

1 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Author(s)

Author(s)

BLUE SKY REGULATION
Second Edition VOLUME 1

Robert N. Rapp A.A. Sommer, Jr. General Editor (1994-2002) Original Authors Hugh L. Sowards and Neil H. Hirsch
2010

2 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: <http://www.lexis.com>

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call: Securities
Julie Chee julie.chee@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-252-9257 Ext. 2581
For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:
Customer Services Department at (800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000
Fax Number (518) 487-3584
Customer Service Web site <http://www.lexisnexis.com/custserv/>
For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call
Your account manager or (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000

3 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Cite As

Cite As

Cite this publication as:

Robert N. Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, Ch. no., § no. (Matthew Bender)Example:
Robert N. Rapp, Blue Sky Regulation, Ch. 1, § 1.01 (Matthew Bender)

Because the section you are citing may be revised in a later release, you may wish to photocopy or print out the section for convenient future reference.

4 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.

5 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Statement on Fair Use

Statement on Fair Use

RELEASE NO. 92, AUGUST 2010

LexisNexis Matthew Bender recognizes the balance that must be achieved between the operation of the fair use doctrine, whose basis is to avoid the rigid application of the copyright statute, and the protection of the creative rights and economic interests of authors, publishers and other copyright holders.

We are also aware of the countervailing forces that exist between the ever greater technological advances for making both print and electronic copies and the reduction in the value of copyrighted works that must result from a consistent and pervasive reliance on these new copying technologies. It is LexisNexis Matthew Bender's position that if the "progress of science and useful arts" is promoted by granting copyright protection to authors, such progress may well be impeded if copyright protection is diminished in the name of fair use. (See Nimmer on Copyright § 13.05[E][1].) This holds true whether the parameters of the fair use doctrine are considered in either the print or the electronic environment as it is the integrity of the copyright that is at issue, not the media under which the protected work may become available. Therefore, the fair use guidelines we propose apply equally to our print and electronic information, and apply, within §§ 107 and 108 of the Copyright Act, regardless of the professional status of the user.

Our draft guidelines would allow for the copying of limited materials, which would include synopses and tables of contents, primary source and government materials that may have a minimal amount of editorial enhancements, individual forms to aid in the drafting of applications and pleadings, and miscellaneous pages from any of our newsletters, treatises and practice guides. This copying would be permitted provided it is performed for internal use and solely for the purpose of facilitating individual research or for creating documents produced in the course of the user's professional practice, and the original from which the copy is made has been purchased or licensed as part of the user's existing in-house collection.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender fully supports educational awareness programs designed to increase the public's recognition of its fair use rights. We also support the operation of collective licensing organizations with regard to our print and electronic information.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulation, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work.

Original Copyright::1977

(c) 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All rights reserved.

ISBN 978-0-8205-5762-5

Library of Congress Card Number: 20-04616292

MATTHEW BENDER & Co., INC.

Editorial Offices

121 Chanlon Rd., New Providence, NJ 07974 (908) 464-6800
201 Mission Street, San Francisco, CA 94105-1831 (415)908-3200

6 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation About the Author

About the Author

ROBERT N. RAPP is a partner in the Capital Markets Regulatory, Enforcement and Litigation practice at Calfee, Halter & Griswold LLP, Cleveland, Ohio. His contributions to legal scholarship include numerous published articles addressing securities and financial market regulatory topics, many of which have been cited by state and federal courts, including the United States Supreme Court. He has served on the adjunct faculty of the Case Western Reserve University School of Law, and as Distinguished Practitioner in Residence at the Cornell Law School. Mr. Rapp is a former member of the NASD Legal Advisory Board, and is currently a public member of the Market Operations Review Committee of the Nasdaq Stock Market. He has twice served as Public Chair of the Enforcement Advisory Committee of the Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Securities. A graduate of Case Western Reserve University (B.A., 1969) and the Case Western Reserve University School of Law (J.D., 1972), Mr. Rapp also holds a Masters of Business Administration from the Cleveland State University School of Business (1989). In addition to authoring Blue Sky Regulation, Mr. Rapp is a contributing author to Matthew Bender's Federal Securities Act of 1933.

7 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation General Editor (1994-2002)

General Editor (1994-2002)

A. A. SOMMER, JR.

Commissioner, Securities and Exchange Commission, 1973-1976

Counsel, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, Washington, D.C., 1994-2002

Former Vice Chairman, National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc.

Former Chairman, Public Oversight Committee, American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

Former Chairman, Section on Corporation, Banking and Business Law and of the Federal Regulation of Securities Committee, American Bar Association

8 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

1 Blue Sky Regulation Acknowledgments

Acknowledgments

The author gratefully acknowledges the career inspiration and support of Ronald J. Coffey, Professor of Law, Case Western Reserve University, who conveys in classroom experience and general advice unparalleled insight and understanding of the objectives and operation of state and federal securities regulation, without which authoring this work and its future iterations would not be possible.

Robert N. Rapp

9 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 Blue Sky Regulation Scope

Scope

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 92 August 2010

This release contains updates to:

Chapter 7, Exempt Securities

Indiana State Guide

South Carolina State Guide

In this Release Chapter Seven--"Exempt Securities"--has been substantially rewritten, and State Guides for Indiana and South Carolina have been updated to reflect the adoption in those states of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. These states now join Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, and the U.S. Virgin Islands in adopting the 2002 Uniform Act, which is designed to bring state securities regulation fully into line with the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996 (NSMIA). That is also the theme of newly rewritten Chapter Seven, which focuses on the array of security exemptions from registration requirements of Blue Sky laws in the post-NSMIA world.

The operation, and indeed the relevance, of certain security exemptions in Blue Sky laws have been directly affected by NSMIA, which established classes of federal "covered securities" that are no longer subject to state registration or qualification requirements without regard to any state exemption. NSMIA includes as federal covered securities those exempt as a matter of federal law under various parts of Section 3 of the Securities Act of 1933, several of which overlap with common exemptions in Blue Sky laws. Other than in states which have moved to the 2002 Uniform Securities Act as the model for their securities laws, states continue with the array of exemptions that is largely based on the original Uniform Securities Act, and which today in many instances have only nuanced applications by reason of the scope of federal exemptions. States preserved the full array of security exemptions because in some instances they may be broader than the counterpart federal exemption. Newly rewritten Chapter Seven addresses the continued vitality of various state exemptions and their meaningful application after NSMIA.

1 Blue Sky Regulation Scope

Chapter Seven also now fully integrates the 2002 Uniform Securities Act into the broader construct of state securities laws still based on the original Uniform Act, and those in Non-Uniform Act states. Another important new element of the chapter is the integration of the State Guides which now comprise Volumes Three and Four of the Treatise. The State Guides were added to the Treatise in its Second Edition, and today, on an on-going basis, address security exemptions uniquely in the context of an individual state Blue Sky law, thus eliminating the former charting of exemptions in Chapter Seven. The State Guides also allow for attention to special purpose or other unique exemptions adopted in particular states. Full attention is given in the text of Chapter Seven, however, to the common Blue Sky security exemptions and the extent of their continuing application. "World class securities" have also been added to the security exemption mix. And overall, there is expanded attention in Chapter Seven to administrative authority over security exemptions, with the focus on enforcement-related powers.

As Indiana and South Carolina have joined the increasing number of states adopting the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the trend to modernization of Blue Sky laws continues. In an era of major financial regulatory reform, the investor protection role of state securities regulation will be carried out in a new regulatory environment. Modernization of Blue Sky laws will be essential to the continued achievement of the historic investor protection objectives of state securities regulation. The South Carolina Uniform Securities Act of 2005 (which became effective January 1, 2006), and the Indiana Uniform Securities Act (which became effective July 1, 2008), are two examples of continuing modernization initiatives designed to assure that robust state regulation will remain an essential part of the national market regulatory construct. Their updated State Guides also feature recent additions to the selected enforcement topics.

10 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation 1.syn

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

§ 1.01 The Role of State Securities Regulation

§ 1.02 The Historical Development of Blue Sky Laws

[1] The Early Laws

[2] The Blue Sky Cases of 1917

[3] Dual State/Federal Regulation

[4] The National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA")

[5] The Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998

§ 1.03 The Uniform Securities Act(s)

§ 1.04 The Blueprint for Regulatory Reform and the Future of Blue Sky Regulation

11 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.01

§ 1.01 The Role of State Securities Regulation

State securities regulation has been part of the American legal landscape since the early days of the Twentieth Century. Kansas is credited with adoption of the first "Blue Sky Law" in 1911. There were earlier statutes in some states that touched upon aspects of the offer and sale of stock or other securities in certain contexts, but as a product of the surging agrarian Populism movement the Kansas statute was the first general securities law. By providing for registration of securities and licensing of securities salespersons, Kansas established the key elements of regulation that would form the core of legislation in nearly all states to follow, and which would eventually be embodied in the first Uniform Securities Act promulgated in 1956.

From the beginning, state securities regulation was paternalistic. While the entire scheme of federal securities regulation that came two decades later is grounded in the generation and dissemination of information upon which informed investor decision--making is possible, the premise of state regulation has always been to protect the public from fraud and insubstantial or speculative offerings.ⁿ¹ State authority is thus interposed between issuers, intermediaries and the investing public to assure that what is presented for consideration by potential purchasers is sound in the first place, and that the people involved in the selling process are of good repute. Although much has changed over the years in the extent to which state administrators carry out that mission, and in their authority to do so, it remains constant that state securities laws operate to protect those who are unable to protect themselves, to assure to the greatest extent possible that those central to the process of creating and distributing securities are of the highest integrity, and to police against fraud.

Blue Sky laws today, with some variations and degrees of emphasis, involve three principal elements of regulation, all of which are considered in detail throughout this Treatise. They are:

(1) Securities Registration. Unless exempted, excluded by definition, or outside the scope of state authority by reason of federal preemption,ⁿ² every security offered or proposed to be offered in a state is, almost universally, subject to registration under Blue Sky laws. The process is in many cases streamlined and uniform, but the fundamental requirement is for submission of registration materials and approval by the state administrator prior to offering the security. An early element of state authority in this process was "merit" review, in which state administrators reviewed the terms and aspects of securities against qualitative fairness standards to determine their soundness and make judgments whether to permit the offering. Over time a number of states abandoned direct merit regulation of securities offerings, and others significantly altered the extent to which it would be applicable. The trend away from full scale merit review of offerings reflected increasing recognition that its protection was simply not needed in some settings, or that the goal of investor protection was accomplished through other means. With substantial federal preemption of the merit review authority of the states in 1996, the traditional role of Blue Sky laws in securities offerings became even more circumscribed.

Nevertheless, merit review remains a part of the regulatory process in a significant number of states. Today, it is largely facilitated by application of uniform "guidelines" developed by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) for particular types securities or offerings, or to address common items of concern in offerings generally. There are also cooperative efforts and programs among states to make the process efficient in circumstances involving multi-state offerings.

Whether or not merit review is applicable in a particular state,ⁿ³ registration requirements remain in place, all of which mandate some form of registration statement or submission to the administrator, and all of which involve a mechanical process of approval or determination of effectiveness as a condition to offering a security in the state.ⁿ⁴ To be sure, by largely tracking the array of exempt securities and transactions contained in the Securities Act of 1933, and as implemented through SEC Regulations, securities offerings in many circumstances will not be subject to compliance with registration provisions of Blue Sky laws, or will involve only minimal notice filing requirements. Still, the registration element of state securities regulation remains in place, and is of central importance in settings in which the historic role of Blue Sky laws to protect against insubstantial or fraudulent investment schemes is accomplished.ⁿ⁵

In considering the registration element of Blue Sky laws, careful attention must be given to key definitions of "security" and "offer" or "sale" that are a part of each state law. The very broad definitions of these terms define the scope of state regulatory authority, and in particular the application of registration requirements. In the wake of NSMIA, which preempted state authority to regulate most securities offerings that are national in character, state securities administrators now more than ever focus attention on the application of registration requirements to the local or regionalized offer and sale of unconventional classes of securities, such as those falling under the heading of "investment contracts," or to debt instruments, or participations in other "investment" oriented enterprises or programs. Every such security is subject to registration requirements under state laws, and the failure to do so subjects issuers and intermediaries to enforcement actions as well as potential civil and criminal liability.

(2) Intermediary Regulation. The licensing of investment intermediaries has always been a part of state securities regulation. Broker-dealers, agents or salespersons, and today investment advisers and their representatives, must (subject to some de minimis exceptions) be licensed in each of the states in which they do business.ⁿ⁶ Although broker-dealers and large investment advisers may be "registered" as such with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission under provisions of the federal securities laws, there is no federal licensing involved. This function has always been reserved to the states, and remains so in the wake of other federal preemption of state authority in the area. Licensing of intermediaries by the states involves qualitative assessments of business and personal repute, and assessments of the competency or fitness of an individual to engage in securities activities. Securities broker-dealer firms are commonly governed by financial responsibility and business conduct rules set by the SEC and the self-regulatory organizations to which the firm belong. Thus, while states, both by statute and administratively, establish qualifications for licensing, they are more often satisfied by meeting requirements externally established. Individuals likewise satisfy state competence requirements by passing one or more uniform examinations applicable either to securities or investment advisory activities. The greater focus by state administrators in the initial licensing process for an intermediary is on background, and a determination of character and fitness to engage in the business.

Intermediary regulation is an on-going process under Blue Sky laws. Licenses are generally subject to annual renewal, and regulated firms and investment advisers are subject to periodic inspection. Through access to centralized databases, state administrators review current reporting of complaints, proceedings or disciplinary actions involving licensed individuals and firms, and may act administratively at any point to initiate suspension or revocation proceedings. Blue Sky laws also contain reporting and bookkeeping requirements for intermediaries, all subject to review as part of the renewal and on-going inspection processes, and they may also impose bonding or other financial responsibility requirements that impact particular intermediaries.ⁿ⁷ State administrators are likewise increasingly active in policing conduct of individuals "away" from broker-dealer or advisory firms with which they are associated, and in both assessing and enforcing accountability for supervision by intermediaries over those who engage in securities activities in the state.

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.01

Although the historic role of state securities regulation in the securities registration context has changed with the times and as a matter of federal preemption, in the area of intermediaries it remains true to its mission of investor protection by policing the conduct of those firms and individuals who are central to the offer and sale of securities, and through licensing, focusing on their integrity. In the wake of NSMIA and federal preemption, intermediary regulation is today the central aspect of Blue Sky laws because it remains an avenue by which administrators may indirectly control the quality of what is offered for sale by directly regulating the quality of persons who carry it out, and policing them in the process. This is particularly true when coupled with the third principal element of state securities regulation--antifraud and enforcement--discussed below.

(3) Antifraud and Enforcement. Above all, state securities regulation is aimed at preventing and redressing fraudulent and abusive practices. Blue Sky laws empower administrators to act in a variety of ways to deal with fraud and fraudulent practices. Merit review in the securities registration process is in several states expressly geared to a determination whether the terms of a particular security or offering are such that the offering would tend to work a fraud on purchasers, and administrative power to suspend or revoke the effectiveness of an offering are likewise keyed to such determinations. Antifraud enforcement authority of the states was expressly preserved by NSMIA, regardless of whether regulatory authority over an offering is otherwise preempted.ⁿ⁸ Likewise, states retain full authority to act against fraud by intermediaries.ⁿ⁹

Overall, Blue Sky laws typically premise antifraud enforcement authority either by defining violations or setting out prohibited practices in terms akin to federal provisions, as exemplified in Michigan:

It is unlawful for any person, in connection with the offer, sale or purchase of any security, directly or indirectly:

- (1) To employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud.
- (2) To make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading.
- (3) To engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person.ⁿ¹⁰

The extent to which protection against fraudulent practices is a paramount goal of Blue Sky laws is no better evidenced than by New York's "Martin" Act,ⁿ¹¹ which, but for relatively simple filing provisions covering securities offerings and qualification requirements for intermediaries, is essentially a fraud statute. As its main thrust, the New York law grants broad authority to the Attorney General to investigate and require, or take, other actions whenever it appears in connection with any security transaction or investment advice that any person: "[s]hall have employed, or employs, or is about to employ any device, scheme or artifice to defraud or for obtaining money or property by means of any false pretense, representation or promise...".ⁿ¹² Actual prohibited conduct under the New York law is also almost entirely defined in antifraud terms. New York is unique in its nearly singular focus on fraud, yet it clearly illustrates the importance of the antifraud mission in state securities regulation generally.

The arsenal of enforcement weapons available to state administrators in dealing with fraud varies, but most often includes authority to issue cease-and-desist orders; to bring injunctive actions seeking the full range of equitable and ancillary remedies;ⁿ¹³ to impose civil money penalties; and to make criminal referrals. These remedies are supported by considerable investigative powers,ⁿ¹⁴ and the power of state administrators is construed broadly in order to protect the investing public.

New York's Martin Act notwithstanding, Blue Sky laws today incorporate all three key elements of regulation discussed above. In large measure, this is a result of the adoption, in whole or part, of the 1956 Uniform Securities Act by some thirty-seven states, or the 1985 Revised Uniform Securities Act in a handful of others. Today an entirely new 2002 version of the Uniform Securities Act is available, and has been adopted in several states. The Uniform Acts, discussed further in section 1.03 below, apply the full range of state regulatory authority in the securities registration, intermediary licensing and antifraud enforcement contexts. Non-Uniform Act states likewise combine all three elements. All states have been impacted by NSMIA. However, the end result of the preemption of state authority where NSMIA covered securities are involved is the reorientation of Blue Sky regulation to investor protection against myriad schemes, scams and abusive practices that is wholly consistent with the historic mission of the laws and the exercise of police power of the states. The role of state securities regulation today to protect against insubstantial and fraudulent investment schemes, and to police the activities of intermediaries who would promote them has never been better defined, and the power of state administrators has never been more focused since the early days of the Twentieth Century. State securities administrators today direct their resources efficiently and effectively within jurisdictional limitsⁿ¹⁵ to interdict the offer and sale of a vast range of unregistered securities that still "have no more basis than so many feet of blue sky," and to assure to the greatest extent possible that the people who offer, promote and advise or arrange investments meet licensing criteria based on competence and integrity.

The necessary perspective for understanding the role of state securities regulation today is found in its historical development from the early laws through evolution of the dual federal/state system of securities regulation and ultimately the redefinition of the state and federal roles in NSMIA. This development is explored in section 1.02 below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The term "blue sky law" itself is an expression of the goal of the states to protect the investing public from fraud and insubstantial speculative securities offerings "which have no more basis than so many feet of blue sky" Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co., 242 U.S. 539, 550, 37 S.Ct. 217, 220, 61 L. Ed. 480 (1917) ("The name that is given to the law indicates the evil at which it is aimed; that is, to use the language of a cited case, 'speculative schemes which have no more basis than so many feet of blue sky;' or, as stated by counsel in another case, 'to stop the sale of stock in fly-by-night concerns, visionary oil wells, distant gold mines, and other like fraudulent exploitations.' "); See also SEC v. Steadman, 798 F. Supp. 733, 738 (D.D.C. 1991) ("[S]tates may exercise their police power to protect the public against speculative schemes which have no more basis than so many feet of 'blue sky' ").

(n2)Footnote 2. The National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA"), 110 Stat. 3416 (1996), brought fundamental changes in the dual system of federal and state securities regulation in the United States. NSMIA created defined classes of "covered securities," over which state regulatory authority was preempted. The particular impact of NSMIA in the offering context, as well as its application in other areas of state regulatory authority is discussed further in section 1.02[4], below , and is addressed throughout the Treatise.

(n3)Footnote 3. The full scope of merit review in state securities regulation today, with particular consideration of the impact of NSMIA, is discussed in Chapter 6, below.

(n4)Footnote 4. The mechanics of registration under state Blue Sky laws are presented in Chapter 5, below .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Technomedical Labs v. Utah Sec. Div., 744 P.2d 320, 324-325 (Utah Ct. App. 1987) (State has a valid public interest in stopping the issuance of public shares in an offering that does not comply with disclosure requirements that are a part of registration).

(n6)Footnote 6. There are some variations among the states in the scope and application of intermediary licensing requirements, although most states have elaborate mechanisms for application and licensing. In practice, much of the mechanical process has been automated through the development of the Central Registration Depository ("CRD") and the Investment Adviser Registration Depository ("IARD"), both operated by the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD). The state licensing process for intermediaries is considered in detail in Chapter 11, below.

(n7)Footnote 7. As discussed in Chapter 11, below, after NSMIA the authority of states to impose bookkeeping and financial responsibility requirements on intermediaries has been limited so as to assure uniformity. States are not, however, precluded from imposing such requirements, and they remain a part of many Blue Sky laws.

(n8)Footnote 8. Section 18(c)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(1), added as part of NSMIA, provides:

Consistent with this section, the securities commission (or any agency or office performing like functions) of any State shall retain jurisdiction under the laws of such State to investigate and bring enforcement actions with respect to fraud or deceit, or unlawful conduct by a broker or dealer, in connection with securities or securities transactions.

(n9)Footnote 9. Section 18(c)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(1).

Where NSMIA "covered" securities are involved, drawing the line between what fraud-based enforcement authority is preserved and what constitutes impermissible regulation may not be an easy task. Preservation of fraud authority in the offering context is discussed in Chapter 5, and in the enforcement setting in Chapter 14, below.

(n10)Footnote 10. Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.501 [101].

(n11)Footnote 11. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law, Ch. 20, Art. 23-A.

(n12)Footnote 12. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law, Ch. 20, Art. 23-A, § 352.1.

(n13)Footnote 13. In some instances the scope of remedies available to administrators includes the authority to make a claim for money damages on behalf of defrauded investors, see, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-602. In Feigin v. Alexa Group, Ltd., 19 P.3d 23 (Colo. 2001) (en banc), the Colorado Supreme Court rejected an attempt by investors to intervene in an action brought by the Colorado Commissioner of Securities seeking such relief. The Court concluded, among other things, that the Commissioner, who is charged by the legislature with representing investors' interests and protecting them against fraud, adequately represented the investors' interests in being compensated for their losses.

(n14)Footnote 14. Enforcement authority and investigative powers are discussed in detail in Chapter 14, below.

(n15)Footnote 15. Jurisdictional limits of Blue Sky regulatory authority present particular challenges in the age of the Internet, and the simplicity with which investment promoters may reach a limitless audience from virtually anywhere. This and other important considerations in determining the scope of state regulatory authority are discussed in detail in Chapter 4 (State Jurisdiction) and Chapter 12 (Blue Sky Laws and the Internet), below.

12 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.02

§ 1.02 The Historical Development of Blue Sky Laws

[1] The Early Laws

Blue Sky laws and their antecedents may represent the earliest form of consumer protection legislation in the history of the nation. Although the first comprehensive general securities law was enacted in Kansas in 1911, forms of state securities regulation actually appeared much earlier. In 1852, for example, Massachusetts enacted legislation that prohibited any railroad company from building its road until it had filed a certificate with the state that "responsible parties" had subscribed to all of its stock, and that at least 20% of the par value of each share had actually been paid into the treasury of the company.ⁿ¹ Investor protection through requirements on the escrow and use of proceedings of an offering would become common elements of state securities laws in the next century.

In the early part of the Twentieth Century state regulation of securities issued by public utilities was introduced, and during the same period at least two states, Connecticut,ⁿ² and Nevadaⁿ³ adopted laws aimed at regulating offers of securities of mining companies. Connecticut prohibited such offerings unless a certificate was filed with the Secretary of State showing financial condition, location and plans of properties and other information regarding the particular project. A few years later the state made the offer and sale of shares of oil or mining companies conditional on administrative approval.ⁿ⁴ Other early statutes that touched upon securities appeared in California, Missouri and Rhode Island.ⁿ⁵ The states, of course, had always regulated corporate affairs, including mergers, sales of assets, capital structure and other aspects of corporation law that touched upon the issuance of stock.ⁿ⁶ Kansas, however, adopted the first general securities law in 1911.

The Kansas Blue Sky lawⁿ⁷ provided for registration of securities and licensing of securities salespersons. No security covered by the act could be sold in the state unless a "permit" was issued. Standards for issuing permits were included, and investigative authority established. With the passage of the Kansas statute, full scale securities regulation among the states took hold. Indeed, a perceived proliferation of "blue sky" schemes, especially those originating in eastern financial centers that preyed upon the agrarian West and Midwest, ignited the spread of state securities laws throughout the Midwest, West and the South. The early laws were quite restrictive, allowing few exemptions from registration requirements, and establishing broad enforcement powers for administrators. By 1913 twenty-three more states had enacted securities laws, and within a decade after the Kansas law virtually all states had passed laws governing the sale of securities. The impetus was a subject of this U.S. Supreme Court commentary in 1917:

[T]he judgment [regarding the expediency of official investigations into the soundness, good faith

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.02

and prospects of companies] is for the state to make, and in the belief of evils and the necessity for their remedy the state has determined that the business of dealing in securities shall have administrative supervision, and twenty-six states have expressed like judgments.ⁿ⁸

The quoted passage communicates the impetus for state securities regulation but also suggests the constitutional challenge to the exercise of state authority that was inevitable. The extent to which the states could exercise police power to regulate the offer and sale of securities and the business of dealing in them led to a series of cases in 1917 in which the U.S. Supreme Court validated state securities laws under both the Fourteenth Amendment and the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution.

[2] The Blue Sky Cases of 1917

In early challenges to the constitutional validity of state securities laws, lower federal courts in Iowa, Michigan, Ohio and West Virginia held Blue Sky laws unconstitutional on grounds that they impermissibly burdened interstate commerce, and violated the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.ⁿ⁹ The latter challenge focused on the licensing power of states under their Blue Sky laws, and particularly the power to revoke or refuse to renew the license of an intermediary on grounds such as those included in the Ohio statute that the licensee is of "bad business repute." Such power, it was argued, was exercised without any standard or guide, and left room for purely personal or arbitrary determinations.

On the broader issue of authority, states had long been denied the power to regulate interstate commerce directly, or discriminatorily, or to take steps that had unjustified consequences in other states. Nevertheless, the police power of states was also firmly established, and in a trilogy of cases decided by the United States Supreme Court in 1917, the broad authority of state administrators to regulate trade in securities was held to be within both that police power and the confines of the Due Process Clause.ⁿ¹⁰ As to any asserted burden on commerce, the Supreme Court observed:

[W]e think that the statute under review is within the power of the state. It burdens honest business, it is true, but burdens it only that, under its forms, dishonest business may not be done. This manifestly cannot be accomplished by mere declaration; there must be conditions imposed and provision made for their performance.ⁿ¹¹

The fact that Blue Sky regulation applied only to sales of securities and licensing of persons who deal in them within the borders of a state mitigated any Commerce Clause concerns. The Court declared:

The provisions of law, it will be observed, apply to dispositions of securities within the state, and while information of those issued in other states and foreign countries is required to be filed ... they are only affected by the requirement of a license of one who deals in them within the state. Upon their transportation into the state there is no impediment, no regulation of them or interference with them after they get there. There is the exaction only that he who disposes of them there shall be licensed to do so, and this only that they may not appear in false character and impose an appearance of a value which they may not possess, and this certainly is only an indirect burden upon them as objects of interstate commerce, if they may be regarded as such. It is a police regulation strictly, not affecting them until there is an attempt to make disposition of them within the state. To give them more immunity than this is to give them more immunity than more tangible articles are given, they having no exemption from regulations the purpose of which is to prevent fraud and deception. Such regulations affect interstate commerce in them only incidentally.ⁿ¹²

As for concern that state licensing authority could be exercised arbitrarily, the Supreme Court was satisfied that state laws provided for judicial review of administrators' decisions, and that a safeguard against abuse was thus created.ⁿ¹³

With the Blue Sky Cases of 1917 the way was prepared for widespread enactment of Blue Sky laws, with only occasional, and largely unsuccessful,ⁿ¹⁴ challenges to particular provisions. Blue Sky laws have been seen as regulating evenhandedly, as effectuating legitimate state interests, and as having only incidental effects on interstate commerce.ⁿ¹⁵ The premise, however, was ultimately challenged as Blue Sky laws were amended to include anti-takeover provisions or other provisions involving direct intervention in corporate affairs. These undertakings, crafted by state legislatures as a response to a rising tide of hostile takeovers, sought to bring within the administrative authority of state securities regulators the power to subject takeover bids directed to security holders to administrative review of fairness, and to empower administrators to block tender offers from proceeding. Jurisdiction to adopt and enforce such provisions was variously based on the presence of substantial assets of a target company within the state, or incorporation of the target company in the state. They renewed Commerce Clause concerns by reason of the authority conferred on state administrators effectively to regulate transactions conducted across state lines and in some cases wholly outside a state.

In Edgar v. MITE Corp.,ⁿ¹⁶ the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the Illinois Business Takeover Act, adopted as part of the state's Blue Sky law, as an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce. As with many such provisions adopted at the time, the Illinois law imposed several requirements upon a tender offeror prior to communicating any offer to shareholders. Requirements included advance notification and submission of materials, to be followed by a fairness hearing in which the state administrator could determine whether the offer should be permitted to proceed. The Court held that the provision gave the state power to block an interstate tender offer, and to exercise authority wholly outside the state by imposing requirements having the power to block transactions based only on the fact that a target company had substantial assets within the state.

Generations of state anti-takeover laws evolved, and are discussed further in considering the scope of state jurisdiction under Blue Sky laws in Chapter Three of this Treatise. In the history of Blue Sky laws, however, the constitutional debate over such laws both at their inception and again in the MITE line of cases has well illustrated that the single constant in setting the limits of authority has been a clearly identifiable need for investor protection. The firmly established power of states to act for the protection of investors within the state is subject to degrees of preemption as a consequence of the evolution of national and global capital markets. Yet the essential role of Blue Sky laws to intercede for investors in the protection against fraud and abuse continues unabated, as it has throughout development of the entire state/federal dual system of securities regulation that is discussed further below.

[3] Dual State/Federal Regulation

All of securities regulation is oriented around three areas of intended protection: (a) the distribution of securities, that is, the creation of a security and the process by which it is placed into the hands of the investing public; (b) trading in securities; and finally (c) holding securities, that is, the setting in which investors are neither purchasing nor selling securities, but are rather impacted by what issuers or others do, or are faced with decisions relating to appurtenant rights such as voting. From the earliest days securities laws in the United States have thus had as their main concern abuses involving:

- (1) The lack of fair and honest dealing in securities transactions;
- (2) Irresponsible, high pressure selling practices and denigration of the trading markets; and
- (3) The unavailability of adequate information on which a potential investor could make an informed investment decision.

Against this backdrop a strong motivating concern was also the fact that traditional legal and equitable remedies were insufficient either to prevent such abuses or provide meaningful redress if it occurred.

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.02

Blue Sky laws responded to these concerns with regulation by intercession. Whether in the registration of securities, or in the licensing process for intermediaries, state securities administrators put themselves between an investor and the offer or sale of a security in order to receive information and make a determination on substantive fraud or fairness grounds what may be offered for consideration by an investor, and who may be involved in offering it. Thereafter, on those same grounds, administrators were empowered to suspend or halt the process altogether. Yet as capital markets evolved on a national basis, and abuses became evident in a national market context that culminated with the stock market crash of 1929, limitations on the power of state regulators to govern national markets also became evident. Blue Sky regulation, however effective, was parochial in the face of needed regulation of the distribution, trading and holding of securities on a national scale. Blue Sky laws did virtually nothing for example to address trading market abuses that had become a major concern in the wake of the stock market crash.¹⁷ Congress thus entered the field of securities regulation with enactment of the Securities Act of 1933, followed soon thereafter with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 with its particular focus on market regulation and the mechanisms for assuring a continuous flow of information to markets and the investing public.

From inception, the federal securities laws involved a premise very different from Blue Sky laws. Congress chose to establish a regulatory scheme based on full disclosure to investors--to create a process by which structured information is created and disseminated, to assure an opportunity to assess that information in an atmosphere free of pressure, and to create an antifraud remedy in the event information provided in the process is false or misleading. This is the focus of the Securities Act of 1933 and its provisions for registration of securities, and for the content and use of the prospectus, in the distribution process. Congress eschewed the notion of administrative intercession in the offer and sale of securities that was central to the state approach in favor of a system designed to assure the creation and dissemination of material information upon which the investing public could make its own judgments.

The Blue Sky Cases of 1917 and their progeny nevertheless cemented the continuing role of state securities regulation as a full partner with federal regulation, and in the enactment of the federal securities laws Congress expressly preserved state Blue Sky laws and authority. This allowed for the dual federal/state regulatory system that remained fully in place until NSMIA in 1996. The historic paternalistic role of the states in the distribution of securities gradually diminished through the widespread adoption of exemptions based on realistic assessments of the extent to which the Blue Sky model for regulation was actually needed in certain circumstances, and with an eye to evolving national markets and the need for uniformity among the states. The move away from merit regulation likewise gained momentum as Blue Sky laws and regulations were re-engineered to more closely coordinate with federal mechanisms, and the need for protection in many settings was perceived as lessened.

