling has been declared substandard as set forth in Health & Safety Code § 17920.3 because (1) conditions listed in that section exist to an extent that endangers the life, limb, health, property, safety, or welfare of the public or the occupants of the dwelling; (2) the dwelling contains lead hazards as specified in Health & Safety Code § 17920.10; or (3) the dwelling substantially lacks any of the affirmative standard characteristics set forth in Civ. Code § 1941.1 (Civ. Code § 1942.4(a)(1)). For Civ. Code § 1942.4(a)(1) to apply (1) a public officer or employee responsible for the enforcement of the housing law must have inspected the premises and notified the landlord or the landlord's agent in writing of his or her obligations to abate the nuisance or repair the substandard conditions, (2) the conditions must have existed and not have been abated 35 days beyond the date of service of that notice, and (3) the delay must have been without good cause (Civ. Code § 1942.4(a)(2), (3)). In addition, the conditions must not have been caused by an act or omission of the tenant (Civ. Code § 1942.4(a)(2), (3)).

A landlord who institutes an unlawful detainer proceeding based on a tenant's nonpayment of rent and who is liable for violating Civ. Code § 1942.4 will be liable to the tenant for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs of the suit (Code Civ. Proc. § 1174.21).

For further discussion of Civ. Code § 1942.4 and a complaint by a tenant against a landlord for damages and a repair order for an untenantable dwelling, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages, § 334.60 (Matthew Bender).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defense of Breach of Warranty of Habitability Is Proper

In Landeros v. Pankey (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 165 , an unlawful detainer action was resolved by a stipulated judgment between the landlord and tenants, with the tenants vacating the property. Subsequently, the tenants brought an action for damages against the landlord for breach of the warranty of habitability during their previous three-year tenancy. The trial court sustained the landlord's demurrer on the grounds of collateral estoppel since in the prior unlawful detainer action the tenants had raised the issue of breach of the warranty of habitability as an affirmative defense.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the stipulated judgment did not specifically address any matter relative to an alleged breach of the warranty of habitability nor did it contain any language purporting to comprehensively settle all matters between the parties arising from the lease (39 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1171-1172) . Additionally, collateral estoppel does not apply to an issue that could not have been raised in prior proceedings (39 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1174) . In this case, tenants who were seeking damages based on their entire three-year tenancy, could not have raised an issue in unlawful detainer regarding the balance of their tenancy because their affirmative defense was relevant only to the three-month default period alleged in the unlawful detainer complaint.

LexisNexis®

166 of 180 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.62

§ 236.62 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Retaliatory Eviction [Civ. Code § 1942.5]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF RETALIATORY EVICTION IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense directly relates to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

[EITHER]

B. Eviction in Retaliation for Action to Correct Tenantability of Leased Premises. When the lessor retaliates against the lessee because of the exercise by the lessee of his/her rights under Civil Code Sections 1940-1954.1 (leasing land and dwellings), or because the lessee complained to an appropriate agency as to tenantability of a dwelling, and if the lessee of the dwelling is not in default as to the payment of his/her rent, the lessor may not recover possession of a dwelling within 180 days after _____ [the date on which the lessee, in good faith, gave notice under Civil Code Section 1942 or the date on which the lessee, in good faith, made an oral complaint to the lessor regarding tenantability or the date on which the lessee, in good faith, filed a written complaint with an appropriate agency, of which the lessor had notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition relating to tenantability or the date on which the lessee, in good faith, had filed an oral complaint which was registered or otherwise recorded in writing, with an appropriate agency, of which the lessor had notice, for the purpose of obtaining correction of a condition relating to tenantability or the date of an inspection or issuance of a citation, resulting from a tenant's _____ (written complaint or oral complaint that was registered or otherwise recorded in writing) of which the lessor did not have notice or the filing of appropriate documents commencing a judicial or arbitration proceeding involving the issue of tenantability or entry of judgment or the signing of an arbitration award, if any, when in the judicial proceeding or arbitration the issue of tenantability is determined adversely to the lessor] (Civ. Code § 1942.5(a)).

[AND/OR]

C. Eviction in Retaliation for Participation in Tenant Organization or Exercise of Other Legal Rights. It is unlawful for a lessor to _____ [increase rent and/or decrease services and/or cause a lessee to quit involuntarily and/or bring an action to recover possession and/or threaten to _____ (increase rent and/or decrease services and/or cause a lessee to quit involuntarily and/or bring an action to recover possession)] for the purpose of retaliating against the lessee because he or she has _____ [lawfully organized or participated in a lessees' association or an organization advocating lessees' rights and/or lawfully and peaceably exercised any rights under the law] (Civ. Code § 1942.5(c); Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 244, 248-254, 178 Cal. Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582).

[AND/OR]

D. Eviction in Retaliation for Tenant's Exercise of Rights Under Health & Safety Code § 17031.5. A tenant of a labor camp consisting only of permanent housing or permanent housing units within a labor camp (see Business and Professions Code Section 17008) has a defense of retaliation in any action for possession if the employer or landlord acted in violation of Health and Safety Code Section 17031.5 (Health & Safety Code § 17031.5(b)).

[AND/OR]

E. Frustration of Public Policy by Retaliatory Eviction. A legitimate retaliatory eviction defense is raised when a statute or policy is in question that depends for its effectiveness on private initiative and that would thus be emasculated by allowing punitive eviction and when the interests in preserving the summary nature of the unlawful detainer proceeding are outweighed by the interests in furthering legislative policy (Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 244, 250-251, 178 Cal. Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582 ; S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 728-729, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721).

[AND/OR]

F. Frustration of Statutory Rights by Retaliatory Eviction. A landlord may not lawfully evict a tenant in retaliation for the tenant's exercise of statutorily protected rights and the tenant may raise the retaliatory nature of an attempted eviction as a defense in an unlawful detainer action (Vargas v. Municipal Court (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 902, 914, 150 Cal. Rptr. 918, 587 P.2d 714).

[Optional] G. Retaliatory Eviction Defense Is Available to Commercial Tenant. A commercial tenant may raise the defense of retaliatory eviction on the same basis as a residential tenant (Custom Parking, Inc. v. Superior Court (l982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 90, 100-101, 187 Cal. Rptr. 674).

[Optional] H. Affirmative Defense of Retaliatory Eviction Is Available Without Exercise of Repair-and-Deduct Remedy or Complaints to Governmental Authorities. The affirmative defense of retaliatory eviction may be properly raised by a tenant who orally complained to the landlord about the conditions of the premises although the tenant did not exercise the repair-and-deduct remedy or complain to governmental authorities (Kemp v. Schultz (1981)

121 Cal. App. 3d Supp 13, 16-18, 175 Cal. Rptr. 412).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging retaliatory eviction by the landlord.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord seeks to evict the tenant because of the tenant's involvement with a tenant's association or because the tenant complained about the condition of the premises.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The small claims court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10 Cal. 3d 616, 620) . The Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense that directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises. The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633-634) .

[b] Eviction in Retaliation for Participation in Tenant Organization or Exercise of Other Legal Rights

In Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 244, 178 Cal. Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582 , defendant complained to the police that plaintiff, her landlord, had molested her daughter. Plaintiff immediately tripled defendant's rent and then served a 30-day notice of eviction. Defendant raised the defense that the eviction was in retaliation for her complaint. The trial court found that the eviction was in retaliation for the complaint, but refused to find that such retaliation was in violation of law. The appellate department of the superior court upheld the trial court, and defendant sought a writ of mandate in the court of appeal. After the court of appeal denied the writ, defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate in the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court granted the writ. It first pointed out that there were two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction--the statutory basis in Civ. Code § 1942.5 and the common-law basis (30 Cal. 3d 244, 251) . The Court then considered whether the case came within the statutory rule in Civ. Code § 1942.5(c) that eviction was unlawful for the purpose of retaliating against a tenant for the lawful and peaceful exercise of any rights under the law. The Court found that every citizen has the basic right and even duty to report crimes to the police. In light of this policy, the Court found that it was clear that the Legislature did not contemplate that summary eviction procedures should be used to punish a citizen who reports crimes to the police. This strong public policy outweighs any delay caused by raising the defense in the unlawful detainer proceeding (30 Cal. 3d 244, 253) .

[c] Frustration of Public Policy by Retaliatory Eviction

In Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 244, 178 Cal. Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582 , the Supreme Court held that there are two parallel and independent bases for the defense of retaliatory eviction. The first is the statutory basis set forth in Civ. Code § 1942.5, and the second is based on case law. The Court then summarized the case-law test as whether, on balance, the public policies furthered by protecting a tenant from eviction outweigh the state's interest in ensuring that unlawful detainer proceedings are truly summary, relying on S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 (discussed below) (30 Cal. 3d 244, 250) . For further discussion of Barela, see [b], above.

In S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 , defendants were agricultural workers employed by plaintiff, a farm labor contractor, who provided housing for defendants. Defendants called a strike against plaintiff and shortly thereafter, filed suit against plaintiff in a federal district court, charging violation of the federal Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act [7 U.S.C. §§ 2041-2055]. Plaintiff then immediately served defendants with eviction notices and, when defendants failed to leave the premises, filed unlawful detainer actions. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion in the subsequent unlawful detainer proceeding to exclude evidence regarding two affirmative defenses, one of which was that the evictions were in retaliation for the federal suit filed by defendants. Judgment was entered against defendants, who appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. In the pertinent part of the Court's opinion, it noted the exception to the general rule of the inadmissibility of affirmative defenses when the plea was that the action amounted to a "retaliatory eviction" (17 Cal. 3d 719, 724) . The Court added that in evaluating whether defendants had raised a valid defense, it must engage in a balancing process. It must determine whether the public policies furthered by protecting defendants from eviction outweighed the interests in preserving the summary nature of unlawful detainer proceedings (17 Cal. 3d 719, 724) . In determining the public polices under the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act, the Court noted former 7 U.S.C. § 2050b (now see 29 U.S.C. § 1855(a)) of the Act, which prohibits discrimination against a worker for filing suit under the Act and the fact that the Act thus relies in large part on the initiation of private litigation for its effectiveness. The Court stated that merely because exclusive jurisdiction to enforce the Act rests in the federal courts did not prevent a state court from enforcing the Act's policy, particularly in light of the supremacy clause which makes it the state court's duty to insure that the intent of the Congress is not ignored (17 Cal. 3d 719, 727) . The Court also stated that, even though the statute in question was enacted primarily to protect defendants as employees and not as tenants, it did not prevent defendants from raising the issue of the retaliatory eviction in the unlawful detainer proceedings, since the right not to be deprived in court of home and shelter because of the exercise of statutory rights is a broad equitable principle. This principle is as deserving of protection as the right to equal protection under the law which is present in actions involving retaliatory evictions for racial reasons. The Court thus concluded that the effectiveness of the act in question depends on private initiative and would be emasculated by allowing punitive eviction (17 Cal. 3d 719, 728) .

In deciding that the interests in preserving the summary nature of the unlawful detainer proceeding were outweighed by the interests in furthering congressional policy, the Court distinguished the opinion in Union Oil Co. v. Chandler (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 716, 84 Cal. Rptr. 756 . It stated that unlike the action in Union Oil the trial court was not compelled to undertake the weighty task of determining whether there had been a violation of federal law since the policy of nondiscrimination for filing suit under the Act was clear, and the statute in question involved not a commercial lease, but eviction from a residential dwelling. The Court thus concluded that the defense presented in the case before it may be raised in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The Court added that this conclusion was unaltered by the fact that the housing agreement between plaintiff and defendants specified that shelter was provided only for employees, and by stating that, although a landlord may normally evict a tenant for no reason at all, he or she may not evict for an improper reason (17 Cal. 3d 719, 729-730) .

[d] Frustration of Statutory Rights by Retaliatory Eviction

In Vargas v. Municipal Court (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 902, 150 Cal. Rptr. 918, 587 P.2d 714 , the Supreme Court resolved the question of the availability of defenses for retaliatory eviction beyond those provided by Civ. Code § 1942.5 or deferal law [see [c], above]. In Vargas, the landlord terminated an employment relationship he had with his tenants and brought an unlawful detainer action. The employees, who were agricultural workers, then filed an unfair labor practice charge with the Agricultural Labor Relations Board. The trial court refused to admit the employees' evidence that the termination of employment and eviction were in retaliation for their exercise of rights specifically guaranteed by the Agricultural Labor Relations Act [Lab. Code §§ 1140-1166.3], and after a judgment in favor of the employer, the employees petitioned for a writ of mandate to vacate the trial court's judgment.

The Supreme Court granted the writ, holding that a landlord could not lawfully evict a tenant in retaliation for the tenant's exercise of statutorily protected rights and that a tenant may raise the retaliatory nature of the attempted eviction as a defense in an unlawful detainer action (22 Cal. 3d 902, 913) . The Court based this holding on its decisions in Schweiger v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 507, 517-518, 90 Cal. Rptr. 729, 476 P.2d 97 , and S.P. Growers Ass'n v. Rodriguez (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 719, 131 Cal. Rptr. 761, 552 P.2d 721 (discussed under [c], above).

[e] Retaliatory Eviction Defense Is Available to Commercial Tenant

In Custom Parking, Inc. v. Superior Court (l982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 90, 187 Cal. Rptr. 674 , a commercial tenant attempted to raise the defense of retaliatory eviction in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The tenant offered to prove that the landlord's motive for its eviction was the refusal of defendant's employees to testify falsely in a libel action brought by a third party against the landlord. The trial court ruled that the defense could not be raised in the unlawful detainer action and entered judgment for the landlord.

The court of appeal reversed. It noted that in some situations there was justification for treating commercial unlawful detainer actions differently from residential actions, such as the refusal to allow the defense of breach of an independent covenant in the commercial setting (138 Cal. App. 3d 90, 96-101) . It held, however, that there was no justification for not allowing the defense of retaliatory eviction in this situation because the strong public policy against false testimony outweighed the policy of summary unlawful detainer proceedings. The court also noted that the defense did not raise complex issues (138 Cal. App. 3d 90, 101) .

[f] Affirmative Defense of Retaliatory Eviction Is Available Without Exercise of Repair-and-Deduct Remedy or Complaints to Governmental Authorities

Kemp v. Schultz (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 175 Cal. Rptr. 412 , involved an unlawful detainer action by a landlord against the tenants in one of his apartments. The landlord had served the tenants with a notice of a rent increase. The tenants agreed to the increase, but asked that some repairs be made to the premises. No repairs were made, and the relationship deteriorated until the tenants were served with a 30-day notice to quit. After the tenants refused to quit, the landlord filed the present action in the municipal court. The tenants filed a general denial and several affirmative defenses, including the defense of retaliatory eviction. By a motion for judgment on the pleadings and a motion in limine at trial, the landlord contended that the retaliatory eviction defense was unavailable because the tenants had not made a claim to a governmental entity. The motions were denied, and the jury found for the tenants.

On appeal by the landlord to the superior court, the court affirmed the judgment. The court rejected the landlord's contention that a tenant must exercise his or her statutory right to deduct and repair under Civ. Code § 1942 before using the retaliatory eviction defense. The court stated that the repair-and-deduct statute is explicitly independent of any other available remedy (121 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 16-17) . The court also rejected the landlord's contention that a tenant must first complain to government officials before raising the defense. The court noted that the Legislature specifically provided for oral complaints concerning tenantability in Civ. Code § 1942.5, which governs the defense of retaliatory eviction. Thus, the court held that the defense may be raised on proof that an oral complaint had been made (121 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 17-18) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.63

§ 236.63 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Racial Discrimination

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF TERMINATION OF DEFENDANT'S TENANCY AS THE RESULT OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute. The statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings do not prohibit the assertion of an affirmative defense (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 632, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense is directly related to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

C. Defense of Racial Discrimination Is Proper. An affirmative defense that a defendant's tenancy is being terminated because of racial discrimination is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Abstract Inv. Co. v. Hutchinson (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 242, 255, 22 Cal. Rptr. 309).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense which alleges that the defendant's tenancy is being terminated solely because of racial discrimination.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord is seeking to evict the tenant because of his or her race.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer) and Ch. 35, Civil Rights Unruh Civil Rights Act.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10 Cal. 3d 616, 620) . The Court noted that absolutely nothing in the statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings prohibits the assertion of any defense. Code Civ. Proc. § 1170 provides that in summary unlawful detainer proceedings the defendant may appear and answer or demur, and under Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30 an answer may contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense but may not claim affirmative relief. Thus, a defendant is not precluded from interposing an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632 n.16).

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

The procedural background of Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , is discussed under [a], above. The Supreme Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense which directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633-634) .

[c] Defense of Racial Discrimination Is Proper

In Abstract Inv. Co. v. Hutchinson (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 242, 22 Cal. Rptr. 309 , the plaintiff instituted an unlawful detainer proceeding to obtain possession of premises leased to the defendant under a month-to-month tenancy. Defendant's answer acknowledged, in effect, that a proper notice to quit had been served and that the plaintiff was entitled to possession except for the facts alleged in the defendant's affirmative defenses. The trial court refused to admit any evidence on the allegations of the affirmative defenses and rendered judgment in the plaintiff's favor. On appeal to the appellate department of the superior court, the trial court's judgment was reversed on the ground that it was error to exclude evidence under the affirmative defenses. The case was certified on the superior court's own motion to the district court of appeal. Two of the defendant's affirmative defenses were based on the contention that his eviction was sought solely on the ground of his race.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment and remanded the case for retrial. The court held that the defendant should have been permitted to produce proof of the allegations of his special defenses of discrimination. If the allegations of racial discrimination were found true, the court would be proscribed from taking action under both the federal and state Constitutions. Judicial enforcement of the eviction of a tenant because of race constitutes state action violating the tenant's rights guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, and Article I, § 15 of the California Constitution. The interest in preserving the summary nature of the unlawful detainer proceeding cannot outweigh the interest of doing substantial justice in a case involving such a constitutional defense (204 Cal. App. 2d 242, 249) .

Although the court in Abstract Inv. Co. referred to the Unruh Act, it declined to hold on the issue of whether a violation of this Act would constitute a proper affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding and decided the case on a constitutional basis. In Flowers v. John Burnham & Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 700, 98 Cal. Rptr. 644 , the court of appeal recognized the Unruh Act as a limitation on the power of landlords to terminate tenancy. However, in that case the court held that the lessor's regulation restricting children in its apartments to girls of all ages and boys under five was not unreasonable or arbitrary (21 Cal. App. 3d 700, 703) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.64

§ 236.64 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense That Notice Fails to Demand Precise Amount Due [Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT THE THREE-DAY NOTICE FAILS TO DEMAND THE PRECISE AMOUNT DUE IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense directly relates to the issue of possession, and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements. Strict compliance with the statutory provisions relating to the three-day notice to quit is a prerequisite to seeking the summary remedy of unlawful detainer (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

C. Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due. When an unlawful detainer is based on a default in the payment of rent, the notice to pay rent or quit must demand the exact amount of rent claimed to be due (Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822).

D. Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient. A notice in which the demand for rent exceeds the amount due is insufficient (Johnson v. Sanches (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 118, 132 P.2d 853).

E. Demand in Excess of Judgment. A demand for rent in excess of the judgment in an unlawful detainer proceeding will not support the judgment (Werner v. Sargeant (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 833, 837, 264 P.2d 217).

[Optional] F. Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient. A notice in which demand exceeds rent owed for more than one year is insufficient (Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 698, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer in an unlawful detainer action based on default in payment of rent, when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense that alleges that the three-day notice failed to demand the precise amount of rent due. The form would be used when (1) this defect does not appear on the face of the complaint (as when the tenant has paid part of the amount demanded), (2) when the demand includes charges other than rent but this does not appear on the face of the complaint, or (3) when the amount demanded has been incorrectly computed and this is not apparent from the complaint. If this defect appears on the face of the complaint, a demurrer would be the appropriate form of objection [see § 236.13].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the notice to pay rent or quit does not specifically demand the exact amount of rent claimed to be due.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability. The Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense that directly relates to the issue of possession and, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-634) .

[b] Strict Compliance With Notice Requirements

In Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , the defendant's default was entered in an unlawful detainer proceeding. The defendant moved to set aside the default and accompanied its motion with a copy of its proposed answer. The motion was denied and the court entered judgment granting the plaintiff possession of the premises and granting treble damages. The plaintiffs' complaint alleged the making of the lease and that the defendant had agreed to pay not less than $3,000 per month. It further alleged nonpayment of rent for the months of January and February, together with a written demand and notice to pay rent or quit. A copy of the notice was attached to the complaint and made a part of it. In the notice no amount of delinquent rent was mentioned.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the three-day notice did not specify the amount of rent claimed to be due (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 specifically provides that a tenant of real property is guilty of unlawful detainer when he or she continues in possession after default in the payment of rent "and three days' notice, in writing, requiring its payment, stating the amount which is due" has been served on the tenant. Strict compliance with this provision of the unlawful detainer statute is mandatory. The remedy of unlawful detainer is a summary proceeding to determine the right to possession of real property. Since it is purely statutory in nature, it is essential that a party seeking the remedy bring himself or herself clearly within the statute (241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674) .

[c] Demand for Precise Amount of Rent Due

Baugh v. Consumers Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 672, 50 Cal. Rptr. 822 , is discussed under [b], above.

[d] Demand in Excess of Amount Due Is Insufficient

In Johnson v. Sanches (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 132 P.2d 853 , the plaintiff brought an action for unlawful detainer after serving a three-day notice to pay rent or surrender possession. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff. The defendant had leased two parcels from the plaintiff, one of 100 acres and the other of 38 acres. The monthly rental for the 100 acre parcel was $208.34 and the annual rental for the 38 acre parcel was $950. The three-day notice demanded rent in the amount of $1,550.38. Included in the demand was $750 claimed to be due on the 38 acre parcel. The trial court found that $750 of the amount demanded was not owed by defendant.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment holding that to work a forfeiture of a lease for nonpayment of rent, the landlord must demand of the tenant the payment of the exact sum due (56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 116-117) . The notice in the instant case did not comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 in that the amount demanded as rent was $750 in excess of the amount then due (56 Cal. App. 2d 115, 118) .

[e] Demand in Excess of Judgment

In Werner v. Sargeant (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 833, 264 P.2d 217 , an action for unlawful detainer based on nonpayment of rent, the defendant appealed from a summary judgment entered for the plaintiff. That judgment granted rent to the plaintiff at $300 a month, while the demand and notice to quit filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 had demanded rent at $350 per month. An affirmative defense that incorporated the lease and disputed the amount of actual rent being paid was struck on the ground that such a defense could not be asserted in an unlawful detainer action. In fact, the demand for payment had been for seven months' rent at $350 per month, less several hundred dollars paid to the plaintiff or credited on defendant's obligation, while the judgment was for eight months' rent, without deductions of any kind, at $300 per month.

The judgment was reversed by the court of appeal, because, so far as the record was concerned, the notice to pay rent or quit did not correctly set forth the amount of rent due as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161. The court, emphasizing that the summary judgment process is purely statutory and to be employed only in cases when no material issue of fact is presented, held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 requires that to work a lease's forfeiture for nonpayment of rent the landlord must demand the precise sum due, and that a demand in excess of the judgment will not support the judgment (121 Cal. App. 2d 833, 837) .

[f] Demand in Excess of One Year's Rent Is Insufficient

In Bevill v. Zoura (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635 , the landlord filed an unlawful detainer action following service on the tenant of a three-day notice. The notice demanded payment of more than one year's rent. The court of appeal held that the notice was insufficient to support the unlawful detainer action because it did not correctly state the amount that was due and because it was not served within one year after the rent became due, both of which are required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(2) (27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 697-698) . The facts constituting ineffective notice appeared on the face of the notice, that is, the demand included rent owed more than one year before the three-day notice was served. Accordingly, the tenant was not required to plead his theory of ineffective notice as an affirmative defense. The court noted that the tenant had raised the issue of ineffective notice in its trial brief, and that there was no assertion by the landlord that he was unfairly surprised or prejudiced by the tenant's failure to raise the issue as an affirmative defense (27 Cal. App. 4th 694, 698) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.65

§ 236.65 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Waiver of Breach

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF WAIVER OF THE BREACH OF A COVENANT OF THE LEASE IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense directly relates to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Waiver of Breach Bars Judgment for Possession. A lessor's waiver of breach of a covenant in a lease bars a judgment for possession (Bedford Inv. Co. v. Folb (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366-367, 180 P.2d 361).

C. Conduct Supporting Inference of Waiver. Conduct of the lessor, with knowledge of a breach, consistent with the continued existence of the lease and inconsistent with its termination by forfeiture supports an inference that the lessor has waived the breach (Salton Community Serv. Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 533, 64 Cal. Rptr. 246).

[Optional] D. Acceptance of Benefits Under Lease Constitutes Waiver. A lessor's acceptance of benefits under the lease with knowledge of a breach supports an inference that the lessor has waived the breach (Salton Community Serv. Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 533, 64 Cal. Rptr. 246).

[Optional] E. Acceptance of Rent With Knowledge of Breach Constitutes Waiver. The acceptance of rent by a landlord from the tenant after the breach of a condition of the lease, with full knowledge of all the facts, is a waiver of the breach (Kern Sunset Oil Co. v. Good Roads Oil Co. (1931) 214 Cal. 435, 440, 6 P.2d 71).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging the plaintiff's waiver of the breach of covenant which is the basis for the action.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord knew that the tenant had breached a particular provision of the lease but still accepted rent payments from the tenant.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer) and Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant (affirmative defense of waiver of breach).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability. The Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense which directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The basic purpose of this rule is to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-633) .

[b] Waiver of Breach Bars Judgment for Possession

In Bedford Inv. Co. v. Folb (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 363, 180 P.2d 361 , the lessor brought an action for unlawful detainer after having served a notice of termination of the lease and notice to quit on the ground that a sublease had been made without its consent in violation of a provision in the lease. The trial court entered judgment for the lessor for possession and damages. The lease provided that the lessees could not assign the lease or sublet any part of the premises without the lessor's written consent. However, it also provided that the lessor would not arbitrarily withhold approval. The lessees sublet a part of the premises after having requested, but without having received, respondent's consent.

The court of appeal reversed, ordering the trial court to enter a judgment in favor of the defendants and restoring to them all rights to which they were entitled under the lease (79 Cal. App. 2d 363, 367) . In addition to upholding the lessees' argument that the lessor had arbitrarily withheld his approval, the court also noted that the lessor had accepted rent after the action was filed. The lessor's right to declare a forfeiture of a lease, by reason of the making of a sublease without the lessor's consent in violation of the lease, is waived when the lessor, after knowledge of the sublease, accepts the rents specified in the lease. The payment of rent bars any judgment against the lessees for rent and it likewise bars a judgment either for damages or for possession (79 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366-367) .

[c] Conduct Supporting Inference of Waiver

Salton Community Serv. Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 64 Cal. Rptr. 246 , involved an unlawful detainer action in which the defendants set forth defenses of waiver and estoppel. The plaintiff demurred to these defenses and the demurrer was sustained without leave to amend. At trial the defendants made offers of proof directed to the issues of waiver and estoppel and objections to these offers of proof were sustained. The defendants then stated they had no evidence to present other than that in support of their offers of proof which had been rejected. The plaintiff moved for and obtained a directed verdict. The plaintiff and defendants had executed a written sublease of property which provided that no camping was to be permitted on the premises. It was the duty of the defendants to enforce this provision. However, following the sublease's execution, camping occurred intermittently during defendants' occupancy and the plaintiff knew of the camping. Despite this knowledge, the plaintiff approved defendants' construction of permanent improvements and permitted them to engage in other expenditures. The defendants erected a sign stating that the plaintiff insisted no camping be allowed on the premises but plaintiff required them to remove the sign. The plaintiff even maintained a sign just outside the leased premises indicating that camping was available within the premises.

The court of appeal reversed and held that the trial court's refusal to permit the introduction of evidence on whether the lessor's conduct constituted a waiver of the breach was error (256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 535) . The court stated that conduct of the lessor, with knowledge of a breach, consistent with the continued existence of the lease and inconsistent with its termination by forfeiture supports an inference that the lessor has waived the breach. When the lessor's conduct, following execution of a lease, leads the lessee to believe compliance with a particular covenant will not be enforced, the lessee's reliance on this belief in consequent performance by him or her of other covenants of the lease estops the lessor to declare a forfeiture of the lease on account of the particular breach (256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 531) .

[d] Acceptance of Benefits Under Lease Constitutes Waiver

Salton Community Serv. Dist. v. Southard (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 526, 64 Cal. Rptr. 246 , is discussed in [c], above.

[e] Acceptance of Rent With Knowledge of Breach Constitutes Waiver

In Kern Sunset Oil Co. v. Good Roads Oil Co. (1931) 214 Cal. 435, 6 P.2d 71 , the plaintiff brought an action to declare the forfeiture of a lease of oil lands. The trial court entered judgment for the defendants. The defendants had agreed in the lease to build two oil wells a year until 16 wells had been drilled. The defendants completed only 13 wells during a period of over 13 years. The plaintiff then served notice of forfeiture.

The Supreme Court held that the plaintiff waived the breach of the covenant (214 Cal. 435, 443) . For five years after the date on which the 16 wells should have been completed the plaintiff accepted and received regular monthly payments from the leased premises without making any complaint or objection to the default on the lessees' part. The Court stated that it is the general rule that the acceptance of rent by the landlord from the tenant, after the breach of a condition of the lease, with full knowledge of all the facts, is a waiver of the breach and precludes the landlord from declaring a forfeiture of the lease by reason of such breach (214 Cal. 435, 440-443) .

It should be noted that the acceptance of rent after the lessor has knowledge of the breach does not constitute a waiver if the lease expressly provides that it does not, especially when the landlord also gives notice that his or her acceptance of the rent is not to be construed as a waiver of the right to assert a forfeiture [Karbelnig v. Brothwell (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 333, 342, 53 Cal. Rptr. 335] . Also, a landlord's acceptance of HUD housing assistance payments made on behalf of a tenant after a tenant's breach does not waive the landlord's right to terminate the lease, at least when those payments do not constitute rent under the terms of the lease between the landlord and the tenant [Savett v. Davis (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 13, 20 , 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Acceptance of Rent With Knowledge of Breach Constitutes Waiver

Gray v. Maier & Zobelein Brewery (1906) 2 Cal. App. 653, 84 P. 280 , involved an unlawful detainer action. The trial court entered judgment for the defendants and denied a motion for a new trial. The plaintiffs' predecessor in title leased the premises to the defendants for a term of two years. The lease contained a clause that the premises would not be sublet without the lessor's consent. Shortly after the term's commencement the defendants sublet the premises. This was known to the plaintiffs' grantor and acquiesced in by her thereafter, receiving rent, until she transferred ownership of the premises to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs served a three-day notice to quit on the defendants following a conflict over an option to extend the lease for another year.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court noted that the power of a court of equity is invoked by a plaintiff in an unlawful detainer action and this power extends to a full examination of all the equities involved. When all parties knew of the subletting and acquiesced in it, receiving rent with such knowledge, there is a waiver of any rights existing on account of the violation of the provision against subletting (2 Cal. App. 653, 658) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.66

§ 236.66 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance With Condition

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF A GOOD FAITH SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE WITH A CONDITION OF THE LEASE IS PROPER.

Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance Is Proper. An affirmative defense that a defendant has substantially complied with a condition in the lease when literal compliance is impossible is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Knight v. Black (1912) 19 Cal. App. 518, 525-527, 126 P. 512).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging the defendant's good faith substantial compliance with a condition of the lease.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the tenant, although not in 100 percent compliance with a condition of the lease, has substantially complied with the condition.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance Is Proper

In Knight v. Black (1912) 19 Cal. App. 518, 126 P. 512 , the plaintiff brought an action in unlawful detainer based on the defendant's failure to furnish the leased premises with furniture worth $3,000 and to execute a note and chattel mortgage on the furniture to the plaintiff as security for the payment of rent as required by the lease. The defendant admitted this failure but set up as a defense, facts which, if true, would tend to show that literal compliance with the condition was temporarily impossible due to circumstances over which the defendant had no control. In addition, the defendant pleaded a tender to plaintiff of other security (a gold coin) to protect the plaintiff against any possible loss for nonpayment of rent until such time as the defendant could furnish the exact security called for by the lease's condition. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion to strike out these parts of the defendant's answer and judgment was entered for the plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment and remanded the case for a new trial. The court held that granting the motion to strike the defense of good faith substantial compliance with the condition was error since it was a valid defense to the unlawful detainer action (19 Cal. App. 518, 526) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defense of Good Faith Substantial Compliance Is Proper

Roth v. Morton's Chefs Services, Inc. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 380, 218 Cal. Rptr. 684 , was a proceeding in unlawful detainer for breach of the covenant against subleasing. Plaintiff, without knowledge that defendant had already subleased the entire premises without her consent, which fact defendant had concealed from her, gave her consent to sublease a portion of the premises. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appealed, arguing it had substantially complied with the covenant requiring the obtaining of prior consent to sublease.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court pointed out that the equitable defense of substantial compliance is a proper defense to a proceeding in unlawful detainer, but held that the defense was not sustained (173 Cal. App. 3d 380, 387) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.67

§ 236.67 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Lessor's Bad Faith in Causing Breach

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT THE PLAINTIFF ACTING IN BAD FAITH CAUSED THE BREACH IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense directly relates to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Lessor's Bad Faith in Causing Breach Precludes a Forfeiture. When the lessor acts in bad faith to entrap the lessee into a technical breach of the lease, a court will refuse to enforce a forfeiture (Strom v. Union Oil Co. (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 78, 83-85, 198 P.2d 347).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff acted in bad faith and caused the breach on which the action is based.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord has done something to cause the tenant to breach the lease and then is seeking to evict the tenant because of the breach.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The small claims court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10 Cal. 3d 616, 620) . The Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense that directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises. The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The purpose of this rule is basically to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 633-634) .

[b] Lessor's Bad Faith in Causing Breach Precludes a Forfeiture

In Strom v. Union Oil Co. (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 78, 198 P.2d 347 , the plaintiffs brought an unlawful detainer action against the defendant. The trial court made findings that the defendant's repeated tenders of payment of rent were wrongfully refused by plaintiffs with the intent to inequitably and fraudulently claim a forfeiture of the lease. Judgment was entered for the defendant.

The plaintiffs had purchased the leased premises while the defendant was in possession under a long-term lease as assignee. This purchase of the premises had been preceded by plaintiff's unsuccessful attempts to secure the defendant's consent to an increase in the rent, accompanied by warnings to the defendant to comply with the terms of the lease to the letter. Defendant was informed of the purchase of the premises and that further payments of the rent were to be made to Mr. A.T. Strom at 1229Nevin Avenue, Richmond, California. The defendant attempted to get clarification of these instructions but there was no answer to his letter. On September 6, plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter requiring it to pay rent for the months of August and September or deliver up possession of the premises within three days after service of the notice, and electing forfeiture of the lease in case of noncompliance. The letter reached the defendant on September 7, a Saturday. On Monday, the defendant sent two checks for the two months' rent by registered mail to the address it had been given. The next day, the notice to pay rent was personally served on the defendant. The same morning the registered letter was offered by a postman at the given address and the person there refused to sign. The letter went back to the post office and a notice of arrival was left by the postman in the mailbox at Nevin Avenue. A second notice to the defendant was delivered in the same manner on September 13. The plaintiffs did not claim the registered letter or communicate with the defendant. On September 20, the letter was returned to the defendant as "unclaimed." The defendant tried to contact the plaintiffs personally at the Nevin Avenue address but was referred to another address where the checks were personally tendered and refused on September 24. The plaintiffs claimed they were received too late. Defendant was served with the summons in the unlawful detainer action on September 27. On October 7, the defendant tendered three months' rent to appellants personally and when they again refused, the amount was deposited in their name in a bank and written notice was served on them.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that the finding of bad faith, as supported by the evidence, was of primary importance in trying to enforce the forfeiture (88 Cal. App. 2d 78, 81) . Although the defendant may have been late in making the deposit of the rent in a bank, this shortcoming was trivial when compared to the plaintiffs' bad faith. The plaintiffs could have had timely payment if they had so desired, but they were intentionally evasive and uncooperative, hoping to induce some technical shortcoming on which to terminate a lease which they thought disadvantageous. Thus, the plaintiffs were not entitled to any payments except of the rents agreed on and the defendant remained in possession (88 Cal. App. 2d 78, 84) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.68

§ 236.68 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Fraud in Inducing Person Already in Possession to Enter Into Lease

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT DEFENDANT WAS INDUCED TO ENTER INTO THE LEASE BY PLAINTIFF'S FRAUD AFTER DEFENDANT WAS ALREADY IN POSSESSION OF THE PREMISES IS PROPER.

A. Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute. The statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings do not prohibit the assertion of an affirmative defense (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 632, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

B. Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper. A tenant may interpose an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer action when the defense is directly related to the issue of possession and when the defense, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 633, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168).

C. Defense of Fraud After Defendant Is in Possession Is Proper. Fraud by the plaintiff in inducing the defendant to enter into a lease after the defendant is already in possession of the premises may be raised as a defense in an unlawful detainer action (Johnson v. Chely (1872) 43 Cal. 299, 305) .

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense which alleges that the plaintiff was induced to enter into the lease by fraud after he or she already was in possession of the premises.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord fraudulently induced the tenant to enter the lease even though the tenant was already in possession.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer), Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, and Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake (actionable fraud and deceit).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Affirmative Defense Is Not Barred by Statute

In Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , a landlord commenced an unlawful detainer action in small claims court seeking possession of the leased premises and back rent. The tenant raised the defense that the landlord had failed to maintain the premises in a habitable condition. The court awarded the landlord possession and a money judgment. The superior court reached the same result after a trial de novo on the tenant's appeal. The tenant's request for certification and transfer of the case to a court of appeal was denied.

The Supreme Court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its judgment and to proceed with trial of the unlawful detainer action, allowing the defense of breach of the warranty of habitability (10 Cal. 3d 616, 640) . The Court noted that absolutely nothing in the statutory provisions governing unlawful detainer proceedings prohibits the assertion of any defense. Code Civ. Proc. § 1170 provides that in summary unlawful detainer proceedings the defendant may appear and answer or demur, and under Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30 an answer may contain a statement of any new matter constituting a defense but may not claim affirmative relief. Thus, a defendant is not precluded from interposing an affirmative defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632) .

[b] Affirmative Defense Related to Possession Is Proper

The procedural background of Green v. Superior Court (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 616, 111 Cal. Rptr. 704, 517 P.2d 1168 , is discussed under [a], above. The Supreme Court, after noting the absence of a statutory bar, held that no California decision prohibits a tenant from interposing a defense which directly relates to the issue of possession and which, if established, would result in the tenant's retention of the premises (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-634) . The Court acknowledged a line of cases holding that a defense is generally excluded if it is extrinsic to the narrow issue of possession. The basic purpose of this rule is to prevent tenants from frustrating the summary statutory remedy through introduction of extraneous matter. This objective is accomplished by confining unlawful detainer actions to issues directly relevant to the ultimate question of possession. However, if an affirmative defense is relevant to that question, the defense should be available to the defendant (10 Cal. 3d 616, 632-634) .

[c] Defense of Fraud After Defendant Is in Possession Is Proper

In Johnson v. Chely (1872) 43 Cal. 299 , the plaintiffs brought an action to recover possession of premises leased to the defendant. The defendant's motion for a nonsuit was denied and the trial court refused to permit the defendant to prove that he was already in possession of the premises when he was induced to assume the relation of tenant to the plaintiffs by fraudulent misrepresentation that they were the owners of the premises. Judgment was entered for the plaintiffs.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded for a new trial. The Court held that the failure to permit the defense of fraud under the facts was error (43 Cal. 299, 305-306) . If the defendant can show that he did not enter under the lease, but was already in possession when he was induced to enter into a lease with the plaintiff through the latter's deception, then in an unlawful detainer action he has a valid defense. If successful, the defense would result in the defendant's retention of possession of the premises (43 Cal. 299, 305) .

It should be noted that the Johnson decision does not apply to a case when the tenant was not in possession of the premises when the lease was executed and the tenant's only right to possession is the lease that he or she claims to be void by reason of fraud in its execution. Kalmanovitz v. Rempp (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 242, 244 P.2d 457 , was an unlawful detainer action in which the defendants attempted to set up a defense of reliance on fraudulent representations of the plaintiff in entering into the lease. In dictum, the court of appeal acknowledged that a tenant who, while in possession, is fraudulently induced to enter into a lease may set up the fraud as a defense in an unlawful detainer action. However, the court held that in the case at hand, the tenants were not in possession at the time the lease was executed and their only right to possession was the lease which they claimed to be void by reason of fraud in its execution (111 Cal. App. 2d 242, 246-247) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.69

§ 236.69 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Part Performance of Oral Agreement to Lease

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF DEFENDANT'S PART PERFORMANCE OF AN ORAL AGREEMENT TO EXECUTE A LEASE IS PROPER.

Defense of Oral Agreement to Lease Is Proper. The part performance of an oral agreement to lease can be raised as a defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding based on termination of a month-to-month tenancy (Schubert v. Lowe (1924) 193 Cal. 291, 295-296, 223 P. 550).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging the defendant's part performance of an oral agreement to execute a lease and when the basis for the action is the defendant's failure to vacate the premises after notice of the termination of a month-to-month tenancy.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the lease was oral as opposed to written and that the tenant has partially performed under the lease.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Oral Agreement to Lease Is Proper

In Schubert v. Lowe (1924) 193 Cal. 291, 223 P. 550 , the plaintiff brought an unlawful detainer action alleging that the defendant continued to occupy premises without the plaintiff's permission or consent after his month-to-month tenancy had been terminated by notice and possession of the premises demanded. The defendant answered, denying that property was occupied under a month-to-month tenancy, and, by way of cross complaint, alleged a cause of action for specific performance of a partially executed oral agreement to execute a written lease to the premises. The court overruled a general demurrer to the cross complaint and rendered judgment for the defendant and cross complainant, decreeing specific performance by plaintiff of the agreement.

The Supreme Court vacated that portion of the judgment decreeing specific performance but affirmed the remainder. While the defendant was not entitled to a judgment decreeing specific performance in an action in unlawful detainer, nevertheless the part performance of an oral agreement to execute the lease can be interposed as a defense to the plaintiff's attempt to obtain possession. Although the defendant's pleading was called a cross complaint for specific performance, it was sufficient to present this defense (193 Cal. 291, 295) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.70

§ 236.70 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Performance of Agreement for Purchase of Business With Lease as Part Consideration

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF DEFENDANT'S PERFORMANCE OF AN AGREEMENT TO PURCHASE PLAINTIFF'S BUSINESS FOR WHICH A LEASE WAS PART CONSIDERATION IS PROPER.

Defense of Lease as Part Consideration for Purchase of Business Is Proper. The performance of an agreement to purchase a business that includes as part consideration a lease of the buildings in which the business had been conducted is a proper defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Rishwain v. Smith (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 524, 531-532, 175 P.2d 555).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging the defendant's performance of an agreement to purchase a business for which the lease was part consideration.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the lease was used as consideration to support a contract.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Lease as Part Consideration for Purchase of Business Is Proper

In Rishwain v. Smith (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 524, 175 P.2d 555 , the plaintiffs brought an unlawful detainer action and the defendants raised the defense of their performance of an agreement to purchase the plaintiffs' business of which the lease was part consideration. The trial court entered judgment for the defendants. The plaintiffs and defendants had executed a written agreement for the sale of the plaintiffs' business which included, as part consideration, a lease or agreement to lease the store buildings for two years on specified terms, with a provision that the plaintiffs would execute a more specific lease. The defendants took possession of the buildings in accordance with that agreement and paid the rent and performed all the conditions of the agreement. The plaintiffs later presented a proposed formal lease which the defendants rejected on the grounds that it omitted specific covenants contained in the agreement and added several onerous provisions not contained in the agreement. On the theory that the defendants were holding the property as tenants at will, a 30-day notice to vacate was served and the suit for unlawful detainer was commenced.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the defendants had a right to plead and prove their defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding (77 Cal. App. 2d 524, 531-533) . The defendants had partly performed the agreement to lease by their taking possession and paying the stipulated rent. If a more formal lease was contemplated by the parties, the burden was on the plaintiffs to execute and present to the defendants such a lease in substantial conformity with the express terms of the agreement and they failed to do so. It was immaterial that the defendants might not be entitled to specific performance of the agreement to lease in the unlawful detainer proceeding (77 Cal. App. 2d 524, 532) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.71

§ 236.71 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Relationship Involving Sale of Interest in Property to Defendant

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT THE RELATIONSHIP INVOLVED PLAINTIFF'S SALE OF AN INTEREST IN PROPERTY TO DEFENDANT RATHER THAN THAT OF LANDLORD AND TENANT IS PROPER.

Defense of Relationship Involving Sale of Interest in Property to Defendant Is Proper. A defense that defendant is not the tenant of plaintiff but is the vendee of an interest in plaintiff's property is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Manning v. Franklin (1889) 81 Cal. 205, 207-208, 22 P. 550).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense which alleges that the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant was not that of landlord and tenant but rather one involving a sale of an interest in property. It is important to note that the sale involved in this situation involves a "vendor-landlord" as plaintiff and a "purchaser-tenant" as defendant. If a case involves a purchaser as plaintiff, it may fall within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a allowing an unlawful detainer action when there is a refusal to turn over land to a purchaser after a sale. For a discussion of the acts constituting unlawful detainer, see § 236.03.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that there was not a typical landlord-tenant relationship because one of the parties was asserting that he or she was actually a purchaser of an interest in the other party's property.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Relationship Involving Sale of Interest in Property to Defendant Is Proper

In Manning v. Franklin (1889) 81 Cal. 205, 22 P. 550 , the plaintiff brought an action in unlawful detainer after giving the defendant notice to quit. The trial court found for the plaintiff. The plaintiff had proposed to the defendant that he erect a house on part of plaintiff's lot and live there. In consideration for this, the defendant would pay half of the taxes and water charges, and would care for the plaintiff in sickness. This agreement was verbal. The defendant complied with all the terms of the contract on his part.

The Supreme Court reversed with instructions to render judgment in the defendant's favor. The Court held that the defendant was a vendee, not a tenant at will. Although the verbal agreement failed to comply with the statute of frauds, the defendant's part performance took the case out of the statute of frauds. The Court found that this doctrine, which would entitle the defendant to specific performance in a proper case, also protects him in his possession against an action for unlawful detainer (81 Cal. 205, 208) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.72

§ 236.72 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Plaintiff Has Raised Issue of Title

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS NOT ESTOPPED TO DENY PLAINTIFF'S TITLE WHEN PLAINTIFF HAS PUT TITLE AT ISSUE BY SEEKING TO QUIET TITLE AGAINST DEFENDANT.

Challenge to Plaintiff's Title Is Proper When Plaintiff Has Raised Issue. A defense that defendant actually has title to the premises is proper when plaintiff has raised the issue of title by bringing an action or a cross complaint against defendant to quiet title to the premises (Greenhut v. Wooden (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68-70, 180 Cal. Rptr. 786).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memorandum of points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer action when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging that defendant is not estopped to challenge plaintiff's title to the premises. The ground of opposition presented is that defendant is not estopped to challenge plaintiff's title because plaintiff has affirmatively raised that issue by seeking to quiet title against defendant.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the plaintiff has sought to quiet title against the defendant.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Challenge to Plaintiff's Title Is Proper When Plaintiff Has Raised Issue

In Greenhut v. Wooden (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 64, 180 Cal. Rptr. 786 , defendant leased certain property from plaintiff for 18 months and promised to make certain improvements. Defendant also obtained an option to purchase the property on the lease's expiration. After defendant sent a notice of exercise of option, plaintiff disaffirmed the option and brought an action against defendant, which included a cause of action to quiet title. Defendant also brought an action against plaintiff to enforce the option. When the lease expired, plaintiff brought an action for unlawful detainer. Defendant unsuccessfully moved to consolidate the unlawful detainer proceeding with the other actions involving title to the property. At trial, plaintiff made a motion in limine to exclude all evidence of the option and defendant's claims to title. This motion was granted, and, after trial judgment was entered for plaintiff, defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal held that one of the exceptions to the rule that a tenant is estopped to challenge plaintiff's title in an unlawful detainer action arises when plaintiff has raised the issue of title by bringing an action or counterclaim to quiet title to the premises against the tenant. The court also stated that the quiet title actions should have been consolidated with the other actions involving title to the property (129 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68-70) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.73

§ 236.73 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Relationship Is a Partnership

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT WAS A PARTNERSHIP RATHER THAN THAT OF LANDLORD AND TENANT IS PROPER.

Defense of Partnership Is Proper. A defense that the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant was that of partners, and not of landlord and tenant, is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Pico v. Cuyas (1874) 48 Cal. 639, 642) .

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter in an answer in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the mater sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense which alleges that the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant was not that of landlord and tenant but that of partners. It is important to note that this situation involves a partnership. If a case involves a servant, employee, agent, or licensee it falls within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161(1). For a discussion of the acts constituting unlawful detainer, see § 236.03.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that a partnership exists.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer) and Ch. 170, Partnerships and Joint Ventures (determining partnership relationship).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Partnership Is Proper

Pico v. Cuyas (1874) 48 Cal. 639 , involved a second appeal in the same case. Plaintiff and defendant had entered into a partnership after the execution of a lease between them. Defendant never entered into possession of the premises or paid any rent. At the first trial plaintiff was put in possession of the premises in question. This decision was later reversed and the case remanded. Defendant then moved that he be restored to the possession of the premises. Plaintiff in the meantime had leased the premises to a third party, before the reversal and opposed the motion. The trial court denied the motion and defendant appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded with directions to sustain the motion. The Court stated that the existence of the partnership and the nonexistence of the lease when the action for unlawful detainer was brought constituted a defense to that action (48 Cal. 639, 642) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.74

§ 236.74 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Landlord's Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE THAT THE LANDLORD IS IN VIOLATION OF LOCAL RENT CONTROL LEGISLATION IS PROPER.

Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation by Landlord Is Proper Defense. A defense that the landlord is in violation of municipal rent control legislation is proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding (Birkenfeld v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 129, 149, 130 Cal. Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001 ; Nourafchan v. Miner (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 746, 751-752, 215 Cal. Rptr. 450).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging the plaintiff's violation of municipal rent control legislation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should show that the tenant lives in a rent controlled building.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and an opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions . Rent control in particular is covered in California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 335, Landlord and Tenant: Rent Control .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer). Additional rent control related points and authorities, including those addressing the constitutionality of rent control, can be found in Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation by Landlord Is Proper Defense

Birkenfeld v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 129, 130 Cal. Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001 , was a class action brought by plaintiff landlords challenging an initiative amendment to the city charter providing for residential rent control. The trial court declared the amendment void and enjoined the city from enforcing it. Defendant appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The challenged initiative amendment would impose two kinds of restraint on eviction proceedings: (1) a limitation of the grounds on which a landlord may bring an action to repossess a rent-controlled unit, and (2) a requirement that a landlord obtain a certificate of eviction from the rent-control board before seeking such repossession (17 Cal. 3d 129, 147) . The Court found that the certificate requirement was invalid as preempted by state law (17 Cal. 3d 129, 150-151) . However, it found that the other requirement was valid. Cal. Const., Art. XI, § 7, confers on all cities and counties the power to make and enforce within their limits all local, police, sanitary, and other ordinances and regulations not in conflict with general laws (17 Cal. 3d 129, 140) . The purpose of the state unlawful detainer statutes is procedural; the local amendment's limitation of particular grounds for eviction is a limitation on the landlord's property rights under the police power, giving rise to a substantive ground of defense in unlawful detainer proceedings. A landlord's violations of a city's housing code may be the basis for the defense of breach of warranty in a summary proceeding instituted by the landlord to recover possession for nonpayment of rent. Similarly, the statutory remedies for recovery of possession and of unpaid rent (Civ. Code §§ 1951-1952.3; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1159-1179a) do not preclude a defense based on municipal rent control legislation enacted pursuant to the police power imposing rent ceilings and limiting the grounds for eviction for the purpose of enforcing those rent ceilings (17 Cal. 3d 129, 149) .

In Nourafchan v. Miner (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 746, 215 Cal. Rptr. 450 , plaintiff brought an unlawful detainer proceeding against defendant for failure to pay rent after service of a three-day notice to pay or quit. The trial court entered judgment in plaintiff's favor, and defendant was evicted.

The court of appeal reversed. Defendant challenged the validity of the three-day notice on the ground that plaintiff violated local rent control law by failing to roll back the rent to the base rent, thereby charging an excessive rent. The court said that Civ. Code §§ 1951-1952.3 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1159-1179a, the statutory remedies for recovery of possession and of unpaid rent, do not preclude a defense based on municipal rent control legislation enacted pursuant to the police power imposing rent ceilings and limiting the grounds for eviction for the purpose of enforcing those rent ceilings (169 Cal. App. 3d 746, 751) . The court concluded that defendant could raise a violation of the city's rent control law as a defense in an unlawful detainer proceeding for failure to pay rent (169 Cal. App. 3d 746, 752) . Although it did not condone defendant's failure to pay rent on time, due to plaintiff's failure to comply with local rent control law, the court said that plaintiff was not entitled to recover possession on the basis of the three-day notice to quit or pay. The court noted that a notice to pay rent or quit that overstates the rent due is ineffective and will not support an action for unlawful detainer (169 Cal. App. 3d 746, 753) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Violation of Local Rent Control Legislation by Landlord Is Proper Defense

In Gross v. Superior Court (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 217 Cal. Rptr. 284 , plaintiff purchased a condominium at a trustee's sale conducted pursuant to a power of sale contained in the deed of trust, and later brought an unlawful detainer proceeding against the existing tenant defendants for restitution of the premises. Defendants claimed that none of the grounds to evict under the local rent stabilization ordinance existed. The trial court found in plaintiff's favor, concluding that the rent stabilization ordinance was preempted by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a, which allows eviction by an unlawful detainer proceeding when the property has been sold through foreclosure or when the property has been sold under a power of sale contained in a deed of trust. Defendants filed a petition for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its judgment (171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 276) . The court said that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a was to make clear that one acquiring ownership through foreclosure could evict by a summary procedure (171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 271) . Citing Birkenfeld v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 129, 130 Cal. Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001 , as precedent for Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 not preempting a defense to an unlawful detainer proceeding on rent control legislation, the court found that it followed that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a also does not preempt a defense (171 Cal. App. 3d 265, 270-271) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 236 UNLAWFUL DETAINER
PART II. FORMS
PART C. Affirmative Defenses

23-236 California Points & Authorities § 236.75

§ 236.75 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]--Affirmative Defense of Invalid Title in Action Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 236.60[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO STRIKE IRRELEVANT MATTER SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE OF PLAINTIFF'S INVALID TITLE IS PROPER IN AN UNLAWFUL DETAINER PROCEEDING UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1161a.

A. Defense of Invalid Title Is Proper to Extent Provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a. Defenses that the property has not been duly sold or title duly perfected may be raised in an unlawful detainer proceeding under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a (Vella v. Hudgins (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 251, 255, 142 Cal. Rptr. 414, 572 P.2d 28 ; Kessler v. Bridge (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837, 841 , 327 P.2d 241).

[Optional] B. Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3). Defenses challenging the legality of the note, deed of trust, and the sale are proper in an unlawful detainer action under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3) (Seidell v. Anglo-California Trust Co. (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 913, 922, 132 P.2d 12).

[Optional] C. Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4). Defenses alleging that property has not been duly sold and title duly perfected are proper in an unlawful detainer proceeding under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4) (Kessler v. Bridge (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837, 841 , 327 P.2d 241).

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____

[name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities oppose a motion to strike irrelevant matter from an answer in an unlawful detainer proceeding when the matter sought to be stricken is an affirmative defense alleging plaintiff's defective title under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(4) and the action is brought under that section.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should provide facts showing that the landlord's title to the property is in dispute.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a general discussion of the motion to strike and opposing party's procedural guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms pertaining to unlawful detainer proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities, see in this set Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (opposing motion to strike irrelevant, redundant, or immaterial matter from answer).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in [1], above, may be used in opposition to a motion to strike irrelevant matter supported by the points and authorities in § 236.23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Invalid Title Is Proper to Extent Provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a

In Vella v. Hudgins (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 251, 142 Cal. Rptr. 414, 572 P.2d 28 , plaintiff brought an action to set aside a trustee's sale, alleging that defendant, holder of a note secured by a second deed of trust on her residence, fraudulently induced her to default on the note. Defendant served plaintiff with a three-day notice to quit the premises and initiated an unlawful detainer proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a. In the unlawful detainer proceeding plaintiff in the fraud action asserted as an affirmative defense the same allegations of fraud that formed the basis of the other pending action. The trial court rendered judgment for defendant and ordered plaintiff evicted. In the fraud action, defendant unsuccessfully urged the earlier unlawful detainer judgment as a bar to the fraud action. The trial court found in plaintiff's favor. The court of appeal reversed, holding that plaintiff's fraud claim had been conclusively adjudicated in the prior unlawful detainer proceedings.

The Supreme Court held that the unlawful detainer judgment was not res judicata, and transferred the case to the court of appeal for consideration of the remaining issues (20 Cal. 3d 251, 254) . The Court said that a qualified exception to the rule that title cannot be tried in unlawful detainer is contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a, which extends the summary eviction remedy beyond the conventional landlord-tenant relationship to include certain purchasers of property such as defendant. Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a provides for a narrow and sharply focused examination of title. To establish that he or she is a proper plaintiff, one who has purchased property at a trustee's sale and seeks to evict the occupant in possession must show that he or she acquired the property at a regularly conducted sale and thereafter duly perfected his or her title. To this limited extent, title may be litigated in such a proceeding (20 Cal. 3d 251, 255) .

Kessler v. Bridge (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837 , 327 P.2d 241 , was an action based on former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(4)) to remove the vendor from certain premises and for damages for withholding possession. The trial court refused to consider the defendant's defenses and judgment was entered for the plaintiff. The defendant had alleged defenses of (1) fraud in the inducement for the relinquishment of the property, (2) delivery of the deed to plaintiff in violation of the terms and conditions of the escrow, (3) unauthorized unilateral change in escrow instructions by plaintiff to effect the delivery of the deed, (4) failure of consideration, (5) cancellation of the escrow and hence withdrawal of the defendant's consent to the transfer before it was made, and (6) rescission of the transaction, effected before the institution of the proceeding.

The appellate department held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a such defenses were proper and reversed the judgment. The court noted that in the case of the landlord-tenant relationship title will not be litigated in an unlawful detainer proceeding. But underlying that doctrine is the principle that a tenant is estopped to deny the title of his or her landlord. However, even then it is permissible to litigate title in connection with the questioned existence of the landlord-tenant relationship. Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a applies to situations when there is no landlord-tenant relationship (161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837, 839) . A court in an unlawful detainer action under that section can determine if the statutory requirements have been met (161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837, 841) .

[b] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3)

Seidell v. Anglo-California Trust Co. (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 913, 132 P.2d 12 , was an action to set aside a trustees' deed to property for alleged fraud and irregularities in the foreclosure proceedings on a trust deed which was executed to secure a debt. Two former judgments were pleaded as res judicata. The court rendered judgment against plaintiffs, holding that one of the former judgments was res judicata of the issues of the suit and, therefore, was a bar to the action. On appeal, the only question was whether the judgment which was rendered in a former suit of unlawful detainer under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(3)) was res judicata of the issues involved in the case. In the unlawful detainer proceeding, plaintiffs filed an amended answer that alleged in detail irregularities in the foreclosure proceedings and sale of property under the deed of trust and the illegality of the trustees' deed. That action was determined on its merits adversely to the plaintiffs. In the instant action they contended that the judgment in the unlawful detainer proceeding was not res judicata of these issues because the action was merely possessory in its nature and could not determine alleged defects of title.

The court of appeal held that the doctrine of res judicata was applicable to the case (55 Cal. App. 2d 913, 918) . Title may be determined in an unlawful detainer case under Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a to the limited extent provided by that statute. The extent to which title is involved under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(3)) requires a showing that the property has been duly sold in accordance with Civ. Code § 2924 and that the title under the sale has been duly perfected. A defendant may challenge the regularity of the statutory proceeding on sale of land under a deed of trust in a proceeding under that section. The defendants alleged violations of the statute in failing to give the notice of sale required by Civ. Code § 2924, lack of consideration for the note secured by the trust deed, and other asserted defects going to the validity of the trust deed and to the proceedings on the sale of that property under the provisions of the deed. All those issues of law affecting the legality of the note, deed of trust, and sale were properly determined against the defendants in the unlawful detainer suit (55 Cal. App. 2d 913, 922) .

[c] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4)

The background of Kessler v. Bridge (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837 , 327 P.2d 241 , is discussed under [a], above. The appellate department noted that there was a bona fide dispute as to whether the property had been duly sold and title duly perfected. Title is duly perfected when all steps have been taken to make it perfect, i.e., to convey to the purchaser that which he or she has purchased, valid and good beyond all reasonable doubt. This includes good record title but is not limited to it. If there is lack of performance or of true consent the title cannot be said to be perfected. The court in an unlawful detainer proceeding under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(4)) has jurisdiction to determine the validity of such defenses (161 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 837, 841) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(3)

Kartheiser v. Superior Court (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 617, 345 P.2d 135 , involved a proceeding in mandamus to compel the superior court to vacate an order continuing for 90 days the trial of an unlawful detainer proceeding. The court of appeal granted the writ. In dictum the court noted that the general rule that title cannot be tried in an unlawful detainer proceeding is not applicable when the validity of a trustee's sale is attacked. An action for unlawful detainer under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(3)) requires proof that the property was duly sold in accordance with Civ. Code § 2924 and that the title under the sale has been duly perfected. Under this statute, title not only may, but must be tried if the provisions extending the remedy beyond the cases where the relation of landlord and tenants exists are not to be judicially nullified (174 Cal. App. 2d 617, 620) .

Old National Financial Services, Inc. v. Seibert (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 460, 239 Cal. Rptr. 728 , was a proceeding in unlawful detainer brought by the purchaser of real property at a trustee's sale under a deed of trust against the former owner. Although affirming a judgment for plaintiff for restitution and possession of the property, the court of appeal said that Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a makes the summary remedy of unlawful detainer available against persons holding over after the property has been sold under a power of sale in a trust deed (Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(3)), and that under this provision, the remedy is afforded when the property has been sold in accordance with Civ. Code § 2924 and the title under the sale has been duly perfected (194 Cal. App. 3d 460, 464) . The court explained that as a general rule, only claims bearing directly on the right to possession are involved in unlawful detainer proceedings, but that when title is acquired through proceedings described in Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a, courts must make a limited inquiry into the basis of the plaintiff's title (194 Cal. App. 3d 460, 465) . The court said that the plaintiff need only prove a sale in compliance with the statute and deed of trust, followed by purchase at the sale, and the defendant may raise objections only on that phase of the issue of title (194 Cal. App. 3d 460, 465) . The court added that matters affecting the validity of the trust deed or primary obligation itself, or other basic defects in the plaintiff's title, are neither properly raised in the summary proceeding for possession, nor concluded by the judgment, and that further, the pendency of another action concerning title is immaterial to the resolution of an unlawful detainer proceeding (194 Cal. App. 3d 460, 465) .

[b] Defenses Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1161a(b)(4)

Kelliher v. Kelliher (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 226, 225 P.2d 554 , involved an unlawful detainer proceeding. The trial court granted summary judgment for plaintiff. Defendant had conveyed her interest in the premises to a third party for the sole purpose of enabling him to borrow funds by mortgaging the premises. He allegedly agreed to reconvey the property immediately after the execution of the mortgage but he breached the agreement by conveying the property to plaintiff who had notice of the agreement and gave no consideration for it.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that summary judgment was improper because the affidavits of plaintiff were insufficient. The affidavits failed to make an averment of fact relative to a sale of the premises by defendant as alleged in his complaint. Since the action was instituted under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a(b)(4)), the affidavits must show that the property has been duly sold by the person sought to be removed or by a person under whom the defendant claims (101 Cal. App. 2d 226, 231) . The court noted that while the broad question of title cannot be raised in an unlawful detainer proceeding, to the extent required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1161a plaintiff must establish a sale of the property and a title perfected under the sale before recovery can be allowed (101 Cal. App. 2d 226, 232) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
Chapter 237 RESERVED

23-237 California Points & Authorities Chapter 237

RESERVED

Chapter 237RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE

23-238 California Points & Authorities 238.syn

§ 238.syn Synopsis to Chapter 238: VENUE

§ 238.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 238.02 Governing Law

§ 238.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 238.04 Nature of Venue Requirement

§ 238.05 Description of Actions as "Local" or "Transitory"

[1] Use of Terms in Determining Proper Court

[2] Local Actions

[3] Transitory Actions

[4] Mixed Actions

§ 238.06 "Main Relief" Rule

§ 238.07 Transfer When Court Lacks Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

§ 238.08 Grounds for Change of Venue

§ 238.09 Effect of Pleadings on Motion for Change of Venue

§ 238.10 Payment of Reasonable Expenses and Attorney's Fees

§ 238.11 Actions Involving Installment or Automotive Sales, Consumer Obligations, and Unlawful Detainer

[1] Statement of Facts Relating to Venue

[2] Manner of Raising Objection to Venue

§ 238.12 Counter Motion to Retain Venue to Promote Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice

[1] Authority

[2] Grounds for Counter Motion

§ 238.13 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 238.14 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 238.15-238.29 [Reserved]

§ 238.30 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Supporting Affidavits

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence

[b] Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment

[c] Venue When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment

[b] Venue When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

§ 238.31 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Shows That Action Is Essentially Transitory and Any Local Issue Is Incidental

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue of Action as Local or Transitory

[b] Venue When Action Is Essentially Transitory

[c] Reformation of Real Property Agreement

[d] Specific Performance of Reformed Real Property Agreement

[e] Equitable Action to Set Aside Judgment Obtained by Fraud or Mistake

[f] Attack on Judgment in County Other Than Where Rendered

[g] Action for Damages for Trespass

[h] Vendor's Action for Breach of Real Property Sale Contract

[i] Action for Damages for Fraud With Incidental Real Property Rights Involved

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Action Is Essentially Transitory

§ 238.32 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Transitory and Local Actions Have Been Joined in Single Complaint

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Exceptions Under Code Civ. Proc. § 395

[c] Situations Assumed for Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Change of Venue on Any Joined Cause of Action

[b] Joined Local and Transitory Causes of Action Regarded as Transitory for Determination of Venue

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joined Local and Transitory Actions Regarded as Transitory for Determination of Venue

§ 238.33 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Joins Transitory Actions One of Which Entitles Defendant to Trial in County of His/Her Residence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Transitory Actions Are Joined

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Transitory Actions Are Joined

§§ 238.34-238.49 [Reserved]

§ 238.50 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Local Cause of Action Arises--Proper County for Action Relating to Real Property Is in County Where Property Is Located [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint

[b] Construction Defects

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint

§ 238.51 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Local Cause of Action Arises--Main Relief Sought Is Local and Transitory Relief Is Only Incidental

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

§ 238.52 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Neutral County When Nonresident Defendant Is Sued by Local Public Entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transfer to Neutral County

[b] Defendant Corporation Reasonably Viewed as Outsider

[c] Assignment of Disinterested Judge From Neutral County

[d] Contractual Provisions Waiving The Right to Transfer to a Neutral County are Void

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer to Neutral County

§ 238.53 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)] to Court Having Jurisdiction of Estate Represented by Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Conservator, or Trustee Sued in His/Her Official Capacity [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 238.54 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Action Against Unincorporated Association [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

§ 238.55 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Injury Occurred--Action Against State [Gov. Code § 955.2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Change Venue

§§ 238.56-238.69 [Reserved]

§ 238.70 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Commenced in County of Residence of Moving Defendant's Codefendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Propriety of Chosen Venue

[b] Venue in County of Necessary and Proper Codefendant's Residence

[c] Joinder of Actions and Parties

[d] Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change

[e] Filing of Cross-Complaint

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Propriety of Chosen Venue

[b] Venue in County of Necessary and Proper Codefendant

[c] Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change

§ 238.71 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)--Resident Codefendant Properly Joined

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Faith Joinder of Defendant

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Good Faith Joinder of Codefendant

§ 238.72 Opposing Motion for change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)--Action Commenced in County Where Real Property Which Is Subject of Action Is Located [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

[b] Venue of Action for Slander of Title

[c] Action for Malicious Prosecution Resulting in Real Property Depreciation

[d] Action to Quiet Title and Cancel Instrument

[e] Action to Quiet Title to Real Property

[f] Action for Damages for Fraudulent Inducement to Dismiss Quiet Title Action

[g] Action for Consequential Injuries to Real Property

[h] Action Requiring Determination of Interest in Real Property

[i] Action for Damages for Physical Injury to Real Property

[j] Action for Damages to Growing Crops

[k] Action for Damages for Inverse Condemnation

[l] Action for Specific Performance by Vendee of Real Property

[m] Creditor's Action on Fraudulent Conveyance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action for Specific Performance by Vendee of Real Property

§ 238.73 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Tort Action Commenced in Proper County

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] "Injury to Person" and "Injury to Property" Defined

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Commenced in One of Two Proper Counties

[b] Local Entity as Cross Defendant

§ 238.74 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Venue of Contract Actions

[i] Application of General Rule of Venue

[ii] Venue Under Statutory Exceptions

[iii] Burden on Defendant

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

§ 238.75 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Consumer Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Additional Authorities

§ 238.76 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Arising From Transaction Consummated as Proximate Result of Unsolicited Telephone Call by Seller or Telephone Call or Electronic Transmission in Response to Solicitation [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 238.77 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Installment Contract or Installment Account or Automobile Sales Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

§ 238.78 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Contract Action Against Corporation and Individual Defendant Sued on Alter Ego Theory Commenced in Proper County

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue Proper Where Action Could Be Laid Against Either Individual or Corporate Defendant

§ 238.79 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Neutral County When Nonresident Defendant Is Sued by Local Public Entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 394] Action Not Brought By Public Entity Within Meaning of

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Code of Civil Procedure Section 394 Inapplicable When Action Is Not "Brought By" Public Entity Within Meaning of Section

§ 238.80 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--Action Involving Statutory Duty.

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actions Involving Statutory Duty

§§ 238.81-238.99 [Reserved]

§ 238.100 Supporting Counter Motion for Retention in County Where Action Commenced When Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice Will Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uncontradicted Counter Motion

§§ 238.101-238.119 [Reserved]

§ 238.120 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue of County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced--Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(b), 398]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Widespread Prejudice Against Moving Party

[b] Motion by One Codefendant

[c] Change of Venue Not Prohibited by Mandatory Removal Statute for Local Governmental Entity Cases

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Widespread Prejudice Against Moving Party

§ 238.121 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Court in County Other Than County Where Suit Was Commenced on Ground That Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had Therein [Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b)]--Fact That Such Trial Unavailable Cannot Be Clearly Established

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Establishing Unavailability of Fair and Impartial Trial

[b] Defendant's Right to Trial in County of Residence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Establishing Unavailability of Fair and Impartial Trial

§§ 238.122-238.139 [Reserved]

§ 238.140 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced-- Convenience of Witnesses and Ends of Justice Would Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(c), 398]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Competence of Witnesses

[b] Convenience of Witnesses

[c] Determination as to Ends of Justice

[d] Convenience of Party

[e] Convenience of Employees of Parties

[f] Convenience of Expert Witnesses

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Convenience of Witnesses

[b] Convenience of Employees Of Parties

[c] Determination as to Ends of Justice

§ 238.141 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced on Ground That Convenience of Witnesses and Ends of Justice Would Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(c), 398]--Moving Party Must Show Both Conditions Met

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Showing of Convenience and Justice

[b] Competence of Witnesses

[c] Showing by Moving Party

[d] Inconvenience to Nonmoving Party's Witnesses

[e] Convenience of Parties

[f] Convenience of Employees and Experts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Showing of Convenience and Justice

[b] Convenience of Parties

[c] Convenience of Employees and Experts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.01

§ 238.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use in supporting or opposing motions for change of venue in civil actions. These memoranda are organized in separate parts corresponding to the basic grounds for change of venue.

Subpart A of Part I contains memoranda supporting [see §§ 238.30 -238.33] and opposing [see §§ 238.70 -238.80] motions for change of venue to the county of the defendant's residence and supporting [see §§ 238.50 -238.55] motions for change of venue to the court where a local cause of action should be tried. It also includes a memorandum supporting a counter motion for retention of the cause of action in the county where the action was commenced when the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice will be promoted thereby [see § 238.100].

Subpart B of Part I includes memoranda supporting [see § 238.120] and opposing [see § 238.121] a motion for change of venue for impartial trial.

Subpart C of Part I contains memoranda supporting [see § 238.140] and opposing [see § 238.141] a motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted.

For memoranda supporting and opposing motions for change of venue in actions for or concerning accounting or corporations, see Ch. 12, Accounting , and Ch. 52, Corporations .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueCorporationsCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of Witnesses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.02

§ 238.02 Governing Law

The place of trial of civil actions in general is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-403. Provisions for the coordination of civil actions involving common questions of law or fact are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 404-404.8.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.03

§ 238.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. The page limit does not include exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, or the proof of service [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.01[4].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.04

§ 238.04 Nature of Venue Requirement

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a) the court may, on motion, change the place of trial when the court designated in the complaint is not the proper court. Historically, the term "place of trial" has been used synonymously with the term "venue" to denote the geographical location and political subdivision within which is situated the courthouse which will hear the cause [Milliken v. Gray (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 595, 600, 81 Cal. Rptr. 525] .

Except in a few cases in which the California Constitution makes the place of trial jurisdictional or a statute makes a local place of trial part of the grant of subject-matter jurisdiction, venue is not jurisdictional [Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 121, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 ; Newman v. Sonoma County (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 625, 627, 15 Cal. Rptr. 914, 364 P.2d 850] . Rather than having to do with the particular county or territorial area within the state or a political subdivision thereof in which the cause of prosecution must be brought or tried [see Milliken v. Gray (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 595, 600, 81 Cal. Rptr. 525 ; Arganbright v. Good (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 877, 878 , 116 P.2d 186] , jurisdiction refers to the power of the court to hear and determine the case before it [see Mueller v. Elba Oil Co. (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 188, 206, 130 P.2d 961 ; People v. Brown (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 169, 175, 88 Cal. Rptr. 801] .

However, venue is jurisdictional if it is a matter of absolute right. Thus, where a change of venue is a matter of absolute right, the denial of such change is an act in excess of the jurisdiction of the court [Brock v. Superior Court (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 629, 637, 177 P.2d 273 (holding that prohibition is not available to review an order denying a change of venue where venue was not absolute right)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.05

§ 238.05 Description of Actions as "Local" or "Transitory"

[1] Use of Terms in Determining Proper Court

For the purposes of venue, an action is described as being "local," "transitory," or "mixed." The courts frequently use the words "personal" or "in personam" to mean "transitory." However, such terms would appear to be more appropriately applied to the issue of personal jurisdiction over a defendant as contrasted to an action in rem which results in no personal judgment. Since a "personal" action nevertheless may be a "local" action, the words "personal" and "in personam" are avoided in this chapter except in the discussions of the cases.

[2] Local Actions

Generally speaking, a local action is one that must be tried in a certain county regardless of the residence of the defendant. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392, 393, and 394 deal with certain actions that are considered local rather than transitory. Code Civ. Proc. § 392 deals with actions affecting realty, Code Civ. Proc. § 393 deals with actions for statutory penalties and suits against public officials, and Code Civ. Proc. § 394 with actions against counties and cities. Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1 involves actions on claims for money or personal property against certain persons sued in a representative capacity, which are properly tried in the county having jurisdiction of the estate represented by that person [see Haines v. Lamb (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324-326, 24 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

[3] Transitory Actions

The term "transitory" is applied to all other actions. Transitory actions must be tried in the county of defendant's residence, subject, of course, to change of venue on statutory grounds [Code Civ. Proc. § 397]. These are the situations "except as otherwise provided by law" as stated in Code Civ. Proc. § 395, which, however, sets forth some exceptions, both by way of limitation (child support obligation) and by way of increasing the number of counties in which venue may in the actions specified be laid. With respect to actions against associations and corporations, venue of transitory actions is controlled by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2 and 395.5.

[4] Mixed Actions

Mixed actions are those involving a joinder of either local and transitory actions or transitory actions requiring trial in different counties [see Channell v. Superior Court (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 246, 248-249, 38 Cal. Rptr. 13 ; see also Georgetown Divide Public Util. Dist. v. Bacchi (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 194, 200, 22 Cal. Rptr. 27] . A mixed action has also been described as one in which the plaintiff has alleged two or more causes of action, each of which is governed by a different venue statute, or, two or more defendants are named who are subject to different venue standards [Gallin v. Superior Court (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 541, 544, 281 Cal. Rptr. 304] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueIndividual Defendants

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.06

§ 238.06 "Main Relief" Rule

Since the Legislature has classified cases for venue purposes according to the kind of relief sought, an additional problem arises when a pleader with a single cause of action asks for various forms of relief. In order to classify the action, it is necessary to look for the principal object of the action and of the main relief to which plaintiff would be entitled if he or she obtained a default judgment on his or her complaint [Haines v. Lamb (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 322, 326, 24 Cal. Rptr. 146] . This is known as the "main relief" rule. If the main relief sought is transitory and the local issue is only incidental, the action for purposes of venue will be classed as transitory [Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 606, 328 P.2d 953] ; conversely, if the main relief sought is local and the transitory issue is only incidental, the action will be classed as a local action [Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 471-473, 89 P. 120] .

The facts precipitating a plaintiff's right to recover will determine the statement of one or several causes of action [Hammon v. American Exploration & Mining Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 308-309, 21 Cal. Rptr. 409] , and when there is only one cause of action and different forms of relief are sought, the main relief rule determines the form of action for the purpose of venue [Dreher v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 695, 697, 307 P.2d 407] . For example, in an action to recover damages for injuries to real property and growing crops, where the complaints are framed in various counts according to theories of negligent injury, negligent breach of contract, and breach of warranty, the addition of breach of warranty counts does not transform the suit into local-transitory--that is, mixed, actions triable at the dealer's residence. Because the subject matter of the action determines whether or not venue is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392, and the injury to the real property (growing crops) in such an action is the subject matter of the action, although the injury may have been caused by breach of warranty, the breach of warranty counts do not present a transitory cause of action [Stauffer Chem. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueIndividual Defendants

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.07

§ 238.07 Transfer When Court Lacks Subject-Matter Jurisdiction

Code Civ. Proc. § 396 provides that an if the superior court lacks jurisdiction of an appeal or petition, and a court of appeal or the Supreme Court would have jurisdiction, the appeal or petition shall be transferred to the court having jurisdiction upon terms as to costs or otherwise as may be just, and proceeded with as if regularly filed in the court having jurisdiction. Code Civ. Proc. § 396 thus reaches only the question of jurisdiction and is unrelated to venue [Apartments, Inc. v. Trott (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 7, 13, 342 P.2d 32] . For a discussion of the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 396 and a motion to transfer under Code Civ. Proc. § 396, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.3, part of the Elder Abuse Act, allows the probate court to determine that a matter should be determined in another department of the court. Nothing in the language of section 15657.3 indicates that an elder abuse complaint should be treated differently than the transfer of a civil case from a general jurisdiction department to a limited jurisdiction department within the court. Requiring a party to refile a case in the same courthouse, with possible statute of limitations issues, and additional costs to the party, is inconsistent with the legislative attempt to protect elderly Californians [Conservatorship of Kayle (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 671] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.08

§ 238.08 Grounds for Change of Venue

The court may, on motion, change the place of trial in the following cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 397]:

1. When the court designated in the complaint is not the proper court;

2. When there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had therein [see, e.g., Riverside County Flood Control & Water Conservation Dist. v. Joseph W. Wolfskill Co. (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 714, 715-717, 306 P.2d 22 (motion denied)];

3. When the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change;

4. When from any cause there is no judge of the court qualified to act; and

5. When a proceeding for dissolution of marriage has been filed in the county in which the petitioner has been a resident for three months next preceding the commencement of the proceeding, and the respondent at the time of the commencement of the proceeding is a resident of another county in this state, to the county of the respondent's residence when the ends of justice would be promoted by the change. If a motion to change the place of trial is made pursuant to this paragraph, the court may, prior to the determination of such motion, consider and determine motions for allowance of temporary support of the other party and of any children of the marriage, temporary restraining orders, attorney's fees, and costs, and make all necessary and proper orders in connection therewith.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of PartiesCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of WitnessesFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProcedures

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.09

§ 238.09 Effect of Pleadings on Motion for Change of Venue

The motion for change of venue is heard on affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) and verified pleadings, with a verified complaint being treated as plaintiff's counter affidavit insofar as it contradicts the affidavit of the moving party. If the complaint is not verified and the defendant's affidavit adequately controverts the allegations showing that the county in which the action is pending is proper and avers facts which would make the action triable in another county, the court must, in the absence of a sufficient counter affidavit, grant the motion. An unverified complaint cannot be treated as a counter affidavit. But when the defendant's affidavit does not deny or otherwise meet the essential allegations in the complaint as they relate to venue, it is an insufficient affidavit on which to grant a motion for change of venue, and the complaint will determine venue even though unverified [Quick v. Corsaro (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 831, 835-836, 4 Cal. Rptr. 674 ; see Mission Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 929 n.7, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075 ; Hollopeter v. Rogers (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 814, 817, 19 Cal. Rptr. 25] .

The question of the nature of the action must be determined at the time of the hearing of a motion for a change of venue from allegations of the complaint which was on file at the time the motion was made and from the nature of a default judgment which might be rendered thereon, assuming the truth of the allegation and, hence, an amended complaint filed after the motion is made cannot be considered by the court [Johnson v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 212, 215, 42 Cal. Rptr. 645] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.10

§ 238.10 Payment of Reasonable Expenses and Attorney's Fees

In its discretion, the court may order payment to the prevailing party of reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred in making or resisting the motion for change of venue whether or not such party is otherwise entitled to recover his or her costs of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]. These sanctions cannot be imposed except on notice contained in a party's papers, or on the court's own noticed motion, and after the opportunity to be heard [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]. In determining whether to make the order, the court must consider [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]:

(1) whether an offer to stipulate to a change of venue was reasonably made and rejected; and

(2) whether the motion or selection of venue was made in good faith given the facts and the law the party making the motion or selecting the venue knew or should have known.

As between the party and his or her attorney, the expenses and fees are the personal liability of the attorney not chargeable to the party [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudicial OfficersJudgesDiscretionCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.11

§ 238.11 Actions Involving Installment or Automotive Sales, Consumer Obligations, and Unlawful Detainer

[1] Statement of Facts Relating to Venue

In a number actions or proceedings arising out of certain consumer-related transactions, the plaintiff must state certain facts relating to venue in the complaint, verified by the oath of the plaintiff or of his or her attorney [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a]. The actions or proceedings subject to this requirement are:

- Those subject to the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) [see Civ. Code § 1812.10; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

- Those subject to the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) [see Civ. Code § 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

- Those that are limited civil cases subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), which concerns actions arising from:

  - An offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use.

  - A transaction consummated as a proximate result of an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller.

- Actions or proceedings for unlawful detainer as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 1161 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

In these cases, the facts alleged must show that the action has been commenced in the proper court for the trial of the action or proceeding, and that the action is subject to the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 and 2984.4, or of Code

Civ. Proc. § 395(b), or is an action for an unlawful detainer [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a]. In cases subject to Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 or 2984.4, the facts may not be stated on information or belief [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c)].

In lieu of stating the facts in a verified complaint, the plaintiff or his or her attorney may state the facts in an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) filed with the complaint. A copy of the affidavit or declaration must be served with the summons. If the complaint or affidavit is not so filed, no further proceedings may be had in the action or proceeding, except to dismiss the same without prejudice. The court may, however, on such terms as may be just, permit the affidavit to be filed subsequent to the filing of the complaint. In that case, a copy of the affidavit must be served on the defendant, and the time to answer or otherwise plead will date from the service [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10(c), 2984.4(c); Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

The purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 396a is to protect defendants in actions involving relatively small monetary claims from the inequitable harassment that may ensue when the action is filed in a distant county. Defendants in such cases are often financially unable to expend the money to travel to a distant forum, or to hire an attorney to do so, even for the purpose of moving simply for a change of venue. Without the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 396a, a plaintiff, aware of the practical limitations, could exploit the situation by filing all such actions in distant counties where a defendant could not afford either to defend or to move for a change of venue, and could thereby unfairly obtain default judgments or favorable settlements in such actions. To eliminate such abuse, Code Civ. Proc. § 396a requires the plaintiff to reveal facts demonstrating where the action should be tried, and then places upon the trial court the initial responsibility for protecting an absent defendant's interest [Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 117-118, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817] . When the requirements of the statute are not met by the plaintiff, the trial court must on its own motion dismiss the action. The venue objection under the statute is not waived by the defendant's failure to move for a change of venue and, if the trial court erroneously enters a default judgment against him or her, he or she can move to set aside the default and the default judgment on the ground that the court in which the action was brought was not the proper court for trial of the action and plaintiff did not comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 396a [Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 116-118, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817] .

[2] Manner of Raising Objection to Venue

When an action is brought against a defendant in a distant municipal or justice court in violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 396a, all the defendant should do to protect himself or herself is to assist the trial court in its statutory duty to dismiss the action by bringing the inadequacy of the complaint to the court's attention through an informal letter to the court or by other appropriate means [Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 118, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Antitrust & Trade LawConsumer ProtectionDeceptive Acts & PracticesState RegulationCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewContracts LawSecured TransactionsInstallment ContractsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawLandlord & TenantLandlord's Remedies & RightsEviction ActionsForcible Entry & DetainerTransportation LawPrivate VehiclesGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.12

§ 238.12 Counter Motion to Retain Venue to Promote Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice

[1] Authority

A motion for change of venue to the proper court under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a) can be opposed by the plaintiff, and the court may order retention of the cause in the county where it was commenced after an answer has been filed, if it appears either that the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice will thereby be promoted [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 396b does not require the plaintiff to move the court to retain the action by way of counter motion, the general common law practice [see Gordon v. Perkins (1928) 203 Cal. 183, 185, 263 P. 231 ; Sheffield v. Pickwick Stages (1923) 191 Cal. 9, 10-11, 214 P. 852] , which has been retained since the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 396b in 1933, is to oppose a motion for change of venue by a counter motion to retain the cause for convenience of witnesses [see Braunstein v. Superior Court (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 691, 697, 37 Cal. Rptr. 666] .

A cross-defendant is not entitled to seek a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b based on a compulsory cross-complaint. Rather, the cross-complaint is to be tried in the same county that has been established as the proper venue based on the original complaint [K.R.L. Partnership v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 490, 506, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517] .

[2] Grounds for Counter Motion

The statutory grounds for opposing a motion for change of venue and seeking retention of the cause are stated in the disjunctive. Thus, it would appear that a counter motion should be granted if either the convenience of witnesses or the ends of justice will be promoted thereby [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]. However, because the common law practice was generally to permit a court to retain an action, although commenced in an improper court, when the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by retention of the cause [see Gordon v. Perkins (1928) 203 Cal. 183, 185, 263 P. 231 ; Sheffield v. Pickwick Stages (1923) 191 Cal. 9, 10-11, 214 P. 852] , no court has specifically noted the disjunctive basis for opposing a motion for change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b and permitting a plaintiff to base his or her counter motion on the grounds that either the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice would be promoted by retention of the cause [see Maxwell v. Murray (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 440, 443-444, 11 Cal. Rptr. 916 (stating without discussion that plaintiff must show that both convenience of witnesses and ends of justice will be promoted by retention); but see Harris v. Cannon (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 748, 749, 109 P.2d 961 (permitting trial court to retain cause on grounds of convenience of witnesses without comment on grounds for counter motion)]. Nevertheless, in an action in which a counter motion for retention of the cause was made on the grounds of convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice, the court of appeal commented that the motion was apparently made under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c), which permits the court to change the place of trial when the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change [see Braunstein v. Superior Court (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 691, 697-698, 37 Cal. Rptr. 666] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferConvenience of WitnessesCivil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferInterests of Justice

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.13

§ 238.13 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms of motions for change of venue see Ch. 571, Venue in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

For discussions and forms for use in particular cases involving venue, see in that set the following chapters:

- Ch. 7, Accounting, Action for.
- Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts.
- Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners.
- Ch. 13, Adverse Possession.
- Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations.
- Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used.
- Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability.
- Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights.
- Ch. 36, Judicial Arbitration.
- Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs.
- Ch. 120, Class Actions.
- Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints.

- Ch. 140, Contracts.
- Ch. 160, Corporations.
- Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure.
- Ch. 308, Insurance.
- Ch. 397, Partition.
- Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueMotions to TransferGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsCross-ComplaintsReal Property LawAdjoining LandownersGeneral OverviewReal Property LawAdverse PossessionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.14

§ 238.14 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda that may be useful in particular cases involving change of venue may be found in the following chapters in this set:

- Ch. 12, Accounting.
- Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling.
- Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting.
- Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing.
- Ch. 22, Associations and Clubs.
- Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act.
- Ch. 35A, Civil Rights: Equal Protection.
- Ch. 45, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions.
- Ch. 50, Contracts.
- Ch. 52, Corporations.
- Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 158, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions.

- Ch. 183, Privacy: State Constitutional Rights.
- Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion Of Privacy.
- Ch. 185, Privacy: Collection, Dissemination, and Inspection of Information.
- Ch. 196, Public Entities.
- Ch. 206, Sales.
- Ch. 225, Trespass.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureVenueCorporationsConstitutional LawEqual ProtectionGeneral OverviewContracts LawGeneral OverviewReal Property LawTortsTrespass to Real Property

16 of 82 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.15-238.29

[Reserved]

§§ 238.15[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
1. Change to Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.30

§ 238.30 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Dept.: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE PROPER COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF AN ACTION IS IN THE COUNTY OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE WHEN THE COMPLAINT FAILS TO SHOW THE APPLICABILITY OF A STATUTORY EXCEPTION THAT WOULD REQUIRE TRIAL ELSEWHERE.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. The court may, on motion, change the place of trial when the court designated in the complaint is not the proper court (Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)).

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. The court must order the action transferred to the proper court when it appears at the hearing of the motion for change of venue that the action was not commenced in the proper court (Code Civ. Proc. § 396b).

C. Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence. Except as otherwise provided by law, the proper court for the trial of an action is the superior court in the county where the defendant resided when the action was commenced (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)).

D. Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment. The transitory or local character of an action will be determined for the allegations of the complaint or file at the time the motion for change of venue is made and from the nature of the judgment that might be rendered thereon (Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 607, 122 P.2d 557).

E. Venue When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception. A defendant is entitled to have an action tried in the county of his/her residence when the complaint does not show that the cause of action comes clearly within the terms of some exception to this rule (Brown v. Happy Valley Fruit Growers (1929) 206 Cal. 515, 521-522, 274 P. 977).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant in an action or proceeding that has been filed in a county other than that of the defendant's residence when the complaint does not show that the cause of action comes clearly within the terms of some exception to the general rule that the proper court for the trial of an action or proceeding is in the county of the defendant's residence at the time and the action or proceeding is commenced.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Supporting Affidavits

The burden of proof to justify a change of venue is on the moving party [Los Angeles v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 253, 260, 330 P.2d 888] . The affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) supporting the motion should state facts supporting the propriety of venue in another county and avoid stating conclusions without factual detail [Los Angeles v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 253, 260, 330 P.2d 888] .

When there are multiple defendants, the fact of residence may be prima facie established by the affidavit of one defendant alleging the residence of others on information and belief [see Brown v. Happy Valley Fruit Growers (1929) 206 Cal. 515, 519-520, 274 P. 977] . It may be more prudent, however, to have each defendant make an affidavit or declaration.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence

The statutory exceptions to the general rule set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) include cases in which the action or proceeding:

(1) Relates to real property [Code Civ. Proc. § 392];

(2) Is for the recovery of statutory penalties or is against public officers [Code Civ. Proc. § 393];

(3) Relates to actions by or against counties or cities [Code Civ. Proc. § 394];

(4) Involves a suit against an executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, or trustee on a claim for the payment of money or for the recovery of personal property, except as otherwise provided in Prob. Code § 17005 (pertaining to trustees) [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1; see Prob. Code § 17005 (proceeding under the Trust Law, Prob. Code § 15000 et seq., generally); see also Prob. Code § 82 (definition of trust); Prob. Code §§ 17300-17302 (testamentary trust subject to continuing court jurisdiction)];

(5) Is against an unincorporated association [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2]; or

(6) Is against a corporation or an association [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

In addition, the law provides for a choice between the county of the defendant's residence and another county when none of the defendants reside in the state, or, if they do, the county of residence is unknown to the plaintiff, or the defendant is about to depart from the state, or the action or proceeding is: for injury to person or property or wrongful death; for dissolution of marriage; for determination of parental relation or support of children; to establish and enforce a foreign judgment for child support; or on contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), (b); Fam. Code § 7620(b)].

For further discussion of the general rule and the exceptions to it, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Venue.

[b] Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment

In Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , which was an action for an accounting, a declaration of trust of certain mining property, and other relief and was primarily based on allegations of fraud and misrepresentation, suit was filed in the county where some of the defendants resided. Other defendants sought to have the trial removed to the county in which the real property involved was situated. In affirming the denial of the motion to change venue, the Supreme Court stated that the question of the transitory or local character of the causes of action stated in the complaint must be determined from the allegations of the complaint of file at the time the motion was made and from the nature of the judgment which might be rendered thereon assuming the truth of the allegations.

[c] Venue When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

Brown v. Happy Valley Fruit Growers (1929) 206 Cal. 515, 274 P. 977 , was an action attacking on the ground of fraud a judgment previously rendered by an Alameda County court. The suit was filed in Shasta County, where the Alameda judgment had been executed against land owned by one of the defendants. On appeal, the order of the Superior Court of Shasta County denying motions for a change of venue was reversed by the Supreme Court.

In its decision the Supreme Court noted that fraud and collusion constituted the crux of the action and held that portion of the complaint which sought to enjoin the defendants from asserting any interest in the real property executed upon under the Alameda judgment to be surplusage; the action was termed personal and transitory.

The Supreme Court ruled that a plaintiff cannot unite local and personal actions so as to compel the defendants to have both matters tried in county other than that in which the defendants reside. The right of a defendant to have an action brought against him tried in the county in which he has his residence is an ancient and valuable right, which has always been safeguarded by statute and is supported by a long line of judicial decisions. The right of a plaintiff to have an action tried in a county other than that in which the defendant has his residence is exceptional, and, if the plaintiff would claim such right, he must bring himself within the terms of the exception.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment

In Kaluzok v. Brisson (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 760, 167 P.2d 481 , an action for damages for deceit in the purchase and sale of certain real property, suit was filed where the land was located and the defendants moved for change of venue to the county of their residence. The trial court denied change of venue. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's order. The Supreme Court stated that to decide the question of venue, it is necessary to determine the nature of the action as disclosed by the complaint and the scope of the judgment that might be entered on default. Determining the nature of the action as disclosed by the complaint and the scope of the judgment that might be entered on default, the Supreme Court noted that the title to the real property would not be affected and no interest therein would be determined in the case at issue. Instead, the Court observed, the complaint sought a personal judgment for damages for fraud.

In Turlock Theatre Co. v. Laws (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 573, 86 P.2d 345 , the plaintiff sought recovery of unpaid rentals under a lease, termination of the lease, and restoration to possession of the real property involved. Suit was filed in the county where the land was located and the defendants sought a change of venue to the county of their residence. The trial court denied the motion for change of venue and on appeal the Supreme Court reversed. In determining that the defendants were entitled to a change of venue, the Supreme Court stated that whether the action is local or transitory must be determined from an inspection of the allegations of the complaint and the nature of the relief sought, and all ambiguities must be resolved against the pleader.

Gallin v. Superior Court (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 541, 281 Cal. Rptr. 304 , was a class action filed in San Diego County on behalf of purchasers of certain pop-rock record albums, etc., against the performers, producers, recording companies, and distributors, alleging fraud, negligent misrepresentation, unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.), deceptive consumer practices (Civ. Code § 1770 et seq.), and breach of contract. Plaintiff sought rescission, damages, imposition of a constructive trust, and injunctive relief. Defendants moved to change venue to Los Angeles County on the ground that certain individual defendants resided there, that no corporate defendant had its principal place of business in San Diego County, and that a "single retail sale" in San Diego was insufficient for venue in a consumer remedy class action. The trial court denied the motion, stating that Code Civ. Proc. § 395 provides the general rule of venue at the place of defendant's residence except as otherwise provided by law, but that Civ. Code § 1780 of the Consumers Legal Remedy Act sets forth such an alternative basis for proper venue, and that the inclusion of claims other than those under the that Act was not fatal to proper venue in San Diego County. Defendants petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate. In ordering issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its order denying the motion to transfer and to grant the motion, the court of appeal stated that the plaintiff's theory of the action as set forth in the complaint determines the venue, that, because the law favors the right of trial at the defendant's residence, the complaint will be strictly construed against a plaintiff seeking to lay the venue elsewhere, that the action was a mixed action (230 Cal. App. 3d 541, 544) , that where the defendant is entitled to a change of venue as to one cause of action, the entire action is transferred (230 Cal. App. 3d 541, 545) , and that the general venue rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (requiring trial of action in county of defendant's residence) prevailed over the specific provision in former Civ. Code § 1780(c), now Civ. Code § 1780(d), because the rights protected by the Consumers Legal Remedies Act do not rise to the level of civil rights, and plaintiff was not disadvantaged or thwarted in pursuing litigation by having the matter transferred (230 Cal. App. 3d 541, 545-546) .

[b] Venue When Complaint Does Not Show Applicability of Exception

In Kaluzok v. Brisson (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 760, 167 P.2d 481 , the factual background of which is discussed in § 238.30[4][a], after analyzing the complaint and determining that it sought a personal judgment for damages for fraud, the Supreme Court ruled that the defendants were entitled to a change of venue to the county of their residence from the county where certain land involved was situated. The Court reiterated the general rule that the right of a defendant to have an action brought against him tried in the county of his residence in an ancient and valuable right safeguarded by statute and supported by a long line of decisions. The right of a plaintiff to have an action tried in a county other than that of the defendant's residence is exceptional. If the plaintiff would claim such right he must bring himself within the exception, the Court added.

In Bybee v. Fairchild (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 35, 37, 170 P.2d 54 , an action for damages for fraudulent misrepresentations and a purported action to quiet title to certain real property was filed in the county in which the real property was situated. The defendants sought change of venue to the county of their residence. The trial court denied change of venue and on appeal the court of appeal reversed. The appellate court noted that an action for fraud or for money damages is personal and transitory and triable in the county of the defendant's residence, and that when a transitory action is joined with a local action, the defendant is entitled to a change of venue, even though no such right would exist if the local action had been sued on alone. The court observed that the normal right of the defendant is to have the action tried in the county of his residence. For the cause to be triable elsewhere,the plaintiff must bring himself clearly within the terms of some statutory exception, and in this connection all ambiguities will be construed against the pleader to the end that a defendant will not be deprived improperly of his fundamental right to have the cause tried in the county of his residence.

Goossen v. Clifton (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 44, 170 P.2d 104 , was an action on contract in which the complaint failed to contain an allegation as to where the cause of action arose or that it was entered into, or to be performed, in the county where suit was filed. The defendants sought a change of venue to the county where they were residents. The trial court denied the defendants' motion for change of venue and on appeal the court of appeal reversed. The appellate court stated the general rule that a defendant is entitled to have an action tried in the county of his residence and that the right of the plaintiff to have an action tried elsewhere is the exceptional right which must find its justification in the terms of some statute. It is, the court observed, the duty of a plaintiff to bring himself within some exception if he can--otherwise, the defendant's right is to have the case tried in the county of his residence. The court added that the right to have the action tried in the county where they, or some of them, reside is remedial in nature and should be liberally construed to the end that defendants may not be unjustly deprived of that right.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
1. Change to Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.31

§ 238.31 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Shows That Action Is Essentially Transitory and Any Local Issue Is Incidental

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE PROPER COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF AN ACTION IS IN THE COUNTY OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE WHEN THE COMPLAINT SHOWS THAT THE ACTION IS ESSENTIALLY TRANSITORY AND THAT ANY LOCAL ISSUE IS INCIDENTAL.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph D.]

E. Venue of Actions as Local or Transitory. If the subject matter of an action is local, the cause should be tried in the county where such subject matter, or some part thereof, is situated; otherwise it should be tried in the country of the defendant's residence (Bardwell v. Turner (1933) 219 Cal. 228, 230, 25 P.2d 978).

F. Venue When Action Is Essentially Transitory. When the nature of an action is essentially transitory and the determination of a local issue is only incidental, the defendant is entitled to have the action tried in the county of his/her residence (Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611-612, 122 P.2d 557).

[Optional] G. Reformation of Real Property Agreement. An action to reform a lease of real property is transitory (Macracci v. Continental Baking Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 224, 226, 20 Cal. Rptr. 567).

[Optional] H. Specific Performance of Reformed Real Property Agreement. An action for the reformation of a real property lease and for specific performance of the lease as reformed is transitory (Marcacci v. Continental Baking Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 224, 226, 20 Cal. Rptr. 567).

[Optional] I. Equitable Action to Set Aside Judgment Obtained by Fraud or Mistake. An equitable action to declare a judgment null and void for alleged fraud or mistake is transitory and triable in the country of the defendant's residence, [even though the judgment under attack was rendered by the court in which the equitable action was improperly commenced] (Deas v. Lido Lbr. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 402, 404, 407, 282 P.2d 90).

[Optional] J. Attack on Judgment in Country Other Than Where Rendered. An equitable action attacking a prior judgment on the ground of fraud or mistake may be brought in any county, regardless of where in the state the judgment attacked was rendered; the fact that a fraudulent judgment was obtained in one court does not deprive other courts of general and equal jurisdiction from exercising their equity powers to annul it (Deas v. Lido Lbr. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 402, 404-407, 282 P.2d 90).

[Optional] K. Action for Damages for Trespass. Where it can be determined from the allegations of a complaint for damages for trespass quare clausum fregit that money damages are the only relief sought, the title to the real property is not questioned, and there is no attempt to recover possession thereof, the action is transitory and the defendant is entitled to have such an action tried in the county of his/her residence (Hardy v. White (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 550, 552, 279 P.2d 126).

[Optional] L. Vendor's Action for Breach of Real Property Sale Contract. A vendor's action for breach of a contract for the sale of real property is transitory where only a money judgment is sought (Blackman v. Sherman (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 20, 22, 105 P.2d 1000).

[Optional] M. Action for Damages for Fraud With Incidental Real Property Rights Involved. An action, the gravamen of which is fraud, is transitory, and the mere fact that incidental rights in real property may be involved does not change the rule (Thielen v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 217, 221, 33 Cal. Rptr. 1).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for change of venue in an action or proceeding that has been filed in a county other than that of the defendant's residence where the complaint indicates that the action is essentially transitory and the determination of a local issue only incidental, and, thus, the action should be tried in the county of the defendant's residence instead.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue of Action as Local or Transitory

Bardwell v. Turner (1933) 219 Cal. 228, 25 P.2d 978 , involved an action in which plaintiff sought an accounting and the establishment of the rights in the terms of a resulting trust in profits from certain oil wells and oil leases. Defendants sought a change of venue from the county in which the leases were located to the county of their residence. They claimed that the gravamen of the action was transitory in that it was no more than an action in equity for an accounting. The trial court denied the motion for a change of venue on the ground that the action was essentially local since plaintiff sought an interest in land in the form of a resulting trust in the oil leases. In appealing the order denying the change of venue, defendants sought a writ of supersedeas to stay proceedings in the trial court pending the outcome of the appeal. The Supreme Court issued the writ, finding that substantial questions would be presented on defendants' appeal as to the local or transitory nature of the action. The Court stated that if the subject matter of the action is local, the cause should be tried in the county where such subject matter, or some part thereof, is situated; otherwise it should be tried in the county of defendant's residence. Since a cause of action for an accounting is transitory, if the complaint had combined local and transitory causes of action defendants would be entitled to have the cause tried in the county of their residence.

[b] Venue When Action Is Essentially Transitory

In Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , plaintiffs sued defendants for an accounting, for a declaration of trust of certain mining property, and for other relief. The action was commenced in the county of defendants' residence, and certain defendants sought a change of venue to the county in which the mining claims were located. The motion was denied and the moving defendants appealed. In affirming the trial court, the Supreme Court found that not all of the causes of action alleged were local in character so as to require that the action be tried in the county in which the mining claims were located. The Court stated in this respect that an action is transitory rather than local when the right to any real property sought by the plaintiffs depends on the outcome of a controversy concerning a personal obligation of the defendants, and the judgment rendered thereon would be one to enforce such an obligation. The nature of the action in the case at issue was essentially transitory and the defendants were entitled to have it tried in the county of their residence since the determination of an estate or interest in land was merely incidental to the determination of the causes of action for an accounting, a declaration of trust as to certain mining property, and other relief based on allegations of fraud and misrepresentation. The nature of an action is local, and must be tried in the county where the land is situated, when it turns on the title to property as distinct from the personal obligation, and the decree operates ex proprio vigore on the title.

[c] Reformation of Real Property Agreement

Marcacci v. Continental Baking Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 224, 20 Cal. Rptr. 567 , was an action for the reformation and specific performance of that portion of a real property lease agreement relating to the payment of money by the defendant lessee. It was filed in the county where the lease payments were to be made and the defendant sought change of venue to the county in which the land was located. The trial court denied the motion and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the action was transitory. The complaint alleged that one of the two leases involved failed to include agreed on provisions for payment by the defendant of taxes and insurance and erroneously stated the rental agreed on to be paid if the defendant exercised an option to renew. The other lease allegedly omitted defendant's agreement to pay taxes and increased rentals for an addition made after the original plans for the building thereon were amended. As to each lease, one cause of action sought reformation and the other sought specific performance of the lease as reformed. The court noted that since each lease required payments to be made in the county of suit, that county was a proper one for the trial unless the action was local in nature. The action, said the court, would be local only if it was for the determination of a right or interest in real property. However, the complaint in no way sought determination of the existence, extent, quality, or amount of the defendant's leasehold interest in either parcel. That interest was conceded by both parties; the leasehold interest was, at most, incidentally involved. An action in which the relief sought is personal, and in which title to or possession of real property is only incidentally involved is transitory and not local, said the court. The court further noted that an action by a vendor for the purchase price of land is not within Code Civ. Proc. § 392, nor is an action by a vendor for specific performance of a vendee's contract to purchase land. Thus, the court concluded that the action in this case was transitory and that the motion for change of venue was properly denied.

[d] Specific Performance of Reformed Real Property Agreement

Marcacci v. Continental Baking Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 224, 20 Cal. Rptr. 567 , is discussed in § 238.31[3][c].

[e] Equitable Action to Set Aside Judgment Obtained by Fraud or Mistake

Deas v. Lido Lbr. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 402, 282 P.2d 90 , was an action to have a default judgment entered against the plaintiff in the county in which this action was filed declared null and void on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud. The defendant moved for change of venue to the county where its principal place of business was located, the trial court denied the change, and the defendant appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that an equitable action for relief from a judgment is transitory and that there is no requirement that such an action must be tried in the county where it was rendered. The court observed that the instant action, being based on alleged fraud and mistake and praying for equitable relief, was without doubt a transitory action and that the defendant would be entitled to have it transferred to the county of its residence unless the fact that the judgment under attack was rendered in the county where suit was brought required it to be brought there. The general rule is that a defendant is entitled to have actions tried in the county of his residence, and the right of the plaintiff to have the action tried elsewhere is the exceptional right which must find its justification in the terms of some statute.

The court pointed out that Brown v. Happy Valley Fruit Growers, Inc. (1929) 206 Cal. 515, 274 P. 977 , which was relied on by the trial court, also held that an action attacking a judgment on the ground of fraud was transitory, but that there the county in which the judgment was rendered was the county of the defendants' residence. The general statement in that case to the effect that one court will not interfere with the judgment of another court of coordinate jurisdiction could not be regarded as authority in support of the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for change of venue to the couty where its principal place of business was located. The court noted that the superior court is vested with jurisdiction of all cases in equity, and this jurisdiction is not vested in any particular superior court. The only exception to this rule, said the court, is contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 392 relating to venue of actions relating to real property. Thus, the court held that a suit attacking a judgment for fraud may be brought in any county of the state, subject to transfer, regardless of where in the state the judgment under attack was rendered. The court added that there is no reason, under proper circumstances, why one court may not afford equitable relief against the judgments of other courts; it is competent for every court to treat as a nullity any judgment which can be shown to have been obtained by manifest fraud.

[f] Attack on Judgment in County Other Than Where Rendered

Deas v. Lido Lbr. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 402, 282 P.2d 90 , is discussed in § 238.31[3][e].

[g] Action for Damages for Trespass

Hardy v. White (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 550, 279 P.2d 126 , was an action for damages for trespass quare clausum fregit which was filed in the county where the real property involved was located. The defendants moved for change of venue to the county of their residence, the trial court ordered the change sought by the defendants, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the action was transitory. The complaint alleged that the plaintiffs were tenants in possession of a house which the defendants unlawfully entered and demanded monetary damages but not restoration of the property. The plaintiffs contended that their action was local because it was an action for injury to real property and, thus, within Code Civ. Proc. § 392. However, said the court, the question of venue must be determined from an inspection of the allegations of the complaint and the nature of the relief sought since the issue on a motion for change of venue is whether the complaint sets forth a theory of action supporting the chosen venue. The court observed that money damages were the only relief sought, that title to the real property was not questioned, and that there was no attempt to recover possession of the property. A judgment which would be rendered would not determine either of the latter two questions. If the trial court found that the plaintiff was a tenant at the time of the alleged wrongful eviction, it would be merely evidentiary and not a finding as to the tenant's right to or interest in the land. Moreover, the court observed that the complaint did not allege injury to the dwelling house or allege the plaintiffs' interest in the premises. Even if the complaint alleged the elements of a cause of action for trespass quare clausum fregit, it was not sufficient that title to the land might be incidentally involved, or even necessarily entered into, to make the action local if the judgment could be satisfied by the payment of money, the court observed. The general rule is that the defendant is etitled to have an action tried against him in the county of his residence unless the proceeding comes under the exceptions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-394, and the action must be wholly local in nature to require it to be brought in the county of the situs of the real property involved. The well-settled rule, the court held, is that if there is a personal cause of action joined with one that is local in nature, the defendant is entitled to have the proceeding transferred to the county of his residence.

[h] Vendor's Action for Breach of Real Property Sale Contract

Blackman v. Sherman (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 20, 105 P.2d 1000 , was an action for damages for breach of a contract for the sale of certain real property which was filed in the county in which the property was located. The trial court denied the defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence, and the court of appeal reversed, holding that since the principal relief sought was for the recovery of damages for breach of contract, the action was transitory in nature. The plaintiff contended that the complaint stated a cause of action essentially local in nature and triable where the land was located; the defendant contended that where a transitory and a local cause of action are joined, the defendant is entitled to trial in the county of his residence. The court of appeal noted that the principal relief sought was the recovery of a money judgment. This, the court held, was based on breach of contract and was transitory in nature; an action which has for its object the mere recovery of money is essentially an action for debt and is transitory, not local. There was no question that a suit to quiet title as set forth in one cause of action stated in the complaint was local. However, the court held, since title was retained by the vendor, the plaintiff in this action, title was not the primary issue. The court ruled that only where land or an interest therein is the exclusive subject matter of the action does Code Civ. Proc. § 392 control and if, in one complaint, there have been joined actions both local and transitory, the defendant is entitled to have the cause heard in the county of his residence.

[i] Action for Damages for Fraud With Incidental Real Property Rights Involved

Thielen v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 217, 33 Cal. Rptr. 1 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel the trial court to vacate its order granting a change of venue of an action based on complaints of fraud with respect to certain real property to the county where that property was located. The court of appeal granted the writ, holding that the action was transitory since the determination of any interest in the land was merely incidental to the determination of the action. The underlying action was brought by a plaintiff who elected to stand on his contract to purchase certain real property in the county to which the trial court granted the venue change. The complaint sought damages for fraud and misrepresentation, injunctive relief against any forfeiture in regard to the promissory note and deed of trust on the property, and a trustee's sale and a declaration of the rights, duties, and obligations of the parties to the controversy. The court of appeal noted that an action, the gravamen of which is fraud, is transitory and the mere fact that, incidentally, rights in real property may be involved, does not change the rule; even though an action relates to real property in some way, it is not regarded as local unless some interest therein will be determined by the judgment. An action, said the court, is essentially transitory if the determination of an estate or interest in land is merely incidental to the determination of a cause for equitable relief in trust, fraud, or contract. It was apparent, the court noted, that each of the counts pleaded was based on a claim of fraud and misrepresentation. The granting of the relief sought depended on proof of the facts constituting fraud. The declaratory and injunctive relief relating to the real property would follow only as an incident of tort liability. Moreover, it was apparent that the plaintiff, while electing to stand on his contract of purchase, was seeking to avoid forfeiture under the deed of trust by adjusting any balance due on the promissry note by application of the amount of damages obtained on account of the alleged fraud. A judgment to this effect, the court held, would not involve a determination of an interest in real property.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Action Is Essentially Transitory

In Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 606, 328 P.2d 953 , the Supreme Court reversed an order granting a change of venue from the county in which one defendant resided to the county in which the real property involved was situated. The complaint set forth four causes of action: (1) breach of contract (lease agreement of real property); (2) conversion of structures and improvements on the leased premises; (3) restoration and redelivery of the removed property with damages resulting from costs of reinstallation and for loss of use; and (4) waste to the real property resulting from removal of the property. The Court stated that it appeared from the allegations and prayer of the complaint that the main relief sought in all four causes of action was personal and that title to, or possession of, real property was only incidentally involved. Citing Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 611-612, 122 P.2d 557 , the Court noted that nature of the action was essentially transitory, that is, the defendants would be entitled to have it tried in the county of their residence, if the determination of an estate or interest in land was merely incidental to the determination of a cause of action for equitable relief in trust, fraud, or contract.

The Court held that only one cause of action stated on four different legal theories had been set forth, that the entire transaction had arisen out of the alleged breach of the lease agreement, including the cause of action for waste, and that the seeking of different kinds of relief did not establish different causes of action. The Court added that whether it considered that there had been a joinder of transitory causes of action with a local action and that the transitory actions thus controlled so far as venue was concerned, or whether it considered that plaintiffs had stated only one transitory cause of action, the result was the same. Thus, the trial court was in error in granting the defendants' motions for change of venue on the ground that the action was a local one which must be tried at the situs of the real property pursuant to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392.

In Kaluzok v. Brisson (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 760, 167 P.2d 481 , in reversing an order denying a change of venue to the county of defendants' residence in an action by a purchaser of real property to recover damages for the alleged fraud of his vendor in the sale of the property, the Supreme Court observed that the prayer of the complaint that the amount of damages awarded be ordered applied on the promissory note could not in any substantial sense result in "determination in any form" of an interest in real property. It results merely in a reduction of the obligation represented by the promissory note. Such application of damages awarded is in harmony with cases involving executory contracts where the award was deducted from the unpaid part of the purchase price, or the unpaid part of the purchase price was deducted from the award, regardless of whether there was a prayer to that end. In the case at bar, said the Court, the application would relate to the form of the recovery and be merely incidental to the main purpose of the action which was to recover a personal judgment for damages for fraud.

In Neet v. Holmes (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 605, 122 P.2d 557 , in affirming an order denying a change of venue from the county of defendants' residence to the county where the subject real property was situated, the Supreme Court noted that the principal relief sought by the plaintiffs was an accounting of operations in certain leased property and other real property and a judgment based on the fruits thereof including title to the real property of which the plaintiffs claimed to have been deprived by the alleged fraud of the defendants. It was apparent that the granting of the major relief sought by the plaintiffs depended on proof of facts constituting such fraud as to entitle them to any relief in a cause of action for an accounting. Such an action is a proceeding in equity and is essentially a personal action, the Court noted.

In Turlock Theatre Co. v. Laws (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 573, 86 P.2d 345 , in reversing an order denying a change of venue from the county in which the real property involved in the case was located to the county of the defendant's residence, the Supreme Court observed that, under the allegations in the complaint, the right to possession of the real property involved largely depended on the outcome of the controversy involved in the action concerning the amounts of rentals paid or claimed to have been unpaid. The cause of action for unpaid rentals was the primary object of the complaint, and relief by way of restoration of the premises would follow the judgment on that cause of action. Inasmuch as that relief was not merely an incident to the claim to be restored to possession, but was distinctly a primary object of the complaint, the Court concluded that the plaintiff had joined a personal or transitory cause of action with one of a local character and that the trial court erred in denying the motion.

In Radio K-Dan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 544, 40 Cal. Rptr. 382 , in issuing a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order transferring the action from the county of defendant's residence to the county in which the subject real property was situated on the ground that no affidavit of merits was filed, the court of appeal added that under the allegations and prayer of the complaint, the main relief sought appeared to be a declaration that plaintiff was not in default under its agreement with the defendant, with a prayer for incidental injunctive relief. Plaintiff also sought a determination as to the right of defendant to proceed with a nonjudicial sale under the mortgage, which involved an interpretation of the contract and a question as to whether the mortgage covered real or personal property, or both. It was clear that, even if it included real property in part, it also involved personal property. An action must be wholly local in its nature to require it to be brought in the county wherein is situated the property which is the subject matter of the action. Code Civ. Proc. § 392 does not apply where the subject matter of the action involves both real and personal property and is essentially transitory.

In Hammon v. American Exploration & Mining Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 21 Cal. Rptr. 409 , in reversing an order changing venue from the county of defendant's principal place of business to the county where the subject real property was situated, the court of appeal said that an action for breach of a mineral lease, seeking principally royalties for the removed minerals, an injunction against encumbrance of claims covered by the agreement, and a decree establishing the rights and duties of the parties under the contract, does not become a local action because realty may be involved. In substance, this is a single action for the redress of one wrong--the main relief sought is personal, and the action is transitory. The court stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 392, relating to venue of local actions, applied to the action only if it solely or mainly sought relief that was local in nature. After quoting from the Peiser case, above, the court said that the counts of the complaint, in this case, pertaining to royalties for the extraction of minerals and rights and duties under the lease which had been broken sought redress, pleaded in four counts, for one wrong. The determination of the nature of the cause lies not in the prayed relief but in the facts precipitating a plaintiff's right to recover. Quoting from Witkin, California Procedure (1st ed), Vol. 1, § 237, p. 749, the court added that if there is only one cause, but different forms of relief are sought, the form of the action for venue purposes is determined by the main relief rule. The same is true where a single cause of action is pleaded in different counts according to different legal theories. There is no joinder of causes and the main relief rule determines venue.

The court further stated that if, as in the case at issue, the plaintiff's sole or main relief consists of a money judgment and the other relief is an incident to that end, the action for venue purposes must be classified as transitory. Indeed, even if an action involves realty, it constitutes for venue purposes a transitory action if the main relief sought is a money judgment. The court concluded that the cause of action before it obviously rested upon breach of contract; the principal relief involved the nonpayment of royalties. The determination of the rights and duties of the parties under the contract, including the right to the monetary recovery, of course, may involve the mineral properties and indeed may depend upon the appellant's rights to such properties. In every case in which a lessor sues for a breach of a lease, the lessor's rights in the property may be involved, but a suit for rental does not thereby become a local action. The main relief sought by the plaintiff must control. The complaint would be distorted if the court were to say that the main relief involved realty, not personalty.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
1. Change to Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.32

§ 238.32 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Transitory and Local Actions Have Been Joined in Single Complaint

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE PROPER COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF AN ACTION IS THE SUPERIOR COURT IN THE COUNTY OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE WHEN THE COMPLAINT JOINS A TRANSITORY ACTION WITH A LOCAL ACTION BRINGING THE CASE WITHIN THE VENUE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 395(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE WHICH, WITH CERTAIN EXCEPTIONS NOT HERE APPLICABLE, REQUIRES TRIAL IN THE COUNTY OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph D.]