The federal securities laws also introduced self-regulation into the mix of intermediary regulation. Congress established a system of regulating the securities industry through statutorily mandated self-regulatory organizations functioning under the oversight authority of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Every national securities exchange registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, along with securities broker-dealers who are members of the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), which was formerly the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD), is thus charged with responsibility to adopt and enforce rules governing the conduct of members. The structure of requirements is such that by law nearly every broker-dealer must be a member of either an exchange or FINRA, and thus be subject qualification requirements and conduct rules. Although it remained possible after enactment of the federal securities laws for a broker-dealer to be engaged in purely intrastate activities, and to avoid application of these mandates, states responded with coordinate requirements so as to close any self-regulatory loophole, and now generally mandate FINRA membership as a condition to licensing as a broker-dealer.¹⁸

Licensing remains a prime component of Blue Sky laws even in the wake of NSMIA. Although by effectively mandating membership in a self-regulatory organization the federal securities laws indirectly impose qualitative standards on those who would engage in the securities business, there is no federal license involved. This is province of the states, which exercise the authority today true to the historic mission of Blue Sky laws. States have also added investment advisers and investment adviser representatives to the scope of licensing authority, subjecting at least the latter to the same kind of competence and qualitative standards that control the licensing process for broker-dealers and securities salespersons. The state role in regard to investment advisers and their representatives is put in sharp focus by the fact that there is today no self-regulatory organization to which such intermediaries must belong, and thus no set of industry standards and conduct rules by which they are bound, and for which there is any oversight enforcement authority.

[4] The National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA")

With the enactment of NSMIA in 1996 the dual system of federal/state securities regulation was altered to clearly define the lines of regulatory authority in the context of a national securities market. NSMIA is most often described only in terms of preempting state authority under Blue Sky laws. As introduced above and discussed throughout this Treatise, NSMIA did preempt certain state authority to regulate securities offerings and transactions that are national in character, and prescribe some limits in other areas of securities regulation. However, NSMIA is more accurately described as realigning state and federal roles. As legislative history makes clear, NSMIA has as its objective to:

[f]urther advance the development of national securities markets and eliminate the costs and burdens of duplicative and unnecessary regulation by, as a general rule, designating the Federal government as the exclusive regulator of national offerings of securities. State governments generally retain authority to regulate small, regional, or intrastate securities offerings, and to bring actions pursuant to state laws and regulations prohibiting fraud and deceit, including broker-dealer sales practices abuses.ⁿ¹⁹

NSMIA addressed administrative inefficiencies in the dual federal/state regulatory system for registration of securities by preempting state authority to exercise registration (and any merit review) authority over the distribution of securities falling within the NSMIA defined class of "covered securities." NSMIA covered securities include:

- (1) Securities listed or authorized to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, the National Market System tier of the Nasdaq Stock Market, or that are listed or authorized for listing on any other national securities exchange that the Securities and Exchange determines has listing standards substantially similar to those listed.
- (2) Securities that are equal in seniority, or that are senior to, the securities described in (1) above;
- (3) Securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, thus encompassing all mutual fund shares distributed on any significant scale;
- (4) Securities offered and sold to persons who meet criteria established by the Securities and Exchange Commission rule as a "qualified purchaser." The SEC definition of "qualified purchaser" tracks that of "accredited investor" as used in connection with other transactional exemptions under the Securities Act of 1933 and various regulations;
- (5) Securities offered and sold in reliance on several other exemptions, either for securities or transactions, under the Securities Act of 1933 if certain issuer qualifications are met.ⁿ²⁰

Congress concluded that distributions of securities falling within the covered security classification are inherently national in character, and should therefore be subject to exclusive federal regulation. NSMIA allows the states to continue to impose notice filing requirements for covered securities offerings, and to collect filing fees, but they may not otherwise exercise registration or review procedures. In those states that exercise full or partial merit review of securities offerings, NSMIA ended the process entirely where covered securities are involved.

The first critical factor in assessing the scope of preemption of state authority under NSMIA is whether a security is a

NSMIA "covered security." As seen above, the classes of "covered" securities are spelled out in NSMIA, but Congress made no provision for any determination as to the validity of a claim that a security in an offering is, in fact, a covered security. This is an important notion where, as with offerings made in reliance upon Rule 506 of federal Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ²¹ there are conditions to be met for an issuer to avail itself of the exemption. Whether NSMIA preemption rests on the actual validity of--versus claimed reliance on--the Rule 506 exemption is critical in assessing the permitted scope of state authority to regulate offerings. State regulators and courts are today openly testing, if not outright challenging, the existence of NSMIA preemption when there is merely claimed reliance on, and perhaps not actual compliance with, the Rule 506 exemption.ⁿ²²

To be sure, by the time NSMIA was enacted, most states had already incorporated exemptions or exclusions into their Blue Sky laws and regulations that operated to exclude most types of NSMIA covered securities from registration and review requirements. The vast majority of states also authorized registration by "coordination," when a securities distribution is registered at the federal level. Moreover, the number of states fully engaged in merit regulation of securities offerings at the time of enacting NSMIA was relatively small. Thus, NSMIA did not in practical application dramatically alter the existing scheme of dual state/federal securities regulation. It did, however, speak loudly in defining the respective roles of federal and state regulators in the national market setting. For example, although NSMIA expressly preserved the full enforcement authority of states regarding fraud, without any covered security limitation, the Act makes clear that states are not empowered to use fraud enforcement authority as a roundabout means of interposing Blue Sky regulation on the offer and sale of such securities.

Although NSMIA realigned the dual system of state and federal securities regulation, preempting most state authority in the registration of securities or offerings that are national in character, the dual system remains viable and important considering the focus of state regulation that now underscores the following roles:

Registration. After NSMIA state administrators focus attention on smaller offerings having a local or regional character. Such offerings may be quite small, undertaken by entrepreneurial companies and issuers with little or no financial history, no profitability, and for which close consideration of the offering, including even merit review, is plainly beneficial. Blue Sky laws empower administrators to make determinations, with or without full-scale merit review, that are particularly suited to such offerings, and to directly impact the manner and extent of disclosure of risks associated with them as well as substantive fairness considerations. State authority to police the offering process includes the power to assure accountability to investors.

Licensing. States continue to make determinations that there are firms or people who should not be licensed as securities intermediaries. They do so on the basis of standards they set individually, regardless of whether the firm or individual is actively engaged in the business, registered at the federal level, or licensed elsewhere. States review disciplinary histories of intermediaries closely, mandate competence standards, and examine financial responsibility.

Enforcement. State securities administrators remain, in practical terms, the first line of defense against myriad investment schemes and scams, and the agencies that can most directly and efficiently respond to complaints. States can act quickly with cease-and-desist authority and other enforcement powers to deal with fraudulent and unfair practices at the local level, and have the resources to commit to enforcement at the community level, and to effective coordination with other local law enforcement authorities. State administrators today bring large numbers of administrative and civil proceedings aimed at the offer and sale of unregistered securities, mostly of some unconventional form or variety, and often by unlicensed people. Criminal referrals and criminal enforcement cases generally are more likely today at the state level as administrators apply resources more narrowly on the prevention and redress of fraud.

As a corollary consideration to the enforcement role of state securities regulation it is also true that many state Blue Sky laws create private rights of action and remedies that are broader than those available under federal law. It is common, for example, for Blue Sky laws to include a broad right of rescission based on any violation of the statute, and extending beyond the issuer to intermediaries and others who aid or participate in the transaction.ⁿ²³ In Texas, the private rescission remedy has been held to apply against anyone who is a link in the selling process, including those who are involved in private, secondary market transactions.ⁿ²⁴ The reach of private rights of action under Blue Sky laws may also extend beyond the purchase and sale of securities as, for example, in Alaska, where the state securities law prohibits misrepresentations of material facts in proxy solicitations.ⁿ²⁵

Although NSMIA preserved the dual state/federal securities regulatory system, it mandated a greater degree of uniformity in certain of the areas preserved. States are thus uniformly limited in the extent to which they may impose certain financial responsibility or books and records requirements on intermediaries as a condition of licensing. Uniform jurisdictional limitations regarding intermediaries also assure that state licensing authority will be evenly applied in the context of nationwide securities activities and a mobile population that involve only limited or sporadic contact with persons in a particular state. These particular elements of post-NSMIA federal/state authority are considered elsewhere in this Treatise.ⁿ²⁶

Building uniformity in Blue Sky regulation among the states themselves has long been a significant consideration in the modern evolution of Blue Sky laws in a national setting, and thus the emergence of the Uniform Securities Act in 1956 and its evolution through later iterations, including that which will become the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, is essential to understanding Blue Sky regulation generally. That discussion follows in section 1.03 below. Before that, however, there remains for consideration one further element of federal preemption in the realignment of state and federal roles in securities regulation.

[5] The Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998

In order to establish national standards for private securities class actions alleging fraud, the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 ("SLUSA")ⁿ²⁷ amended the federal securities laws to provide, subject to certain narrow savings provisions, that no class action based on state law alleging fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of "covered" securities may be maintained in a state or federal court. SLUSA preempts not only claims but also state court jurisdiction over such covered class actions, and directs that any covered action commenced in state court shall be removed to federal court, where it may be dismissed. Covered securities for purposes of SLUSA are the same securities defined as covered under NSMIA, and a "covered class action" is one meeting certain numerosity or grouping criteria,ⁿ²⁸ and which is based upon the statutory or common law of any state that is brought by a private party alleging:

- (1) an untrue statement or omission of a material fact in connection with the purchase or sale of a covered security; or
- (2) that the defendant used or employed any manipulative or deceptive device or contrivance in connection with the purchase or sale of a covered security.ⁿ²⁹

SLUSA thus eliminates class action claims made under private remedy provisions of Blue Sky laws, or which seek any class action recovery based on violations of state securities laws when the claim is premised on fraud or fraudulent conduct in connection with a covered securities transaction. The preclusion of such class action claims runs only to private actions, as SLUSA expressly preserves the authority of state securities commissions or administrators to investigate and bring enforcement actions.ⁿ³⁰ It further preserves the right of private plaintiffs to bring certain class actions that are based on the law of the state of an issuer's incorporation, and also, by excluding them from the definition of covered class action, SLUSA preserves the right of private plaintiffs to bring actions that are exclusively derivative on behalf of a corporation.ⁿ³¹

Class actions arising under state law that are preserved under SLUSA ("permissible actions") are those that are based upon the statutory or common law of the state in which the issuer is incorporated, in the case of a corporation, or organized, in the case of all other entities, and which involve:

(i) the purchase or sale of securities by the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer exclusively from or to holders of equity securities of the issuer; or

(ii) any recommendation, position, or other communication with respect to the sale of securities of the issuer that is made by or on behalf of the issuer or an affiliate to holders of equity securities of the issuer, and which concerns decisions of those holders in regard to voting, acting in response to a tender offer, or exercising dissenter's or appraisal rights.ⁿ³²

SLUSA also preserves the right of any state, political subdivisions of a state, and of a state pension plan to bring an action involving a covered security on its own behalf, or as a member of a class comprised entirely of other such named plaintiffs that have authorized participation in the action.ⁿ³³ Covered class actions based on contractual agreements between issuers and indenture trustees seeking to enforce the agreement are likewise preserved, and may be prosecuted in either state or federal courts.ⁿ³⁴

Although SLUSA thus federalizes private class actions alleging fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of a covered security, the scope of what is actually preserved as a matter of state law claims is not insignificant, and in the larger scheme of the realignment of state and federal securities regulatory roles in the wake of NSMIA, there is inherent logic. First, SLUSA does not prevent any individual, or small group of individuals,ⁿ³⁵ from bringing claims in state courts against the issuer or any other persons involved in the offer and sale of any security, whether a "covered" security or not. The SLUSA preemption applies only to class actions. Further, the SLUSA preemption does not prevent any suit, class action or otherwise, involving other than covered securities. Thus, "penny" stock frauds, or fraud in connection with transactions in any other stock not traded on a national securities exchange or falling within another covered category such as mutual funds, may continue to be pursued in state court class actions, under applicable state and common law. Express rights of action under Blue Sky laws can be particularly meaningful in this area. Finally, by reason of the preservation of rights to bring private actions based upon the statutory or common law of the state in which the issuer is incorporated or organized. The full range of Blue Sky law rights of action and remedies is preserved in those situations involving fraud on a localized or regional basis.

Under SLUSA, courts also closely examine whether claims asserted as a matter of state or common law are actually "covered" claims for determining preemption. Although there may be no issue whether covered securities are involved, allegations of a class action complaint may not in fact be grounded in fraud or fraudulent practices within the contemplation of SLUSA. Allegations involving only breach of contract, fiduciary duty, conversion and other types of state or common law claims for money damages that cannot be fairly read as asserting securities fraud will not be preempted.ⁿ³⁶ Similarly, whether alleged fraud is "in connection with" the purchase or sale of a SLUSA covered security also determines whether claims are preempted.ⁿ³⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Mass. Acts and Resolves 1852, ch. 303.

(n2)Footnote 2. Conn. Pub. Acts 1903, ch. 196.

(n3)Footnote 3. Nev. Stat. 1909, ch. 56.

(n4)Footnote 4. Conn. Pub. Acts 1911, ch. 232.

(n5)Footnote 5. In 1910, for example, the Rhode Island corporation law was amended to include a provision aimed at regulating the issuance of shares in an investment company, or in a real estate, mining, or "cooperative" corporation by requiring a filing to be made initially, and annually thereafter, showing financial condition and other information. R.I. Acts and Resolves 1910, ch 557, § 39.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Amanda Acquisition Corp. v. Universal Foods Corp., 877 F.2d 496, 502 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 955, 110 S. Ct. 367, 107 L. Ed. 2d 353 (1989) ("States have regulated corporate affairs, including mergers and sales of assets since before the beginning of the nation").

(n7)Footnote 7. Kan. L. 1911, ch. 133.

(n8)Footnote 8. Merrick v. N. W. Halsey & Co., 242 U.S. 568, 37 S. Ct. 227, 230, 61 L. Ed. 498 (1917) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See William R. Compton Co. v. Allen, 216 F. 537 (S.D. Iowa 1914) ; Alabama & N. O. Transp. Co. v. Doyle, 210 F. 173 (E.D. Mich. 1914) ; N. W. Halsey & Co. v. Merrick, 228 F. 805 (E.D. Mich. 1915) ; Geiger-Jones Co. v. Turner, 230 F. 233 (S.D. Ohio 1916) ; Bracey v. Darst, 218 F. 482 (N.D. W. Va. 1914) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co., 242 U.S. 539, 37 S. Ct. 217, 61 L. Ed. 480 (1917) (Ohio Blue Sky law comported with the Commerce Clause because they do not discriminate against interstate commerce); Caldwell v. Sioux Falls Stock Yards Co., 242 U.S. 559, 37 S. Ct. 224, 61 L. Ed. 493 (1917) (purpose and general provisions of the South Dakota Blue Sky law equated to those of Ohio, which were permissible); Merrick v. N. W. Halsey & Co., 242 U.S. 568, 37 S. Ct. 227, 61 L. Ed. 498 (1917) (Michigan statute upheld on same grounds).

(n11)Footnote 11. Merrick v. N. W. Halsey & Co., 242 U.S. 568, 584, 37 S. Ct. 227, 61 L. Ed. 498 (1917) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co., 242 U.S. 539, 557-558, 37 S. Ct. 217, 61 L. Ed. 480 (1917) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co., 242 U.S. 539, 557-558, 37 S. Ct. 217, 61 L. Ed. 480 (1917) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Carney v. Hanson Oil Co., 690 S.W. 2d 404 (Mo. 1985) ; Travelers Health Ass'n v. Virginia, 339 U.S. 643, 70 S. Ct. 927, 94 L. Ed. 1154 (1950) .

But see Hyde Park Partners, L.P. v. Connolly, 839 F.2d 837 (1st Cir. 1988) (Massachusetts statute which forbade any transfer of corporate shares for one year after failure to disclose any material fact held to be an unconstitutional regulation of interstate commerce).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., North Star International v. Arizona Corp. Commission, 720 F.2d 578 (9th Cir. 1983) (State statute to be upheld unless the burden imposed on interstate commerce is clearly excessive in relation to the putative local benefits).

(n16)Footnote 16. Edgar v. MITE Corp., 457 U.S. 624, 102 S. Ct. 2629, 73 L. Ed. 2d 269 (1982) .

(n17)Footnote 17. In his message to Congress calling for enactment of federal securities legislation allowing for federal supervision of traffic in investment securities in interstate commerce, President Franklin Roosevelt voiced the concern: "In spite of many state statutes the public in the past has sustained severe losses through practices neither ethical nor honest on the part of many persons and corporations selling securities." S. Rep. No. 47, 73rd Cong., 2d Sess. 6-7 (1933); H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73rd Cong., 2d Sess. 1-2 (1933).

(n18)Footnote 18. Many states have, by regulations, also directly imported key self-regulatory organization imposed rules and responsibilities into their own set of mandated responsibilities or prohibited acts and practices, thus expanding enforcement authority in areas such as the suitability of investments. The full scope of state authority in the regulation of intermediaries is discussed in Chapters 11 and 14, below.

(n19)Footnote 19. H.R. Rep. No. 622, 104th Cong., 2d Sess. 16 (1996), reprinted in 1996 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3877, 3878. The Conference Committee Report on NSMIA added that the Act:

"[Amends] the Federal securities laws in order to promote efficiency and capital formation in the financial markets, and to amend the Investment Company Act of 1940 to promote more efficient management of mutual funds, protect investors, and provide more effective and less burdensome regulation." H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 864, 104th Cong., 2d Sess. 39 (1996), reprinted in 1996 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3877, 3920.

(n20)Footnote 20. NSMIA covered securities, and the impact of the Act on state authority regarding registration of securities are discussed in Chapter 5 ("Registration") and Chapter 6 ("Merit Regulation"), below.

(n21)Footnote 21. 17 C.F.R. § 240.506 (2008).

(n22)Footnote 22. For a thorough examination of the scope of NSMIA preemption as state regulators continue to police "exempt" offerings that are undertaken at regional, state, and local levels, see R. Rapp & F. Berckmueller, Testing the Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure, 68 Bus. Law. 809 (May 2008).

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.,

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-2003 (liability for "participants" in securities transactions).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.43 (liability for rescission extends to any person who aids or participates in an unlawful transaction).

(n24)Footnote 24. Texas Capital Secs., Inc. v. Sandefer, 58 S.W.3d 760, 776 (Tex. App. 2001) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Meidinger v. Koniag, Inc., 31 P.3d 77 (Alaska 2001) (affirming summary judgment on claims that proxy solicitation violated Blue Sky law antifraud provision and regulations).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Chapter 4 ("State Jurisdiction"), below.

(n27)Footnote 27. Pub. Law 105-353, 112 Stat. 3227.

(n28)Footnote 28. A "covered class action" under SLUSA is defined as:

(i) any single lawsuit in which--

(I) damages are sought on behalf of more than 50 persons or prospective class members, and questions of law or fact common to those persons or members of the prospective class, without reference to issues of individualized reliance on an alleged misstatement or omission, predominate over any questions affecting only individual persons or members; or

(II) one or more named parties seek to recover damages on a representative basis on behalf of themselves and other unnamed parties similarly situated, and questions of law and fact common to those persons or members of the prospective class predominate over any questions affecting only individual persons or members; or

(ii) any group of lawsuits filed or pending in the same court and involving common questions of law or fact, in which--

(I) damages are sought on behalf of more than 50 persons; and

(II) the lawsuits are joined, consolidated, or otherwise proceed as a single action for any purpose. 15 U.S.C. § 77p(f)(2).

(n29)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 77p (b).

(n30)Footnote 30. SLUSA section 101 (e), 15 U.S.C. § 77p (e), provides:

Preservation of State Jurisdiction.--The Securities Commission (or any agency or office performing like functions) of the State shall retain jurisdiction under the laws of such State to investigate and to bring enforcement actions.

(n31)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 77p(f)(2)(B).

(n32)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 77p (d)(1) (B).

(n33)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 77p(d)(2)(A). For purposes of this preservation of rights, "state pension plan" means:

[A] pension plan established and maintained for its employees by the government of the State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality thereof. 15 U.S.C. § 77p(d)(2)(B).

(n34)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 77p(d)(3).

(n35)Footnote 35. See note 41, above.

(n36)Footnote 36. See Burns v. Prudential Sec., 116 F.Supp. 2d 917 (N.D. Ohio. 2000) (Plaintiff class allegations of unauthorized trading did not amount to securities fraud in the absence of any allegation that Defendants' conduct involved any element of deception); Shaw v. Charles Schwab & Co., 128 F.Supp.2d 1270 (C.D. Cal. 2001) (Class did not allege any misrepresentations or other malfeasance that is intrinsically related to the securities being traded).

(n37)Footnote 37. See Green v. Ameritrade, Inc., 279 F.3d 590 (8th Cir. 2002) (Class complaint could not be fairly read as alleging a sale or purchase of a covered security made in reliance on faulty information provided by the defendant); Spielman v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., [2001-2002 Transfer Binder] 332 F.3d 116 (alleged misrepresentations were not integral to the purchase of covered securities).

But see Denton v. H & R Block Financial Advisors, Inc., [2001-2002 Transfer Binder] CCH Fed.Sec.L.Rep. P 91,618 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (State law claim of breach of fiduciary duty is preempted by SLUSA because it alleged intentional omissions and misrepresentations).

13 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.03

§ 1.03 The Uniform Securities Act(s)

The majority of state Blue Sky laws are based on one of two versions of the Uniform Securities Act. The Uniform Securities Act of 1956 (the "Uniform Act") has been adopted in whole or part in thirty-seven jurisdictions.ⁿ¹ The Revised Uniform Securities Act of 1985 (the "revised Uniform Act") has been adopted in only a handful of states.ⁿ² From the outset, the mission of the Uniform Acts has been to make uniform the law of those states which enact them and, expressly, "to coordinate the interpretation and administration of [the] act with the related federal regulation."ⁿ³

The latest version of the Act, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, was drafted in response to the combination of the federal preemptive legislation discussed earlier, along with significant changes in the technology of securities trading and regulation, and the increasingly interstate and international aspects of securities transactions.ⁿ⁴ The 2002 Uniform Act not only supplies guidance to state legislatures and administrators in conforming Blue Sky regulation to NSMIA requirements, but also in addressing such areas as the broker-dealer aspects of the federal Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, signed into law in November 1999,ⁿ⁵ in harmonizing key state and federal definitions in response to the Commodities Futures Modernization Act of 2000, and in giving effect to the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act to permit the filing of electronic signatures and electronic records. The 2002 Uniform Act has been adopted in Missouri, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, South Dakota, U.S. Virgin Islands, Maine, Vermont, South Carolina, Minnesota, Hawaii, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Georgia. It is under active consideration in several other states.

The Uniform Acts currently in force are hybrid Blue Sky laws, in that they include provisions for securities registration,ⁿ⁶ intermediary regulation through licensing and supervision,ⁿ⁷ and antifraud protection through administrative enforcement authority and civil remedies.ⁿ⁸ The Acts are structured such that states may adopt them in whole or part, with each of the three areas of focus capable of standing alone, supported by a set of definitions, administrative provisions, exemptions, penalties, jurisdiction and other matters that may be adopted independently to tailor particular use of other provisions. There are also variants of some provisions of the Uniform Acts that have been developed by NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--for selective consideration and adoption.ⁿ⁹

The Uniform Act was the first successful effort to coalesce all the elements of and approaches to Blue Sky regulation into a common frame of reference.ⁿ¹⁰ Just as important, it for the first time uniformly defined jurisdictional limits and in doing so established a higher level of predictability to applications of Blue Sky laws. Section 414 of the Uniform Act--"Scope of the Act and Service of Process"--prescribes the extent to which a state may regulate securities transactions and intermediary activities based on whether or not an offer to buy is made in the state, or when an offer to sell is made and accepted in the state.ⁿ¹¹ More recently these basic defining limits on state jurisdiction under Blue Sky laws have been considerably tested and refined in the world of e-commerce and the Internet,ⁿ¹² nevertheless, the Uniform Act established essential boundaries that set in motion a rationalization of the role of the states in a national market setting. Section 414(e), for example, excludes bona fide newspapers and other publications "of general, regular, and paid circulation" from being an offer to sell or to buy in the state when it is not published in the state, or even when, if published in the state it has more than two-thirds of its circulation outside the state. Similarly, the Act excludes radio or television programming originating outside the state which is received in the state.ⁿ¹³

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.03

In its all-inclusive approach to state securities regulation the Uniform Act provided for merit regulation of securities offerings by authorizing administrators to deny effectiveness of a registration statement, or suspend or revoke it, on a finding that the "offering has worked or tended to work a fraud upon purchasers or would so operate."ⁿ¹⁴ The Act empowers administrators likewise to act when "the offering has been or would be made with unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions, or other compensation, promoters' profits or participation, or unreasonable amounts or kinds of options."ⁿ¹⁵ Although numerous states have since moved away from complete merit regulation of offerings, that is, merit review as a condition to effectiveness,ⁿ¹⁶ and adopted exemptions which limit its application generally,ⁿ¹⁷ the Uniform Act standard of what will tend to work a fraud or would so operate is in one form or another a part of the Blue Sky laws in forty-six jurisdictions as the basis on which administrators may issue stop orders in connection with an offering. Thirty five jurisdictions have adopted the Uniform Act provision in regard to unreasonable compensation.

Although the Uniform Act itself evolved into different versions through initiatives such as the various NASAA amendments or revisions that were in varying manner and degree melded into state laws and regulations, the degree of uniformity achieved through introduction of the Uniform Act was substantial. In practice today there are few significant structural or substantive differences between Uniform Act and Non-Uniform Act states, the latter having significantly conformed their Blue Sky laws over time such that key elements mesh well. All states, for example, and in one way or another, provide for registration by "coordination" covering a security for which a registration statement has been filed with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933, or make an exemption from state registration requirements for SEC registered offerings. This form of registration streamlines the content of a registration statement and the procedure by which it becomes effective. Registration by coordination was one of the key innovations of the Uniform Act. NASAA guidelines for common application in reviewing certain types of offerings and other elements of offerings have likewise operated to merge differently worded substantive standards among states, such that the "grossly unfair" standard in Ohioⁿ¹⁸ differs little in application from the "unfair or inequitable" standard applicable in Arizona,ⁿ¹⁹ or the "tend[s] to work a fraud" standard of the Uniform Act. Additionally, the Uniform Act spawned development of uniform forms now utilized in all states, which meaningfully streamline procedures for issuers and regulators alike.

Coordination among the states, and between the states and the federal government, has been consistently pursued in the wake of the Uniform Act as an expressly mandated statutory policy.ⁿ²⁰ Indeed, today the following statement of objective included as section 608(a) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act could not be any more certain:

The administrator shall, at the discretion of the administrator, cooperate, coordinate, consult, and ... share information with the securities regulators of one or more states, Canadian jurisdictions, or another country; the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Department of Justice, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities investor Protection Corporation, a self-regulatory organization, a national or international organization of securities regulators, federal or state banking and insurance regulators, and any governmental law enforcement agency in order to effectuate greater uniformity in securities matters among the federal government, self-regulatory organizations and state governments.ⁿ²¹

The impact of NSMIA preemption on securities registration provisions and procedures under Blue Sky laws generally has previously been discussed, and is considered in greater detail in later chapters. Former provisions in Blue Sky laws based upon the Uniform Act have been largely revised. The impact of NSMIA on the Uniform Act was, however, broader. As to registration/licensing of broker-dealers, agents and investment advisers, NSMIA introduced the category of "federal covered adviser," "notice" filings, and uniform limitations on books and records requirements states may impose on both investment advisers and broker-dealers. The scope of Uniform Act intermediary licensing requirements was also limited as a result of exclusions of persons who engage in only de minimis activities or contacts with persons in a state, as defined by NSMIA. The patchwork of repairs on the Uniform Act mandated by NSMIA, along with the need today to mesh Blue Sky laws with other federal preemptive legislation is the main reason for promulgation of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, designed to supplant the Uniform Act and the Revised Uniform Act in their entirety. Although it is thus a "new" Act, as a practical matter the 2002 Uniform Act molds its predecessors and their variants into a single version combining and modernizing the elements of both, all in conformity with federal preemptive legislation.

Despite federal preemption of significant elements of state authority under Blue Sky laws, the Uniform Acts, in whatever version, are important as ever. In the wake of federal preemption the focus of state administrators has shifted to smaller, local and regionalized offerings, and the people engaged in them. Uniformity, predictability and regulatory efficiency are as essential to capital formation in these settings as any other. Firmly anchored in the Uniform Act(s), state securities regulation remains both consistent and constant, thus assuring an even application and a high level of investor protection.

Because it addresses all elements of state securities regulation, the Uniform Act serves throughout this Treatise as the beginning point for considering each of those elements in detail. There are variations in provisions and particular elements as adopted in particular states, and these are particularly addressed, as are the alternative approaches in Non-Uniform Act states. It is clear, however, that with very few exceptions the Uniform Act is a roadmap to all of state securities regulation, and the backdrop against which a full understanding of the continuing role of Blue Sky law in not only national but also global capital markets is possible. Although the mission of Blue Sky laws is unchanged, uniformity in its execution is and will remain more important than ever. The drafters of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act made clear that the goal is to seek its enactment in all state jurisdictions as a replacement of all versions of the Uniform Act and the Revised Uniform Act.ⁿ²² It is, therefore, particularly helpful going forward to anchor consideration of each element of Blue Sky regulation in the Uniform Acts and the common elements that will mark the contours of the law across jurisdictions as the states continue to stake out their role in the protection of investors and the integrity of markets.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. These "jurisdictions" include the territories of Guam and Puerto Rico.

(n2)Footnote 2. The Revised Uniform Act has been adopted, either in its original or 1988 amended forms, in Nevada, New Mexico, and Rhode Island.

Both the Uniform Act and the Revised Uniform Act are reproduced in full in Volume 2, below.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unif. Sec. Act § 415 ("Statutory Policy").

(n4)Footnote 4. Drafting Committee Prefatory Note, Uniform Securities Act (2002), NCCUSL Discussion Draft (Apr. 2002).

(n5)Footnote 5. The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act rescinded the former exemption of banks from the definitions of broker and dealer contained in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, ushering in the notion of "functional" regulation in response to the considerably expanded securities activities of banks in the wake of the Act and its repeal of the 1930s era Glass-Steagall Act.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 301-306.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 201-204.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 101-102; 401-419.

(n9)Footnote 9. In 1987 NASAA promulgated amendments to various provisions of the Uniform Act, a number of which operate to mesh provisions of the Revised Uniform Act with the original. For example, from the broader authority of administrators to bring civil actions for the benefit of victimized investors that is contained in the Revised Uniform Act, a 1987 NASAA amendment to the Uniform Act expressly provides in section 408 of the Act that the administrator may seek and obtain an order of rescission, restitution or disgorgement directed at any violator.

(n10)Footnote 10. In 1929 the Uniform Sales of Securities Act was released as the first attempt to stabilize the rather haphazard approach to enactment of Blue Sky legislation that prevailed among the states. Although a few states embraced this first uniform statute, at least in parts, it was not widely accepted or acknowledged. The advent of federal regulation with enactment of the Securities Act of 1933 rendered the Uniform Sales of Securities Act largely obsolete, and in 1944 it was eliminated from the list of approved uniform laws by the NCCUSL. Later attempts to create uniform state securities laws were abandoned in the face of diverse regulatory philosophies and the recognition that substantial background study would be needed for any realistic chance of broad acceptance of a new version. see Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 236, 233 (1958).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. The particular challenges involved in determining the scope of application of Blue Sky laws in a commercial and financial environment increasingly dominated by the Internet, and the responses of state regulators, are considered in depth in Chapters 3 ("State Jurisdiction") and 12 ("Blue Sky Laws and the Internet"), below.

(n13)Footnote 13. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(e).

(n14)Footnote 14. Unif. Sec. Act § 306((a)(E).

(n15)Footnote 15. Unif. Securities Act § 306(a)(F).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g. Illinois: 121 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 137.1 (1983 amendment to remove merit review provisions in favor of requiring full disclosure in registration); Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. §§ 51:707, 51:709(5) (Amendments eliminating merit review provisions).

(n17)Footnote 17. The Revised Uniform Act reflects action by many Uniform Act states to expand limited offering exemptions in their Blue Sky laws, thus reducing the scope of merit review of offerings that would otherwise apply. The Revised Uniform Act includes some of these expanded exemptions. Section 302(a), for example, provides an exclusion from merit review for securities offerings by certain "seasoned" issuers, where there appears less need for detailed securities review in order to protect investors. Section 305(h) of the Revised Uniform Act limits authority of state administrators to require an escrow of "cheap stock" held by promoters. Section 402(11) also established an expanded limited offering exemption. Without regard for the Revised Uniform Act provision, the majority of states have since adopted the "Uniform Limited Offering Exemption" (ULOE), which coordinates to varying degrees with SEC Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933.