E. Defendant as Entitled to Change of Venue on Any Joined Cause of Action. If a complaint states more than one cause of action, on one of which the defendant would be entitled to a change of venue to the county of his/her residence, but not on the other(s), the defendant is entitled to trial in the county of his/her residence (Ah Fong v. Sternes (1889) 79 Cal. 30, 33, 21 P. 381).

F. Jointed Local and Transitory Actions Regarded as Transitory for Determination of Venue. If, in complaint, the plaintiff joins a local cause of action with a transitory one or seeks a remedy against the defendant on matters that are not local causes of action provisions, the action comes within the provisions of Section 395(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure under which the defendant is entitled to have the trial held in the county of his/her residence (Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 605-606, 328 P.2d 953 ; Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 576, 26 P. 356).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for change of venue in an action or proceeding that has been filed in a county other than that of the defendant's residence when: (1) the complaint shows that two or more specific causes of action have been joined and at least one of them is local while another is transitory; and (2) the cause is not wholly within one of the statutory exceptions to the general rule set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) that the defendant is entitled to trial in the county of his or her residence.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as is discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[b] Exceptions Under Code Civ. Proc. § 395

The rule that when transitory and local actions are joined, the defendant is entitled to trial in the county of his or her residence is predicated on the premise that generally proper venue of a transitory action is the county of the defendant's residence. However, Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), (b), provides, with respect to certain transitory actions, that venue may be laid in counties in addition to that in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action. Therefore, if venue is laid in a county other than that of the defendant's residence but in one that is nevertheless authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), (b), there would be no action entitling the defendant to change the place of trial to his or her residence and hence, unless the action came within a specified exception in Code Civ. Proc. § 395, he or she would not be able to do so.

[c] Situations Assumed for Use of Form

For the purposes of this form, then, it is assumed that one of the following situations exists with respect to a transitory action joined with a local action: (1) the transitory action does not come within any of the exceptions specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 395; (2) the transitory action does come within one of the specified exceptions but venue was not laid in any county authorized by that section; or (3) the transitory action does come within one of the specified exceptions and venue was laid in a county other than defendant's resident county, as authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 395, but another transitory action is joined [see § 283.33] entitling defendant to trial in the county of his or her residence.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant as Entitled to Change of Venue on Any Joined Cause of Action

In Ah Fong v. Sternes (1889) 79 Cal. 30, 21 P. 381 , the complaint stated a good cause of action for damages for false imprisonment, which the defendant was entitled to have tried in the county of his residence, and what could be assumed to be a good complaint for a penalty imposed by statute (resolving ambiguities against the pleader) which had to be tried in the county where suit was filed subject to the court's power to change venue. The Supreme Court stated that if the complaint could be regarded as stating two separate causes of action, on one of which the defendant would be entitled to a change of venue, but not on the other, the result would be the same--that is, the plaintiff cannot deprive the defendant of his or her right to a change of venue by the addition of something to the complaint. If this were not the rule, the Court observed, it would be very easy for a plaintiff to defeat the defendant's right to a change of venue. Accordingly, the Court concluded that the trial court's order refusing a change of venue was erroneous.

[b] Joined Local and Transitory Causes of Action Regarded as Transitory for Determination of Venue

In Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953 , reversing an order changing venue when the complaint set forth four causes of action arising from an alleged breach of a lease agreement of real property and the action was commenced in the county of residence of one of the defendants, the Supreme Court cited a lower court decision to the effect that where local and transitory actions are joined, they will be regarded as transitory for the purpose of determining venue and stated that the well-settled rule is that if there is a personal, or in personam, cause of action joined with one that is local in nature, the defendant is entitled to have the proceeding transferred to the county of his or her residence. The action must be wholly local in nature to require it to be brought in the county of the situs as designated in Code Civ. Proc. § 392, governing venue in real property actions. The Court held that an action for damages for breach of contract is transitory, and that the action for conversion of property removed from the leased premises was transitory, the property becoming personal property on severance from the real property. The Court concluded that whether there had been a joinder of transitory causes of action with a local action where the transitory actions control venue or whether the plaintiffs had stated only one transitory cause of action, the result was the same and the trial court was in error in granting defendant's motions for change of venue on the ground that the action was a local one which had to be tried at the situs of the real property pursuant to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392.

In Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 , reversing an order denying a change of venue to the county of defendant's residence when a transitory action had been joined with a local action, the Supreme Court stated that if the plaintiff joined a local cause of action with another cause of action that was not embraced within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392 governing venue of real property actions, or if he also sought a remedy against the defendant on matters not embraced within the provisions of that section, his action would entitle the defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 to trial in the county of his residence. The Court concluded that unless the cause of action set forth in the complaint falls wholly within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392, 394, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395 prevail.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joined Local and Transitory Actions Regarded as Transitory for Determination of Venue

In Turlock Theatre Co. v. Laws (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 573, 86 P.2d 345 , the Supreme Court reversed an order denying a change of venue to the county of the defendants' residence in an action to recover unpaid rentals under a real property lease agreement, to terminate the lease, and to restore possession of the premises. The Court ruled that Code Civ. Proc. § 392, relating to venue of actions involving real property, is effective only when the real property or the title thereto is the exclusive subject matter of the action. When a cause of action for relief in personam also is joined, the defendant is entitled to have the cause transferred to the county of his or her residence. The Court noted that the parties did not question the personal nature of the cause of action seeking recovery for alleged unpaid rentals. Inasmuch as that relief was not merely an incident to the claim to be restored to possession, but was distinctly a primary object of the complaint, the Court concluded that the plaintiff had joined a personal or transitory cause of action with one of a local character, and that the trial court on the record before it had erred in denying the motion.

In Sheeley v. Jones (1923) 192 Cal. 256, 219 P. 744 , the Supreme Court reversed an order denying a change of venue to the county of defendants' residence in an action to compel conveyance of stock that the parties had orally agreed to transfer when they had exchanged their real properties, which transfer took place, the Supreme Court ruled that if real and personal actions are joined in the same complaint, the case falls within Code Civ. Proc. § 395 and must be tried in the county of the defendant's residence.

In All-Cool Alum. etc. Co. v. Superior Court (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 660, 36 Cal. Rptr. 769 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to set aside its order transferring the action from the county in which the corporate defendant had its principal place of business to the county in which the subject real property was situated where a local action against individual defendants had been joined with a transitory action against the corporate defendants. Quoting from Weygandt v. Larson (1933) 130 Cal. App 304, 308, 19 P.2d 852 , the court stated that if real and personal actions are joined in the same complaint, the case falls within Code Civ. Proc. § 395 and must be tried in the county of defendant's residence.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
1. Change to Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.33

§ 238.33 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--When Complaint Joins Transitory Actions One of Which Entitles Defendant to Trial in County of His/Her Residence

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE PROPER COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF THIS ACTION IS IN THE COUNTY OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE WHEN THE COMPLAINT JOINS TRANSITORY ACTIONS, ONE OF WHICH ENTITLES DEFENDANT TO TRIAL IN THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Proper Court as in County of Defendant's Residence. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Character of Action as Determined by Complaint and Nature of Judgment. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph D.]

E. Defendant as Entitled to Change of Venue on Any Joined Cause of Action. [See § 238.32[1], Paragraph E.]

F. Venue When Transitory Actions Are Joined. The joinder of transitory actions entitles the defendant to trial in the county of his/her residence when one of such actions requires such venue under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (Goossen v. Clifton (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 44, 49-50, 170 P.2d 104).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for a change of venue in an action or proceeding that has been filed in a county other than that of the defendant's residence and where: (1) the complaint shows that two or more transitory causes of action have been joined; and (2) at least one of those causes of action entitles the defendant to have the matter tried in the county of his or her residence.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this memorandum showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Transitory Actions Are Joined

In Goossen v. Clifton (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 44, 170 P.2d 104 , two contract causes of action were joined in the complaint. As to the first cause of action, the defendant would have been entitled to trial in the county of his residence because the plaintiff had failed to bring himself within the exceptions contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 395. Under the second cause of action, trial would have been proper in another county. In reversing the trial court's order denying a change of venue, there seemed to be no contract cases directly in point; however, there were many cases, other than contract cases, holding that if a plaintiff unites in one complaint two causes of action, one in which the defendant has the right to have it tried in the county of his residence, the other in which he does not, the defendant is entitled to have the cause tried in the county of his residence.

The important right to protect is that of the defendant to have the cause tried in the county of his residence. If, by joining several causes of action, the defendant could be deprived of his right, the right would be lost in may cases. It is for that reason that the courts hold that the test is whether on any one of the causes of action the defendant is entitled to a change to the county of his residence. If there is one such cause, then defendant is entitled to the change no matter how many other causes may be set forth in which he is not entitled to the change.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Transitory Actions Are Joined

In Johnson v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 212, 42 Cal. Rptr. 645 , in issuing a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to transfer the case to the county of defendant's residence when the complaint set forth two causes of action, one in contract and one in tort, not separately stated, and was filed in the county in which the contract was to be performed, the court of appeal said that when several causes of action are alleged in a complaint, a motion for change of venue must be granted on all causes if defendant is entitled to a change on any one. The court added that in this case the complaint purported to state only one cause of action for damages for breach of contract, but included in the single count were the allegations that the wrongful conduct of the petitioner interfered with plaintiffs' business and damaged them in their business reputation to the extent of $30,000. Such a cause of action was not incidental to a breach of contract action, nor was it dependent upon plaintiffs' success in establishing their right to damages for breach of contract. Plaintiffs might recover damages for breach of contract and damages for injury to their business reputation, or one, or neither. One is not dependent upon the other. Accordingly, the court concluded that the complaint included a transitory cause of action in tort of the type triable solely at the defendant's residence that could not be classified as incidental to, and dependent upon, the cause of action for claimed breach of contract.

In Haurat v. Superior Court (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 330, 50 Cal. Rptr. 520 , in granting a writ of mandamus to compel the superior court to vacate an order denying a motion for change of venue by a defendant on the ground of residence and to grant such motion if the counter motion for retention of venue based on convenience of witnesses was denied, the court stated that when several causes of action are alleged in a complaint, a motion for change of venue must be granted on all causes if defendant is entitled to a change on any one. Thus, the petitioner in the present proceeding was entitled to a transfer of the action to the county of his residence unless the county where the action was filed was proper as to each count. Since the plaintiff had pled a cause of action based upon the tort of conversion, the defendant had a right to have the action tried in the county of his residence, unless it could be shown that the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice would thereby be promoted if the action was retained in the county where commenced.

In Archer v. Superior Court (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 417, 21 Cal. Rptr. 48 , in issuing a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate an order denying a change of venue and to enter an order granting such change to the county of defendant's residence, the court of appeal noted that the California rule governing venue provides that an action on a contract may be tried in either the county of the defendant's residence, the county where the contract was entered into, or the county where the contract is to be performed. Although there can thus be as many as three counties in which a contract action may properly be brought, the court stated that defendant's residence is the preferred place for trial and added that if the defendant is entitled to a change of venue on any one of the causes of action alleged in the complaint, the motion must be granted as to all.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
1. Change to Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.34-238.49

[Reserved]

§§ 238.34[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.50

§ 238.50 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Local Cause of Action Arises--Proper County for Action Relating to Real Property Is in County Where Property Is Located [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE PROPER COUNTY FOR TRIAL OF A LOCAL CAUSE OF ACTION RELATING TO REAL PROPERTY IS THE COUNTY WHERE THE REAL PROPERTY INVOLVED IS LOCATED.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint. Whether or not the place of trial is governed by Section 392 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to be determined by the subject matter of the action as shown by the complaint. The subject matter of an action and the issues involved are determinable from the facts pleaded rather than from the title or the prayer for relief (Standard Brands of California v. Bryce (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 718, 720-721, 37 P.2d 446 ; Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202).

[EITHER]

D. Venue in County Where Real Property Is Located. The proper county for the trial of an action for _____ [the recovery of or the recovery of an estate or interest in or the determination, in any form, of the right to recovery of real property or any estate or interest in or injury to or the foreclosure of a lien on or the foreclosure of a mortgage on] real property is the county in which the real property that is the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated (Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)).

[Optional] E. Construction Defects. Absent an allegation of a cause of action for breach of contract, an action for damages to buildings affixed to real property and for a declaration that the defendants must repair the defects, is, in essence, an action for injury to real property, and is local, not transitory (see Foundation Engineers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 107, 112, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469).

[OR]

D. Venue in County Where Real Property Is Located. The proper county for the trial of actions for the partition of _____ [real property or real property and personal property] is the county in which the real property, or some part thereof, is situated (Code Civ. Proc. § 872.110(b)(1)).

[OR]

D. Venue in County Where Real Property Is Located. Eminent domain proceedings must be commenced in the county in which the property sought to be taken is located [and when the property is situated in more than one county, the proceeding may be commenced in any of such counties] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.020).

[OR]

D. Venue in County Where Real Property Is Located. The proper court for the trial of actions against the State of California for the taking or damaging of private property for public use is a court of competent jurisdiction in the county in which the property is situated (Gov. Code § 955).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum may be submitted in support of a defendant's motion for change of venue of an action relating to real property when the cause of action relates solely to the real property involved but the plaintiff has, for some reason, filed the action in another county. Thus, this form may be used when the action with respect to the real property is for: (1) its recovery; (2) the recovery of an estate or interest therein; (3) the determination, in any form, of the right to recovery thereof or any estate or interest therein; (4) the injury thereto; or (5) the foreclosure of a lien or mortgage thereon. This form includes alternatives for use when the action seeks the partition of real property or of real and personal property together or when eminent domain proceedings have been initiated. Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing a motion for change of venue to the county of the defendant's residence for use when the action was commenced in the county where the real property which is the subject of the action is located, see § 238.72.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint

In Standard Brands of California v. Bryce (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 718, 37 P.2d 446 , the complaint sought certain injunctive relief and a declaration of the plaintiff's rights and duties with respect to the defendants and certain real property of the defendants and a declaration that the liability for certain claimed injuries to that property was that of some of the defendants. In affirming the lower court's order changing venue to the county in which the property was located, the Supreme Court stated that whether or not the place of trial is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392 is to be determined by the subject matter of the action as shown by the complaint. And, said the Court, the subject matter of an action and the issued involved are determinable from the facts pleaded rather than from the title or the prayer for relief.

Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202 , is discussed in § 238.72[3][i].

[b] Construction Defects

In Foundation Engineers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469 , a property owner filed a complaint against numerous firms for negligent design and construction of buildings, alleging causes of action for negligence, strict liability, breach of implied warranty and declaratory relief. Defendants moved for a change of venue to the county in which the property was located. The trial court conditionally denied the motion, provided that plaintiff would delete from its complaint all allegations of damage to the real property on which the buildings were located. Following plaintiff's amendment to conform with the court's direction, defendants filed a second motion for a change of venue. The trial court denied the motion and defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ of mandate and directed the trial court to grant the motion for a change of venue. It noted that in an action involving multiple causes of action, the court must determine the essence of the action and the main relief sought in fixing venue. It found that the plaintiff's action was for construction defects and that the California courts had not previously addressed proper venue for such actions (19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 109-110) .

The court relied on Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3-4, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202 , in which the court concluded that an action for damages to growing crops was a local action for purposes of venue since growing crops are a part of the realty as long as unsevered. Since the main relief sought there was for injury to real property, the joinder of breach of warranty counts to negligence counts did not change the action into a mixed action. The court in the instant action stated that this dictum about crops being like buildings was the closest authority on the venue for defective construction and comported with Supreme Court authority, in Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953 , which implied that unsevered improvements are realty and that damage to such improvements is an injury to real property (19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 110) . Based on these analogous cases, the court concluded that the alleged damages were to buildings affixed to real property and thus the essential character of the action was an injury to real property. Furthermore, the court found that the counts for declaratory relief and breach of implied warranty did not arise from a breach of contract, but rather, arose from tort theories predicated on an injury to real property. The court issued the writ of mandate, directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion to change venue and to grant the motion (19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 113) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint

In State v. Royal Consolidated Min. Co. (1921) 187 Cal. 343, 202 P. 133 , the facts of which are discussed in § 238.51[4][a], the Supreme Court stated that an action must be brought where the land involved lies if the subject of inquiry is a right or interest in the land and if the judgment would operate directly on such right or interest. The real question, said the Court, is as to the rule nature of the action; whether it turns on a personal obligation or on title or whether it takes immediate effect in personam or on the interest in the land.

In Massae v. Superior Court (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 527, 539, 173 Cal. Rptr. 527 , the court of appeal found that the essence of plaintiff's action was to reform a trust deed to delete the power of sale clause. The court of appeal then found that such a reformation of a trust deed securing real property has a direct impact on a right or interest in real property and thus is a local action that has to be tried in the county where the real property is located. Therefore, the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court not to transfer the action to the county of defendant's residence.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.51

§ 238.51 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Local Cause of Action Arises--Main Relief Sought Is Local and Transitory Relief Is Only Incidental

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE PROPER COUNTY FOR TRIAL OF A LOCAL ACTION IS THE COUNTY WHERE THE CAUSE OF ACTION ARISES WHEN THE MAIN RELIEF SOUGHT IS LOCAL AND THE TRANSITORY ISSUE JOINED THEREWITH IS ONLY INCIDENTAL.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint. [See § 238.50[1], Paragraph C.]

D. Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental. If the complaint shows that the principal relief sought is within Section 392 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that the transitory relief sought therein is only incidental, the action will be deemed local in character and the action must be tried in the county where the real property is situated (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 471-473, 89 P. 120).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted when the defendant desires to have the trial transferred to the county in which real property is located and the following factors appear: (1) the complaint shows that the principal relief sought is within the scope of either Code Civ. Proc. § 392 or 872.110 (relating to real property actions) set forth in Paragraph D of § 238.50; (2) the complaint seeks transitory or personal relief as an incident to such principal relief; and (3) the complaint has been filed in a county other than the one in which the property is located.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[b] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing a motion for change of venue to the county of the defendant's residence for use when the action was commenced in the county where the real property which is the subject of the action is located, see § 238.72.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

In Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 89 P. 120 , the plaintiff sought specific performance of a land sale contract under which he was the vendee and an accounting for the proceeds from the land. Suit was filed in the City and County of San Francisco rather than in Kern County where the land was located. In reversing an order refusing to change venue to Kern County, the Supreme Court ruled that the action was essentially an action to determine a right to or interest in real property, that the request for an accounting was merely incidental to the real cause of action and did not change the nature thereof, and that under Code Civ. Proc. § 392 on the demand of the defendant, the action had to be tried in the county where the real property was situated.

The plaintiff contended that the action was properly filed in San Francisco under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395 because it joined both real and personal actions and was within the authority of Smith v. Smith (1891) 88 Cal. 572, 26 P. 356 (see § 238.32[3][b]), a case in which the Supreme Court declared that unless the cause of action set forth in the complaint falls wholly within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-394, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395 prevail. However, in Grocers', at page 473 , the Supreme Court distinguished Smith as vitally different in character and involving the clear joinder of an action that was local with one that was transitory--that is, Smith sought to have the transfer of both real and personal property declared to be a mortgage, alleged that the property so mortgaged has earned funds sufficient to extinguish the debt, and requested an accounting and a personal judgment for the excess and reconveyance of the property. On the other hand, *Grocers'*was termed an action strictly local in character, clearly affecting the title to land, the gist of the action being specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of land and the principal relief sought being conveyance of that land with an accounting as but an incident thereto.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

In Standard Brands of Cal. v. Bryce (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 718, 37 P.2d 446 , the plaintiff filed suit in the City and County of San Francisco, in which certain of the defendants resided, by a complaint alleging that those defendants had, while in the employ of the plaintiff, cause injury to the real property of another defendant. The complaint disclosed that the property was located in Los Angeles County. The defendant whose property was located in Los Angeles County moved for change of venue to that county and the Supreme Court affirmed an order granting the change sought. The Court observed that although the complaint sought a declaration of the plaintiff's rights and duties with respect to the defendants and for a declaration that the liability for the alleged injuries was solely that of the defendants who had caused them, the principal question for determination under the facts disclosed by the complaint and the issues tendered by the allegations thereof was the liability of the parties for injuries to real property.

In State v. Royal Consolidated Min. Co. (1921) 187 Cal. 343, 202 P. 133 , an action by the State of California to recover the possession of real property in Calaveras County and rents and profits from that land, the complaint was filed in Sacramento County. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court judgment that the state was not the owner of the property, directing dismissal of the case without prejudice to the rights of the state to renew the action in Calaveras County. In its decision, the Supreme Court noted that the action must be brought where the land lies if the subject of inquiry is a right or interest in the land and if the judgment in the case will operate directly on this right or interest. The Court also noted that when the determination of an estate or interest in land is not an incident in the determination of a cause for equitable relief in trust, fraud, or contract, but is itself the immediate question before the court and may come within the immediate effect of its decree, then the venue is local. The real question is as to the true nature of the action--whether it turns on a personal obligation or on title or whether it takes immediate effect in personam or on the interest in the land. Thus, the demand for rents and profits did not destroy the local character of the action for possession of the land.

In Fletcher v. Nordesta Homes, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 33, 13 Cal. Rptr. 226 , a case in which the plaintiff sought damages arising out of a contract by the terms of which the defendants were to convey real property to the plaintiff, the court of appeal affirmed an order granting a change of venue from the county in which the real property was located to the county of the defendants' residence. The court said that if the complaint shows that the principal relief sought involves recovery of the possession of, or the title to, real property, or the determination of any estate or right or interest therein, or the enforcement of a lien thereon or recovery for an injury thereto, the action is to be deemed local in character and a trial may be held only in the county where the real property is located, even though the plaintiff may, as an incident to his or her cause of action as to the real property, seek relief that, if sought alone would be transitory in character. Determining the character of the action from the complaint alone, the court concluded that the action was one to recover a money judgment, and the prayer that the court award the plaintiffs a lien as security for the money judgment was but an incident to the cause of action stated.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.52

§ 238.52 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Neutral County When Nonresident Defendant Is Sued by Local Public Entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

DEFENDANT, AS A NONRESIDENT OF _____ COUNTY SUED BY _____ [THAT COUNTY or A LOCAL PUBLIC ENTITY LOCATED IN THAT COUNTY], IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THE ACTION TRANSFERRED TO A NEUTRAL COUNTY FOR TRIAL OR, ALTERNATIVELY, TO HAVE A DISINTERESTED JUDGE FROM A NEUTRAL COUNTY ASSIGNED TO HEAR THE ACTION.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Transfer to Neutral County. Whenever an action is brought by a _____ [county or city and county or city or local agency] against _____ [a resident of or a corporation doing business in] another county, city and county, or city, the action must be transferred for trial to a county other than the _____ [plaintiff or county in which the plaintiff is located] and other than that in which the defendant _____ [resides or is situated or is doing business] (Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a); San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 208 Cal. Rptr. 31, 690 P.2d 1 ; Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847).

[Optional] D. Defendant Corporation Reasonably Viewed as Outsider. Transfer to a neutral county under Code of Civil Procedure section 394(a) is proper when a defendant corporation is not "doing business" within the _____ [county or city and county] in which the action is pending. The standard of "doing business" for purposes of section 394 turns on the extent to which the corporation is viewed as an outsider. The question in each case is whether the corporation's activities are such that the corporation is reasonably likely to be viewed as an outsider, not whether it is actually so viewed (San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 298-299, 208 Cal. Rptr. 31, 690 P.2d 1 ; Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court of Alameda County (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 289, 271, 271 n.7, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847). For purposes of section 394(a), a corporation is doing business in a _____ [county or city and county] only if its activities in the _____ [county or city and county] are substantial enough that the corporation can reasonably be viewed as being intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people of the community. It is the quality of the business connections, and not their quantity or duration, that determines whether a party is doing business locally. The qualitative analysis must focus on whether the types of contacts with the _____ [county or city and county] are substantial enough for the company to be reasonably viewed as closely associated with the community. Given that the purpose of section 394 is to prevent a corporate defendant from suffering prejudice in favor of a local governmental entity, the statute should be liberally construed to promote this policy (San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 297, 299-301, 208 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31, 690 P.2d 1 ; Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 266, 271, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847 ; Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 957-958, 961, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817). Moreover, the relevant inquiry under section 394 includes an analysis of the nature of the litigation as well as the activities of the party seeking a change of venue. When the nature of the case poses a reasonable risk that the defendant would be viewed as an outsider, a change of venue under section 394(a) is proper (see San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 299-301, 208 Cal. Rptr. 31, 690 P.2d 1 ; Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 963-964, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817).

[Optional] E. Assignment of Disinterested Judge From Neutral County. In an action brought by a _____ [county or city and county or city or local agency] against _____ [a resident of or a corporation doing business in] another county, city and county, or city, when a jury is not of right or is waived, the court may, in lieu of transfer, request assignment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county (Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a); see Brennan v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 454, 457, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693).

[Optional] F. Contractual Provisions Waiving The Right to Transfer to a Neutral County are Void. Contractual provisions that seek to waive the right to transfer to a neutral county are void; the rules to determine in what courts and counties actions may be brought are fixed upon consideration of general convenience and expediency by general law; to allow them to be changed by the agreement of the parties would disturb the symmetry of the law, and interfere with such convenience (Arntz Builders v. Superior Court of Contra Costa County (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1200, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 346).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for a change of venue in an action in which the defendant has been sued by a local public entity in that entity's county when the defendant desires to require the trial of the action in a neutral county or, in the alternative, appointment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear the case.

This form cannot be used in an action initiated by the district attorney pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 11350, 11350.1, 11475.1, or 11476.1, which relate to enforcement of support obligations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The memorandum should be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transfer to Neutral County

San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285, 208 Cal. Rptr. 31, 690 P.2d 1 , was a probate proceeding in which the trustee sought to modify the terms of the Buck trust, a trust established for charitable purposes in Marin county. The county opposed the requested modification and petitioned for removal of the trustee. The trustee, pointing to the hostile reaction of county public officials, newspapers, and prominent citizens toward its requested modification of the terms of the trust, filed a motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 394 and 397(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b); (authorizing a change in the place of trial when there is reason to believe that the court designated in the complaint cannot give an impartial trial), and Prob. Code § 1129 (repealed; now see Prob. Code § 17304) (allowing transfers of testamentary trust proceedings to another county). On the same day, the trustee also filed a statement with the secretary of state pursuant to former Corp. Code § 24003 [see now Corp. Code § 18200] listing its office in San Francisco as its principal office. The attorney general, a real party in interest, and Wells Fargo Bank, an investment trustee, asked that the Chairperson of the Judicial Council be requested to appoint a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear matters relating to the trust if the court found the trust's motion meritorious, rather than moving the proceedings to another county. The trustee indicated its willingness to comply with this request in its response to the county's opposition to its motion. The trial court denied the motion, and the Supreme Court stayed all proceedings pending its determination of the ensuing writ proceeding.

The Supreme Court found that the trustee was entitled to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 394 as a matter of law and granted the writ ordering the trial court to ask that the Chairperson of the Judicial Council appoint a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear the case. The court stated that the county must be deemed to have brought the proceedings against the trustee within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 as a consequence of its having opposed the trustee's petition to modify the terms of the trust. In addition, the court stated, the county's attempt to remove the trustee constituted a proceeding brought by a county against the trustee for purposes of applying Code Civ. Proc. § 394 (37 Cal. 3d 285, 294-296) . The court rejected the county's argument that former Prob. Code § 1123.5 (now see Prob. Code § 15642), placing power to remove the trustee in the court sitting in probate that has jurisdiction over the trust, and former Prob. Code § 1123.7 (now see Prob. Code § 17000), making the jurisdictional and procedural provisions of former Prob. Code § 1123.5 (now Prob. Code § 15642) and former Prob. Code § 1123.6 (now see Prob. Code § 15642(e)) exclusive operate to prevent a change of venue pursuant to the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 394. In doing so, the court noted that nothing in these sections prevents the appointment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county to preside over the proceedings (37 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294) . Concluding that the trustee's activities in the forum county did not preclude it from relief under the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 394, the court held that the trustee's filing with the secretary of state entitled the trustee to be treated as a corporation with its principal place of business in another county for purposes of applying Code Civ. Proc. § 394 (37 Cal. 3d 285, 296-301) .

In Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847 , the Bay Area Rapid Transit District (BART) brought actions against suppliers of its transit vehicles and other principal contractors who had supplied faulty services and allegedly faulty equipment. The trial court granted a motion ordering a separate trial on causes of action concerning an accident on one of BART's lines, but denied defendants' motions for a change of venue. The trial court apparently denied the motion for change of venue on the ground that BART did not qualify as a "local agency within a certain county" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 because its operations encompassed a number of counties, rather than just the forum county. The trial court also deemed the defendants ineligible for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 394 because each of them did business in the forum county.

The Supreme Court issued writs of mandate directing the trial court to order a change of venue to a neutral county in the actions. The court held that BART was a "local agency within a county" for purposes of applying Code Civ. Proc. § 394, reasoning that the statute's main purpose of avoiding potential prejudice would not be served if the cases were heard by forum county jurors who were virtually certain to be BART taxpayers with a financial interest in any suit for damages (17 Cal. 3d 259, 264-268) . Turning then to the issue of whether the defendants did sufficient business in the forum county to be ineligible for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 394, the court stated that the proper test to be applied is whether a particular corporation's activities in the forum county are so substantial that it is reasonable to view them as "intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people of the community" (17 Cal. 3d 259, 271) . As a result, corporations with limited contacts in the forum county and principal places of business elsewhere are entitled to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 394 because they are regarded as outside corporations, thus creating the potential for prejudice in favor of the local governmental entity. The court determined that the defendant vehicle manufacturer was entitled to a change of venue because its contacts with the forum county were not substantial enough to deem the corporation as one doing business, within the meaning of the statute, in the forum county. Furthermore, the court held, all defendants should be tried in the same neutral county because the alleged fault of each of the defendants, if any, could not be decided separately from that of the other defendants (17 Cal. 3d 259, 271-276) . Turning finally to the accident case, the court ruled that the defendants in that action were also entitled to a change of venue because one of them was a successor corporation to a nonresident partnership that did not do any business under its own name in th forum county. In addition, the partnership had agreed to remain liable for its own acts and those of its successor. As a result, the transfer of the action in regard to the other defendants was required out of the interest in protecting against a multiplicity of litigation (17 Cal. 3d 259, 275-279) .

[b] Defendant Corporation Reasonably Viewed as Outsider

The facts and procedural background of San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285 , are discussed in § 238.52[3][a]. In concluding that the foundation, which was a trustee, would likely be viewed as an outsider and that therefore a transfer to a neutral county under Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a) was warranted, the court reviewed the standard for "doing business" for purposes of section 394 as stated in Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 271, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847 , which held that the issue turns on the extent to which the corporation is viewed as an outsider (37 Cal. 3d 285, 298-299) . Under a mechanical application of the Westinghouse standard the foundation's branch office and related activities in the county would disqualify it for relief under section 394. That conclusion, however, was based on a balancing of competing considerations inherent in a suit for damages between a county or other local governmental agency and a private party (37 Cal. 3d 285, 299) . The Court in San Francisco Foundation found the relevant considerations in the case before it to be materially different in that the county's primary objective was not the recovery of damages but judicial action that would preclude the foundation from diverting any part of the trust income, now distributed for charitable purposes wholly within the county, to similar purposes outside the county. Thus, the relevant inquiry is whether, in light not only of the status of the foundation but also of the nature of the litigation, the foundation is reasonably likely to be viewed as an outsider (37 Cal. 3d 285, 299-300) . Under the circumstance, the court concluded that the foundation's activities including its branch office in the county did not bar it from relief under section 394 (37 Cal. 3d 285, 300-301) .

The facts and procedural background of Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847 , are discussed in § 238.52[3][a]. In concluding that the defendants were entitled to a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 394 the court in relevant part noted that a corporation is doing business for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 only if its activities in the county are substantial enough that the corporation can reasonably be viewed as being intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people of the community. The question in each case is whether the corporation's activities are such that the corporation is reasonably likely to be viewed as an outsider, not whether it is actually so viewed. Under this standard, a corporation with its main place of business in the county in which it is sued cannot invoke section 394. Similarly, a corporation with a major branch office in the county would be denied the benefits of the statute. But a corporation with its principal place of business elsewhere and with only limited contacts in a county may obtain a change of venue in an action brought by a local governmental entity (17 Cal. 3d 259, 271 & n.7).

In the underlying complaint in Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817 (First Dist., Div. Five) , city residents brought suit against the city in the county in which the city was located to recoup damages suffered when their neighborhood was flooded due to the city's alleged faulty storm drainage and flood control systems. The city filed a cross complaint against the cross defendant, a company that provided consulting services regarding the storm drainage systems (the company), alleging causes of action for indemnification, apportionment of fault, and declaratory relief. In response to the cross complaint, the company brought a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a) to transfer venue from the county in which the suit was filed to a neutral county and a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1048(b) to sever the cross complaint from the underlying complaint. The trial court denied both motions. In rejecting the company's transfer request, the trial court indicated its belief that section 394 does not apply to cross complaints, but even if it did, the company could not obtain a transfer because it was doing business in the county where the action was brought. The company filed a petition for writ of mandate (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 952) .

The court of appeal concluded that the company was entitled to writ relief. On the issue of whether the company was doing business in the county in which the suit was filed, the court held that the company was not doing business in that county. Under Westinghouse Electric Corp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 259, 131 Cal. Rptr. 231, 551 P.2d 847 , for purposes of section 394(a), a corporation is doing business in a county if its activities in the county are substantial enough that the corporation can reasonably be viewed as being intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people of the community. Given that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 is to prevent a corporate defendant from suffering prejudice in favor of a local governmental entity, the statute should be liberally construed to promote this policy (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 957) . It is the quality of the business connections, and not their quantity or duration, that determines whether a party is doing business locally. The qualitative analysis must focus on whether the types of contacts with the county are substantial enough for the company to be reasonably viewed as closely associated with the community. In the case before the court, the litany of the company's business activities in the county were not substantial enough for the company to be reasonably viewed as being intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people in the community (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 961, 964) .

In addition to the lack of evidence of activities by the company to tie it to the local community, the allegations in the case further justified a change of venue to a neutral county (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 963) . The court noted that the reasoning of Westinghouse Electric Corp. was extended in San Francisco Foundation v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 285 . While a mechanical application of Westinghouse Electric Corp. would have precluded a transfer given the foundation's substantial activities in the county in which the matter was pending, transfer was nevertheless found appropriate, as the San Francisco Foundation court held that " 'the relevant inquiry is whether, in light not only of the status of the foundation, but also of the nature of the litigation, the foundation is reasonably likely to be viewed as an outsider' " (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 958) . Given the nature of the dispute, the court found it reasonable to conclude that the foundation would be viewed as an outsider to the county residents despite the foundation's other connections in the county (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 963) . Under San Francisco Foundation, the relevant inquiry under section 394 includes an analysis of the nature of the litigation as well as the activities of the party seeking a change of venue (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 963) . As in San Francisco Foundation, the nature of the case posed a reasonable risk that the company would be viewed as an outsider to the county community (where the suit was pending) (80 Cal. App. 4th 948)..

The court also held that section 394 applies to cross-complaints, following Ohio Casualty Ins. Group v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 444, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 (Third Dist.) and declining to follow City of Chico v. Superior Court (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 187, 152 Cal. Rptr. 380 (First Dist., Div. Four) , (80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 954-957) .

[c] Assignment of Disinterested Judge From Neutral County

Brennan v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 454, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693 , involved a combined action and proceeding by a public water district located in Sutter County, and private plaintiffs, against Sutter County. Plaintiffs sought a change of venue, arguing that a change was mandatory because one of the plaintiffs was a "local agency" within Code Civ. Proc. § 394(3). The trial court denied the motion, and plaintiffs sought a petition for writ of mandate (30 Cal. App. 4th 454, 456) .

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order and to grant relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 394, either by transferring the action to a neutral county or assigning a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear the cause, although the court declined to specify which alternative should be adopted (30 Cal. App. 4th 454, 462-463) . The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 394 requires a change of venue in actions in which certain governmental entities are adversaries and either one objects to venue in the county where the defendant governmental entity resides, unless a jury is not of right or a jury is waived, in which case the court may, in lieu of transfer, request assignment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county. The court observed that three of four counts in the petition and complaint by the water district sought relief in mandamus and the fourth count requested declaratory relief based on allegations in the other three counts. It found that although there is no right to a jury trial in a mandamus proceeding, the superior court has discretion to grant one if there is an issue of fact essential to resolution of the case, and that there is no right to a jury in actions for declaratory relief. It then concluded that the trial court should not have denied the motion, but should have either granted it as to the water district or requested assignment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county. As to the remaining plaintiffs, they were not entitled to avail themselves of the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 (30 Cal. App. 4th 454, 460-462) .

[d] Contractual Provisions Waiving The Right to Transfer to a Neutral County are Void

In Arntz Builders v. Superior Court of Contra Costa County (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 346 , the County sued the builder for breach of contract, and the builder sought to change venue to another neutral county pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 394 and 397. The construction contract between petitioner builder and real party in interest County provided that any action arising out of the contract would be brought in that county and expressly waived the builder's right to remove the action to a neutral venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 394. Despite many intervening decisions on the matter, the appellate court followed General Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson (1929) 207 Cal. 285, 277 P. 1039 , which held a contractual venue selection clause to be void. Thus, the court held that the contractual provision purporting to waive a defendant's right to transfer an action to a neutral county pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 394 was invalid (122 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1200) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transfer to Neutral County

Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 948, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817 , is discussed in § 238.52[3][b].

In Ohio Casualty Ins. Group v. Superior Court (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 444, 451, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 , a construction company sued a school district in the superior court in the county in which the district was situated. The district filed a cross complaint against the company and the company's insurer. The insurer moved for a change of venue to a neutral county pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 394. The trial court denied the motion (30 Cal. App. 4th 444, 446-447) . The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ directing the superior court to vacate its order and to enter a new order granting the motion. The court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 394 applies to cross complainants and cross defendants, criticizing and rejecting City of Chico v. Superior Court (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 187, 190-192, 152 Cal. Rptr. 380 , to the extent that it strictly construed the statute to exclude cross-defendants (30 Cal. App. 4th 444, 450-451) .

The court also found that when, as here, the motion is properly brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 394, the moving party is not required to assume the burden of showing actual prejudice. Under this section, prejudice is presumed, and the granting of the motion is mandatory unless the trial court finds that the nonmoving party would suffer actual prejudice from the requested change of venue (30 Cal. App. 4th 444, 452) .

In Sutter Union High School Dist. v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 795, 190 Cal. Rptr. 182 , a teacher filed a petition in Sacramento County for a writ of mandamus to compel a Commission on Professional Competence to set aside its decision to dismiss her from her employment [see Educ. Code § 44944(c)(1)]. The trial court denied the school district's motion to transfer the case to Sutter County, ruling that Sacramento County, as a "neutral" county, was the proper county for commencement of the mandamus proceeding. In granting the school district's request to issue a writ of mandate, the court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 394 is applicable only after an action is commenced under proper rules of venue. Accordingly, because administrative mandate proceedings should be brought in the county in which the action arose (that is, Sutter County) under the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 393(1)(b), the action was not commenced under the proper rules of venue and the school district was entitled to have the case transferred to Sutter County.

In Central Contra Costa Sanitary Dist. v. Superior Court (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 702, 148 Cal. Rptr. 801 , a sanitary district, determined to be a local agency within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 394(1), was sued in the county that was the principal place of business of both the plaintiff and the district's codefendant. The district was located in another county. The trial court denied the district's motion for a change of venue on the ground that venue was properly laid in the county in which the codefendant had its principal place of business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to set aside its order, the court of appeal ruled that the venue provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 394(1) (now Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)) govern actions against local agencies. In reaching this conclusion, the court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), by its own terms ("except as otherwise provided by law"), is subordinated to other statutes laying venue (84 Cal. App. 3d 702, 705) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.53

§ 238.53 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)] to Court Having Jurisdiction of Estate Represented by Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Conservator, or Trustee Sued in His/Her Official Capacity [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO CHANGE THE VENUE OF THIS ACTION TO _____ COUNTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS BEING SUED IN HIS/HER OFFICIAL CAPACITY AS A REPRESENTATIVE OF AN ESTATE ON A CLAIM FOR THE PAYMENT OF MONEY OR FOR THE RECOVERY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY, AND _____ COUNTY IS THE COUNTY HAVING JURISDICTION OF THE ESTATE THAT DEFENDANT REPRESENTS.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer to Proper County. Except as otherwise provided in Probate Code Section 17005 pertaining to trustees, when a defendant is sued in an official or representative capacity as executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, or trustee on a claim for the payment of money or for the recovery of personal property, the county that has jurisdiction of the estate that the defendant represents is the proper county for the trial of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for a change of venue when: (1) the defendant has been sued in his or her official capacity as an executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, or trustee; (2) the claim is one for the payment of money or for the recovery of personal property; (3) the action is not governed by Prob. Code § 17005, pertaining to trustees; (4) suit was filed in a county other than that which has jurisdiction of the estate the defendant represents; and (5) the defendant desires change of venue to the county having jurisdiction of such estate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1]. For discussion of venue in actions against personal representatives, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Venue (Matthew Bender).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.54

§ 238.54 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Action Against Unincorporated Association [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO CHANGE THE VENUE OF THIS ACTION TO _____ COUNTY BECAUSE DEFENDANT UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATION HAS FILED A STATEMENT LISTING ITS PRINCIPAL OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND THEREFORE VENUE IN THIS ACTION IS THE SAME AS IF DEFENDANT WERE A CORPORATION. _____ COUNTY WOULD BE THE PROPER COUNTY FOR TRIAL OF THIS ACTION IF DEFENDANT WERE A CORPORATION BECAUSE _____ [specify basis for venue]. THIS COUNTY IS NOT A PROPER COUNTY FOR TRIAL OF THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify reason why original county would not be proper venue under venue rules applicable to actions against corporations].

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Unincorporated Association. When an unincorporated association has filed a statement with the Secretary of State designating its principal office in California, venue is the same as it would be if the unincorporated association were a corporation and, for the purpose of determining the proper county for suit, the principal place of business of the unincorporated association is deemed to be the principal office thereof in California as listed in such statement (Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a change of venue when the defendant is an unincorporated association that has filed a statement listing its principal office in California [see Corp. Code § 18200] with the Secretary of State and when suit against it has been filed in a county that would not be a proper place of trial under the venue rules applicable to actions against corporations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2]. For further discussion of venue of actions against unincorporated associations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Venue (Matthew Bender).

These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the proper place for trial of an action against a corporation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (venue in action against corporation); see also Ch. 52, Corporations]. Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should refer to facts showing that the county in which the action was commenced is not a proper place for trial of the action under the venue rules applicable to actions against corporations and that the county to which transfer is sought is a proper county for trial of the action under those venue rules. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda relating to venue with respect to actions by or against corporations, see Ch. 52, Corporations , in this set.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.55

§ 238.55 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in County Where Injury Occurred--Action Against State [Gov. Code § 955.2]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

WHEN THE STATE IS NAMED AS A DEFENDANT IN AN ACTION FOR _____ [INJURY TO PERSON or INJURY TO PERSONAL PROPERTY or WRONGFUL DEATH], THE PROPER COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF THE ACTION IS IN THE COUNTY WHERE THE _____ [INJURY or INJURY CAUSING DEATH] OCCURRED.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Transfer Mandatory on Proper Showing. [See § 238.30[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Venue in County Where Injury Occurred. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, when the State is named as a defendant in any action or proceeding for death or injury to person or personal property and the injury or the injury causing death occurred within California, the proper court for the trial of the action is a court of competent jurisdiction in the county where the injury or injury causing death occurred (Gov. Code § 955.2).

[Optional] D. Discretion to Change Venue. The court may, on motion, change the place of the trial in the same manner and under the same circumstances as the place of trial may be changed when an action is between private parties. However, discretion to choose a different venue from that required under Gov. Code § 955.2 is conferred only on the superior court of the county where the injury occurred (Gov. Code § 955.2; State of California v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 328, 330, 238 Cal. Rptr. 315).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for change of venue when the state of California is named as defendant and the claim is for personal injury, injury to personal property, or wrongful death.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Change Venue

In State of California v. Superior Court (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 328, 238 Cal. Rptr. 315 , plaintiff brought an action in Los Angeles County Superior Court against the State of California for personal injuries suffered by plaintiff in an injury that took place in Inyo County. The State moved for a change of venue to Inyo County on the ground that Gov. Code § 955.2 required the action to be tried there, where the injury occurred. The trial court denied defendant's motion. It found that it could determine venue on its own in accordance with the second sentence of Gov. Code § 955.2, which states, "[t]he court may, on motion, change the place of the trial in the same manner and under the same circumstances as the place of trial may be changed where an action is between private parties." The trial court decided that the action should remain in Los Angeles, where all of the parties and most of the witnesses to plaintiff's injuries were located. The State petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted a peremptory writ to the State, directing the Los Angeles Superior Court to vacate its order denying the motion for change of venue and to enter a new order granting the motion. The court remarked that the command of Gov. Code § 955.2 was clear, and the court lacked discretion to decline to follow it. Discretion to choose a different venue is conferred by the statute only on the superior court of the county where the injury occurred, which was in the instant case, Inyo County. The court added that the principle of liberal construction of venue provisions to afford citizens an accessible forum cannot countermand an unambiguous statute (193 Cal. App. 3d 328, 330) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
2. Change to Court Where Local Cause of Action Should Be Tried

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.56-238.69

[Reserved]

§§ 238.56[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.70

§ 238.70 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Commenced in County of Residence of Moving Defendant's Codefendant

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION
vs.	)	TO MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: None set
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]

_____

A MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE TO THE COUNTY IN WHICH THE MOVING DEFENDANT RESIDES WILL BE DENIED WHEN THE ACTION WAS FILED IN THE COUNTY IN WHICH AT LEAST ONE DEFENDANT RESIDES.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. In the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary, the presumption is that the county in which an action is brought is, prima facie, the proper county when the court in which the action is brought has subject matter jurisdiction (Chase v. South P. C. R. Co. (1890) 83 Cal. 468, 472).

B. Venue in County of Necessary and Proper Codefendant's Residence. A defendant is not entitled to have an action removed to the county of his/her residence unless it appears that none of the other necessary and proper defendants is a resident of the county where the action is brought (Independent Iron Wks. v. Amer. Pres. Lines, Ltd. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 858, 860, 221 P.2d 939).

[Optional] C. Joinder of Actions and Parties. Under the liberal statutory joinder rules, a number of causes of action may properly be joined in the same complaint, and it is not necessary that each defendant be included in every cause of action. Thus, if a defendant is properly joined as to one or more but less than all of the causes of action sued on, venue in the county of his/her residence is proper (Monogram Co. v. Kingsley (1951) 38 Cal. 2d 28, 31-32, 237 P.2d 265).

[Optional] D. Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change. A plaintiff who has brought his/her action in the proper county will not be compelled to go elsewhere merely because all of the defendants prefer it (Greenleaf v. Jack (1901) 135 Cal. 154, 155, 67 P. 17).

[Optional] E. Filing of Cross-Complaint. The filing of a cross-complaint by defendant will not support a plaintiff's subsequent motion for change of venue when venue has been established as the proper venue based on the original complaint (K.R.L. Partnership v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 490, 506, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his or her residence when the action or proceeding was filed in the county in which at least one necessary and proper party defendant resides.

An optional additional point (Paragraph C) is included to cover situations in which multiple causes of action are joined against multiple defendants and a defendant is properly joined as to one or more of those actions but less than all of them. Another optional additional point (Paragraph D) is included for use when the plaintiff has filed his or her action in the proper county, but all of the defendants joined in a motion for change of venue to a county in which some of them reside.

For situations in which a resident defendant may be described as "necessary and proper" by reason of the fact that the plaintiff joined the defendant in a good faith belief that he or she had a cause of action against that resident defendant, see § 238.71.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Propriety of Chosen Venue

In Chase v. South P. C. R. Co. (1890) 83 Cal. 468 , an action in which the plaintiff sought damages for the defendant's alleged wrongful refusal to carry his products to market, the suit was filed in the county in which the alleged injury occurred, and the defendant railroad moved for a change of venue to the county of its principal place of business on the ground that the liability sued on did not arise in the county in which the action was filed. The only venue laid in the complaint was to show the county within which the defendant refused to perform its duty as a common carrier. However, since the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action, and since an action on the breach of the obligation could be brought in the county where the breach of the obligation could be brought in the county where the breach occurred, as well as in the county where the defendant had its principal place of business, the action was presumptively brought in the proper county, and it devolved on the defendant to show that the breach of its obligation as a common carrier did not occur in the county of suit. Having failed to do that, the defendant's motion for change of venue was held to have been properly denied.

[b] Venue in County of Necessary and Proper Codefendant's Residence

In Independent Iron Wks. v. Amer. Pres. Lines (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 858, 221 P.2d 939 , an action to quiet title to personal property was filed in the county of residence of one of the defendants, and two other defendants filed a motion for change of venue to the county in which they were residents. In reversing the order granting the motion, the Supreme Court noted that under Code Civ. Proc. § 395, the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper court for the trial of the action. The Court then stated that a defendant is not entitled to have an action removed to the county of his or her residence unless it appears that none of the other defendants is a resident of the county where the action is brought. Even when all of the defendants join in a demand for, or consent to, a change of venue, the cause will be retained if the complaint attempts in apparent good faith to state a cause of action against a defendant who resides in the county where the action was commenced. When a defendant who resides in the county in which an action is brought is a necessary and proper party defendant, it is immaterial that another, and the principal, defendant resides in another county. On analysis, the Court concluded that the defendant which was the resident of the county in which the action was brought was not only a proper but a necessary party defendant.

[c] Joinder of Actions and Parties

In Monogram Co. v. Kingsley (1951) 38 Cal. 2d 28, 237 P.2d 265 , the plaintiffs brought an action in 20 counts for libel, slander, and unfair competition in the county where one party, Lewis, who was a defendant as to 12 of the counts, resided. In affirming the lower court's order denying motions by all of the other defendants for change of venue to the county of their residence, the Supreme Court adverted to the general rule that the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper county for the trial of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395]. When a defendant who resides in the county in which an action is brought is a necessary and proper party defendant, it is immaterial that another, and the principal defendant, resides in another county. Accordingly, a plaintiff who has brought his or her action in the proper county will not be compelled to go elsewhere merely because some or even all of the defendants prefer it.

The rule that a nonresident defendant may not be deprived of the right to a change of venue to the county of his or her residence because the plaintiff included other causes of action in the same complaint on which such defendant is not entitled to a change of venue applies in cases in which none of the defendants reside in the county in which the actions were commenced. However, by reason of the liberal statutory joinder rules, a number of causes of action may properly be joined in the same complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 427.10], and it is not necessary that each defendant be included in every cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 379(b)]. These joinder provisions must be correlated with the venue provisions. And, in the absence of any objection that Lewis had been improperly named in 12 of the transitory causes of action joined in the complaint, the action as an entire cause was properly retained in the county of his residence.

[d] Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change

In Greenleaf v. Jack (1901) 135 Cal. 154, 67 P. 17 , the plaintiff, a creditor of a bank brought an action against the shareholders of that bank in the county where the cause of action arose and where some of the defendants resided. Despite the fact that the defendants all joined in a motion for change of venue to another county in which other defendants resided, the Supreme Court affirmed the lower court order denying change of venue. The Court noted that under the circumstances it was the right of the plaintiff to bring and prosecute the action in the county in which it was commenced and held that the consent of the resident defendants to change the place of trial to another county could not take away that right. To entitle the moving party to a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 395, it must appear that none of the defendants resided in the county in which suit was commenced.

[e] Filing of Cross-Complaint

In K.R.L. Partnership v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 490, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 , plaintiffs filed a legal malpractice action against their former attorney. The case was transferred to the county in which the attorney resided. The attorney then filed a cross-complaint for breach of contract for the amounts the attorney claimed was owed by the clients. The plaintiffs moved to transfer the case to a different county, but the court held that, once proper venue had been established based on a complaint, a cross-defendant is not entitled to seek a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b based on a compulsory cross-complaint. Rather, the cross-complaint is to be tried in the same county that has been established as the proper venue based on the original complaint (120 Cal. App. 4th 490, 505) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Propriety of Chosen Venue

In Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Packwood C. Co. (1920) 50 Cal. App. 296, 195 P. 284 , a contract action that was commenced in the county where the contract was made, the defendant sought change of venue to the county in which it had its principal place of business. In affirming the lower court's order denying the motion, the court of appeals stated that in the absence of an affirmative showing with respect to proper venue, the presumption is that the county in which the title of the action shows that it is brought is, prima facie, the proper county when the court in which the action is brought has jurisdiction of the subject matter thereof. The court further noted that the prima facie showing would be sufficient to cast the burden on the defendant to show that the contract was not made, or to be performed, or that the breach thereof by it, or its liability by reason of the breach, did not occur or arise in that county.

In Ward Mfg. Co. v. Miley (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 603, 281 P.2d 343 , a suit joining an action on an account stated and an action on a common count for goods sold and delivered, in affirming an order denying change of venue from the county in which the contract involved was entered into and was to be performed to the county of the defendant's residence, the court of appeal noted the presumption that, in the absence of an affirmative showing in that particular, the county in which the title of the action shows it is brought is, prima facie, the proper county when the court in which the action is brought has subject matter jurisdiction. It also noted that the averments of the complaint are to be deemed true on a motion for change of venue, at least to the extent that they are not controverted. The burden of overthrowing the prima facie venue showing made by the complaint rested in the moving defendant. A showing as to his residence was not enough; he had to show that the contract was not made, or to be performed, in the county where the action was pending. On an analysis of the facts, the court concluded that no such showing had been made.

In Hellman v. Logan (1905) 148 Cal. 58, 82 P. 848 , suit was begun in the county in which a corporate defendant was resident. That defendant and the other defendant, an individual, sought change of venue to the individual defendant's county of residence. In affirming the lower court's order denying change of venue, the Supreme Court noted that the facts that the plaintiffs might have maintained an action for a part of the relief to which they were entitled and that in an action for such limited relief only the individual defendant could properly be made a party defendant would not justify a change of venue of the action they stated in the complaint in the case at issue. The test is to be made by ascertaining who are necessary parties to the action as stated in the complaint, and which parties are necessary in order to enable the plaintiffs to obtain all the relief sought. If one of the parties who are thus made necessary resides in the county in which the action is begun, the action is properly begun and may be properly tried in the county, although the other and principal defendant resides in another county.

[b] Venue in County of Necessary and Proper Codefendant

In Colusa Air Pollution Control Dist. v. Superior Court (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 277 Cal. Rptr. 110 , two of several public agency defendants sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to grant their motions to transfer the action by 21 California manufacturers, retailers, and contractors against eight public (or related) agencies for declaratory and injunctive relief and for a writ of mandate, insofar as it applied to each of the two petitioning agencies, to their respective counties. The court of appeal denied the peremptory writ on the grounds: (1) the moving defendants were only two of the eight different public (or related) agencies sued on common issues of fact and law; (2) a severance would result in an unnecessary and wasteful multiplicity of litigation; and (3) at least a portion of plaintiffs' claims arose in the county in which the action was pending (226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 883) . The court acknowledged what while a defendant is normally entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 395 to have a transitory action tried in the county of his or her residence, the rule doesn't apply when there are several defendants who reside in different counties (226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 890) . The court said that in such a case either the plaintiff must be denied the privilege of joinder or the residence requirement must be modified, and that the latter course had been followed in Code Civ. Proc. § 395, which provides for trial in the county in which the defendants "or some of them" reside. The resulting rule is that a plaintiff may bring a good transitory action against two or more defendants in the county of one who is a proper party, even though the other defendants are nonresidents (226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 890) . The court added that this rule applies even though all of the causes of action do not affect all parties, and that venue statutes do not relate to causes of action, but to actions, and prescribe the place where the action in its entirety may be tried (226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 890) .

[c] Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change

In Monogram Co. v. Kingsley (1951) 38 Cal. 2d 28, 237 P.2d 265 , all of the defendants joined in a motion for change of venue to the county in which all but one of them resided from the county in which the other defendant resided. In affirming the lower court's denial of a change of venue, the Supreme Court ruled that a plaintiff who has brought his action in the proper county, as it found in this case, will not be compelled to go elsewhere merely because all of the defendants prefer it.

The procedural background of Colusa Air Pollution Control Dist. v. Superior Court (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 277 Cal. Rptr. 110 , is discussed in § 238.70[4][b]. In denying a peremptory writ of mandate seeking to compel the trial court to grant the motions of two of eight defendants to transfer the action to other counties, the court of appeal said that when a plaintiff brings a good transitory action against two or more defendants in the county of one who is a proper party, the nonresident defendants cannot obtain a change of venue even if the resident defendant joins in the motion (226 Cal. App. 3d 880, 890) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.71

§ 238.71 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)--Resident Codefendant Properly Joined

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

A RESIDENT CODEFENDANT IS NOT IMPROPERLY JOINED SOLELY FOR THE PURPOSE OF HAVING THE ACTION TRIED IN THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SECTION 395(a) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, WHEN PLAINTIFF HAS JOINED RESIDENT CODEFENDANT AS A PARTY IN GOOD FAITH.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

[Optional] B. Joinder of Actions and Parties. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph C.]

[Optional] C. Joinder of All Defendants in Motion for Change. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph D.]

D. Good Faith Joinder of Codefendant. On the hearing of a motion for change of venue to the county in which other codefendants reside when an action has been filed in the county in which one of several codefendants resides, the real issue for determination by the trial court is whether the plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant as a party, has reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that the plaintiff had a cause of action against the resident defendant. If the plaintiff did have such reasonable grounds, then it cannot be said that the resident codefendant was improperly joined as a defendant or was made a defendant solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county of the residence of the resident codefendant within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 395(a) (Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 603, 328 P.2d 953).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the motion of one codefendant for change of venue to the county of his or her residence on the ground that the codefendant who is a resident of the county in which suit was brought was improperly joined for the sole purpose of having the action tried in the county of suit.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Faith Joinder of Defendant

In Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953 , suit involving liability under a lease of real property was filed in Los Angeles County, the residence of one of the defendants and the original lessee of that property. The other defendants, who were sublessees, resided in Kern County and sought venue in that county. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's order granting a change of venue to Kern County.

On the issue raised by the other defendants that the resident codefendant had been joined only for the purpose of securing venue in Los Angeles County, the Supreme Court stated that the first question is whether the complaint states a cause of action against the resident defendant. On this question, the Court held that the resident defendant was liable under the lease and was a necessary and proper party to the action and that the complaint stated a cause of action against him.

On the venue question, the Court stated the rule that on the hearing of a motion for change of venue under such circumstances, the real issue for determination by the trial court is whether the plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant as a party, had reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that the plaintiff had a cause of action against the resident defendant. If the plaintiff did, then it could not be said that the resident codefendant was improperly joined as a defendant or was made a defendant solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county of that defendant's residence within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Good Faith Joinder of Codefendant

In Buerkle v. Superior Court (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 370, 29 Cal. Rptr. 509, 379 P.2d 941 , an action for personal injuries and wrongful death arising out of a collision involving the plaintiff's truck caused by the alleged malfunction of that truck, the Supreme Court denied a peremptory writ of mandate to compel the trial court to grant a change of venue to the county wherein the defendant insurer's principal place of business was located. The defendant insurance company's liability was predicated on its negligent failure to inspect and repair the truck after a prior collision, and the individual defendant's liability was predicated on his negligent failure to repair and inspect the truck as he had contracted with the insurance company to do.