(n18)Footnote 18. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.13 ("[T]hat such security is being disposed of or purchased on grossly unfair terms ...").

(n19)Footnote 19. Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1921(3).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unif. Sec. Act § 415.

(n21)Footnote 21. 2002 Unif. Securities Act, § 608(a).

(n22)Footnote 22. In their Prefatory Note to the April 2002 Discussion Draft of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the drafters set the stage as follows:

This is a new Uniform Securities Act. Amendment of the earlier 1956 Act or RUSA [Revised Act] would not be wise given the different versions of the 1956 Act enacted by the States and the determination to seek enactment in all state jurisdictions of the new Uniform Securities Act after it is adopted by the National Conference.

14 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 1 Introduction To Blue Sky Regulation

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.04

§ 1.04 The Blueprint for Regulatory Reform and the Future of Blue Sky Regulation

In March 2008, the U.S. Treasury Department released its "Blueprint" for an improved financial regulatory structure in the United States. The Blueprint for a Modernized Financial Regulatory Structure n1 presents a series of short-term and intermediate-term recommendations for reform of the U.S. regulatory structure, with the stated objective of improving the competitiveness of the U.S. capital markets in the global marketplace. The Blueprint further addresses a long-term optimal regulatory structure that would eschew the present strong bias of rules over principles in favor of a principles-based system of regulation focused primarily on achieving desired policy goals.

The new regulatory structure would be centered on creating five objectives-based regulators into which all existing federal financial regulatory authorities would be subsumed. One agency would have "prudential" financial regulatory authority over all types of financial institutions, generally assuming the current role of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Office of Thrift Supervision, and which would address risk management issues. A second regulator would focus on market stability. In all likelihood, this role would fall on the Federal Reserve Board. A third agency would regulate business conduct across all types of financial firms. Business conduct regulation in this context would include key aspects of consumer protection, and would have responsibility for federally chartering a wide range of financial service providers. This agency would be the standards-setter for firms to be able to enter the financial services industry and sell their products and services to customers. It would cover some of the current functions of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodities Futures Trading Commission, and some functions of the Federal Trade Commission. The Blueprint would create two additional regulatory authorities, one responsible for corporate finance regulation such as the oversight of corporate disclosure, corporate governance, and accounting. The second would be a federal governmental insurer, generally taking on responsibilities of the FDIC.n2

The Blueprint focuses heavily on eliminating overly prescriptive federal laws and redundant requirements that have vastly increased the complexity and cost of financial regulation. A fundamental premise is that the "rules based" U.S. regulatory structure reflects an antiquated system struggling to keep pace with market developments while facing increasing challenges to anticipate and prevent financial crises. The Blueprint criticizes the current regulatory system of "pure functional" regulation that has evolved over some 75 years, which maintains separate regulatory agencies across segregated functional lines of banking, insurance, futures, and securities, and is largely incompatible with modern financial markets. The Treasury Department argues that this system has several fundamental problems, including the lack of a single regulator to monitor systemic risk.

1-1 Blue Sky Regulation § 1.04

The Blueprint essentially deals with three interrelated aspects of the U.S. financial regulatory system that are seen as contributing to its structural weaknesses:

- (1) Regulatory agencies have different objectives. Diverse regulatory agencies at the national and state levels lack a common vision that systematically balance issues such as competitiveness, serving consumers, and risk management--all of which delays the implementation of needed policies and responses to market volatility;
- (2) The rules-based system of regulation is overly prescriptive, which leads to a focus on compliance with rules rather than outcomes. This in turn makes it difficult for regulators to adjust policies in a flexible manner in response to rapidly changing conditions. Additionally, it fosters a compliance-based and confrontational relationship between firms and regulators; and
- (3) The regulatory regime in the U.S. has been slow to react and adapt to the rapidly changing financial marketplace. For a lack of any overarching common set of objectives or mechanisms for regulators to take coordinated action, the system cannot effectively respond to international trends, market opportunities, and financial crises.ⁿ³

The principal impact on state securities regulation as it currently exists in the post-NSMIA environment is in the proposed structure for rationalizing the chartering of financial institutions. That structure would involve a federal charter for financial service providers. The new business conduct regulator contemplated in the Blueprint--initially named the "Conduct of Business Regulatory Agency (CBRA)"--would be responsible for business conduct regulation of federally chartered financial services firms such as broker-dealers and investment advisors. In providing for federally chartered financial services firms, the Blueprint does not specifically delineate the future role of state Blue Sky laws. It does recognize, however, that the proper role of state authorities should be established in the optimal regulatory structure. It also makes clear that in that structure, the new federal business conduct regulator would be responsible for setting national standards for a wide range of business conduct laws across all types of financial service providers. These national standards would apply to all types of financial services firms, whether federally or state chartered. In addition, the Blueprint makes clear that field preemption would be provided to the federal business conduct regulator, preempting state business conduct laws directly relating to the provision of financial services.ⁿ⁴

In the optimal structure, according to the Blueprint, states would still retain authority to enact laws and take enforcement actions against state-chartered financial service providers. However, in considering the future role of the states as to federally-chartered institutions, the Blueprint counsels that the optimal structure would acknowledge the existing national market for financial products, while at the same time preserve an appropriate role for state authorities to respond to local conditions.ⁿ⁵ Two options are identified in that regard:

- (1) State authorities could be given a formalized role in the business conduct regulator's rulemaking process as a means of utilizing their extensive local experience; and
- (2) States could play a role in monitoring compliance and enforcement.ⁿ⁶

Clearly, the optimal regulatory structure envisioned by the Blueprint would sharply diminish the role of state securities regulation in the area that Congress previously expressly recognized should be preserved, namely, the regulation of broker-dealers and other securities intermediaries, as well as the exercise of antifraud enforcement authority. With NSMIA, Congress did not alter the historic investor protection mission of state securities regulation.ⁿ⁷ Under the Blueprint's optimal structure, however, state authority would be limited to state chartered financial firms, of which there are likely to be few. Indeed, the current legal and regulatory structure for broker-dealers recognizes the existence purely intrastate broker-dealers, but in reality only a tiny percentage of the universe of securities broker-dealers in the United States conduct purely intra-state business, and would elect only to be state chartered.

As it is presently offered, the Blueprint is a call for an entirely new regulatory scheme. In the near term, however, it is presented primarily as the basis for encouraging a broad national debate on the importance of enhancing the competitiveness of U.S. financial firms, and how a principles- or objectives-based approach to financial regulation might contribute to achieving that goal. The future of Blue Sky regulation is a critical part of this debate.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The Treasury Department Blueprint for a modernized Financial Regulatory Structure (March 2008) is referred to throughout this section simply as the "Blueprint."

(n2)Footnote 2. See Blueprint (Executive Summary), at 13-21.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Financial Services Roundtable, The Blueprint for U.S. Financial Competitiveness 33 (2008). The Financial Services Roundtable Blueprint is the product of a Blue Ribbon Commission created to develop policy reforms and specific recommendations for improving the U.S. legal and financial regulatory system based on "Guiding Principles" to provide regulators and firms with a common framework to guide policies and practices. The FSA Blueprint is available at www.fsround.org.

(n4)Footnote 4. Blueprint (Executive Summary), at 20.

(n5)Footnote 5. Blueprint (Executive Summary), at 20-21.

(n6)Footnote 6. Blueprint (Executive Summary), at 20-21.

(n7)Footnote 7. See R. Rapp & F. Berckmueller, Testing three Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure, 68 Bus. Law. 809, 846-847 (May 2008).

15 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation 2.syn

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Chapter 2: Definition of Security

§ 2.01 In General--The Meaning of "Security"

§ 2.02 Stock

§ 2.03 Notes and Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[1] Generally

[2] Reves v. Ernst & Young: Family Resemblances

[3] Factors for Evaluating Notes as Securities

[a] Motivations Associated with the Transaction

[b] The Plan of Distribution

[c] Reasonable Expectations of the Investing Public

[d] Presence of Some Other Risk Reducing Factor

[4] Special Considerations: Commercial Paper and Demand Notes

[5] The "Promissory Note" Epidemic

[6] Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[a] Generally

[b] Loan Participations

[c] Funding Programs

§ 2.04 Bonds and Debentures

§ 2.05 Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests

§ 2.06 Options, Warrants and Subscription Rights

[1] Options and Warrants Generally

[2] Preorganization and Subscription Rights

§ 2.07 Partnerships and Joint Ventures

[1] Limited Partnerships

[2] Limited Liability Partnerships

[3] General Partnerships and Joint Ventures

[4] Limited Liability Companies

§ 2.08 Unconventional Forms: Investment Contracts

[1] The Elements of an Investment Contract

[a] Investment of Money

[b] Common Enterprise

[c] An Expectation of Profits to Come Solely From the Efforts of Others

[2] Particular Applications

[a] Partnerships and Joint Ventures

[b] Real Estate

[i] Cooperative Housing

[ii] Condominiums

[iii] Cemetery Lots and Burial Rights

[c] Investment Programs in Personal Property

[d] Pyramids, Multi-level Distributorships and Franchises

[e] Insurance and Annuities

[f] Equity-Indexed Annuities

[g] Viatical and Life Settlements

§ 2.09 Risk Capital as Defining the Existence of a Security

[1] Risk Capital--Generally

[2] Memberships

§ 2.10 Other Categories of Securities

[1] Certificate of Interest or Participation in Any Profit Sharing Agreement

[2] Any Interest or Instrument Commonly Known as a Security

[3] Foreign Currency

[4] Miscellaneous Securities

16 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.01

§ 2.01 In General--The Meaning of "Security"

"Security" is a defined term in all state securities laws. Although the typology and construction of some state definitions may differ in ways that can be significant in particular situations, the common elements of each are distilled in the Uniform Securities Act, which provides:

"Security" means any note; stock; treasury stock; bond; debenture; evidence of indebtedness; certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement; collateral trust certificate; preorganization certificate or subscription; transferable share; investment contract; voting trust certificate; certificate of deposit for a security; certificate of interest or participation in an oil, gas, or mining title or lease or in payments out of production under such a title or lease; or, in general, any interest or instrument commonly known as a "security," or any certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase any of the foregoing. "Security" does not include any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay a fixed sum of money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or for some other specified period.ⁿ¹

Like their federal counterparts, state definitions of "security" are drafted sufficiently broad to include the types of instruments most generally perceived in the commercial world to be securities, while also encompassing less familiar forms and unconventional categories, such as "investment contracts." The intention is not to cabin the scope of blue sky law coverage. This is particularly evidenced in section 102(28) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which expressly includes categories of options, derivatives and foreign currency-based securities that were not included in the original Uniform Act definition, as well as spelling out the application of the Act to both certificated and uncertificated securities. The 2002 Uniform Act also identifies specific elements of an "investment contract" within the scope of the definition, and makes clear that an investment contract includes interests in limited partnerships, limited liability companies and viatical settlements or other similar agreements.ⁿ²

The historic mission of state blue sky laws is to protect the investing public from spurious "investment" schemes, abuses and exploitation. Thus the manner in which the breadth and scope of statutory definitions of "security" have been interpreted and applied is typified by the observation of the California Supreme Court that: "Whether a particular instrument is to be considered a security within the meaning of the statute is a question to be determined in each case. In arriving at a determination the courts have been mindful that the general purpose of the law is to protect the public against unsubstantial, unlawful and fraudulent stock and investment schemes."ⁿ³

Blue sky laws establish special protections for purchasers of securities. Historically, these protections have in many states included intervention in the offering or selling process via "merit" regulation, in which a regulatory authority is positioned between issuers and potential investors for the purpose of determining essential fairness and, basically, to make a determination whether citizens should be permitted to consider the offering. The interventionist role of blue sky regulatory authority was significantly altered by enactment of the federal National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996 (NSMIA),ⁿ⁴ which eliminated most state regulatory authority over securities offerings that are national in character. Today, broad anti fraud provisions and associated enforcement powers are the primary focus of blue sky regulation in this setting,ⁿ⁵ while state regulatory authority over market intermediaries--broker-dealers, salespersons, and many investment advisers--remains in place in all settings.ⁿ⁶ Also, special private remedies that are relatively easy to invoke and generally free of constraints that would apply to common law tort or other remedies have not been affected.ⁿ⁷

As a practical matter, even before NSMIA, the impact of state blue sky laws on the offering and sale of securities that became NSMIA "covered securities" had substantially diminished as a result of other evolving regulatory changes. Nevertheless, NSMIA has operated to underscore the core mission of blue sky regulation to prevent the victimization of persons who cannot act for their own protection against fraud and overreaching in local or regionalized "investment" settings. Myriad scams and schemes for separating people from their money constantly mix with legitimate undertakings in capital formation for the pursuit of worthy and desirable business ventures. From the solicitation of elderly pensioners for unsecured "loans" on the promise of above-market interest payments to finance a risky start-up enterprise unable to secure financing elsewhere, to the sale of pay telephones promising extra income with little or no work, to "investment" agreements for blind venture capital pools, state securities regulators and blue sky laws under which they operate are in the post-NSMIA regulatory environment more focused than ever on assuring fairness and honesty in dealing with people who are in fact investors, and with situations in which the need for special protections of state securities laws is evident. The key to it all, however, is the presence of a "security."

The statutory definition of "security" in any state's blue sky law is in reality an amalgam of circumstances in which the potential for a specialized notion of "investment" fraud and abuse is ever present. In all its forms, a "security" is a type of property or an interest in an enterprise marked by characteristics that demonstrate the need for such special protection. All states define the term with a list of specific instruments and interests like that in the Uniform Act, but the existence of a security is not a matter of a particular form. It is rather a function of a set of characteristics and a relationship between parties involving aspects of ownership and control, access to information that is necessary to assess risk, and legitimate perceptions and expectations. The particular instruments and interests identified in the definition provisions of blue sky laws are there because they embody these characteristics and relationships. State regulators and courts have followed the lead of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the federal courts in considering specific forms and instruments within definitions of "security," and especially in identifying the essential elements that define the scope of categories of securities such as "investment contracts." Indeed, where the Uniform Act is involved, such coordination is mandated.ⁿ⁸

Nevertheless, states have not been constrained by binding federal precedent in defining the term "security." As the California Supreme Court has stated, the focus of blue sky laws is on "unsubstantial, unlawful and fraudulent" investment schemes.ⁿ⁹ State regulators may well proceed in the exercise of investigative and enforcement authority on the basis of perceptions, or in more practical terms, a "smell" test that is the product of the historically paternalistic mission to protect people from "bad" investments. In dealing with such schemes state regulators and courts have had the freedom to craft a notion of the term "security" that is in some applications considerably broader than its federal counterpart, but which best effectuates the purpose of blue sky laws.ⁿ¹⁰ This is perhaps best illustrated by development at the state level of the concept of "risk capital" as a fundamental characteristic of a security transaction, and the notion that a "paradigmatic" security may be identified by circumstances in which the realization of value or a future return objective of the suppliers of capital is dependent upon the use to which it is put in a venture in which the investor has no meaningful participation.ⁿ¹¹

Four essential elements have been articulated under the concept of risk capital:

- (1) An offeree furnishes initial value to an offeror;
- (2) a portion of this initial value is subjected to the risks of an enterprise;
- (3) the furnishing of the initial value is induced by the offeror's promises or representations that give rise to a reasonable understanding that a valuable benefit of some kind, over and above the initial value, will accrue to the offeree as a result of the operation of the enterprise; and
- (4) the offeree does not receive the right to exercise practical and actual control over the managerial decisions of the enterprise.ⁿ¹²

"Risk capital" as a defining concept in identifying a security is grounded in the notion of the risk to initial value given up in capital formation for an enterprise rather than the risk of the future operation of that enterprise. Where one provides the risk capital that is to be used to form and develop an enterprise, it is the initial risk that is meaningful. Indeed it is only because of that risk that there is any chance the enterprise will produce future profits. The emphasis in risk capital analysis is on the original value that could be lost because of the failure of an enterprise over which the buyer exercises no managerial control rather than the expectation of future gains or an income stream. But whether the focus is on risk to initial value or, as will be examined below, an expectation of future profits, the constant in all determinations is the extent of practical control over management of the business enterprise.ⁿ¹³

Despite its prominence in state securities law,ⁿ¹⁴ the risk capital approach to defining the existence of a security is only one available test for the existence of a security. "Investment contract" analysis, the progeny of the 1946 U.S. Supreme Court decision in SEC v. W.J. Howey & Co. ⁿ¹⁵ is also commonly applied among the states. "Investment contracts" are present in circumstances involving the tripartite combination of: (a) an investment of money; (b) in a "common enterprise"; (c) where the investor is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of a promoter or third party.ⁿ¹⁶ Still, the notion of risk capital is fundamental, and underlies any definition category of a security. "Investment contracts" are securities on the basis of the Howey criteria because of the presence of investment risk, that is, the separation of ownership of an asset from its value determinants. A security is present where the value of a thing purchased, or the value itself given up, is either presently or in the future a function of something other than the thing itself, and the realization of expected value is beyond the meaningful control of the "investor."

State courts have been cognizant of this baseline principle which defines the existence of a security, and have looked upon the "risk capital" approach as being:

[A] reasonably sound [approach] both from the standpoint of providing a pattern within which to compare the format, structure and scheme of the offering, and also providing the requisite flexibility demanded by the economic realities of modern day business ingenuity.ⁿ¹⁷

Thus, "risk capital" has played a prominent role in the formulation of common characteristics or factors used to characterize all securities. In Grand Prairie Savings and Loan Ass'n v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A., ⁿ¹⁸ for example, the Arkansas Supreme Court identified five "significant common factors" of any security: (1) the investment of money or money's worth; (2) investment in a venture; (3) the expectation of some benefit to the investor as a result of the investment; (4) a contribution towards the risk capital of the venture; and (5) the absence of direct control over the investment or policy decisions concerning the venture.ⁿ¹⁹ This amalgam of risk capital and Howey investment contract elements was expressly endorsed by a Tennessee criminal appeals court as "the Howey-risk capital test, as stated in Hawaii Market,"ⁿ²⁰ as best effectuating the remedial purpose of the blue sky law to protect the public from fraud. The

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.01

Tennessee court characterized the combined approach as being slightly more liberal than that which the federal authorities standing alone supply, and as allowing explicit statements of elements, in layman's terms, that are important in the instruction of juries.ⁿ²¹

Several states incorporate the notion of risk capital directly into the definition provisions of their blue sky laws. The Washington blue sky law, for example, provides that the definition of security includes an:

[I]nvestment of money or other consideration in the risk capital of a venture with the expectation of some valuable benefit to the investor where the investor does not receive the right to exercise practical and actual control over the managerial decisions of the venture.ⁿ²²

The focal point of a transaction may be a conventional, recognizable instrument such as common stock. Where instruments so commonly recognized as securities are involved, much of the case law now teaches that the fact that such instruments are securities is proved by the instrument itself. As the U.S. Supreme Court observed in regard to common stock in Reves v. Ernst & Young: "[T]he public perception of common stock as the paradigm of a security suggests that stock in whatever context it is sold, should be treated as within the ambit of the [federal] Acts."ⁿ²³

It is fair to conclude that the characteristics of "stock" in most corporate settings present the risk characteristics that are basic to any security transaction, and evoke concerns for "investor" protection that underlie blue sky laws. That is not always the case however. Where a "corporate" relationship is in fact only a general partnership or joint venture in a corporate form, the stock involved may not be deemed to be a security for purposes of blue sky law remedies. An Illinois Court of Appeals, emphasizing that "form is not to be regarded over substance," thus held that corporate stock purchased by one who became president of the enterprise and was responsible for client development, sales and operations was not a security. The transaction was instead, the court opined, "a creation of a partnership in a corporate form."ⁿ²⁴

To identify a security in any setting, a baseline investment risk must actually be present. Many bank instruments fall within the literal definition of securities under state blue sky laws as, for example, evidences of indebtedness. Yet, as the Nebraska Supreme Court counseled in Wrede v. Exchange Bank of Gibbon,ⁿ²⁵ certificates of deposit in a state chartered, federally insured, bank involve virtually guaranteed full payment and no assumption of the risk of a borrower's insolvency. Thus, the court stated that the loan of money to a heavily regulated banking institution at a fixed rate of interest with virtually no risk of loss would not fall within the ambit of the Blue Sky law.ⁿ²⁶

On the other hand, in 2004 the U.S. Supreme Court made clear in SEC v. Edwards ⁿ²⁷ as a matter of federal securities law that the focus is on investments in whatever form they are made and by whatever name they are called. In Edwards, which involved a passive sale and leaseback program for pay telephones promising a low risk fixed rate of return, the Supreme Court dispelled any notion that an investment within the ambit of securities law protections can only involve "profit" of an uncertain or variable nature. The fact that investors have bargained for a fixed return, said the Court, does not make any difference when the investor is attracted by representations of investment income, whether fixed or variable. Nor does it change the fact that whatever return is promised is dependent on the efforts of others.ⁿ²⁸

Nevertheless, what one might characterize as an "investment" in an attempt to invoke blue sky law protections may be viewed quite differently by another given the particular circumstances. In State v. Hood,ⁿ²⁹ the Kansas Supreme Court affirmed a lower court determination that insufficient evidence was presented to support criminal charges that a defendant violated that state's blue sky law by personally utilizing funds allegedly given for the purpose of an investment in a business enterprise. The putative victim had purchased a percentage interest in the business, but the court stated that while a wide variety of schemes, plans and arrangements have been held to constitute "investment" contracts, the written agreement by which the money was paid did not evidence that the money was to be invested in the business and become a part of the capital of the company. The court went on:

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.01

Expansion or improvement of the business by virtue of the $15,000 is not mentioned. Nothing in the contract indicates that the business will, in any way, be affected by the transaction. Rather, it is a side agreement between the owner of an interest in the business to sell part of his interest in the business. Based upon the agreement itself, Bowe could have no claim against the business itself, as a separate entity, as his money is not going to the business.ⁿ³⁰

There is always a challenge of assessing facts and circumstances in order to accept or reject the presence of a security where "paradigmatic" instruments are not involved. Indeed, as noted above, even where "stock" is present, the conclusion is not so simple. In all cases, evidence of actual risk capital and the baseline elements of any security transaction must be shown. To be sure, however, the greater challenge comes when the focus is on some other more esoteric, undefined category of a security in a blue sky law definition, such as "investment contract," or "certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement."

The issue in defining a security under blue sky laws is not the form of an instrument. Rather, what matters are the risk characteristics of the thing being examined, and the relationship between the parties that is created. As a Missouri court of appeals has counseled, one must look beyond the surface of a transaction or instrument "to examine the substantive relationship between the investors and the promoter of the investment and the economic realities surrounding the management and operation of the endeavor" to determine the existence of a security, regardless of terminology employed.ⁿ³¹ For example, state courts often consider whether "partnership" or "joint venture" interests are securities. A true general partnership or joint venture relationship is premised upon the ability and active involvement of each participant in the operation and control of an enterprise or undertaking, and thus, no security will be found in those circumstances.ⁿ³² However, a "general partnership" interest will be deemed to be a security where a "partner" is totally dependent on other partners for the operation of the business and lacks knowledge and experience necessary to be actively involved. In such situations, the partner is in reality an investor, who has no control over risks and who is merely a passive contributor of risk capital.ⁿ³³ That is why the notion of risk capital in defining a security is not only useful, but prevalent in one form or another, in blue sky analyses.

Three critical elements apply for purposes of identifying a security in any form under state blue sky laws:

- (1) present or future value being determined by something other than the thing itself;
- (2) separation of ownership from value determinants; and
- (3) disparate positions of a purchaser and seller with respect to information with which to evaluate risk.

State courts and securities regulators confront myriad "investment" programs or undertakings. Such programs may involve: oil, gas, or mineral interests; real estate; small business financing arrangements; "memberships"; promissory notes; distributorships; franchises; and various forms of personal property, from stamps and other collectibles to precious metals. By themselves, these things do not possess attributes which define the presence or absence of a security. External considerations become the key. Indeed, it is the meaning of value in all these things that translates "investment" expectations into the presence of a security for purposes of blue sky law protections.

There may be some intrinsic value in any thing or asset purchased. But such value does not reach the level of defined investment characteristics for purposes of securities laws. If the real value is the expected return the purchaser looks to derive from an enterprise or undertaking associated with the thing purchased, the risk of which the purchaser has no meaningful power to control or manage, then in the most practical terms the value given for the thing is true risk capital, and a security is most likely to be found.

It may also be that an asset purchased has no value apart from an enterprise. In an early examination of the meaning of security for purposes of the federal securities laws, the U.S. Supreme Court held in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp.

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.01

n34 that the sale of assignments in oil leases was the sale of securities because the assignments (interests in real property) only had value because of the opportunity to share in discovery values that might follow the drilling of a test well nearby. The Court observed: "[T]he undertaking to drill a well runs through the whole transaction as the thread on which everybody's beads were strung...".n35 The assignments were essentially worthless but for the test well and the prospect of its success.

In Joiner, the Supreme Court also noted that the assignments had been held out as "investments" and that promotional efforts and literature fostered purchasers' investment expectations. Thus, the Court further declared: "In the enforcement of an Act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be."n36 State courts have shown no less willingness to enforce investment protections where promotional efforts induce such expectations. A New York court, for example, held the sale of diamonds, touted as "investments" and a hedge against inflation, to be securities for purposes of that state's blue sky law. The investment oriented promotional campaign was central to the court's analysis:

Although the petitioners believe that it is crystal clear that the subject matter of sales by Diamond Resources Corporation are in the same nature as the sale of any item of personal property, and that the fact that a diamond may often have value as an investment does not change the nature of the transaction, it is also true that the manner in which an item is sold and presented to the buying public is very often a factor, if not the major one, in determining the nature of the relationship between the seller and the purchaser of an item.n37

Motivations for entering into transactions and the reasonable expectations of the public concerning what is being offered by a promoter are now benchmarks of any security transaction. Indeed, in Reves v. Ernst & Young n38 the U.S. Supreme Court articulated criteria of general application in determining the existence of a security as follows:

- (1) the motivations that prompt reasonable parties to enter into the transaction;
- (2) the "plan of distribution" involved;
- (3) the reasonable expectations of the investing public concerning the instrument involved; and
- (4) the presence of any factor which significantly impacts the risk associated with the particular instrument.n39

These are benchmarks of any security transaction. Taken together with the baseline notion of risk capital, they shape the definition of a security under state blue sky laws with a series of inquiries.

First, what is actually being acquired in the transaction? If the value of the thing or asset purchased is significantly measured by the thing itself, i.e., its own worth, the presence of a security is less likely. Second, what is the post acquisition value of the thing, and what determines that value? If the motivation for the transaction is an expected return that is dependent upon factors not within the control of the purchaser, the presence of a security is indicated. Similarly, investment risk, and the presence of a security, is indicated where information bearing upon the validity of the purchaser's expectations is within the control of the seller. The purchaser is either denied or has no ability to obtain information with which to evaluate risk/return characteristics for the future. Such an evaluation was a mainstay of traditional merit regulation of securities offerings under state blue sky laws for decades, and the concern for it will continue to drive applications of their remedial provisions to prevent fraud or deception in the state/federal regulatory environment since redefined by NSMIA.

In the sections that follow, the enumerated instruments and categories of securities commonly defined as securities in state blue sky laws are examined. In each case the important inquiry and explanation is not what is listed in blue sky law definitions of security, but why particular categories or instruments are listed. With such an explanation the mission of blue sky laws will not only be better understood in the myriad circumstances in which state courts, securities regulators and the public consider the need for special protection, but the operation of the blue sky laws will be more efficient.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unif. Securities Act § 401(l). The Uniform Act definition closely tracks the definitions of security found in both the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Section 2(1) of the Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77(b)(1), for example, provides:

[U]nless the context otherwise requires--

The term "security" means any note, stock, treasury stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement, collateral trust certificate, preorganization certificate or subscription, transferable share, investment contract, voting trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security, fractional undivided interest in oil, gas or other mineral rights, any put, call, straddle, option or privilege on any security, certificate of deposit, or group or index of securities (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof), or any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currency, or, in general, any interest or instrument commonly known as a "security," or any certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, receipt for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the foregoing.

The Exchange Act contains a definition of "security" which is virtually identical to that in the Securities Act as to enumerated instruments and categories. See 15 U.S.C. § 78c(10).

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Securities Act § 102(28). The 2002 Uniform Act has been enacted (although may not yet be effective) in Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas, South Dakota, Idaho, Iowa, South Carolina, Maine, Vermont, Minnesota, Hawaii, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. It is under active consideration in several other states, including Alaska, Alabama, Nebraska, Virginia, and Michigan. The 2002 Uniform Act is reproduced in its entirety in Volume 2, below.

(n3)Footnote 3. People v. Figueroa, 41 Cal. 3d 714, 736, 224 Cal. Rptr. 719, 715 P.2d 680 (1986) ; see also Cellular Engineering, Ltd. v. O'Neill, 118 Wash. 2d 16, 23, 820 P.2d 941 (1991) (The primary purpose of the Securities Act is to "protect investors from speculative or fraudulent schemes of promoters"); All Seasons Resorts, Inc. v. Abrams, 68 N.Y.2d 81, 86, 87, 506 N.Y.S.2d 10, 497 N.E.2d 33, 35 36 (1986) ("We are mindful that the statute, as part of New York's blue sky law, should be liberally construed to give effect to its remedial purpose of protecting the public from fraudulent exploitation in the offer and sale of securities").

Note too that the definition of "security" for purposes of blue sky regulation is independent of any other statutory definition. In Bahre v. Pearl, 595 A.2d 1027 (Me. 1991), for example, the court cautioned that different underlying purposes of the Uniform Commercial Code and the state blue sky law mandate that the definitions of "security" in each be considered separate and distinct, and that the blue sky definition must be applied to effectuate the purpose of the law, which is to protect investors from speculative or fraudulent investment schemes.

But see Gutmann v. Feldman, 97 Ohio St. 3d 473, 2002-Ohio-6721, 780 N.E.2d 562, in which the Ohio Supreme Court held that an oral contract could not constitute a security under the Ohio blue sky law, which required a certificate or other written instrument. The holding was subsequently overturned by an amendment to the Ohio law, such that a security may now be an "oral, written or electronic agreement, understanding or opportunity," O.R.C. § 1707.01(B). However, the case suggests that an overarching remedial purpose will not supplant unambiguous statutory language for purposes of defining a security. This is also clearly the message of Thomas v. State, 65 S.W.3d 38 (Tex. Crim. App.

2002), in which the Texas court concluded that for an "evidence of indebtedness" to be a security under that state's Blue Sky law, a writing must be involved.

(n4)Footnote 4. P.L. 104 290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996). NSMIA replaced, in its entirety, Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r, which had preserved broad regulatory authority to the states, with a new scheme of allocated federal and state authority based upon the nature of a securities offering. The impact of NSMIA on state regulatory authority generally is considered in detail in ch. 5, below. Merit regulation, to the extent it remains intact, is considered further in ch. 5, below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See ch. 15 below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See ch. 11 below.

(n7)Footnote 7. See ch. 15 below.

(n8)Footnote 8. As a matter of "statutory policy," section 415 of the Uniform Act declares:

This act shall be so construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it and to coordinate the interpretation and administration of this act with the related federal regulation. (Emphasis added).

See also 2002 Unif. Securities Act § 608(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. People v. Figueroa, 41 Cal. 3d 714, 736, 224 Cal. Rptr. 719, 715 P.2d 680 (1986).

(n10)Footnote 10. Divergence between state and federal approaches is well illustrated by the treatment of "viatical settlements" under state and federal definitions. Viatical settlements, considered in more detail in § 2.08[2][g] below, involve the purchase by a third party of part of the life insurance policy of a terminally ill person in advance of that person's death. The offer and sale of such interests to the public by intermediary firms has been challenged under state and federal securities laws. In SEC v. Life Partners, Inc., 322 U.S. App. D.C. 189, 102 F.3d 587 (D.C. Cir. 1996), a federal appeals court held that viatical settlements do not constitute "investment contracts" as a matter of federal law. In sharp contrast, state securities regulators almost universally hold that viatical settlements are securities, and several blue sky laws have been amended expressly to include them in the statutory definition. State regulators have concluded that viatical settlements involve risks that investors may not realize exist and that unscrupulous promoters may misrepresent or fail to disclose.

(n11)Footnote 11. In People ex rel. Bender v. Wind River Mining Project, 219 Cal. App. 3d 1390, 269 Cal. Rptr. 106 (1990), for example, a California appellate court declared that "[o]ur Corporate Securities Law was designed broadly to regulate all transactions by which promoters go to the public for risk capital." Gold production and delivery agreements sold in connection with a difficult and speculative mining operation were securities, said the court, because purchasers acquired only a "right and a hope," and that whether gold would ever be provided was dependent upon the use of the purchasers' risk capital raised through selling the certificates. 219 Cal. App. at 1402.