The Court noted that the provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), that a defendant's residence cannot be considered for venue purposes if he is improperly joined or has been made a defendant solely for the purpose of having the action tried where he resides, does not justify a change of venue if the plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant, has reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that he has a cause of action against that defendant and the cause of action pleaded is not prima facie so glaringly defective as to be beyond correction by amendment.

In McClung v. Watt (1922) 190 Cal. 155, 211 P. 17 , an individual defendant moved for change of venue to the county of his residence from the county of residence of his codefendant, a corporation, on the grounds not only that he was entitled to trial in the county of his residence but also that the corporation had been joined solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county of the corporate defendant's residence.

In affirming the lower court's denial of the motion, the Supreme Court noted that the right to a change of place of trial to the residence of a defendant must necessarily be determined by the status of the parties joined as defendants in the action as revealed by the pleading existing at the time the party claiming the right first appeared in the action. If the complaint attempts, in apparent good faith, to state a cause of action against the corporate defendant, the individual defendant does not have the right to have the place of trial changed to the county of his residence. The sufficiency of the complaint and the good faith of the pleader are not to be denied, on a motion for a change of venue, unless it can clearly be seen and said that the allegations of fact concerning the corporate defendant are in no wise related to the facts alleged and relied upon as a cause of action against the defendant. The Court added that, even though the complaint might be subject to demurrer for some insufficiency of fact or ambiguity or uncertainty, it was enough for the purpose of a determination of the demand for change of venue that the cause of action purportedly stated against the corporate defendant was apparently pleaded in good faith and was not, prima facie, so glaringly and vitally defective as to be beyond correction by amendment. On analysis of the complaint, the Court concluded that it could not be held that the individual defendant was the only defendant against whom the facts pleaded in the complaint would justify a judgment and, consequently, it could not be said that the joinder was made in bad faith and for the purpose of preventing a transfer of the action to the county of the moving defendant.

The Court distinguished those cases holding that where an action is brought against an individual and a corporation, the individual is entitled to change of venue to the county of his residence, on the ground that in none of the cited cases was the action commenced in the county in which the corporate defendant had its principal place of business, but, rather, in another of the counties authorized by Cal. Const., Art. XII, § 16 [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. The Court held that under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), authorizing trial in the county in which the defendant, or some of them, reside, the action was properly brought in the county where the corporation had its principal place of business.

In Russello v. Mori (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 828, 315 P.2d 343 , a case in which there was an issue as to the existence of an agency, the court affirmed an order denying the moving defendants' motion for change of venue from the county of their codefendant's residence to the county of their residence in an action for damages for breach of contract and declaratory relief against the principals and their agent. The court determined that the complaint did shadow forth the semblance of a cause of action against the agent and added that where there is an issue as to the existence of an agency, both the alleged agent and principal may be joined for the purpose of determining their relationship and liability.

In Wiley v. Long (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 230, 306 P.2d 1063 , in reversing an order granting the moving defendants' motion for change of venue to the county of their residence in an action for libel where the action was commenced in the county of residence of one defendant whose allegedly libelous communication was argued by the moving defendants to have been privileged, the court of appeal said that in determining the question of whether the resident defendant has been joined solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county of his residence, the real issue for determination by the trial court was whether plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant as a party, had reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that the plaintiff had a cause of action against the resident defendant. It added, however, that on the hearing of a motion for change of venue, the court should not try, upon conflicting affidavits, the issues of fact going to the merits of the cause of action stated against the resident defendant.

In Gottesfeld v. Richmaid Ice Cream Co. (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 854, 252 P.2d 973 , in affirming an order changing venue on the ground that the resident defendant had been improperly joined, the court of appeal restated the rules cited above, including the rule that it is enough, on the hearing and determination of a demand for change of venue, that the cause of action purported to be stated against the defendant was apparently pleaded in good faith.

In determining the question as to whether the resident defendant has been joined solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the county of his residence, the real issue for determination by the trial court is whether the plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant as a party, has reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that the plaintiff had a cause of action against the resident defendant.

In determining whether the plaintiff did in good faith believe that a cause of action existed against the resident defendant, the court was entitled to consider the evasive character of the allegations of the complaint insofar as the resident defendant was concerned, the fact that no relief was in fact prayed for against him, the fact that plaintiff singled him out of all of the defendents and inserted in his complaint an allegation of that defendant's residence in the county in which the action was commenced, the fact that the resident defendant protested the action which is alleged as the culmination of the conspiracy among the other defendants, and the evasive character of plaintiff's counter affidavit when the good faith of his joinder of the resident defendant was called in question. Fraud or bad faith, like any other fact, may be inferred from circumstantial evidence. On the whole, the court concluded that the trial court was justified in finding that even though the complaint may have shadowed forth the semblance of a cause of action against the resident defendant, the plaintiff did not in good faith believe that a cause of action existed against him but joined him as a defendant for the sole purpose of retaining jurisdiction in the county in which suit had been filed.

In Dallman Supply Co. v. Sweet (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 780, 195 P.2d 864 , a case in which the plaintiff alleged doubt as to the defendant from whom it was entitled to redress, thus necessitating the joinder of both parties, the court of appeal reversed an order granting the corporate defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of its principal place of business from the county of residence of the individual defendant in an action for declaratory relief, money due, and damages. The court stated that under the circumstances the plaintiff had in apparent good faith stated a cause of action against the resident defendant and added that neither the sufficiency nor the good faith of the cause of action stated could be denied.

In Freeman v. Dowling (1933) 219 Cal. 213, 25 P.2d 980 , the plaintiff sued the City of Palo Alto and certain of its officers as well as an individual defendant who had been his partner in an enterprise that had undertaken to perform improvements for the city. Suit was filed in Santa Clara County and the individual defendant sought change of venue to the county of his residence. In affirming orders denying motions for change of venue, the Supreme Court stated that on a motion for a change of venue, if the allegations do no more than shadow forth the semblance of a cause of action, they are proof against assault upon the ground that they are sham and frivolous. The Court added that it is enough, on the hearing and determination of the demand for a change of venue, that the cause of action purported to be stated against the other defendant was apparently pleaded in good faith and is not, prima facie, so glaringly and vitally defective as to be beyond correction by amendment.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.72

§ 238.72 Opposing Motion for change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)--Action Commenced in County Where Real Property Which Is Subject of Action Is Located [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

THE PROPER COUNTY FOR THE TRIAL OF A LOCAL ACTION RELATING TO REAL PROPERTY IS IN THE COUNTY WHERE THE REAL PROPERTY IS LOCATED.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Venue Determined by Subject Matter of Complaint. [See § 238.50[1], Paragraph C.]

C. Venue in County Where Real Property Is Located. [See § 238.50[1], Paragraph D.]

[Optional] D. Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental. [See § 238.51[1], Paragraph D.]

[Optional] E. Venue of Action for Slander of Title. An action for slander of title to real property is an action for injury to real property and the county in which such real property is located is the proper county for the trial thereof (Coley v. Hecker (1928) 206 Cal. 22, 27-28, 272 P. 1045).

[Optional] F. Action for Malicious Prosecution Resulting in Real Property Depreciation. Although a cause of action for malicious prosecution is one in tort for damages, where the essential damage alleged to flow from the malicious prosecution is the depreciation in value of real estate, the action is one for injury to real property and is local in nature (Wick v. Mattison (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 608, 610, 24 Cal. Rptr. 677).

[Optional] G. Action to Quiet Title and Cancel Instrument An action to quiet title to land and to cancel the instrument affecting title thereto is local in character and triable in the county in which the real property is situated (Kejr v. Construction Engineers, Inc. (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 817, 819, 245 P.2d 21).

[Optional] H. Action to Quiet Title to Real Property. An action to quiet title to real property is purely local and triable in the county where the real property is situated (Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 106, 89 P.2d 179).

[Optional] I. Action for Damages for Fraudulent Inducement to Dismiss Quiet Title Action. An action for damages arising out of fraudulent representations which induced the plaintiff to dismiss a prior quiet title action is local and triable in the county where the real property is situated (Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 108, 89 P.2d 179).

[Optional] J. Action for Consequential Injuries to Real Property. An action for consequential injury to real property is within the term "injury to real property" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 392 and is triable in the county in which the real property is situated (Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 108, 89 P.2d 179).

[Optional] K. Action Requiring Determination of Interest in Real Property. An action in which a plaintiff would have to prove ownership of his/her property before establishing any right to damages for direct or consequential injury thereto calls for the determination in some form of an estate and interest in real property and is triable in the county where the real property is situated (Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 108-109, 89 P.2d 179).

[Optional] L. Action for Damages for Physical Injury to Real Property. An action to recover damages for physical injury to real property is a local action and venue is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392 (Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202).

[Optional] M. Action for Damages to Growing Crops. An action for damage to growing crops, which are considered as part of the real property on which they are growing for venue, is an action to recover damages for physical injury to real property and, therefore, a local action triable in the county in which the real property is situated (Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202).

[Optional] N. Action for Damages for Inverse Condemnation. Where the only legal right to take possession of land without the consent of the owners thereof is under the power of eminent domain, whether by direct condemnation or by inverse condemnation, the action must be tried where the real property is situated (Williams v. Merced Irr. Dist. (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 238, 241, 48 P.2d 664).

[Optional] O. Action for Specific Performance by Vendee of Real Property. The county in which real property which is the subject of a contract of sale is the county in which an action brought by the vendee for specific performance of such contract should be tried (Santa Barbara Lodge No. 605 v. Penzner (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 494, 494, 231 P.2d 595).

[Optional] P. Creditor's Action on Fraudulent Conveyance. A creditor's action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance requires a determination of a right or interest in real property and, therefore, the action is local in character (Rice v. Schubert (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 638, 640-641, 226 P.2d 50).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his or her residence when the plaintiff has filed a wholly local action relating to real property of the type indicated below in the county in which the property is located, but the defendant has moved for change of venue to the county of his or her residence. Thus, this form may be used when the action with respect to real property is for: (1) its recovery; (2) the recovery of an estate or interest therein; (3) the determination, in any form, of the right to recovery thereof or of any estate or interest therein; (4) the injury thereto; or (5) the foreclosure of a lien or mortgage thereon.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[b] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum in support of a motion for change of venue to the court in the county where the real property involved in the action is located and the action is local in nature, see § 238.50. For a memorandum in support of a motion for change of venue to the county where a local cause of action arises for use when the main relief sought is local and transitory relief is only incidental, see § 238.51.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue When Main Relief Is Local and Transitory Issue Is Only Incidental

For discussion of Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 89 P. 120 , on the point involved, see § 238.51[1], Paragraph D.

[b] Venue of Action for Slander of Title

In Coley v. Hecker (1928) 206 Cal. 22, 272 P. 1045 , the defendants appealed from an order of the trial court denying their demand for change of venue to the county of which they were residents in an action to remove a cloud on the title to real property caused by the recording of an abstract of judgment and for damages for slander of title caused by that recording. The action was filed in the county in which the real property was situated and, in appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's order, holding that the venue of such an action lies in the county where the real property is situated under Code Civ. Proc. § 392.

The Court stated that the owner of the slandered title is given the right to bring and maintain an action in the county where the real property is located on the theory that the action is one in which the determination of the owner's right or interest is properly adjudicated and for the additional reason that slander of title is an injury to the real property. The term "injury to property" embraces every wrong which in legal contemplation is an injury to real property, not only the direct and forcible injury, but consequential injuries, thereatened injuries to land, and even mere nonfeasance, such as permissive waste, the Court observed.

[c] Action for Malicious Prosecution Resulting in Real Property Depreciation

In Wick v. Mattison (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 608, 24 Cal. Rptr. 677 , the plaintiff filed an action for malicious prosecution which alleged as damages the depreciation in value of the plaintiff's real property. The action was filed in the county where the land was situated and the trial court denied one defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the action was one for injury to real property. The cause of action for malicious prosecution unquestionably is one in tort for damages; but, said the court, the real question is: damages to what? The essential damage alleged to flow from the unfounded prosecution by the defendants was the depreciation in the value of the plaintiff's real estate. As in slander of title, said the court, the action was one for injury to real property. Thus, held the court, the action was local in nature.

[d] Action to Quiet Title and Cancel Instrument

Kejr v. Construction Engineers, Inc. (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 817, 245 P.2d 21 , was an action in which the plaintiff, who had entered into a recorded contract for the sale of timber on his land, sued in the county where the land was located to have the contract canceled on the ground of fraud and to have his title to the premises quieted. The defendant moved for change of venue to the county of its principal place of business and the trial court denied that motion. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a complaint seeking to quiet title and to cancel the instrument under which the defendant claims an interest in and to realty stated a local cause of action.

[e] Action to Quiet Title to Real Property

Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 89 P.2d 179 , was an action in which the complaint set forth two causes of action--one to quiet title to real property and the other for damages arising out of fraudulent representations which induced the plaintiff to dismiss a prior quiet title action. The action was filed in the county where the real property was situated. The defendants contended that since the second cause of action was transitory, they were entitled to have the case transferred to the county of their residence, and the trial court ordered the change of venue they sought. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the action was purely local in nature. It was conceded by the defendants that if it were not for the second cause of action, venue would be proper in the county where the land was located. This, said the court, was due to the fact that the action to quiet title comes directly and unquestionably under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392. However, as to the contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 392 was intended to include only physical interference with, or injury to, real property, such as waste, or physical trespass, the court noted that the trend of the decisions is that trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injuries as well as by direct and forcible injuries. In this case, said the court, the second cause of action was unquestionably based on a tort--damages arising out of fraudulent representations. The real question was: damages to what? The complaint alleged damages to the plaintiff's real property resulting from the dismissal of the prior action through the fraud of the defendants--a consequential injury covered by the term "injury to real property." Moreover, said the court, the complaint brought the action under that portion of Code Civ. Proc. § 392 governing venue of an action for the determination in any form of an estate or interest in real property. It was clear, said the court, that the plaintiff would have to prove ownership of his property, and of the easement in question, before he could establish any right to damages and this would call for the determination, in some form, of an estate and interest in real property.

[f] Action for Damages for Fraudulent Inducement to Dismiss Quiet Title Action

Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 89 P.2d 179 , is discussed in § 238.72[3][e].

[g] Action for Consequential Injuries to Real Property

Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 89 P.2d 179 , is discussed in § 238.72[3][e].

[h] Action Requiring Determination of Interest in Real Property

Strosnider v. Pomin (1939) 32 Cal. App. 2d 103, 89 P.2d 179 , is discussed in § 238.72[3][e].

[i] Action for Damages for Physical Injury to Real Property

Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202 , involved actions by four plaintiffs who were landowners and five plaintiffs who were lessees. The first four sought damages to farm soil and growing crops; the others sought damages to growing crops, all caused by an agricultural weed killer. Although all of the plaintiffs farmed in Modoc County, they filed suit in Siskiyou County. The defendant moved for change of venue to Modoc County and the trial court ordered the change for the first four actions but denied the change for the others, ruling that these were transitory. The defendant then brought the instant action in mandamus to require the trial court to order change of venue to Modoc County as to the latter five actions, contending that growing crops are real property for venue purposes.

The court of appeal granted the writ, holding that an action to recover damages for physical injury to real property is a local action governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392 and that a suit by a landowner or a lessee for damages to growing crops is a real property action with venue lying in the county where the land is situated. The court pointed out that the general rule is that growing crops are a part of the realty as long as unsevered. While Civ. Code § 658 defines real property and, for the purposes of sale, excepts industrial growing crops which are agreed to be severed before sale, the court stated that such declarations created fictions of law in order to arrive at just results in particular situations and demonstrate only that the law classifies growing crops as personalty for certain purposes, not necessarily for the purpose of venue. The venue rule governing actions for injury to real property, said the court, usually promotes the convenience of the court, litigants, and witnesses. It points to the most convenient forum as an original matter, relieving the defendant of the burden of demonstrating convenience. To this extent, a suit for injury to growing crops has the same characteristics as one for injury to the land or buildings. Thus, said the court, policy considerations support the rule that the venue of an action for damage to growing crops lies in the county in which the land on which they are growing is situated.

The complaints were framed in counts based on theories of negligent injury, negligent breach of contract, and breach of warranty. The addition of breach of warranty counts did not transform the suit into a mixed action triable in the county of residence of the defendant's dealer. The subject matter of the action, said the court, determines whether venue is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 392 and the injury to the real property (growing crops) was the subject matter of the action, even though the injury may have been caused by a breach of warranty.

[j] Action for Damages to Growing Crops

Stauffer Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 1, 71 Cal. Rptr. 202 , is discussed in § 238.72[3][i].

[k] Action for Damages for Inverse Condemnation

In Williams v. Merced Irr. Dist. (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 238, 48 P.2d 664 , the Supreme Court reversed a trial court order granting a motion for a change of venue in an action for damages for inverse condemnation from the county in which the land was situated to the county in which the defendant had its residence. In its exercise of its right to take and distribute water for public use, the defendant had constructed a dam across the Merced River and covered part of the plaintiffs' land. The plaintiffs owned remainder interests in the land and had not consented to the acts of the defendant which constituted a trespass and an injury to their real property and, the Court ruled, they could not be affected or defeated by any act of the life tenant, who had consented to the trespass. The only legal right of the defendant to take possession of land without the consent of the owners was under its power of eminent domain, and whether an eminent domain action is a direct condemnation or, as in this case, results in an inverse condemnation, the action had to be tried where the real property was situated, said the Court, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 392. The Court added that since this was so, the existence or nonexistence of a public use was a false quantity. The Court distinguished the instant case from Gallup v. Sacramento etc. Drainage Dist. (1915) 171 Cal. 71, 151 P. 1142 , pointing out that in the cited case the public corporation and the landowner had expressly agreed to the entry and taking for a public use so that the matter had become, therefore, simply a suit on a contract.

[l] Action for Specific Performance by Vendee of Real Property

In Santa Barbara Lodge No. 605 v. Penzner (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 494, 231 P.2d 595 , the court of appeal reversed a trial court order for change of venue of an action commenced by the vendee under a contract for the sale of real property in the county in which the land was situated. The trial court had granted the defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of which he was a resident. However, the court of appeal ruled that the county in which the real property was situated was the county in which the case should be tried.

[m] Creditor's Action on Fraudulent Conveyance

Rice v. Schubert (1951) 101 Cal. App. 2d 638, 226 P.2d 50 , was an action by a creditor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of real property located in the county where the action was brought. The defendants sought change of venue to the county where two of them resided. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order denying change of venue. The determinative question was whether the action was local or transitory. The court pointed out that in order to determine that question, it was necessary to ascertain the true character of the action as disclosed by the complaint and the character of the judgment which might be rendered on default. If the defendants had defaulted, the only relief which could have been granted would have been cancellation of the conveyance and thus the title to the property would necessarily be affected, the court observed. The nature of an action is local where it turns on the title to property, as distinct from the personal obligation involved, the court stated, and it was clear that the instant action turned on the title to the property. The question is whether the action requires the determination, in any form, of a right or interest in real property. The court noted that the plaintiff was authorized to bring the action under former Civ. Code § 3439.09 (now see Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)) and that an interest--that of the defendants--would be determined in the instant action. Thus, the court concluded that the action was local within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 392.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action for Specific Performance by Vendee of Real Property

In Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 89 P. 120 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 238.51[3][a], the Supreme Court ruled that the action (which was brought by the vendee under a contract for the sale of real property for specific performance and for an accounting for the proceeds from the land) was essentially one to determine a right to, or interest in, real property. The Court reversed the trial court's order refusing to change venue to the county where the land was situated, terming the action strictly local in character and clearly affecting the title to the land. It added that the gist of the action was specific performance with the principal relief sought being conveyance of the land.

In Hammon v. American etc. Mining Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 306, 21 Cal. Rptr. 409 , the court of appeal reversed a trial court order granting a motion for change of venue of an action for breach of a mineral lease to the county in which the land involved was situated, holding that the main relief sought was a money judgment and, thus, that the action was transitory and properly triable in the county where the action was brought. Even if the action involves realty, it constitutes, for venue purposes, a transitory action if the main relief sought is a money judgment. Thus, said the court, an action for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of realty is deemed local if brought by the vendee, since the vendee seeks possession (citing Santa Barbara Lodge No. 605 v. Penzner (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 494, 231 P.2d 595); but it is considered transitory if brought by the vendor, since the vendor merely seeks the purchase price.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.73

§ 238.73 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Tort Action Commenced in Proper County

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

WHEN AN ACTION FOR _____ [INJURY TO PERSON or INJURY TO PERSONAL PROPERTY OR WRONGFUL DEATH] MAY PROPERLY BE BROUGHT IN A COUNTY OTHER THAN THAT OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE, DEFENDANT MAY NOT HAVE SUCH AN ACTION THAT WAS COMMENCED IN A PROPER COUNTY TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Personal Tort Actions. If the action is for injury to person or personal property or for death from wrongful act or negligence, either the county where the injury or the injury causing death occurs or the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, shall be a proper county for the trial of the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)).

C. Action Commenced in One of Two Proper Counties. In actions for injury to person or personal property or for death from wrongful act or negligence, since the statute provides for venue in either of two counties, either one is a "proper county" for the trial thereof within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a), and if such an action is brought in the county in which the injury occurred, the court has no authority to change the place of trial to the county of the defendant's residence on the ground that the latter, alone, was the "proper county" (Gridley v. Fellows (1914) 166 Cal. 765, 768, 138 P. 355).

[Optional] D. Local Entity as Cross Defendant. When a tort action against a defendant is commenced in the proper county, Section 394(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to venue of proceedings against a local entity for injury caused by its negligence, does not require a change of venue if the local entity is only named as a cross defendant (City of Chico v. Superior Court (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 187, 191, 152 Cal. Rptr. 380).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue to the county in which the defendant resides in an action for injury to person or personal property or wrongful death which has been filed in the county in which the injury occurred.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[b] "Injury to Person" and "Injury to Property" Defined

As used in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), "injury to person" means bodily injury and not "personal injury" as this latter term is used in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 27 and 29, classifying all injuries that are not injuries to property as personal injuries [Graham v. Mixon (1917) 177 Cal. 88, 90-93, 169 P. 1003 ; Lucas v. Lucas Ranching Co. (1937) 18 Cal. App. 2d 453, 455-457, 64 P.2d 160] , and the term "injury to property" means physical or corporeal injury [Spangenberg v. Spangenberg (1932) 123 Cal. App. 387, 391, 11 P.2d 408] . Thus, only actions for physical injury to person or property, or death, can be brought in the county in which the wrongful act occurs [Cacciaguidi v. Superior Court (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 181, 187, 276 Cal. App. 3d 465] . The general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) that the residence of the defendant is the proper place for trial applies to personal torts not involving physical injury, such as conversion [Haurat v. Superior Court (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 330, 333, 50 Cal. Rptr. 520] . Similarly, actions for libel, malicious prosecution, and false imprisonment are triable solely at the defendant's residence [Johnson v. Superior Court (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 212, 218, 42 Cal. Rptr. 645] , as are actions for abuse of process, which, like actions for malicious prosecution, are not actions for "injury to the person," which Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) permits to be brought in the county in which plaintiff's injury occurred [Cacciaguidi v. Superior Court (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 181, 184-186, 276 Cal. App. 3d 465] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Commenced in One of Two Proper Counties

In Gridley v. Fellows (1914) 166 Cal. 765, 138 P. 355 , the plaintiff had filed a personal injury action in Fresno County, where the injury occurred. The defendant sought and was granted a change of venue to Los Angeles County, the county of his residence. In reversing the trial court's order, the Supreme Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) provided that venue of such actions was proper in either the county where the injury occurred or the county of the defendant's residence and that no preference was given to one over the other. Either county was, therefore, the "proper county" for the trial. In personal actions of this character, the only authority to change the venue is that given by former Code Civ. Proc. § 397(1) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)) which provides that the court may change the place of trial when the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county. The superior court has no power to change the place of trial of an action, except in the cases and for the causes provided by express law. Since the county where the injury occurred was a "proper county," there was no authority in the court to order a change to the county of the defendant's residence on the ground that the latter, alone, was the "proper county."

[b] Local Entity as Cross Defendant

In City of Chico v. Superior Court (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 187, 152 Cal. Rptr. 380 , plaintiff brought an action for damages against defendant in the county of defendant's residence. Defendant cross complained against the county and city in which the accident occurred for indemnity and contribution, and the trial court denied the cross defendants' motion for a change of venue.

In a petition for a writ of mandate to require the trial court to vacate its order, the cross defendants relied on former Code Civ. Proc. § 394(1) (now Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)), providing in part that an action against a city or county for injury occurring within the city or county caused by its negligence shall be tried in the city or county. The court of appeal held however that Code Civ. Proc. § 394 was inapplicable where the city and county were not defendants but cross defendants.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.74

§ 238.74 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

A CONTRACT ACTION MAY BE BROUGHT IN ANY OF A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT COUNTIES, INCLUDING THAT OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE, AND DEFENDANT MAY NOT HAVE SUCH AN ACTION THAT WAS COMMENCED IN A PROPER COUNTY TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Contracts Other Than Consumer Contracts. As to contracts other than consumer contracts, when a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, an action founded on such obligation may properly be tried either in the county where the obligation is to be performed, in the county in which the contract was in fact entered into, or in the county in which the defendant resides (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)).

C. Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties. When a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county and the action is commenced in any of the counties specified in Section 395(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure as a proper county therefor, other than that in which the defendant or any defendant resides, the defendant may not have the action transferred to the county of his/her residence on the ground that it was brought in an improper court (Young v. John Haar Pickle Co. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 534, 535, 293 P.2d 796).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue to the county of defendant's residence when the plaintiff has commenced an action founded on an obligation the defendant has contracted to perform (other than an obligation under a consumer contract, an installment contract or account, or an automobile sales contract) in a proper county other than that of the defendant's residence. In such a situation, the defendant's motion may be opposed by the plaintiff on the ground asserted in this memorandum that the statute provides for alternate venue of an action founded on an obligation the defendant has contracted to perform [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

For a memorandum for use in opposing a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his or her residence when the defendant's obligation was pursuant to a consumer contract, see § 238.75. For a similar memorandum for use when the defendant's obligation was pursuant to an installment contract or account or an automobile sales contract, see § 238.77.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[b] Venue of Contract Actions

[i] Application of General Rule of Venue

The general rule of venue is that the residence of the defendant is the proper place for trial and this applies to contract actions with the exceptions set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)[Quick v. Corsaro (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 831, 834, 4 Cal. Rptr. 674]

[ii] Venue Under Statutory Exceptions

Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) further provides that when the defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, an action based thereon may be tried in the county where the obligation is to be performed, where it was entered into, or in which the defendant or any defendant resides. The county in which the obligation is incurred is deemed to be the county in which it is to be performed unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary. This latter provision, however, does not apply to actions against corporations or associations [Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 469-471, 241 P.2d 4] .

[iii] Burden on Defendant

When the complaint shows that the contract was entered into in the county in which the action is brought, the burden of overthrowing the prima facie venue showing made thereby rests on the moving defendant--his or her residence in another county is not enough--he or she has to show that the contract was not made or to be performed in the county where the action is pending. The rule in this regard is the same as to individuals and corporations [Ward Mfg. Co. v. Miley (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 603, 606-607, 281 P.2d 343] .

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion for change of venue in a contract action, see in this set Ch. 50, Contracts.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

In Young v. John Haar Pickle Co. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 534, 293 P.2d 796 , the plaintiff commenced an action in Napa County on a contract under which one of the defendants had contracted to accept delivery of cucumbers delivered by the plaintiff, the seller, in Napa County. All of the defendants sought change of venue to Los Angeles County, the principal place of business of one corporate defendant, or, in the alternative, to Alameda County, the principal place of business of another corporate defendant and the residence of the agent for that corporation. The trial court had denied the motion on implied findings that the contract was made and was to be performed in Napa County and the court of appeal found ample support for such findings.

In affirming the order denying the motion for change of venue to the county of defendants' residence rather than that in which the contract was to be performed and in which it was made, the court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), the action was properly commenced in Napa County as to the individual defendant inasmuch as Napa County was the county in which the contract was in fact entered into in addition to being the county where the obligation was to be performed. The action was also properly commenced in that county as to the corporate defendants under an existing constitutional provision [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5] providing that corporations could be used in the county where the contract is made or to be performed or where the obligation or liability arises.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

In Gilman v. Nordin (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 788, 247 P.2d 394 , the plaintiff sought the dissolution of a partnership and an accounting in an action commenced in San Francisco. In his complaint, the plaintiff had alleged an oral partnership contract and its breach by the defendant. There was no allegation as to where the oral partnership contract was entered into but there was no denial by the defendant of the plaintiff's allegation that the agreement was to be performed in that county. Logically, it appeared that the action was founded on an obligation contracted to be performed in San Francisco. If that were the case, said the court of appeal, the defendant would not be entitled to a transfer of the case to the county of his residence since Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) provides that when a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, either the county where such obligation is to be performed, or in which the contract in fact was entered into, or the county in which the defendant resides at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of an action founded on such obligation. Accordingly, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his residence was affirmed.

In Causley v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 757, 73 Cal. Rptr. 585 , the action was on a promissory note of the defendant corporation that had been signed by the individual defendants as officers of the corporation. Although executed in San Francisco, it was to be paid in Sonoma County. The court of appeal held that the motion for change of venue from Sonoma County to San Francisco, the county where the individual defendants resided, was improperly granted. The corporation could properly be used in the county where the contract was to be performed, under an existing constitutional provision [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. Since the note indicated on its face that it was to be performed in Sonoma County, under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) that county was a proper county for the trial of the action against the individual signers as well.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.75

§ 238.75 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Consumer Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

A CONSUMER CONTRACT ACTION MAY PROPERLY BE BROUGHT IN ANY OF A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT COUNTIES, INCLUDING THAT OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE, AND DEFENDANT MAY NOT HAVE SUCH AN ACTION THAT WAS COMMENCED IN A PROPER COUNTY TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties. [See § 238.74[1], Paragraph C.]

C. Consumer Contracts. In an action arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, other than an obligation under an installment contract or account or for the purchase of an automobile, the county in which the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, the county in which the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or the county in which the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial thereof (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)).

In the superior court designated in Code of Civil Procedure Section 395(b) as the proper court, the proper court location for trial of a case is the location where the court tries that type of case that is nearest or most accessible to where the buyer or lessee resides, where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action. Otherwise, any location of the superior court designated as the proper court in this subdivision is a proper court location for the trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his or her residence when the action is on a consumer contract (other than an installment contract or account or an automobile purchase contract) and it was filed in a county designated as proper for trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b).

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i].

[b] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum that may be submitted for use in opposition to a similar defendant's motion when the action is not based on a consumer contract, see § 238.74.

For a memorandum that may be submitted for use in opposition to a defendant's motion when the action is based on a transaction arising from an unsolicited telephone call or a telephone call or electronic transmission in response to a solicitation, see § 238.76.

For a memorandum for use in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue of the county of his or her residence in an action on an installment contract or account or an automobile sales contract, see § 238.77.

[3] Additional Authorities

In Fontaine v. Superior Court (Cashcall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 , a borrower obtained a loan for personal, family, or household use from a lender. After the lender attempted to collect the debt, the borrower filed a complaint in Santa Clara County alleging that the collection methods used by the lender and its employees violated the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.). The trial court granted the lender's motion to transfer the action to Orange County on the ground one of the individual defendants had requested that the case be tried there. The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate in the first instance, directing the trial court to vacate its order granting the lender's motion to transfer the action to Orange County and to enter a new order denying the motion. The court concluded that venue was proper in Santa Clara County and that the trial court abused its discretion in ordering transfer of the action to Orange County. Because the borrower's action arose from a loan that he obtained primarily for personal, family, or household use, which was a consumer transaction specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), and the borrower resided in Santa Clara County at the time his action commenced, venue was proper in Santa Clara County. The court rejected the lender's argument that the venue provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) applies only to actions against a consumer defendant, or, alternatively, does not apply where the consumer is the plaintiff and one of the defendants is an individual. A peremptory writ in the first instance was appropriate to correct the trial court's error expeditiously (175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.76

§ 238.76 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Action Arising From Transaction Consummated as Proximate Result of Unsolicited Telephone Call by Seller or Telephone Call or Electronic Transmission in Response to Solicitation [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

AN ACTION ARISING FROM A TRANSACTION CONSUMMATED AS A PROXIMATE RESULT OF AN UNSOLICITED TELEPHONE CALL MADE BY A SELLER ENGAGED IN THE BUSINESS OF CONSUMMATING TRANSACTIONS OF THAT KIND [OR A TELEPHONE CALL OR ELECTRONIC TRANSMISSION MADE BY THE BUYER OR LESSEE IN RESPONSE TO A SOLICITATION BY THE SELLER] MAY PROPERLY BE BROUGHT IN ANY OF A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT COUNTIES, INCLUDING THAT OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE, AND DEFENDANT MAY NOT HAVE SUCH AN ACTION THAT WAS COMMENCED IN A PROPER COUNTY TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties. [See § 238.74[1], Paragraph C.]

C. Action Arising From Transaction That Resulted From Unsolicited Telephone Call. In an action arising from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind [or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller], the county in which the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, the county in which the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or the county in which the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial thereof (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)).

In the superior court designated in Code of Civil Procedure Section 395(b) as the proper court, the proper court location for trial of a case is the location where the court tries that type of case that is nearest or most accessible to where the buyer or lessee resides, where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action. Otherwise, any location of the superior court designated as the proper court in this subdivision is a proper court location for the trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of his or her residence when the action arises from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind and it was filed in a county designated as proper for trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b).

The optional phrase in brackets should be used if the buyer or lessee responded by telephone or electronically to the seller. It is not needed if the transaction was completed on the seller's unsolicited call.

For discussion of venue in actions arising from these types of contracts, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue .

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.77

§ 238.77 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Installment Contract or Installment Account or Automobile Sales Contract Action Commenced in Proper County [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

AN _____ [INSTALLMENT CONTRACT or INSTALLMENT ACCOUNT or AUTOMOBILE SALES CONTRACT] ACTION MAY PROPERLY BE BROUGHT IN ANY OF A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT COUNTIES, INCLUDING THAT OF DEFENDANT'S RESIDENCE, AND DEFENDANT MAY NOT HAVE SUCH AN ACTION THAT WAS COMMENCED IN A PROPER COUNTY TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties. [See § 238.74[1], Paragraph C.]

[EITHER]

C. Installment Sales. An action on an installment contract or account under the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act [Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.] must be tried in the superior court in the county in which the contract was in fact signed by the buyer, where the buyer resided at the time the contract was entered into, where the buyer resides at the commencement of the action, or where the goods purchased under the contract have been so affixed to real property as to become a part of such real property (Civ. Code § 1812.10(a)).

[OR]

C. Automobile Sales Contract. An action on an automobile sales contract or purchase order under the provisions of the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) must be tried in the county either in which the contract was in fact signed by the buyer, in which the buyer resided when the contract was entered into, in which the buyer resides at the commencement of the action, or in which the motor vehicle purchased under the contract is permanently garaged. In any action involving multiple claims or causes of action, venue lies in these counties so long as there is at least one claim or cause of action arising from a contract subject to the Rees-Levering Act (Civ. Code § 2984.4).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue to the county of defendant's residence in an action on an installment contract or account or an automobile sales contract. In such a situation, the defendant's motion may be opposed by the plaintiff on the ground asserted in this memorandum that the pertinent statute provides for alternate venue of such actions [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 (installment sales), 2984.4 (automobile sales)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Action Commenced in One of Several Proper Counties

For a discussion of Young v. John Haar Pickle Co. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 534, 293 P.2d 796 , on the point stated, see § 238.74[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.78

§ 238.78 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] to County of Defendant's Residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]--Contract Action Against Corporation and Individual Defendant Sued on Alter Ego Theory Commenced in Proper County

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.70.]

THIS ACTION SHOULD NOT BE TRANSFERRED TO _____ COUNTY, THE COUNTY OF _____'S [name of individual defendant] RESIDENCE BECAUSE HE/SHE HAS BEEN JOINED AS A DEFENDANT ON AN ALTER EGO THEORY IN A BREACH OF CONTRACT ACTION AGAINST A CORPORATION IS THEREFORE NOT ENTITLED TO TRANSFER THE ACTION TO HIS/HER COUNTY OF RESIDENCE.

Venue Proper Where Action Could Be Laid Against Either Individual or Corporate Defendant. In an action for breach of contract against a corporation and an individual as its alter ego, the individual defendant is subject to the expanded venue provisions for breach of contract under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 395(a) and 395.5 (Lebastchi v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1470-1471, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue to the county of an individual defendant's residence in an action against a corporation and an individual defendant who is sued as the alter ego of the corporation. In such a situtation, the individual defendant's motion may be opposed by the plaintiff on the ground asserted in this memorandum that the action is subject to the expanded venue provisions for breach of contract under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(a) and 395.5.

Counsel should insert argument in form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should highlight the allegations of the complaint that allege the alter ego status [see Lebastchi v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1470, 1471 n.7, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787.] .

[b] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities pertaining to venue rules in actions against corporations, see Ch. 52, Corporations .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Venue Proper Where Action Could Be Laid Against Either Individual or Corporate Defendant

Lebastchi v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1470-1471, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 , involved an action for breach of a commercial real property lease. The plaintiff filed the action in San Diego County, the location of the property. The complaint alleged that the individual defendant was the alter ego of the corporate defendant. The individual defendant moved under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b to transfer the action to Placer County on the grounds venue was improper in San Diego because it was not a county of a defendant's residence (the corporation's principal place of business being Sacramento County). The trial court denied the motion for change of venue, and the defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court recognized the cause of action as transitory and generally triable under Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) at the defendant's residence, the place of contracting or the place of performance, or in the case of a corporation, triable under Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 in the county in which the contract was made or to be performed or where the obligation or liability arises, or the breach occurs, or in the county in which the corporation's principal place of business is located (33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1469-1470) . Noting that the complaint alleged only one cause of action, for breach of lease and sought one form of relief, the court rejected that contention that the case involved a "mixed action" that would allow defendant to transfer it to his county of residence (33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1470) . The court concluded that the alter ego allegations of the complaint placed the individual defendant in the same position as the corporated defendant, and that the expanded venue provisions for breach of contract under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(a) and 395.5 (33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1469-1470) . The court distinguished the situation in which the complaint does not include sufficient facts to allege the alter ego theory [see Meadows v. Emett & Chandler (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 496, 222 P.2d 145] (33 Cal. App. 4th 1465, 1471 n.7).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.79

§ 238.79 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)] in Neutral County When Nonresident Defendant Is Sued by Local Public Entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 394] Action Not Brought By Public Entity Within Meaning of

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

THIS ACTION SHOULD NOT BE TRANSFERRED TO A NEUTRAL COUNTY BECAUSE THE ACTION IS NOT ONE "BROUGHT BY" A PUBLIC ENTITY WITHIN THE MEANING OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 394.

Code of Civil Procedure Section 394 Inapplicable When Action Is Not "Brought By" Public Entity Within Meaning of Section. Code of Civil Procedure Section 394 applies when the lawsuit is "brought by" a public entity within the meaning of that section. The determination of whether an action is brought by a public entity depends on the role of that public entity within the lawsuit. When a lawsuit is not brought by or on behalf of a public entity within the meaning of that section, Code of Civil Procedure Section 394 is inapplicable and venue need not be transferred pursuant to that section (Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 580-581, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for a change of venue by a defendant who claims to have been sued by a public entity and desires to require the trial of the action in a neutral county or, in the alternative, appointment of a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear the case, when the action is not one brought by a public entity within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 394.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Code of Civil Procedure Section 394 Inapplicable When Action Is Not "Brought By" Public Entity Within Meaning of Section

In Transamerica Homefirst, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 , the defendant, a real estate lender, had made a reverse mortgage to a named individual on her home in 1994. In 1997, the Public Guardian of San Mateo County was appointed conservator of the person and estate of that individual. In July, 1998, the probate court granted permission to the public guardian to proceed with a lawsuit. The public guardian, as conservator for that individual, then filed in San Mateo County this class action lawsuit against defendant to challenge the validity of defendant's reverse mortgage program. Defendant was headquartered in San Francisco. Defendant moved to transfer the action to a neutral county in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 394. The trial court denied the motion, and defendant filed a petition for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to transfer venue. The court of appeal issued an order to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandate should not issue.

The court of appeal ultimately discharged the order to show cause and denied the petition for writ of mandate. In reaching its conclusion, the court of appeal pointed out there was no dispute that the defendant was a nonresident of San Mateo County and that the public guardian was a county agency (69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 579-580) . In rejecting defendant's argument that those two circumstances are all that is required by Code Civ. Proc. § 394 to mandate transfer to a neutral county, the court stated that the statute applies when the lawsuit is "brought by" a public entity, and the determination of whether an action is brought by a county agency depends on the role of that county agency within the lawsuit. The court noted Nguyen v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1781, 1786-1789, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 , in which the court concluded that a district attorney who brought a red light abatement action against a nonresident defendant acts as an officer of the state, not the county, and that Code Civ. Proc. § 394 did not apply. Similarly, the public guardian is acting as a conservator of the individual, not on behalf of the county (69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 580) . The named plaintiff is the individual, and neither the county nor the public guardian is a party to the action. The public guardian brings the action on the individual's behalf, and any recovery will go to the conservatorship, not to the county or to the public guardian. The public guardian when acting as a conservator stands in a fiduciary relationship with the conservatee and is subject to court supervision. Accordingly, the public guardian is bound to act in the interests of the individual, not in the interests of the county (69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 580) . Under these circumstances, the court concluded that the action was not "brought by" a county agency, i.e., a public entity, within the meaning of Section 394 and that the statute was inapplicable, so that venue did not have to be transferred (69 Cal. App. 4th 577, 579-581) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.80

§ 238.80 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Proper Court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--Action Involving Statutory Duty.

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 238.30.]

AN ACTION AGAINST A CORPORATION OR ASSOCIATION BASED ON A STATUTORY OBLIGATION MAY BE PROPERLY BROUGHT IN THE COUNTY WHERE THE OBLIGATION OR LIABILITY ARISES.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A].

B. Actions Involving Statutory Duty. If the action is based on a statutory duty, for purposes of determining venue, the liabilty "arises" where the injury occurs, and the injury "arises" in the county where the defendant is being sued (Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; Black Diamond Asphalt, Inc. v. Superior Court of San Joaquin County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 166, 172, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue to the county of the defendant's principal place of business. In such a situation, the defendant's motion may be opposed by the plaintiff of the ground asserted in this memorandum that the pertinent statute provides for alternate venue of such actions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actions Involving Statutory Duty

Black Diamond Asphalt, Inc. v. Superior Court of San Joaquin County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 166, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510 , involved a petitioner's complaint asserting that real party in interest, California Insurance Guarantee Association (CIGA), breached its statutory duties by refusing to defend and indemnify petitioner in a lawsuit filed in San Joaquin County. CIGA is a creature of statute. An unincorporated association with its principal place of business in Los Angeles County, CIGA was created in 1969 as a compulsory association of state-regulated insurance companies for the purpose of providing insurance against loss arising from the failure of an insolvent insurer to discharge its insurance policy obligations.

In the instant proceeding, CIGA sought to change venue of the declaratory judgment action to Los Angeles County, claiming that under Code of Civ. Proc. § 395.5, the only appropriate venue for the action was the location of its principal office, since the liability sued upon was neither tortious nor contractual. The court noted Section 395.5 gives a plaintiff the option of commencing suit against an association in the county where the "obligation or liability" arises, and concluded that this section must be read in light of the paramount purpose of Section 395.5, which is to permit a wider choice of venue against corporations or associations than would be permitted in suits against individuals (109 Cal. App. 4th 166, 171) .

In applying the "liability or obligation" language of Section 395.5 to a lawsuit seeking to enforce a statutory obligation or liability, the court found no reason to try to pigeonhole the action into contract, quasi-contract, or tort categories; instead, statutory liability cases should be analyzed independently for purposes of determining proper venue. An action for declaratory relief against an insurer may be commenced in the county where a third party claimant sues, because that is where the insurer's liability arises; the court concluded that the same rule should be applied where the obligation is created by a statute rather than an insurance contract. The court noted that the "obligation or liability" provision of Section 395.5 does not require that the defendant perform any act inside the county for venue to be proper; it merely requires that the obligation arise there (109 Cal. App. 4th 166, 172) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
3. Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County of Defendant's Residence

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.81-238.99

[Reserved]

§§ 238.81[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
4. Supporting Counter Motion for Retention of Cause When Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice Will Be Promoted Thereby

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.100

§ 238.100 Supporting Counter Motion for Retention in County Where Action Commenced When Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice Will Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF COUNTER
Plaintiff,	)	MOTION FOR RETENTION IN VENUE IN
vs.	)	COUNTY WHERE ACTION COMMENCED
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

IN A CASE IN WHICH THE DEFENDANT HAS FILED AN ANSWER AND A MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE TO THE COUNTY OF HIS/HER RESIDENCE, A COURT MAY CONSIDER OPPOSITION TO THE MOTION AND RETAIN THE ACTION IN THE COUNTY WHERE IT WAS COMMENCED IF IT APPEARS THAT THE CONVENIENCE OF THE WITNESSES OR THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WILL BE THEREBY

PROMOTED.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Authority for Retention. In any case in which a defendant has answered and filed a motion for an order transferring the action to a proper court, the court may consider opposition to the motion and retain the action in the county where commenced if it appears that the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice will thereby be promoted (Code Civ. Proc. § 396b).

[Optional] C. Uncontradicted Counter Motion. When an answer has been filed and the showing made by the counter motion is sufficient and uncontradicted, the trial court abuses its discretion in denying the counter motion (Mettler v. Hedley (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 277, 282-283, 338 P.2d 489).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a counter motion by a plaintiff for the retention of the trial in the county where the action was commenced. Such a counter motion is in order when the defendant has sought change of venue on the ground that the action was filed in the "wrong county" [Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)] and after the defendant has filed an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b].

The counter motion may be made simply on the ground that the action should be retained "for the convenience of witnesses" alone [Harris v. Cannon (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 748, 109 P.2d 961] or on the alternate ground stated in the statute, that the "ends of justice" will be promoted thereby [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b].

For further discussion of counter motions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue .

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uncontradicted Counter Motion

In Mettler v. Hedley (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 277, 338 P.2d 489 , an action for reformation of a contract, the trial court's order denying the plaintiff's counter motion to retain the action on the ground of the convenience of witnesses was reversed. The plaintiff had shown that parole evidence would be required from witnesses he intended to produce. He argued that although depositions could be taken, such evidence is not always satisfactory compared to the testimony of witnesses. The plaintiff also contended that inconvenience to those witnesses would result if they were required to go to the county to which the defendant had sought to have the matter transferred. The defendant did not deny that the persons named would be witnesses or that they would testify to the facts related. He did not indicate that there would be witnesses for the defendant who lived in other counties or that any witness would be inconvenienced by retention of the trial where the action was commenced. The most that could be said of his affidavit was that the testimony of the witnesses would be false. This denial did not bear on the question of inconvenience of the witnesses and created no conflict on that issue. Accordingly, there being no conflict, the court of appeal held that the trial court had erred in refusing to retain the action for trial in the county where it was commenced when the uncontradicted evidence showed that in such county the convenience of witnesses would be better served.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
A. Improper Court Designated in Complaint
4. Supporting Counter Motion for Retention of Cause When Convenience of Witnesses or Ends of Justice Will Be Promoted Thereby

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.101-238.119

[Reserved]

§§ 238.101[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
B. Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had in County of Suit

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.120

§ 238.120 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue of County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced--Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(b), 398]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	CHANGE OF VENUE
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT MAY PROPERLY ORDER A CHANGE IN THE PLACE OF THE TRIAL OF AN ACTION WHEN THERE IS REASON TO BELIEVE THAT AN IMPARTIAL TRIAL CANNOT BE HAD IN THE COUNTY WHERE IT WAS COMMENCED.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. The court may, on motion, change the place of trial when there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had therein (Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b)).

B. Transfer Mandatory. If the court orders the transfer of an action or proceeding pursuant to Subdivision 2, 3, or 4 of Section 397 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it must be transferred to a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action and on which the parties may agree, by stipulation in writing, or made in open court and entered in the minutes or docket; or, if they do not so agree, then to the nearest or most accessible court, where the like objection or cause for making the order does not exist (Code Civ. Proc. § 398) (Code Civ. Proc. § 397(2), (3), (4) have been renumbered as Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b), (c), (d), but the legislature has not yet amended Section 398 to conform with these changes.

C. Widespread Prejudice Against Moving Party. Change of venue on the ground that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which an action was commenced will be ordered when it is shown that there is prejudice against the moving party therein that is so widespread, intense, and outspoken, through the public press and otherwise, as to warrant a conclusion that the moving party would not have a fair trial where the action is pending (J.I. Case T. Co. v. Copren Bros. (1917) 35 Cal. App. 70, 79, 169 P. 443).

[Optional] D. Motion by One Codefendant. A motion for change of venue on the ground that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the action was commenced may be made by one of the a number of codefendants and need not be joined in by all of the defendants (People v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 420, 422-425, 75 P.2d 560).

[Optional] E. Change of Venue Not Prohibited by Mandatory Removal Statute for Local Governmental Entity Cases. A change of venue may be ordered pursuant to Section 397(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure when an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which an action was commenced, even though the action is brought by or against a local governmental entity in the county in which venue appears to be mandated by Section 394 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The mandatory language of Section 394 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not take precedence over, nor prohibit discretionary removal pursuant to, Section 397(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, which unambiguously applies without limitation to any action or proceeding within its terms (Paesano v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 17, 19-20, 250 Cal. Rptr. 842).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for change of venue when a showing can be made by the moving party that there is, in the county in which the action has been commenced, a prejudice against him or her that is so widespread, intense, and outspoken, through the public press and otherwise, as to warrant a conclusion that the moving party would not have a fair trial where the action is pending. It should be noted that the motion for change of venue on this ground would only be appropriate after the issues have been framed through the filing of an answer by the defendant [Cook v. Pendergast (1882) 61 Cal. 72, 79] . The motion may be brought in any case, including one brought by or against a local governmental entity (see Optional Paragraph E).

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Widespread Prejudice Against Moving Party

In J.I. Case T. Co. v. Copren Bros. (1917) 35 Cal. App. 70, 169 P. 443 , the defendants had had venue charged to the county of their residence. A trial had been held there and a directed verdict had been rendered. On appeal, the court of appeal reversed the judgment and the case was remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Following the remand, the plaintiff sought change of venue to a neutral county on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had in the county in which the original trial had been held. The plaintiff was a foreign corporation and "practically unacquainted" in the county of trial, whereas the defendants were alleged to have been born and raised in the county, which had a population of 4,100 persons, and one of them was the county assessor whose influence was alleged to have been wide and consequential in the county.

The court noted that a party cannot move for change of venue on the ground that a fair trial cannot be had until an event has occurred that will assist the court in ascertaining whether such local prejudice exists as may influence the conduct of the jury. The court went on to state that the fact that an impartial trial cannot be had must be clearly established and that it is conceivable that a showing might be made of a prejudice against a moving party that would be so widespread, intense, and outspoken, through the public press and otherwise, as to warrant a conclusion that the moving party would not have had a fair trial where the action was pending.

In this case, the court held that without making an attempt to secure an impartial jury for a second trial, it would require something more than a showing that the defendants were well and favorably known throughout the county or that one of them was of wide and consequential influence therein. The fact that the jury in the first trial hesitated to render the verdict directed furnished no ground of assuming that an impartial trial could not be had. In view of the fact that defendant's right to have the case tried in the county of their residence was statutory, the plaintiff could not take that right from them without a clear showing that a fair and impartial trial could not be had there. Accordingly, and in the absence of a sufficient showing to justify the lower court's order transferring the case to a neutral county for trial, the court concluded that the lower court had gone beyond legitimate and reasonable limits in granting the motion for change of venue.

[b] Motion by One Codefendant

In People v. Ocean S. R., Inc. (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 420, 75 P.2d 560 , a civil eminent domain proceeding, the court of appeal upheld the trial court's order changing venue on the ground that an impartial trial could be had, even though only one of the several defendants sought the change. The court stated that it could find no indication from the wording of the law [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397, 398] of any legislative intent to require all of the parties plaintiff or defendant to join in a motion for change of venue. The latter section could not be construed as requiring unanimity of action in seeking the relief afforded by the preceding section. The purpose and intent of the statute is to secure to every litigant the right to a trial of his or her cause before a fair and impartial tribunal and to provide the procedure whereby such right may be enforced and protected. In designating the county in which eminent domain proceedings are to be commenced under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1243 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.020], the Legislature made such designation subject to the provisions of the code applicable to changes in the place of trial.

The court noted that it had been repeatedly held that when the action is not brought in the proper county, any defendant, without joining his codefendants, may demand a transfer to the proper county and since the authority for transfer on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had was contained in the same code section, the court could find no reason why the same rule should not apply to transfers on any of the grounds stated in that section. The right of a defendant to have an action tried in the county where the land is situated or where some of the defendants reside is no higher nor entitled to more protection than is his right to have it tried where an impartial trial may be had. An impartial trial means a trial impartial as to all litigants therein. If one litigant cannot secure an impartial trial in that county, his right to a transfer to a neutral county cannot be defeated by the failure or refusal of his codefendants to join in the demand therefor. Nor is there any reason why the codefendants should be required to join in demanding a right that does not affect them.

[c] Change of Venue Not Prohibited by Mandatory Removal Statute for Local Governmental Entity Cases

In Paesano v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 17, 250 Cal. Rptr. 842 , plaintiffs brought a civil action against Mono County. Plaintiffs moved for a change of venue pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b), on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had in that county. The trial court denied the motion, ruling that venue was mandated in Mono County by Code Civ. Proc. § 394.

The court of appeal granted plaintiffs a writ of mandate, directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to instead determine whether a change of venue should be ordered on impartial trial grounds. The court held that the mandatory language of Code Civ. Proc. § 394 does not prohibit discretionary removal of an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b). Rather, Code Civ. Proc. § 397 unambiguously applies without limitation to any action or proceeding within its terms. To hold otherwise would be to allow some cases to be tried in counties in which an impartial trial cannot be had, a result that the Legislature did not intend (204 Cal. App. 3d 17, 20-21) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Widespread Prejudice Against Moving Party

In San Joaquin etc. Irr. Co., Inc. v. Stevinson (1919) 179 Cal. 533, 178 P. 292 , the Supreme Court upheld an order changing venue issued on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had in a case in which the plaintiff sought to condemn certain waters of the San Joaquin River for irrigation use on the western side of the river and the defendant used water from that river for an irrigation on the eastern side of that river. The people living in the county of suit on the western side of the river were practically all disqualified from sitting as jurors because they were users under the plaintiff's present irrigation system and for that reason on the three former trials of the case none of such persons had been qualified as jurors. The sentiment of prejudice on the part of the residents on the eastern side of the river had been stimulated by, and reflected in, the comments of several of the newspapers of the county, which had from time to time since the inception of the action, and particularly at and during the times of the said trials thereof, published articles highly prejudicial to the plaintiff's case and favorable to that of the defendant. The judge who presided over the three trials and who granted the motion for change of venue was in a better position to rightly weigh and justly resolve the conflict in affidavits presented by the parties than the court of appeal could possibly be.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
B. Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had in County of Suit

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.121

§ 238.121 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to Court in County Other Than County Where Suit Was Commenced on Ground That Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had Therein [Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b)]--Fact That Such Trial Unavailable Cannot Be Clearly Established

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	FOR CHANGE OF VENUE
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Dept: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: None set

_____

A MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE ON THE GROUND THAT AN IMPARTIAL TRIAL CANNOT BE HAD SHOULD BE DENIED, IN THE EXERCISE OF SOUND JUDICIAL DISCRETION, WHEN THE FACT THAT A FAIR AND IMPARTIAL TRIAL IS UNAVAILABLE CANNOT BE CLEARLY ESTABLISHED.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Establishing Unavailability of Fair and Impartial Trial. Whether or not a change of venue should be granted on the ground that there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county where an action is properly commenced is a question of fact first addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and a determination by the trial court that a fair and impartial trial can be had where the action was commenced is not an abuse of discretion when it clearly appears that evidence adduced at the hearing of the motion justifies such a determination as a matter of law (People v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427, 75 P.2d 560).

[Optional] C. Defendant's Right to Trial in County of Residence. The right of defendants to have their case tried in the county wherein they and their witnesses reside is a substantial one and is not to be set aside unless it actually conflicts with the higher right of a plaintiff to have an impartial trial (Ross v. Kalin (1921) 53 Cal. App. 616, 619, 200 P. 745).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for change of venue which was made on the ground that there is reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which suit was commenced pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b). The question of the availability or unavailability of an impartial trial is purely a question of fact for the trial court to determine in the exercise of its sound discretion and, as the authorities cited here point out, such discretion is fairly broad. This form includes an optional paragraph for use when the defendant's right to have the trial held in the county of his or her residence will be jeopardized by a change of venue.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum may be accompanied by counteraffidavits [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009] or counterdeclarations under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Establishing Unavailability of Fair and Impartial Trial

In People v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 420, 75 P.2d 560 , the facts of which are discussed in § 238.120[3][b], the defendant railroad corporation sought change of venue on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had in the county where the proceeding was commenced. The trial court had determined that there was sufficient evidence to justify such a change of venue.

On Appeal, it was contended that the court should have held its ruling on the motion in abeyance until the impanelment of a jury and the examination of the jurors to disclose whether the defendant could or could not have had a fair and impartial trial. On this point,the court of appeal said that while it might not be an abuse of discretion for the court, if still doubtful after a consideration of the evidence adduced at a hearing on the motion for change of venue, to withhold its decision until an attempt to secure a fair and impartial jury had been made, there is no necessity for doing so if, at such a hearing there appears sufficient reason to believe that an impartial trial cannot be had.

On the question of the trial court's determination, the court stated that whether or not a change of venue should be granted on the ground that an impartial trial cannot be had is a question first addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. On appeal, a court of appeal may review such a ruling only to the extent of inquiring whether the same constituted an abuse of that discretion. In order to determine that the trial court abused its discretion, it must clearly appear that the evidence adduced at the hearing on the motion did not as a matter of law justify such a determination.

In this case, the evidence was found to have been sufficient to justify the trial court's determination. The burden of pointing out the deficiency in the evidence justifying the latter determination was on the appellant; however, the appellant had failed to make any attempt to do so, contenting itself with citations of error in receiving in evidence certain affidavits submitted by the moving party.

[b] Defendant's Right to Trial in County of Residence

In Ross v. Kalin (1921) 53 Cal. App. 616, 200 P. 745 , the facts of which are set forth in § 238.121[4][a], the plaintiff had sought change of venue on the ground of widespread prejudice against him in the county in which the action had been commenced and the trial court's denial of the motion was affirmed on appeal. The court of appeal ruled the right of the defendants to have their case tried in the county wherein they and their witnesses resided is a substantial one and is not to be set aside unless it actually conflicts with the higher right of a plaintiff to have an impartial trial. The trial court, in finding no such conflict, was held not to have exceeded or abused the discretion vested in it.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Establishing Unavailability of Fair and Impartial Trial

In Ross v. Kalin (1921) 53 Cal. App. 616, 200 P. 745 , the plaintiff appealed from an order denying his motion for a change of venue on the ground that an impartial trial could not be had in the county. It appeared that the plaintiff had been accused in the community of Brawley of being pro-German, assaulted by a mob, beaten, tarred and feathered, chained to a tree in a public place, arrested and tried on charges of uttering threats to commit great bodily injury, fined, and imprisoned. The local newspaper published editorials approving the mob action involved. One of the plaintiff's sureties was assaulted, beaten, and further threated. Another received similar threats. Both were threatened with a boycott. The plaintiff's attorney was assaulted, beaten, boycotted, and expelled from two fraternal associations.

Applying the rules that such a motion is addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court and that the trial court's action cannot be disturbed on appeal unless it clearly appears that there was an abuse of discretion, the court of appeal stated that it could not be said to have appeared that the trial court had abused its discretion unless the uncontroverted facts necessarily afford reason to believe that an impartial trial could not be had in the county.