(n12)Footnote 12. State by Commissioner of Sec. v. Hawaii Mkt. Ctr., 52 Haw. 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Cox v. Lemond, 107 Ohio App. 3d 442, 669 N.E.2d 23 (1995). In Cox, the court embraced the risk capital criteria for defining the existence of a security, but applying them it affirmed a trial court finding that no security was present in a partnership setting in which the controlling agreement between the parties allowed for sharing significant amounts of control over daily managerial matters by the plaintiff.

(n14)Footnote 14. The "risk capital" approach to defining the existence of a security under state blue sky laws is more thoroughly considered in § 2.08[3], below.

(n15)Footnote 15. 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244 (1946) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 328 U.S. at 298-99 , 66 S. Ct. at 1102-03 , 90 L. Ed. at 1249-1250. Investment contracts are discussed in detail in § 2.08 below.

(n17)Footnote 17. State v. George, 50 Ohio App. 2d 297, 302, 362 N.E.2d 1223, 1227 (1975).

(n18)Footnote 18. 298 Ark. 542, 769 S.W.2d 20 (1989) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Id. at 22 ; see also Cook v. Wills, 305 Ark. 442, 808 S.W.2d 758 (1991) .

(n20)Footnote 20. State v. Brewer, 932 S.W.2d 1 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1996) .

(n21)Footnote 21. A sense of "common" characteristics or common usage of the term security is also evident in this observation of the Kansas Supreme Court in State v. Hodge, 204 Kan. 98, 460 P.2d 596, 601-602 (1969):

By common usage ... the term has acquired a much broader meaning. It is now generally used to refer to instruments for the payment of money, or evidencing title or equity with or without some collateral obligation, and which are commonly dealt in for the purpose of financing and investment. Instruments, whether secured or unsecured, which are used for the purpose of financing enterprises and promoting a distribution of rights in or obligations of such enterprises, and which are designed as a means of investment, are termed "securities."

(n22)Footnote 22. R.C.W. § 21.20.005(12).

The Risk Capital approach to defining a security is discussed specifically in § 2.09, below.

(n23)Footnote 23. 494 U.S. 56, 62, 110 S. Ct. 945, 949 50, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47, 58 , reh'g denied, 494 U.S. 1092, 110 S. Ct. 1840, 108 L. Ed. 2d 968 (1990) . The observation presupposes that the "stock" involved actually exhibits traditional corporate attributes. Earlier, in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) , the Court held that shares of "stock" in a state subsidized housing cooperative were not securities as a matter of federal law. The shares had none of the traditional characteristics of corporate stock, and did not evoke any notion of an investment security. "Common sense suggests that people who intend to acquire only a residential apartment in a state subsidized cooperative, for their personal use, are not likely to believe that in reality they are purchasing investment securities simply because the transaction is evidenced by something called a share of stock." 421 U.S. at 851, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631 .

"Stock" as a security under state blue sky laws is considered further at § 2.02 below.

(n24)Footnote 24. Doherty v. Kahn, 289 Ill. App. 3d 544, 682 N.E.2d 163, 224 Ill. Dec. 602 (1997). "Stock" as a security under blue sky laws is considered in detail in § 2.02, below.

(n25)Footnote 25. 247 Neb. 907, 531 N.W.2d 523 (1995) .

(n26)Footnote 26. The Nebraska court's conclusion follows from that of the United States Supreme Court in Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982) , in which the Court held that a certificate of deposit issued by a regulated, federally insured bank is not a security for purposes of the federal securities laws.

See also Hooper v. McCray, 593 So. 2d 1018 (Ala. 1992) ("Insured premium money market investment account" is not a security).

(n27)Footnote 27. 540 U.S. 389, 124 S. Ct. 892, 157 L.Ed.2d 813 (2004) .

(n28)Footnote 28. Edwards focused on the offer and sale of pay telephones with an agreement under which the seller leased back the payphone from the purchaser for a fixed monthly payment. The U.S. Supreme Court concluded that the sale and leaseback program constituted an investment contract despite the fixed annual return. Pay telephone sale and leaseback programs have received a great deal of attention by state courts and securities regulators as investment contracts, and are considered further in § 2.08[1][c], below.

(n29)Footnote 29. 255 Kan. 228, 873 P.2d 1355 (1994) .

(n30)Footnote 30. 255 Kan. at 232 .

(n31)Footnote 31. State v. Kramer, 804 S.W.2d 845 (Mo. Ct. App. 1991).

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g., Sparks v. Baxter, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,781 (5th Cir. 1988) (applying Texas law).

(n33)Footnote 33. State v. Anderson, 203 Wis. 2d 271, 551 N.W.2d 870 (1996) (defendant had exclusive control over the business operations as operating partner and the remaining partners had virtually no right to direct, control or influence the business operations); Casali v. Schultz, 292 Ark. 602, 732 S.W.2d 836 ; see Corporate East Associates v. Meester, 442 N.W.2d 105 (Iowa 1989).

(n34)Footnote 34. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943) .

(n35)Footnote 35. 320 U.S. at 348, 64 S. Ct. at 122, 88 L. Ed. at 91 . The Court added: "It is clear that an economic interest in this [enterprise] ... was what brought into being the interests that defendants were selling and gave to the instruments most of their value and all of their lure." 320 U.S. at 349, 64 S. Ct. at 122, 88 L. Ed. at 92 .

(n36)Footnote 36. 320 U.S. at 353, 64 S. Ct. at 124, 88 L. Ed. at 94 .

(n37)Footnote 37. In re Gardner, [1979 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,757 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979) (emphasis added); see also Anderson v. Grand Bahama Development Co., [1979 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,778 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979) (specific oral and written representations in promotional campaign).

But see Dept. of Commerce v. DeBeers Diamond Investment Ltd., 89 Mich. App. 406, 280 N.W.2d 547, 552 (1979) ("We do not read the cases interpreting the Uniform Securities Act and similar statutes as holding that advertisements which offer commodities as investments, coupled with a guarantee to buy the goods back at market price, are sufficient to transform a simple sale of personalty into an investment contract").

(n38)Footnote 38. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) .

(n39)Footnote 39. 494 U.S. at 66-67, 110 S. Ct. at 951-952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 60-61.

17 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.02

§ 2.02 Stock

"Stock" has been characterized as the "paradigm of a security,"ⁿ¹ and by the very label itself is the thing most immediately perceived to be a security among the list comprising state and federal statutory definitions. However, since the 1975 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman,ⁿ² in which the Court held that shares of "stock" in a state sponsored cooperative housing project were not securities within the ambit of the federal securities laws, it is certain that there is more to finding a security than looking to a label. The status of "stock" as a security is largely defined by a set of particular attributes or characteristics. These were identified by the Supreme Court in Forman as follows:

- (1) the right to receive dividends, when profits are apportioned;
- (2) negotiability;
- (3) the capacity to be pledged or hypothecated;
- (4) voting rights proportionate to the number of shares owned; and
- (5) the potential to appreciate in value.ⁿ³

These are the traditional attributes of corporate stock. They are appropriately amplified by the notion that stock represents an equity interest in a corporate enterprise, which carries with it the right not only to whatever return results from an income stream and/or capital gain, but ultimately an identifiable interest in the value of the corporate assets net of creditors. A share of "stock" possessing these attributes evidences each of the fundamental economic characteristics of any security. But its corporate sense also identifies "stock" as a standardized instrument in commerce. As such, the U.S. Supreme Court has further observed, it evidences the typical kind of context in which the securities laws normally operate.

In Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth,ⁿ⁴ and a companion case, Gould v. Ruefenacht,ⁿ⁵ the Supreme Court made clear that actual corporate stock possessing these traditional attributes is a security for purposes of the federal securities laws, regardless of the transactional setting in which the stock is involved. In Landreth and Gould the Court rejected the "sale of business" doctrine which had been formulated in several lower court decisions to deny protections of the federal securities laws to purchasers of all or substantially all of a corporation's stock to acquire control. Courts embracing the doctrine had held that despite the presence of corporate stock, no security should be found by reason of the control over the enterprise vested in the purchaser that was the result of the transaction. Notwithstanding this result, the Supreme Court found no good reason to excise traditional corporate stock from coverage of the securities laws, particularly where, contrasting Forman, the nature of the instrument itself would likely lead a purchaser to believe that securities law protections would apply.ⁿ⁶ The "sale of business" doctrine was thus rejected.

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.02

Landreth instructs a literal, or "plain meaning," reading of the definition of security where traditional corporate stock is the focus. Indeed, in Gould, the companion case, the Court stated:

In Landreth, we held that where an instrument bears the label "stock" and possesses all of the characteristics typically associated with stock, a court will not be required to look beyond the character of the instrument to the economic substance of the transaction to determine whether the stock is a "security" within the meaning of the Acts.ⁿ⁷

After Landreth, any "economic reality" or "economic substance" test for identifying a security should be strictly limited to those situations where the instrument involved is unusual and cannot be easily characterized as a security, or where it does not fall within the statutory definition. The point is well illustrated by the Hawaii Supreme Court decision in Fong v. Oh,ⁿ⁸ in which a lower court application of Hawaii's "risk capital" test to deny application of antifraud protections of the Hawaii Uniform Securities Act to the purchase of 100% of the stock of a corporation was flatly rejected. The lower court had not distinguished between "stock" and "investment contracts" as different types of securities for purposes of the Hawaii blue sky law. The Supreme Court, however, concluded that investment contract analysis is to be applied when an instrument does not fit within the specific types of securities delineated in the statute. The Landreth test, said the court, must be applied to determine whether an instrument labeled stock is a security.ⁿ⁹

Most state courts confronting the issue under blue sky law definitions have embraced this instruction as articulating a stock "characterization" test. Under this test, the controlling question is whether the stock is "traditional" stock, i.e., whether it bears such characteristics usually associated with corporate common stock that a purchaser justifiably may assume that securities laws apply. The Georgia Supreme Court has illustrated the approach:

Landreth Timber provides appropriate guidance in resolving issues of whether particular "stock" is a security under [the Georgia Securities Law]. In applying the Landreth stock characterization test to ... transaction[s] ... we will use a balancing test. The appropriate test to be employed is whether the ... stock bears such characteristics usually associated with common stock that a purchaser justifiably may assume that appropriate security laws apply.ⁿ¹⁰

And as a Georgia Court of Appeals further explained: "If, and only if, the stock does not satisfy these criteria, then the next inquiry is whether the stock qualifies as a security under [other 'economic reality' tests]"ⁿ¹¹ Other state courts have simply adopted Landreth as rejecting the "sale of business" doctrine,ⁿ¹² or as necessary to carry out the mandate for state/federal coordination codified in the Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ¹³ One state, Washington, has simply reaffirmed its pre Landreth principle that its blue sky law applies to transactions involving the transfer of all of the outstanding stock of a corporation in a face to face negotiated transaction.ⁿ¹⁴

On the other hand, the "literalist" approach of Landreth has not universally been embraced by state courts. In Anderson v. Heck,ⁿ¹⁵ a Louisiana appellate court clung fast to the notion that the use of stock in a transaction which is, in reality, a sale of the assets of a business should not be deemed to be a security transaction. Chief among its considerations was the fact that the buyer had free access to and ample opportunity to examine the financial records, assets and other matters relating to the business enterprise. The court took its cue from the point emphasized by Justice Stevens in his dissent in Landreth that: "I believe Congress wanted to protect investors who do not have access to inside information and who are not in a position to protect themselves from fraud by obtaining appropriate contractual warranties."ⁿ¹⁶

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.02

An Illinois appellate court in Saunders, Lewis & Ray v. Evans n17 refused to extend coverage of the blue sky law rescission remedy to an individual who, simultaneously with purchasing what was undeniably corporate stock, was elected to the corporation's board of directors and made an officer. The court made no mention of Landreth, relying instead on pre Landreth cases in the state, to deny coverage on the proposition that the blue sky law was not intended to protect a non passive investor who "occupies a position giving him control over his investment."n18 Another Illinois appellate court likewise refused to extend the protection of the antifraud provisions of that state's blue sky law to the sale of corporate stock in a transaction that, according to the court, involved only the creation of a partnership in a corporate form. In Doherty v. Kahn n19 the plaintiff exchanged his employees, equipment and existing business accounts for 65 percent of the stock of another business enterprise in which he became the president. Although the seller of the stock retained a 35 percent ownership interest, and thus the transaction did not represent the sale of the business, Illinois case authority establishes the principle that if in fact the transaction involves creation of a partnership, the corporation and the stock involved are only incidental, and no security is present.n20 In Doherty the court observed that the transaction involved the plaintiff becoming president of the business, and taking responsibility for client development, sales and operations. Plaintiff shared in the control and management of the business. These factors, said the court, made for the creation of a partnership "in corporate form." The sale of stock was insignificant.

These Illinois cases illustrate the application of a joint venture or partnership gloss to ostensibly corporate relationships. The corporate "stock" in the transaction, regardless of its characteristics, is deemed insignificant in relation to the direct, contributions to the success of the enterprise that are the true focus of a transaction in which the combination of resources is paramount to any "investment" characteristics. Such a gloss might easily be applied in common start-up or other entrepreneurial settings in which individuals combine financial, technical and management resources in the shared creation of an enterprise. In these settings it may not be inappropriate to entertain certain presumptions concerning the control relationship among the parties and the true nature of their association, so as to conclude that no one among them is an "investor" entitled to the protections of blue sky laws. This is clearly at the heart of considerations of "close corporation agreements" discussed further below.

There is a danger that in applying a judicial gloss to relationships, disparate positions among participants with respect to information necessary to evaluate the risk of going forward, as well as the extent to which a participant may in fact be separated from true value determinants are too easily missed in a simple application of a joint venture or partnership gloss to a corporate enterprise. The plaintiff in Doherty alleged that he had been duped into entering into the relationship. His powers after becoming part of the enterprise were, in effect, alleged to be meaningless in light of the fraud he claimed had been perpetrated on him in the first place. It is important in the application of a joint venture or partnership gloss on corporate relationships that the underlying presumptions are valid, and that true "investment" risk is in fact missing. Despite residual tension grounded in the fundamental mission of blue sky laws to protect innocent public investors in speculative ventures, most state courts confronting the issue recognize that Landreth specifically rejected the argument that the securities laws are intended to cover only passive investors and not privately negotiated transactions involving the transfer of control between entrepreneurs.n21

Many challenges to the application of blue sky laws come in close corporation settings, privately negotiated transactions which may or may not involve a transfer of control, and transactions in which, increasingly, a shareholder or "close corporation" agreement may impact the relationship between participants. After Landreth the primary inquiry is whether a true "corporate" relationship based upon stock ownership is presented. In Sulkow v. Crosstown Apparel, Inc., n22 for example, corporate stock of a closely held corporation involving three equal shareholders was held to be a security because the stock carried proportional voting rights, rights to dividends, and the capacity to appreciate in value. The fact that Crosstown was a close corporation, and that the shareholders' agreement placed limitations on transferability of the stock, was insufficient to negate the character of the stock as a security.n23

A "corporate" relationship evidenced by stock possessing traditional characteristics may, nevertheless, be sufficiently altered to affect the status of the instrument as a security. The advent of "close corporation agreements" as a matter of state corporation law adds such a wrinkle in post Landreth analyses. The goal of these agreements is to allow for negotiated shareholder rights and responsibilities, minority protections and, in effect, to allow closely held corporations and their shareholders to create a relationship and be governed as if the corporation were a partnership. The typical "close corporation agreement" authorized under state lawsⁿ²⁴ empowers shareholders to agree among themselves on such matters as:

- (1) control of management in the business and affairs of the corporation;
- (2) the power of one or more shareholders to require dissolution of the corporation;
- (3) voting rights and obligations;
- (4) the designation of officers and directors;
- (5) terms and conditions of employment of officers and other employees;
- (6) dividend policy;
- (7) the scope of directors' authority;
- (8) access to books and records;
- (9) limitations on the issuance of new shares;
- (10) deadlock resolution procedures.ⁿ²⁵

Interests in true general partnerships and joint ventures are not securities because of the presumption, if not the fact, of shared control.ⁿ²⁶ "Corporate" relationships which fairly approximate a partnership or joint venture between participants, whether or not by reason of a close corporation agreement may, at the very least, shift the "stock" involved from the traditional notion of a standardized instrument in commerce, so as to require an examination of "economic substance." In Cook v. Wills,ⁿ²⁷ for example, the Arkansas Supreme Court held that stock involved in the merger of two closely held realty companies did not constitute a security subject to the anti fraud provisions of the Arkansas blue sky law. The determination was premised on evidence which showed that the plaintiff purchaser was to provide the necessary skill and expertise in the operation of the combined entity, and that the main point of her receiving an interest in the new business was her future creative ability to be used in its behalf. There was no agreement defining the relationship. However, the case illustrates that there is considerable room for state courts to craft applications of blue sky laws in a manner that best effectuates investor protection.ⁿ²⁸

Securities law protections are fundamentally intended to extend to those persons who are divorced from control over the value determinants of what they hold, and who are informationally disadvantaged. Corporate stock is "literally" a security because its traditional attributes reflect the need for such protection, and because, in the main, its character in commerce is established. But state courts and securities regulators struggle with the notion where the fundamental aspects of a transaction are not truly "corporate." As illustrated by Cook, application of a joint venture gloss in any setting may still defeat security status despite the presence of stock.ⁿ²⁹

There will be other settings in which non traditional stock will compel close examination of the actual relationship of the parties and the enterprise. Membership participations in housing or business cooperatives, for example, may be evidenced by "stock," but Forman continues to counsel that housing cooperatives present a much different set of expectations and characteristics from those suggested by the label. Even where profit seeking business cooperatives are involved, federal regulatory experience indicates that true cooperative ventures, in which all members participate directly in management and, despite the presence of "stock," define the nature of their association and the instrument they hold in ways that differ from the traditional characteristics of the true corporate instrument, should not be deemed to involve a security.ⁿ³⁰

In the post Landreth era it is plain that "stock" is a security. Yet there is to be no absolutely "literal" application of securities laws where "stock" is the focal point. Innovations such as close corporation agreements and anything else that impacts the fundamental aspects of a security transaction must yet be confronted case by case to ascertain whether the traditional attributes signaled by the term "stock" are altered. What is certain, however, is that Landreth and its blue sky progeny focus attention on the reality of stock in a commercial universe rather than a transaction specific analysis of the meaning of the instrument for a particular purchaser.ⁿ³¹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Daily v. Morgan, 701 F.2d 496, 500 (5th Cir. 1983) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 421 U.S. at 851, 95 S. Ct. at 2060, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631-632. The "stock" involved in Forman possessed none of these characteristics and represented only the right to a residential apartment in the non profit co op project. No purchaser could rationally look upon the "stock" issued as presenting any investment decision. As the Court opined:

There is no doubt that purchasers in this housing cooperative sought to obtain a decent home at an attractive price. But that type of economic interest characterizes every form of commercial dealing. What distinguishes a security transaction--and what is absent here--is an investment where one parts with his money in the hope of receiving profits from the efforts of others, and not where he purchases a commodity for personal consumption or living quarters for personal use. 421 U.S. at 858, 95 S. Ct. at 2063, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 635 .

(n4)Footnote 4. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985).

(n5)Footnote 5. 471 U.S. 701, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See 471 U.S. 681, 693, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 2305, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692, 702 (1985) ("Persons trading in traditional stock have a high expectation that their activities are governed by the Acts").

(n7)Footnote 7. 471 U.S. 701, 704, 105 S. Ct. 2308, 2310, 85 L. Ed. 2d 708, 711 . The baseline premise in all this was stated by the Court in Landreth: "[s]tock" is relatively easy to identify because it lends itself to consistent definition... . Unlike some instruments, therefore, traditional stock is more susceptible of a plain meaning approach." 471 U.S. at 693.

See also Barnes v. Sunderman, 453 N.W.2d 793 (N.D. 1990) (corporate stock is traditional stock, and blue sky law applies).

Stock options, that is, standardized "put" or "call" options traded on national securities exchanges or over-the-counter, have also been held to fall within the purview of blue sky regulation. In State v. Davidson, 131 N.C. App. 276, 506 S.E.2d 743 (1998), the court affirmed the criminal conviction of a defendant who used funds obtained from others under false pretenses to engage in option trading for his own benefit. The defendant was convicted under antifraud provisions of the North Carolina blue sky law. On appeal, he argued, among other things, that his options trading did not meet the "security" requirement of the statute. Looking to federal authority, the North Carolina appeals court concluded that it is "well-settled" that stock options fall within the definition of security, and that defendant was properly convicted where the fraud or misrepresentation was directly or indirectly connected to the offer, sale, or purchase of these securities.

Options, warrants and contract rights associated with stock are discussed further as separately identifiable securities in § 2.06, below.

(n8)Footnote 8. Fong v. Oh, 116 Haw. 187, 172 P.3d 499 (2007).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fong v. Oh, 116 Haw. 187, 197, 172 P.3d 499 (2007); see also Disher v. Fulgoni, 161 Ill. App. 3d 1, 10, 514 N. E.2d 767, 772, 112 Ill. Dec. 949 (1987); see also Jabend, Inc. v. Four-Phase Systems, Inc., 631 F. Supp. 1339, 1342 (W.D. Wash. 1986) (in considering Washington state and federal definitions, the court stated: "After Landreth, an investment in common stock is presumptively an investment in a security. Thus, when faced with a claim involving an investment in common stock, a court should by pass the ... "economic reality" test, and begin its analysis under the Securities Acts").

(n10)Footnote 10. Cohen v. William Goldberg & Co., 262 Ga. 606, 607 423 S.E.2d 231, 233 (1992).

See also Andrews v. Browne, 276 Va. 141, 662 S.E.2d 58 (2008) (if an instrument bears the label "stock" and possesses all of the characteristics typically associated with stock, it is a security within the meaning of the Virginia Securities Act).

(n11)Footnote 11. Bell v. Sasser, 238 Ga. App. 843, 520 S.E.2d 287 (1999).

See also State v. Stuber, 25 Kan. App. 2d 254, 962 P.2d 1104 (1998), in which the court rejected the convicted defendant's argument that a Howey investment contract jury instruction should have been given. The court opined that a Howey instruction is not appropriate in transactions involving the sale of stock. The instruments involved, said the court, "looked like stock, bore all of the characteristics of stock, and were admitted to be stock." 25 Kan. App. at 262.

See also Manchester Mfg. Acquisitions v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 909 F. Supp. 47 (D.N.H. 1995) (sale of all stock of a distribution warehouse business was the sale of a security for application of the New Hampshire blue sky law); Barnes v. Sunderman, 453 N.W.2d 793 (N.D. 1990) (corporate stock in the sale of 50 percent interest of a business is traditional stock); Carver v. Blanford, 288 S.C. 309, 342 S.E.2d 406 (1986).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Sparling Plastic Indus. v. Sparling, 229 Mich. App. 704, 583 N.W.2d 232 (Mich. App. 1998); Banton v. Hackney, 557 So. 2d 807 (Ala. 1990); Barnes v. Sunderman, 453 N.W.2d 793 (N.D. 1990). Cf. Disher v. Fulgoni, 161 Ill. App. 3d 1, 514 N.E.2d 767 (1987) (the court found that voting trust certificates for stock were literally within the definition of security in the blue sky law and evidenced no unusual characteristics which, under Landreth, could override that inclusion).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Specialized Tours, Inc. v. Hagen, 392 N.W.2d 520 (Minn. 1986) (en banc).

In Manchester Mfg. Acquisitions v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 909 F. Supp. 47 (D.N.H. 1995), the court called for uniformity with the observation that since the definition of security' is substantially similar under both federal and state law, there is "no principled reason" to draw a distinction between the two given their collective protective purpose.

See also Kovatovich v. Barnett, 406 N.W.2d 516 (Minn. 1987) (en banc). In this typical "sale of business" setting, the Minnesota Supreme Court reluctantly embraced Landreth, but tacitly invited the legislature to act to correct what the court considered to be an inequitable result. The legislature later responded with an amendment to the Minnesota blue sky law to exclude the sale of 100 percent of the stock of a closely held corporation from coverage of the law. See Minn. Stat. § 80 A.14, Subd. 18.

(n14)Footnote 14. Aspelund v. Olerich, [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,231 (Wash.

1990); see Wisconics Engineering, Inc. v. Fisher, 466 N.E.2d 745 (Ind. Ct. App. 1984) (Pre Landreth, but applying prior authority rejecting the sale of business doctrine); see also Kovatovich v. Barnett, 406 N.W.2d 516 (Minn. 1987).

(n15)Footnote 15. 554 So. 2d 695 (La. Ct. App. 1989) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Id. at 711 , quoting Landreth (Stevens, J., dissenting).

But see In re Fontana D'Oro Foods, Inc., 65 N.Y.2d 886, 493 N.Y.S.2d 300, 482 N.E.2d 1216, 1217 (1985) ("Given the form of their transaction, whether the parties might really have intended to transfer control of an ongoing business enterprise, rather than stock, can have no bearing on this conclusion [that a security is present]").

(n17)Footnote 17. 158 Ill. App. 3d 994, 512 N.E.2d 59, 111 Ill. Dec. 155 (1987).

(n18)Footnote 18. 158 Ill. App. 3d at 995, 512 N.E.2d at 60.

(n19)Footnote 19. 289 Ill. App. 3d 544, 682 N.E.2d 163, 224 Ill. Dec. 602 (1997).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Condux v. Neldon, 83 Ill. App. 3d 575, 585, 404 N.E.2d 532 (1980).

(n21)Footnote 21. See also Anheuser-Busch Cos. v. Summit Coffee Co., 858 S.W.2d 928, 940 (Tex. App. 1993).

(n22)Footnote 22. 807 F.2d 33 (2d Cir. 1986) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See also Cohen v. William Goldberg & Co., 262 Ga. 606, 423 S.E.2d 231, 233 (1992) (court held that a shareholders' agreement providing restrictions on transfer and other rights impairing negotiability did not negate the character of the stock as a security).

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g., 8 Del. Code Ann. § 351; Ohio Rev. Code § 1701.591.

(n25)Footnote 25. The use of close corporation agreements to define the relationship and rights among participants has diminished to an appreciable degree in favor of the widespread use of limited liability companies (LLCs). In an LLC, the "members" define their rights and establish the control structure through an "operating agreement" that functions in the same manner as a close corporation agreement. LLCs do not establish as "corporate" relationship as such, and no "stock" is involved. Whether LLC interests are securities under Blue Sky laws has primarily been addressed through express inclusion of them as a category of security. The treatment of LLCs under state securities laws is presented in section 2.07[4], below.

(n26)Footnote 26. See §§ 2.07 and 2.08[2][a] below.

(n27)Footnote 27. 305 Ark. 442, 808 S.W.2d 758 (1991) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Huggins v. Chapin, 227 Ga. App. 340, 489 S.E.2d 109 (1997). In Huggins the purchaser of a ten percent ownership interest in a closely held corporation who claimed he was duped into investing by false information concerning the value of the company was deemed to have purchased an investment contract, and was thus entitled to invoke the protection of the Georgia blue sky law. There was no transfer of "stock," as such, as part of the transaction, only a later written affirmation that the plaintiff's investment represented a ten percent ownership interest. That interest entitled the plaintiff to share in the profits of the business relative to his ownership. In connection with the transaction, plaintiff was given the title Vice President of the company and was expected to engage in marketing activities, he had no executive or operational powers. All essential managerial control affecting the success or failure of the business rested with the defendant. The court found that although no "stock" was involved, the plaintiff's investment was nonetheless an investment contract.

(n29)Footnote 29. See also Goodman v. DeAzoulay, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P

99,140 (E.D. Pa. 1983) (what was clearly "stock" in the company was held not to be a security where the plaintiff was the president of the company and an active entrepreneur and participant in the management of its business).

But see Dinco v. Dylex Limited, 111 F.3d 964 (1st Cir. 1997) (applying New Hampshire law, the court cautioned that shareholders of a closely held corporation are not, ipso facto, partners).

See also Wakefield v. Crawley, 6 S.W. 3d 442 (Tenn. 1999), in which stock of a closely-held corporation was deemed to be within the definition of "security" under the Tennessee version of the Uniform Commercial Code because they are interests "of a type" commonly traded on securities exchanges.

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Seger v. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha, 850 F.2d 468 (8th Cir. 1988) (stock of Production Credit Association that borrowers were required to purchase as a condition to obtaining a loan not a security under the Nebraska blue sky law).

Seger is an example of a "cooperative" organization in which the objective of participants is often mutual benefit from something other than profits of a business enterprise. Typical characteristics of any cooperative association which negate the presence of a security include:

- (1) all members participate directly in management;
- (2) the "stock" involved is non negotiable, and may not be pledged or hypothecated;
- (3) the "stock" cannot appreciate in value, termination of membership requires sale back to the co op at a predetermined price, or in accordance with a set formula;
- (4) no dividends are paid; income distributions are repaid in accordance with contributions to the productivity of the enterprise.

See also, Front Street Supermarkets, Inc., No Action Letter, [1982-1983 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,352 (Div. Corp. Fin. 1982).

(n31)Footnote 31. The prominence of the "Limited Liability Company," another creation of state law, is today also a part of this analytical mix. The limited liability "company," a form of business organization affording "members" the limited liability associated with a corporation while at the same time permitting taxation of the entity as a partnership, is built around an operating agreement among members. The agreement prescribes the extent of participation in and control over the management of the enterprise. Examination of this form of business organization in light of state blue sky laws is presented in § 2.07[4], below.

18 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.03

§ 2.03 Notes and Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[1] Generally

The array of instruments defined to be securities in all state securities laws, the Uniform Acts,ⁿ¹ and both federal acts, is headed by "any note," and also expressly includes "evidence of indebtedness."ⁿ² Nevertheless, despite literal inclusion within the definition, it is clear on the face of most state statutes that not all notes or evidences of indebtedness are intended to be covered.ⁿ³ All states, for example, make distinctions among kinds of notes by providing exemptions from coverage of their blue sky laws for certain types of debt instruments, such as short term, prime quality, commercial paper. The Uniform Act is representative in its express exemption from coverage for "[a]ny commercial paper which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months of the date of issuance."ⁿ⁴

Other exemptions in state laws exclude some notes or evidences of indebtedness from coverage by reason of particular characteristics of the instrument or, more commonly, the circumstances or characteristics of the transaction in which it is utilized. Arizona, for example, defines security to include any note, but at the same time statutorily excludes from coverage notes secured by mortgages or deeds of trusts on real estate or chattels.ⁿ⁵ Ohio qualifies its entire list of instruments included within the statutory definition of security with the requirement that the instrument, inter alia, "represents title to or interest in or is secured by any lien or charge upon, the capital, assets, profits, property, or credit of any person..."ⁿ⁶ In all cases, statutory exclusions of some notes or evidences of indebtedness from coverage are the result of legislative determinations that some characteristic of the instruments or the set of circumstances in which they arise either affects their risk characteristics or otherwise negates concern for "investor" protection.ⁿ⁷ Specific exemptions of some classes of debt instruments from blue sky laws are strictly construed in favor of investor protection, and one claiming an exemption has the burden of proving its applicability. In Womack v. State,ⁿ⁸ for example, the defendant was convicted of selling unregistered promissory notes in violation of the Georgia blue sky law. Affirming the conviction, the Georgia Supreme Court rejected the defendant's assertion that because the notes involved matured in less than nine months they were exempt from registration. The defendant, said the court, did not carry his burden of demonstrating that the exemption was applicable. The mere fact that the note matured in less than nine months was held not dispositive in the face of the actual "character" of the instrument. "It is the character of the evidence of indebtedness, note or security, not its maturity date, which determines coverage under the Securities Act."ⁿ⁹ The court concluded that the "characteristics" of the notes made them investments, not commercial transactions in which, presumably, the nine month maturity exemption would be meaningful. Decisions such as this one may in many cases be colored by the fact that clever promoters seeking to rely on the nine month exemption may simply provide for continuing or automatic "rollovers" or renewals at the expiration of the stated term.ⁿ¹⁰

Nevertheless, state courts have historically approached the issue of notes and evidences of indebtedness as securities with a recognition that legislative intent for blue sky laws was not to bring every note or evidence of indebtedness, regardless of its nature and of the circumstances surrounding its issuance, within the definition of a security.ⁿ¹¹ All inclusive formulae by which every case can be tested have been eschewed in favor of case by case determinations carried out under the mantle of intended protection against fraudulent or abusive "investment schemes." State courts regularly extend the investor protections of blue sky laws to cover promissory notes where the circumstances are compelling. In Florida, for example, an appeals court acted "without hesitation" to conclude that transactions involving promissory notes represented an investment scheme, and to affirm the criminal conviction of a financial adviser under that state's blue sky law in circumstances in which multiple "investors" were offered opportunities to achieve high rates of return through the purchase of unsecured notes.ⁿ¹²

A California appellate court, affirming a trial court jury instruction, identified four prime elements or considerations in the analysis:

- (1) Whether funds are being raised for a business venture or enterprise;
- (2) Whether the promissory notes are indiscriminately offered to the public at large;
- (3) Whether the investors are substantially powerless to affect the success of the enterprise; and
- (4) Whether the investors' money was substantially at risk because it was inadequately secured.ⁿ¹³

The melding of risk capital into promissory note analyses is entirely consistent with state regulatory emphasis on actual "investment" characteristics of an instrument.

On the other hand, even in circumstances in which one "invests" money to fund the operations of a business enterprise, and thus provides risk capital, if the transaction amounts to nothing more than an ordinary secured commercial loan between two parties, no security will be found. In Carder v. Burrow, ⁿ¹⁴ for example, the plaintiff loaned money to an enterprise as an alternative to purchasing stock because of the added protection that would come with being a secured creditor. The loan was evidenced by a promissory note providing for interest at a variable rate, and collateralized by all of the furniture, fixtures, equipment and inventories of the business. A UCC security agreement was filed. The Arkansas Supreme Court affirmed a determination that the note was not a security under that state's blue sky law. The Supreme Court opined that the payment of interest, although at the highest rate that would be permitted, was not dependent upon the earnings of the company, and that repayment of the loan was expected regardless of profitability. There was no expectation of "profit," said the court, as if it were an investment transaction. The lender was a sophisticated businessperson who made a conscious choice to offer a commercial loan to the company rather than purchase stock. The loan was risk capital, and the lender was an investor in that sense. However, the transaction could only be viewed as an ordinary, isolated, commercial loan.ⁿ¹⁵

In the process of examining promissory notes and other evidences of indebtedness under blue sky laws, state courts have been guided by federal court considerations of the same issue arising under the federal securities laws.ⁿ¹⁶ State courts are most directly guided by the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Reves v. Ernst & Young.ⁿ¹⁷

In Reves, the Supreme Court clearly instructed that not all notes should be included in the definition of a security: "[T]he phrase 'any note' should not be interpreted to mean literally 'any note,' but must be understood against the backdrop of what Congress was attempting to accomplish in enacting the Securities Acts."ⁿ¹⁸ Because "note" is one of the items specifically included in the statutory definitions of security, there is a presumption, said the Court, that any note is a security. However, the presumption may be rebutted by a showing that a particular note strongly resembles one of the types of notes that have been recognized as not falling within the intended scope of the definition, as, for example, with notes used in commercial financing transactions. The particular kinds of instruments recognized in Reves as falling outside the intended coverage of securities laws, as well as the factors identified by the U.S. Supreme Court for application in making assessments whether other forms of instruments or notes in particular settings should be deemed to be securities, are considered in more detail later.ⁿ¹⁹ As a prelude, however, the particular insights offered by state courts where, not surprisingly, the issue of whether particular debt or debt-related instruments or transactions should be brought within the ambit of protection under blue sky laws is most often raised, is especially instructive.

A critical economic distinction between notes or evidences of indebtedness that are deemed to be securities and those that are not lies in the notion of risk capital. In what is ostensibly a debtor/creditor relationship, the important question is whether the "lender" is in fact contributing risk capital to an enterprise over which it neither exercises, nor has the ability to exercise, meaningful managerial control. As a judicially crafted "risk capital" test in its own right for determining the existence of a security, first articulated by the California Supreme Court in Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski,ⁿ²⁰ the focus is on protection of the public:

[A]gainst spurious schemes, however ingeniously devised, to attract risk capital ... [and] to afford those who risk their capital at least a fair chance of realizing their objectives in legitimate ventures whether or not they expect a return on their capital in one form or another.ⁿ²¹

Some states have built the notion of risk capital directly into their blue sky definitions of security. Washington, for example, includes the following in its definition:

"Security" means any ... investment of money or other consideration in the risk capital of a venture with the expectation of some valuable benefit to the investor where the investor does not receive the right to exercise practical and actual control over the managerial decisions of the venture...ⁿ²²

Such statutory incorporations of the "risk capital" test for a security are condensed restatements of the four elements of the test articulated by the Supreme Court of Hawaii in State v. Hawaii Market Center, Inc.,ⁿ²³ discussed earlier.ⁿ²⁴

Where notes and evidences of indebtedness are involved, the critical distinction to be made is between a true lender's risk and an investment risk. The former is typified by commercial debtor/creditor relationships in which the lender is presumed to be in a position to protect itself, or manage its own risk with such things as collateral, operational covenants and appropriate terms.ⁿ²⁵ In the latter, the lender is separated from risk determinants and is dependent upon, and induced to believe in, the success of the funded enterprise to realize an expected return.ⁿ²⁶ But a bona fide personal loan involving no expectation of a financial return that is dependent upon the borrower's entrepreneurial effort cannot be defined as having the risk characteristics of a security.ⁿ²⁷

The legitimate expectations of the parties is an important consideration. Purely commercial financing settings do not suggest any legitimate expectation of securities law protection. On the other hand, promotional characteristics and the economic reality of parting with true risk capital has a great deal to do with expectations and investment related protections.ⁿ²⁸

Investment oriented expectations are also involved in equity conversion or option features that are often attached to promissory notes given in return for funds advanced in the start up phase of an enterprise, or to meet particularly urgent needs for working capital. In Williams v. Waves, Cuts, Colour & Tanning, Inc.,ⁿ²⁹ a "loan" needed to pay taxes was to be repaid in shares of stock of the debtor corporation at some unspecified future time. The shares were never issued and the lender sued under the state blue sky law to recover the funds, alleging the unlawful sale of a security. The court opined that the promissory note, which promised that the investor would receive shares of stock in exchange for cash was a non exempt security and that the investor was entitled to protection under the statute. Williams illustrates a common mistake made in the capital formation process in small, entrepreneurial business settings. Simple "loans" or notes casually written to provide for conversion to, or exchange for, equity are serious hazards under state blue sky laws, and careful attention must be paid to the risk capital characteristics that are amplified by the plain "investment" expectations of generally unsophisticated persons who advance funds.

Risk capital analysis of a note or other evidence of indebtedness focuses on the relationship between the lender and borrower, and the nature of the risk to the value being given up by the lender. It is an "economic reality" oriented approach that is consistent with the traditional "investment contract" analysis that has long been a baseline test for determining the existence of a security under the federal securities laws. As articulated in SEC v. W.J. Howey Co.,ⁿ³⁰ an "investment contract" means: "[a] contract, transaction or scheme whereby a person invests his money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party...".ⁿ³¹ Among state courts, investment contract and economic reality analysis has signaled the necessity of looking through form to the substance of a transaction or relationship to determine whether a security is present.ⁿ³²

In the past, when applied to notes and evidences of indebtedness, this type of analysis produced the "commercial/investment dichotomy," with which both state and federal courts sought to identify particular instruments as securities by a set of characteristics, such as: (1) being offered to a broad class of people; (2) being obviously acquired for speculation or investment; or (3) being utilized by the "borrower" to acquire investment assets.ⁿ³³ "Commercial" characteristics were identified by considering such things as: (1) how a "reasonable businessman in the commercial world" might characterize the instrument; (2) the use of proceeds to finance consumer goods or particular business goods or services; or (3) the term or demand character of the instrument. Application of all the common commercial/investment criteria is illustrated by the following example in Oklahoma:

[A]ccording to the testimony presented at trial, the interest which the victim was to have received was indeterminate, and the victim received no goods or services for her check. Furthermore, the testimony indicated that the defendant approached [the victim] with the prospect of investing her money in order to receive a higher yield on it. All the evidence leads to the conclusion that the parties considered that [the victim] was making an investment. Finally, it appears that [the victim] was in the class of persons that the legislature was trying to protect in passing the Oklahoma Securities Act. She was an uninformed, elderly woman on a fixed income who could not afford to be bilked out of her money.ⁿ³⁴

However the dichotomy was constructed by courts, the common thread was the notion of risk capital. Recognition that there was good reason for including some notes and evidences of indebtedness within the definition of security, while excluding others, was largely a function of state court assessments of the circumstances in which the instruments were utilized, and whether there was serious concern for investor protection. The purpose of a transaction, the nature and determinants of risk, and the transaction setting are all important in determining whether the special protections of securities laws should apply.ⁿ³⁵

For example, scripted "boiler room" telephone solicitations of loans, and the resulting issuance of interest bearing promissory notes for small contributions from many people to fund activities of a political organization presented every reason for applying protections of the Virginia blue sky law in Ascher v. Commonwealth.ⁿ³⁶ Similarly, in State v. Taubman,ⁿ³⁷ promissory notes and written agreements evidencing "loans" solicited from numerous friends and business clients by a tax advisor to fund a nursing home development had plainly apparent investment characteristics:

Although Appellant characterized her activity as merely borrowing money from friends in exchange for high rates of interest, the "agreement" which was given many of the victims clearly was an "investment agreement"... . The agreement provided that the victims would give money to Taubman to invest as she saw fit. The agreement provided for guaranteed profits and possible profit sharing. In effect, Taubman operated a mutual fund for the benefit of the investors. The agreement even required that

Taubman give an accounting so that the victims could report "the investment" for federal income tax purposes.ⁿ³⁸

Still, the commercial/investment dichotomy produced no meaningful criteria or objective standards to be applied from case to case. At the federal level, this prompted some courts to articulate an alternative "family resemblance" test, under which any note or evidence of indebtedness is compared to a set of notes about which there is no doubt that no security was presented. Under this approach, every note (and logically every evidence of indebtedness)ⁿ³⁹ is, presumptively, a security unless it bears a "strong family resemblance" to a list of instruments involved in commercial or consumer financing settings.

The initial set of "family" instruments, first identified in Exchange National Bank v. Touche Ross & Co.,ⁿ⁴⁰ as plainly not involving securities, includes:

[T]he note delivered in consumer financing, the note secured by a mortgage on a home, the short term note secured by a lien on a small business or some of its assets, the note evidencing a "character" loan to a bank customer, short term notes secured by an assignment of accounts receivable, or a note which simply formalizes an open account debt incurred in the ordinary course of business (particularly if, as in the case of the customer of a broker, it is collateralized).ⁿ⁴¹

The appeal of a "family resemblance" test for determining whether a particular note or evidence of indebtedness is a security, and the presumption it embodies, is in the universal baseline it supplies. But it too is incomplete, since the list is not intended to be all inclusive. There must be criteria governing the determination whether other types of notes or evidences of indebtedness are to be added, and thus excluded from the definition. This task of filling this gap was taken on by the U.S. Supreme Court in Reves v. Ernst & Young,ⁿ⁴² which provides common guidance for all examinations of notes and evidences of indebtedness as securities.ⁿ⁴³

[2] Reves v. Ernst & Young: Family Resemblances

In Reves, the Supreme Court acted to resolve uncertainties surrounding the status of notes as securities. The Court eschewed the commercial/investment dichotomy and, in general, "economic reality" approaches to the question, in favor of adopting the "family resemblance" test articulated in Exchange National Bank v. Touche Ross & Co. as setting the parameters by which all notes would be evaluated for purposes of the federal securities laws. State courts have since uniformly looked to Reves in their own considerations.ⁿ⁴⁴

With the decision in Reves it is now presumed that every note is a security unless the presumption is rebutted by showing that a particular note bears a strong resemblance to identified categories of notes which are recognized as not constituting securities, or is one that should be added to the list of such exceptions.

Reves involved the issuance of variable rate demand notes by an agricultural cooperative. The notes were offered to a large number of people, including both members and non members of the co op, for the purpose of financing general business operations. The notes were marketed as an "investment program," and purchasers took them with the expectation of realizing an attractive interest rate set above that available from local financial institutions. In these circumstances the Supreme Court observed that from both sides a transaction involving these notes "[i]s most naturally conceived of as an investment in a business enterprise rather than as a purely commercial or consumer transaction."ⁿ⁴⁵ There was no resemblance between the notes and any category of non security note identified, and their status as securities was thus confirmed.

The Exchange National Bank "family" of notes excised from the definition of security includes those involved in consumer financing, residential mortgages, open account relationships and commercial lending.ⁿ⁴⁶ In Reves, the Supreme Court adopted that family.

The critical aspect of Reves, however, is not what is on the list of exclusions, but rather why a particular type of note either is or should be on it. The latter is important because the Court made clear that the Exchange National Bank list is not "graven in stone," and that it may be expanded. The myriad transactions and settings involving notes or other evidences of indebtedness which do not look at all like basic commercial or consumer credit instruments present the real test. For that analysis the Court acknowledged the need for standards, and articulated four controlling factors for determining whether a particular instrument should be added to the list:

- (1) the motivations that prompt reasonable parties to enter into the transaction;
- (2) the "plan of distribution" involved;
- (3) the reasonable expectations of the investing public concerning the instrument; and
- (4) the presence of any other factor which significantly impacts the risk associated with the particular instrument.ⁿ⁴⁷

Each of these criteria, in one form or another, earlier played an important role, either independently or as part of another "test," for answering the question whether notes are securities. Indeed, they combine to restate essential elements involved in any inquiry into the existence of a security previously undertaken by the Court.ⁿ⁴⁸ But their manner of presentation in Reves to explain why specific notes comprising the Exchange National Bank "family" are, conclusively, not securities, and to provide the means of assessing family resemblances of other notes is particularly instructive. This is especially true for state courts that historically have enjoyed greater freedom to define securities generally in terms of risk capital and promotional characteristics rather than the more constraining "investment contract" criteria that have shaped the contours of federal decisions.ⁿ⁴⁹

Post Reves, armed with the presumption of inclusion in the definition of security in their blue sky laws, state courts approach attempts to exclude promissory notes in particular settings with considerable confidence. Consider, for example, this assessment in Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Alaska:ⁿ⁵⁰

The notes in this case bear no resemblance at all to any of the routine commercial financing arrangements excluded from coverage by Reves and Touche Ross, nor has Caucus shown any reason to exclude these notes from coverage. The notes were sold in order to finance Caucus' fund raising activity, and [lenders] were both led to believe they would be repaid... . Emphasized in Reves was that the notes there, like the notes here, were specifically offered at an interest rate higher than [lenders] were earning on their investments... . Moreover, as in Reves, the plan of distribution here was coordinated and national in scope... . [Lenders] were not the only targets of Caucus; ten others have made similar loans in Alaska, and similar cease and desist orders have been issued in [other states ... Lenders] were led to believe and did believe that they would earn a profit; the "public's reasonable perceptions" of notes as investments militate in favor of finding a security... . Finally, the notes here were not collateralized or insured; thus, just as in Reves, there was no risk reducing factor cutting against a finding of security.ⁿ⁵¹

Cases like Caucus Distributors illustrate that the criteria articulated in Reves for assessing "family resemblance" are not characteristics of particular instruments or classes of instruments, but rather are transactional or circumstantial criteria. Such cases reflect the earlier observation of the Supreme Court in Marine Bank v. Weaver that: "[t]he test is what character the instrument is given in commerce by the terms of the offer, the plan of distribution, and the economic inducements held out to the prospect."ⁿ⁵² They also counsel that there will be relatively few instruments considered in the typical blue sky law enforcement setting that will conclusively be excluded from the definition of security by reason of "family resemblance."ⁿ⁵³ Case by case, circumstantial evaluation under the mantle of Reves criteria is the protocol. Thus, closer attention to each of the criteria is warranted.

[3] Factors for Evaluating Notes as Securities

[a] Motivations Associated with the Transaction

If the purpose of a transaction in which a note is used is to raise money for the general operations of an enterprise or to finance an investment, and the purchaser/lender is interested primarily in the "profit" the note is expected to generate, the instrument is less likely to be excluded from coverage by blue sky laws. "Profit" in this context was defined by the Supreme Court to mean "a valuable return on an investment." This definition, the Court said, is meant to be less restrictive than that used in other settings, such as where the existence of an "investment contract" form of security is at issue.ⁿ⁵⁴ On the other hand, in Reves the Court pointed out that if a note is used in connection with a minor asset transaction, or to address cash flow difficulties, "family resemblance" is much more apparent. The issue is the motivation of a true lender capable of fending for itself, versus that of an investor providing risk capital. In Reves the Court spoke of motivation in terms of what is most naturally conceived by both sides of the transaction.

This Reves factor may well reincarnate the commercial/investment dichotomy in some situations, as motivation under Reves practically translates into the putative seller's purpose for entering into the transaction. In other situations a purpose distinction may easily be made. But it is certain that every consideration will be undertaken with the broadly protective purpose of blue sky laws tipping the balance in favor of coverage.

[b] The Plan of Distribution

The manner in which an instrument finds its way to the holder is always a significant consideration in identifying the presence of a security. Indeed, there may be no better indicator of a security transaction than the offering of any form of instrument characterized as an investment to a broad segment of the public, in circumstances that trigger all the concerns for blue sky law protection. The kind of "plan of distribution" evoking historic concerns is evident in this observation in Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Maryland Securities Commissioner:

It may be that some investors, partial to the aims of an organization, may extend loans to that organization, even though they present a greater risk than those of more secure investments, such as a certificate of deposit at a bank. But as the evidence in the record discloses, and as the Commissioner found, Caucus's sale of its notes was neither isolated nor discriminating. Indeed, it raised funds by selling promissory notes to an undetermined number of persons, contacted through general solicitations... . [This] solicitation was not significantly different from other general solicitations in the securities business.ⁿ⁵⁵

[c] Reasonable Expectations of the Investing Public

Reves made clear that instruments would be considered to be securities on the basis of public expectations "[e]ven where an economic analysis of the circumstances of the particular transaction might suggest that the instruments are not securities as used in that transaction."ⁿ⁵⁶ The notes involved in Reves had been advertised as "investments." There were no countervailing factors that would have led reasonable persons to question that characterization. In Perrysburg Township v. Rossford Arena Amphitheater Authority,ⁿ⁵⁷ an Ohio appellate court found that a promissory note issued pursuant to an intergovernmental loan agreement constituted a security under the Ohio Securities Act. A central element in the court's analysis was how both parties characterized the loan:

Upon consideration of the entire record, we find that both parties referred to the $5 million loan as an "investment" and not a short-term, collateralized business loan. The loan was clearly intended by all parties as "seed money" that would ultimately generate business development and more tax revenue for Perrysburg Township. In addition, the potential risk to the Township, while stated as unlikely at the time, was potentially great.ⁿ⁵⁸

Promotional characteristics have always played an important role in assessing the scope of protection under state blue sky laws,ⁿ⁵⁹ and it is certain that this particular factor identified by the Supreme Court in Reves will carry considerable weight. The historic mission of blue sky laws is to protect against fraudulent and abusive investment schemes perpetrated on the general public.ⁿ⁶⁰

There is little likelihood that in definition interpretations rendered in the light of Reves factors something indiscriminately marketed as an investment will be treated as anything else. Public expectations will easily be discerned in these situations. In the end, however, assessing reasonable expectations of the public will be a function of an identifiable need for special securities law protections.ⁿ⁶¹

Expectations may also be shaped by considerations other than marketing plans that induce public "investment" characterizations. An unsecured promissory note that is convertible into common stock, for example, might be reasonably viewed as an investment regardless of the manner in which it was characterized or whether there is broad-based marketing. Indeed, the convertibility feature may be a lender's principal, and most reasonable, focus. Securities law protections are aimed at investment decisions, and it is not difficult to construct a set of circumstances involving convertible debt which demonstrate every essential characteristic of an investment transaction and which deprive the debt instrument of any family resemblance to instruments that are excluded from the definition of security.

[d] Presence of Some Other Risk Reducing Factor

Other "risk reducing" factors which could operate to suggest a particular instrument is not a security include collateral,ⁿ⁶² or insurance (in the case of deposit instruments). In Reves, the Supreme Court drew a distinction between the notes involved there and FDIC insured certificates of deposit, or ERISA regulated pension plan interests. Some "other" comprehensive regulatory scheme does not change the most basic characteristics of a note or other evidence of indebtedness, but it does indeed change its risk characteristics. The notes in Reves were uncollateralized and uninsured. They were subject to no other regulatory scheme that could affect risk characteristics and, as the court pointed out, they would escape federal regulation entirely if the securities laws were not applied. Securities law protections are designed to protect where no other protection is available, and where persons are presumed unable to act for their own protection.ⁿ⁶³

In the context of deposit instruments, a California appellate court addressed the key point in Reiswig v. Department of Corps.,ⁿ⁶⁴ where a "CD-with-bonus" package was held not to be a security under the California Corporations Code. In order to attract prospective purchasers of annuities, an intermediary promoter for the annuity seller advertised the availability of certificates of deposit with a higher yield than was available at any bank. The certificates of deposit were FDIC insured, offered in the normal course of business by banks identified as paying the highest CD rates. Purchasers of the CD-with-bonus purchased a certificate of deposit directly from the FDIC insured bank, and were then paid a yield differential by the intermediary based on its own higher advertised rate. The intermediary paid the customer the amount of the rate differential as a "bonus" check within seven days of the customer returning proof that the certificate of deposit had been purchased. The undisputed intent of the program was not to sell certificates of deposit, for which the intermediary received no commission. Rather, the program was designed to attract potential annuity purchasers, on which the intermediary would earn a substantial commission.

The California Department of Corporations alleged that the "CD-with-bonus" program constituted the offer and sale of securities without qualification, by unlicensed persons, and in violation of antifraud provisions. However, applying both "risk capital" and Howey tests for defining a security, both the trial and appellate courts in Reiswig concluded that no security was present. Program advertising offered FDIC-insured certificates of deposit paying a higher rate of return than that offered by the issuing bank. The bank was not related to the promoter/intermediary, and by reason of FDIC insurance, the purchaser did not risk losing the money he or she invested. Although the promoter/intermediary paid the difference between its advertised rate and the bank's rate, none of the purchaser's funds were used for anything other than to purchase an FDIC-insured certificate of deposit. The "bonus" checks paid to purchasers for that yield differential were not paid from earnings resulting from use of the purchaser's money. That is to say, the insured certificates of deposit were not integrated into any enterprise. The "bonus" payment was made solely as an inducement to allow an agent to pitch annuities, and nothing done or to be done by the agent affected the value of what was actually purchased. Finally, the court concluded that securities law protection was not needed regarding FDIC-insured certificates of deposit because their payment is virtually guaranteed. Another applicable regulatory scheme will surely not be determinative on the question of notes or other evidences of indebtedness as securities. FDIC insured certificates of deposit do not appear in the Reves "family," and there was no particular suggestion in the case that instruments such as these should be added to the list. But with the inquiry being whether there is any risk reducing factor that alters the character of an instrument, it is likely that this factor will carry great weight in blue sky law analyses, where the main focus is on filling a void in protection of the public against fraudulent schemes and worthless investments.

[4] Special Considerations: Commercial Paper and Demand Notes

As noted earlier, exemptions in blue sky laws generally operate to exclude at least some short term debt instruments from coverage where there are no countervailing concerns for protection of public investors. Many states (including all those adopting the Uniform Act) expressly include "commercial paper" as a descriptive qualifier on instruments to be excluded. Others follow the federal model, and exclude "notes, drafts, bills of exchange or bankers acceptance" usually adding a "current transaction" qualifier. In either case the focus is on short term instruments (those having maturities less than nine months) that are commonly considered to be "commercial paper." In Reves, the U.S. Supreme Court considered such exclusions under the federal securities laws for instruments having a maturity of less than nine months and confirmed, as the basic presumption of the "family resemblance" test, that any note with a term of more than nine months is a security.ⁿ⁶⁵ Separately concurring, Justice Stevens also made clear that the exclusion for short term instruments is intended to apply only to those instruments fairly characterized as commercial paper, and not to "investment securities."ⁿ⁶⁶

Blue sky laws with any form of "commercial paper" exclusion or exemption based upon a nine-month maturity constraint may obviously be guided by the Reves confirmation that such short term commercial paper is part of the "family" of instruments not deemed to be securities. However, the admonition that the exclusion is constrained by what is in fact "commercial paper," what was characterized elsewhere in Reves as "short term, high quality instruments issued to fund current operations and sold only to highly sophisticated investors,"ⁿ⁶⁷ is also a plainly critical consideration. Short-term commercial paper may be excluded from the definition of security, but other notes and evidences of indebtedness, however labeled, for which there is no "family resemblance" will not be excluded, notwithstanding their short terms. The Reves presumption necessarily leads to application of the four factors in each situation in those states without an express "commercial paper" qualifier,ⁿ⁶⁸ or in situations where purported "commercial paper" does not exhibit family resemblance.ⁿ⁶⁹

State courts and regulators will not hesitate to find that short term promissory notes are securities under their blue sky laws, regardless of any nine-month maturity exemption, where the character of the instrument and the circumstances in which it is used demonstrate an investment scheme. Where notes represent investments in a common scheme in which the "lender" looks to the efforts of a promoter for a return, the note will be deemed to be a security regardless of its maturity date.ⁿ⁷⁰ The potential for abuse of the short term commercial paper exemptions in blue sky laws is readily apparent, and examples have been all too common.ⁿ⁷¹

The matter of demand notes in this context may add a further dimension in the assessment of family resemblances. In Reves the Supreme Court considered an argument that because the notes involved were demand notes, and thus were subject to the possibility of demand being made within nine months of issuance, the Securities Exchange Act exclusion for short term instruments from the definition of security should apply. A majority of the Reves Court interpreted the federal statutory exclusion as not encompassing the notes because demand notes do not necessarily have short terms, and because exclusion of the notes would be inconsistent with the broadly protective purpose of the federal securities laws. However, the majority opinion on this issue left open the possibility of a different conclusion in situations where both parties clearly contemplate demand being made within the recognized nine month period.ⁿ⁷²

Although the policy underlying blue sky laws militates in favor of the same conclusion where the circumstances involving issuance of demand notes trigger concerns for protection of the investing public, other provisions of state law may have an impact. The demand feature of the notes was an issue in Reves because state law operated to define the "maturity" of demand notes for purposes of the statute of limitations on collection actions. The Supreme Court rejected the contention that a state limitations provision could control the scope of federal securities law definitions. However, a different conclusion regarding demand notes could be reached at the state level, where other provisions defining terms associated with such instruments might be applied so as to affect the states of such a note as a security.

[5] The "Promissory Note" Epidemic

State securities regulators, who are referred to often and aptly as "cops on the beat," devote their resources heavily to protection against unabashed investment scams. A perennial object of their attention is the offer and sale of promissory notes issued by little known or nonexistent companies, promising--indeed often guaranteeing--above-market fixed interest rates, while safeguarding principal. Often, these instruments are offered and sold by independent insurance agents who are not licensed to sell securities, or by independent financial advisers who may be associated persons of a securities broker-dealer, but who act independently of that broker-dealer in the belief that the instruments are not securities (or are exempt securities) and are thus not subject to broker-dealer due diligence and compliance oversight. In many cases, the persons offering and selling these instruments are themselves deceived by intermediaries concerning any regulatory requirements, and are lured by lucrative front-end commissions.ⁿ⁷³ It is often the case that notes are offered and sold to trusting, elderly clients with significant retirement savings. Year after year the offer and sale of promissory notes is included by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) among the top ten investment scams.

As discussed extensively earlier in this chapter, promissory notes are defined as securities under all state blue sky laws. However, it has been shown that notes having certain characteristics or "family resemblances," issued in certain settings, may not as a matter of economic reality be considered securities. That is clearly not the case with short term promissory notes of unknown issuers offered and sold to unsophisticated individuals with the promise of double-digit, if not guaranteed returns, and as being suitable for retirement income. Under all of the factors applied for evaluating notes as securities, these promissory notes qualify and are subject to state securities laws. Whether they are notes, evidence of indebtedness, or simply "agreements," their characteristics, and the circumstances of their usage are such that a security will be found. In Stas v. Pennsylvania Securities Commission,ⁿ⁷⁴ for example, the court rejected a petitioner's assertion that only "personal loans" were involved in the following circumstances: The agreements were variously named private investment placement agreements, private tax-free agreements, or private agreements. The petitioner agreed to pay the parties interest rates ranging from nine percent to twenty percent per annum, which the petitioner told them would be "tax free." The duration of the agreements ranged from six months to five years.

The petitioner placed the proceeds into various accounts under her control, commingling them with personal funds in her personal bank accounts and her personal brokerage trading accounts. Also, petitioner used the proceeds obtained from her clients, the Bauschers and the Turners, to: (1) purchase a swimming pool and landscaping services; (2) eliminate her credit card debt; (3) purchase stock for cash; and (4) pay margin obligations following her purchases of stock on margin. However characterized, said the court, the agreements amounted to investment contracts and were offered and sold in violation of the Pennsylvania Securities Act.

In many cases, promissory notes or other "agreements" of the sort described above are offered and sold by unlicensed persons or, in the case of sellers who are licensed, they are sold "away" from the seller's broker-dealer.ⁿ⁷⁵ Intermediaries themselves can be misled because the promissory notes offered and sold in these scams typically are short term instruments, having maturities of nine months or less. In this manner, the issuer may claim that the notes are exempt from state or federal registration requirements by reason of "commercial paper" or other exemptions for short term notes.ⁿ⁷⁶ As explained in § 2.03[4], however, state securities regulators will not be constrained from dealing with purportedly "exempt" promissory notes. First, there is nothing on the face of a note with a purported nine months or less maturity that qualifies it for an exemption from state registration requirements when tested against the four controlling factors articulated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Reves v. Ernst & Young. Courts and regulators will not hesitate to find that short term promissory notes are securities under their Blue Sky Laws, regardless of any nine months maturity exemption, where the character of the instrument and the circumstances in which it is used demonstrate an investment scheme.ⁿ⁷⁷ Moreover, it is typical for short term promissory notes offered and sold in these circumstances to be "rolled over" successively upon the expiration of each stated term. Stated nine months or less maturities are, and are intended to be, sham provisions. Second, without regard to stated term and any claimed exemption from registration, state regulators have ample antifraud authority to act for the protection of purchasers of promissory notes through investigative and enforcement proceedings. In many instances, of course, because the promissory notes have not been subjected to scrutiny through registration, the eventual enforcement action and application of remedies may come too late.

[6] Other Evidences of Indebtedness

[a] Generally

The presumption after Reves that all "notes" are securities may logically be extended to any evidence of indebtednessⁿ⁷⁸ which arises out of a debtor/creditor relationship. Such other instruments include debentures and a variety of instruments evidencing some basic obligation to pay value in the future. A Texas criminal appeals court opined that "other evidence of indebtedness" in that state's blue sky law, when taken in context, is meant to expand upon the grouping "note, bond, debenture, mortgage certificate," and thus must be a similar type of security as those forms.ⁿ⁷⁹ Thus, the Texas court concluded, an "other evidence of indebtedness" is a written instrument that evidences "the owing of a sum of money upon a certain and express agreement."ⁿ⁸⁰ On further review, the Texas Court of Appeals amplified the point that for an "evidence of indebtedness" to fall within the Texas Securities Act it must be in writing. The court made clear that not all securities must be written instruments. However, the court opined that the specific term "evidence of indebtedness" means something similar to other specific written instruments.ⁿ⁸¹ As an express rejection of the Texas requirement for a writing a new sentence was added in section 102(28)(A) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, to provide that securities within the definition may be either certificated or uncertificated.

Likely evidences of indebtedness include receipts or other writings memorializing or arising out of a loan transaction not otherwise evidenced by a promissory note.ⁿ⁸² In Suave v. K.C. Inc.,ⁿ⁸³ for example, a borrower corporation gave the lender plaintiff documents representing a security interest in appliances purchased with the plaintiff's money, which were then leased to third party customers of the borrower. Plaintiff was a person of limited means and experience who was solicited to loan money to the defendant company on the prospect of obtaining an interest rate higher than what was otherwise available from banks. Plaintiff's "loan" was evidenced by a receipt and printed form documents creating security interests in the appliances.

In this pre Reves analysis the court's conclusion that a security had been offered and sold in violation of the blue sky law was grounded in broader considerations than simply the existence of an "evidence" of indebtedness. What amounted to the Reves four factors were applied. The key point here, however, is that "evidence" of indebtedness means just that. Any writing that reflects the underlying debt relationship is susceptible of being deemed to be a security. In most cases, since no actual "note" evidences the debt, having such a writing will require further analysis under the Reves factors.ⁿ⁸⁴

[b] Loan Participations

Other evidences of indebtedness include loan participations or participations in pools of loans. A key consideration in whether such participations, and the evidences of indebtedness involved in them, are securities is the relationship of the lender to the borrower. Where lender/participants have a direct relationship with the borrower, whose note is the true focal point of the transaction, the "participation" suggests nothing different from a normal commercial lending situation squarely within the Reves "family" of instruments or transactions that do not involve a security. For example, the Minnesota Court of Appeals described this scenario in concluding that a loan participation agreement was not a security: The overall motivation of the parties was to finance the borrowers' commercial purposes of acquiring one hockey team and refinancing the debts relating to another; the participation agreement was offered to financial and commercial institutions, and not to the general public; appellant received ample notice that the participation agreement was a participation in a loan and not an investment in a business; and, as appellant acknowledges, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has issued policy guidelines that address the sale of loan participations.ⁿ⁸⁵

[c] Funding Programs

In a scenario more likely to arise under state Blue Sky Laws, "blind pool" funding programs or schemes involving interests or participations offered and sold to individuals would suggest something quite different. Federal courts have labored to make the distinction on "investment contract" grounds,ⁿ⁸⁶ but depending upon the particular instrument involved, the Reves four factors may be instructive. The primary distinction is the degree of involvement with the lender/purchaser in the commercial transactions underlying the pool. Where individuals are divorced from that process, any "family resemblance" of the evidence of indebtedness taken by the individual ends.