The defendants' affidavits admitted that there was prejudice against the plaintiff in the City of Brawley but denied that it existed elsewhere in the county. The court concluded that some 20 months before the hearing, there had been prejudice against the plaintiff in the minds of a large number of residents, but that probably no more than 300 residents out of 8,000 to 12,000 potential jurors bore any prejudice against the plaintiff at any time. The court added that although the very existence of such a widespread prejudice as claimed by the plaintiff would tend to make it difficult, if not impossible, to procure proof thereof, these circumstances would not justify the court in ignoring the rules of evidence to base its order on suspicion, conjecture, or hearsay. Accordingly, it concluded that the trial court did not abuse its discretion.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
B. Impartial Trial Cannot Be Had in County of Suit

23-238 California Points & Authorities §§ 238.122-238.139

[Reserved]

§§ 238.122[Reserved]

46 of 82 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
C. Convenience of Witnesses and Promotion of Ends of Justice

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.140

§ 238.140 Supporting Motion for Change of Venue to County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced-- Convenience of Witnesses and Ends of Justice Would Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(c), 398]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR vs.	)	CHANGE OF VENUE
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: None set

_____

THE COURT MAY PROPERLY ORDER A CHANGE IN THE PLACE OF THE TRIAL OF AN ACTION WHEN THE CONVENIENCE OF WITNESSES AND THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE PROMOTED BY THE CHANGE.

A. Statutory Authority for Motion. The court may, on motion, change the place of trial when the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change (Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)).

B. Transfer Mandatory. [See § 238.120[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Competence of Witnesses. The convenience of witnesses will be considered as a ground for an order granting a change of venue when it is shown that their proposed testimony is admissible, relevant, and material to some issue in the case as shown by the record before the court (Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953).

[EITHER]

D. Convenience of Witnesses. Convenience of witnesses is shown by the fact that the residence of all of the witnesses is in the county to which the transfer of the cause is requested (Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754, 279 P.2d 978).

[OR]

D. Convenience of Witnesses. Although the mere numerical majority of witnesses on one side or the other does not necessarily determine the merits of a motion on this ground, the court may permit the trial to be had as near as possible to the residences of the greatest number of witnesses (Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754, 279 P.2d 978).

E. Determination as to Ends of Justice. In determining that the ends of justice will be promoted by a change of venue, the trial court may rely not only on the direct facts set forth in the affidavits, but also on any reasonable and relevant inference arising therefrom (Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 755, 279 P.2d 978 .)

[Optional] F. Convenience of Party. When the serious illness of a party to an _____ [action or proceeding] will prevent his/her traveling to attend trial in another county and his/her testimony is material, such facts may justify an order changing the place of trial to the county of his/her residence; in such circumstances, the ends of justice would be promoted by the transfer (Simonian v. Simonian (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 68, 69, 217 P.2d 157).

[Optional] G. Convenience of Employees of Parties. When a party proposes to call as witnesses the employees of the adverse party, they are ordinary witnesses as to that party and the general rule that the convenience of employees of the litigants should not be considered on a motion for a change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby does not apply, and the court may properly consider their convenience (Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 279 P.2d 978).

[Optional] H. Convenience of Expert Witnesses. The convenience of expert witnesses who have personal knowledge of the facts on which their testimony is to be based may be considered in determining whether change of venue should be granted on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice will be promoted thereby (Security Investment Co. v. Gifford (1918) 179 Cal. 277, 278, 176 P. 444).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for change of venue by either party after the filing of an answer and the consequent framing of all the issues in support of a motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of that party's witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)]. For discussion of the law applicable to the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Venue.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should also be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[2][a][i]. Affidavits in support of a motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby must set forth the names of the witnesses, the nature of the testimony expected from each, and the reasons why the attendance of each would be inconvenient [Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Competence of Witnesses

In Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953 , the defendant had sought change of venue from Los Angeles County to Kern County on the ground, among others, that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby. It was conceded that the witnesses whose convenience was to be considered resided in Kern County.

The Supreme Court stated the general rule that before the convenience of witnesses may be considered for change of venue purposes, it must be shown that their proposed testimony is admissible, relevant, and material to some issue in the case as shown by the record before the court. The Court added that the affidavits in support of the motion must set forth the names of the witnesses, the nature of the testimony expected from each, and the reasons why the attendance of each would be inconvenient. The convenience of the parties is not to be considered on such a motion. And, generally, the convenience of experts should not be considered on such motions unless they have a personal knowledge of the facts on which their testimony is to be based.

The affidavits filed in support of the motion in this case revealed that the witnesses would have testified as to matters not material to the issues of the case as presented on the motion for change of venue. The Court concluded that the record did not show that the prospective witnesses would testify to facts within their knowledge material to the issues of the case, as distinguished from expert opinion evidence of value, and, thus, that the trial court had erroneously granted the motion for change of venue.

[b] Convenience of Witnesses

Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 279 P.2d 978 , involved an action for dissolution of an alleged partnership by a plaintiff claiming that he had been a partner pursuant to an oral agreement. Although filed in San Francisco, the plaintiff sought change of venue on the ground of the promotion of the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice, showing by affidavits that all of his witnesses resided in the county to which he sought to have the action transferred, rather than in the county of suit where the defendant's principal place of business was situated. In affirming the trial court's order changing venue, the court of appeal noted the absence of any showing by the defendant that its witnesses would be inconvenienced by the change and that, although the witnesses lived within 100 miles of the county of suit and could be subpoenaed, it was apparent that there was a sufficient showing of the convenience of the plaintiff's witnesses since all of them lived in the county to which transfer was ordered. The court added that although the mere numerical majority of the witnesses on one side or the other does not necessarily determine the merits of the motion, it was clear that a court cannot be said to have abused its discretion if it permits the trial to be had as near as possible to the residences of the greatest number of witnesses.

[c] Determination as to Ends of Justice

In Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 279 P.2d 978 , the facts of which are discussed in § 238.140[3][b], the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order granting the plaintiff a change of venue from San Francisco to Santa Clara County on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby. There was a sufficient showing as to the convenience of the witnesses. However, aside from the bare claim that the ends of justice would be served by the change, there was no specific statement of the facts relied on to support that averment. The court noted that there must be some evidence that the ends of justice will be served by the change before the motion can properly be granted, but that this does not mean the evidence must be direct. The trial court may rely not only on the direct facts set forth in the affidavits, but also on any reasonable and relevant inference arising therefrom.

There were several logical and valid inferences arising from the statements made in the affidavits to support the trial court's conclusion that the ends of justice would be better served by moving the trial closer to the witnesses. The obvious savings in the witnesses' time and expense in traveling to and from the place of trial promoted the ends of justice, as did the fact that they would be accessible for immediate recall if further testimony were desired, thus preventing delays. Moreover, the proximity of the defendants' office to the place of trial in Santa Clara County presumably made the production of records more expeditious. Accordingly, the court concluded that the trial court was justified in inferring that justice would be promoted by the change.

[d] Convenience of Party

In Simonian v. Simonian (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 68, 217 P.2d 157 , the defendant appealed from an order granting a change of venue from San Francisco to Los Angeles, the county of the plaintiff's residence on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby. The case involved the dissolution of a partnership in which the testimony of the parties was material and important. The plaintiff's affidavit recited that he resided in Los Angeles, had had a heart attack, was confined in a sanatorium, and might suffer serious consequences to his life if compelled to go to San Francisco to prosecute the action.

The court noted that ordinarily the convenience of a litigant is not considered on motion for change of venue. However, the court stated, the code [former Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c))] authorizes the court to consider the ends of justice as well as the convenience of witnesses, and when one party who is a material witness cannot safely travel to the other county to give his testimony by reason of his physical condition, the ends of justice would be promoted by transferring the trial to the county of his residence. Accordingly, it was concluded that there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in granting the change of venue.

[e] Convenience of Employees of Parties

In Harden v. Skinner & Hammond (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 750, 279 P.2d 978 , in which the trial court's grant of a change of venue on the ground of the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice in favor of the plaintiff was affirmed, the plaintiff had indicated by affidavit that he intended to call nine witnesses who were employees of the defendant and that their convenience was to be considered together with the convenience of other proposed witnesses. The court of appeal noted that the testimony of the nine employee-witnesses would be relevant and material and that their testimony was properly considered by the lower court in granting the motion. While it is generally stated, said the court, that the convenience of employees of the litigants should not be considered on such a motion, these witnesses were not being called by their employer to testify for that employer. They were being called by the adverse party and so were, as to him, ordinary witnesses.

[f] Convenience of Expert Witnesses

In Security Investment Co. v. Gifford (1918) 179 Cal. 277, 176 P. 444 , the plaintiff moved for a change of venue from San Diego County to Butte County on the ground of the convenience of witnesses. The trial court denied the motion and transferred the case to Fresno County. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's order.

In opposing the plaintiff's motion, the defendant submitted an affidavit naming 12 witnesses, 11 of whom were expert witnesses having no knowledge of the facts in the case. The Supreme Court stated that the convenience of expert witnesses, except when they also have personal knowledge of the facts on which their testimony is to be based, should not be considered in determining the question of the convenience of witnesses.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Convenience of Witnesses

In Richfield Hotel Management, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 222, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 , the defendant in a wrongful termination action sought change of venue from San Mateo County to Tulare County on the ground of the promotion of the convenience of the witnesses and the ends of justice by showing that all of the designated witnesses lived or worked, all relevant events allegedly took place and all relevant documents were located in Tulare County. In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying petitioner's motion for change of venue, the court noted that petitioner's evidence establishing the convenience of witnesses had not been disputed (22 Cal. App. 4th 222, 227) .

In Pearson v. Superior Court (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 69, 18 Cal. Rptr. 578 , the defendant in a divorce action sought change of venue from San Francisco to San Diego County on the ground of the promotion of the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice on a showing that 11 of her witnesses resided in the county to which she sought the change. In granting a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to vacate and set aside its order denying the defendant's motion, the court of appeal noted that the defendant had not shown that he intended to call any witnesses and did not deny any of the plaintiff's affidavits. The court stated that the convenience of witnesses is shown by the fact that the residence of all the witnesses is in the county to which the transfer of the cause is requested.

The facts and procedural background of Lieberman v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 239 Cal. Rptr. 450 , are discussed in § 238.141[4][a]. The court of appeal, citing among other cases Simonian v. Simonian (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 68, 69, 217 P.2d 157 (discussed under§ 238.140[3][d]), acknowledged that an exception to the rule prohibiting consideration of convenience to a party exists when the serious illness of a party will prevent his or her traveling to attend the trial in the other county and his or her testimony is material (194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 401) . The court applied the exception, however, in support of its issuance of a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order transferring venue from the county of plaintiff's residence (194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 403) .

[b] Convenience of Employees Of Parties

The facts and procedural background of Lieberman v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 239 Cal. Rptr. 450 , are discussed in § 238.141[4][a]. The court of appeal, although holding it inapplicable to the case before it, acknowledged that a limited exception to the rule prohibiting consideration of the convenience of employees of a party on a motion for change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)) exists when the employees are called as witnesses by the adverse party rather than on behalf of their employer (194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 401) .

In J.C. Millett Co. v. Latchford-Marble G. Co. (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 218, 334 P.2d 72 , the court of appeal affirmed the lower court's order granting a motion for change of venue on the ground of the promotion of the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice in favor of the plaintiff. Certain witnesses who resided in the county to which the transfer was sought were employees of the defendant who the plaintiff claimed the defendant had enticed from his employ and who the plaintiff indicated would be called as adverse witnesses under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2055 [now see Evid. Code § 776]. As to the convenience of these witnesses, the court noted that while generally the convenience of the employees of either party will not be considered, when such employees are being called by an adverse party, the court may properly consider their convenience.

[c] Determination as to Ends of Justice

In Minatta v. Crook (1959) 166 Cal. App. 2d 750, 333 P.2d 782 , the plaintiff was a truck operator who sought sums claimed due him as freight undercharges on lumber hauled for the defendants from Northern California to Southern California. Suit was filed in Los Angeles, where five out of the six individual defendants resided, where the defendant partnership had its main office and records, and where the terminals involved were located. The defendant sought change of venue on the ground of the promotion of the convenience of the witnesses and the ends of justice to Humboldt County where certain of its witnesses resided.

In affirming the trial court's order denying the motion, the court of appeal stated that there were several logical and valid inferences arising from the record that would support the trial court's determination that the ends of justice would be better served by retaining the action in Los Angeles. First, the action was properly brought where five out of the six individual defendants resided, where the main office of the defendant partnership was located, and where its records were kept. Moreover, it was not unreasonable to infer that the records that might be subpoenaed would include voluminous memoranda, accounting materials, and correspondence.

The court further stated that the trial court was not obliged to ignore the obvious advantages of having the records conveniently accessible to the trial court's process for purposes of discovery, examination, pretrial proceedings, and the trial itself. Substantial considerations of time, expense, and convenience were obviously material to the issue. While the fact that a defendant's books and records are located in another county is not relevant to the question of convenience of witnesses, such facts may be considered on the question of whether the ends of justice will be served by making more expeditious the production of records. Moreover, the action was brought by the plaintiff in the county in which most of the deliveries were made. The physical characteristics of the railhead facilities there had a direct bearing on essential issues in the case, and the trial court could reasonably have concluded that the ends of justice would have been better served by retaining the action where the terminals were located and where witnesses qualified to testify as to their nature would be readily available.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 238 VENUE
PART II. FORMS
C. Convenience of Witnesses and Promotion of Ends of Justice

23-238 California Points & Authorities § 238.141

§ 238.141 Opposing Motion for Change of Venue to County Other Than County in Which Suit Was Commenced on Ground That Convenience of Witnesses and Ends of Justice Would Be Promoted Thereby [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 397(c), 398]--Moving Party Must Show Both Conditions Met

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	FOR CHANGE OF VENUE
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: None set

_____

A MOTION FOR CHANGE OF VENUE ON THE GROUND THAT THE CONVENIENCE OF WITNESSES AND THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE PROMOTED THEREBY WILL BE DENIED WHEN THE MOVING PARTY CANNOT SHOW THAT BOTH CONDITIONS WILL BE MET.

A. Propriety of Chosen Venue. [See § 238.70[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Showing of Convenience and Justice. In the absence of a showing by the moving party that both the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice will be promoted by a change of venue pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section

397(c), the motion will be denied (Willingham v. Pecora (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295, 112 P.2d 328).

C. Competence of Witnesses. The convenience of witnesses may not be considered as a ground for an order granting a change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby in the absence of a showing that their proposed testimony is admissible, relevant, and material to some issue in the case as shown by the record before the court (Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953).

D. Showing by Moving Party. A motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby will be denied when the moving party relies on the weakness of the opposition rather than on the strength of his/her own showing (Chaffin Constr. Co. v. Maleville Bros. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 660, 664, 318 P.2d 196).

[Optional] E. Inconvenience of Nonmoving Party's Witnesses. If the affidavit of the party opposing a motion for change of venue on this ground shows that his/her witnesses will be inconvenienced by the change, there is no abuse of the trial court's discretion in denying the motion if the affidavits of the nonmoving party in opposition to the motion show that his/her witnesses will also be inconvenienced by the requested change (McNeill & Co. v. Doe (1912) 163 Cal. 338, 341, 125 P. 345).

[Optional] F. Convenience of Parties. The inconvenience of the parties in attending the trial is not a factor to be considered in a motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby (Wrin v. Ohlandt (1931) 213 Cal. 158, 160, 1 P.2d 991).

[Optional] G. Convenience of Employees and Experts. Neither the convenience of experts nor of employees should be considered in determining the question of convenience of witnesses on application for change of venue and, as to experts, an exception should be made only when the experts have a personal knowledge of the facts on which their testimony is to be based (Security Investment Co. v. Gifford (1918) 179 Cal. 277, 278, 176 P. 444).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by either party in opposing a motion for change of venue made by the opposing party on the ground that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby. For a memorandum for use by a plaintiff in seeking retention of an action in the county of suit on the ground that the convenience of witnesses or the ends of justice would thereby be promoted (in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the proper court) see § 238.140.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This memorandum should be accompanied by supporting affidavits as discussed in § 238.30[3][a][i].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Showing of Convenience and Justice

In Willingham v. Pecora (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 289, 112 P.2d 328 , the trial court's order denying a change of venue for the convenience of the witnesses under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)) was affirmed. The defendants had sought the change but the fact that many of the defendants' witnesses resided in the county to which they sought to have the trial transferred was not a deciding factor. The plaintiff submitted affidavits showing that his witnesses were located in the county of suit. The trial court, accordingly, was justified in concluding that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would not be promoted by a change of venue. The court noted that the statute contains conjunctive conditions, both of which must occur before the moving party is entitled to change the place of trial. It is not only necessary that the convenience of witnesses be promoted but equally essential that the ends of justice be promoted before the court is justified in granting the motion. The burden of proving both of these conditions is necessarily on the moving party. The court added that the trial court could have properly denied the motions on the ground that the ends of justice would not have been promoted by the five-month delay in the trial of the action that would have resulted if the motion for change of venue had been granted.

[b] Competence of Witnesses

In Peiser v. Mettler (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 594, 328 P.2d 953 , the facts of which are covered in § 238.140[3][a], the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for change of venue on the ground, among others, that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby, was affirmed. The affidavits the defendant filed revealed that the witnesses would have testified as to matters not material to the issues of the case as presented on the motion. The Supreme Court stated the general rule that before the convenience of witnesses may be considered for change of venue purposes, it must be shown that their proposed testimony is admissible, relevant, and material to some issue in the case as shown by the record before the court.

[c] Showing by Moving Party

In Chaffin Constr. Co. v. Maleville Bros. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 660, 318 P.2d 196 , a contract action, the defendants' motion for change of venue on the ground that the convenience of the witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted thereby was held properly denied. The defendants contended that the plaintiff's witnesses would be only its officers and employees and that their convenience could not be considered. However, the defendants' affidavits failed to inform the trial court as to what witnesses they intended to call or as to what they would testify. The court noted the general rule that the determination of a motion of this kind is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and that its determination will not be disturbed on appeal unless it manifestly appears that there is a clear abuse of discretion on the part of the trial judge. However, it noted, on a motion of this kind the moving party must stand on the strength of his own showing rather than on the weakness, if any, of the opposition. Thus, even assuming that the plaintiff's only witnesses would be its officers and employees, in the absence of any showing as to the convenience of the defendants' witnesses, the court was unable to hold that the trial court had abused its discretion in finding that the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice did not require a change of venue.

[d] Inconvenience to Nonmoving Party's Witnesses

In McNeill & Co. v. Doe (1912) 163 Cal. 338, 125 P. 345 , the defendant's motion for change of venue on the ground of the convenience of witnesses was held to have been properly denied. While the defendant submitted affidavits that tended to show some inconvenience in the attendance of his witnesses should the trial be held in the county in which suit was filed, the affidavit of the plaintiff in some degree tended to show a like inconvenience to the plaintiff's witnesses if the trial was transferred to the requested county. The court of appeal stated that the matter of granting a change of the place of trial on the ground of the convenience of witnesses is a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and a court of appeal will not interfere with its exercise unless such discretion has been abused or injustice done by the ruling. However, in view of the affidavits submitted by the nonmoving party that his witnesses would be inconvenienced by the change sought by the moving party, the court could not find that there had been such an abuse of discretion.

[e] Convenience of Parties

In Wrin v. Ohlandt (1931) 213 Cal. 158, 1 P.2d 991 , the trial court's denial of a plaintiff's motion for change of venue on the ground of the convenience of witnesses was affirmed. The issue in the case was the reasonable value of medical services rendered by two doctors. The moving party's affidavits showed that two of the three proposed witnesses were real parties in interest and that the other witness was an expert witness. The defendant's affidavits also revealed that two of her witnesses would testify on the issue. The Supreme Court ruled that the inconvenience of the parties in attending the trial is not a factor to be considered in a motion for change of venue for the convenience of witnesses. The remaining witness for the moving party was an expert witness, and there was no showing that he had any personal knowledge of any of the facts in the case. Accordingly, the Court concluded that there was no showing of any abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in denying the motion. And, said the Court, a motion for a change of venue on the ground of the convenience of witnesses rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, the exercise of which will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing of its abuse.

[f] Convenience of Employees and Experts

In Security Investment Co. v. Gifford (1918) 179 Cal. 277, 176 P. 444 , the facts of which are discussed in § 238.140[3][f], the Supreme Court noted that the defendant, in opposing the plaintiff's motion for change of venue on the ground of the convenience of witnesses, had submitted an affidavit naming 12 witnesses whose convenience should also be considered, However, 11 of those witnesses were expert witnesses who had no personal knowledge of the facts in the case, and the other witness was an employee of the defendant. Stated the Court, neither the convenience of experts nor of employees should be considered in determining the question of the convenience of witnesses, except when the experts also have personal knowledge of the facts on which their testimony is to be based.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Showing of Convenience and Justice

Lieberman v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 239 Cal. Rptr. 450 , a mandate proceeding, arose out of an action filed in the Los Angeles County Superior Court for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff when the Volkswagen micro bus in which he was a passenger rolled over on a stretch of straight highway in Inyo County and he was rendered a paraplegic. Defendants named were Volkswagenwerk, A.G., Volkswagen of America, Inc., Volkswagen Pacific, Inc., and the State of California. The action against the Volkswagen defendants was based on negligence, breach of warranty, and products liability, and the action against the state was based on an alleged dangerous and defective condition of the road on which the accident occurred. Volkswagen of America's motion for change of venue to Inyo County for the convenience of witnesses and to further the ends of justice was denied without prejudice. Subsequently, Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft was served with a summons and complaint; it answered the complaint and concurrently filed a cross complaint against the state, which moved to change venue to Inyo County under Gov. Code § 955.2. The other defendants joined in this motion. The state's motion was denied on the ground the state was not a defendant in an action for death or injury but a cross defendant in an action for indemnity. The state then moved to change venue on the ground of convenience of 15 named witnesses, all but two of whom were its employees, and the other defendants joined in the motion. Plaintiff filed declarations in opposition to the motion, in which it was claimed (1) the two nonemployee witnesses named in the state's motion had agreed to testify in Los Angeles, that he and the driver of the micro bus, the only eyewitnesses to the accident, would not be served by the change of venue, and that plaintiff's continuing medical problems would make it extremely inconvenient and difficult for him to attend trial outside Los Angeles. The trial court granted the motion of both the state and the defendant companies, and after his motion for reconsideration was denied, plaintiff filed a petition for writ of mandate seeking to compel the trial court to vacate its order.

The court of appeal granted the writ, stating that to grant a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)), it is not only necessary that convenience of witnesses be served but that the ends of justice be promoted as well (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 401) . With respect to the ends of justice, the court pointed out that the trial court was correct in considering the convenience of petitioner in ruling on the venue motions, given the possibility that his disability might prevent him from attending the trial and the obvious materiality of his testimony. The court said that it is plain these two factors weigh heavily in favor of maintaining the action in Los Angeles, quite apart from the presumptive correctness of petitioner's choice of venue, and that additionally, particularly in an action in which the plaintiff's physical condition is an issue at trial, it is important for the jury to view the plaintiff. The court said that when transfer of venue might foreclose the possibility of the plaintiff attending the trial, the court should take special heed of the statutory admonition permitting transfer only if the "ends of justice" are served. The court concluded that this is not a matter, as the lower court remarked, of being "sympathetic" to a disabled plaintiff; rather, it is a question of enforcing his rights as a litigant (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 403) .

[b] Convenience of Parties

The facts and procedural background of Lieberman v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 239 Cal. Rptr. 450 , are discussed in § 238.141[4][a]. In granting the writ, the court said that although a motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)) is addressed to the trial court's discretion, that discretion is not unfettered, and that the court may not consider the convenience of the parties in passing on the motion, except when the serious illness of a party will prevent his or her traveling to attend the trial in the other county and his or her testimony is material (194 Cal. App.3d 396, 401) . As pointed out above, the court concluded the change of venue would prevent plaintiff's attending the trial and that his testimony was material (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 403) .

[c] Convenience of Employees and Experts

The facts and procedural background of Lieberman v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 239 Cal. Rptr. 450 , are discussed in § 238.141[4][a]. In granting the writ, the court said that although a motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 397(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)) is addressed to the trial court's discretion, that discretion is not unfettered, and that the court may not consider the convenience of employees of the parties in passing on the motion except when the employees are called as witnesses by the adverse party rather than on behalf of their employer (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 401) . The court held that the trial court erroneously considered the convenience of the state's employees on both the state's motion and the motion of the defendant companies (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 402) . The court said that the state's employees were being called, first and foremost, by the state itself for the purpose, presumably, of establishing a defense to the cross complaint. Properly, then, the state's motion should have been denied (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 402) . The court said that denial of the state's motion would necessarily have rendered the defendant companies' motion, which was essentially predicated on the state's motion, moot (194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 402) . The court explained that since the state's employees would be compelled to appear in Los Angeles under the determination of the state's motion, they would be available to the defendant companies in Los Angeles, and that to allow the companies to assert the inconvenience of the state's employees would simply allow the state to accomplish indirectly what it is directly prohibited from doing (194 Cal. App. 3d 396, 402-403) . The court declared that the law does not, and it would not, countenance this, and that under these circumstances, it was an abuse of discretion for the trial court to have granted the motions of the state or the companies regarding the state employee witnesses (194 Cal.App.3d 396, 403) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE

23-239 California Points & Authorities 239.syn

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.syn Synopsis to Chapter 239: WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE

§ 239.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 239.02 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 239.03 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§ 239.04 Related California Torts Chapters

§§ 239.05-239.19 [Reserved]

§ 239.20 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Complaint Does Not Allege Exception to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Rule

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Facts Negating Application of Act

§ 239.21 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Is Employee for Workers' Compensation Purposes

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner as Employer of Employee of Partnership

[b] Joint Venturer as Employer of Employee of Joint Venture

[c] Employees of Separate Departments of Public Entity as Having Common Employer

[d] Juror as Employee of County

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Drivers for Courier Service Were Employees, Not Independent Contractors

[b] Newspaper Carriers Were Employees, Not Independent Contractors

§ 239.22 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Determination of Appeals Board That Employee Is Entitled to Compensation as Res Judicata

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Final Determination of Matter of Coverage as Res Judicata

[b] Physical Assault by Employer

[c] Compromise Settlement as Res Judicata

§ 239.23 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by

Employee Against Employer--Action for Intentional or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress Is Within Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Emotional Distress Claim Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Emotional Distress Claim Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provisions

§ 239.24 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Power Press Injury Exception Does Not Apply--Employer Did Not Know of Potential Danger in Removing or Replacing Point-of-Operation Guard [Lab. Code § 4558]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition of Power Press

[b] Requirement of Actual Knowledge for Power-Press Exception

§ 239.25 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Willful Assault Exception Does Not Apply--Employer Did Not Specifically Intend to Injure Employee [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Specific Intent to Injure

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Employer's Liability for Conduct of Co-Employee

§ 239.26 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Actual Knowledge by Employer Required to Establish Cause of Action for Fraudulent Concealment of Work-Related Injury [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Employer's Actual Knowledge of Industrial Injury

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Employer's Actual Knowledge of Industrial Injury

§ 239.27 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Was Acting in Course of Employment at Time of Injury, and Injury Arose Out of Employment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff in Course of Employment, Not Engaged in Voluntary Social Activity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Not in Course of Employment

[i] Civil Action Allowed

[b] Plaintiff in Course of Employment

[i] Civil Action Not Allowed

§ 239.28 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee or Third Person for Damages--Special Employment Relationship Created With Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Special Employer

[b] Creation of General and Special Employment Relationship

[c] Paramount Consideration as Control Over Details of Work

[d] Factors in Determining Whether Special Employment Relationship Created

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Special Employer

[b] Creation of General and Special Employment Relationship

[c] Paramount Consideration as Control Over Details of Work

[d] Factors in Determining Whether Special Employment Relationship Created

§ 239.29 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Parent Corporation Based on Alter Ego Theory

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Parent Corporation Based on Alter Ego Theory

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Parent Corporation's Alleged Control of Subsidiary's Budget Did Not Allow Plaintiffs to Avoid Exclusive Remedy Rule

§ 239.30 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Non-Negligent Companies Involved in Joint Venture With Employer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Non-Negligent Member of Joint Venture

§ 239.31 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Defendant's Concealment of Unsafe Working Conditions and Violation of Environmental Safety Regulations Were Within Compensation Bargain

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Concealment of Unsafe Working Conditions and Violation of Environmental Safety Regulations Are Acts Within Compensation Bargain

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hazardous Waste Generated by Hirer of Independent Contractor Whose Employee It Injures

§ 239.32 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--California Farm Labor Contractor Act Provides No Exception [Lab. Code § 1682 et seq.]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agricultural Laborer's Industrial Injury Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity, Notwithstanding California Farm Labor Contractor Act

§ 239.33 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer's Hirer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employee's Industrial Injury Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity, and Action for Damages Against Uninsured Employer's Hirer Not Allowed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hazardous Waste Generated by Hirer of Independent Contractor Whose Employee It Injures

[b] Hirer Did Not Exercise Retained Control Over Premises in Manner That Affirmatively Contributed to Subcontractor's Employee's Injury

[c] Landowner Had No Duty to Employee of Employer (Premises Occupant) for Injuries Arising From Employee's Performance of His Job on Landowner's Land

[d] Hirer Had No Liability to Injured Employee of Independent Contractor/Subcontractor When Hirer Had Not Affirmatively Contributed to Employee's Injury, Even Though Subcontractor Was Not Insured Against Workers' Compensation at Time of Employee's Injury

[e] Record Showed Triable Issues of Material Fact as to Whether Defendant, Who Was Hirer of Plaintiff-Employee's

Employer, Breached Nondelegable Regulatory Duty to Provide Fire Extinguishers, Pursuant to California Fire Code, and Whether Such Breach Affirmatively Contributed to Plaintiff's Injuries

[f] Furnishing and Abrupt Withdrawal of Safety Equipment by Hirer and General Contractor Could Be Found to Constitute Negligent Performance of Voluntary Undertaking, Affirmatively Contributing to Plaintiff's Injuries and Thereby Subjecting Defendants to Civil Liability

[g] Homeowners' Association, Which Had Contracted With Plaintiff's Employer for Security Services, Had No Liability for Injuries Received by Plaintiff When Assaulted on Homeowner's Premises

[h] Policy Considerations Holding Hirer of Subcontractor, Whose Employee Was Injured on Job as Result of Subcontractor's Negligence, Not Vicariously Liable Under Peculiar Risk Doctrine Were Equally Applicable to Claims Against Hirer's Agent and Thus Barred Civil Action Against That Agent

[i] Landowner Who Hires Independent Contractor May Be Liable to Contractor's Employee Injured by Undisclosed Hazard on Hirer's Land, Even if Hirer Does Not Retain Control Over Work

[j] Privette and Kinsman Doctrines Apply to Hirers of Subcontractors for Injuries to Those Who Worked for Those Subcontractors, Regardless of Whether Those Injured Were Employees of Subcontractors or Independent Contractors

[k] Gov. Code § 815.4 Provided Statutory Basis for Public Entity Potentially to Be Held Liable on Retained Control Theory Under Hooker and Its Progeny

§ 239.34 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Was Not an Employee Within the Meaning of the Workers' Compensation Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employment Relationship Requirement for Exclusive Remedy

[b] Independent Contractor Is Not an Employee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Independent Contractor Is Not an Employee

[b] Ski Lift Employee Not Statutory "Employee" at Time of Injury

[c] Exemption From Contractor's License Requirement Contained in Business and Professions Code Section 7049 for Work Incidental to "clearing or other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" Meant That Trial Court Erred in Ruling That Defendant Was Employee as Matter of Law

[d] Injured Worker Was Not Residential Employee of Homeowners

[e] Injured Worker May Sue in Tort When He Was Neither Independent Contractor Nor, for Purposes of Workers' Compensation, Employee, But Was Employee for Purposes of Labor Code Section 2750.5

§ 239.35 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employer Failed to Secure Payment of Workers' Compensation [Lab. Code § 3706]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Secure Payment of Workers' Compensation

[b] Lack of Intent Not a Defense

[c] Payment of Medical Bills and Wages Does Not Bar Suit for Damages

[d] Dual Employment Does Not Bar Suit for Damages Against Uninsured Employer

[e] Self-Insured Public Entities Not Permitted to Extend Coverage to Private Entities

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dual Employment Does Not Bar Suit for Damages Against Uninsured Employer

[b] Payment of Medical Bills and Wages Does Not Bar Suit for Damages

§ 239.36 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Employer's Willful Assault [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 239.37 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Defective Product Manufactured by Employer and Transferred to Independent Third Person for Consideration [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Employer as Manufacturer

§ 239.38 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Defamation Action Not Subject to Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defamation Action Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for Invasion of Privacy

§ 239.39 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Employer's False Imprisonment of Employee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for False Imprisonment

§ 239.40 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Action Based on Aggravation of Work-Related Injury Fraudulently Concealed From Employee [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for Fraudulent Concealment of Plaintiff's Condition

[b] Fraudulent Concealment of Arsenic-Related Injury

[c] Fraudulent Concealment of Asbestos-Related Injury

[d] Punitive Damages

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fraudulent Concealment of Asbestos-Related Injury

[b] Aggravation of Pre-Existing Illness From Employer's Failure to Detect or Notify

§ 239.41 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Action Based on Injury Caused by Absence of Power-Press Guard [Lab. Code § 4558]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Exclusivity Where Injury Caused by Removal of or Failure to Install Power-Press Guard

[b] Power-Press Guard Required by Manufacturer

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Exclusivity Where Injury Caused by Removal of or Failure to Install Power-Press Guard

[b] Definition of Power Press

§ 239.42 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Breach of Contract Action Not Precluded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusive Remedy Rule Does Not Bar Breach of Contract Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitration of Return to Work Under Collective Bargaining Agreement

§ 239.43 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Employer's Misrepresentations Made to Induce Party to Become Employee Not Subject to Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Misrepresentations Made to Induce Employment Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

§ 239.44 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Claim for Damages Pursuant to FEHA Premised on Defendant's Failure to Make Reasonable Accommodation for Plaintiff's Disability--Alleged Injuries Not Within Compensation Bargain [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Failure to Make Reasonable Accommodations for Employee's Disability Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleged Discriminatory Act in Violation of FEHA and Public Policy Was Not "Substantial Factor" in Causing Subsequent Industrial Injury

[i] Exclusive Remedy Rule Applies

[b] Employee's Petition for Writ of Mandate, Seeking Differential Pay and Reinstatement Under Education Code Sections 44977 and 44987.1, Not Tort Dmages for Work-Related Injury, Was Not Preempted by Exclusivity Provisions of Workers' Compensation Law

§ 239.45 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Did Not Specifically Intend to Cause Injury [Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coemployee Must Specifically Intend to Cause Injury

§ 239.46 Supporting Contention That Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Acted Within the Scope of Employment [Lab. Code § 3601]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Sole Remedy in Action Against Coemployee

[b] Requirement of Coemployee's Intent to Serve Employer

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Sole Remedy in Action Against Coemployee

§ 239.47 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Injury Caused by Coemployee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression or Intoxication

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Against Coemployee Not Barred by Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

[b] Harm to Employee Need Not Be Physical

§ 239.48 Opposing Contention Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Was Acting Outside Scope of Employment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Not Exclusive Remedy Where Coemployee Acted Outside Scope of Employment

[b] Requirement of Coemployee's Intent to Serve Employer

Carolyn Rashby n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n16)Footnote *. Carolyn Rashby is an attorney and freelance writer, specializing in labor and employment law.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.01

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities that may be submitted in actions in which the applicability of the workers' compensation exclusive remedy doctrine is at issue. It includes memoranda for use in supporting and opposing contentions regarding the applicability of the doctrine in actions brought by the employee against his or her employer, and supporting and opposing the contention that the doctrine applies to bar actions against coemployees.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDIDefensesExclusivity ProvisionsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.02

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.02 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to workers' compensation generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDIDefensesExclusivity ProvisionsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.03

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.03 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to wrongful termination, see Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline .

For discussion and forms relating to employer's liability for employee's torts, see Ch. 100A, Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.04

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.04 Related California Torts Chapters

For discussion relating to the exclusive remedy doctrine generally, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 10 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDIDefensesExclusivity ProvisionsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral Overview

53 of 82 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-239 California Points & Authorities §§ 239.05-239.19

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

[Reserved]

§§ 239.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.20

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.20 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Complaint Does Not Allege Exception to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Rule

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DOES NOT ALLEGE AN EXCEPTION TO THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY RULE.

A. When Workers' Compensation Is Exclusive Remedy. When the conditions of compensation set forth in Labor Code Section 3600 concur, the right to recover such compensation, pursuant to the provisions of Labor Code Section 3201 et seq. is, with certain exceptions specified in Labor Code Sections 3602, 3706, and 4558, the exclusive remedy for injury or death of an employee against the employer (Lab. Code § 3602).

B. Failure to Allege Facts Negating Application of Act. An action may not be maintained against an employer for damages for injuries to an employee when the complaint affirmatively alleges facts showing that the injuries occurred within the course and scope of the employee's employment without pleading facts negative to the application of the Workers' Compensation Act. If the complaint affirmatively alleges facts indicating coverage by the workers' compensation law, but fails to state additional facts negating the application of the exclusive remedy provision of that law, no civil action will lie and the complaint is subject to a general demurrer (Singleton v. Bonnesen (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 327, 331, 280 P.2d 481 ; Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action against defendant for damages is precluded by workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because plaintiff has failed to allege facts negative to the application of the exclusive remedy rule.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act because plaintiff has failed to allege facts to show that the provisions of the Act are not plaintiff's exclusive remedy, for example, in a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the complaint alleges facts showing that plaintiff was defendant's employee and the injuries occurred within the course and scope of the employment. Counsel also should show that plaintiff has failed to allege any facts in the complaint which would negate the application of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule, such as facts indicating that the injury was of a type outside the application of the act [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1)] or facts indicating that the injury meets the requirements of an exception to the exclusive remedy rule [see Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602]. For examples of these types of arguments, see §§ 239.21, 239.23 -239.26, and 239.28. Note that because the exclusive remedy provision is an affirmative defense that is waived if not plead, the defense must have been asserted in the answer to plaintiff's complaint.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.122 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Facts Negating Application of Act

Singleton v. Bonnesen (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 327, 280 P.2d 481 , was an appeal from a judgment in favor of defendants after defendants' demurrer to plaintiffs' second amended complaint had been sustained and plaintiffs had failed to amend. Plaintiffs' complaint alleged that plaintiffs were the surviving heirs and dependents of decedent who had been a county sheriff, that decedent had died in an automobile collision as a result of the negligent driving of a deputy county sheriff, and that both decedent, who had been a passenger in the automobile, and the deputy county sheriff had been within the scope of their employment as employees of the county. The trial court had sustained the demurrer on the ground that plaintiffs' sole remedy against the deputy sheriff and the county, as employer, was under the Workers' Compensation Act. The court of appeal reversed the judgment of the trial court insofar as it had held that plaintiffs had no cause of action against the deputy sheriff, who, as a coemployee of decedent, was not subject to the exclusive remedy provisions of Lab. Code § 3601 (Lab. Code § 3601 has since been amended to provide that workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for an employee against any other employee acting within the scope of his or her employment), but affirmed the trial court's decision insofar as it had held that the exclusive remedy against the employer was under the Workers' Compensation Act. Quoting from an earlier court of appeal decision, the court found that it is the general rule that the plaintiff need not negative the fact that he or she is within the Act, since this is an affirmative defense. However, when the allegations of the complaint are reasonably sufficient to bring the employee within the provisions of the Act, it must allege facts bringing the employee within the exceptions thereto. The court held that the allegation that the accident occurred within the scope of the employment indicated a situation falling squarely within the fied designed to be encompassed by the Workers' Compensation Act. The court reasoned that, since under the provisions of the Act and within the field of its application, it is a penal offense not to comply with its requirements, it cannot be inferred, when a complaint is silent on the subject, that one complained against has violated the law. Therefore, since the complaint contained no allegation which would have negated the application of the statute, plaintiffs had failed to state a cause of action against the county (131 Cal. App. 2d 327, 331) .

The facts and procedural background of Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 are set forth in § 239.21[3][c]. In that case, the court upheld the dismissal of plaintiff's tort action against his employer, the State of California, noting that when the complaint affirmatively alleges facts indicating coverage by workers' compensation law and fails to allege facts negating application of the exclusive remedy provision, no civil action will lie and the complaint is subject to a general demurrer (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599) .

55 of 82 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.21

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.21 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Is Employee for Workers' Compensation Purposes

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS BECAUSE AT THE TIME OF THE INJURY, PLAINTIFF WAS AN EMPLOYEE OF DEFENDANT FOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION PURPOSES.

A. Employee Relationship Precludes Action for Damages. An employer is shielded from tort liability under the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law when the injured party is an employee and the injury arises out of and in the course of his or her employment and is proximately caused by the employment (Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602).

B. Definition of Employee. For purposes of workers' compensation law, the term "employee" means every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, whether or not the employment is otherwise lawful, and also includes those persons listed in Lab. Code § 3351 and 3351.5 (Lab. Code §§ 3351, 3351.5).

[Optional] C. Partner as Employer of Employee of Partnership. An employee of a partnership who is injured in the course and scope of his or her employment by the negligence of a partner may not maintain an action to recover damages from the negligent partner since a partnership is not a distinct entity separate from its members and an employee of a partnership is an employee of each of the partners (Sonberg v. Bergere (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 681, 682, 34 Cal. Rptr. 59).

[Optional] D. Joint Venturer as Employer of Employee of Joint Venture. An employee of a joint venture is an employee of each individual member of the joint venture and may not maintain a tort action against a member of the joint venture for injury sustained in the course and scope of his or her employment by the joint venture (Horney v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 927, 190 Cal. Rptr. 18).

[Optional] E. Employees of Separate Department of Public Entity as Having Common Employer. An injury occurring to the employee of one department of a public entity as a result of the negligence of the employee of a second department that arose out of and was within the course of the injured employee's employment does not give the injured employee the right to maintain an action for damages against the public entity for the injuries suffered (Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 598-599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 ; Walker v. San Francisco (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 901, 903907, 219 P.2d 487).

[Optional] F. Juror as Employee of County. A juror is an employee of the county for purposes of workers' compensation while performing jury duty and therefore may not maintain a tort action against the county for personal injury sustained in the course of performing his or her jury service (Waggener v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1083, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 141).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because, at the time of the injury, plaintiff was an employee of defendant.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity rule because plaintiff was an employee of defendant, for example in a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that there was an employment relationship between defendant and plaintiff at the time of the injury. If appropriate, counsel should discuss evidence of a contract of employment. If plaintiff has alleged an independent contractor relationship, counsel should set forth facts indicating that plaintiff was not an independent contractor [see, e.g., Lab. Code § 2750.5 for factors indicating existence of independent contractor relationship]. Further, if defendant is either a partner of the partnership that employed plaintiff or an individual member of the joint venture that employed plaintiff, counsel should argue that the exclusive remedy doctrine precludes a civil suit for damages against a partner or joint venturer [Sonberg v. Bergere (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 681, 682, 34 Cal. Rptr. 59 ; Horney v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 927, 190 Cal. Rptr. 18] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 239.34 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Partner as Employer of Employee of Partnership

Sonberg v. Bergere (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 681, 34 Cal. Rptr. 59 , was an appeal by plaintiff from an adverse judgment in an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Plaintiff had been an employee of a copartnership and had been injured while attempting to enter an automobile owned and driven by defendant. The trial court had found that, at the time of the accident, defendant was acting on behalf of the partnership and the accident occurred in the course and scope of plaintiff's employment by the partnership. After the cause had been submitted to the trial judge, plaintiff moved to reopen the case in order to prove that defendant had been a working member of the partnership, evidently with the purpose of showing that as a working partner, defendant had been an employee of the partnership [former Lab. Code § 3359; now see Lab. Code § 3351]. The trial court denied the motion and concluded that it had no jurisdiction over plaintiff's action since plaintiff's exclusive remedy was under the Workers' Compensation Act. The court of appeal affirmed and held that an employee of a partnership who is injured in the course and scope of employment by the negligence of a partner may not maintain an action to recover damages from the negligent partner. The court reasoned that, because a partnership is not a distinct entity separate from its members for the purposes of plaintiff's action, an employee of a partnership is thus an employee of each of the partners, plaintiff's action was against her employer (220 Cal. App. 2d 681, 682) . The court rejected plaintiff's argument that a partner may have a dual legal personality under Corp. Code § 15009, that of an agent of the partnership for the purpose of its business as well as that of a partner. Plaintiff contended that, as an agent of the partnership, the defendant was not acting as plaintiff's employer at the time of the accident but was in the status of a fellow employee. However, the court found that Corp. Code § 15009 was inapplicable, since the meaning of the statute is that a partner acts not only for himself or herself but for those associated with him or her. Thus, the statute would not make a partnership a separate legal entity for the purpose of the Workers' Compensation Act. The court also found that the trial court had properly denied plaintiff's motion to reopen since, regardless of the fact that a working partner is an employee under the Workers' Compensation Act, he or she is still an employer with respect to the employees of the partnership.

[b] Joint Venturer as Employer of Employee of Joint Venture

Horney v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 190 Cal. Rptr. 18 , was an action by an employee of a joint venture engaged in the construction of a dam against the construction company that was the managing partner of the joint venture for personal injuries sustained during the course of his employment while attempting to clear a jam in a facility known as a rock plant, which was manufactured by the defendant and sold to the joint venture. The defendant answered, alleging that the action was barred by the exclusive-remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law, and its motion for summary judgment on that ground was granted.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that an employee of a joint venture is an employee of each individual member of the joint venture and, therefore, a member of a joint venture is entitled to the protection of the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law (140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 927) . The court explained that in providing the engineering and other services and component parts for the design and construction of the rock plant, defendant was acting on behalf of the joint venture, that these activities were part of its obligation as a sponsor and joint venturer under the partnership agreement, that defendant was not acting in a capacity other than that of joint venturer, and that, consequently, it followed that defendant was entitled to the protection of Lab. Code §§ 3600 and 3601(a) (140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 928) .

[c] Employees of Separate Departments of Public Entity as Having Common Employer

In Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 , a California Highway Patrol officer who was called on to investigate an accident was hit by a car traveling on the highway as he stood near one of the vehicles involved in the accident. The driver of the car that struck the officer allegedly had lost control of the car due to the icy condition of the highway. Having sustained serious injuries, the officer filed a workers' compensation claim, listing the State of California Department of Highway Patrol as his employer. In addition, he and his wife filed a personal injury and loss of consortium action against the State of California and its Department of Transportation, alleging that the Department of Transportation was negligent in allowing ice to accumulate on a bridge deck near the accident, thereby creating a dangerous condition of which it purportedly had notice. The trial court sustained the defendants demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 595-596) .

On appeal, the court rejected the officer's contention that the State of California can be an employer for purposes of a workers' compensation claim by a state employee injured during the course of employment with one state department as well as a third-party tortfeasor for purposes of the employee's civil action at law alleging that the employee's injuries were proximately caused by the negligence of workers of a separate department of state government (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 596) . The court noted that the fact that the California Highway Patrol and the Department of Transportation perform different functions for the State ofCalifornia does not mean that they are akin to separate business entities within a multiunit corporate enterprise. As a matter of law, it is the State of California that is the employer with the right of control over employees of both the California Highway Patrol and the Department of Transportation (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 598) . The plaintiff was an employee of the State of California, as were the Department of Transportation employees whose alleged negligence purportedly caused his injuries. Because the state was his employer, the plaintiff was precluded by workers' compensation law from bringing an action at law against the state, via its Department of Transportation (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599) . Since the plaintiff-employee's action at law was barred, so too was his wife's action for loss of consortium (3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599) .

In Walker v. San Francisco (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 901, 219 P.2d 487 , plaintiffs, two minor daughters of a deceased employee, appealed from a judgment entered by the trial court after it had granted defendant's motion for a judgment on the pleadings. The decedent, who was a member of a fire department, died from injuries sustained when a streetcar ran into a fire truck which was responding to an alarm and on which decedent was standing. Although the face of the complaint showed that decedent was an employee of the city and county of San Francisco, which owned and operated the municipal railway, plaintiffs contended that, because the railway was operated by defendant in its proprietary capacity, while fire protection is a governmental function, the city and county could legally be sued as a person other than an employer under Lab. Code § 3852 for the negligence of its employees who are functioning in a proprietary capacity by an employee of the city and county who at the time of the injury was serving defendant in its governmental capacity. The court of appeal rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment of the trial court. The court did not accept plaintiff's argument that defendant, for the purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, could be divided into two separate legal entities. The court explained, citing an out-of-state decision, that a defendant cannot simultaneously be two distinct entities, that is, an employer and also a third party, capable of being sued under Lab. Code § 3852. A third party is one who has no connection whatever with the relationship of employer and employee--that is, a person who is a stranger to that relationship. Thus, the fact that the employer of the employees of both the municipal railway and the fire department was the city and county limited the remedy of plaintiffs to compensation under the Workers' Compensation Act (97 Cal. App. 2d 901, 903-907) .

[d] Juror as Employee of County

Waggener v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 141 , was an action by a juror who was injured when she slipped and fell exiting a jury box. The juror sued the County of Los Angeles for personal injury damages, and the trial court dismissed the complaint. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a juror is an employee of the county within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Act and that the Act provides the exclusive remedy for the plaintiff. The court reasoned that, under the Act, any person rendering service for another is presumed to be an employee [see Lab. Code § 3357], that a juror provides services to the county through the deliberative process, and although the county does not and cannot exercise control over the juror's ultimate work product (i.e., the deliberative process), the county does control each and every other aspect of the juror's work environment. The county, therefore, has the responsibility to insure against injuries that a juror may sustain while providing these services to the county (39 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1082-1083) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Drivers for Courier Service Were Employees, Not Independent Contractors

In JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563 , the court of appeal held that substantial evidence supported the determination by the Department of Industrial Relations that drivers for plaintiff courier service were functioning as employees rather than as true independent contractors. The court of appeal found that the question of the hiree's status must be considered in light of the history and remedial and social purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, which are: (1) to ensure that the cost of industrial injuries will be part of the cost of goods rather than a burden on society; (2) to guarantee prompt, limited compensation for an employee's work injuries, regardless of fault, as an inevitable cost of production; (3) to spur increased industrial safety; and (4) in return, to insulate the employer from tort liability for employees' injuries. The court of appeal followed S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 , in finding that the functions performed by drivers (pick-up and delivery of papers and packages and driving in between) did not require a high degree of skill, that these functions constituted an integral heart of plaintiff's courier service business, that, by obtaining clients in need of this service and providing workers to conduct it, plaintiff retained all "necessary" control over the operation as a whole, and that these circumstances were enough to find an employment relationship for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, even in the absence of plaintiff's exercise of control over the details of work and with plaintiff being more concerned with the results of the work than with the means of its accomplishment (142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1059-1066) .

[b] Newspaper Carriers Were Employees, Not Independent Contractors

In Antelope Valley Press v. Steve Poizner as Insurance Commissioner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887 , a court of appeal, affirming the trial court judgment denying an employer's petition for writ of administrative mandamus, held that the administrative record supported the conclusion that newspaper carriers were employees for purposes of the workers' compensation law, not independent contractors. Thus, the employer's workers' compensation insurer correctly classified the carriers as employees for purposes of the employer's workers' compensation policy. The court of appeal followed the analysis set forth in S.G. Borello & Sons v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 , to find that the employer had the right to control the manner and means of the newspaper carriers' work, that various other Borello indicia demonstrated that the newspaper carriers were employees, and that the employer had failed to carry itsburden of proving that the carriers were independent contractors (162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 842-843, 852-856) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.22

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.22 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Determination of Appeals Board That Employee Is Entitled to Compensation as Res Judicata

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A FINAL DETERMINATION BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION APPEALS BOARD THAT PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION IS RES JUDICATA AND THE TRIAL COURT DOES NOT HAVE JURISDICTION TO HEAR A SUBSEQUENT ACTION BY THE EMPLOYEE AGAINST THE EMPLOYER FOR DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES FOR WHICH THE EMPLOYEE RECEIVED COMPENSATION.

A. Final Determination of Coverage as Res Judicata. A final determination by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board that an employee is covered under the Workers' Compensation Act is res judicata as to the issue of the jurisdiction of theBoard in subsequent proceedings or actions between the same parties or those privy to them. In such a case, an employee may not commence a subsequent action against his or her employer for damages for personal injuries for which the employee received compensation (Jones v. Brown (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 513, 520-522, 89 Cal. Rptr. 651 ; Azevedo v. Abel (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 458-460, 70 Cal. Rptr. 710).

[Optional] B. No Exception for Intentional Tort. An employee may not maintain an action against an employer for damages for personal injuries intentionally inflicted by the employer after obtaining compensation under the Workers' Compensation Act for the same injuries (Azevedo v. Abel (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 458-460, 70 Cal. Rptr. 710).

[Optional] C. Compromise Settlement as Res Judicata. A compromise settlement approved by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board has the same force and effect as a judgment made after a full hearing and is entitled to res judicata effect (Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded because a prior final determination by the workers' compensation appeals board that plaintiff was entitled to compensation is res judicata. Optional Paragraph C is for use where plaintiff is entitled to compensation for his or her injuries under the terms of a compromise settlement that has been approved by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. Note, however, that to preclude an action for personal injury damages, the compromise and release must include the determination that all of the claims released are compensable under the workers' compensation act; if not, then res judicata principles do not preclude the litigation [Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 40-44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7] . Also, the fact that the compromise and release sets forth the nature of the injury suffered does not, by itself, support the conclusion that all claims arising from that injury were covered by the settlement [Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for personal injury damages is precluded because a final determination by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board that plaintiff is entitled to compensation for those injuries is res judicata, for example, in a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence of a Workers' Compensation Appeals Board final determination that plaintiff is entitled to compensation. Counsel specifically should demonstrate that such determination relates to the same injuries for which plaintiff is seeking damages in the present lawsuit. If the final determination is in the form of a compromise and release (approved by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board), counsel should also set forth facts tending to show that the compromise and release was intended to cover all claims arising from plaintiff's injury [Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.122 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Final Determination of Matter of Coverage as Res Judicata

In Jones v. Brown (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 513, 89 Cal. Rptr. 651 , plaintiff appealed from a summary judgment entered in favor of defendants in her personal injury action. Plaintiff had been engaged in her duties of employment as a domestic for defendants when she suffered extensive burns when the contents of a vacuum cleaner she had been emptying into an incinerator caught fire. On the date of the accident there had been in effect a workers' compensation insurance policy issued to defendants for the benefit of their employees. Before plaintiff had filed her legal action she had been awarded temporary disability and medical treatment benefits from the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. It held that, although there may have been a triable issue of fact concerning whether plaintiff had ever elected to receive compensation benefits as may have been required in this case under Lab. Code § 4154 (employee who is not subject to workers' compensation provisions as permitted to elect to come within such provisions if notice is given to employer within five days after employer procured insurance policy), the superior court nevertheless had no jurisdiction over plaintiff's action. In approaching the question of jurisdiction, the court observed that, if at the time of an employee's accident there was no workers' compensation, then the appeals board is without jurisdiction to grant relief, and, as a corollary, if there was such coverage, then the superior court is without jurisdiction and must leave the parties to pursue their remedies before the appeals board. Relying on the principles first enunciated in Scott v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 293 P.2d 18 , the court further observed that since a determination made by either the superior court or the appeals board is res judicata in all subsequent proceedings or actions between the same parties or those in privy with them, a final determination as to the matter of coverage (i.e., jurisdiction) in the appeals board or the superior court is res judicata in subsequent proceedings before the other tribunal between the same parties or those privy to them. Applying these principles, the court found that, at the time plaintiff filed her legal action, the appeals board had already finally determined that plaintiff's injuries were suffered within thecourse and scope of an employment relationship with defendant, which relationship was in turn covered by the workers' compensation laws. By virtue of the award to plaintiff, this determination was a final determination as to the matter of coverage and of jurisdiction to grant relief to plaintiff. Therefore, because this determination was res judicata an binding on the superior court, the superior court could not inquire into the correctness or propriety of the determination made by the appeals board (13 Cal. App. 3d 513, 521) .

Azevedo v. Abel (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 70 Cal. Rptr. 710 , involved the issue of the right to recover both compensation benefits and damages in a lawsuit by an employee plaintiff who had been intentionally injured by her angry employer while she was concededly in the course of her employment. She had first filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits and thereafter filed a lawsuit seeking compensatory and punitive damages. After the Industrial Accident Commission (Workers' Compensation Appeals Board) had dismissed her claim on the grounds that it had no jurisdiction to make an award where the injury was intentionally inflicted by the employer, the court of appeal granted review and reversed, holding that an industrially inflicted, although intentionally inflicted, injury is compensable [see Azevedo v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 370, 376-377, 52 Cal. Rptr. 283] . Thereafter, the trial court granted defendant's motion for dismissal of the damage action from which plaintiff appealed. At the same time, the court of appeal also granted a writ of review to review an award by the appeals board to plaintiff of temporary and permanent disability benefits, medical expenses, and further medical treatment.

Holding that the award of compensation benefits was proper, the court of appeal also held that, with respect to plaintiff's appeal, the workers' compensation law was plaintiff's exclusive remedy and, therefore, the dismissal of her action had been proper. Plaintiff had urged on appeal that the employer had incurred a pair of concurrent liabilities for his intentional tort and, therefore, the two tribunals had concurrent jurisdiction. However, the court stated that a damage suit as an alternative or additional source of compensation becomes permissible only by carving a judicial exception in an uncarved statute. The court reasoned that neither moral aversion to the employer's action nor the shiny prospect of a large damage verdict justifies interference with what is essentially a policy choice of the Legislature both to provide employees economic insurance against disability in exchange for the speculative possibility of general damages and, in addition, to offer the augmented award for serious and willful misconduct in trade for the relatively rare award of punitive damages [see Lab. Code § 4553] (264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 459-460) .

However, the court observed that the superior court's dismissal of plaintiff's lawsuit had been premature. It stated that a judicial affirmation of compensability becomes res judicata only when it reaches finality. The commission's award had not actually become final when the superior court dismissed the lawsuit, because the award had been still subject to a writ of review. Nevertheless, the court found that, because the proceedings had been consolidated for decision in the court, the consolidation subjected both judgments to an identical timetable, and, hence, it was safe to affirm both the compensation award and the superior court judgment of dismissal (264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 460) .

[b] Physical Assault by Employer

There is a conflict of authority on the question of whether an employee injured as a result of a physical assault by the employer may file a claim for compensation with the Appeals Board in addition to bringing a civil suit against the employer. Early opinions considered the recovery of both compensation benefits and civil damages in these cases to be inconsistent or mutually exclusive and, therefore, required the injured employee to make an election of remedies. For example, in Busick v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 , a civil damages judgment precluded recovery of compensation benefits for the same injury. Similarly, in Azevedo v. Abel (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 451, 460, 70 Cal. Rptr. 710 , discussed in [a], above, recovery of workers' compensation benefits barred a civil action for damages. More recent authority, however, such as Magliulo v. Superior Court (Gallagher) (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 780, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621 , and Meyer v. Graphic Arts International Union (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 176, 178, 151 Cal. Rptr. 597 , indicates that the two remedies are cumulative or alternative to the extent that the employee may at least pursue both remedies simultaneously until a final judgment in the civil action is reached or an award of benefits is made in the workers' compensation proceeding. Under this line of authority, one case, Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400 , has indicated that an employee is permitted to recover compensation benefits and maintain an action for damages against the employer on the theory that the amount of benefits awarded can be set off against the damages to prevent a double recovery. However, because the traditional view has not been overruled, it is at least arguable that the employee still may not recover compensation benefits and a judgment for damages in cases of physical assault by the employer. The California Supreme Court in Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (Rudkin) (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 477 n.11, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , expressly refused to resolve the conflict between the two views.