Loan commitment or procurement programs and "advance fee" arrangements have also been held to involve evidences of indebtedness and, by definition, securities under blue sky laws.ⁿ⁸⁷ "Guarantees" of debts are also separate evidences of indebtedness, and may be deemed securities as such or, in other cases, in their own right when included within the list of enumerated instruments defined to be securities.

A "Double Your Money" or "Double Your Blessings" program involving pledge agreements by religious faithful that purported to show a rate of return and repayment program was held to constitute a security under the Florida blue sky law. On the other hand, pledge agreements given as "Faith Promises" in support of the ministry, which disclaimed any return except spiritual, were held in the same case not to be securities despite their available characterization as an evidence of indebtedness.ⁿ⁸⁸

In the end, it is plain that even in the wake of Reves the scope of the terms "note" and "evidence of indebtedness" in blue sky law definitions is not bounded by precise criteria. Nevertheless, the starting point is the Reves presumption in all cases where the instrument answers to the description. From there, analysis of the four factors will guide applications to the full range of instruments and transactions in debtor/creditor relationships in a manner consistent with the broadly protective purpose of blue sky laws.ⁿ⁸⁹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Uniform Sec. Act § 401(l).

(n2)Footnote 2. Whether a promissory note is properly considered to be a security may also be significant in applications of certain provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code. In Highland Capital Mgmt. LP v. Schneider, 8 N.Y.3d 406 (2007), for example, the New York Court of Appeals concluded that certain subordinated promissory notes satisfied the definition of "security" under § 8-102(a)(15) of the New York Uniform Commercial Code, such that an oral agreement to sell the notes would fall outside the statute of frauds defense.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ansorge v. Kellogg, 172 Mich. App. 63, 67 431 N.W.2d 402, 404 (1988), in which the court declared: "We reject at the outset any suggestion that the present transaction, memorialized by the issue of "notes" and "evidence of indebtedness," must be considered a security transaction simply because the statutory definition of security includes the words... ." The court concluded that notes used as a result of an industry wide practice regarding the dealings between growers and independent fruit processors were bona fide loans and did not bear any of the characteristics of a security transaction.

(n4)Footnote 4. Uniform Act § 402(a)(10). "Commercial paper" is not a defined term. However, the Uniform Act tracks the commercial paper exemption contained in § 3(a)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77c(3), where a more descriptive statement of the intended scope of the exemption is found ("any note, draft, bill of exchange, or bankers' acceptance which arises out of a current transaction"). State laws provide for "commercial paper" exemptions, but in many cases these exemptions are not absolute. Some states refer generally to "commercial paper," but add contextual qualifiers. In Ohio, for example, the exemption encompasses: "[c]ommercial paper and promissory notes ... when they are not offered directly or indirectly for sale to the public." Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.02(G). Many states adopt the "prime quality" characteristics implied in the Uniform and federal acts, but a number add a similar qualifier to that in Ohio. See, e.g., 70 Pa. Stat. Annot. 1202(c); Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(l).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1801(22), 44-1843(8). The effect of this and other statutory exclusions in the law is to exempt all consumer transactions involving the purchase of real property or goods where the buyer pays by giving a promissory note. State v. Tober, 173 Ariz. 211, 841 P.2d 206 (1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(B). In Buemi v. Van Dusen Acceptance Corp., 1979 Ohio App. LEXIS 12353 (Feb. 15, 1979), the statutory qualifier was applied to exclude evidences of indebtedness from the definition of security where secured loans negated any expectation of participation in, or charge upon, the profits of the debtor enterprise.

(n7)Footnote 7. Notes and other evidences of indebtedness exempted by reason of their particular risk characteristics include federal, state and some municipal debt instruments, certain bank or insurance company debt instruments, and "guaranteed" obligations of varying sorts. Other obligations, such as those of non profit charitable, educational or other like organizations are often also excluded where no "investment" expectations are presented.

But see Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(j) (Evidence of indebtedness of such issuers not statutorily exempted from coverage). Transactional exemptions for notes or other evidences of indebtedness, the principal one being the commercial paper exemption discussed above, are primarily based on the notion that no "investment" is present. i.e., that the instrument arises in a setting in which the purpose of the transaction and the relative positions and expectations of the parties are such as to negate any perceived need for protection of the blue sky law.

(n8)Footnote 8. 270 Ga. 56, 507 S.E.2d 425 (1998) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Id., 507 S.E.2d at 427, quoting Blau v. Redmond, 143 Ga. App. 897, 902, 240 S.E.2d 273 (1977).

(n10)Footnote 10. Special considerations relating to instruments falling under the heading "commercial paper" as securities are discussed in more detail in § 2.03[4], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. See People v. Figueroa, 41 Cal. 3d 714, 224 Cal. Rptr. 719, 715 P.2d 680 (1986) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Brookhardt v. State, 710 So.2d 700 (5th Dist. Fla. App. 1998) .

See also People v. Figueroa, 41 Cal. 3d 714, 224 Cal. Rptr. 719, 715 P.2d 680 (1986). The court stated: "In arriving at a determination the courts have been mindful that the general purpose of the law is to protect the public against the imposition of unsubstantial, unlawful and fraudulent stock and investment schemes and the securities based thereon." Id., 715 P.2d at 715.

(n13)Footnote 13. People v. Rangel, 2002 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 6212 (July 2, 2002).

(n14)Footnote 14. 327 Ark. 545, 940 S.W.2d 429 (1997) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Moreover, for a note to be a security, it must be the central element of the transaction and not simply part of the set of circumstances in which a security may be tangentially involved. In Kinney v. Cook, 159 Wash.

2d 837, 154 P.3d 206 (2007), for example, the Washington Supreme Court, sitting en banc, opined that payment on a promissory note did not constitute the sale of a security when the plaintiffs were legally obligated to make the payment, without regard to the fact that the note was secured by stock that they owned before the note was paid. Plaintiffs sought to invoke the antifraud provision of the Washington blue sky Law to obtain relief by claiming that fraud associated with paying the promissory note occurred in connection with either the "purchase" of stock that collateralized the note, or the "sale" of the note itself. The court rejected both arguments, emphasizing that the payment satisfied a debt that plaintiffs were legally obligated to make, and that it was not a consideration for any investment. Additionally, the payment of the note could not be a purchase or sale of the note itself. The court concluded: The alleged fraud inducing this payment was thus not in connection with the sale or offer to sell a security. To hold otherwise would be to conclude that every payment on a note secured by a security or interest in a security for value would trigger duties under RCW 21.20.010. We do not believe the legislature intended its protections for the sale of securities to extend so broadly. 2007 Wash. LEXIS 203, at *13.

(n16)Footnote 16. The definitions of "security" in both the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77b(1) and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78c(a)(10), are substantially similar to state blue sky law definitions. For those states that have adopted the Uniform Act, federal court analyses of the point play an important role. See, e.g., Md. Code Ann., Corps. & Assns § 11-804 (1985 Repl. Vol.), which provides in pertinent part: "[t]his title shall be construed to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states which enact it and to coordinate the interpretation and administration of this title with the related federal regulation."

(n17)Footnote 17. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47, reh'g denied, 494 U.S. 1092, 110 S. Ct. 1840, 108 L. Ed. 2d 968 (1990).

See, e.g., Perrysburg Twp. v. City of Rossford, 149 Ohio App. 3d 645, 2002-Ohio-5498, 778 N.E.2d 619 (adopting the Reves four-factor test for determining whether a promissory note is a security within the scope of the Ohio blue sky law).

(n18)Footnote 18. 494 U.S. at 63, 110 S. Ct. at 950, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 58.

(n19)Footnote 19. See § 2.03[2], below.

(n20)Footnote 20. 55 Cal. 2d 811, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906 (1961).

(n21)Footnote 21. 55 Cal. 2d at 814-15. A strong sense of the protective purpose of blue sky laws as applied to notes was evident where unsecured, interest bearing promissory notes issued for loans to refurbish a hotel were held to be securities in People v. Walberg, 263 Cal. App. 2d 286, 291, 69 Cal. Rptr. 457 (1968) (scheme "was quite as dangerous to investors as the typical blue sky promotion of mining stocks and royalties").

(n22)Footnote 22. R.C.W. § 21.20.005(12); see also Alaska Stat. § 45.55.130(12); Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-2(26); N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-02(15); Ok. Sec. Act § 1-102(32).

(n23)Footnote 23. 52 Hawaii 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971).

(n24)Footnote 24. See § 2.01, below.

(n25)Footnote 25. See generally Carder v. Burrow, 327 Ark. 545, 940 S.W.2d 429 (1997), discussed earlier. In Carder the court found no security involved in a transaction in which the lender was a sophisticated investor; the loan rate was not dependent upon earnings of the corporate borrower; repayment was expected regardless of the profitability of the borrower; and the loan was accounted for by the lender as an account receivable.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Godair v. Place Vendome Corp. of America, La. App. 93-1818 (La. App. 1 Cir. 12/22/94), 648 So. 2d 440, 445 ("the primary purpose of executing the promissory note to plaintiff was to raise money for the general use of a business enterprise, namely Place Vendome, and that plaintiff's primary interest was in the profit the note was expected to generate"); Schwartz v. Oberweis, 826 F. Supp. 280 (N.D. Ind. 1993) (promissory note held to be a security under Indiana blue sky law where seller's purpose was to raise money for general use in a business enterprise and the buyer was primarily interested in profit).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Crim v. E.F. Hutton, Inc., 298 S.C. 448, 381 S.E. 2d 492 (1989).

But see § 2.05, "The Promissory Note Epidemic," for rejection of claimed "personal loan" justification for avoiding application of blue sky laws.

(n28)Footnote 28. See Rapp, The Role of Promotional Characteristics in Determining the Existence of a Security, 9 Sec. Reg. L.J. 26 (1981).

Investment characteristics associated with or attached to a simple demand note that might in its own right escape security characterization can also operate to package the note into an arrangement that is held to be a security under investment contract analysis. See, e.g., Martin v. ITM/International Trading & Marketing, Ltd., 343 Pa. Super. 250, 494 A.2d 451 (1985) (demand note for sum advanced coupled with a right to receive a 25 percent return on investment).

(n29)Footnote 29. 92 Ohio App. 3d 224, 634 N.E.2d 692 (1994); see also Manns v. Skolnik, 666 N.E.2d 1236 (Ind. App. 1996) (affirming that a promissory note constituted a security rather than a loan to correct a cash flow problem where in fact the money was advanced for use as start up capital, to "get the transaction off the ground").

(n30)Footnote 30. 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244 (1946) .

(n31)Footnote 31. 328 U.S. at 298 99, 66 S. Ct. at 1103, 90 L. Ed. at 1249 .

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g., Boatmen's Bank of Benton v. Durham, 203 Ill. App. 3d 921, 561 N.E.2d 206, 148 Ill. Dec. 900 (1990) (where a bank, in substance, was merely a lender, a note was not a security).

But see State v. Argo, 81 Wash. App. 552, 915 P.2d 1103 (1996), in which the court applied investment contract criteria to hold that notes given to investors as part of a Ponzi scheme were securities within the coverage of the Washington blue sky law. Despite the fact that the notes provided for a fixed rate of interest, there remained an "interdependence of fortunes" between the investors and the borrower. Investors risked the loss of their entire investment if the borrower's management skills failed to keep the underlying enterprise profitable. Perhaps most significantly, all of the "investments" were part of an overarching Ponzi scheme that formed the basis of a "common enterprise," and it is highly unlikely that in any such circumstances the application of blue sky laws can be avoided.

(n33)Footnote 33. See McClure v. First Na'tl Bank, 352 F. Supp. 454 (S.D. Tex. 1973), aff'd, 497 F.2d 490 (5th Cir. 1975).

(n34)Footnote 34. State v. Hoephner, 1978 OK CR 18, 574 P.2d 1079; see also Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Comm'r of Commerce, 422 N.W.2d 264 (Minn. App. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1006, 109 S. Ct. 786, 102 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1989).

(n35)Footnote 35. See, e.g., Dinjian v. Dinjian, 22 Mass. App. Ct. 589, 495 N.E.2d 882 (1986) (court affirmed a trial court conclusion that notes involved in the case were "simple loan transactions" and thus not securities, based upon material factors including the term of the notes, collateral, and a fixed rate of interest; the definition of security, said the court, should not include purely private transactions whose terms are negotiated between lender and borrower).

(n36)Footnote 36. 12 Va. App. 1105, 408 S.E.2d 906 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 865, 113 S. Ct. 190, 121 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1992).

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.03

(n37)Footnote 37. 78 Ohio App. 3d 834, 606 N.E.2d 962 (1992) .

(n38)Footnote 38. 78 Ohio App. at 845.

(n39)Footnote 39. The status of evidences of indebtedness other than promissory notes as securities is considered further at § 2.03[5] below.

(n40)Footnote 40. 544 F.2d 1126 (2d Cir. 1976) .

(n41)Footnote 41. 544 F.2d at 1138 . Subsequently, the Second Circuit added to its list "notes evidencing loans by commercial banks for current operations." See Chemical Bank v. Arthur Andersen & Co., 726 F.2d 930, 939 (2d Cir. 1984).

(n42)Footnote 42. 494 U.S. 56, 110 S. Ct. 945, 108 L. Ed. 2d 47 (1990) .

(n43)Footnote 43. See, e.g., State v. Johnson, 2002 WI App 224, 257 Wis. 2d 736, 652 N.W.2d 642.

But see Mosley v. State, 253 Ga. App. 710, 560 S.E.2d 305 (2002) (the test for determining if a note is a security is whether it meets investment contract criteria).

(n44)Footnote 44. See, e.g., Chrysler First Financial Services Corp. v. Kimbrough, Carson, & Woods, 1991 Tex. App. LEXIS 2534 (Oct 17, 1991); Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Maryland Sec. Comm'r, 320 Md. 313, 577 A.2d 783 (Ct. Spec. App. 1990); Ascher v. Commonwealth, 12 Va. App. 1105, 408 S.E.2d 906 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 865, 113 S. Ct. 190, 121 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1992); State v. Saas, 58 Wash. App. 305, 792 P.2d 554 (1990), rev'd on other grounds, 118 Wash. 2d 37, 820 P.2d 505 (1991).

But see State v. Tober, 173 Ariz. 211, 841 P.2d 206 (1992) (statutory inclusion of "any note" leaves no room for judicial gloss in a criminal action arising out of alleged violation of registration provisions. The federal test under Reves evolved in the context of civil actions for fraud and is not needed to resolve any uncertainty in determining whether the statutory definition of a security is unconstitutionally vague).

(n45)Footnote 45. 494 U.S. at 68, 110 S. Ct. at 953, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 62.

(n46)Footnote 46. See § 2.03[1] above.

(n47)Footnote 47. 494 U.S. at 66, 110 S. Ct. at 60-61, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 51-52.

Applying Reves in the context of a state blue sky law, a Washington state appeals court described the inquiry thusly:

The Reves family resemblance test requires four considerations. First, why did the seller and buyer enter into the transaction? Specifically, is the purpose of the transaction to raise money for a business enterprise? Or is it, instead, for consumer goods or some other non-commercial reason? Second, is the note commonly traded for speculation or investment? Third, we look at the reasonable expectations of the investing public. What are the economic realities? Fourth, and finally, we look at whether another regulatory scheme significantly reduces the risk associated with the note and investment agreement and thereby renders application of the securities act regulation unnecessary. Douglass v. Stanger, 101 Wash. App. 243, 2 P.3d 998 (2000).

(n48)Footnote 48. For example, the motivations, or purpose, for a transaction are at the heart of United Housing Found, Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975), in which the Court held that "stock" in a state subsidized housing cooperative was not a security. The "plan of distribution" was critical in SEC v. C.M. Joiner

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.03

Leasing Corp., 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943), and reasonable expectations of the investing public were a major focus in Landreth v. Landreth Timber Co., 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985), where the question was whether corporate "stock" was a security. In Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982), a significant risk reducing factor, namely, another regulatory scheme, operated to render application of the securities laws unnecessary.

(n49)Footnote 49. See, e.g., Brannon v. Rinzler, 77 Ohio App. 3d 749, 603 N.E.2d 1049 (1991) (application of "risk capital" criteria to examine whether an investment contract was present).

(n50)Footnote 50. 793 P.2d 1048, [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,263 (Alaska 1990).

(n51)Footnote 51. 793 P.2d at 1055 1056 (citations omitted). With Reves, the path to the opposite conclusion is more clearly marked. In Campbell v. C.D. Payne & Geldermann Sec., 894 S.W.2d 411, 418-419 (Tex. App. 1995), for example, the court opined that promissory notes given in a private transaction between the parties were not securities:

We find the "family resemblance" test to be reasonable and applicable to the determination of whether the notes in question here were "securities" within the purview of the Texas Securities Act. Examination of the motives of the parties show that Campbell did not expect a "profit" in the sense of capital appreciation or participation in earnings; instead she expected only a fixed return in the form of interest on the notes. This record demonstrates that there was no plan for the notes that was intended to lead to their common trading for speculation or investment. The record also demonstrates that these notes were not of such a nature that would lead the general public to consider them as securities.

(n52)Footnote 52. Marine Bank v. Weaver, 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1982). In Marine Bank, the Court held that a certificate of deposit issued by a federally insured bank was not a security.

(n53)Footnote 53. In Guidry v. Bank of LaPlace, 740 F. Supp. 1208 (E.D. La. 1990), aff'd, 954 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1991), a U.S. District Court consideration of the definition of security in the Louisiana blue sky law illustrates an emergent post Reves spin, holding that notes are not per se securities. Although doing no injustice to Reves in application, this emphasis actually sets Reves on its head. In Guidry the court held that post dated checks solicited and given in connection with an enterprise to purchase blocks of airline seats for gambling junkets were not securities. Plaintiff argued, inter alia, that the checks were non exempted notes, and therefore within coverage of the blue sky law. The court disagreed, applying the Reves four factors to find no "family resemblance" to things, apparently, that would be considered securities. 740 F. Supp. at 1214-1215. The approach is confounding, but illustrative of the point that post Reves the greatest effort will be expended applying the four factors on a case by case basis. See, e.g., State v. Saas, 58 Wash. App. 305, 792 P.2d 554 (1990), rev'd on other grounds, 118 Wash. 2d 37, 820 P.2d 505 (1991) ("Family resemblance" established by adding to excluded category through application of Reves criteria).

(n54)Footnote 54. 494 U.S. at 68, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed.2d at 61-62.

But see Campbell v. C.D. Payne & Geldermann Sec., 894 S.W.2d 411, 418-419 (Tex. App. 1995), in which the court defined profit as "capital appreciation or participation in earnings." This definition would seem to rule out interest as a "profit" motive to be considered under the family resemblance test, and appears to run counter to the broader notion of valuable return articulated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Reves.

(n55)Footnote 55. Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Maryland Securities Comm'r, 320 Md. 313, 327, 577 A.2d 783 (Ct. Spec. App. 1990); see also Ascher v. Commonwealth, 12 Va. App. 1105, 408 S.E.2d 906 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 865, 113 S. Ct. 190, 121 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1992) ("Ascher and her organization had marketed more than $10 million in promissory notes to over 2000 people throughout the U.S. By December 1985, the amount of money raised by loans had grown to $30 million").

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.03

(n56)Footnote 56. 494 U.S. at 66, 110 S. Ct. at 952, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 61.

(n57)Footnote 57. Perrysburg Twp. v. Rossford Arena Amphitheater Auth., 175 Ohio App. 3d 549, 2008-Ohio-363, 888 N.E. 2d 440; aff'd 103 Ohio St. 3d 79, 2004-Ohio-4362, 814 N.E.2d 44.

(n58)Footnote 58. Perrysburg Twp. v. Rossford Arena Amphitheater Auth., 175 Ohio App. 3d 549, 559, 2008-Ohio-363, 888 N.E. 2d 440.

(n59)Footnote 59. See Rapp, The Role of Promotional Characteristics in Determining the Existence of a Security, 9 Sec. Reg. L.J. 26 (1981).

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Grand Prairie Sav. & Loan Asso. v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A., 298 Ark. 542, 545, 769 S.W.2d 20, 22 (1989) ("The purpose of the Act is clearly remedial and is intended to prevent fraudulent practices and activities from becoming a burden upon unsophisticated investors and the general public.").

(n61)Footnote 61. Thus, for example, in State v. Argo, above, the court applied the four Reves factors to conclude that notes given in furtherance of a Ponzi scheme were securities on conclusions that:

First, the investors were motivated by an intent to invest their funds at the high interest rates offered by Argo. Second, although the notes were probably not meant for common trading, they were transferable instruments and could have been traded among investors. Third, the investing public would reasonably expect the notes to be securities because Argo described them as investments that could earn substantial returns. Finally, there is no regulatory scheme other than the Securities Act that reduces the risk of investing in the notes. 81 Wash. App. at 564 .

(n62)Footnote 62. Although secured notes may by definition be securities, as noted earlier, some states exempt certain species from compliance with their blue sky laws without regard to other analysis. For example, the Arizona blue sky law is inapplicable to "[n]otes ... secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real estate ... if the entire mortgage ... together with all notes ... secured thereby is sold or offered for sale as a unit." Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 1843(A)(10). However, securing a note in order to qualify for such an exemption must not be an afterthought, see MacCollum v. Perkinson, 185 Ariz. 179, 913 P.2d 1097 (Ct. App. 1996) .

As to whether securing a note can operate as a risk reducing factor, see Schwartz v. Oberweis, 826 F. Supp. 280 (N.D. Ind. 1993), in which the terms of a "secured demand note" were viewed as actually defeating risk reducing factors that would otherwise apply, such that the lack of any special protection indicated that the note was a security under the Indiana blue sky law.

(n63)Footnote 63. See Brannon v. Rinzler, 77 Ohio App. 3d 749, 603 N.E.2d 1049 (1991) ("sophisticated" investors involved); see also Grand Prairie Sav. & Loan Asso. v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A., 298 Ark. 542, 769 S.W.2d 20 (1989) (transactions between "banks and bankers" indicated isolated commercial transactions outside the scope of intended protection of the blue sky law).

(n64)Footnote 64. 144 Cal. App. 4th 327, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 386 (2006).

(n65)Footnote 65. 494 U.S. at 63, 110 S. Ct. at 950, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 59.

(n66)Footnote 66. 494 U.S. at 74-75, 110 S. Ct. at 956-57, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 65-66. Justice Stevens characterized this conclusion as so well established that "[a] departure from this reliable consensus would upset the justified expectations of both the legal and investment communities." Id. Indeed, the generally accepted view of the intended scope of the federal exclusion is grounded in an early observation of the Securities and Exchange Commission that the focus is on "prime quality negotiable commercial paper of a type not ordinarily purchased by the general public, that is, paper issued to facilitate well recognized types of current operational business requirements and of a type eligible for discounting by Federal Reserve banks." Sec. Act Rel. No. 4412, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) (Sept. 20, 1961) (SEC interpretation of the short term paper exemption in Securities Act § 3(a)(3)).

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.03

(n67)Footnote 67. Reves, 494 U.S. at 70, 110 S. Ct. at 954, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 63.

(n68)Footnote 68. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. § 517.051(8); 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. 5/3.

(n69)Footnote 69. See People v. Dempster, 396 Mich. 700, 242 N.W.2d 381 (1976) (rejecting reliance on Uniform Commercial Code definition of "commercial paper" for purposes of claimed blue sky exemption).

(n70)Footnote 70. Womack v. State, 270 Ga. 56, 507 S.E.2d 425 (1998) .

(n71)Footnote 71. See also Tanner v. State Corp. Comm'n, 266 Va. 170, 580 S.E.2d 850 (2003), in which the Supreme Court of Virginia, on reconsideration, held that promissory notes offered and sold in reliance upon a federal exemption from registration under Rule 504 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933 are not exempt from state registration requirements.

(n72)Footnote 72. 494 U.S. at 73, 110 S. Ct. at 955, 108 L. Ed. 2d at 65.

(n73)Footnote 73. Describing the anatomy of a promissory note fraud, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has noted that among predictable, fraudulent fact patterns:

The fraudsters--who may or may not be affiliated with the company--persuade independent life insurance agents to sell promissory notes, luring them with lucrative commissions of up to twenty or even thirty percent. These agents often do not have a license to sell securities. And in selling the notes, they frequently rely solely on the information the company gives them--which later proves to be false or misleading.

Broken Promises: Promissory Note Fraud (SEC), available at <http://www.sec.gov/investor/pubs/promise.htm> See also Promissory Notes: Promises, Problems (NASAA, NASD, SEC, SIA), available at <http://www.nasaa.org>.

(n74)Footnote 74. 910 A.2d 125 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2006).

(n75)Footnote 75. See, e.g., Department of Enforcement v. Hanson, NASDR Disciplinary Proc. No. C9A000027 (Mar. 8, 2001). In Hanson, the respondent participated in the offer and sale of promissory notes without prior written notice to and approval of his broker-dealer employer. The respondent unsuccessfully argued that the promissory notes were not securities. An NASDR Hearing Panel, however, concluded that the notes could not legitimately be characterized as "commercial paper," and that purchasers bought the notes with "investment" expectations and needed the protection of securities laws.

(n76)Footnote 76. Registration exemptions in Blue Sky Laws applicable to "commercial paper" or generally to instruments having short maturities are considered in detail in Chapter 7.11, below.

(n77)Footnote 77. The controlling "character" of an instrument without regard to any specific term or other feature is discussed in § 2.03[1], above.

(n78)Footnote 78. "Evidence of indebtedness" is not defined in either federal or state securities laws, but may be fairly described as follows: "The term 'evidence of indebtedness' is not limited to a promissory note or other simple acknowledgment of a debt owing and is held to include all contractual obligations to pay in the future for consideration presently received." United States v. Austin, 462 F.2d 724, 736 (10th Cir. 1972).

(n79)Footnote 79. State v. Thomas, 919 S.W.2d 427 (Tex. Crim. App. 1996) .

(n80)Footnote 80. Id., 919 S.W.2d at 432.

(n81)Footnote 81. Thomas v. State, 3 S.W.3d 89 (Tex. App. 1999) .

Such instruments could include bank checks and financial institution deposit relationships, although the settings involving these kinds of instruments do not evoke notions of "investments" and associated risk in what is normally an "other regulation" environment. Thus, the instruments associated with these relationships are for the most part excluded from blue sky law coverage by specific exemptions such as that found in § 402(a)(3) of the Uniform Act: "[A]ny security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any bank organized under the laws of the U.S., or any bank, savings institution, or trust company organized and supervised under the laws of any state."

But see McReynolds v. Pacific Exchangers Bank, Ltd., [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,548 (Tenn. Ch. 1991) ("International certificates of deposit" and notes evidenced no risk reducing or other factors that would justify excluding the instruments from coverage of blue sky law); Riedel v. Bancam, S.A., 792 F.2d 587 (6th Cir. 1986) (Mexican bank certificate of deposit held to be a security under Ohio blue sky law since exemption is applicable only to securities issued by a state or nationally chartered bank); In re First American Bank Ltd., [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,247 (Iowa Ins. Div. 1990) (savings accounts and certificates of deposit offered by a bank operated under the laws of the Mariana Islands are securities).

On the other hand, "statements" of interest bearing accounts maintained by a commercial grower with a fruit processing and canning company were held not to be securities in Ansorge v. Kellogg, 172 Mich. App. 63, 67 431 N.W.2d 402, 404 (1988). The accounts arose as a result of industry wide practices regarding the dealings between growers and independent fruit processors.

(n82)Footnote 82. This category can also include preliminary or anticipatory writings in regard to a promissory note yet to be issued. In Shavin v. Commonwealth, 17 Va. App. 256, 437 S.E.2d 411 (1993), for example, a "temporary loan agreement" executed in anticipation of the issuance of a promissory note was held to be a security--either as an evidence of indebtedness or as an "interim certificate for a note."

(n83)Footnote 83. 19 Wash. App. 659, 577 P.2d 599 (1978) .

(n84)Footnote 84. See also Stephenson v. Third Co., 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 140 (Feb. 27 2004) (In a setting not involving securities law claims, the circumstances of transaction involving a loan agreement were examined to determine whether a loan or an investment was actually intended).

Signature Bank v. Marshall Bank, 2006 Minn. App. Unpub. LEXIS 1159 (Oct. 10, 2006), review denied, 2006 Minn. LEXIS 992 (Dec. 20, 2006).

(n85)Footnote 85. See also Noyd v. Claxton, Morgan, Flockhart & VanLiere, 186 Mich. App. 333, 463 N.W.2d 268 (1990) (loan participation agreement held not to be a security where nothing more than the risk associated with a normal commercial loan transaction was indicated); see also Grand Prairie Sav. & Loan Asso. v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A. 298 Ark. 542, 769 S.W.2d 20 (1989) (loan participations sold, in an isolated commercial transaction to a bank, savings and loan association, and a private trust held not to be securities).

(n86)Footnote 86. See, e.g., Zolfaghari v. Sheikholeslami, 943 F.2d 451 (4th Cir. 1991) (participation in a managed mortgage pool).

(n87)Footnote 87. See State v. Gates, 325 N.W.2d 166 (N.D. 1982) .

(n88)Footnote 88. Greater Ministries Int'l v. State, 689 So. 2d 328 (Fla. Dict. Ct. App. 1997).

(n89)Footnote 89. But see Thomas v. State, above, 919 S.W.2d at 431, in which the court cautioned that as a penal statute, the state blue sky law is to be strictly construed. Thus, "evidence of indebtedness" should be defined in a manner limited by the purpose of the law, and by the context in which it appears, to mean: "all contractual obligations to pay in the future for consideration presently received."

19 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.04

§ 2.04 Bonds and Debentures

"Bonds" are a species of debt security specifically enumerated in the Uniform Act and most blue sky law definitions because, like stock, there is a common perception of a security associated with the label itself. Indeed, in Marine Bank v. Weaver,ⁿ¹ the U.S. Supreme Court simply noted without analysis that "ordinary bonds" are clearly securities.ⁿ²

A corporate bond evidences a loan, calling for repayment of a specific principal sum and, with the exception of so called "zero coupon" bonds, the periodic payment of a stated rate of interest. The promise to pay and the particular terms of a corporate bond is incorporated into an indenture. An indenture trustee, most often a commercial bank, is appointed to represent the interests of bondholders, and is empowered to take action in the face of any default by the corporate borrower. Bonds may be secured by particular assets or have other characteristics which render them "senior" securities.

"Debentures," on the other hand, are not as easily recognized on their face to be securities. They are debt instruments issued simply on the general credit and good faith of the issuer. They are often subordinate (indeed they may be heavily subordinated) to other creditor claims against corporate assets. They are generally unsecured and they are often convertible into common stock of the issuer on stated terms. However, they may also be utilized in the capitalization of a business enterprise in which the purchaser/lender expects to play a significant managerial role or where terms are more indicative of a commercial lending relationship rather than an "investment." Thus their character in commerce is not nearly as universally understood as that of "stocks and bonds." Nevertheless, as with ordinary bonds, debentures have been commonly recognized by courts as investment securities.ⁿ³

There are no self evident characteristics of either "ordinary" corporate bonds or debentures that settle their status as securities on the face of the instruments themselves. Still, both types of debt instruments are frequently offered in public distributions, most often have intermediate to long maturities, and the payment of the income stream along with face value at maturity in accordance with the terms of the instrument is ultimately dependent upon the success of the enterprise. Corporate debt instruments, utilized in the capital formation settings that are the common arena of operation of blue sky laws, more often than not manifest every bit of investment risk, and as many "risk capital" characteristics as their equity counterparts. Indeed, they may evidence the long term, unsecured or under collateralized outlay of capital for capital expenditures or "start up" of business by unsophisticated investors who have little or no access to financial information on which to evaluate risk, and no power to exercise any essential managerial control.ⁿ⁴

There are varying forms, risk characteristics, and types of issuers of "bonds." Blue sky laws provide no exclusion or exemption from the definition of security for any corporate bonds or debentures based upon the presence of any risk reducing characteristics. However, U.S. Treasury Bonds and other Treasury and agency securities backed by the full faith and credit of the government, as well as state and municipal debt securities, are generally exempted or excluded from coverage.ⁿ⁵ But the presence of such exempt bonds or debt securities does not automatically mean that blue sky law protections will not apply. For example, in Probst v. State of Oklahoma,ⁿ⁶ interests in an investment pool for the purchase of U.S. Treasury Bonds or Bills was held to be a non exempt security, separate and distinct from the Treasury securities themselves:

Appellant concedes he offered to sell T Bonds. This concession alone defeats his defense against Count I. While the T Bonds themselves are government securities exempt from registration ... the pool of several investors which the appellant created is a separate and distinct secondary or derivative security... . Even though the Treasury Bonds which are the underlying securities, are exempt from registration, the pool, or secondary security, is not.ⁿ⁷

Government bond or debt security derivative instruments or settings complicate the application of blue sky laws and the interpretation of exemptions. Still, the main focus is on those situations in which the need for blue sky law protection is not outweighed by other apparent factors. Thus, "zero coupon stripped certificates of accrual" on U.S. Treasury securities used in a promotional give away offer for a weight loss program were considered non exempt securities under the Pennsylvania blue sky law in In re Amerdream Corporation.ⁿ⁸ A major consideration for the court was the promotional setting, and the failure in advertising to disclose the true nature of the security involved, and its particular characteristics. On the other hand, in Messer v. E.F. Hutton & Co., the 11th Circuit held that U.S. Treasury Bond futures, traded in commodity markets, were outside the scope of the Florida blue sky law and governed instead by provisions of the (federal) Commodity Exchange Act.ⁿ⁹

Whether a particular type of bond or debt security is exempt from registration or review provisions of a blue sky law, it will generally not escape coverage under anti fraud provisions and purchaser remedies. Moreover, sales practices will be subject to scrutiny by state securities regulators in the absence of state law provisions limiting authority, or an exemption for broker dealers and salespersons exclusively involved with exempt securities. It is also certain that investment programs or schemes built around otherwise exempt bonds or debt securities will not escape full coverage of blue sky laws, either through the creation of a separate secondary or "derivative" security, or via "investment contract" analysis.ⁿ¹⁰

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 455 U.S. 551, 102 S. Ct 1220, 71 L. Ed.2d 409 (1982) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 455 U.S. at 556, 102 S. Ct. at 1223, 71 L. Ed. 2d at 414 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See E. H. Hinds, Inc. v. Coolidge Bank & Trust Co., 6 Mass. App. Ct. 5, 372 N.E.2d 259 (1978). Recognition among state courts, as illustrated by E.H. Hinds, has generally come in considerations of debenture instruments under the investment securities provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code. Article 8 provisions of the UCC are triggered by the presence of an instrument "[o]f a type commonly dealt in upon securities exchanges or markets or commonly recognized in any area in which it is issued or dealt in as a medium for investment." See U.C.C. § 8 102(1)(a)(ii); see also Stoerger v. Ivesdale Co op Grain Co., 15 Ill. App. 3d 313, 304 N.E.2d 300 (1973).

For a useful consideration of characteristics which render debentures securities, see First Financial Savings Bank, Inc. v. American Bankers Insurance Co. of Florida, [1989-1990 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 94,824 (E.D.N.C. 1989).

(n4)Footnote 4. But see Wingsco Energy One v. Vanguard Groups Resources 1984 Inc. [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 94,038 (S.D.Tex. 1988) (zero coupon "bonds" were the equivalent of commercial notes used to secure a loan rather than representing any "speculation or investment").

(n5)Footnote 5. Section 402(1) of the Uniform Act, for example, exempts from coverage:

[A]ny security (including a revenue obligation) issued or guaranteed by the U.S., any state, any political subdivision of a state, or any agency or corporate or other instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing.

Other exemptions or exclusions for bonds or debt securities sold by particular types of issuers may also be found. They are based upon guarantees or other risk reducing characteristics, or situations where no "investment" risk is legitimately perceived, as evident in exemptions for securities of non profit, charitable or benevolent issuers.

But see Abell v. Potomac Insurance Company of Illinois, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,965 (W.D. La. 1987) (applying Louisiana law, bonds issued by a non profit corporation were not entitled to exemption from coverage of the blue sky law where the "non profit" status of the issuer was specious; "[t]he mere non profit status of an entity does not assure entitlement to the exemption").

(n6)Footnote 6. [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,559 (Okla. Crim. App. 1991); see also SEC v. American Bd. of Trade, Inc., 751 F.2d 529 (2d Cir. 1984); SEC v. Capital Counsellors, Inc., 332 F. Supp. 291 (S.D.N.Y. 1971).

(n7)Footnote 7. CCH P 73,559, at 75,470.

(n8)Footnote 8. In re Amerdream Corporation, [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,250 (Pa. Sec. Comm. 1990).

(n9)Footnote 9. 847 F.2d 673 (11th Cir. 1988) ; see also Conroy v. Andeck Resources '81 Year End Ltd., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,345 (Ill. App. Ct. 1985) (futures contracts on financial instruments do not constitute securities under Illinois blue sky law).

(n10)Footnote 10. "Investment contracts" are discussed at § 2.08, below.

20 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.05

§ 2.05 Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests

Fractional interests in oil, gas and mineral rights are interests in real property. Nevertheless, investment programs, involving leases, assignments or other interests in regard to oil and gas wells or mineral rights, and the exploitation of such resources, historically have been prominent subjects of state securities regulatory activity. Generally, oil, gas and mineral interests, and programs involving them, are securities under Blue Sky laws as specific categories, such as section 401[l] of the Uniform Act: "certificate of interest or participation in an oil, gas or mining title or lease or in payments out of production under such a title or lease." Virtually all states have adopted that category, or a substantially similar one, in the definition of security.ⁿ¹

That such interests are securities is especially true considering the notion in Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth,ⁿ² that when an instrument falls plainly within the statutory definition, there is no need to look beyond the thing itself to determine its status as a security. Thus, in Cascade Energy and Metals Corporation v. Banks,ⁿ³ a federal appeals court, applying California law, concluded that, on its face, an undivided one thirty fifth interest in a mining claim was a security under the blue sky law definition. That definition, said the court, includes "certificate[s] of interest or participation ... in a mining title or lease." The court found no ambiguity in the definition, or evidence that the working interests were anything other than what they purported to be. Investment programs built around royalty pooling, production payment sharing arrangements, "services" or other exploration/exploitation enterprises involving risk capital may also be brought within coverage via investment contract analysis.ⁿ⁴ In either case, coverage of blue sky laws in this area is broad.ⁿ⁵

Still, not all oil, gas or mineral interests are securities. In Norden v. Friedman ⁿ⁶ a Missouri appellate court articulated the baseline considerations for identifying such interests as securities in interpreting that state's inclusion of "certificate of interest or participation in an oil, gas, or mining title or lease." The court was confronted with the claim that an assignment of a three quarters working interest in an oil lease, which constituted the transfer of the seller's entire interest, constituted a security by reason of this provision in the blue sky law. It examined the focus of both state and federal protection where these interests are involved:

Determining what constitutes a security has been a complex task from the beginning. Oil and gas rights, in particular, posed difficult problems for the legislative draftsmen. "Such rights were notorious subjects of speculation and fraud, but leases and assignments were also indispensable instruments of legitimate oil exploration and production." Although Congress does not specifically mention "certificate of interest or participation in an oil, gas or mining title or lease," not every sale of an interest in an oil lease amounts, ipso facto, to the sale of a "security"... . It was the drafters' intent to exclude from the scope of the Acts isolated sales or assignments of oil and gas leases or fractional parts thereof to specific persons, and to include as securities only that form of splitting up of mineral interests which have customarily been used for speculative purposes.

The courts have held that the sale of an entire leasehold interest in oil and gas rights does not constitute the sale of a security within the meaning of the 1933 and 1934 Acts... . If the seller transfers everything he owns there can be no creation of a fractional undivided interest in oil and gas, and this is so even though what he sold was a fractional interest therein.

These principles apply to the facts at hand. The Friedmans sold all of their interest in the Piper Lease. This is not a form of splitting up of mineral interests which has been used mostly for speculative purposes, but simply a sale of their leasehold interest.ⁿ⁷

SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. ⁿ⁸ amplifies the point that the prime focus where oil, gas or mineral interests are concerned is not on the conveyance of a property right, but rather on an enterprise and the expectation of profit to come from it. Joiner Leasing emphasizes the dependency of value of the real property interest upon the enterprise. The Court undertook to extend securities law protections to property rights that were clearly subject to speculation and fraud, and which had no value apart from the promoters' enterprise. Thus, as Norden counsels, while the sale of naked leasehold rights in oil or gas properties does not automatically involve the sale of a security, the conclusion is different where investment risk is added to the scenario.ⁿ⁹

Offering "investments" in the form of a one percent interest in a producing oil well constituted the sale of a security under the Montana blue sky law.ⁿ¹⁰ The program required a $6,000 "investment" in a producing well that was claimed to be currently pumping 35 barrels per day, but for which an increase to 60 barrels per day was expected. In Illinois, the sale of an undivided fractional interest in two oil and gas wells, along with an agreement to pay a portion of the development costs, was held to be the sale of a security. The economic relationship between the parties, said the court in Daleiden v. Wiggins Oil Company,ⁿ¹¹ clearly involved a contract in which the purchasers invested money in the seller's enterprise, and that but for paying certain costs in addition to the leasehold interests their investment would be worthless. And in Wyoming, an undivided fractional working interest in an oil and gas lease was held to be a security where the seller retained exclusive control over drilling operations, and where promotional characteristics clearly defined the agreement involved and the substance of the rights and obligations between the parties, as an investment.ⁿ¹²

"Pooling" programs in regard to oil and gas production royalties likewise result in the creation of a security. In Moffit v. Sederlund, ⁿ¹³ a royalty pooling "deed" by which landowners conveyed undivided interests in all oil and gas produced from their land to a trustee of a royalty pool was held to be a security. The landowners conveyed interests to the trustee in exchange for the right to share in royalties generated from other interests conveyed to the pool. The "deed," said a Michigan appellate court, was a "certificate of interest or participation ... in payments out of production."ⁿ¹⁴

Despite the specific statutory classification, investment contract analysis is evident in many oil and gas cases, particularly where related ventures or enterprises are involved.ⁿ¹⁵ In Johnson v. Rogers, ⁿ¹⁶ for example, working interests in oil and gas leases were held to be securities by definition. In addition, however, "turnkey" contracts for drilling and completion of wells associated with those leases were held to be separate securities--investment contracts--because they were offered to investors as an inducement to purchase, and exploit, the leasehold interests.ⁿ¹⁷

In the context of oil and gas interests the Idaho Supreme Court cautioned, however, that the application of investment contract analysis must in fact be consistent with economic reality. In Dept. of Finance v. Resource Service Co., ⁿ¹⁸ the court refused to characterize a program in which participants paid a fee to a promoter in order to enter their names in a lottery for oil and gas leases offered by a state agency as involving a security. The court explained that by paying the fee participants did not contribute capital to any enterprise with the intention of sharing in its profits and earnings. The economic reality, said the court, was that participants paid a fee for a service. The promoter advertised its expertise in the procedures involved, but the purchaser could not reasonably expect anything other than the right to win or lose in the lottery in return. A purchaser who wins such a lottery may enjoy the good fortune associated with acquiring a valuable right, but does not share it with the provider of the service.ⁿ¹⁹

Mining and mineral related cases have also turned on investment contract analysis. Many mineral or mining related programs have focused on gold production, and more often involve risk capital for speculative mining operations than anything approaching the acquisition of a claim or leasehold interest. In People ex rel. Bender v. Wind River Mining Project,ⁿ²⁰ for example, "gold certificates" were acquired by persons who would have no role in specialized mining and refining operations financed with their capital. The production of gold was entirely dependent upon the success of the seller/promoters' venture, and the court had no trouble finding a security.ⁿ²¹ On the other hand, the outright purchase of gold ore, already mined and ready for shipment, was held not to involve a security where the seller retained no control over any subsequent storing, processing or refining of the ore, and there was no "common enterprise" between purchaser and seller.ⁿ²²

The mission of blue sky laws where interests in oil, gas or mineral rights are involved is not to regulate the acquisition and disposition of real property rights, or the exploitation of mineral resources. Rather, the goal is protection against fraud and overreaching in the creation and marketing of passive investment programs in which the fortunes of purchasers are interwoven with and dependent upon the seller/promoter.

This baseline concern is illustrated by Dunbar v. RKG Engineering, Inc.,ⁿ²³ in which a Texas court denied blue sky law protection to a purchaser of interests in several oil and gas leases where the purchaser was deemed to be a joint venturer in the leaseholds. Although the interests sold fell literally within the Texas definition of security, the court found the circumstances presented a common plan and joint venture between the parties well before the assignment of interests in the leases was undertaken. The court simply concluded that the blue sky law would not appropriately be applied to transactions between joint venturers.

What plainly emerges from the cases is that if an interest in an oil, gas or mining property, whether evidenced by a working interest, lease or other "certificate," represents only the opportunity to share in profits of an enterprise controlled by another, and from which it derives at least a substantial part of its value, a security is present. That is at least implicit in the definitions of most blue sky laws, which speak to certificates of interest in, or participation in, leases or production payments rather than fractional undivided interests themselves, in contrast to the federal definitions. The sense of the language, as succinctly expressed by a California court, is that the purchaser of a security in these circumstances looks to something beyond his or her own efforts, or the interest itself, to realize expected value:

It is settled law that any deed, certificate of interest or like instrument of conveyance or assignment falls within the act only when it appears directly or inferentially that the buyer contemplates receipt of profits from activities of other persons, such as carrying on a business, drilling an oil well, or sinking and operating a mine; the mere conveyance to him of a fractional interest in a piece of land or other type of property is not subject to the statute if the buyer must look only to the thing bought or his own efforts to produce a profit to himself.ⁿ²⁴

Given this long standing guiding principle, it is certain that few garden variety oil and gas drilling or exploration programs would ever escape blue sky coverage.ⁿ²⁵ Plainly, mineral exploitation programs that realistically represent only the opportunity to speculate on the success of another's enterprise, undertaking or "services" will almost invariably be deemed to be securities through investment contract analysis. In all cases, the manner of promotion involved in oil, gas and mineral exploitation programs will operate to erase any doubt.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The majority of states include oil, gas and mineral interests within their definitions of security via the Uniform Act language. Three states: Arizona, Illinois and Kentucky, more closely track the language of the federal securities laws, which speaks only of "fractional undivided interests in oil, gas or other mineral rights" rather than certificates of interest or participation. Other states utilize variants of the certificate language. Florida, for example, defines security to include: "[a]ny certificate of interest in oil, gas, petroleum, mineral or mining title or lease, or the right to participate therein." Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.021(15).

(n2)Footnote 2. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 896 F.2d 1557 (10th Cir. 1990) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Shurley v. L & C Consultants, LLC, CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 74,722, at 79,835, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56438 (E.D. Ark. July 8, 2008) ("Participation Agreements" representing an undivided interest in a portion of oil and gas leases are readily identifiable as securities under the Arkansas Securities Act); Manley v. State, 774 S.W.2d 334 (Tex. App. 1989) (fractional share of working interest in oil and gas lease fits squarely within the definition of security, and was not entitled to "joint adventure" exclusion).

(n5)Footnote 5. See also Manley v. State, 774 S.W.2d 334 (Tex. App. 1989) (fractional share of working interest in oil and gas lease fits squarely within the definition of security, and was not entitled to "joint adventure" exclusion).

(n6)Footnote 6. [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,665 (Mo. Ct. App. 1987).

(n7)Footnote 7. P 72,665, at 72,774, quoting SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Co., 320 U.S. 344, 352, 611 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 93, 94 (1943) [citations omitted].

(n8)Footnote 8. 320 U.S. 344, 611 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 83 (1943) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See also State v. Cook, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,329, at 68,082 (Okla. 1977):

A "flexible" construction of securities has evolved through case law and legislative history in order to meet the schemes of those who intend to use the money of others on the promise of profits. Although sales of undivided oil and gas interests are specifically excluded from the Oklahoma blue sky definition of "securities," when they are sold in conjunction with operation or management agreements which deprive the investors of any control over the investment they are securities. Even though an investment transaction contains an excluded security, the package as a whole may be considered a security; the economic realities of the transaction govern the determination. Thus, where an investor expects a profit on money which is subject to risk, and that profit is a product of the operator's actions alone, an exempt lease will not preclude the package from constituting a security.

Similarly, in Shepperd v. Boettcher & Company, Inc., 756 P.2d 182 (Wyo. 1988) , the court opined that the substance of rights and obligations between parties to the sale of fractional working interests in an oil and gas lease control whether a security is present.

(n10)Footnote 10. In re Osage Development Corp., [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,672 (Mont. Sec. Dept. 1987).

(n11)Footnote 11. [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,682 (Ill. 1987).

(n12)Footnote 12. Shepperd v. Boettcher & Company, Inc., n. 8, above.

(n13)Footnote 13. [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,341 (Mich. Ct. App. 1985).

(n14)Footnote 14. Id. at 71,535.

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., People v. Smith, [1988-1989 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,054, at 74,240 (Cal. App. 1989). The catch all "investment contract" category is discussed in § 2.08 below.

(n16)Footnote 16. 551 F. Supp. 281 (C.D. Cal. 1982) .

(n17)Footnote 17. As a matter of federal law, investment programs built around the sale or lease of mineral rights have regularly been held to involve securities, either by definition or investment contract analysis. See also SEC v. International Mining Exchange, Inc., [1981-1982 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 98,013 (D. Colo. 1981); SEC v. Goldfield Deep Mines Co., 758 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1985) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 130 Idaho 877, 950 P.2d 249 (1997) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See also SEC v. Energy Group of America, Inc., 459 F. Supp. 1234 (S.D.N.Y. 1978) (customers paid a fee to participate in a lottery, but did not "invest").

(n20)Footnote 20. 219 Cal. App. 3d 1390, 269 Cal. Rptr. 106 (1990).

(n21)Footnote 21. The court observed:

[D]efendants are engaged in a difficult and speculative mining operation. They wish to finance their enterprise with other people's money and to that end have turned to random solicitation from the general public. The members of the public who subscribe to the gold certificate offering will have no part in the operation or management of the mining and refining operations. And the subscribers' money is at risk since whether they will realize their objective, the receipt of gold, will be entirely dependent upon the success of defendants' business venture. The sale of the Wind River gold certificates to raise risk capital is precisely the type of transaction the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 was intended to regulate and the gold certificates are paradigmatic examples of securities. Id.

See also In re Howerton, [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,053 (Texas Sec. Bd. 1989) (interests in an operation to recover gold from water).

(n22)Footnote 22. Moreland v. Department of Corps., 194 Cal. App. 3d 506, 239 Cal. Rptr. 558 (1987).

(n23)Footnote 23. 746 S.W.2d 314 (Tex. Ct. App. 1988) .

(n24)Footnote 24. People v. Rankin, 160 Cal. App. 2d 93, 325 P.2d 10 (1958).

(n25)Footnote 25. That is not to say that every such program would be subject to the full coverage of blue sky laws. An exemption from registration, merit review or other administrative procedures may be available. However, anti fraud and purchaser remedies would remain available.

21 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.06

§ 2.06 Options, Warrants and Subscription Rights

[1] Options and Warrants Generally

The Uniform Act and those states adopting it bring within the definition of security any "warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase" any other enumerated form of security.ⁿ¹ Other states, following the federal model, expressly include "options to purchase securities" among the list of instruments and categories.ⁿ² In either case, options qualify as securities themselves under the "right ... to purchase" category in every definition.ⁿ³ Moreover, true to Landreth, guidance at the federal level leaves little room for doubt: "The option to purchase stock ... is such a traditional securities instrument that its existence may be shown 'by proving the document itself' without any need 'to look beyond the characteristics of the instrument... ' "ⁿ⁴

Equity options (either "calls" or "puts")ⁿ⁵ grant their purchasers the right, but not the obligation, either to buy or sell a fixed number of shares of an underlying stock at a specified "strike" price for a particular period of time. More complex options on the values of various stock indexes operate in the same fashion, except that no specific underlying stock is involved. Instead, their value is derived from a stock index such as the Standard and Poor's 500 Stock Index. These "index" options, more commonly referred to as "derivatives," are one form of an increasingly complex set of financial products used primarily by institutions to hedge against various financial market risks.ⁿ⁶

Warrants or "rights" operate in the same manner as options in regard to the right to acquire new or additional shares of an underlying security. However, they do not necessarily possess the standardized characteristics and terms that make for "listed" options, and which allow for the operation of continuous options trading markets on a national securities exchange like the Chicago Board Options Exchange. Distributions of warrants and rights are undertaken by corporate issuers. The instruments trade as listed securities or in over the counter markets, independently of the associated security although, as with options, their market value derives from the value of the associated security.

The role of state blue sky regulation and remedies with regard to options and warrants has been limited primarily to sales practices, and, in general, to the conduct of regulated persons such as broker dealers and salespeople under anti fraud and licensing provisions. The issuance of exchange listed options is generally immune from state registration and review processes by reason of exemptions contained in most blue sky laws for listed securities or rights to purchase listed securities.ⁿ⁷ The offer and sale of other options, namely commodity options, in "boiler room" operations and other circumstances that would trigger historic blue sky concerns for protection of the public, is likewise largely outside state regulation under blue sky laws by reason of federal preemption.ⁿ⁸ Nevertheless, where not otherwise constrained, state courts are willing and able to extend the full range of blue sky protection in any context where the instrument involved answers to the description of an option or right.

In Computer Concepts, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan v. Brandt,ⁿ⁹ for example, an option to convert debt into equity that was incorporated into a negotiated loan agreement used for the financing of a proposed motion picture was held to be a security subject to registration and other provisions of the Oregon blue sky law. Responding to the contention that the loan agreement, as a whole, should not be deemed to include a security and that, in any event, the "option" contained in it was not exercised the court spoke of the breadth of coverage relating to options as follows:

[T]he very nature of an option is to permit a future act, and, as we have noted, the legislature has manifested a consistent intention to regulate the sale of options. The system would be unworkable if it required registration by a seller only at the point when the buyer decided to exercise an already purchased option. The question is whether an option, if exercised, would be a security.ⁿ¹⁰

The option, said the court, was part and parcel of the consideration paid and was, unambiguously, an integral part of a single transaction.ⁿ¹¹

Stock options involved in corporate compensation or incentive programs for executives plainly answer to blue sky law definitions of security. In most executive compensation situations, however, traditional concern for "investor" protection is not present, and transactional exemptions from coverage of blue sky registration and review provisions are likely to be available in any event. However, where stock options in an employment setting are actually a part of a corporate financing plan, serious concerns for investor protection may arise. In People v. Carmichael,ⁿ¹² criminal convictions for the offer and sale of stock options in violation of the California blue sky law were affirmed where stock options of varying types were sold as a condition of employment to people who answered various employment opportunity advertisements by a company undertaking the production and sale of a three wheeled vehicle. The advertisements indicated that an "investment" in the company of $1,500 to $2,000 was required. The court had no trouble concluding that the defendants had willfully offered and sold securities in violation of the California blue sky law. The stock options represented the right to subscribe to or purchase a security, and were at the same time investment contracts.ⁿ¹³ The entire scenario was one in which the options, and other forms of instruments, represented only devices by which the issuer and its principals sought to raise funds for the conduct of the business venture through a well organized promotional campaign.

In conventional corporate financing settings the issuance of: (i) options, warrants or rights in connection with the distribution of other securities; (ii) units comprised of both common stock and warrants; and (iii) options or warrants granted as part of underwriters' compensation in an offering will not escape registration or review procedures in accordance with any applicable blue sky provision or policy. Options or warrants granted as part of underwriters' compensation are reviewed under general fairness standards state by state, pursuant to any applicable percentage limitation or calculation of maximum fees and expenses of an offering that may apply.

While blue sky investor concerns may not arise where stock options are involved in the conventional corporate executive compensation setting, subsequent events or conduct in regard to options can trigger blue sky remedies. Inducements to surrender existing options in exchange for some other right to acquire stock on different terms, for example, give rise to investor protection concerns.ⁿ¹⁴

Finally, although options, warrants and "rights" generally are most likely to be considered securities by the nature of the thing itself and the express definitional category in blue sky laws, it is important to note that investment contract analysis may also operate to bring less conventional forms of options or rights within the ambit of blue sky coverage.ⁿ¹⁵

[2] Preorganization and Subscription Rights

In the preformation stage of an enterprise the nature of an investment decision made by one committing risk capital to the enterprise is no different than a post formation decision to do the same. The offer and sale of interests in a corporation to be formed, or, commonly, the solicitation of subscriptions for securities to be issued, present all of the concerns for investor protection associated with any security. The instrument represents a contract to buy, purchase or to otherwise acquire securities. Thus, the Uniform Act and all state blue sky laws, include, in one form or another, a "preorganization certificate or subscription" among the list of things defined as securities.ⁿ¹⁶

In the main, "preorganization certificate or subscription" refers to the pre incorporation subscription for capital stock.ⁿ¹⁷ The prime characteristics of such an instrument have been illustrated as follows:

[T]he "Agreement to Form a Corporation," whether it be considered an investment contract, a contract for the distribution of shares of corporate stock or a joint venture agreement, expressly provides for the distribution of shares of stock in a corporation to be thereafter formed. As such it is most certainly a contract to buy, purchase or otherwise acquire those shares of stock. And, it most assuredly comes within the definition of security as a preorganization certificate or subscription and an investment contract as well as being a certificate of interest or participation in or right to subscribe to or purchase stock.ⁿ¹⁸

The classification of preformation interests as securities may be impacted by other characteristics of the relationship between the parties that creates a joint venture interest or participation rather than a security. The preformation phase of a corporate enterprise may well involve the association of entrepreneurs in the organization of the enterprise, whose respective roles may be active. The inclusion of preorganization certificates and subscriptions in blue sky law definitions presumes that the interests entail no different characteristics from those associated with the security ultimately expected, and that the concern for investor protection is no different. It is quite possible in the preformation corporate setting, however, that a joint venture among entrepreneurs may be found, and that despite an instrument or agreement that answers to the name of preorganization certificate or subscription, the circumstances and relationship between the parties dictates that no security is present.

In the entrepreneurial, preformation, corporate setting it is not uncommon for a few individuals to agree to form a corporation in which each will contribute an equal amount of money and receive equal amounts of stock when issued. The money may be used up, and no corporation ever formed. Have the contributors purchased securities? Each can be said to have purchased or subscribed to a preorganization interest. But if they are all in fact to be equal participants in the organization and operation of the business, is there concern for investor protection under the blue sky law? Joint ventures and the joint venture "gloss" that may be placed on instruments otherwise answering to a listed category of security in blue sky definitions are considered later.ⁿ¹⁹ In those cases, however, where the preorganization subscription process involves solicitation and a selling process no different from that which marks the offering and sale of any conventional form of security, there is no question that the interests or instruments are securities under blue sky law definitions whether or not the ultimate entity is ever formed.ⁿ²⁰ Also, the form of preorganization instrument does not matter. In this setting the security may take the form of a note, a certificate of interest or participation, a temporary interim certificate, a receipt, a warrant or right to subscribe for an interest, or anything else that amounts to a commitment of risk capital in the initial stages of organization.ⁿ²¹

While preformation or preorganization interests fall within the definition of security under all state blue sky laws, most states also provide an exemption from registration or qualification requirements when they are offered only to a limited number of people and in circumstances involving no commissions or other indicia of a selling process. Some states also specifically exempt limited preformation activities and instruments as a means of encouraging capital formation by small businesses. In these limited offering settings there will nearly always be an available exemption in one form or another to permit the offer and sale of preorganization subscriptions, although a separate limited offering or other exemption may be required to cover the distribution of the stock or other securities to which the subscription applies.ⁿ²²

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Uniform Act Section 401(l).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25019 (definition includes any put, call, straddle or privilege on any security); Ind. Code § 23-2-1-4(k) (any option to purchase any security); N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 352(l) (includes calls or options for stocks); Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(B) (options to purchase securities); Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.02(13)(a) (any option or right to purchase a security).

(n3)Footnote 3. Whether or not expressly included, blue sky law definitions are broadly construed with respect to including options, even where the thing to which the right relates may not itself be a security. See Prudential Bache Securities, Inc. v. Cullather, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,663 (E.D. Va. 1987) (applying Virginia law, currency options held to be securities under a "broad and open ended" view of the blue sky law).

See also SEC v. Unique Financial Concepts, Inc., 196 F.3d 1195 (11th Cir. 1999) (contracts for sale of foreign currency futures held to be investment contracts under the federal Howey test). The specific treatment of foreign currency and options or rights associated with foreign currency as securities under blue sky laws is discussed in § 2.09[3], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. One-O-One Enterprises, Inc. v. Caruso, 848 F.2d 1283, 1288, 270 U.S. App. D.C. 251 (D.C. Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Although less familiar than their exchange-traded equity counterparts, options on debt securities (primarily U.S. government securities) trade in certain markets, as do derivative options such as equity market indexes or "interest options" deriving from government debt securities. Options on currencies are also available, and allow for hedging against exchange rate risks.

Commodity options represent another breed of option, not involving any right in regard to a security, but which may nevertheless by definition in some states be deemed to be a security. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 45.55.130(12) ("Security means ... an option on a contract for the future delivery of agricultural or mineral commodities or any other commodity offered or sold to the public and not regulated by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission..."); 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7302(l)(1) ("Security means any ... options on commodities"); Ind. Code § 23-2-1(k) ("Security means any ... option on a commodity futures contract; option, put, call, privilege or other right to purchase or sell a commodity futures contract"). The extent of state authority, if any, to regulate in the area of commodity options is a matter dependent on the extent of federal preemption by reason of the exclusive grant of jurisdiction to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission in the Commodity Exchange Act. See 7 U.S.C. § 2. The exclusive jurisdiction provision of the federal act has been held to evidence a clear intention to exclude states from regulation of commodity options under blue sky laws. See International Trading Ltd. v. Bell, 262 Ark. 244, 556 S.W.2d 420 (1977); State v. Monex Int'l, Ltd., 527 S.W.2d 804 (Tex. App. 1975).

(n6)Footnote 6. In addition to options, the major categories of derivatives are "forwards" and "futures," which obligate the holder to buy or sell a specific amount or value of an underlying asset, reference rate or index at a specified price at a particular future date, and "swaps," which are customized agreements between counterparties to make periodic payments to each other for a specified period. Forwards, futures and swaps are not themselves securities, and are not subject to blue sky laws, despite the fact that in some cases, as with "financial" futures traded in commodity futures markets, the underlying assets may be securities. See Conroy v. Andeck Resources '81 Year-End Ltd., Ill. App. 3d 375, 484 N.E.2d 525 (1985); Mallen v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 605 F. Supp. 1105 (N.D. Ga. 1985) (stock index futures are not securities).

See also Mount Lucas Assocs. v. MG Ref. & Mktg., Inc., 250 A.D.2d 245, 682 N.Y.S.2d 14 (1998) (swap agreements utilized in connection with oil price risk management services, based on oil futures and options, held not to be investment contracts).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Uniform Act § 402(a)(8). California includes a representative exemption:

Any security listed or approved for listing upon notice of issuance on a national securities exchange or designated or approved for designation upon notice of issuance as a national market system security on an interdealer quotation system by the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc ... and any warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to the security...

Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o) (emphasis added).

(n8)Footnote 8. See n.5 above. The scope of authority of any securities regulatory agency to deal with another species of options, foreign currency options, is discussed in § 2.09[3], below.

(n9)Footnote 9. 310 Ore. 706, 801 P.2d 800 (1990) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Id. at 712 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Id.

(n12)Footnote 12. 106 Cal. App. 3d 124, 164 Cal. Rptr. 872 (1980).

(n13)Footnote 13. The financing scheme also involved the offer and sale of demand notes redeemable in stock of the company, as well as the sale of "dealerships." Criminal charges included not only the failure to obtain a requisite permit for the offer and sale of securities, but also the sale of those securities by means of false statements and a fraudulent scheme.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Disher v. Fulgoni, 161 Ill. App. 3d 1, 514 N.E.2d 767 (1987) (surrender of stock option rights in exchange for voting trust certificates and the opportunity to buy twice as many shares represented a transformation of employees' interests and triggered blue sky law remedies).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., In re Wellington Precious Metals, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,405 (Wyo. Sec. of State 1986) ("Deferred delivery" contracts which have the attributes of an option are investment contracts).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Uniform Act § 401(l).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Anzai v. Kawai, 50 Hawaii 406, 411, 441 P.2d 345, 349 (1968) .

But see Curtis v. Johnson, 92 Ill. App. 2d 141, 234 N.E.2d 566 (1968) ("Trust receipt" amounted to a preorganization agreement or subscription).

(n18)Footnote 18. Stevens v. Vowell, 343 F.2d 374, 379 (10th Cir. 1965); see Getchell v. United States, 282 F.2d 681 (5th Cir. 1960); see also Commonwealth v. Bomersbach, 260 Pa. Super. 28, 393 A.2d 995 (1978) (sale of pre-incorporation subscriptions).

(n19)Footnote 19. See § 2.08[2][a] below.