[c] Compromise Settlement as Res Judicata

In Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 , plaintiff filed a claim with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (WCAB) for personal injuries occurring from job stress from 1977 to 1980. Before resolution of that claim, plaintiff also filed an action for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on conduct of his supervisor during the same time period. Two years later, plaintiff's workers' compensation claim was disposed of by a "Compromise and Release" under which plaintiff was paid a lump sum. The compromise stated that plaintiff had sustained injury to his body and psyche, that a serious and bona fide dispute existed between the parties as to a variety of issues raised by plaintiff's claim, and that plaintiff's acceptance of the compromise constituted a waiver of any other claims he may have had against the parties because of the events which lead to his claim. The WCAB approved the compromise. The employer then moved for summary judgment in the emotional distress action on the ground that the Workers' Compensation Board had exclusive jurisdiction of the cause and that the compromise settlement was res judicata as to the civil action. The trial court denied the motion, and the employer petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The appeals court issued the writ, finding that the compromise settlement was res judicata as to the civil action. The court stated that plaintiff already had accepted compensation for his injuries under the provisions of the workers' compensation law. The WCAB's approval of the compromise settlement necessarily included the determination that the alleged injuries were compensable under the workers' compensation act. Because the approved compromise and release is a judgment and has the same force and effect as an award made after a full hearing, the issue of compensability under the workers' compensation law was res judicata (164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759) .

In Le Parc Community Association v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Curren) (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 408 , it was held that settlement of a civil action for personal injury by an injured worker against an alleged employer, coupled with dismissal of the action with prejudice, erected no bar against the worker's application for workers' compensation benefits against the same defendant. Among the reasons cited by the court of appeal for reaching this conclusion was the fact that the civil court in which the personal injury action was brought lacked subject matter jurisdiction over the workers' compensation claim. Thus, the worker could not have litigated this latter claim in the civil action that was dismissed. The injured worker was asserting, said the court of appeal, two distinct primary rights: the common-law right to be free of the employer's negligence in maintaining the work environment, and the statutory right to prompt, certain compensation for all work-related injuries regardless of fault. Voluntary dismissal with prejudice of an action to enforce the former had no res judicata effect on an action to enforce the latter. In fact, said the court, in light of the Legislature's express intent to permit cumulative recoveries, resolution of the first proceeding, whether by dismissal with prejudice or any other form of judgment on the merits, could not be given res judicata effect to bar continued litigation of the second action. Moreover, since no issue at all was actually litigated or decided in the civil action, the dismissal of that action had no collateral estoppel effect on the subsequent workers' compensation proceeding (110 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 1170-1175) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.23

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.23 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Action for Intentional or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress Is Within Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INTENTIONAL [or NEGLIGENT] INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS IS BARRED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT NEITHER CONTRAVENED PUBLIC POLICY NOR EXCEEDED THE RISKS INHERENT IN THE EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP.

Emotional Distress Claim Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provisions. Even if an employee has not alleged a physical injury or disability, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship (Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 151, 162, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is barred by the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged facts indicating coverage by the workers' compensation law [see Lab. Code § 3600(a)], as well as evidence that defendant's conduct did not contravene public policy nor exceed the risks inherent in the employment relationship [Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 151, 162, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743] . For examples of these types of arguments in the wrongful discharge context, see Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.70 and 100.77.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions preclude plaintiff's action for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress, for example, in a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.122 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Emotional Distress Claim Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provisions

In Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828P.2d 1195 , plaintiff sued the defendants for breach of contract, defamation, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants had engaged in a campaign of harassment resulting in the wrongful termination of his employment, including falsely claiming that he had embezzled money from the company and tried to sabotage the company's product, compelling him to sell his independent distribution company which had distributed the company's product, demanding possession of his company's books and records, and forcing him to sign a promissory note for a debt owed to his company under threat of retaliation if he refused. The trial court sustained the employer's demurrers to the causes of action for defamation and negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, without leave to amend, based on the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation act. Subsequently, the court of appeal, citing Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist., discussed below, summarily denied plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate.

In considering plaintiff's contention on appeal that his claims of intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, without accompanying physical injury, were not barred by the exclusive remedy rule based on the decision of Renteria v. County of Orange (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 833, 147 Cal. Rptr. 447 , the California Supreme Court held that the Renteria court "plainly erred in suggesting that emotional injury which results in an industrial disability is not compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act" (2 Cal. 4th 744, 754) . The Court concluded that so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied, and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship, an employee's emotional distress injuries, whether or not accompanied by physical disability, are within the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation (2 Cal. 4th 744, 754) . The Court noted that for such an injury to be compensable under the workers' compensation system, however, it must result in an industrial disability or need for medical treatment (2 Cal. 4th 744, 754) . Thus, the Court observed that it is theoretically possible for an employee to incur a work-related emotional injury that results in no compensable industrial disability, but that the existence of such a noncompensable injury does not abrogate the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation act (2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755) . The Supreme Court remanded the case to the court of appeal for a determination of whether the defendants' conduct exceeded the normal risks of the employment relationship.

Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 , was an action by a firefighter against his employer, a fire protection district, and a fellow employee, the district's assistant fire chief, for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress and by the firefighter's wife for intentional infliction of emotional distress and for loss of consortium. The complaint alleged the firefighter's employment history with the district and that the assistant fire chief had subjected him to a deliberate campaign of harassment, which included the unjustified institution of disciplinary proceedings, procuring his temporary demotion, and attempting to force his retirement, as a result of which he suffered a severe and totally disabling stroke. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer without leave to amend on the ground plaintiffs' claims were within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board. The court of appeal affirmed as to eight of the ten causes of action alleged but reversed with directions to permit amendment of the complaint as to causes of action for defamation and for false light invasion of privacy. The Supreme Court granted review. There was no challenge to the court of appeal's holding that the causes of action for defamation and privacy were not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.

In affirming the judgment of the court of appeal, the Supreme Court held the action for intentional infliction of emotional distress was barred by the exclusivity provisions of the workers' compensation law (Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3601, 4553) as they read prior to their 1982 amendment, because the claim was based on conduct normally occurring in the workplace, and that, because the employee's action was barred, his spouse's actions for damages for intentional infliction of emotional distress and loss of consortium were likewise barred (43 Cal. 3d 148, 151, 162) . The Court said that in order properly to manage its business, every employer must on occasion review, criticize, demote, transfer, and discipline employees, that employers are necessarily aware that their employees will feel distressed by adverse personnel decisions, that employees may consider any such adverse action to be improper and outrageous, and that it would, indeed, be unusual for an employee not to suffer emotional distress as a result of an unfavorable decision by the employer (43 Cal. 3d 148, 160) . The Court concluded that when the misconduct attributed to the employer is actions that are a normal part of the employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and frictions in negotiations as to grievances, an employee suffering emotional distress causing disability may not avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law by characterizing the employer's decisions as manifestly unfair, outrageous, harassment, or intended to cause emotional disturbance resulting in disability (43 Cal. 3d 148, 160) .

When the employer's alleged wrongful actions cannot reasonably be construed as part of the normal employment relationship, the employee may state a cause of action in tort against the employer. For example, the California Supreme Court has held in Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , that an employee was entitled to state a cause of action against the employer for tortious discharge in violation of public policy, where the employee was terminated in retaliation for testifying truthfully before the Department of Fair Employment and Housing in support of a coworker's claim of sexual harassment (1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1095-1101) . The public policy involved was the injunction set forth in Gov. Code § 12975, prohibiting any obstruction of an official investigation of a claim of sexual harassment (1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1096-1097) . The Court noted that when an employer's decision to discharge an employee results from an animus that violates a fundamental policy of the state, this misconduct cannot, under any reasonable viewpoint, be considered a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain (1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100) .

Other cases concerning the application of the exclusive remedy rule to an employee's claim of wrongful termination include Horn v. Bradco Internat., Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 665-670, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721 ; Robomatic, Inc. v. VetcoOffshore (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 270, 274-275, 275 Cal. Rptr. 70 ; Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 449-450, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; and Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 496, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Emotional Distress Claim Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provisions

In Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866 , plaintiff alleged he was wrongfully terminated in retaliation for complaints concerning his supervisor's management style. The court of appeal upheld dismissal of causes of action alleging infliction of emotional distress, based on the exclusivity of the workers' compensation system. The court noted that plaintiff unsuccessfully attempted to circumvent this result by alleging that defendant committed fraud by virtue of a supervisor's treatment of plaintiff leading to the termination. Any damages alleged in those circumstances are the result of the termination, not any action or forbearance to act in reliance on fraudulent statements (806 F. Supp. 866, 870-871) .

In Jones v. Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200 , plaintiff alleged a cause of action for intentional and negligent emotional distress by contending that the legislature did not intend that an employer be allowed to raise the exclusive remedy rule for the purpose of deflecting a claim of discriminatory practices. That is, asserted plaintiff, a claim for emotional and psychological damage, arising out of employment, is not barred when the distress is engendered by an employer's illegal discriminatory practices in violation of a fundamental public policy, since such misconduct lies outside of the exclusive remedy rule. The court of appeal held that, because plaintiff did not establish discrimination, her causes of action for emotional distress failed to the extent that they were tethered to the discrimination claim. Moreover, the causes of action for emotional distress failed because they were barred by the exclusive remedy rule. Even if the discriminatory conduct of which plaintiff complained could be characterized as intentional, unfair, or outrageous, it was nevertheless covered by the exclusivity provisions (152 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1382) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.24

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.24 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Power Press Injury Exception Does Not Apply--Employer Did Not Know of Potential Danger in Removing or Replacing Point-of-Operation Guard [Lab. Code § 4558]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE POWER PRESS EXCEPTION TO THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT DOES NOT APPLY, BECAUSE DEFENDANT DID NOT KNOW OF THE POTENTIAL DANGER OF SERIOUS INJURY OR DEATH IN _____ [REMOVING or FAILING TO INSTALL] A POWER PRESS POINT-OF-OPERATION GUARD.

A. Definition of Power Press. For purposes of workers' compensation law, the term "power press" means a material-forming machine that utilizes a die, which is designed for use in the manufacture of other products (Lab. Code § 4558(a)(4); McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 110, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871). A "die" is a tool that imparts some version of its own shape to material by pressing or impacting against or through the material, in a punching, stamping or extruding motion (Rosales v. Deputy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 288, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256).

B. Requirement of Actual Knowledge for Power Press Exception. The term "known" in Labor Code Section 4558 means actual awareness, and courts may not impute knowledge or impose constructive knowledge on the employer regarding the danger to employees in removing or failing to install a point-of-operation guard on a power press (Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1519, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385). Furthermore, the power press exception does not apply unless the awareness of the need for the point-of-operation guard resulted from information supplied by the manufacturer of the machine (Bryer v. Santa Cruz Pasta Factory (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1714-1715, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 ; see Lab. Code § 4558(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the power-press exception to workers' compensation exclusivity provisions does not apply because defendant did not have the requisite knowledge of the danger to employees in removing or failing to install a point-of-operation guard from information supplied by the manufacturer, as required by Lab. Code § 4558(c).

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the power-press exception to the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine does not apply because defendant was unaware of the danger in removing or failing to install a guard, for example, in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that the employer was unaware of the danger of injury or death in its removal or failure to install a point-of-operation guard. For example, if appropriate, counsel could set forth facts indicating that when the employer removed the manufacturer's guard and replaced it with another safety device, the employer intended to make the power press safer and did not know that there was a danger in removing the original guard [Saldana v. Globe Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1516-1520, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 239.41 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice for summary judgment and related discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition of Power Press

In Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 , the court of appeal reversed a dismissal of an employee's action against his employer that was based on the trial court's determination as an issue of preliminary fact, pursuant to Evidence Code Section 405, that the employee was not injured by a "power press" within the meaning of Labor Code Section 4558(a)(4), when the court of appeal found that whether the machine was a "power press" was a factual question that should have been submitted to the jury (120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 578-580) .

In McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 , the plaintiff, who was injured at work while operating a printing press, filed a personal injury suit against his employer, arguing that the power press exemption to the exclusive remedy provision of the Workers' Compensation Act [see Lab. Code § 4558] applied. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant, and the court of appeals affirmed, holding that a printing press is not a power press within the meaning of Lab. Code § 4558(a)(4). The court stated that, while a printing press is a machine, it does not fit the statutory definition of power press, because it is not a machine that forms materials to be used in the manufacture of other products (39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 111) .

In Rosales v. Deputy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256 , the plaintiff was injured while operating alathe which used a V-notching tool to form material by cutting along its surface. The lathe's safety sensor, which was designed to prevent operation while the door was open, had been intentionally disabled. The plaintiff filed a civil action against his employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 4558, alleging that the machine he was using was a "power press." The defendant filed a motion for summary judgment, which was granted by the superior court based upon its finding that the plaintiff did not dispute that he was injured by a lathe which used a sharp edge cutting tool rather than a mirror image pressing or stamping die. The court of appeal reversed, rejecting the idea that a power press necessarily employs a die that forms material into a mirror image of itself. Relying on a regulatory agency's definition, the court of appeal held that a power press is any mechanically powered machine that forms materials by use of tools or dies attached to slides.

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal's decision. Affirming the earlier court of appeal decisions defining the term "die" (see Ceja v. J. R. Wood, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1377, 242 Cal. Rptr. 531 ; Graham v. Hopkins (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1487-1489, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82 , the Court described a "die" as a tool that imparts some version of its own shape to material by pressing or impacting against or through the material, in a punching, stamping, or extruding motion. Thus, the Court held that the V-notching tool used by the plaintiff which formed material by cutting along its surface in the manner of a blade was not a die under Labor Code § 4558 (Rosales v. Deputy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 285, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256).

[b] Requirement of Actual Knowledge for Power-Press Exception

Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385 , involved an employee's action for damages against her employer under Lab. Code § 4558, alleging that the employer installed the manufacturer's fixed-barrier guard, but then removed it and replaced it with a pull-back guard that was in place at the time of the accident. Defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground that workers' compensation was plaintiff's exclusive remedy and that plaintiff did not raise any triable issues of fact warranting application of the Lab. Code § 4558 exception to workers' compensation exclusivity. The trial court granted the motion and the court of appeals affirmed.

The court stated that the elements for a cause of action under § 4558 are (1) that the injury or death is proximately caused by the employer's knowing removal of or knowing failure to install a point-of-operation guard on a power press; and (2) that this removal or failure to install is specifically authorized by the employer under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death. With respect to the second element, the court found that the Legislature used the word "known" in the sense of actual awareness, and that nothing in § 4558 indicates that courts may impute knowledge or impose constructive knowledge on an employer. Replacing a potentially dangerous safety device with another safety device carries an inference that the intent was to make the power press safer, and it necessarily follows that such intent would be contrary to knowledge of the probability of serious injury. The court also found that § 4558 does not encompass situations where the employer did not know of any danger when it replaced the guard and only later was negligent in failing to maintain the replacement guard. Finally, the court held that § 4558 does not apply to an employer's mere act of removing the manufacturer's guard and replacing it with a new guard, without regard to the employer's state of mind (233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1516-1520) .

In Bryer v. Santa Cruz Pasta Factory (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , plaintiff was injured while operating a pasta machine that did not have a point of operation guard. The defendant employer had bought the machine second hand from an individual and had observed a hole in the machine, but the defendant had not received any information from the manufacturer about the necessity of installing a point of operation guard to the machine. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant, and the court of appeals affirmed, holding that application of the power press exemption to the exclusive remedy doctrine under Lab. Code § 4558(c) requires proof that the manufacturer informed the employer of the need for a point of operation guard. Here, defendant had never received any information from the manufacturer of the machine regarding the necessity of a point of operation guard. In addition, plaintiff produced no evidence that defendant acquired such knowledge from the manufacturer or that the representations of the third party from whom defendant acquired the machine were attributable to the manufacturer. Finally, while defendant was able to discern from the existence of a hole in the machine that a safety device was missing, the hole did not constitute a conveyance by the manufacturer of the knowledge required under the statute. The hole conveyed no description of the nature of the missing part, nor did it convey the specific fact that the manufacturer required a point of operation guard (38 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1714-1715) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.25

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.25 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Willful Assault Exception Does Not Apply--Employer Did Not Specifically Intend to Injure Employee [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE EXCLUSIVITY EXCEPTION IN LABOR CODE SECTION 3602(b)(1) FOR INJURIES CAUSED BY A WILLFUL PHYSICAL ASSAULT BY THE EMPLOYER DOES NOT APPLY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO SHOW THAT DEFENDANT SPECIFICALLY INTENDED TO INJURE HIM/HER.

Requirement of Specific Intent to Injure. Willful assaults under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) include only those common-law batteries that are specifically intended to injure. Thus, if the employee fails to show that the employer has specifically intended to injure him or her, the Labor Code Section 3602(b)(1) exception does not apply and workers' compensation benefits are the employee's sole remedy (Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) exception to workers' compensation exclusivity does not apply because defendant did not specifically intend to injure plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) exception for willful physical assault does not apply, for example in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has failed to allege facts indicating that the employer had the specific intent to injure plaintiff. Counsel also should discuss evidence indicating that in committing the alleged battery, the employer did not have the specific intent to injure plaintiff, such as facts indicating that the injury was accidental [Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 239.36 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Specific Intent to Injure

The factual and procedural background of Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 , is set forth in § 239.45[3][a]. The issue before the court was whether Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) excepting willful physical assaults by coemployees from the exclusive coverage of workers' compensation included all common-law batteries or only those batteries that are specifically intended to injure. The court first held that "willful" employer assaults under § 3602(b)(1) do not include all common-law batteries, but only those that are specifically intended to injure. Finding that there was no basis for a different interpretation of the term "willful" in § 3601(a)(1), the court then held that acts of aggression are only "willful" under § 3601(a)(1) if they are intended to injure (9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Employer's Liability for Conduct of Co-Employee

In Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 , an employee filed a complaint against his employer alleging, among other things, a cause of action for assault and battery stemming from actions directed towards him by a co-employee. The employee contended that this cause of action fell within the Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) exception to the exclusive remedy rule, pursuant to the doctrine of respondeat superior. The trial court rejected the employee's contention and granted the employer's motion for summary judgment, finding that the employee's cause of action was barred. The court of appeal upheld the lower court's ruling. The court of appeal reasoned that applying the doctrine of respondeat superior as proposed by the employee to expand the scope of the Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) exception to cover conduct committed by a co-employee would directly violate Lab. Code § 3601(b). In orderto reconcile Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) and Lab. Code § 3601(b), the court of appeal pointed out, liability under the former must be based on positive misconduct by the employer and not on a theory of vicarious liability such as that which forms the basis of the doctrine of respondeat superior. The court of appeal concluded that the exception to the exclusivity rule contained in Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) does not authorize a civil action against an employer for injury resulting from the willful assault of a co-employee based on a theory of respondeat superior, when there is no employer ratification of the co-employee's conduct (69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1490-1491) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.26

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.26 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Actual Knowledge by Employer Required to Establish Cause of Action for Fraudulent Concealment of Work-Related Injury [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO ESTABLISH A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR AGGRAVATION OF A WORK-RELATED INJURY DUE TO THE EMPLOYER'S FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT OF THE EXISTENCE OF THE INJURY AND ITS CONNECTION WITH THE CONDITION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO PROVE THAT THE EMPLOYER HAD ACTUAL KNOWLEDGE OF THE INDUSTRIAL INJURY, AND, THEREFORE, THE ACTION IS PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW.

Requirement of Employer's Actual Knowledge of Industrial Injury. In order to establish a cause of action under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) for aggravation of a work-related injury due to the employer's fraudulent concealment of a work-related injury, plaintiff must prove that the employer had actual knowledge of the work-related injury (Santiago v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1334, 274 Cal. Rptr. 576).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff has failed to establish a cause of action under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) because plaintiff has failed to prove that defendant had actual knowledge of the industrial injury.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff has failed to establish a cause of action under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), for example, in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that the employer neither failed to disclose facts regarding plaintiff's injury and its connection to the employment when there was a duty to do so nor made any affirmative misrepresentations. Further, counsel should discuss evidence indicating that the employer did not have actual knowledge of plaintiff's injury or of the injury's connection to the employment. For example, counsel could show that the employee knew about possible health problems arising from exposure to certain chemicals used in his/her work, and that there is no evidence that the employer withheld from plaintiff any information relevant to plaintiff's condition [Davis v. Lockheed Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-523, 17 Cal. Rptr. 233 ; see also Ashdown v. Ameron International Corp. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 868, 881, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 239.40 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Employer's Actual Knowledge of Industrial Injury

In Santiago v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 274 Cal. Rptr. 576 , the plaintiffs were employees of a tire manufacturer. Plaintiffs, who had leukemia, alleged that their disease resulted fromworkplace exposure to benzene, that their injuries were fraudulently concealed by the employer, and that as a result of this fraudulent concealment, their claims were outside the scope of the workers' compensation law pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2). The trial court instructed the jury that plaintiffs had the burden of proving that defendant had actual knowledge both that plaintiffs suffered injuries, and that those injuries were caused by their employment. The jury found that defendant had not possessed actual knowledge of this information, and the trial court entered judgment for defendant.

Plaintiffs appealed, contending that the trial court erred in instructing the jury that actual knowledge was required, and that it should have instructed as to constructive knowledge, imputed knowledge, and reckless misrepresentation. In affirming, the court of appeal rejected this argument, holding that Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) requires proof of actual knowledge on the part of the employer, and that the trial court's jury instruction was proper (224 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1334) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Employer's Actual Knowledge of Industrial Injury

In Davis v. Lockheed Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 , the court held that the employee was not entitled, as a matter of law, to bring a civil action against the employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) when the employer established by uncontroverted evidence that the employee had known for years about possible health problems arising from exposure to asbestos and other chemicals used the course of his work, and when there was nothing in the record to suggest that the employer withheld any information from the employee relevant to his condition (13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-523) . Similarly, in Ashdown v. Ameron International Corp. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 868, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's finding that the fraudulent concealment exception to the exclusive remedy rule did not apply, when there was no evidence indicating that decedent's employers knew decedent had an asbestos-related disease, fraudulently concealed the existence of decedent's injuries and their connection with his employment, or hindered decedent from seeking treatment or bringing a lawsuit (83 Cal. App. 4th 868, 881) .

In Jensen v. Amgen, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendant/employer on the grounds that there was no evidence that the employer knew of the employee's injury before she did. In the absence of such prior knowledge, the employer could have concealed neither the existence of the employee's injury nor the connection between her symptoms and her employment, both of which are necessary elements of an action pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) (105 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1326-1327) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.27

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.27 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Was Acting in Course of Employment at Time of Injury, and Injury Arose Out of Employment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS BECAUSE AT THE TIME OF THE INJURY, PLAINTIFF WAS ACTING IN THE COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT, AND PLAINTIFF'S INJURY AROSE OUT OF THAT EMPLOYMENT.

Employment-Related Injury Incurred on Employee's Day Off Not Subject to Action for Damages. An employee injured while visiting work on a day off and engaged in actions incidental to the employment, within the employment contract, in furtherance of the employer's business, protecting the employer's assets, and constituting a reasonable expectancy of employment, incurs the injury in the course of employment (Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 354-357, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages, which plaintiff alleges were incurred while on defendant's premises to engage in a voluntary social activity, is precluded by workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because plaintiff was in fact injured while in the course of employment.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity rule because plaintiff wasinjured in the course of employment--in a demurrer, for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that plaintiff was in the course of employment at the time of injury and that the injury arose out of that employment. Counsel should specifically counter plaintiff's assertions that the injury arose outside of the scope of employment, while, for example, plaintiff was on defendant's premises to engage in a voluntary social activity [Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 354-357, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff in Course of Employment, Not Engaged in Voluntary Social Activity

Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 , was an employee's suit against her employer for negligence. The suit proceeded to verdict and judgment in the trial court, where the jury awarded plaintiff in excess of one-half million dollars. The court of appeal reversed, directing the trial court to enter an order granting defendant's motion for nonsuit (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 349, 357) .

In reaching its decision, the appellate court reviewed the relevant facts on the issue of whether plaintiff's injury arose out of her employment and occurred in the course of that employment, as defendant-employer contended, or occurred while plaintiff was on defendant's premises to engage in a voluntary social activity, as plaintiff contended, in which case the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law would not apply. The court noted that, when plaintiff began her employment with defendant, a retail store, she signed a form entitled "Beverly Fabrics, Inc. Security Program," which stated in bold type: "It is the responsibility of every employee to protect the assets of the company at all times." Plaintiff's primary responsibilities included ordering, pricing, and stocking merchandise, which required heavy lifting, bending, squatting, and climbing ladders. According to the court, plaintiff was, however, trained to do almost any activity in the store. On the day of the injury, plaintiff went to her employer's premises, despite the fact that it was her day off, to sign a condolence card and contribute money for two employees who had lost family members. She was not requested by anyone associated with her employer to do this. While plaintiff was visiting in the back of the store with two fellow employees, both of whom were working at the time, one of those employees noticed movement on a nearby shelving unit stacked with heavy clay pots and other inventory. The two on-duty employees grabbed the shelf to stop it from moving. When plaintiff saw the shelf falling, she moved about six feet from where she was standing, positioned herself between the two other employees, and grabbed the shelf. She immediately felt pain down her back. In responding to the falling shelf, all three employees testified that they acted out of instinct. Soon after the three employees grabbed the falling shelf, other employees came to assist, including the store manager, who also grabbed the shelf and told everyone, if they could not hold it, to let go. One of the original two employees who grabbed the shelf also advised any person to let go if she was hurting. In response, plaintiff stated that her back was hurting, but she could not let go. While plaintiff, the store manager, and another employee held the shelf up, other employees removed items from it. During this time, customers were kept out of the area and precluded from providing assistance. Had plaintiff not been an employee of defendant, she would not have been allowed to provide any assistance. Furthermore, if plaintiff had failed to volunteer to help, she would have been asked by her coworkers to help, despite the fact that it was her day off (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 349-350) .

In response to plaintiff's suit for negligence, defendant filed an answer, asserting as an affirmative defense that plaintiff's sole and exclusive remedy was under the California workers' compensation statutes. Defendant's motion for summary judgment was denied by the trial court. At the close of evidence, defendant moved for a judgment of nonsuit, which the court denied. The court also denied defendant's request for jury instructions directed at whether plaintiff was acting in the course of her employment, concluding that whether plaintiff was acting in the course and scope of her employment at the time of injury was not a jury question because there was no factual dispute regarding what occurred. The trial court also found that, as a matter of law, the evidence established that plaintiff was not in the course of her employment at the time of her injury. Finally, after the jury returned its verdict and judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff, defendant moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, in the alternative, for a new trial, both of which motions the trial court denied (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 350-351) .

The court of appeal found that plaintiff was acting in the course of her employment at the time of her injury and that her injury arose out of her employment. Injuries sustained while an employee is performing tasks within his or her employment contract but outside normal work hours are, said the court, within the course of employment. The rationale is that the employee is still acting in furtherance of the employer's business. Moreover, the combination of a personal act performed outside of regular working hours with the performance of acts in furtherance of the employer's business does not defeat a finding that the employee was acting in thecourse of employment. In this case, plaintiff was assisting fellow employees in holding up a collapsing shelf. She was doing no more than what a reasonable employer would expect from a responsible employee in her position. Thus, plaintiff was engaged in an activity incidental to her employment in furtherance of her employer's business and protecting its assets (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 354-356) .

The appellate court found plaintiff's reliance on the provisions of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9) misplaced. That statute precludes recovery of workers' compensation benefits for injuries arising out of voluntary participation in off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activities not constituting part of the employee's work-related duties, except when these activities are a reasonable expectancy of, or are expressly or impliedly required by, the employment. Plaintiff was not engaged in a recreational or social activity at the time of her injury, and her injury did not arise out of participation in any such activity. Plaintiff was not hurt while she was signing a condolence card or visiting with coworkers. She was hurt holding up a shelf in an effort to protect the property of her employer, an activity reasonably contemplated by her employment. In short, her actions in assisting her coworkers in holding up the shelf were taken in furtherance of her employer's business and were reasonably expected by her employer (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 356) .

Finally, the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument that she responded to an emergency situation out of instinct, without conscious thought, and made a split-second decision to assist in holding up the collapsing shelf, and that in such a case it is not appropriate to examine the activity being performed at the time of the injury but to look instead to the reason the employee was on the premises. In this case, that reason was to engage in a voluntary social activity that exempted her from the exclusive remedy rule of the workers' compensation statutes by virtue of Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9). The court found no such exception to well settled workers' compensation law for split-second or instinctive decisions, pointing out that, to the contrary, California courts have recognized that injuries sustained by an employee during emergency efforts to save the employer's property from fire, theft, or other hazards are within the course of employment and compensable under workers' compensation laws (95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 357) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Not in Course of Employment

[i] Civil Action Allowed

In Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914 , an employee was injured while sliding down his employer's water slide. The court of appeal noted that the question of whether an employee was on-duty or off-duty at the time of injury is not the ultimate test for whether the injury was covered by the compensation bargain and thus subject to the exclusive remedy rule. Rather, the ultimate test is whether the injury arose out of and in the course of the employment. Moreover, said the court, the "reasonable expectancy" requirement of Labor Code Section 3600(a)(9) is simply a subset of the ultimate issue, namely, whether the injury arose out of and in the course of the employment (Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2), (3)). The court found that the employee's injury did not arise out of or occur in the course of the employment, since the employee was engaging in an activity for his own enjoyment that was specifically forbidden to employees by company policy and of no benefit to the employer. The court ordered reinstatement of the civil action verdict in favor of the employee (117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-838) .

[b] Plaintiff in Course of Employment

[i] Civil Action Not Allowed

In Vaught v. State of California/Department of Parks and Recreation (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605 , a court of appeal, affirming the trial court's summary judgment for the employer, held that the exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3602(a) barred the employee and his wife's civil action against the employer for negligence and failure to make a house habitable for human occupation, when the court found that the plaintiffs lived in the ranch house owned by the employer as an "employment benefit" of the husband's job as a park ranger. The husband was injured when, attempting to get up from the bathroom floor of the house, where he had been observing leaking pipes while "on all fours," he slipped and fell. The court found that the bunkhouse rule provides that, when an employee is injured while living on the employer's premises, the course-of-employment requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a) is satisfied if the employment contract contemplates, or work necessity requires, the employee to reside on the employer's premises, which was true in the present case. The court noted that the employment and the injury must be linked in some causal fashion to satisfy the arising-out-of-employment requirement of Lab. Code § 3600(a), and that the injury occurring in employer-furnished housing in the course of employment ordinarily arises out of employment, which was true in the present case (157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1544-1549) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.28

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.28 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee or Third Person for Damages--Special Employment Relationship Created With Defendant

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS BARRED FROM MAINTAINING AN ACTION AT LAW AGAINST DEFENDANT AND IS LIMITED IN HIS/HER REMEDY TO WORKERS' COMPENSATION BENEFITS WHERE DEFENDANT IS PLAINTIFF'S SPECIAL EMPLOYER AND THE INJURIES AROSE OUT OF THE COURSE AND SCOPE OF THE SPECIAL EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP.

A. Action Barred Against Special Employer. Where a general and special employment relationship is created, both the general and special employers are liable for the payment of benefits to the injured employee under workers' compensation law. Thus, while the employee may proceed against either employer for compensation benefits, he/she is ordinarily barred from maintaining an action for damages against thespecial employer (McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 702, 343 P.2d 923 ; Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 578, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578).

B. Creation of General and Special Employment Relationship. A general and special employment relationship is created where an employer loans or furnishes an employee to another person who puts the employee to work on a job and directs his/her activities (Oxford v. Signal Oil & Gas Co. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 403, 408, 90 Cal. Rptr. 700).

C. Paramount Consideration as Control Over Details of Work. The paramount consideration in determining whether a general and special employment relationship is created is whether the alleged special employer exercises control, not necessarily complete, over the details of the work (McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 705, 343 P.2d 923).

[Optional] D. Factors in Determining Whether Special Employment Relationship Created. Important factors to be considered in determining whether a general and special employment relationship has been created are the nature of the services, whether skilled or unskilled, whether the work is part of the employer's regular business, the duration of the employment period, the method of payment, and who supplies the work tools (Martin v. Phillips Petroleum Co. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 916, 921-922, 117 Cal. Rptr. 269 ; Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 177, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages for personal injuries is barred because defendant was the special employer of plaintiff and, therefore, plaintiff's sole and exclusive remedy is workers' compensation benefits.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action is barred by workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions because defendant was plaintiff's special employer, for example in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should argue that defendant was a special employer of plaintiff, discussing evidence of a special employment relationship with specific reference to the factors used to determine whether such a relationship exists. Counsel should set forth facts indicating that each employer had some power of direction and control over plaintiff, and that the special employer had the right to exercise control over the details of the work. If appropriate, counsel could also show, for example, that defendant had the power to discharge plaintiff, that the work was unskilled, that the work was part of defendant's regular business, and/or that defendant supplied the work tools [Martin v. Phillips Petroleum co. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 916, 921-922, 117 Cal. Rptr. 269 ; Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 177, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice for summary judgment and related discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Special Employer

McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 343 P.2d 923 , was an appeal from a judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict for $75,000 in favor of plaintiff for damages for personal injuries and from an order granting a new trial. Plaintiff was a master mechanic and equipment operator for a tractor company, which had agreed to furnish equipment and operators to defendant on an hourly rental basis. The company ordered plaintiff to work with defendant at defendant's job site where his duties were the repair and maintenance of earth-moving and grading equipment. The operation of such equipment was to be supervised by defendant's employees. Plaintiff received his injury while attempting to operate a tractor under the supervision, or at least aid, of one of defendant's supervisors. The apparent ground for the granting of the judgment notwithstanding the verdict was that plaintiff was the special employee of defendant as a matter of law and that for this reason plaintiff's exclusive remedy was worker's compensation. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment notwithstanding the verdict but affirmed the order granting a new trial. The Court stated the general rule that where a relationship of general and special employment obtains, the injured worker can look to both employers for compensation benefits. If workers' compensation is available, it constitutes the worker's sole remedy against the employer. Therefore, where there is dual employment the worker is barred from maintaining an action for damages against either employer (52 Cal. 2d 698, 702) . The court added that it is settled that a general and special employmentrelationship is present if there exists in each some power, not necessarily complete, of direction and control. The paramount consideration in this respect is whether the alleged special employer exercises control over the details of the work. However, the control need not be exercised, it being sufficient if the right to direct the details of the work s present. In the case before it, the Court could not find as a matter of law that the evidence which was most favorable to plaintiff supported the single inference that plaintiff was defendants' special employer. Although defendant's employees designated the work to be done generally, the details of the work were left to the individual equipment operators. In all other respects, the tractor company had control over plaintiff's employment. In reviewing the circumstances of the accident, the Court found that the employee in charge of the assigned work was not necessarily acting as a supervisor of plaintiff in advising plaintiff how to move his tractor, but rather was aiding plaintiff to complete his job. Nevertheless, the Court also found that there was substantial evidence to support the order for a new trial (52 Cal. 2d 698, 704-707) .

In Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578 , an employee had been hired on a one-day assignment from a temporary labor agency when he was injured while attempting to jump on a delivery truck belonging to the employer pursuant to the direction of the truck driver, a coworker who supervised and controlled the temporary employee's work. The employee was on the agency's payroll and recovered workers' compensation from the agency's carrier. The employee and the carrier sued the employer: the employee claimed damages based on negligence and the carrier claimed a lien for compensation benefits paid. Although the trial court found as an issue without controversy that the employer had the ability to control the result of the employee's work and the means by which it was accomplished, including the details relating to his job performance at the time of the injuries alleged, it denied the employer's motion for summary judgment.

In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to enter summary judgment for the employer, the court said that an employee may have more than one employer for purposes of workers' compensation, and, in situations of dual employers, the second or "special" employer may enjoy the same immunity from a common-law negligence action on account of an industrial injury as does the first or "general" employer (194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 578) . The court said that once a special employment relationship is identified, two consequences ensue: (1) the special employer's liability for workers' compensation coverage to the employee, and (2) the employer's immunity from a common-law tort action. The latter consequence is the result of the exclusivity of the compensation remedy embodied in Lab. Code § 3601 (194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 578) . The court concluded that a special employment relationship was created, and that, under the circumstances, the employee's exclusive remedy for the job-related injuries was workers' compensation (194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 577, 584) .

[b] Creation of General and Special Employment Relationship

In Oxford v. Signal Oil & Gas Co. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 403, 90 Cal. Rptr. 700 , plaintiffs, the heirs at law of decedents Oxford and Akins, brought an action against defendants for damages for the wrongful deaths of decedents, who were killed by the explosion of a certain tank belonging to defendant Signal. All defendants moved for summary judgment, alleging that decedents were Signal's special employees, that they were killed in the course and scope of that employment, and that plaintiffs' exclusive remedy was under the workers' compensation law. The trial court granted the motion of defendant Signal, and plaintiffs and intervenor, the workers' compensation insurance carrier for Trans-Pacific, decedents' alleged general employer, appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The undisputed facts of the case showed that at the time of death decedents had been the general employees of Trans-Pacific; that they had been assigned to Signal pursuant to an employment contract under which Trans-Pacific took care of the payroll and all incidental benefits; that they had been assigned to clean the tank by Signal's foreman who had control of the details of the work; that for several years decedents had been working on Signal's premises; and that during this time Signal exercised supervision and control to the exclusion of the general employer, specified all work assignments, furnished the work tools, controlled the details of the work, and, if dissatisfied with decedents' services, had the power to terminate the employment on notification to the general employer.

The court stated that, generally, the right to control and direct the activities of an employee or the manner and method in which the work is performed, whether exercised or not, gives rise to the employment relationship. Consequently, the court found, quoting from Hanna, California Law Of Employee Injuries And Workmen's Compensation (2d ed.), § 3.142 (Matthew Bender), that where an employer loans or furnishes an employee to another person who puts the employee to work on a job and directs his or her activities, a general and special employment relationship is created. The court added that, while the power to discharge the employee is strong evidence of the existence of a special employment, the payment of wages is not determinative. The court considered other factors, including the nature of the services, whether skilled or unskilled, whether the work is part of the employer's regular business, the duration of the employment period, the method of payment, and who supplies the work tools, but noted that the paramount consideration is whether the alleged special employer exercises control over the details of the work. Reviewing the undisputed facts of the case, the court found that the circumstances were compellingfor the creation of a special employment. The fact that there may have been a triable issue of fact concerning the question of whether Trans-Pacific was decedents' employer was irrelevant to finding that Signal was also decedents' special employer, since the possibility of dual employment had long been recognized in California. Therefore, the court concluded that, because workers' compensation was available against the special employer in that both employers were liable for the payment of benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act, it constituted the workers' sole remedy against the special employer, and the special employee was thus barred from maintaining an action against the special employer.

[c] Paramount Consideration as Control Over Details of Work

McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 343 P.2d 923 , is discussed under § 239.28[3][a].

[d] Factors in Determining Whether Special Employment Relationship Created

Martin v. Phillips Petroleum Co. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 916, 117 Cal. Rptr. 269 , was an appeal by plaintiff and intervenor from a judgment rendered by the trial court in the first part of what was scheduled to be a bifurcated trial of plaintiff's action for damages for personal injuries. The judgment in favor of defendant was based on the conclusion that plaintiff was defendant's special employer. The court of appeal affirmed. The evidence showed that plaintiff was supplied by Plant Maintenance, plaintiff's alleged general employer, to defendant under a contract between defendant and Plant Maintenance, which provided that all of the employees which were furnished to defendant under the contract were deemed to be employees of Plant Maintenance, which maintained complete control over the employees, and that, although some of the employees may work solely or partially under the direction or supervision of defendant, such direction or supervision was for Plant Maintenance's benefit and account. Plaintiff was injured during his lunch hour in a locker room which was supplied by Plant Maintenance but which was maintained by defendant.

The court found that the contract between defendant and Plant Maintenance was not determinative of the true relationship of the parties to the contract. It could not affect that relationship nor could it place an employee in a different position from that which he or she actually held. Analyzing the various factors which would determine the true relationship of the parties, the court found that: (1) although plaintiff had been on the payroll of Plant Maintenance, this factor was relatively unimportant; (2) the fact that plaintiff had been with defendant for at least a year without interruption was a factor tending to show special employment; (3) the fact that plaintiff's services were relatively unskilled also tended to show special employment, since such services would be readily subject to control by defendant's supervisors; (4) the fact that all the tools were supplied by defendant tended to show special employment; (5) although all Plant Maintenance employees wore badges, nothing in the record showed of what practical use the badges were in the performance of required tasks; (6) although a Plant Maintenance foreman checked plaintiff in the morning, this fact did not affect the details or quality of the work; (7) although defendant did not have the right to terminate plaintiff's employment as such, it did have the right to terminate the special employment, which was an important factor tending to show special employment; and (8) the evidence showed that defendant had the right to control the details of the work for which plaintiff was "lent" or "loaned," which was the factor most tending to show special employment. Thus, the court concluded that based on the nature of the transaction and relationship between the general and special employers and with the employee, the trial court had correctly found that plaintiff was defendant's special employee (42 Cal. App. 3d 916, 922-923) .

In Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 , the C. Norman Peterson Company (Peterson) and Shell entered into a contract whereby Peterson agreed to perform maintenance work at one of Shell's refineries. Plaintiff, a Peterson employee, was working on building a scaffold at the refinery along with a crew of Peterson carpenters. While he was operating a saw furnished by Shell, his hand was severed. Plaintiff filed suit against Shell and other defendants for personal injuries. Shell alleged that plaintiff was its special employee such that his exclusive remedy was workers' compensation benefits. The jury returned a special verdict finding that Shell was not plaintiff's special employer and awarded plaintiff damages. The trial court, however, granted Shell's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the sole ground that plaintiff was Shell's special employee. Plaintiff appealed.

The Court stated that if general and special employment exist, the injured worker can look to both employers for workers' compensation benefits. The primary consideration in determining whether a special employment relationship exists is whether the special employer has the right to control and direct the activities of the employee or the manner and method in which the work is performed, whether or not the right to control is exercised (23 Cal. 3d 168, 175) . The court said that the fact that the contract between Shell and Peterson expressly stated that Shell had a right to control and direct plaintiff's work did not prove the existence of a special employment relationship because a contract is not conclusive evidence of the right to control. Also, courts have looked to a variety of factors, in addition to the right to control, as indicia of the existence of such a relationship. The special employer's power to discharge the worker is strongevidence of a special employment relationship, but payment of wages is not determinative. Evidence that the employee provides unskilled labor and performs work that is part of the employer's regular business, that the employment period is lengthy, and that the employer provides the tools and equipment used all tend to indicate a special employment relationship (23 Cal. 3d 168, 177) . Additionally, a court must consider whether the worker expressly or impliedly consented to the employment relationship and whether the parties believed they were creating an 103A/employee relationship. In the case before it, the court found that there was substantial evidence to support the jury's finding that a special employment relationship did not exist: Shell did not exercise control over plaintiff's duties, plaintiff's work was unskilled, plaintiff was on Peterson's payroll and not permanently assigned to Shell, plaintiff had worked at Shell for only 21/2 months, Peterson provided all tools and equipment with the exception of the saw that injured plaintiff, Shell did not have the power to terminate plaintiff's employment with Peterson, and plaintiff did not expressly or impliedly agree to an employment relationship with Shell (23 Cal. 3d 168, 178-179) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Special Employer

In Enslow v. U.S. (C.D. Cal. 1992) 811 F. Supp. 503 , the court held that a firefighter employed by the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection who was killed fighting a forest fire under contract to the U.S. Department of the Interior was a "special employee" of the U.S. government, which made the government immune from a wrongful death suit under the Federal Tort Claims Act but subject to payment of compensation under the California workers' compensation law (811 F. Supp. 503, 506) .

[b] Creation of General and Special Employment Relationship

In Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 , the Court found that where the negligence of a special employee injures another of the special employer's workers, the victim is not barred by the exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation law from suing the general employer of the tortfeasor in negligence on respondeat superior principles, if the general employer, at the time of the injury, retained total or partial concurrent control over the tortfeasor's work (26 Cal. 3d 486, 490) . The court observed that when an employer, also known as the "general" employer, lends an employee to another employer and relinquishes all right of control over the employee's activities to the borrowing employer, a "special" employment relationship arises between the borrowing employer and the employee. During this period of transferred control, the special employer becomes solely liable for the employee's job-related torts under the doctrine of respondeat superior. This special employment relationship and consequent imposition of liability flows from the special employer's power to supervise the details of the employee's work, and that mere instruction by the borrower will not suffice. The court said that several factors tend to negate the existence of such a relationship: (1) the employee is not paid by and cannot be discharged by the borrower; (2) the employee is not a skilled worker with substantial control over operational details; (3) the employee is not engaged in the borrower's usual business; (4) the employee is employed only for a brief period of time; and (5) the employee is using tools and equipment furnished by the lending employer (26 Cal. 3d 486, 492) .

[c] Paramount Consideration as Control Over Details of Work

The facts and procedural background of Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578 , are discussed under § 239.28[3][a]. In issuing the writ of mandate, the court, analyzing the decision in Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 [discussed under § 239.28[3][d]], said the primary consideration in determining whether a special employment relationship exists is whether the special employer exercises control over the details of the employee's work, and that this is crucial to a finding of a special employment relationship (194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 580) .

[d] Factors in Determining Whether Special Employment Relationship Created

In Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 , the court affirmed the trial court's determination that plaintiff, who was sent to work for defendant by a labor broker, had a special employment relationship with defendant, thereby barring plaintiff from bringing a tort action against defendant. The court stated that the primary consideration in determining whether a special employment relationship exists is whether the special employer has the right to control and direct the activities of the employee or the manner and method in which the work is performed, whether such control is exercised or not. Other relevant factors include: (1) whether the borrowing employer's control extends beyond mere suggestion of details or cooperation; (2) whether the employee is performing the special employer's work; (3) whether there was an agreement, understanding or meeting of the minds between the general and special employer as to the employment relationship; (4) whether the employee acquiesced in the new work situation; (5) whether the original employer terminated his or her relationship with the employee; (6) whether the special employer furnished the tools and place for performance; (7)whether the new employment was for a considerable period of time; (8) whether the special employer had the right to fire the employee; and (9) whether the special employer had the obligation to pay the employee (203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250) .

In Wedeck v. Unocal Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 862, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 , the court relied on the analysis in Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 , to find that a special employment relationship existed between a temporary agency employee and her assigned employer as a matter of law. Plaintiff worked for an agency which provided technical employees to other companies on a temporary basis. The agency arranged for plaintiff to work on a temporary basis as a full-time chemist for defendant. Plaintiff filed a tort action against defendant, alleging that she suffered personal injuries from exposure to chemicals while working at defendant's laboratory. Defendant filed a motion for summary judgment, asserting that it was plaintiff's special employer and that plaintiff's complaint was barred under Lab. Code § 3602.

In finding that a special employment relationship existed between plaintiff and defendant, the court emphasized that defendant had the right to control and direct plaintiff's activities and the manner in which she performed her work. Plaintiff received ongoing training and instruction from defendant. She referred to defendant's procedure manuals and followed specific procedures and instructions in performing her work. Defendant provided plaintiff with all of her work assignments, and plaintiff's quality assurance tests were monitored by defendant's supervisors. The court also noted that the application of most of the secondary factors indicated that plaintiff was defendant's employee (59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 858-859) . For instance, plaintiff performed defendant's work at defendant's job site, mostly using defendant's tools, defendant agreed to train and supervise plaintiff, plaintiff accepted the assignment with defendant and acquiesced in all of the work conditions set forth by defendant, defendant paid the placement agency an hourly rate for plaintiff's work and the agency paid plaintiff, and plaintiff worked for defendant for nearly one year (59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 860-861) . The court granted summary judgment, determining that plaintiff was barred by the exclusive remedy doctrine from bringing a tort action against defendant (59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 862) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.29

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.29 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Parent Corporation Based on Alter Ego Theory

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS BARRED FROM MAINTAINING AN ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST THE DEFENDANT PARENT CORPORATION ON AN ALTER EGO THEORY FOR ITS SUBSIDIARY CORPORATION'S CONDUCT BECAUSE THE SUBSIDIARY CORPORATION IS SHIELDED FROM SUCH AN ACTION BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS.

Action Barred Against Parent Corporation Based on Alter Ego Theory. A parent corporation is not liable for damages under a theory of alter ego when plaintiff is an employee of a subsidiary corporation and the subsidiary is shielded from an action for damages by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act (Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 251-252, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted is support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages for personal injuries is barred against the parent corporation of plaintiff's employer based on an alter ego theory because the subsidiary-employer is shielded from this action by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action is barred against the parent corporation of plaintiff's employer, for example, in a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that defendant is the parent corporation of plaintiff'semployer, and that plaintiff's injury arose out of and in the course of employment with defendant's subsidiary. Counsel should argue that the exclusive remedy provision precludes a civil suit for damages against the subsidiary-employer and consequently, against the parent corporation based on an alter ego theory [Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 251-252, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Parent Corporation Based on Alter Ego Theory

In Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 , heirs of employees who died during a killer's rampage at the employer's building brought a wrongful death action against the corporate employer and the employer's parent corporation. The action against the parent corporation was based on an alter ego theory. The trial court granted summary judgment for the employer on the ground that workers' compensation was the plaintiffs' exclusive remedy. The trial court also granted summary judgment for the parent corporation and plaintiffs appealed this ruling.

The court of appeal affirmed, relying on Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , which held that the employer of an independent contractor is not vicariously liable for injuries to the independent contractor's employee. The court of appeal held that under similar reasoning, an action cannot proceed against a parent corporation based on an alter ego theory when the subsidiary corporation is shielded from the action by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act (33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 251) . The court reasoned that the alter ego theory is an equitable theory of vicarious liability and that it should not be applied to this situation because it would produce inequitable results. First, the liability of the non-negligent parent corporation would be greater than that of the subsidiary-employer whose negligence actually caused the injury. Second, permitting employees of subsidiary corporations to recover from the parent corporation under an alter ego theory of vicarious liability would give those employees an unwarranted windfall by exempting them from the statutorily limits of workers' compensation. Finally, because of the unavailability of equitable indemnity to the parent corporation [see Lab. Code § 3864], application of the alter ego doctrine to permit the owner of the subsidiary corporation to be held liable in tort places an onerous burden on the parent corporation that is fault-free (33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 252) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Parent Corporation's Alleged Control of Subsidiary's Budget Did Not Allow Plaintiffs to Avoid Exclusive Remedy Rule

In Waste Management, Inc. v. The Superior Court of San Diego County (Guzman de Peralta) (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 105, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 910 , a complaint against a parent corporation for negligence and wrongful death was subject to demurrer, when it alleged that the parent controlled the budget of its subsidiary and thereby prevented the subsidiary from replacing or repairing the dangerous and improperly maintained trash truck that killed the decedent employee, for whose death plaintiffs were receiving workers' compensation benefits from the subsidiary's insurer. The complaint did not allege any independent tort committed by the parent, since the alleged negligent control or intentional mismanagement of the subsidiary's budget did not create a duty on the part of the parent to ensure safety or prevent injuries to the subsidiary's employees, and plaintiffs' claim that the parent caused unsafe working conditions by controlling the subsidiary's fiscal policies and management decisions was nothing more than a claim that the parent was responsible for acts or omissions of the subsidiary, in which case the parent was sheltered by the exclusive remedy rule (119 Cal. App. 4th 105, 111-114) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.30

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.30 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Non-Negligent Companies Involved in Joint Venture With Employer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS BARRED FROM MAINTAINING AN ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST NON-NEGLIGENT DEFENDANT INVOLVED IN JOINT VENTURE WITH EMPLOYER WHEN NEGLIGENCE OF EMPLOYER CAUSED PLAINTIFF'S INJURIES AND EMPLOYER PROVIDED WORKERS' COMPENSATION COVERAGE.

Action for Damages Against Non-Negligent Member of Joint Venture Barred by Exclusive Remedy Doctrine. An injured employee is barred from pursuing a personal injury action against non-negligent members of a joint venture or enterprise, when anothermember of the joint venture negligently caused the employee's injury and provided workers' compensation coverage. Allowing an employee to pursue such an action would place an unfair burden on the non-negligent joint venturers, and would be contrary to the public policy behind the workers' compensation laws (Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1669-1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages against a non-negligent member of a joint venture or enterprise is barred, when another member of the joint venture negligently caused the employee's injury and provided workers' compensation coverage.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's personal injury action against a non-negligent member of a joint venture or enterprise is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine. For example, they may be submitted with a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should indicate that plaintiff has filed a claim for tort damages against a non-negligent member of a joint venture or enterprise, based on the negligence of plaintiff's employer, another joint venturer. Counsel should specify the nature of the relationship between the joint venturers and emphasize that the negligent joint venturer has provided workers' compensation benefits. Counsel should argue that holding defendant liable in this circumstance would place an unfair burden on the non-negligent joint venturer, and would be contrary to the public policy behind the workers' compensation laws.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Barred Against Non-Negligent Member of Joint Venture

In Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 , the plaintiff lost his arm in an industrial accident. His employer, whose negligence caused the plaintiff's injuries, provided workers' compensation insurance. The plaintiff filed a separate action, in tort, against various non-negligent corporations engaged in certain business pursuits with and on behalf of the employer. The defendants filed a motion for summary judgment, alleging that the plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue of material fact concerning their liability. The trial court granted the defendants' motion.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling, holding, in part, that no joint enterprise existed between the plaintiff's employer and the defendants since the defendants had no control over the production or sale of the employer's goods, did not share profits with the employer, and had no ownership interest in the employer's assets (51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1666) . Additionally, relying on the reasoning set forth in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 (California Supreme Court concluded that employer of independent contractor is not vicariously liable for injuries to independent contractor's employee), the court held that an injured employee is barred from pursuing a personal injury action against a non-negligent member of a joint venture or enterprise when another member of the joint venture negligently injured the employee and provided workers' compensation coverage. In so holding, the court reasoned that a joint venture sued for the negligence of one venturer is entitled to indemnity from the negligent venturer. The workers' compensation exclusive remedy doctrine would operate to prevent the joint venture from seeking such indemnity, and make unavailable a remedy to which the joint venture is legally entitled. Moreover, the court noted, public policy as it relates to the existence of workers' compensation coverage favors uniform compensation for all injured employees, regardless of the structure or organization of the business that hires the particular employee. Allowing an employee to recover damages against a non-negligent member of a joint venture would give employees working in the context of a joint venture something that is denied to other workers: the right to recover tort damages based on an employer's failure to provide a safe working environment (51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1669-1670) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.31

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.31 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Defendant's Concealment of Unsafe Working Conditions and Violation of Environmental Safety Regulations Were Within Compensation Bargain

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S ALLEGED ACTS WERE WITHIN THE COMPENSATION BARGAIN.

Civil Action for Damages Based on Employer's Acts Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provision. An employer's concealment of known unsafe working conditions and violation of environmental safety regulations remain within the compensation bargain, making workers' compensation benefits an employee's exclusive remedy (Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 469-472, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 ; Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 714, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that defendant's concealment of known unsafe working conditions and violation of environmental safety regulations were within the compensation bargain, making plaintiff's civil action for damages barred by the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rule.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity rule because defendant's acts remain within the compensation bargain--in a demurrer, for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that defendant, in concealing known unsafe working conditions and in violating environmental safety regulations, was acting within the compensation bargain [Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 469-472, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 ; Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 714, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Concealment of Unsafe Working Conditions and Violation of Environmental Safety Regulations Are Acts Within Compensation Bargain

In Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , an employer's conduct of concealing from employees its knowledge that asbestos was dangerous to health and operating its plant in violation of state and federal regulations was held to constitute the kind of employer's intentional misconduct warranting penalties pursuant to Lab. Code § 4553, so that a civil action for damages was barred, making workers' compensation benefits an employee's exclusive remedy (27 Cal. 3d 465, 469-472) .

Since 1924, Johns-Manville had known that long exposure to or ingestion of asbestos was dangerous to health, but the company concealed this knowledge from plaintiff. Johns-Manville advised plaintiff that it was safe to work in close proximity to asbestos, failed to provide him with adequate protective devices, and did not operate the plant in accordance with state and federal regulations governing dust levels. Johns-Manville also retained unqualified doctors to examine plaintiff and did not provide the doctors with adequate information about the risk of asbestos exposure. Johns-Manville performed these acts and omissions falsely and fraudulently, with intent to induce plaintiff to continue to work in a dangerous environment. Plaintiff's complaint alleged causes of action for fraud and conspiracy with others to perpetrate these acts (27 Cal. 3d 465, 469-470) .

The California Supreme Court concluded that Lab. Code § 4553 was designed to penalize an employer's intentional misconduct and to compensate injuries resulting from such acts. In this connection, the Court held that workers' compensation provided the exclusive remedy for injuries suffered because the employer made false representations about, or concealed dangers inherent in, a material that employees were required to handle. Moreover, said the Court, workers' compensation provided the exclusive remedy for injuries cause by an employer's malicious misconduct in allowing an employee to use a machine without proper instruction (27 Cal. 3d 465, 473-474) .

When an employer knows that a danger to an employee exists but fails to take corrective action or warn the employee of the risk, said the Court, "[s]uch conduct may be characterized as intentional or even deceitful. Yet if an action at law were allowed as a remedy, many cases cognizable under workers' compensation would also be prosecuted outside that system. The focus of the inquiry in a case involving work-related injury would often be not whether the injury arose out of and in the course of employment, but the state of knowledge of the employer and the employee regarding thedangerous condition which caused the injury. Such a result would undermine the underlying premise upon which the workers' compensation system is based" (27 Cal. 3d 465, 474) .

The Court added that to permit an action at law for damages for any intentional misconduct by an employer would significantly disturb the compensation bargain upon which the workers' compensation system is based. Lab. Code § 4553 "is the sole remedy for additional compensation against an employer whose employee is injured ... as the result of a deliberate failure to assure that the physical environment of the work place is safe" (27 Cal. 3d 465, 474-475) .

Thus, if a complaint alleges "that plaintiff contracted the disease because defendant knew and concealed from him that his health was endangered by asbestos in the work environment, failed to supply adequate protective devices to avoid disease, and violated governmental regulations relating to dust levels at the plant, plaintiff's only remedy would be to prosecute his claim under the workers' compensation law" (27 Cal. 3d 465, 474-475) .

(Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court also involved the issue of aggravation of the employee's injury by the employer's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and its connection with the employment. For points and authorities relating to this issue, see §§ 239.26 and 239.40.)

In Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195 , an employer's conduct of providing employees with a hazardous chemical substance to clean a film processing laboratory, concealing known unsafe working conditions, and violating environmental safety regulations was held to be within the compensation bargain, making workers' compensation benefits the employees' exclusive remedy (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 714) .

Plaintiff was an unskilled laborer who worked for four and one-half months at defendant laboratories, cleaning a facility that processed and developed television and movie film. The assignment was to clean walls, pipes, and other parts of the interior of the film lab. Defendant directed plaintiff to clean the interior of the film lab with a blue-green substance plaintiff believed to be cleaning soap. Plaintiff and his co-workers filled mop buckets and sprayers with the blue-green solution from 55-gallon barrels. Defendant provided no hazard training, posted no signs about chemical hazards, and never told the laborers what the 55-gallon barrels contained. None of the barrels of blue-green solution had labels warning of a chemical hazard or identifying the contents of the barrels. During delivery of the 55-gallon barrels, plaintiff observed his supervisor removing labels from each barrel before offloading them from a truck for use by plaintiff and his co-workers in cleaning the facility (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 716) .

Cleaning the interior walls and ceiling of the film lab exposed plaintiff and his co-workers to the blue-green cleaning substance. Plaintiff sprayed the ceiling with the blue-green solution, causing dirt to bead. He then used a mop to remove the cleaner and dirt from the ceiling, usually repeating the procedure several times to clean each area. After cleaning the ceiling, he cleaned the walls, and finally cleaned floors and pipes. As he worked on the ceiling, the blue-green cleaning liquid "rained" down on him, making contact with his skin, running down his back and chest, and getting inside his gloves. Pressing the mop against the ceiling and walls caused liquid to squeeze out of the mop and run down the handle into his sleeves, down his arms, and into his shirt. After a day's work, the blue-green solution soaked his clothing and feet. He remained wet until he arrived home. He worked in street clothes. Defendant provided no protective gear except for rubber gloves, which disintegrated after about one-half hour of use, and a paper suit that did not protect plaintiff from being soaked (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 716-717) .

Plaintiff did not recall ever being told what the blue-green cleaning substance was inside the barrels. No one told him about or required him to attend a safety program or a "right to know" program. No one trained him on how to handle chemicals. Plaintiff testified that on one occasion when he was working in clothing soaked with the blue-green substance, he saw his supervisor, defendant's safety and engineer project coordinator and program manager of defendant's hazard communication program, and defendant's director of facilities observe as he cleaned a room. Plaintiff asked if the blue-green substance was safe. Defendant's safety engineer project coordinator and program manager of defendant's hazard communication program responded, "Yes, sir. Yes, it's safe." Another of defendant's foremen told plaintiff several times the cleaner was safe (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 717) .

Plaintiff subsequently learned that the blue-green substance provided for cleaning the film-processing lab was "Absorb," an organic solvent/degreaser. Absorb contains sodium hydroxide and 2-butoxyethanol, known as "2BE." Sodium hydroxide and 2BE appear on the OSHA Director's list of hazardous substances. 2BE is one of a class of chemicals known to cause brain and nervous system damage. 2BE absorbs readily through the skin and into the bloodstream. Once in the bloodstream, 2BE targets the liver, kidneys, respiratory tract, and central nervous system. Its effects on the central nervous system include headaches, nausea, dizziness, confusion, loss of consciousness, and possible death. Breathing vapor, combined with skin exposure, significantly increases exposure. Workers using 2BE should avoid skin contact and wear chemical-resistant gloves and possibly a respirator (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 717) .

During four and one-half months of using Absorb, plaintiff sustained injuries that included: a slowing of brain function; anxiety and panic attacks; concentration difficulties; loss of cognitive functioning; personality changes, mood and temper problems; respiratory problems; andnumbness. Plaintiff was classified as disabled from working as a laborer. Plaintiffs' toxicology and neuropsychology experts testified that exposure to 2BE at defendant's film lab, to a reasonable degree of medical probability, caused plaintiff's injuries (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 717) .

Plaintiff's complaint included causes of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, strict liability ultrahazardous activity, civil conspiracy, battery, and fraud. Although the jury returned a verdict in plaintiff's favor for $6,650,000 in compensatory and punitive damages, the trial court entered judgment notwithstanding the verdict in defendant's favor. The trial court found that, pursuant to Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , the workers' compensation statutes provided the exclusive remedy for toxic exposure injuries in the workplace (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 715) .

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that plaintiff claimed defendant deceived and defrauded him by not revealing that Absorb was unsafe to use in his work, assured plaintiff that Absorb was safe to use, did not provide adequate gloves, clothing, or other protective gear, did not provide training in using and handling Absorb, removed warning labels from Absorb containers, and violated government safety regulations regarding use of Absorb and warnings to employees about its toxic chemical properties. "Under Johns-Manville," the court went on to say, "an injury to an employee caused by an employer's deceit and concealment of hazardous substances used in the employment, failure to train, and failure to assure a safe workplace environment remains within the course of employment." The court concluded that there was "no meaningful factual distinction between this case and the facts of Johns-Manville. Therefore the Workers' Compensation Act provides Gunnell's remedy, and he cannot maintain a civil action against Metrocolor" (92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 722-723) .

Other cases holding that the workers' compensation statutes remain the injured employee's exclusive remedy, notwithstanding an employer's knowing failure to assure that the workplace is safe, include Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1286, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269 ; Williams v. International Paper Co. (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 810, 819, 181 Cal. Rptr. 342 ; Stalnaker v. Boeing Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1291, 1296, 1300-1301, 231 Cal. Rptr. 323 .

Other cases holding that the workers' compensation statutes remain the injured employee's exclusive remedy, notwithstanding an employer's fraud, deceit, or concealment of a dangerous condition, include United States Borax & Chemical Corp. v. Superior Court (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 406, 410-411, 213 Cal. Rptr. 155 ; Spratley v. Winchell Donut House, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1408, 1412, 234 Cal. Rptr. 121 .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hazardous Waste Generated by Hirer of Independent Contractor Whose Employee It Injures

In Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757 , the court of appeal held that, although the hirer of a contractor, having generated hazardous waste that it hired the contractor to remove, and which injured an employee of the contractor, had a nondelegable duty under the hazardous waste statutes [42 U.S.C.S. § 6901 et seq.; Health & Safety Code § 25100 et seq.] to properly dispose of such waste, nevertheless the Privette/Toland doctrine means that the generator of hazardous waste is not liable to the employee of a contractor it hires to dispose of that waste unless the generator's conduct affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries (108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 606-611) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.32

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.32 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--California Farm Labor Contractor Act Provides No Exception [Lab. Code § 1682 et seq.]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS BECAUSE THE CALIFORNIA FARM LABOR CONTRACTOR ACT, ON WHICH PLAINTIFF RELIES, PROVIDES NO EXCEPTION TO THOSE EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS.

Agricultural Laborer's Civil Action for Damages Against Licensed Farm Labor Contractor Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provision. The remedies of an agricultural laborer injured in the course of employment against his employer, a licensed farm labor contractor, are limited by the exclusive remedy provision of Lab. Code § 3602(a), and the California Farm Labor Contractor Act [FLCA] (Lab. Code § 1682 et seq.) provides no exception to the exclusivity provision (Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1201-1204, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, despite plaintiff's contention that the California Farm Labor Contractor Act provides an exception to that exclusivity doctrine.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine--in a demurrer, for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff was injured in the course of employment and argue that the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation law bars this civil action and that the California Farm Labor Contractor Act provides no exception to that exclusivity provision [Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1201-1204, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agricultural Laborer's Industrial Injury Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity, Notwithstanding California Farm Labor Contractor Act

In Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 , plaintiff filed suit against his employer, a farm labor contractor registered pursuant to the California Farm Labor Contractor Act [FLCA] (Lab. Code § 1682 et seq.), for injuries he sustained while, pursuant to defendant's instructions, riding in a van driven by a fellow employee who failed to obey a stop sign and caused a collision in which three fellow employees, also riding in the van, were killed and others, including plaintiff, were injured. The trial court, finding that the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act applied, granted defendant's motion for summary judgment. From the final judgment entered on this motion, plaintiff appealed (98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1199-1200) .

Plaintiff argued that FLCA created an implied exception to the general rule of workers' compensation exclusivity, pointing to Lab. Code § 1695.7(c)(4), which provides that an "aggrieved worker" may bring a civil action for violation of "this section." The section referred to, Lab. Code § 1695.7, sets forth the FLCA licensing requirement. Plaintiff also relied on Lab. Code § 1697(b), which provides that an "employee aggrieved by any violation of this chapter" may bring a civil action "for injunctive relief or damages, or both ... ." By virtue of the use of "worker" and "employee" in these sections, plaintiff argued, the legislature must have contemplated an exception to the exclusivity rule of Lab. Code § 3602, because, otherwise, the grant of a private right of action would be meaningless. Thus, said plaintiff, an employer registered under FLCA was not entitled to the protection of the exclusivity rule (98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1200-1201) .

The court of appeal noted that FLCA was primarily intended to protect farmworkers from mistreatment at the hands of their employers. Thus, it was hardly surprising that when the legislature added a private right of action to enforce FLCA, it conferred that right of action upon an "employee." The court found it also unsurprising, however, that the legislature described the employee as one "aggrieved by any violation of this chapter." The focus of FLCA was the preservation of the financial integrity of the employment relationship by insuring the payment of wages, assuring the availability of work when it was promised, and prohibiting imposition of unfair charges against employees as a condition of access to work. The court noted that plaintiff had not referred it to any provision of FLCA that specifically addressed physical injury of farmworkers. The court's own examination of FLCA, however, revealed one instance in which physical injury arguably was addressed in some manner. Lab. Code § 1695(a)(6) required that the FLCA licensee (defendant, in this case) "[t]ake out a policy of insurance ... satisfactory to the [Labor Commissioner], which insures the licensee against liability for damage to persons or property arising out of the licensee's operation of, or ownership of, any vehicle or vehicles for the transportation of individuals in connection with his ... operations as a farm labor contractor." Because of this language, said the court, it could be argued that the statute envisions personal injury liability arising from the contractor's injury of workers transported in the insured vehicles (98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1201-1202) .

One might ask, noted the court (although, the court also noted, plaintiff did not): Why require such insurance if workers' compensation exclusivity means that the insurance would never be called upon for payment of a worker's personal injury claim? The answer, according to the court, was that the history of Lab. Code § 1695 suggested that the liability insurance requirement may be no more than a historical anomaly. The requirement was enacted in 1951, when, said the court, the status of farmworkers under the Workers' Compensation Act was "complex." In essence, an agricultural employer could simply opt out of workers' compensation coverage. By opting out, the employer presumably would have been subject to ordinary civil liability for negligent operation of farmworker transportation, so that the employer's workers would have benefitted from the liabilityinsurance requirement. At present, however, workers' compensation coverage for farmworkers is mandatory, rendering the liability insurance requirement archaic, at least to the extent that it concerns employees of a farm labor contractor (98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1202) .

Finally, said the court, application of the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions in the present circumstances would harmonize the provisions of FLCA and the Workers' Compensation Act in the manner undertaken by the California Supreme Court in the two cases plaintiff cited in his brief on appeal. In City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 , the Supreme Court held that Lab. Code § 132a does not provide the exclusive remedy for disability discrimination arising from on-the-job injury. The Supreme Court noted that Lab. Code § 3602 made the workers' compensation remedy exclusive for only those injuries made compensable by Lab. Code § 3600, that is, personal physical injury or death sustained in and arising out of the course of employment. Since the discrimination prohibited under Lab. Code § 132a was not an injury made compensable under Lab. Code § 3600, the exclusivity provision was not applicable to a disability discrimination claim (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154) . Accordingly, the Supreme Court concluded that an injured worker could pursue a disability discrimination claim under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, even though the disability arose from an on-the-job injury (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158) . In the other Supreme Court case cited by plaintiff, Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 , the Court addressed the scope of workers' compensation exclusivity as established in the earlier case of Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 . In Cole, the Court held that the exclusivity rule did not bar a civil action against an employer when action taken against an employee fell outside the "compensation bargain" or, roughly speaking, outside the normal employment relationship. In Shoemaker, a state employee was harassed by his supervisors and ultimately fired in connection with his complaints about complicity of his supervisors in illegal activities by state contractors (52 Cal. 3d 1, 7-8) . The Court concluded that, because of the strong and explicit statutory prohibition on retaliation against governmental "whistleblowers," the supervisors' conduct fell outside the "compensation bargain" as defined in Cole. Because the supervisors' intentional conduct fell outside the compensation bargain, the employee was entitled to seek compensation for his emotional distress injury in a civil action (52 Cal. 3d 1, 23) .

In the present case, noted the court of appeal, plaintiff contended neither that he had suffered injuries not compensable within the workers' compensation system pursuant to Lab. Code § 3600, such as the discrimination suffered in City of Moorpark, nor that his injuries arose from employer conduct outside the "compensation bargain," as in Shoemaker. Instead, plaintiff alleged that he suffered ordinary (albeit very severe) physical injury while engaged in the course and scope of his employment. Consequently, the court held that plaintiff's exclusive remedy was workers' compensation (98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1204) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.33

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.33 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer's Hirer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST EMPLOYER'S HIRER IS PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY RULE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS AVAILABLE THE REMEDY OF WORKERS' COMPENSATION BENEFITS.

Action for Damages Against Hirer of Plaintiff's Uninsured Employer Barred by Exclusive Remedy Provision. An injured employee is barred from pursuing a personal injury action against the hirer of the employee's illegally uninsured employer, because equity and public policy are not served by penalizing the hirer for the employer's wrongdoing, and because the employee has available, through the Uninsured Employers Fund [now Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund] the remedy of workers' compensation benefits (Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 444-445, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that plaintiff's action for damages against the hirer of plaintiff's illegally uninsured employer is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, despite plaintiff's contention that such an action should be allowed as an exception to that exclusivity doctrine.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine--in a demurrer,for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff was injured in the course of employment and argue that the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation law bars this civil action and that plaintiff's employer's status as illegally uninsured provides no exception to that exclusivity provision that would permit an action for damages against the employer's hirer [Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 444-445, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employee's Industrial Injury Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity, and Action for Damages Against Uninsured Employer's Hirer Not Allowed

In Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 , plaintiff filed suit against his employer's hirer, alleging an exception to the workers' compensation law's exclusive remedy provision. Defendant, a property owner, had entered into a contract with a general contractor to develop a piece of commercial property. The general contractor entered into a subcontract with plaintiff's employer to frame the roof of the project. Plaintiff's employer was a licensed contractor but illegally uninsured for workers' compensation. Plaintiff was injured while working on the project and sued the property owner on a negligence theory, alleging that it had maintained dangerous working conditions at the jobsite and had not provided him with safety equipment. Defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted by the trial court, judgment was entered in defendant's favor, and plaintiff appealed (101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 434-435) .

Plaintiff argued that he should be allowed to recover damages against defendant because plaintiff's employer did not have workers' compensation coverage. He, thus, sought to distinguish his situation from the facts in Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , and in Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 74 Cal. Rptr. 878, 955 P.2d 504 , in which injured employees of subcontractors who maintained workers' compensation coverage sought to recover damages from their employers' hirers. In those cases, as summarized by the court of appeal in the present case, the California Supreme Court denied the plaintiffs' right to damages on the ground that allowing such a recovery would constitute a windfall to the plaintiffs, placing them in a better position than that of an employee suffering an industrial injury whose employer had not been hired by another party. Moreover, said the Supreme Court, the plaintiffs' employers must be assumed to have calculated the cost of workers' compensation insurance into the contract prices of the jobs for which they were hired, so that the hirers ultimately paid for that insurance. Additionally, to impose liability for tort damages on a party who hires an independent contractor for specialized work would penalize those individuals who hire experts to perform dangerous work rather than assigning such activity to their own inexperienced employees. In short, the hirer of an independent contractor, according to these earlier cases, should be subject to no greater liability than the independent contractor, who is shielded from injured employees' civil actions by the exclusivity rule of workers' compensation law (101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 438-439) .

Under the Privette/Toland analysis, argued plaintiff, the hiring property owner and the independent contractor are treated alike--the injured employee cannot sue either of them. In light of that parallel treatment, plaintiff argued that the hiring property owner in this case should be treated like the independent contractor in this case--plaintiff can sue the illegally uninsured independent contractor (his employer), so he should be able to sue the hiring property owner. As plaintiff pointed out, because his employer did not have workers' compensation insurance, the contract price did not include the cost of that coverage, and the property owner paid relatively less for the independent contractor's labor. Since the property owner did not pay the independent contractor for the cost of coverage, so plaintiff's argument went, it is not entitled to the protection of the exclusive remedy provisions (101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 444) .

The court of appeal disagreed. It quoted Privette as having recognized that "the 'principal' who hires an independent contractor should be subject to no greater liability 'than its [independent contractor] agent,' ... " [emphasis by court of appeal] Thus, said the court, Privette did not foreclose the possibility that the principal could be subject to less or no liability compared to the independent contractor. Moreover, the Privette result was founded on principles of equity and public policy. Equity and public policy would not be served in the present case by penalizing the hiring property owner for plaintiff's employer's wrongdoing. The employer's failure to obtain workers' compensation coverage should not expose its hirer to civil liability. The court quoted again from Privette: "To encourage employers to obtain workers' compensation insurance for their employees, the Act's 'exclusive remedy' clause does not apply in favor of employers that fail to obtain such insurance, and consequently they are not immune from tort liability for such injuries." [emphasis by court of appeal] Consistent with that incentive, plaintiff's employer, not the hiring property owner, should be subject to suit (101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 444-445) .

Nor did the hirer have a duty to ascertain whether the independent contractor was properly insured. The court quoted from State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 : "The fundamental policy underlying the workers' compensation laws is that those hiring others to perform services should bear the risk of injuries incurred in the undertakings. When the person seeks to hire the services through a licensed independent contractor, it is reasonable to anticipate that the independent contractor will insure against the risk and that the cost of the insurance will be passed on as part of the price of the contract. Thus it is reasonable to exonerate the hirer of the independent contractor." [emphases by court of appeal] Finally, the court noted that plaintiff, despite his employer's failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance, is covered by workers' compensation by virtue of the Uninsured Employers Fund [now Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund]. In short, the exclusive remedy provision applied to plaintiff's case, and the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's summary judgment in defendant's favor (101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 445) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Hazardous Waste Generated by Hirer of Independent Contractor Whose Employee It Injures

In Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 757 , the court of appeal held that, although the hirer of a contractor, having generated hazardous waste that it hired the contractor to remove, and which injured an employee of the contractor, had a nondelegable duty under the hazardous waste statutes [42 U.S.C.S. § 6901 et seq.; Health & Safety Code § 25100 et seq.] to properly dispose of such waste, nevertheless the Privette/Toland doctrine means that the generator of hazardous waste is not liable to the employee of a contractor it hires to dispose of that waste unless the generator's conduct affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries (108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 606-611) .

[b] Hirer Did Not Exercise Retained Control Over Premises in Manner That Affirmatively Contributed to Subcontractor's Employee's Injury

In Sheeler v. Greystone Homes, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 908, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 683 , a subcontractor's employee was injured on the job site when he slipped on a piece of debris. The employee sued his employer's hirer, the general contractor, arguing that the debris had been placed in his path by a person hired by the general contractor to clean up the job site. Thus, contended the injured employee, there were triable issues as to whether the hirer was liable in negligence for the employee's injuries. The court of appeal held that the general contractor had not exercised the control it retained over the job site in a manner that affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries. There were no triable issues of fact, said the court, since there was no evidence that the general contractor exercised its retained control over the site by scheduling cleanups solely to ensure safety. Rather, there was evidence that the cleanups prior to the accident were scheduled to facilitate painting. Moreover, there was no evidence that the general contractor exercised any retained control over the manner in which the cleaners performed their work. Thus, held the court, the injured employee's claim of negligent exercise of retained control failed for want of a triable issue on this point (113 Cal. App. 4th 908, 918-922) .

In Millard v. Biosources, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 177 , the trial court entered summary judgment on the complaint of an injured employee of a heating and air conditioning subcontractor in his suit against the general contractor, finding that the general contractor had no duty of care to the employee under either Lab. Code § 6304.5 or the doctrine of retained control. The employee was injured while working in the attic of a building being remodeled under the general supervision of the general contractor. The employee alleged that the lights went out suddenly and that he fell through the ceiling (156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1342-1343) . The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that the employee had not submitted evidence sufficient to raise a triable issue of fact that the general contractor affirmatively contributed to his injuries. The general contractor did not control the means and methods of the employee's work. No personnel of the general contractor were at the work site at the time the employee fell. The only evidence before the trial court was that the lights in the attic space were on immediately following the employee's fall. Although the employee speculated that the two events were connected, he had not submitted any evidence as to why the lights suddenly went out or why the general contractor was responsible for that event. Thus, even if it could be shown that the general contractor retained control over safety conditions at the project, there was no triable issue of fact that the general contractor affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries (156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1346-1349).

[c] Landowner Had No Duty to Employee of Employer (Premises Occupant) for Injuries Arising From Employee's Performance of His Job on Landowner's Land

In Laico v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 649, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 , the court of appeal, reversing the trial court, held that a landowner had no duty to the employee of an employer (the premises occupant) for injuries arising from the employee's performance of his job on the landowner's land, when the hazardous conditions were created by the functioning of the employer's business, and were not a danger existing on the land independently of the employer's activity, and when there was no evidence of a landlord-tenant relationship between the landowner and the employer or of any other legal relationship giving the landowner a right of access or control, no evidence showing what a reasonable inspection would have disclosed, and no evidence that the landowner had the ability to detect and avoid unreasonable risk of harm to the employee (123 Cal. App. 4th 649, 670).

[d] Hirer Had No Liability to Injured Employee of Independent Contractor/Subcontractor When Hirer Had Not Affirmatively Contributed to Employee's Injury, Even Though Subcontractor Was Not Insured Against Workers' Compensation at Time of Employee's Injury

In Bell v. Greg Agee Construction, Inc. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 453, 23 Cal.Rptr. 3d 33 , the court of appeal, citing Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc., concluded that the hirer had not affirmatively contributed to a subcontractor's employee's injury and, therefore, had no liability for that injury. Among the injured employee's arguments was that the public policies behind Privette and its progeny did not apply and that the hirer should be subject to liability for the employee's injury because the employee's employer was uninsured against workers' compensation at the timeof the employee's injury. The court pointed out that, although uninsured at the time of the employee's injury, the employer had been so insured and had so informed the hirer at the time the contract of hire was entered. The court of appeal expressed no opinion on the outcome in cases in which the hirer knowingly retained an independent contractor that was not carrying workers' compensation insurance (125 Cal. App. 4th 453, 466-468) .

[e] Record Showed Triable Issues of Material Fact as to Whether Defendant, Who Was Hirer of Plaintiff-Employee's Employer, Breached Nondelegable Regulatory Duty to Provide Fire Extinguishers, Pursuant to California Fire Code, and Whether Such Breach Affirmatively Contributed to Plaintiff's Injuries

In Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 281, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 , the court of appeal, citing Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co., reversed the trial court's summary judgment in favor of a defendant property owner and held that the record showed triable issues of material fact as to whether the defendant, who was the hirer of the plaintiff-employee's employer, breached a nondelegable regulatory duty to provide fire extinguishers, pursuant to the California Fire Code, and whether such breach affirmatively contributed to the plaintiff's injuries. The court of appeal found that the plaintiff's lawsuit was not foreclosed by Privette v. Superior Court and its progeny, and it found, instead, that 24 Cal. Code Reg. § 7904.4.9.2, applicable to petroleum bulk plant facilities such as the defendant's, requiring fire extinguishers within 75 feet of those portions of the facility where fires are likely to occur, supported the plaintiff's lawsuit (129 Cal. App. 4th 281, 290-301) .

[f] Furnishing and Abrupt Withdrawal of Safety Equipment by Hirer and General Contractor Could Be Found to Constitute Negligent Performance of Voluntary Undertaking, Affirmatively Contributing to Plaintiff's Injuries and Thereby Subjecting Defendants to Civil Liability

In Browne v. Turner Construction Co. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 433 , the court of appeal case, focusing on the hirer's negligent exercise of retained control, reversed the trial court's summary judgment for the hirer and the general contractor defendants in a civil action by the plaintiff, an employee of the subcontractor, who was injured in a fall from a ladder while installing the sprinkler system in the hirer's new building. The court of appeal held that the furnishing and abrupt withdrawal of safety equipment by the defendants could be found to constitute negligent performance of a voluntary undertaking, affirmatively contributing to the plaintiff's injuries and thereby subjecting the defendants to liability. The appellate court found that the defendants had made no attempt to refute the plaintiff's allegations and evidence that the defendants had provided, then removed, hydraulic scissor lifts from the room in which sprinklers were being installed, resulting in the plaintiff's having to use a ladder, and had also provided, then removed, suspended anchoring cables to which workers could secure their safety lanyards, resulting in the plaintiff's having nothing to which to fasten his safety lanyard. The defendants had presented no evidence precluding a finding that they affirmatively contributed to the plaintiff's injuries, or affirmatively demonstrating that the plaintiff lacked evidence to prove such affirmative contribution, and the evidence raised a strong possibility, at least, that the defendants not only actively contributed to the plaintiff's injuries, but actually created a situation in which such injuries were likely to occur. The court of appeal remanded the case to the trial court (127 Cal. App. 4th 1334, 1345-1348) .

[g] Homeowners' Association, Which Had Contracted With Plaintiff's Employer for Security Services, Had No Liability for Injuries Received by Plaintiff When Assaulted on Homeowner's Premises

The result in Browne v. Turner Construction Co. (see [f], above) may be contrasted with that reached by the court of appeal in Tilley v. CZ Master Association (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 464, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 151 , to the effect that a defendant homeowners' association, which had contracted with the plaintiff's employer for security services, had no liability for injuries received by the plaintiff when assaulted on a homeowner's premises. Citing Privette, Toland (see [3][a], above), and Hooker v. Department of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 , the court held that the defendant owed the plaintiff no duty to restrict access to the community's premises or to restrict youth parties within its premises. Moreover, said the court, the plaintiff had assumed the risk of the injuries he suffered, when the undisputed evidence demonstrated that the defendant neither required nor expected its unarmed security personnel to confront potentially violent persons, or otherwise place themselves in danger, and did nothing to alter the basic scope of its security guards' "observe and report" responsibilities. Thus, it could not be held liable for the consequences of the plaintiff's decision to take action beyond the scope of his duties by attempting to arrest the assailant. Nor could the defendant's failure to take affirmative steps to restrict or control juvenile parties within its property be construed as having affirmatively contributed to the plaintiff's injuries for purposes of the peculiar risk doctrine (131 Cal. App. 4th 464, 482-490) .

[h] Policy Considerations Holding Hirer of Subcontractor, Whose Employee Was Injured on Job as Result of Subcontractor's Negligence, Not Vicariously Liable Under Peculiar Risk Doctrine Were Equally Applicable to Claims Against Hirer's Agent and Thus Barred Civil Action Against That Agent

In Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 , a case involving the question of a hirer's agent's liability for a subcontractor's employee's injuries, the court of appeal held that the policy considerations relied on in Privette and Hooker (see [3][a], above), which established that the hirer of a subcontractor whose employee was injured on the job as a result of the subcontractor's negligence was not vicariously liable under the peculiar risk doctrine, were equally applicable to claims against the hirer's agent and thus barred a civil action against that agent (130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 61-62) . The court went on to hold that, even assuming, as the plaintiff argued, that the hirer had nondelegable duties under the Public Utilities Code and PUC regulations to ensure the safety of the premises where the employee of the independent contractor was fatally injured, the hirer's attempt to delegate such duties to an agent created no liability on the part of that agent (130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 64) . Finally, the court held that, although the hirer of an independent contractor remains liable to an employee of that contractor who is injured during the course of the work when the hirer retains control over details of the work and its conduct affirmatively contributes to the employee's injuries, no evidence in this case showed that the hirer's agent asserted authority over the independent contractor's crew or instructed them as to what safety procedures to use. Thus, no evidence showed that the hirer's agent affirmatively contributed to the contractor's employee's death by some negligent act or omission (130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 65-67) .

[i] Landowner Who Hires Independent Contractor May Be Liable to Contractor's Employee Injured by Undisclosed Hazard on Hirer's Land, Even if Hirer Does Not Retain Control Over Work

In Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 , the Supreme Court, reversing and remanding to the court of appeal, has held that a landowner who hires an independent contractor may be liable to the contractor's employee injured by an undisclosed hazard on the hirer's land, even if the hirer does not retain control over the work, if the following conditions are present: (1) the landowner knew, or should have known, of the latent or concealed preexisting hazardous condition on its property; (2) the contractor did not know of, and could not have reasonably discovered, this hazardous condition; and (3) the landowner failed to warn the contractor about this condition. The Court concluded that the jury was not sufficiently instructed that the landowner was liable in this case for failing to warn about only the hidden hazardous condition, and that lack of sufficient instruction was prejudicial to the landowner (37 Cal. 4th 659, 678-683).

[j] Privette and Kinsman Doctrines Apply to Hirers of Subcontractors for Injuries to Those Who Worked for Those Subcontractors, Regardless of Whether Those Injured Were Employees of Subcontractors or Independent Contractors

In Michael v. Denbeste Transp., Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1096, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777 , the court of appeal held that the Privette and Kinsman doctrines applied to the issue of liability of the hirers of subcontractors for injuries to those who worked for those subcontractors, regardless of whether those injured were employees of the subcontractors or independent contractors (137 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1096) .

[k] Gov. Code § 815.4 Provided Statutory Basis for Public Entity Potentially to Be Held Liable on Retained Control Theory Under Hooker and Its Progeny

The court of appeal has held in McCarty v. State of California/Department of Transportation (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 955, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777 , that Gov. Code § 815.4 [see Gov. Code § 810 et seq. (Government Claims Act)] provided a statutory basis for a public entity potentially to be held liable on a retained control theory under Hooker and its progeny and that the plaintiff could bring a claim on this theory. The defendant had hired FCI Constructors, Inc., an independent contractor, to be the general contractor on a project to build an extension on a public freeway. The plaintiff, a heavy equipment operator, was an employee of the general contractor. He was injured while moving a utility pole from the freeway right-of-way when the pole fell on the roof of the excavator he was driving and hit him on the back of the head, causing near quadriplegia (164 Cal. App. 4th 955, 976-979) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.34

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.34 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Plaintiff Was Not an Employee Within the Meaning of the Workers' Compensation Act

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF WAS NOT AN EMPLOYEE OF DEFENDANT.

A. Employment Relationship Requirement for Exclusive Remedy. An employer is shielded from tort liability by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act only if the injured party is an employee, as defined in the Labor Code. In the absence of such an employment relationship, normal tort liability applies (Lab. Code §§ 3600(a)(1), 3351-3352).

[Optional] B. Independent Contractor Is Not an Employee. An independent contractor is not an employee. Therefore, an independent contractor is not entitled to benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act and is not precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Act from bringing a tort action against his or her hirer (Lab. Code §§ 2750.5, 3353; S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; see Lab. Code § 3600).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's action for personal injury damages is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, on the ground that plaintiff was not an employee of defendant. Optional Paragraph B is for use where plaintiff was an independent contractor of defendant. In an appropriate case, These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 239.21.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions do not preclude plaintiff's action because plaintiff was not an employee of defendant, for example, in opposition to a demurrer or motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts indicating that plaintiff's relationship with defendant did not fall within the definition of "employee" contained in Lab. Code § 3351. In an appropriate case, counsel also should demonstrate that one of the exceptions enumerated in Lab. Code § 3352 applies. If counsel contends that plaintiff was an independent contractor, evidence of such relationship should be discussed, including facts tending to show that plaintiff had the right to control and discretion in the manner of performance of the contract for services and evidence of other factors indicating an independent contractor relationship [see Lab. Code § 2750.5; S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employment Relationship Requirement for Exclusive Remedy

Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1) provides that liability for workers' compensation on the part of an employer shall only exist where, at the time of the injury, both the employer and the employee are subject to the compensation provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act.

Lab. Code § 3351 defines the term "employee" as every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, whether lawfully or unlawfully employed, including: (1) aliens and minors; (2) elected and paid public officers; (3) paid corporate officers and directors (with some exceptions); (4) certain household laborers; (5) prison inmates engaged in assigned work; (6) certain paid members of a partnership or limited liability company; (7) persons whose employment training is arranged by the State Department of Rehabilitation; (8) certain persons providing in-home domestic services to elderly or disabled persons under Article 7 of the Welfare and Institutions Code; (9) certain authors under contract to publishers. Also, the term "employee" includes members of the California National Guard and the state militia who are injured, disabled, or killed on active service in the line of duty [Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 340-340.2].

Lab. Code § 3352 provides that the term "employee" does not include: (1) household workers employed by a parent, spouse, or child, or working less than a specified number of hours depending on the type of injury; (2) persons performing services in return for aid or sustenance only, received from a religious, charitable, or relief organization; (3) certain deputy officials; (4) certain volunteer helpers at camps run by nonprofit organizations; (5) certain voluntary ski patrol members and other employees of ski lift operators; (6) student athletes and other sports participants, other than regular employees, who receive no compensation other than certain specified expenses, and certain persons officiating at sports events as well as certain sports officials; (7) volunteers serving public agencies or private nonprofit agencies for no remuneration other than certain specified expenses; (8) certain law enforcement officers who are regularly employed by a law enforcement agency in an adjoining state and who are deputized to work in California; (9) certain law enforcement officers from adjoining states who are acting as peace officers in California pursuant to Penal Code § 830.32; and (10) certain workers who have not worked a specified amount of time and/or earned a specified amount of money within a certain time frame preceding the date of injury.

[b] Independent Contractor Is Not an Employee

Lab. Code § 3353 states that an independent contractor is any person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result, under the control of the principal as to the result of the work only, and not as to the means of accomplishing the result.

Lab. Code § 2750.5 provides that proof of independent contractor status includes satisfactory proof of the following: (1) that the individual has the right to control and discretion in the manner of performance of the contract for services in that the result of the work, and not the means by which it is accomplished, is the primary factor bargained for; (2) the individual is customarily engaged in an independently established business; and (3) the independent contractor status is bona fide and is not a subterfuge. Bona fide independent contractor status is evidenced by the following factors, which are cumulative: (1) substantialinvestment other than personal services in the business; (2) holding out that one is in business for oneself; (3) bargaining for a contract to complete a specific project for compensation by project rather than by time; (4) control over the time and place the work is performed; (5) supplying the tools used in the work other than tools that are normally and customarily provided by employees; (6) hiring employees; (7) performing work that is not ordinarily in the course of the principal's business; (8) performing work that requires a particular skill; (9) holding a license pursuant to the Business and Professions Code; and (10) the parties' intention that the work relationship be that of independent contractor or that the relationship is not severable at will but gives rise to an action for breach of contract.

In S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 , a deputy labor commissioner had issued a stop order/penalty against S.G. Borello & Sons, a grower, for failure to obtain workers' compensation coverage for the 50 migrant harvesters of its cucumber crop. At the administrative hearing, Borello admitted failure to secure coverage, but contended that the workers were independent contractors, therefore excluded from the workers' compensation law. The evidence at the hearing established that Borello and the head of each harvester family had signed a preprinted agreement which stated, among other things, that Borello would furnish and prepare the land, plant, fertilize, cultivate, and spray the crop, furnish boxes for the cucumbers, and transport the harvest to the buyer, and that the harvester or "share farmer" would harvest the crop, but the method and manner of harvesting were left solely to the share farmer, who agreed to use accepted agricultural practices, devote the necessary time to the harvest, and supply his own tools and transportation. The agreement also provided that the crop would be sold to a buyer acceptable to both Borello and the share farmer, that Borello would retain title to the crop until sold, but that they would split the proceeds equally. Finally, the agreement stated that the parties were principal and independent contractor, that the share farmer was self-employed, Borello would not withhold taxes and the share farmer must file separate tax returns, and that Borello would not provide workers' compensation or disability insurance coverage. The harvesters arrived a few weeks before the harvest and contracted for the amount of land they wish to harvest. They were responsible for the care of the plants on their assigned land during the harvest. Borello did not have a field supervisor and did not direct the harvesters' work or hours of work. Once the crop was harvested, the workers left and did not harvest any other crops for Borello. Based on this evidence, the Division concluded that the harvesters were employees and affirmed the order, primarily because of Borello's predominant control over the cultivation, harvest and sale of the cucumbers and the workers' lack of investment in the crop. Borello sought mandamus to review the Division's order. The trial court denied the writ. The court of appeal reversed, finding that the harvesters were independent contractors.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court stated that the Workers' Compensation Act extends only to injuries suffered by an employee which arise out of and in the course of his employment. The term "employee" does not include independent contractors. While the "right of control" test is the most important or significant consideration in determining the nature of the relationship, that test should not be applied rigidly, but rather in combination with an examination of a number of secondary indicia of the nature of the relationship, including those set forth in Lab. Code §

2750.5 [discussed above] and § 220 of the Restatement Second of Agency (48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351) . Further, the test must be applied with deference to the purpose of the Workers' Compensation Act; that is, the nature of the work and the overall arrangement between the parties must be examined to determine whether they come within the purpose of the statute (48 Cal. 3d 341, 352) . The Act intends comprehensive coverage of industrial injuries and accomplishes this goal by defining "employment" broadly. Further, the express exclusion of independent contractors from the Act was designed to recognize those situations where the Act's goals are best served by imposing the risk of injury directly on the provider of the service, rather than on the recipient of the service.

The Court was not persuaded by Borello's contention that it contracted with the harvesters only to obtain a specified result for a specified recompense and that the factor of control weighed against a finding of employment. The Court found that Borello exercised "pervasive control" over the operation as a whole, in that all meaningful aspects of the business relationship, including price, cultivation, fertilization, insect prevention, payment, and the right to deal with buyers were controlled by Borello. On the other hand, the harvest involved only simple manual labor which could be performed in only one correct way. Because the simplicity of the work, and not the harvesters' expertise, made supervision by Borello unnecessary, Borello retained all "necessary" control. The Court also found that other factors placed the risk and cost of injuries on Borello. In particular, even though the harvesting was seasonal, many of the harvester families worked for Borello year after year; the permanent integration of the workers into the business was a strong indicator that Borello functioned as an employer. In contrast, the harvesters exhibited no characteristics that placed them outside the Act's intended coverage of employees: they had no distinct trade, did not hold themselves out in business, performed farm labor for hire wherever jobs were available, invested only in personal service and hand tools, incurred no opportunity for profit or loss, relied solely on the work in the fields for their livelihood, and had no practical means to insure themselves against loss of income caused by nontortious work injuries. Thus, according to the Court, they were a class of workers whom the Act was designed to protect. The Court also stated that even though the harvesters signed a contract stating that they were not employees, Borello did not offer themany real choice of terms. A worker's express or implied agreement to forego coverage is merely a significant, but not controlling, factor, especially when other compelling indicia of employment are present and when there is no evidence that they voluntarily undertook the unprotected status (48 Cal. 3d 341, 356-359) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Independent Contractor Is Not an Employee

In Gonzalez v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1584, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 , the Court of Appeal applied the Borello analysis [see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399] to hold that a newspaper carrier was an employee and not an independent contractor as alleged by the employer, despite the fact that the newspaper carrier signed a contract indicating he was working as an independent contractor. The court concluded that the employer's carrier agreement, under which the carrier was purported to be an independent contractor, was a subterfuge to avoid the workers' compensation laws. The court noted that under Borello, the labels placed on the parties are not dispositive of their employment relationship (46 Cal. App. 4th 1584, 1594) .

[b] Ski Lift Employee Not Statutory "Employee" at Time of Injury

In Vine v. Bear Valley Ski Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 370 , the court of appeal held that reasonable inferences from stipulated facts supported the trial court's determination that an employee, injured while attending a party given by her employer for employees at the end of the ski season, went snowboarding on her own initiative, so that she was not an "employee," pursuant to Labor Code Section 3352(f), at the time of her injury and, thus, not bound by the exclusive remedy rule (118 Cal. App. 4th 577, 586) .

[c] Exemption From Contractor's License Requirement Contained in Business and Professions Code Section 7049 for Work Incidental to "clearing or other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" Meant That Trial Court Erred in Ruling That Defendant Was Employee as Matter of Law

In Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1515, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118 , the court of appeal held that the exemption from the contractor's license requirement contained in Business and Professions Code Section 7049 for construction or maintenance work incidental to "clearing or other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" meant that the trial court erred in ruling that the defendant was an employee as a matter of law pursuant to Labor Code Section 2750.5. The defendant, who was sued in civil court by the family of another worker whose death he was alleged to have negligently caused, had argued to the trial court that he was a fellow employee of the decedent and that, therefore, workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy. The court of appeal remanded the case for further proceedings on the question of fact of whether the defendant was an employee or an independent contractor (126 Cal. App. 4th 1515, 1520-1525) .

[d] Injured Worker Was Not Residential Employee of Homeowners

In Cal. State Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. W.C.A.B. (Hestehauge) (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743 , a case in which an unlicensed house painter was injured on his first day of painting a house and sought workers' compensation benefits, the Appeals Board, acknowledging that the worker did not qualify as an "employee" pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h), held that he was an "employee" pursuant to Lab. Code § 3715(b). The court of appeal, however, annulled the Appeals Board's decision and held that Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h) were the only relevant statutes for defining "employee" when the issue was whether an injured worker was a residential employee of the homeowners. The court stated that Lab. Code § 3715(b), relied on by the Appeals Board, was inapplicable, since that statute applied to only uninsured homeowners, whereas the homeowners in the present case were insured. Thus, the injured worker was not an "employee" and was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits (137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044-1048) .

[e] Injured Worker May Sue in Tort When He Was Neither Independent Contractor Nor, for Purposes of Workers' Compensation, Employee, But Was Employee for Purposes of Labor Code Section 2750.5

In Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310 , the court of appeal, reversing the trial court's dismissal of the plaintiff's tort action alleging the defendant's negligence, held that the plaintiff, injured while repairing the defendant's roof, was the defendant's employee pursuant to Labor Code Section 2750.5, which operated to allow the plaintiff's lawsuit, despite the fact that the plaintiff, by virtue of Labor Code Section 3352(h), was not an employee of the defendant for workers' compensation purposes, when the court of appeal found that the plaintiff was not a licensed roofing contractor and, therefore, not an independent contractor (142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-81).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.35

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.35 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employer Failed to Secure Payment of Workers' Compensation [Lab. Code § 3706]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, orin a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE DEFENDANT FAILED TO SECURE THE PAYMENT OF WORKERS' COMPENSATION.

A. Failure to Secure Payment of Workers' Compensation. When an employer fails to secure payment of workers' compensation insurance, or fails to be self-insured, an injured employee may bring a civil action for damages against the employer as if the Workers' Compensation Act did not apply (Lab. Code § 3706).

[Optional] B. Lack of Intent Not a Defense. The fact that an employer did not intentionally fail to secure payment of workers' compensation insurance is not a defense in a civil action by an employee for damages for an industrial injury (Hicks v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 773, 787, 117 P.2d 850).

[Optional] C. Payment of Medical Bills and Wages Does Not Bar Suit for Damages. The fact that an employer pays an injured employee's medical bills and wages during a disability caused by an industrial injury or otherwise compensates the employee does not bar the employee's suit for damages when the employer failed to secure payment of workers' compensation prior to the injury (Coffin v. Bloodworth (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 522, 524, 82 P.2d 953).

[Optional] D. Dual Employment Does Not Bar Suit for Damages Against Uninsured Employer. In the event of dual employment where one employer is insured and the other employer has failed to secure the payment of workers' compensation, an injured employee may obtain a workers' compensation award jointly and severally against both employers and still maintain an action for damages against the uninsured employer (Strickland v. Foster (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 118-119, 211 Cal. Rptr. 305).

[Optional] E. Self-Insured Public Entities Not Permitted to Extend Coverage to Private Entities. A public entity operating under a self-insured workers' compensation program pursuant to a certificate issued under Lab. Code § 3700(c) is not permitted to unilaterally extend its coverage to private entities acting as agencies of the public entity (Huffman v. City of Poway (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 986, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, based on the argument that defendant failed to secure payment of workers' compensation. Optional Paragraph B is for use if defendant contends that the failure to secure payment of workers' compensation was not intentional. Optional Paragraph C is for use where defendant has paid plaintiff's medical bills or wages and contends that such payment bars plaintiff's action for damages. Plaintiff should use Optional Paragraph D in the event of dual employment where only one employer has properly secured payment of workers' compensation.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is not barred because defendant failed to properly secure the payment of workers' compensation, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should demonstrate that plaintiff is covered by the workers' compensation law (see Lab. Code § 3600), and should set forth facts indicating that the employer neither carried workers' compensation insurance nor was self-insured, in violation of Lab. Code § 3706.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice for summary judgment and related discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Secure Payment of Workers' Compensation

Lab. Code § 3706 states that if an employer fails to secure the payment of workers' compensation, any injured employee or his dependents may bring a civil action against such employer for damages as if the Workers' Compensation Act did not apply.

[b] Lack of Intent Not a Defense

In Hicks v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 773, 117 P.2d 850 , plaintiff, an employee of the defendants, was injured on the job and brought an action for damages against defendants who had failed to carry workers' compensation insurance. The jury returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff. Upon defendants' motion for a new trial, the judgment was reduced and the motion was denied. Defendants appealed the judgment, contending, among other things, that the trial court incorrectly denied defendants' offer to prove that the neglect to carry insurance was not deliberate.

The appeals court affirmed. The court stated that where an employer has failed to secure the payment of workers' compensation, the employee may bring an action for damages after receiving an award under the Workers' Compensation Act [Lab. Code §§ 3706-3709]. In a trial of such action, there is a presumption that the employer was negligent and that the injury was a direct result of such negligence; the employer may not defend on the grounds of contributory negligence, assumed risk or negligence of a "fellow servant" [Lab. Code § 3708] (18 Cal. 2d 773, 779-780) . The court found that the lower court had correctly denied defendants' offer to prove that the failure to carry insurance was not deliberate. According to the court, there is no authority for excusing an employer for failure to comply with legal requirements for the care of employees. When the defendants operated their business through the agency of their employees, they knew that they did not carry insurance and thus operated at their own peril. The court stated that the present wish of defendants that they had taken out insurance and their claim that they would have done so was immaterial (18 Cal. 2d 773, 787) .

[c] Payment of Medical Bills and Wages Does Not Bar Suit for Damages

Coffin v. Bloodworth (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 522, 82 P.2d 953 , involved a negligence suit by an employee against his employer for injuries sustained in an accident while on the job. At the time of the accident, defendant did not have workers' compensation insurance and was not self insured. In an appeal from a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendant contended that the trial court did not have jurisdiction to try the case because defendant had fully compensated plaintiff for all medical bills and medical treatment required as a result of the accident and for all lost wages. The appeals court rejected defendant's argument. Where an employer has both failed to secure workers' compensation insurance and to secure a certificate of consent to self-insure, an employee may bring an action at law against the employer as if the workers' compensation law did not apply, regardless of whether the employer has compensated the employee for all damages (28 Cal. App. 2d 522, 524) .

[d] Dual Employment Does Not Bar Suit for Damages Against Uninsured Employer

In Strickland v. Foster (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 211 Cal. Rptr. 305 , plaintiff, the widow of a truck driver employed by defendant, brought an action for damages for the wrongful death of her husband. Defendant furnished trucks and drivers to others for compensation, and furnished a truck driven by plaintiff's husband to a trucking company which exercised such a degree of control over the truck and driver so as to itself become an employer. The trucking company carried insurance, but defendant did not. Plaintiff's husband died from an industrial injury suffered while working for both employers. Plaintiff secured a workers' compensation award jointly and severally against the defendant and the trucking company's insurer. She also commenced a wrongful death action against defendant. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment and plaintiff appealed.

The issue before the appeals court was whether plaintiff was entitled to maintain her action against defendant. The court reviewed applicable portions of the Labor Code regarding an employer's failure to obtain workers' compensation insurance [Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3706]. Because the workers' compensation award was entered jointly and severally against both employers, the insured employer's insurer was obliged to pay the entire award, but was entitled to an apportionment of liability for the award between itself and defendant. Thus, the public policy expressed in Rideaux v. Torgrimson (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 633, 637, 86 P.2d 826 , that all employers make full provision for insurance coverage against the liability to furnish compensation, was frustrated. Further, Lab. Code § 3706 explicitly provides that plaintiff could bring an action against such an employer for damages. Rejecting defendant's arguments that where dual employment exists it is sufficient for only one employer to obtain insurance, that workers' compensation was plaintiff's only remedy, that there is a public policy against double recoveries, and that the remedial and penal purposes of the act are not served by permitting the action, the court reversed the summary judgment. The court found that the public policies asserted by defendant were transcended by the policy requiring each employer to make provision for adequate workers' compensation insurance and by the plain language of the Labor Code (165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 117-119) .

[e] Self-Insured Public Entities Not Permitted to Extend Coverage to Private Entities

In Huffman v. City of Poway (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325 , plaintiff was injured while rehearsing a play at a facility owned and operated by the City of Poway. At the time of his injury, plaintiff was an actor employed by AAF, a production company acting as an agency of the City to perform some limited functions. Plaintiff first filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits with the City, claiming he was a city employee. His application was accepted and processed by the California Joint Powers Insurance Authority (CJPIA), an insurance pool of various municipalities including the City. CJPIA determined that AAF was a protected party under its workers' compensation program and paid plaintiff's medical bills.

Plaintiff also filed a lawsuit alleging claims for negligence against AAF and for premises liability against the City. The trial court entered a judgment in favor of AAF, ruling that because AAF was plaintiff's employer and had secured workers' compensation insurance, plaintiff's exclusive remedy under Lab. Code § 3602(a) was to collect workers' compensation benefits and he could not pursue a tort claim against AAF.

Plaintiff appealed, contending that under Lab. Code § 3700 an employer must secure the payment of workers' compensation by either purchasing insurance or securing a certificate of consent to self-insure. He asserted that since AAF did not comply with either of these two alternatives he was not subject to the exclusivity provisions of Lab. Code § 3602(a), and could bring a civil suit against his employer. AAF contended, however, that the two alternatives set forth by plaintiff were not exclusive, and that its method of providing insurance to its employees under the City's self-insurance program administered by CJPIA was appropriate.

The court of appeal found no authority permitting a public entity operating a self-insured workers' compensation program pursuant to a certificate issued under Lab. Code § 3700(c) to unilaterally extend its coverage to private entities. The court noted that private entities do not qualify for self-insured status under Lab. Code § 3700(c). Moreover, the court pointed out that, under the administrative regulations, a certificate of consent to self-insure is valid only as to the entity to which the certificate was issued and not with regard to that entity's subsidiaries or affiliates (8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15203.9(a)) (84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 986) . The court concluded that because AAF had not secured the payment of compensation as require by Lab. Code § 3700, the trial court erred in directing a verdict against plaintiff based on the exclusivity provisions of Lab. Code § 3602(a) (84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 987) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dual Employment Does Not Bar Suit for Damages Against Uninsured Employer

In Hernandez v. Chavez Roofing, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 286 Cal. Rptr. 919 , the court held that although an employee of an unlicensed and uninsured subcontractor is covered by general contractor's workers' compensation insurance pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5, the uninsuredsubcontractor may be liable in tort for injuries sustained by the employee. The court stated that Lab. Code § 2750.5 makes an unlicensed subcontractor and its employees, employees of the general contractor for workers' compensation purposes, and rejected defendant's argument that because plaintiff and defendant were both employees of the general contractor, the general contractor's workers' compensation insurance was plaintiff's sole remedy. According to the court, Lab. Code § 2750.5 can create a dual employment relationship whereby a worker may be an employee of both a general contractor and a subcontractor. Each employer must secure workers' compensation insurance in order to be immune from tort liability (235 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 1093-1095) .

[b] Payment of Medical Bills and Wages Does Not Bar Suit for Damages

In Huffman v. City of Poway (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325 , an injured employee brought a civil suit against his employer, alleging a cause of action for negligence. At the time of the employee's injury, the employer was not insured for workers' compensation. The employer asserted that because the employee applied for and received timely payments of workers' compensation benefits, he suffered no detriment from the employer's failure to secure insurance and therefore should not be permitted to bring a civil action against the employer under Lab. Code § 3706. Citing Strickland v. Foster (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 118, 211 Cal. Rptr. 305 , the court concluded that the fact that an employee has received workers' compensation benefits from some source does not bar the employee's civil action against an uninsured employer (84 Cal. App. 4th 975, 987) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.36

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.36 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Employer's Willful Assault [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW GENERALLY BARS AN ACTION AT LAW FOR AN EMPLOYEE'S INJURY WHICH AROSE OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF HIS OR HER EMPLOYMENT, A CAUSE OF ACTION EXISTS FOR DAMAGES PROXIMATELY CAUSED BY A WILLFUL PHYSICAL ASSAULT BY THE EMPLOYER.

Cause of Action for Willful Assault. An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer, if the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by a willful physical assault by the employer (Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that workers' compensation is plaintiff's sole remedy for a work-related injury, based on the argument that the injury was caused by a willful physical assault by the employer. In an appropriate case, These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 239.25.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is not barred by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine because the injury was proximately caused by the employer's willful assault on the employee, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that the employer physically assaulted plaintiff, specifying how the employer's conduct caused plaintiff's injury. If the employer's conduct did not amount to a battery, counsel also should set forth facts indicating that the employer had the apparent ability to carry out the threat of harm, and should discuss the reasons for plaintiff's fears. Further, counsel should establish that the employer specifically intended to injure plaintiff. For example, counsel could show that the assault or battery was not accidental [see Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 (discussed in § 239.25)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for damages for personal injury by an employee against an employer when the action is excluded from Workers'Compensation Act coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation , Pt. IV (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.37

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.37 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Defective Product Manufactured by Employer and Transferred to Independent Third Person for Consideration [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW GENERALLY BARS AN ACTION AT LAW FOR AN EMPLOYEE'S INJURY WHICH AROSE OUT OF THE AND IN THE COURSE OF HIS OR HER EMPLOYMENT, A CAUSE OF ACTION EXISTS FOR DAMAGES PROXIMATELY CAUSED BY A DEFECTIVE PRODUCT MANUFACTURED BY HIS OR HER EMPLOYER WHICH WAS TRANSFERRED TO A THIRD PERSON FOR CONSIDERATION WHO THEREAFTER PROVIDED IT FOR THE EMPLOYEE'S USE.

Liability of Employer as Manufacturer. If the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by a defective product manufactured by the employer and sold, leased, or otherwise transferred for valuable consideration to an independent third person, and that product is thereafter provided for the employee's use by a third person, the employee, or his or her dependents in the even of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer (Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's suit for damages for personal injuries is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions, based on the argument that plaintiff's injuries were proximately caused by a defective product manufactured by the employer which was transferred to an independent third person for consideration who thereafter provided it for the employee's use.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for damages is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3) applies, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff was injured by a defective product, that such product was manufactured by plaintiff's employer, and that the employer had sold, leased, or transferred the product to an independent third party for valuable consideration. Further, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the third party thereafter provided the product for plaintiff's use, showing in particular that plaintiff came into contact with the product as a consumer, rather than as part of his/her job [see Behrens v. Fayette Manufacturing Co. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 1574-1575, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for damages for personal injury by an employer against an employer when the action is excluded from Workers' Compensation Act coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation , Pt. IV (Matthew Bender).

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Employer as Manufacturer

Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3) provides a statutory exception to the exclusive remedy rule when the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by a defective product manufactured by the employer and sold, leased, or otherwise transferred for valuable consideration to an independent third person, and the product is thereafter provided for the employee's use by a third person. In Behrens v. Fayette Manufacturing Co. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264 , the court held that the employee did not fall within this statutory exception. In that case, the employee had come into contact with the allegedly defective product as the primary objective of her job and not as a consumer, and she was not provided with the product for her use but because it was her job to perform tasks on the product (4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 1574-1575) . The court noted that since Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3) is an exception to the exclusive remedy rule, its applicability is to be strictly construed, and a plaintiff who seeks to be excludedfrom the exclusive remedy rule must establish that the exception applies (4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 1574) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.38

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.38 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Defamation Action Not Subject to Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR DEFAMATION IS NOT SUBJECT TO THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE DEFAMATORY STATEMENTS ARE OUTSIDE OF THE COMPENSATION BARGAIN FOR PURPOSES OF WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY.

Defamation Action Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity. A cause of action for defamation brought by an employee against his or her employer is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rules. Defamatory statements that have no purpose other than to damage an employee's reputation are not a normal part of the employment relationship and are not a risk inherent in the employment relationship for purposes of the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rules (Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 ; Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, on the grounds that a cause of action for defamation is not subject to the exclusivity rules.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for defamation is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, for example in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged a claim for defamation, specifying the employer's conduct and statements. Counsel should argue that the defamatory statements made by the employer had no purpose other than to damage plaintiff's reputation and, therefore, were not a normal part of the employment relationship nor a risk of employment within the scope of the workers' compensation law [Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defamation Action Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

In Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 , the plaintiff alleged that, following her request for time off to undergo surgery, her employer accused her of trying to ruin the company and subjected her to a campaign of harassment and humiliation designed to induce her to resign. Defendant terminated plaintiff, but before and after the termination he made a number of false and derogatory remarks about plaintiff and her work, including false statements that she had stolen $800,000 from the company. The trial court sustained demurrers to plaintiff's emotional distress causes of action and to her causes of action for public policy wrongful termination and defamation.

With respect to plaintiff's defamation cause of action, the court of appeal reversed the trial court. The court cited dictum from Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 757 n.9, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 [discussed in § 239.23[3][a]], stating that although the Supreme Court had declined to decide whether a defamation action is barred by workers' compensation exclusivity, a number of courts have determined that defamation involves damages to reputation, which is a proprietary injury rather than a personal injury, and thus does not come within the exclusive jurisdiction of workers' compensation law. The court also noted that Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 , which held that defamation actions are not personal injury actions arising out of and in the course of employment, was cited with approval in Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 , as an example of a situation in which workers' compensation would not apply because the action was not based on an industrial personal injury. The court also reasoned that some of the defamatory acts alleged by plaintiff had occurred after her termination and therefore could not be deemed to have occurred within the course and scope of her employment. The court found that defamatory statements that have no other purposethan to damage an employee's reputation patently are neither a normal part of the employment relationship nor a risk of employment within the Workers' Compensation Act (12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1590-1591) .

In Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 , plaintiff sued his supervisor for slander. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment, holding that plaintiff's slander action was not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, but that a prior compromise and release entered into between plaintiff and his employer with respect to plaintiff's application for workers' compensation benefits barred further compensation for plaintiff's injuries. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal rejected defendant's argument that a cause of action for slander is barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act; citing a number of out-of-state decisions, the court noted that every case that has considered the issue has ruled otherwise [Braman v. Walthall (1949) 215 Ark. 582, 225 S.W.2d 342, 344 ; Foley v. Polaroid Corp. (1980) 381 Mass. 545, 413 N.E.2d 711, 715] . The court stated that the right to benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act is the employee's exclusive remedy against the employer where the conditions of liability under the Act exist, i.e. where an employee receives an industrial personal injury arising out of and in the course of his employment. The Act provides a remedy only for physical and mental industrial injuries. According to the court, however, the "gist of an action for slander ... is damage to reputation" and affects a proprietary interest. "The harm flowing therefrom is not a 'personal injury' (i.e. medical or physical injury to the body) or a risk of employment within the purview of workers' compensation law" (143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 902-904) . The court concluded that there is nothing in the Workers' Compensation Act which indicates a legislative intent that slander is a risk of employment or is a compensable injury under the Act (143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904-905) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for Invasion of Privacy

In Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 , a worker's civil cause of action against her employer for invasion of privacy was held not barred by the exclusive remedy rule, when the worker's supervisor reprimanded worker and disseminated information about the reprimand to other employees who had no reason to know this information, thereby violating the worker's right of privacy conferred by the California Constitution and thus contrary to fundamental public policy (110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 184-192) . Editor's Note: Counsel is cautioned in citing this case; only Part III. D. of the court's opinion (workers' compensation is not the exclusive remedy for the breach of the worker's constitutional right of privacy) was certified for publication.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.39

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.39 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Employee Permitted to Sue Employer for Injuries Proximately Caused by Employer's False Imprisonment of Employee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW GENERALLY BARS AN ACTION AT LAW FOR AN EMPLOYEE'S INJURY WHICH AROSE OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF HIS OR HER EMPLOYMENT, A CAUSE OF ACTION EXISTS FOR DAMAGES PROXIMATELY CAUSED BY THE EMPLOYER'S FALSE IMPRISONMENT OF THE EMPLOYEE.

Cause of Action for False Imprisonment. An employee may bring an action at law for damages against the employer if such employer false imprisons the employee. False imprisonment committed by an employer against an employee is always outside the scope of the compensation bargain (Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 706, 723, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a contention that plaintiff's action is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, on the grounds that plaintiff has alleged facts showing that the injuries were proximately caused by the employer's false imprisonment of plaintiff.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action is not precluded by workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions because plaintiff's injuries were caused by defendant's false imprisonment of plaintiff, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged a claim for false imprisonment, specifying the employer's conduct. Counsel should argue that such conduct falls outside the compensation bargain and, therefore, an action for false imprisonment is not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law [Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 723, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for damages for personal injury by an employee against an employer when the action is excluded from Workers' Compensation Act coverage, as well as discussion and forms relating to wrongful discharge from employment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation , Pt. IV (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for False Imprisonment

In Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 , the California Supreme Court held that an employee subject to false imprisonment at the hands of his or her employer may sue that employer in a civil action and is not barred by the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. The Court concluded that an employer who falsely imprisons its employee steps outside its proper role, and an injury resulting therefrom is always beyond the scope of the compensation bargain (7 Cal. 4th 701, 706, 723) .

In reaching its conclusion, the Court examined the relationship between intentional torts and workers' compensation (7 Cal. 4th 701, 708) . It found that the Legislature has included some intentional torts within the workers' compensation system, but has not clearly expressed its intent to categorically exclude from the courts all intentional torts committed by employers against employees (7 Cal. 4th 701, 709) . It also found that prior cases have contemplated a tripartite system for classifying injuries arising in the course of employment. First, there are injuries caused by employer negligence or without employer fault that are compensated at the normal rate under the workers' compensation system. Second, there are injuries caused by ordinary employer conduct that intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly harms an employee, for which the employee may be entitled to extra compensation under Lab. Code § 4553. Third, there are certain types of intentional employer conduct that bring the employer beyond the boundaries of the compensation bargain, for which a civil action may be brought (7 Cal. 4th 701, 713-714) . With regard to this third category, case law makes clear that any inquiry into an employer's motivation is undertaken not to determine whether the employer intentionally or knowingly injured the employee, but rather to ascertain whether the employer's conduct violated public policy and therefore fell outside the compensation bargain (7 Cal. 4th 701, 714-715) .

The Court stated that permitting an employee's civil action for false imprisonment presents none of the dangers recognized in prior cases that allowance of such exceptions would undermine the exclusivity provisions of the workers' compensation system (7 Cal. 4th 701, 722) . Rather, in order to plead false imprisonment in a civil action, a plaintiff/employee would have to allege rather specific, and fairly uncommon, acts of involuntary and criminal confinement (7 Cal. 4th 701, 722-723) . The question of whether an employer's actions were reasonable, justifiable, or privileged goes to the factual question whether its actions constituted false imprisonment. Once it is determined, though, that a false imprisonment has taken place, then such action cannot be considered a normal aspect of the employment relationship, however legitimate its initial justification (7 Cal. 4th 701, 723) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.40

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.40 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Action Based on Aggravation of Work-Related Injury Fraudulently Concealed From Employee [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW GENERALLY BARS AN ACTION AT LAW FOR AN EMPLOYEE'S INITIAL INJURY WHICH AROSE OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF HIS OR HER EMPLOYMENT, A CAUSE OF ACTION EXISTS FOR DAMAGES RESULTING FROM THE AGGRAVATION OF THE INJURY IF THE EMPLOYER FRAUDULENTLY CONCEALED THE EMPLOYEE'S CONDITION AND ITS CONNECTION WITH THE EMPLOYMENT.

A. Cause of Action for Fraudulent Concealment of Plaintiff's Condition. An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of his or her death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer, if the employee's injury is aggravated by the employer's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and itsconnection with the employment. The fact that the employee has applied for workers' compensation benefits does not bar the employee's right to bring the action (see Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 308, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 468-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948).

[Optional] B. Fraudulent Concealment of Arsenic-Related Injury. A complaint by an injured employee against his or her employer that alleges generally that defendant knew plaintiff had contracted arsenic poisoning from his or her employment and concealed that knowledge from plaintiff, thereby aggravating plaintiff's illness, sufficiently states a cause of action for fraudulent concealment under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) (Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858).

[Optional] C. Fraudulent Concealment of Carcinogenic-Induced Injury. A complaint by an injured employee against his or her employer that alleges generally that defendant knew plaintiff's reported skin problems were symptoms that plaintiff was being exposed to carcinogens from his or her employment and concealed that knowledge from plaintiff, thereby aggravating plaintiff's injuries, sufficiently states a cause of action for fraudulent concealment under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) (Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 97, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741).

[Optional] D. Fraudulent Concealment of Asbestos-Related Injury. When the plaintiff alleges that defendant fraudulently concealed from the plaintiff, and from doctors retained to treat the plaintiff, as well as from the state, that he or she was suffering from a disease caused by ingestion of asbestos, thereby preventing him or her from receiving treatment for the disease and inducing him or her to continue to work under hazardous conditions, an action at law may be maintained for aggravation of the disease, as distinct from the hazards of the employment which caused the plaintiff to contract the disease (Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 477, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948).

[Optional] E. Punitive Damages. An employee may recover punitive as well as compensatory damages under Section 3602(b)(2) of the Labor Code for aggravation of an injury resulting from the employer's fraudulent concealment of the injury and its connection with the employment (McDonald v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301-302, 225 Cal. Rptr. 394).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, on the grounds that plaintiff is permitted to sue the employer where plaintiff's work-related injury was aggravated due to the employer's fraudulent concealment of plaintiff's condition and its connection to the employment. However, no exception exists to the rule that workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for an industrial injury when the harm complained of is not an aggravation of a work-related injury but is the injury itself and no facts are adduced indicating that the employer intended that the employee be injured [Stalnaker v. Boeing Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1291, 1298-1300, 231 Cal. Rptr. 323] . In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the points and authorities in § 239.26.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because plaintiff's action is based on the employer's aggravation of a work-related injury fraudulently concealed from plaintiff, for example in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff suffered an industrial injury, that the employer knew of the injury, and that the employer thereafter failed to disclose facts or made an affirmative misrepresentation relating to the injury, such as evidence that the employer knew that plaintiff contracted a disease from the employment and concealed that knowledge from plaintiff [see Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 310, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858] . Counsel also should demonstrate that such fraudulent concealment resulted in aggravation of the injury. Additionally, because the employer's liability is limited to damages proximately caused by the aggravation, counsel should argue that the employer bears the burden of proof in apportioning the damages caused by the initial injury and those caused by aggravation of the injury [Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2)]. Counsel also may argue that plaintiff can seek punitive damages based on defendant's conduct [McDonald v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301-302, 225 Cal. Rptr. 394] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for damages for aggravation of an employee's work-related injury brought by an employee against an employer who fraudulently concealed the injury, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation , Part IV (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for Fraudulent Concealment of Plaintiff's Condition

Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) provides that an employee, or the employee's dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer, as if the workers' compensation law did not apply, when "the employee's injury is aggravated by the employer's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and its connection with the employment, in which case the employer's liability shall be limited to those damages proximately caused by the aggravation. ..."

Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 , was an action by an injured employee against his employer seeking to recover damages under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), discussed above, which codified the holding in Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

Plaintiff alleged in substance as follows: (1) he had been employed by defendant for 11 years as a service technician to maintain and repair equipment manufactured by defendant; (2) this machinery incorporated a drum that was unsafe for its intended use because it contained a large amount of arsenic; (3) defendant did not warn plaintiff of the presence of the arsenic or safeguard him from its effects; (4) as a result he suffered symptoms of arsenic poisoning beginning several years after his employment; (5) these symptoms were reported to his supervisor in 1978 and 1981; (6) although defendant knew that the reported symptoms of plaintiff to his supervisor were symptoms of arsenic poisoning and that plaintiff's physical problems were caused by the arsenic, defendant failed to warn him that the disease was aggravated with the passage of time; and (7) defendant fraudulently concealed from him the facts indicating that his injuries were connected with his employment. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it was barred by Lab. Code § 3602(a) was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff, contending that his complaint stated a cause of action under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal. Defendant contended that the complaint was deficient because it failed to allege that defendant had made affirmative representations designed to conceal from plaintiff the fact that he suffered from arsenic poisoning caused by his employment and that it failed to allege that defendant had knowledge that plaintiff had contracted arsenic poisoning. The complaint also alleged a separate cause of action for plaintiff's disease insofar as it was contracted while he was servicing copying machines manufactured by defendant and sold or leased to third parties. This work was performed by plaintiff not as an employee of the defendant but on his own time.

The Supreme Court reversed. With respect to the Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) cause of action, the Court, citing Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710(3), and 1572(3), and cases, pointed out that according to both statute and case law the failure to disclose facts may constitute fraud if the party with knowledge has a duty to make disclosure (40 Cal. 3d 306, 309) . The Court held that affirmative misrepresentations by the employer are not required to support the action, that an employer who knows that an employee has contracted a disease in the course of the employment has a duty to advise the employee of that fact, and that Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) provides for an action at law for aggravation of a disease resulting from such concealment (40 Cal. 3d 306, 310) . The Court held, however, that defendant's knowledge that plaintiff had contracted arsenic poisoning was essential to establish a claim under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), and that the allegations that plaintiff had advised his supervisors in 1978 and 1981 that he was suffering from certain symptoms and that defendant knew the symptoms were those of arsenic poisoning were insufficient to allege such knowledge (40 Cal. 3d 306, 312) . The Court nevertheless said that the complaint alleged such knowledge in general terms and held that in view of the statutory requirement that pleadings be liberally construed with a view to achieving substantial justice between the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 452), the allegations fairly apprised defendant of the basis of plaintiff's action (40 Cal. 3d 306, 312) . With respect to the separate cause of action, the Court held that because plaintiff alleged that he was not an employee when he suffered the injuries in question, he could seek to recover on the independent cause of action without regard to the workers' compensation law (40 Cal. 3d 306, 313) .

In Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 , plaintiff, who had worked for more than 10 years as a plastics fabricator in one of defendant's manufacturing plants, alleged that he developed skin rashes and discoloration in the course of his employment, which he reported to his supervisors. He further alleged that he inquired at work whether certain chemicals he worked with were safe for him to use and was repeatedly told the chemicals were safe and would not harm him. Subsequent to leaving his employment with defendant, plaintiff underwent surgical removal of a testicle and was diagnosed with testicular cancer and stage III metastasis to the abdominal and chest areas of his body. He underwent chemotherapy and additional surgeries for the removal of cancerous growths around his prostrate, heart, and lungs.Plaintiff filed suit against defendant pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), seeking damages for the injuries he suffered allegedly as a result of his chronic industrial exposure to carcinogenic chemicals. He alleged that defendant fraudulently concealed from him that the chemicals to which he was exposed contained carcinogens and that his skin problems were a precursor to the development of the types of cancer that he later developed, thereby aggravating his work-related injuries. Defendant demurred to plaintiff's complaint, contending that plaintiff's alleged injuries consisted only of (1) skin conditions in the form of rashes, dermatitis, and discoloration, and (2) metastasized testicular cancer. Since plaintiff knew of the skin conditions even before defendant was informed of them, and since the cancer was diagnosed only after plaintiff had ceased his employment with defendant, defendant had no knowledge, while plaintiff was employed by it, of any injury to plaintiff that plaintiff was not himself aware of. In the absence of such knowledge, said defendant, it was impossible for plaintiff's injury to have been aggravated by defendant's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and its connection with the employment. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend and entered judgment of dismissal of the action, from which judgment plaintiff appealed (99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 83-86) .

The court of appeal, citing Foster v. Xerox Corp. for the proposition that pleadings are to be liberally construed with a view to achieving substantial justice between the parties, refused to accept defendant's characterization of the extent of plaintiff's "injuries." Rather than being limited to skin rashes and discoloration, on the one hand, and the eventual cancer, on the other, plaintiff had sufficiently pleaded facts showing that, as an alleged result of chronic overexposure to carcinogenic chemicals at work during the many years he was employed by defendant, he suffered an industrial injury in the form of damage to "the protective barrier of the skin" (which plaintiff's appellant's brief characterized as "a breakdown in his dermal barrier"), which, unknown to him, permitted those toxic chemicals to be injuriously absorbed into his body. A fair reading of plaintiff's pleading, said the court, showed that plaintiff was claiming that during a latency period that culminated with the diagnosis of his cancer after his employment ended, the continuing chronic overexposure to carcinogenic chemicals that followed the initial injury caused further harm in the form of unspecified internal physiological injuries that ultimately developed into diagnosable metastatic testicular cancer. The court noted that, although the pleaded skin rashes and discoloration could be viewed as work-related injuries that plaintiff reported to defendant through his supervisors, they also could be viewed as symptoms of the alleged dermal barrier breakdown and related injurious absorption of toxic chemicals that together constituted the initial industrial injury of which he was not aware (99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-92) .

Plaintiff also met his burden of pleading "in general terms" facts showing that defendant knew that plaintiff was being harmed by chronic overexposure to carcinogenic chemicals and thus had suffered a work-related injury. For example, plaintiff pleaded that defendant was aware that the skin problems plaintiff was suffering from were a precursor to the development of specific types of cancer that are caused by exposure to chemical substances that contain carcinogens.

The court acknowledged that these allegations were technically insufficient to allege that defendant had actual knowledge that plaintiff was suffering a "dermal barrier" injury and consequent injurious absorption of carcinogenic chemicals into his bloodstream through chronic overexposure to such chemicals. However, it adverted again to the requirement that it liberally construe plaintiff's pleading with a view to achieving substantial justice between the parties and concluded that plaintiff's general allegations that defendant knew plaintiff's physical problems were caused by his exposure at work to carcinogenic chemicals, that he reported those problems to his supervisors, and that defendant was "well aware" his exposure to those chemicals could harm him were sufficient for pleading purposes to show that defendant knew plaintiff had suffered a work-related injury. Finally, the court concluded that plaintiff's pleading that defendant "concealed the causal relationship and significance in chemical exposures, the development of skin conditions, including rashes, other forms of dermatitis, and skin discoloration, and [plaintiff's] contraction of cancer" sufficiently alleged facts that defendant concealed its knowledge that plaintiff was chronically overexposed at work to carcinogenic chemicals and, as a result of that exposure, was being injured by those chemicals (99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 92-94) .

Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , a mandate proceeding that predated the enactment of Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), arose out of an action by an asbestos worker against his employer for damages for having fraudulently concealed from the worker and the doctors retained by the employer that the worker was suffering from a disease caused by the ingestion of asbestos, thereby preventing him from receiving treatment and inducing him to continue working under hazardous conditions. The worker had earlier filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits for disability caused by exposure to asbestos.

Plaintiff alleged in substance the following: (1) while he worked in defendant's asbestos manufacturing plant, he was continuously exposed to asbestos and as a result developed asbestos-related illnesses; (2) defendant concealed from plaintiff its knowledge that long exposure to asbestos was dangerous to health, and failed to provide plaintiff with adequate protective devices or to operate the plant in accordance with state and federal regulations governing dust levels; (3) defendant retained unqualified doctors to examine plaintiff, and neither provided them with adequateinformation regarding the risk of asbestos exposure nor advised them of the development of pulmonary disease in plaintiff or of the fact that the disease was the result of working conditions; (4) defendant willfully failed to file a required report regarding plaintiff's injury with the state; (5) defendant's acts and omissions were done falsely and fraudulently with intent to induce plaintiff to continue to work in a dangerous environment; and (6) plaintiff was ignorant of the risk involved and would not have continued to work in such an environment had he known the facts. Plaintiff sought both compensatory and punitive damages. Defendant filed an answer alleging, inter alia, that the action was barred under Lab. Code § 3601, which, as it then read, declared that when the conditions of workers' compensation exist, the right to recover such compensation is the exclusive remedy against an employer for injury or death of an employee (now see Lab. Code § 3602(a)). The defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings was denied, and the defendant then filed a petition for a writ of mandate to have the trial court's order set aside.

In denying the petition, the Supreme Court held that although the workers' compensation law bars the employee's action at law for his initial injury, a cause of action may exist for aggravation of the disease because of the employer's fraudulent concealment of the condition and its cause (27 Cal. 3d 465, 469) , that the facts alleged justified an award of punitive damages (27 Cal. 3d 465, 478) , and that although plaintiff had filed an application for workers' compensation and could receive an award in that proceeding, double recovery could be avoided by allowing the employer a setoff in the event plaintiff was awarded compensation for the aggravation of his injury in that proceeding and in the present case as well (27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479) .

[b] Fraudulent Concealment of Arsenic-Related Injury

The factual background of Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 , is discussed under § 239.40[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant, the Supreme Court said that, as the complaint alleged that defendant knew plaintiff had contracted arsenic poisoning from his employment and concealed that knowledge from him, thereby aggravating his illness, it was sufficient to state a cause of action under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) (40 Cal. 3d 306, 312) .

[c] Fraudulent Concealment of Asbestos-Related Injury

The factual background of Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , is discussed under § 239.40[3][a]. In denying the employer's petition for writ of mandate, the Supreme Court held that plaintiff's allegations that defendant fraudulently concealed from him, and from doctors retained to treat him, as well as from the state, that he was suffering from a disease caused by ingestion of asbestos, thereby preventing him from receiving treatment for the disease and inducing him to continue to work under hazardous conditions, were sufficient to state a cause of action for aggravation of the disease, as distinct from the hazards of the employment that caused him to contract the disease (27 Cal. 3d 465, 477) .

[d] Punitive Damages

McDonald v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 225 Cal. Rptr. 394 , a mandate proceeding, arose out of an action by an employee against his employer for damages for injury from asbestos. Plaintiff alleged in substance the following: (1) from 1956 to 1983 he was employed by the employer, which manufactured, packaged, and distributed asbestos and asbestos products, and was continuously exposed to asbestos fibers and dust through the course of his employment, as a result of which he developed various asbestos-related diseases; (2) since 1933 the employer had knowledge that there was a high risk of injury or death resulting from exposure to asbestos or asbestos products including, without limitation, lung cancer and other forms of cancer and asbestosis, concealed this knowledge from plaintiff, and advised plaintiff that it was safe to work in close proximity with asbestos; (3) the employer did not provide the medical doctors retained by it to examine plaintiff with adequate information regarding the risk of asbestos exposure and failed to advise these doctors of the risk of the development of pulmonary disease in the plaintiff; (4) the employer failed to file with the state a report required by law, and, had this been done and the danger from asbestos revealed, plaintiff would have been protected; (5) each of these acts and omissions was done falsely and fraudulently by the employer with intent to induce plaintiff to continue to work in a dangerous environment; (6) plaintiff was ignorant of the risks involved and would not have continued to work in such environment had he known the true facts; and (7) the employer, by its intentional conduct, which was willful, malicious, outrageous, and with conscious disregard of and indifference to the safety of plaintiff, actually and proximately caused and aggravated the injuries and damages sustained by plaintiff. Plaintiff sought both compensatory and punitive damages. The employer's motion to strike paragraphs in the complaint and the prayer seeking punitive damages without leave to amend was granted. Concurrently, the trial court sustained the employer's demurrer to plaintiff's "cause of action" for punitive damages without leave to amend. The plaintiff petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to vacate the order.

The court of appeal held that under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) an employee may recover punitive damages from an employer (180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301) . The court said that when a statute recognizes a cause of action for violation of a right, all forms of relief granted to civil litigants generally, including appropriate punitive damages, are available unless a contrarylegislative intent appears, and that no such intent appears in Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2). The court explained that, on the contrary, the background of Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) and its language establish that punitive damages are recoverable inasmuch as the statute is a codification of the holding in Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 , which expressly recognized that punitive damages were recoverable in that common-law action for aggravation of job-related injuries (180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301-302) . Nevertheless, the court held that the complaint failed to allege sufficient facts to justify an award of punitive damages in that it did not allege that the employer knew and concealed that plaintiff was suffering from the pulmonary disease and thereby aggravating that injury by its fraud, that such knowledge of an existing work-related injury is essential to establish a claim under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), and that an action at law for compensatory and punitive damages can only be brought for aggravation of such injury caused by the employer's concealment of the existence of the disease and its connection with the employment (180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 303) . The court acknowledged, however, that the complaint might be amended to allege sufficient facts and ordered that a writ of mandate issue directing the trial court to vacate its order sustaining the demurrer and granting the motion to strike, both without leave to amend, and to enter an order sustaining the demurrer and granting the motion to strike with leave to amend (180 Cal. App.3d 297, 303-304) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fraudulent Concealment of Asbestos-Related Injury

In Davis v. Lockheed Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 17 Cal. Rptr. 233 , the court held that the employee was not entitled, as a matter of law, to bring a civil action against the employer pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) when the employer established by uncontroverted evidence that the employee had known for years about possible health problems arising from exposure to asbestos and other chemicals used in the course of his work, and when there was nothing in the record to suggest that the employer withheld any information from the employee relevant to his condition (13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-523) .

[b] Aggravation of Pre-Existing Illness From Employer's Failure to Detect or Notify

In Weber v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 801, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 , the court of appeal held that the exclusive remedy rule bars an employee's civil tort action against his or her employer for aggravation of pre-existing illness resulting from negligent diagnostic treatment voluntarily provided by the employer, regardless of the cause of the pre-existing illness. The employer administered regular hearing tests as an ongoing condition of employment to determine whether the noise to which the employee was exposed on the job had adversely affected his hearing. The employer's failure to notify the employee of a test result that indicated a possible brain tumor (whose genesis had nothing to do with the employee's job) until the tumor had caused permanent injury to the employee was held to constitute an industrial injury subject to the exclusive remedy rule (107 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-809) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.41

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.41 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Action Based on Injury Caused by Absence of Power-Press Guard [Lab. Code § 4558]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST DEFENDANT IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE THE INJURY WAS CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S _____ [insert either KNOWING REMOVAL OF or FAILURE TO INSTALL] A POINT OF OPERATION GUARD ON A POWER PRESS, AND THE _____ [REMOVAL or FAILURE TO INSTALL] WAS SPECIFICALLY AUTHORIZED BY DEFENDANT UNDER CONDITIONS KNOWN BY DEFENDANT TO CREATE A PROBABILITY OF SERIOUS INJURY OR DEATH.

A. No Exclusivity Where Injury Caused by Removal of or Failure to Install Power Press Guard. An employee may bring an action for damages against the employer where the employer's knowing removal of or knowing failure to install a point of operation guard on a power press proximately causes the employee's injury or death, and the removal or failure to install is specifically authorized by the employer under circumstances known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death (Lab. Code § 4558(b); Lab. Code § 4558(a)).

B. Power Press Guard Required by Manufacturer. For liability to attach under Labor Code Section 4558(b), the manufacturer must have designed, installed, required, or otherwise provided by specification for the attachment of the power-press guard and conveyed such knowledge to the employer. Proof of the conveyance of thisinformation to the employer from the manufacturer may come from any source (Lab. Code § 4558(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant-employer's contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, on the ground that such provisions do not apply because the injury or death was caused by defendant's removal of or failure to install a power-press guard. In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 239.24.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions do not apply because plaintiff's injury was caused by the absence of a power-press guard, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff's injury was proximately caused by the absence of a power press guard, that the employer removed or failed to install a point-of-operation guard on the power press, and that the employer had actual knowledge that such removal or failure to install created a probability of serious injury or death [see Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1516-1517, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385 , discussed in § 239.24]. Further, counsel should demonstrate that the power-press manufacturer designed, installed, required, or otherwise provided by specification for attachment of the guard, and that such requirements were communicated to the employer. Counsel should see Lab. Code § 4558 for the definition of the terms "power press" and "guard."

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for damages for personal injury by an employee against an employer when the action is excluded from Workers' Compensation Act coverage, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation , Pt. IV (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Exclusivity Where Injury Caused by Removal of or Failure to Install Power-Press Guard

Lab. Code § 4558(b) provides that an employee, or the employee's dependents in the case of the employee's death, may bring a civil action for damages against the employer where the employer's knowing removal of or knowing failure to install a point-of-operation guard on a power press proximately caused the employee's injury or death, and the removal or failure to install is specifically authorized by the employer under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death.

Lab. Code § 4558(a) provides the following definitions: "power press" means any material-forming machine that utilizes a die which is designed for use in the manufacture of other products; "failure to install" means omitting to attach a guard either provided or required by the manufacturer when the attachment is required by the manufacturer and the manufacturer makes this known to the employer at the time of acquisition, installation, or manufacturer-required modification of the power press; "removal" means physical removal of a guard which is either installed by the manufacturer or installed by the employer pursuant to the requirements or instructions of the manufacturer; "specifically authorized" means an affirmative instruction from the employer prior to the injury or death, but does not include subsequent acquiescence in or ratification of removal of a guard; "manufacturer" means the designer, fabricator, or assembler of a power press; "employer" means a named, identifiable individual who is, prior to the injury or death, an owner or supervisor having managerial authority to direct and control the acts of employees.

[b] Power-Press Guard Required by Manufacturer

Lab. Code § 4558(c) provides that no liability will arise under § 4558 unless there is proof that the manufacturer designed, installed, required, or otherwise provided by specification for the attachment of guards and conveyed knowledge of such requirement to the employer. Proof of the conveyance of such information to the employer from the manufacturer may come from any source.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Exclusivity Where Injury Caused by Removal of or Failure to Install Power-Press Guard

In Lenane v. Continental Maritime of San Diego, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1076-1077, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 121 , a shore-based maritime sheetmetal employee suffered an amputation injury while using a power pressmachine to do repair work. The employee filed claims for workers' compensation benefits under both the California Workers' Compensation Act and the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (LHWCA). He also filed a tort action for damages against his employer pursuant to Labor Code §§ 3602(a) and 4558, alleging that his employer either removed or failed to install a point of operation guard on the power press at issue. The "power press" exception does not exist under the LHWCA. The employer brought an action for summary judgment, asserting that the employee's tort action was preempted and barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the LHWCA (33 U.S.C. § 905(a)). The motion was granted.

The employee appealed, contending that summary judgment was improper because Congress intended to supplement rather than supplant state remedies when it amended the LHWCA in 1972 to extend federal workers' compensation jurisdiction inland to cover shore-based maritime workers. He also asserted that his cause of action under Labor Code § 4558 did not clearly conflict with the LHWCA and, therefore, his tort action was not barred by the exclusive remedy provision of this Act. The court of appeal agreed with the employee's position and reversed the trial court's judgment, finding that the employee's tort action under Labor Code §§ 3602(a) and 4558 was not barred (61 Cal. App. 4th 1073, 1077) .

In Uriarte v. United States Pipe & Foundry Co. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 780, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 332 , an employee brought an action against his employer for personal injuries he sustained while operating a power press in the plant where he worked. The employee's action was based on the power press exception set forth in Labor Code § 4558. Ultimately, the employer moved for and was granted summary judgment on the basis that a Labor Code § 4558 right of action was unavailable here because, among other things, a safety guard was not available for the model of machine on which the employee was injured. However, several months later, the employee alleged that he had discovered new evidence indicating that a guard was, in fact, available for the power press involved in his injury. On this basis, the employee moved to have the summary judgment vacated. The trial court granted the employee's motion, and the court of appeal affirmed the decision, holding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion by vacating its previous order since, at the time the order was entered, the employee was unaware that a safety guard existed for the model of machine on which he was injured, and that this lack of knowledge regarding the existence of such a device was arguably due to the employer's failure to fully respond to discovery requests (51 Cal. App. 4th 780, 791) .

In Flowmaster, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666 , the court of appeals considered whether the definition of "manufacturer" in Lab. Code § 4558(a) includes an employer, and the meaning of the terms "provided" and "required" by the manufacturer in Lab. Code § 4558(c) where the employer is the manufacturer. The defendant contended that where the employer and the manufacturer are one in the same, the § 4558 exception to the exclusivity rule does not apply. Defendant further argued that even if § 4558 does include an 103A/manufacturer of a power press, no liability can attach absent evidence that the press was designed and manufactured to include a point-of-operation guard which was then either removed or not installed as specified. The court found that the Workers' Compensation Act was not intended to immunize employers who design, manufacture and install their own power presses without guards, and that excluding employers from the definition of manufacturer would not promote the objectives of the Act. The court also declined to limit an 103A/manufacturer's liability under § 4558 only to those cases in which it fails to install or removes a guard that was specified in design plans for the power press, because any such limitation would immunize the 103A/manufacturer who, knowing the risk involved, deliberately omitted specification and installation of the guard. The court concluded that in an action against an 103A/manufacturer of a power press for failure to install a guard, the plaintiff must prove that the employer's own design of the press provided for a guard which was later removed or never installed; alternatively, the plaintiff must prove that a guard was required to protect against a known risk of serious injury, but that it was deliberately omitted by the employer from the design or assembly of the power press (16 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1030-1031) .

[b] Definition of Power Press

In Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 , the court of appeal reversed a dismissal of an employee's action against his employer that was based on the trial court's determination as an issue of preliminary fact, pursuant to Evidence Code Section 405, that the employee was not injured by a "power press" within the meaning of Labor Code Section 4558(a)(4), when the court of appeal found that whether the machine was a "power press" was a factual question that should have been submitted to the jury (120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 578-580) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.42

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.42 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Breach of Contract Action Not Precluded

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ALTHOUGH THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW GENERALLY BARS AN ACTION AT LAW FOR AN EMPLOYEE'S INDUSTRIAL INJURY, A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY RULE OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION LAW.

Exclusive Remedy Rule Does Not Bar Breach of Contract Action. The exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law do not preclude an employee from suing his or her employer for damages for breach of an employment contract (Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's action is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law, on the grounds that plaintiff's action is for damages for breach of contract. Optional Paragraph B is for use where plaintiff's breach of contract action is based on an implied-in-fact contract not to discharge without good cause.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rule does not bar an action for breach of an employment contract, for example, in opposition to a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged a cause of action for breach of contract, and that plaintiff seeks to recover only contract damages for such claim, and not damages caused by personal injury or death. For example, if plaintiff was discharged, counsel could set forth facts indicating that the breach of contract claim only seeks to recover plaintiff's economic losses, and not any losses for emotional distress arising out of the termination. Further, if plaintiff already has received workers' compensation benefits in connection with an injury arising out of defendant's conduct, plaintiff should argue that such benefits did not fully compensate him/her for the economic damages caused by the breach of contract [see Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 499-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms relating to wrongful discharge, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts , Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline , and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional forms relating to wrongful discharge actions, see Part I of this chapter.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusive Remedy Rule Does Not Bar Breach of Contract Action

In Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 , plaintiff, a discharged employee, sued his former employer for breach of an express and implied contract of employment terminable only for cause, termination in violation of public policy, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress. He also alleged a cause of action under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2) for concealment of a medical report stating that he was experiencing an emotional crisis and needed counseling. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary adjudication on the grounds that workers' compensation was plaintiff's exclusive remedy for all of his claims for damages for injury to his psyche. The trial court also granted defendant's motion in limine dismissing plaintiff's wrongful termination claims for contract damages on the ground that workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy for those claims.

With respect to the trial court's ruling on the motion in limine, the court of appeals reversed. The court found that Lab. Code §§ 3600 and 3602 bar liability only for physical or emotional injury, and not for other types of injuries, such as economic injury. Where an employee sues for breach of contract and the same conduct also caused a compensable injury, the action is only precluded to the extent that the employee seeks to recover damages caused by the compensable injury. The court stated that it would rely not on the title of a cause of action in determining whether it was preempted, but, rather, would examine the underlying injury to determine whether the essence of the cause of action is personal injury or death. The court rejected defendant's argument that if the employee suffered any compensable injury as a result of the termination of employment, then all causes of action for economic damages are precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions. The court stated that if it accepted defendant's argument, then anytime an employee suffered a compensableinjury as a result of termination of employment, the employee would be precluded from recovering contract damages caused by the termination, despite the fact that the workers' compensation system would only compensate the employee for medical costs and lost wages caused by the disability. Such a result would be a windfall to employers in cases where the contract damages far exceed workers' compensation benefits. The court did note, however, that if the employee's injury caused by the termination was permanently and totally disabling, it is possible that the workers' compensation system would already have compensated him or her for any economic damages and there would be no basis for additional contract damages (212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 499-501) . The court also found that because of the risk of double recovery if an employee suffers a compensable injury in addition to incurring contract damages as a result of a termination of employment, the amount of compensation paid for economic loss, such as lost wages, should be offset from any contract damages recovered in a civil action (212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 501) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitration of Return to Work Under Collective Bargaining Agreement

In Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1277 v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 673, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 , the exclusive remedy rule was held not to bar a civil action between an injured workers' union and the employer in which the union sought to compel the employer to arbitrate the worker's return to work under terms of the collective bargaining agreement. Such an action, the court held, is an equitable action to compel specific performance of the contract and is thus not an "action at law" pursuant to Lab. Code § 3602(a) that would be prohibited by the exclusive remedy rule. The worker was seeking arbitration on the claim for her salary for the period when she was allegedly no longer suffering the disabling effects of an industrial injury and was able to work, but denied the right to work guaranteed in the collective bargaining agreement. This, said the court, was not a workers' compensation issue. The worker was also seeking arbitration of her demand to be returned to work, and the court noted that a return to work is not one of the workers' compensation benefits available by statute to which the exclusive remedy rule would apply (107 Cal. App. 4th 673, 682-684) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.43

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.43 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Employer's Misrepresentations Made to Induce Party to Become Employee Not Subject to Exclusive Remedy Provisions

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR EMOTIONAL DISTRESS IS NOT SUBJECT TO THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE MISREPRESENTATIONS MADE TO INDUCE A PARTY TO BECOME AN EMPLOYEE ARE OUTSIDE OF THE COMPENSATION BARGAIN FOR PURPOSES OF WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY.

Emotional Distress Action Based on Employer's Misrepresentations to Induce Employment Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity. A cause of action for emotional distress, based on an employer's misrepresentations made to induce a person to become an employee, brought by an employee against his or her employer is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rules. An employer's misrepresentations made to induce a person to become an employee are not a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain (Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 971-973, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, on the grounds that a cause of action for emotional distress, based on an employer's misrepresentations made to induce plaintiff to enter the employment relationship, is not subject to the exclusivity rules.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for emotional distressis not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, in opposition to a demurrer, for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged a claim for emotional distress, based on the employer's misrepresentations made to induce plaintiff to enter the employment relationship, specifying the employer's conduct and statements. Counsel should argue that the misrepresentations made by the employer were made for the purpose of inducing plaintiff to enter into the employment relationship and, therefore, were neither a normal part of the employment relationship nor a risk of employment within the scope of the workers' compensation law [Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 971-973, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Misrepresentations Made to Induce Employment Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

In Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , plaintiff filed suit against his former employer for breach of contract and fraud. The jury found in favor of plaintiff and awarded him $210,320 in compensatory damages, $50,000 in emotional distress damages, and $1 million in punitive damages. In the unpublished portion of its opinion, the court of appeal reversed that part of the judgment awarding plaintiff $210,320 in compensatory damages and the punitive damages award, and remanded the case for a new trial on those issues. In the published portion of the opinion, the court found that emotional distress damages arising from a claim of fraud in inducing employment were not barred by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 962) .

The court of appeal noted that the focus is on whether the conduct complained of was a normal risk of the employment relationship. It quoted from Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 161, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 [discussed in § 239.23[3][a]], saying that tort recovery for intentional misconduct is permitted when "conduct of an employer [has] a 'questionable' relationship to the employment, an injury which did not occur while the employee was performing service incidental to the employment and which would not be viewed as a risk of the employment, or conduct where the employer ... stepped out of [its] proper role[ ]" (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 971-972) . In the case at bar, the employer was found to have made misrepresentations related to the financial stability of the company, the company's future plans to relocate its operations, and plaintiff's (then a job applicant) promotion in the corporate ranks, all designed to induce plaintiff to become an employee. These misrepresentations, said the court, "are not (we hope) a normal part of the employment relationship" (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 973) .

The court of appeal distinguished Spratley v. Winchell Donut House, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1408, 234 Cal. Rptr. 121 , in which an employee assaulted by an intruder at her workplace filed suit against her employer for fraudulent inducement to enter into an employment contract. The employee claimed she would not have accepted the job but for the employer's fraudulent representations that it would make the workplace safe. The trial court sustained the employer's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. In a two-to-one decision, the appellate court held that workers' compensation was the sole remedy for an employee injured by the employer's failure to provide a safe workplace, and it ruled that the employee could not circumvent the exclusive remedy rule merely by alleging that her employer fraudulently misrepresented that extra security was being provided to protect night workers (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 972-973) .

In the present case, by contrast, the court of appeal pointed out that plaintiff's "fraud claim does not involve a claim of misrepresentation concerning employee safety. Workplace safety is clearly an issue contemplated by the workers' compensation statutory scheme. It is a normal part of the employment relationship and a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain" (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 973) . Here, the employer made representations regarding matters not a normal part of the employment relationship. In doing so, the employer "stepped out of its proper role as an employer. The conduct alleged simply does not reflect matters that can be expected to occur with substantial frequency in the working environment" (89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 972) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.44

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.44 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Employer--Injury Is Outside of Compensation Bargain--Claim for Damages Pursuant to FEHA Premised on Defendant's Failure to Make Reasonable Accommodation for Plaintiff's Disability--Alleged Injuries Not Within Compensation Bargain [Gov. Code § 12940]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR DAMAGES IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS PLEADED A CLAIM FOR DAMAGES PREMISED ON DEFENDANT'S COMMISSION OF A STATUTORY UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE, WHICH WAS NOT WITHIN THE COMPENSATION BARGAIN.

Failure to Make Reasonable Accommodation in Violation of California Fair Employment and Housing Act Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity. A cause of action for physical injuries suffered in the course of employment, premised on an employer's failure to make reasonable accommodation for an employee's disability, which failure constitutes an unlawful employment practice in violation of Gov. Code § 12940(m), pleads a claim grounded on employer actions that fall outside the compensation bargain (Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356, 366-368, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's contention that plaintiff's action for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, on the grounds that a cause of action for physical injuries, based on an employer's failure to make reasonable accommodations for an employee's disability, is not subject to the exclusivity rules.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action for physical injuries is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, in opposition to a demurrer, for example. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has alleged a claim for physical injuries, based on the employer's failure to make reasonable accommodations for the employee's disability, specifying the employer's conduct and statements. Counsel should argue that the employer's failure in this regard violated the California Fair Employment and Housing Act and was, therefore, outside both the compensation bargain and the scope of the workers' compensation law [Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 356, 366-368, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Failure to Make Reasonable Accommodations for Employee's Disability Not Subject to Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

In Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 , plaintiff filed suit against her employer, alleging, inter alia, that she had suffered physical injuries as a consequence of the employer's failure to make reasonable accommodations for her disability, in violation of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act [FEHA], specifically Gov. Code § 12940. Plaintiff alleged in substance that as a result of severe polio and post polio, she was a disabled individual who was unable to walk long distances, that she was substantially impaired in her ability to move around her work site as needed and to transport herself from her car to her work station. Her job duties required her to transport herself long distances within the work site and to travel to and from the work site. She requested a reasonable accommodation of her disability in the form of motorized transportation from her parked car to her work station and motorized transportation within her work site, and her employer refused this request. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it was barred by Lab. Code § 3602(a) was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal (97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 349-352) .

The court of appeal agreed with plaintiff that the above allegations pleaded a physiological condition that affected her musculoskelatal system and limited a major life activity within the meaning of Gov. Code § 12926(k). The court also agreed with plaintiff that her complaint's allegations that her request for motorized transportation from her parked car to her work station, for motorized transportation within her work site, and for hand railings or chairs along the hallways of the job site constituted adequate pleading for a request for reasonable accommodations, in that these requests were for the purpose of "[m]aking existing facilities used by employees readily accessible to, and usable by, individuals with disabilities" and constituted the "acquisition or modification of equipment or devices" as described in Gov. Code § 12926(n) and 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9. Finally, the court noted that the complaint pleaded that plaintiff's physical disability was "known" by her employer as required by Gov. Code § 12940(m). In sum, said the court, plaintiff had adequately pleaded that her employer engaged in an unlawful employment practice under Gov. Code § 12940(m) and that she suffered injury and damages as a result of the unlawful employment practice (97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 354-356) .

Next, the court addressed defendant's argument that plaintiff's lawsuit was barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law. The court began with an examination of City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 , in which the California Supreme Court held that Lab. Code § 132a did not provide an exclusive remedy and did not preclude an employee from pursuing her FEHA claims in court (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158) . The City of Moorpark Court had first explained that the exclusive remedy provision of Lab. Code § 3602(a) was limited to "[l]iability for the compensation provided by this division ... " (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154) . The Supreme Court continued, "When section 3600 refers to 'this division,' it refers to division 4 of the Labor Code. Section 132a, on the other hand, is in division 1 of the Labor Code. ... Thus, the plain language of the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law apparently limits those provisions to division 4 remedies. Remedies that the Legislature placed in other divisions of the Labor Code are simply not subject to the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions" (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154-1155) .

The court of appeal in the present case then noted that this reason for avoiding the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law did not favor plaintiff in the case before it. The FEHA cause of action at issue in City of Moorpark was for discrimination based on disability, and it was plaintiff's claim in that case for discrimination that placed the claim ostensibly within the confines of Lab. Code § 132a. And it was Lab. Code § 132a that was held in that case to be not an exclusive remedy (97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 366) .

In the present case, by contrast, plaintiff pleaded a claim for damages premised on failure to make reasonable accommodation in violation of Gov. Code § 12940(m). Because plaintiff had not pleaded a disability discrimination claim, her lawsuit was not ostensibly subject to the antidiscrimination provisions of Lab. Code § 132a but was rather for physical injuries suffered in the course of her employment. However, said the court of appeal, the statutory construction of Lab. Code § 132a was not the entire basis of the Supreme Court's decision in City of Moorpark. Thus, the Supreme Court in that case went on to explain that disability discrimination "falls outside the compensation bargain and workers' compensation is not the exclusive remedy" (18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1155) . The legislature, said the court of appeal, had made the failure to accommodate a disability equally as important as disability discrimination. Just as discrimination on the basis of disability falls outside the compensation bargain, so too the employer's commission of another statutory unlawful employment practice, as defined by Gov. Code § 12940(m), falls outside the compensation bargain. The court of appeal concluded that this ground of the Supreme Court's decision in City of Moorpark supported plaintiff in the present case and that the workers' compensation law did not provide the exclusive remedy for plaintiff's FEHA claim (97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 366-368) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleged Discriminatory Act in Violation of FEHA and Public Policy Was Not "Substantial Factor" in Causing Subsequent Industrial Injury

[i] Exclusive Remedy Rule Applies

In Huffman v. Interstate Brands Cos. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397 , the court of appeal held that the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions applied to an industrial injury, including the plaintiff's emotional distress as a result of that injury, that followed an allegedly unlawful demotion because of the plaintiff's age, in violation of the FEHA and of public policy, when the court found that evidence demonstrated that the alleged discriminatory act was not a "substantial factor" in causing the subsequent industrial injury (121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-700) .

[b] Employee's Petition for Writ of Mandate, Seeking Differential Pay and Reinstatement Under Education Code Sections 44977 and 44987.1, Not Tort Dmages for Work-Related Injury, Was Not Preempted by Exclusivity Provisions of Workers' Compensation Law

In Veguez v. Governing Board of the Long Beach Unified School District (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 406, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 526 , the court of appeal held that a petition for writ of mandate filed by a public school employee, seeking differential pay and reinstatement under Education Code Sections 44977 and 44987.1, not tort damages for a work-related injury, was not preempted by the exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation law (127 Cal. App. 4th 406, 417-418) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.45

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.45 Supporting Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Did Not Specifically Intend to Cause Injury [Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM FOR DAMAGES AGAINST DEFENDANT, A COEMPLOYEE, IS PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT, AND THE EXCEPTION IN LABOR CODE SECTION 3601(a)(1) DOES NOT APPLY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO PROVE [or PLEAD] THAT DEFENDANT SPECIFICALLY INTENDED TO CAUSE INJURY.

Coemployee Must Intend to Cause Injury. The exception in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) to the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions for a willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression on an employee by a coemployee, does not apply where plaintiff fails to plead or prove that the coemployee specifically intended to cause injury (Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1003-1006, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57 ; Soares v. City Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action against a coemployee is barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, on the grounds that the exception in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) does not apply because the coemployee did not intend to cause injury.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) does not apply because the

coemployee did not intend to cause injury, for example in a demurrer or motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that plaintiff has failed to either plead or prove, as applicable, that the coemployee intended to injure plaintiff. For example, counsel could discuss facts indicating that the injury was accidental [Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405] . If applicable, counsel also should set forth facts indicating that plaintiff provoked the coemployee's conduct.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 239.47 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.122 (Matthew Bender). For a form of notice for summary judgment and related discussion, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coemployee Must Specifically Intend to Cause Injury

In Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57 , plaintiff, an employee of defendant, was on his knees working on a tire he was repairing, when he was approached from behind by a fellow employee who grabbed plaintiff's back support belt, lifted him off the ground several times, and finally dropped him on his knees, causing plaintiff to suffer a back injury. Plaintiff filed suit against defendant and the coemployee, alleging that the latter committed a "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" against plaintiff so as to render the coemployee's acts, which plaintiff alleged its defendant employer had condoned and ratified, subject to civil suit under Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1). The trial court instructed the jury that in order to impose liability, the jury must find that plaintiff's "injury was caused by a wilful and unprovoked physical act of aggression on the part of [the coemployee]" and that the coemployee "committed the act with the intent to cause injury." The jury returned a special verdict finding that the coemployee did not "commit a wilful and unprovoked act of physical aggression against plaintiff Manuel Torres with the intent to cause injury" (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1000-1001) .

A majority of the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment and held that plaintiffs were not required to prove a coemployee's specific intent to injure in order to recover damages under Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1). The majority found that this statutory exception to workers' compensation exclusivity "does not state that the injury must be 'intentionally' or 'willfully' caused by the physical act of aggression." The majority expressly disagreed with Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 [discussed below], which held to the contrary (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1001) .

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal's judgment, finding that the meaning of "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) is not clear on its face, thus necessitating a jury instruction that clarifies the application of the statutory language in the particular context of a given case. In considering the proper interpretation of the statute, the Court noted that it looks to both the statutory phrase as a whole and the legislative purpose behind the provision (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1003-1004) . The Court then said that "unprovoked physical act of aggression" logically contemplates intended injurious conduct. "By adding the term 'willful,' the Legislature has underscored the need for an intent to bring about the consequences of that expression, i.e., an intent to inflict injury or harm" (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1005) . Said the Court, "We conclude, as a general rule, that a 'willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression' includes an intent to injure requirement" (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1006) .

In Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 , defendant, a police sergeant, used force to physically separate plaintiff, a civilian jailer, from a prisoner whom plaintiff had jumped on in a wrestling-type manner. Defendant alleged that he used only a minimum amount of force to separate plaintiff and the prisoner and that he did not try to hurt plaintiff. Plaintiff sued defendant and their common employer for battery. After a jury trial, defendants prevailed. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating the issue on appeal as whether Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) which excepts willful and unprovoked physical acts of aggression by coemployees from the exclusive remedy of workers' compensation covers all batteries at common law, or only those batteries committed with a specific intent to injure. The court rejected plaintiff's argument that the trial court erred when it ruled that proof of a common-law battery, without additional specific intent to injure, was insufficient to support a recovery against a coemployee under Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1). The appeals court traced the development of Lab. Code § 3601(b)(1), which excepts injuries from a willful physical assault by the employer from the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Section 3601(b)(1) was enacted to codify the result in Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 773, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621 , in which the court held that if the Labor Code allows an employee can recover against a fellow worker for an intentional assault, he should have no less right because the fellow workers happens to be his boss. In Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 476, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 [discussed in § 239.40[3][a]], the Supreme Court, commenting on Magliulo, expressed approval of the trend in the law "toward allowing an action at law for injuries suffered in employment if the employer acts deliberately for the purpose of injuring the employee." The court of appeal here found that the Court's language reflected the virtually unanimous rule in the country that an injury is accidental for purposes of workers' compensation unless it is caused by a conscious and deliberate intent designed to inflict injury. According to the court, precluding civil actions for those intentional torts committed without a specific intent to injure would be consistent with the policy of relying on workers' compensation to cover on-the-job accidents. Thus, the court concluded that "willful" employer assaults under Lab. Code § 3601(b)(1) does not include all common-law batteries, but only those batteries that are specifically intended to injure. Further, because there is no basis to interpret the term "willful" in the context of § 3601(a)(1) any differently, the court also found that acts of aggression are only willful for purposes of § 3601(a)(1) if they are intended to injure (9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1829) . The court stated that it disagreed with Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 [discussed in § 239.45[3][b]], to the extent that Iverson suggested that every common-law battery is actionable under § 3601(a)(1).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.46

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.46 Supporting Contention That Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Acted Within the Scope of Employment [Lab. Code § 3601]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT, A COEMPLOYEE, IS PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVE REMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE DEFENDANT WAS ACTING IN THE SCOPE OF HIS/HER EMPLOYMENT WHEN HE/SHE INJURED PLAINTIFF.

A. Workers' Compensation Sole Remedy in Action Against Coemployee. Workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for the injury or death of an employee against a coemployee who was acting within the scope of his or her employment caused (Lab. Code § 3601).

B. Requirement of Employee's Intent to Serve Employer. A coemployee's activity which results in an employee's injury is within the scope of employment, thus giving rise to the right to receive workers' compensation benefits, where the coemployee was actuated to some extent by an intent to serve his/her employer (Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 128-129, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that plaintiff's action for damages against a coemployee is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions, on the grounds that the coemployee was acting in the scope of his or her employment.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action against a coemployee for damages is precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because the coemployee was acting within the scope of his/her employment, for example in a demurrer or motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that the coemployee was acting within the scope of his/her employment at the time of the injury to plaintiff in that the coemployee was actuated by an intent to serve the employer [Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 128-129, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400] . For example, if applicable, counsel could set forth facts indicating that the accident occurred during the work day and while the coemployee was using the employer's tools or facilities with the employer's authorization [see Brittell v. Young (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 400, 407, 153 Cal. Rptr. 387] .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 239.47 and 239.48 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of demurrer to a complaint based on the failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.122 (Matthew Bender). For a form of notice for summary judgment and related discussion, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Sole Remedy in Action Against Coemployee

Lab. Code § 3601 provides that where the conditions of compensation set forth in Lab. Code § 3600 concur, the right to recover workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy, subject to the exceptions in Lab. Code §§ 3601(a)(1) and (2), for the injury or death of an employee against any other employee of the employer acting within the scope of his or her employment.

[b] Requirement of Coemployee's Intent to Serve Employer

In Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400 , plaintiff appealed from a summary judgment in favor of defendant in an action to recover for personal injuries sustained when plaintiff was struck by defendant's automobile on a parking lot maintained by the parties' common employer. The accident occurred at the end of the parties' shift while defendant was preparing to drive away from the plant. In support of the judgment, defendant argued on appeal that the employee's immunity from suit for all acts within the scope of his or her employment is of identical extent with the employer's immunity from suit for injuries by an employee arising out of and in the course of employment. However, the Supreme Court found that the phrase "scope of employment" defined a more restricted area of employee conduct than the phrase "arising out of and in the course of employment" and reversed the trial court. The Court noted that prior to the amendment to Lab. Code § 3601 in 1959, which permitted an employee to maintain an action against a coemployee who was acting within the scope of his or her employment only in those limited instances set forth in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1), (2), or (3), the court of appeal in Singleton v. Bonnesen (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 327, 280 P.2d 481 [discussed in § 239.20[3][a]], had held that an employee was permitted to sue on an allegedly negligent coemployee who was acting within the scope of his employment as a "person other than the employer" under

Lab. Code § 3852. Because the Legislature had not amended Lab. Code § 3852 and because the presumption that an overall change is intended where a statute is amended following a judicial decision, the Supreme Court construed the amendment to Lab. Code § 3601 as exempting from civil liability a coemployee's actions within the "scope of employment" rather than those "arising out of and in the course of employment." In distinguishing between the two phrases, the Court quoted from comment a to Rest. 2d, Agency, § 235, and noted that conduct is within the scope of employment only ifthe servant is actuated to some extent by an intent to serve his or her master (63 Cal. 2d 124, 129) . In the case before it, the Court found that defendant had not attempted to establish that she was still serving her employer when she was in the act of removing her automobile from the parking lot after completing her work shift (63 Cal. 2d 124, 129) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Sole Remedy in Action Against Coemployee

In Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 , the California Supreme Court held that the 1982 amendment of Lab. Code § 3602(a), which sharply limited the application of the dual capacity doctrine with respect to employers, does not protect coemployees from civil liability; however, coemployees do enjoy the immunity created by Lab. Code § 3601, which expressly immunizes them for acts within the scope of their employment. The Court noted that the 1982 amendment of Lab. Code § 3601 confirms that there can be no judicially created exceptions to the immunity from civil liability granted to coemployees. Thus, the Court held that a physician who was employed by a professional football team to provide treatment to players injured in the course of their employment by the team was protected from a malpractice suit by the statutory immunity of § 3601 since the physician was acting in the scope of his employment when he diagnosed and treated the plaintiff whose injury was proximately caused by his employment with the team (54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738) . However, the Court noted, if a coemployee provides medical services other than those contemplated by the employee's employment and in so doing is not acting for the employer, he or she no longer enjoys the immunity from suit provided by Lab. Code § 3601 for acts that are in the scope of employment (54 Cal. 3d 723, 741) .

In Childers v. Shasta Livestock Auction Yard, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 235 Cal. Rptr. 641 , the court of appeal affirmed summary judgment in favor of an employer and against an employee who was injured in an automobile accident caused by a coemployee who had been drinking on the job. The court held that because it was a regular practice for the employer to furnish alcoholic beverages on the premises to employees and clients, the coemployee's consumption of alcohol occurred within the scope of the employment, and therefore the employer could be held liable for the injuries proximately caused to plaintiff. However the court also held that the plaintiff had satisfied all the conditions of entitlement to workers' compensation benefits under Lab. Code § 3600, and his tort action was therefore barred by the exclusivity provisions of Lab. Code § 3601 (190 Cal. App. 3d 792, 816-817) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.47

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.47 Opposing Contention That Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Injury Caused by Coemployee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression or Intoxication

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST DEFENDANT, A COEMPLOYEE, IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVITY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S INJURY WAS CAUSED BY DEFENDANT'S _____ [insert either WILLFUL AND UNPROVOKED PHYSICAL ACT OF AGGRESSION or INTOXICATION].

A. Action Against Coemployee Not Barred by Workers' Compensation Exclusivity. When the conditions of compensation set forth in Lab. Code 3601 concur, the right to recover workers' compensation benefits is the sole remedy where an employee is injured by a coemployee acting within the course and scope of his or her employment, except where the injury is caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of the coemployee, where the coemployee intended to cause injury, or the coemployee's intoxication (Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) and (2); Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1003-1006, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57 ; Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405).

[Optional] B. Harm to Employee Need Not Be Physical. In order for liability to attach under Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1), the harm to the employee does not have to be physical (Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that plaintiff's action for damages against a coemployee is precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, on the grounds that the injury was caused by the coemployee's willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression or intoxication. Optional Paragraph B is for use where plaintiff did not suffer physical harm. In anappropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities set out in § 239.45.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an action for damages against a coemployee is not precluded by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act where the injury is caused by the coemployee's willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression or intoxication, for example, in a demurrer. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that the coemployee was intoxicated when he/she inflicted injury on plaintiff, or that the coemployee physically attacked plaintiff or committed a physical act causing plaintiff a reasonable fear of harm. Counsel also should demonstrate both that the coemployee intended to injure plaintiff, and that plaintiff did not provoke the act of aggression.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Against Coemployee Not Barred by Workers' Compensation Exclusivity

Lab. Code §§ 3601(a)(1) and (2) provides that the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation act do not apply, and an injured employee has a right to bring an action for damages against coemployee, when the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of the coemployee or by the intoxication of the coemployee.

The factual and procedural background of Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57 , is set forth in § 239.45[3][a]. In that case, the California Supreme Court held that the "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" by a coemployee exception to workers' compensation exclusivity in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) includes an intent to injure requirement (26 Cal. 4th 995, 1006) .

The facts and procedural background of Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 , is set forth in § 239.45[3][a]. The court of appeal held that Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) excepting willful and unprovoked physical acts of aggression by coemployees from workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions does not cover all batteries at common law, but only those batteries that are committed with a specific intent to injure (9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831) .

[b] Harm to Employee Need Not Be Physical

In Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 , plaintiff files a complaint for damages against his employer and a coemployee for assault, false imprisonment, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and negligence. The complaint alleged that the coemployee willfully set up a steel horseshoe target above plaintiff's workplace, forced plaintiff to remain in confined quarters against his will, and pounded a large sledge hammer against the target, thus subjecting plaintiff to loud crashing noises. Plaintiff alleged that he suffered loss of hearing, mental anguish, and physical pain and suffering, all of which required medical attention. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment dismissing the compliant, entered upon orders sustaining defendants' demurrers without leave to amend on the basis that workers' compensation was plaintiff's exclusive remedy.

With respect to plaintiff's action against the coemployee, the court of appeal considered whether the coemployee's conduct constituted a "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" within the meaning of Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) such that plaintiff could bring a civil suit for damages. The court held that the exception to the exclusive remedy provisions in Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) is intended to permit civil action for damages whenever a coemployee commits an intentional tort by aggressive physical conduct. Thus, to invoke civil liability under the section, a physical act causing reasonable fear of harm must be pleaded and proved, but the resulting harm need not also be physical. While the coemployee's conduct did not rise to the level of a battery, it fairly could be characterized as a willful act of physical aggression. Thus, the trial court erred by sustaining the demurrer to plaintiff's causes of action against the coemployee (143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225) .

82 of 82 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 23 Chapters 230-239 TRUST DEEDS---to---WORKERS' COMPENSATION
CHAPTER 239 WORKERS' COMPENSATION EXCLUSIVE REMEDY DOCTRINE
PART II. FORMS

10-239 California Points & Authorities § 239.48

AUTHOR: Carolyn Rashby

§ 239.48 Opposing Contention Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine Precludes Action by Employee Against Coemployee--Coemployee Was Acting Outside Scope of Employment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION FOR DAMAGES AGAINST DEFENDANT, A COEMPLOYEE, IS NOT PRECLUDED BY THE EXCLUSIVEREMEDY PROVISIONS OF THE WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT BECAUSE DEFENDANT WAS ACTING OUTSIDE THE SCOPE OF HIS/HER EMPLOYMENT AT THE TIME OF THE INJURY TO PLAINTIFF.

A. Workers' Compensation Not Exclusive Remedy Where Coemployee Acted Outside Scope of Employment. The exclusive remedy provisions of Lab. Code § 3601 apply only to the conduct of a coemployee that is within the scope of the coemployee's employment (Lab. Code § 3601).

B. Requirement of Coemployee's Intent to Serve Employer. Although a coemployee's activity that results in an employee's injury may arise out of and be in the course of employment and thus gives rise to the right to receive workers' compensation from the employer, such activity is not within the scope of employment, thereby preventing the employee from bringing an action against the coemployee, unless the coemployee was actuated to some extent by an intent to serve his or her employer (Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 128-129, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant-coemployee's contention that, in an action by an employee against the coemployee for damages for personal injuries, the defendant was acting in the scope of his/her employment, on the grounds that there is no evidence that the coemployee was actuated by an intent to serve his or her employer at the time of the injury to plaintiff. In an appropriate case, These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by supported by the points and authorities set out in § 239.46.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that plaintiff's action against a coemployee is not precluded by the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions because the coemployee was not acting in the scope of his/her employment, for example, in opposition to a demurrer or motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence that in inflicting injury on plaintiff, the coemployee was not actuated by an intent to serve the employer. For example, counsel could discuss facts indicating that the accident occurred after work hours and while the coemployee was performing an activity not authorized by the employer [see Brittell v. Young (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 400, 407, 153 Cal. Rptr. 387] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Workers' Compensation Not Exclusive Remedy Where Coemployee Acted Outside Scope of Employment

Lab. Code § 3601 provides that when the conditions of compensation set forth in Lab. Code § 3600 concur, the right to recover workers' compensation is the sole remedy of an injured employee against a coemployee acting within the scope of his or her employment, unless the injury is caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of the coemployee or by the intoxication of the coemployee.

[b] Requirement of Coemployee's Intent to Serve Employer

The factual and procedural background of Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400 , is set forth in § 239.46[3][b]. The Court found that conduct is within the scope of employment only if the employee is actuated by an intent to serve his or her employer. In the case before it, the Court found that the defendant, a coemployee, had not attempted to establish that she was still serving her employer when she was in the act of removing her automobile from the parking lot after completing her work shift.