See also Hathaway v. Porter Royalty Pool, Inc., 296 Mich. 90, 110, 295 N.W. 571 (1941) (preorganization certificates or subscriptions issued in a joint venture, using the medium of a corporate form for convenience in effecting the joint venture, is not the issuance of securities contemplated by the blue sky law).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Queen v. Commonwealth, 434 S.W.2d 318 (Ky. Ct. App. 1968) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Curtis v. Johnson, 92 Ill. App.2d 141, 234 N.E.2d 566 (1968) ("Trust receipt" amounted to a preorganization agreement or subscription).

(n22)Footnote 22. Available exemptions for preorganization subscriptions or rights, either as specific transactional exemptions or limited offerings are presented in each of the State Guides contained in Vols. 3 and 4, below, and are also discussed generally in Chapter 8 (Exempt Issuer Transactions) and Chapter 10 (Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation).

22 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.07

§ 2.07 Partnerships and Joint Ventures

The existence of a security, in any form, is indicated by the presence of a passive investor. That is to say that value--risk capital--is committed to an enterprise by one whose expected return is largely dependent upon the managerial activities and success of someone else. People who come together as entrepreneurs, and who presumably have equal say in their joint undertaking, are not passive investors, even if they choose to delegate managerial responsibilities within their group. Implicit in this kind of relationship is the notion that all participants in the enterprise have the ability to protect themselves through the ultimate power to control, even though one or more of them may in fact be "passive" in day to day operations. Thus, because general partners have a legal right to participate in the management of the partnership, by applying investment contract analysis, the partnership's interest is presumed not to be a security.

A California appellate court addressed the essential and fundamental distinction between true joint venture relationships and those which amount to investment contracts in Consolidated Management Group LLC v. Dept. of Corporations.ⁿ¹ The question before the court was whether "joint venture" units were securities subject to qualification under the California Blue Sky law. In the situation presented, the "managing" venture had authority over the venture's day-to-day operations. However, other venturers had the right to remove the managing venture by a majority vote. The joint venture agreement provided generally for collective management and control by all of the venturers, and granted the venturers rights of general partners. In examining whether the joint venture interests constituted securities, the court applied investment contract analysis, with the essential question being the extent to which "venturers" were dependent upon the some unique managerial ability of the managing venture. The court concluded that the success of particular projects marketed to the putative joint venturers was uniquely dependent on the managing venturer's efforts, and that other venturers relied on those efforts in making their investments.ⁿ² The "joint venture" units were thus determined to be securities. The court observed that the investment was structured to avoid the appearance of dependence by joint venturers, but that in reality the investors were dependent upon the expertise of the manager.ⁿ³

Questions of control, and whether participants are indeed passive investors, commonly form the basis for considering interests in partnerships and joint ventures as securities under blue sky laws.ⁿ⁴ The Uniform Act definition includes no specific reference to partnerships or joint ventures, although both forms of association are easily considered under the specific category of "certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement," or, more commonly, "investment contract."ⁿ⁵ Moreover it can safely be said that limited partnerships involve interests that qualify as "any instrument or interest commonly known as a security."ⁿ⁶ These particular securities are further discussed below.

[1] Limited Partnerships

Limited partnerships are creations of statute in all states. The Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act defines such an organization as: "[a] partnership formed by two or more persons ... having as members one or more general partners and one or more limited partners."⁷ The key consideration for limited partnership interests as securities is the legal separation of limited "partners" from control over the enterprise that is vested in the general partner(s).⁸ Indeed, the presumed absence of control by limited partners is determinative of blue sky law coverage in nearly all cases involving limited partnerships.⁹ As a federal court concluded in examining limited partnerships as securities: "Virtually by definition ... because of their restrictions on participation, limited partnership interests usually qualify as securities..."¹⁰

Apart from the accepted notion that true limited partnership interests are securities on their face, it is also certain that "investment contract" analysis would compel the same conclusion.¹¹

The structural and legal distinction between limited partnerships and general partnerships or joint ventures illustrates the significance of the "passive" investor notion in determining the existence of a security. In contrast to the statutory qualifications on limited partner participation, a general partnership, also a statutory creation, merely provides for an "association of two or more persons to carry on as co owners a business for profit."¹² Unless otherwise agreed, all general partners have an equal voice in management regardless of their financial interest in the partnership, and all partners share in the profits and losses.¹³ General partners act as principal for themselves, and as agents for the partners as a group. Presumably, a true general partner, or joint venturer,¹⁴ expects to derive profits from his individual contribution to the efforts of the partners or co venturers in the enterprise. Blue sky law implications for general partnerships and joint ventures thus differ considerably from those applicable in limited partnership settings.

[2] Limited Liability Partnerships

The limited partners in a typical limited partnership are not involved in or empowered in regard to managing the affairs of the partnership, and limited partners are not personally liable for the obligations of the partnership unless they participate in control of the business. They are passive investors. An emergent hybrid form of partnership known as a limited liability partnership, or LLP, combines characteristics of a traditional general partnership in regard to control with the limited liability feature of a limited partnership. Limited liability partnerships are also creatures of statute, and are now available in most states. Because LLPs are a form of general partnership their members are permitted to participate in the control and management of the business of the LLP. However, LLP members, as opposed to general partners, are entitled to the protections of limited liability. In some instances, as a matter of express or implied agreement, or simply as a practical matter, the LLP "partners" may have very limited or no control in the management of the LLP.

There is as yet little case law addressing the treatment of LLP interests under state or federal securities laws, although enforcement actions suggest that regulators will consider them to be securities depending upon particular circumstances.¹⁵ In Toothman v. Freeborn & Peters ¹⁶ a Colorado appellate court concluded that the structure of a limited liability partnership does not support a presumption that LLP membership interests are not securities. Rather, the characteristics and organizational structure of each LLP must be assessed using investment contract principles to determine whether the interest at issue is a security. In Toothman the plaintiffs alleged that defendants organized and sold interests in 53 limited liability partnerships established to sell prepaid cellular phone services to some 5000 investors. In connection with ruling on a request for class action certification the trial court concluded that LLP interests are presumed not to be securities. The Court of Appeals reversed, concluding instead that application of investment contract principles defeats any presumption that limited liability partnerships are not securities. The relevant inquiry, said the court, is to determine whether the partner/investors expected profits from the essential managerial efforts of someone else, and whether the partners had any substantial power to affect the success of the enterprise. The case was thus remanded for further consideration. It clearly leaves the inquiry open in all LLP cases to the same extent it is open in regard to general partnerships, as discussed further below.

[3] General Partnerships and Joint Ventures

The characteristics of interests in general partnerships would seem to exclude them from being securities. The legal concept of a general partner's role is active participation in the firm, unlike the passive role of an investor in securities.ⁿ¹⁷ As noted above, general partnerships are associations of two or more co owners, who operate a business for profit,ⁿ¹⁸ and who, regardless of individual financial investment, have an equal voice in the management and control of the business.ⁿ¹⁹ In application, the controlling notion has been expressed by a federal appeals court as follows:

Normally a general partnership interest is not considered a 'security'... . The managerial powers vested in general partners and the express right of inspection of documents gives them the kind of leverage and ability to protect themselves that takes them outside the intended scope of the [Securities] Act.ⁿ²⁰

On the other hand, where a "partner" is totally dependent on others to operate the business, and has no control over the risk taken with her investment, a general partnership interest will be deemed to be a security. This assessment by a Washington appellate court, holding that a general partnership interest was in fact a security under that state's blue sky law, is particularly instructive concerning the distinction:

Here, we find that plaintiffs held a passive interest because they depended substantially upon defendants' management to obtain a profit. The purchasers executed a special power of attorney, relinquishing broad powers to the Board. The Board thus has extensive managerial responsibilities. Furthermore, testimony from prior defendants indicates that they perceived plaintiffs' role as passive. Finally, the purchasers were guaranteed a modest rate of return, demonstrating that they did not control the realization of a profit but were depending exclusively on the efforts of others.ⁿ²¹

The generally accepted criteria to be applied in determining whether a general partnership interest is a security were articulated under the aegis of the federal securities laws by the Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Williamson v. Tucker:ⁿ²²

A general partnership or joint venture interest can be designated a security if the investor can establish, for example, that (1) an agreement among the parties leaves so little power in the hands of the partner or venturer that the arrangement in fact distributes power as would a limited partnership; or (2) the partner or venturer is so inexperienced and unknowledgeable in business affairs that he is incapable of intelligently exercising his partnership or venture powers; or (3) the partner or venturer is so dependent on some unique entrepreneurial or managerial ability of the promoter or manager that he cannot replace the manager of the enterprise or otherwise exercise meaningful partnership or venture powers.ⁿ²³

In setting out these criteria, the court emphasized that the delegation of rights and duties among partners, standing alone, does not create the sort of dependence on which the existence of a security is premised. Simply relying on others for management does not indicate that the partners are so dependent upon a particular manager that they cannot replace that person or otherwise exercise ultimate control.ⁿ²⁴ Thus, as another federal court, applying the Oregon blue sky law, observed, a "passive partner" may nevertheless be a partner with managerial powers significant enough to keep a general partnership interest from being deemed a security.ⁿ²⁵

State courts have applied Williamson by examining the extent to which partners are deprived of significant managerial powers. A South Carolina court, for example, considered interests in a general partnership which granted a managing partner "full charge of the management conduct and operation of the partnership business in all respects," to be a security.ⁿ²⁶ Also, under Maryland lawⁿ²⁷ and Wyoming law,ⁿ²⁸ general partnerships were held to be securities where significant powers were granted to one partner. In an Arkansas case it was held that a general partnership interest was a security where only one partner had the knowledge and expertise to carry on the business of the partnership.ⁿ²⁹ However, in Maine, a partnership agreement was seen as providing "non managing partners" with significant powers, both individually and cumulatively, over the ultimate fate of the partnership, and no security was found.ⁿ³⁰

Not surprisingly, in enforcement cases under state blue sky laws the manner of offering "general partnership" interests, and general assessments of "economic reality" are prominent considerations. In Colorado, for example, the investigative and enforcement authority of that state's securities commissioner over general partnership interests that were marketed by telephone to persons, generally senior citizens, in several states by scripted calls in an operation described by regulators as a "boiler room" was affirmed.ⁿ³¹ Though described as a general partnership, the partnership was in fact under the management of a committee, on which none of the anticipated 400 "partners" was represented. Upholding the regulatory authority of the securities commissioner, the Colorado appeals court observed that not only would most of the partners be senior citizens, but also that they would be strangers to each other and to the promoter. They would be widely scattered geographically, and were solicited without regard to any expertise or ability to bring anything to the business of the partnership. In these circumstances, considerations of "economic reality" outweigh any theoretical notion of an actual partnership relation.ⁿ³²

No state specifically includes general partnership interests within the statutory definition of security. In some cases, however, specific exclusion from the definition has been accomplished by regulation.ⁿ³³ On the other hand, by regulation, one state has deemed all general partnership interests to be securitiesⁿ³⁴ and another has taken the same position where the interests are sold by public offering.ⁿ³⁵

The treatment of joint ventures under blue sky laws has reflected the fact that there is no functional difference between them and general partnerships in determining whether a security is present. Thus, as a general proposition, interests in joint ventures, with their presumption of shared control, are not securities. State courts have regularly so held.ⁿ³⁶

The statutory and regulatory approaches to joint ventures are consistent with those dealing with general partnerships as well. With the exception of Nebraska, blue sky law definitions of security are silent on the matter of joint ventures. California exempts interests in joint ventures from coverage of its blue sky law qualification provisions so long as no public offering of interests is involved.ⁿ³⁷ A regulation in Hawaii excludes most joint ventures as securities,ⁿ³⁸ while a New York regulation makes them subject to the state's regulatory scheme.ⁿ³⁹

[4] Limited Liability Companies

Nearly all states and the District of Columbia provide by statute for the creation of a "limited liability company" (LLC), a form of business organization affording "members" the limited liability associated with a corporation while at the same time permitting taxation of the entity as a partnership. LLCs are based upon a contractual arrangement among members, prescribing, among other things, the extent of participation in and control by the members in management and operations.ⁿ⁴⁰

Unlike limited partnerships, the limited liability advantage of an LLC is not lost with participation in control of the enterprise, although as discussed above the emergence of the limited liability partnership presents a new twist in liability-based analyses.

The issue of whether interests in LLCs are securities has largely been addressed via legislation and regulatory agency enforcement actions. In SEC v. Vision Communications, Inc.,ⁿ⁴¹ the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission sought and obtained a permanent injunction against defendants who had formed a Pennsylvania LLC to develop a wireless cable broadcasting enterprise. The court did not specifically address the issue of whether LLC membership interests are securities, but rather assumed as much in the circumstances presented, which included defendants aggressively soliciting funds from individual investors on promises of future profits. In addition, the SEC characterized the operation as a "boiler room operation." The SEC has since instituted enforcement actions against the offering and sale of LLC interests in other ventures and has obtained permanent injunctions as well, although again without any express determination that LLC interests are securities.ⁿ⁴²

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.07

Most of these SEC cases arose out of circumstances involving high pressure sales tactics; widespread solicitation to numerous financially unsophisticated persons who were induced to invest through the use of false or misleading information. All of the concerns for investor protection are present and the characterization of LLC interests as securities in those circumstances is plainly consistent with the objectives of federal and state securities laws. As one commentator who has closely examined the securities regulatory approach to LLCs observes, prosecutors have primarily targeted those LLC investment opportunities that involve high risk promotions, mass marketed to unsophisticated investors using high pressure sales techniques and claims of immediate and exorbitant returns.ⁿ⁴³ State regulators have been equally, if not more, aggressive in pursuing such situations and have obtained several cease and desist orders against the offer and sale of LLC interests, based on findings of sufficient evidence to conclude that the interests are securities.ⁿ⁴⁴ Many state Blue Sky laws have been amended specifically to include limited liability company interests in the definition of securities, as reflected in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act which expressly includes limited liability company interests as investment contracts.ⁿ⁴⁵

Because of the context in which they arise--public offerings or systematic solicitation of unsophisticated prospective members--these cases do not address the more fundamental question that determines whether LLC interests are securities in the more common business setting, namely, the extent to which members' governance rights or control, as normally set out in an "operating agreement" for a particular LLC, render the member something other than a passive investor. In some states the extent of participation by members in control of the enterprise is dictated by statute. Some statutes require management by managers--a board managed or centralized form of organization in which management power is reserved to a limited number of persons.ⁿ⁴⁶ Others prescribe variants of both centralized and decentralized management, the latter leaving management in the hands of the members and allowing for specification of member roles and rights through an operating agreement.

Using risk capital or investment contract analysis, interests in those LLCs in which there is centralized management and members are merely passive investors will be deemed to be securities.ⁿ⁴⁷ On the other hand, an operating agreement among members that delegates control over day to day business decisions to certain managing members, but retains some ultimate authority, introduces a different dynamic, and any meaningful opportunity created for participation in operations and control takes the LLC closer to general partnership or joint venture status rather than a security. A U.S. District Court examining a New York LLC thus applied investment contract analysis to conclude that membership interests were not securities.ⁿ⁴⁸ The court found that the business association was a "member-managed" LLC which, under New York law, is controlled by its members, who possess a broad range of rights and powers. New York law granted members not only the right collectively to manage, but also the right to vote in proportion to their holdings, to participate in the cash flow distribution structure, to call meetings, and to enjoy certain meaningful protections. The court further concluded that the plaintiff did not at the time of his investment intend to remain passive, and ultimately that the degree of control he actually exercised was less than he may have expected, that fact would not operate to convert his LLC membership interests into securities.ⁿ⁴⁹

There is no clear line in determining whether LLC interests are securities. Thus, as noted earlier, several states have acted by statute, rule or policy statement to prescribe the status of LLC interests under blue sky laws. Those states that have expressly brought LLC interests within the scope of their blue sky laws, either via the definition of security or "person" subject to requirements, include: Alaska,ⁿ⁵⁰ California,ⁿ⁵¹ Connecticut,ⁿ⁵² Georgia,ⁿ⁵³ New Mexico,ⁿ⁵⁴ Ohio,ⁿ⁵⁵ Pennsylvania,ⁿ⁵⁶ Tennessee,ⁿ⁵⁷ and Vermont.ⁿ⁵⁸

Other states such as Arizona, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina and Virginia have by rule or regulation, exemption, or some other statement of policy manifested the position that LLC interests fall within the ambit of their Blue Sky laws.ⁿ⁵⁹ There may be other informal or unpublished positions in other states. In all cases, careful attention to "context" and the particular member control or participation characteristics of an individual LLC is necessary in the final analysis of whether a security is being created in the formation of an LLC.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Consolidated Management Group, LLC v. Department of Corporations, 162 Cal. App. 4th 598, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 795 (2008).

(n2)Footnote 2. Consolidated Management Group, LLC v. Department of Corporations, 162 Cal. App. 4th 598, 614, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 795 (2008).

(n3)Footnote 3. Consolidated Management Group, LLC v. Department of Corporations, 162 Cal. App. 4th 598, 614, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 795 (2008).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ito International Corp. v. Prescott, Inc., 83 Wash. App. 282, 921 P.2d 566 (1996) (assessment of "passive" interest in a general partnership involving equal shares, but in which purchasers relinquished broad powers to a controlling board of directors).

(n5)Footnote 5. The 1985 Revised Uniform Securities Act, however, specifically includes limited partnership interests within the definition of security, see Uniform Securities Act (1985) § 101(16), and this specific treatment has been carried into section 102(28) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act.

(n6)Footnote 6. Some states expressly include limited partnership interests within their blue sky law definitions of security. See Ga. Code Ann. § 10-15-2(16); 32 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 10501(18); Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-105(k); Mo. Rev. Stat. § 409.401(1); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-2(v); N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 352e (as to limited partnerships in real estate ventures); 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-102(t); Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f); see also 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 8,150 (July 1, 1995) (Alaska has included interests in limited liability companies within its definition of security); 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 58,102 (Apr. 5, 1995) (Vermont has amended its definition of security to include limited liability companies); 2A Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 43,474 (Dec. 1, 1994) (North Carolina has adopted a rule presuming that interests in limited liability companies are securities).

(n7)Footnote 7. Rev. Unif. Lim. Part. Act § 101.

(n8)Footnote 8. Rev. Unif. Lim. Part. Act § 303 ("a limited partner is not liable for the obligations of a limited partnership unless the limited partner ... takes part in the control of the business").

(n9)Footnote 9. See Shinn v. Thrust IV, Inc., 56 Wash. App. 827, 786 P.2d 285 (1990); Topping v. Sullivan d/b/a American Cable Cartoons, 145 Ill. App. 3d 474, 496 N.E.2d 8, 99 Ill. Dec. 662 (Ct. 1986); Cook v. Pepco, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,411 (Okla. Dist. 1986); see also Kosnoski v. Bruce, 669 F.2d 944 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 832, 103 S. Ct. 72, 74 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1982) (South Carolina law).

State regulators and law enforcement officials have uniformly viewed limited partnership interests as being securities under their respective blue sky laws. See, e.g., Ga. Attorney General's Opinion [1954-1971 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 70,830 (1969); Idaho Opinion of the Attorney General, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,315 (1972); Maryland Securities Commissioner, Securities Act Rel. No. 18, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 30,560 (1974); So. Dakota Securities Dept, Securities Bulletin, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 44,691 (1972).

(n10)Footnote 10. Henkind v. Brauser, [1989 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) (S.D.N.Y. 1989).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., ITO International Corp. v. Prescott, Inc., 83 Wash. App. 282, 921 P.2d 566 (1996) ("Limited partnerships are generally considered securities because the investor puts his or her funds at risk and depends largely upon the managing partners' efforts to realize a profit"); Topping v. Sullivan, 145 Ill. App. 3d 474, 496 N.E.2d 8, 99 Ill. Dec. 662 (1986); In re EHI, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,370 (Texas St. Bd. 1986).

But see Garbo v. Hilleary Franchise Systems, Inc., 479 S.W.2d 491 (Mo. Ct. App. 1972) (investment contract criteria rendered limited partnership interests securities, but "true" limited partnerships formed only for limited liability considerations may not involve securities). Investment contract analysis as applied to partnership and joint venture interests generally is further considered in § 2.08[2][a] below.

See also Cook v. Pepco, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,411 (Okla. Co. Ct. 1986).

(n12)Footnote 12. Uniform Partnership Act § 18(e).

(n13)Footnote 13. Uniform Partnership Act § 18(a), (e).

(n14)Footnote 14. A joint venture is usually described as a partnership or association for a particular purpose. As defined by a Texas appellate court:

A joint venture is a species of partnership of a limited nature by two or more persons jointly prosecuting a particular transaction... . The four required elements for a joint venture are (1) a community of interest in the venture, (2) an agreement to share profits, (3) an agreement to share losses, and (4) a mutual right of control or management of the enterprise.

Russell v. French & Associates, Inc., 709 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. Ct. App. 1986) (citations omitted).

In considering blue sky law definitions of security, there is no meaningful distinction between a true general partnership and a joint venture.

(n15)Footnote 15. See generally Elaine A. Welle, When Are Limited Liability Partnership Interests Securities?, 27 Iowa J. Corp. L. 63 (2001).

(n16)Footnote 16. 80 P.3d 804 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Moulin v. Der Zakarian, 191 Cal. App. 2d 184, 12 Cal. Rptr. 572 (1961) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Unif. Part. Act. § 6.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unif. Part. Act. § 18(e); see also J & S Enterprises v. Warshawsky, 714 F. Supp. 278 (N.D. Ohio 1989) (Ohio law).

(n20)Footnote 20. Odom v. Slavik, 703 F.2d 212, 215 (6th Cir. 1983) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Ito International Corp. v. Prescott, Inc., 83 Wash. App. 282, 291, 921 P.2d 566, 572 (1996).

See also State v. Kramer, 804 S.W.2d 845, 847 (Mo. App. 1991) (in order to effectuate the purposes of the Uniform Securities Act, examination of the "totality of circumstances surrounding the transaction is required in order to determine if the investors of risk capital have, in fact, retained a realistic ability to participate in significant managerial decisions"); Casali v. Schultz, 292 Ark. 602, 732 S.W.2d 836 (1987) (one partner had absolute control over the operation of the partnership enterprise; the plaintiff was merely a passive contributor of risk capital); Corporate East Associates v. Meester, 442 N.W.2d 105 (Iowa 1989) (general partner had no expectation of being involved in management of what was actually a limited partnership).

But see Cox v. Lemond, 107 Ohio App. 3d 442, 669 N.E.2d 23 (1995) (partner had the right to provide input on all managerial matters); Casablanca Productions, Inc. v. Pace International Research, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 1563 (D. Or. 1988).

(n22)Footnote 22. 645 F.2d. 404 (5th Cir. 1981) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Id. at 424 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Id. at 423 24. As the court declared:

[S]o long as the investor retains ultimate control, he has the power over the investment and the access to information about it which is necessary to protect against any unwilling dependence on the manager. It is not enough, therefore, that partners in fact rely on others for the management of their investment; a partnership can be an investment contract only when the partners are so dependent on a particular manager that they cannot replace him or otherwise exercise ultimate control.

Id.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Casablanca Productions, Inc. v. Pace Int'l Research, Inc., 697 F. Supp. 1563 (D. Or. 1988) (delegation of management decisions did not deprive partner of significant managerial powers).

(n26)Footnote 26. Garrett v. Snedigar, 293 S.C. 176, 359 S.E.2d 283 (1987).

(n27)Footnote 27. In re Deck, [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,876 (Md. Div. of Sec. 1983).

(n28)Footnote 28. Overthrust Mineral Corp. v. Secretary of State, [1984-1985 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,243 (Wyo. Dist. 1985).

(n29)Footnote 29. Casali v. Schultz, 292 Ark. 602, 732 S.W.2d 836 (1987) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Bahre v. Pearl, 595 A.2d 1027 (Me. 1991) . The court identified controlling considerations as follows:

Most of the major decisions of the partnership specifically defined in the agreement could only be made by the unanimous vote of the partners. Each partner was entitled to inspect the partnership books at any time, to receive periodic financial reports from the managing partners, and to call special partnership meetings to discuss any of that partner's concerns about the business of the partnership. Notwithstanding that [the managing partner] by its control of a one half interest in the partnership could effectively veto any decisions made by the other partners and was immune from removal as the managing partner, the other partners individually retained the right to monitor Liberty's business judgment and cumulatively retained their own veto power over Liberty's discretion.

Id. at 1032 (footnote omitted),

(n31)Footnote 31. Feigin v. Digital Interactive Associates, Inc., Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) 74,178 (Colo. App. 1999).

(n32)Footnote 32. See also SEC v. Telecom Mktg., 888 F. Supp. 1160 (N.D. Ga. 1995) (stating that "the number of partnership units sold so dilutes each partner's power that in actuality it appears that none could exercise any meaningful partnership control").

(n33)Footnote 33. See Hawaii Rules and Regulations Under the Uniform Securities Act (Modified) § 16-38-1. "Certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement shall not include any interest in a general partnership where the interest is not assignable without the consent of all other members and where all the members participate directly in managing the partnership."

(n34)Footnote 34. 13 N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 13, § 80.1(j)(4).

(n35)Footnote 35. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(F). What California has actually done is declare general partnerships as exempt from securities qualification if there is no public offering.

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Polikoff v. Levy, 55 Ill. App. 2d 229, 204 N.E.2d 807 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 903, 86 S. Ct. 237, 15 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1965); Russell v. French & Associates, Inc., 709 S.W.2d 312 (Tex. Ct. App. 1986); Schultz v. Recter Phillips Morse, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,357 (Ark. 1977).

See also McConathy v. Dal Mac Commercial Real Estate, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,338 (Tex. Civ. App. 1976). Although the court held that the particular joint venture was not a security, it did not rule that joint ventures are always excluded from the law's definition of "security." It stressed that "the essential element of reliance of the managerial, operational or developmental efforts of others [was] missing"; since all the participants were friends, business associates or relatives of the defendants, this particular joint venture "was not the kind of transaction or scheme for which the Securities Act contemplates a need for the protection of investors."

(n37)Footnote 37. Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f); see also Van Bourg, Nakamura, Katsura, Karney, Inc. v. Petroleum Management Corp., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,464 (Cal. 1978) (a good faith agreement between joint ventures is not a security within the meaning of Cal. Corp. Code § 25019, and no registration for the transaction was required).

(n38)Footnote 38. Hawaii Rules and Regulations Under the Uniform Securities Act (Modified) § 1.1(B)(4):

Certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement' shall not include any interest in a joint venture where the interest is not assignable without the consent of all the other members and where all the members participate directly in managing the joint venture.

(n39)Footnote 39. 13 N.Y. Comp. R. & Regs. § 80(j)(4).

(n40)Footnote 40. In some cases state law may specifically vest the members of an LLC with management powers in proportion to their contribution of capital, see, e.g., South Dakota, S.D. Con. Laws § 47-34-16.

(n41)Footnote 41. Litigation Rel. No. 14026, 56 SEC Docket 880 (Mar. 24, 1994).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Complaint, SEC v. Parkersburg Wireless Limited Liability Co., No. 94 1079 (SSH) (D.D.C. May 16, 1994), Litigation Rel. No. 14085 (SEC) (May 16, 1994); Complaint, SEC v. Knoxville, LLC, No. 94 1073B (RBB) (S.D. Cal. July 11, 1994); SEC v. Irwin Harry Bloch, Litigation Rel. No. 14511, 59 SEC Docket 931 (May 25, 1995); SEC v. United Communications, Ltd., Litigation Rel. No. 14477, 59 SEC Docket 424 (Apr. 25, 1995); SEC v. Future Vision Direct Marketing, Inc., Litigation Rel. No. 14384, 58 SEC Docket 1716 (Jan. 18, 1995).

(n43)Footnote 43. Elaine A. Welle, Limited Liability Company Interests As Securities: An Analysis of Federal and State Actions Against Limited Liability Companies Under the Securities Laws, 73 Den. U. L. Rev. 425, 430 (1996).

(n44)Footnote 44. Id.

(n45)Footnote 45. 2002 Unif. Securities Act § 102(28).

(n46)Footnote 46. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 7- 80-401(1).

(n47)Footnote 47. See Nutek Info. Sys., Inc. v. Arizona Corp. Comm'n, 194 Ariz. 104, 977 P.2d 826 (Ct. App. 1998), in which more than 900 people were solicited by telephone and written materials to invest in several LLCs formed for the purpose of purchasing communications equipment and forming a network of telecommunications services. Each LLC entered into a system management agreement with the promoter, and all funds were pooled for the purchase of equipment and payment of expenses. The Arizona appeals court had little trouble concluding that individual LLC members had no ability to exercise effective control over the LLCs, despite the fact that governing agreements provided for "legal" control. The members, said the court, were no different than shareholders of a corporation, and had no ability to exercise even what legal control was provided in the enabling agreement.

See also Ak's Daks Communs. v. Maryland Secs. Div., 138 Md. App. 314, 771 A.2d 487 (Ct. Spec. App. 2001).

(n48)Footnote 48. Keith v. Black Diamond Advisors, Inc., 48 F.Supp. 2d 326 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) .

(n49)Footnote 49. In Tschetter v. Berven, 2001 SD 11, 621 N.W.2d 372, the South Dakota Supreme Court came to the same conclusion where an LLC management agreement did not divest all power from the member, and in fact afforded members substantial power and ability to conduct necessary oversight of business operations. The court concluded that it was not a situation where the managers were so dominant that the members would be lost without them, and underscored the point that the mere choice by one to remain passive is not sufficient to make the membership interest a security.

(n50)Footnote 50. Alaska Stat. § 45.55.990(12).

(n51)Footnote 51. Cal. Corp. Code § 25019 (except for interests in an LLC in which all of the members are actively engaged in management).

(n52)Footnote 52. Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 36b 1.

(n53)Footnote 53. Ga. Code Ann. § 10 5 2(a)(22).

(n54)Footnote 54. N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58 13B 2(V).

(n55)Footnote 55. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(B), (D).

(n56)Footnote 56. Pa. Stat. Ann. tit. 70. § 1 102(t).

(n57)Footnote 57. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48 2 102(9).

(n58)Footnote 58. Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, chap. 150 § 5202(28)(E).

(n59)Footnote 59. As noted earlier, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act expressly includes limited liability company interests within the definition of security by expressly including them as investment contracts, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(28)(E).

23 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.08

§ 2.08 Unconventional Forms: Investment Contracts

[1] The Elements of an Investment Contract

"Investment contracts" represent the principal catch all category in blue sky law definitions of security. However, nothing in any statutory definition prescribes the attributes of such a security. An "investment contract" is not identifiable because of its particular character in commerce, or because of conventional attributes that prompt its common recognition as a security. It is, rather, a creature of circumstances and relationships.ⁿ¹

An investment contract arises in a transaction in which a person entrusts money or other capital to another, with the expectation of deriving a profit, income or some financial benefit from a business enterprise, the failure or success of which is dependent upon the managerial efforts of other persons.ⁿ² State and federal courts alike anchor their considerations of investment contract securities in the universal definition articulated by the U.S. Supreme Court in SEC v. W.J. Howey Co. ⁿ³ as follows:

[A]n investment contract ... means a contract, transaction or scheme whereby a person invests his money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party, it being immaterial whether the shares in the enterprise are evidenced by formal certificates or by normal interests in the physical assets... ⁿ⁴

The essence of an investment contract is the extent to which the risk of an enterprise lies within the control of someone other than the purchaser.ⁿ⁵ Put another way, an investment contract is created where the expected value of a thing purchased, or an interest or right acquired, is either presently or in the future a function of something other than the thing itself, and the realization of that value is beyond the meaningful control of the purchaser. In SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp.,ⁿ⁶ the U.S. Supreme Court first explained the notion of an investment in a "common enterprise" in terms of beads being strung on a common thread. There, assignments in oil leases were held to be securities because the assignments, interests in real property, only had value in the opportunity to share in discovery values that might follow the drilling of a test well nearby. Thus, said the Court: "[T]he undertaking to drill a well runs through the whole transaction as the thread on which everybody's beads were strung..."ⁿ⁷ Joiner illustrates that to find a security in the form of an investment contract one looks to determine if there is a separate and unmanageable risk affecting the actual or reasonably expected value of the asset purchased.ⁿ⁸ Thus, in State v. Reber, ⁿ⁹ for example, a promise to repay funds invested with the defendant electrical contractor in various phony electrical contracting jobs was held to be an investment contract because the promise was conditioned on the defendant actually performing alleged job contracts, and being paid. Although the defendant contended that investors could have no reasonable expectation of profits, and that the transaction was merely a loan, the court concluded that repayment was not unconditional, and that any return to investors was dependent on the defendant's managerial efforts in completing electrical contracting work.

Howey crafted the essential notions of common enterprise and investment risk into the tripartite standard definition of investment contract quoted above. Howey focused on the sale of tracts in Florida citrus groves. The sales of the real estate were accompanied by optional service contracts for cultivating and marketing produce. The service contracts effectively gave the promoter/seller full control over the tracts. The return to purchasers was dependent upon the managerial efforts, and success, of the seller pursuant to the service contracts. The scenario in Howey is the model for investment contract circumstances and relationships:

The respondent companies are offering something more than fee simple interests in land, something different from a farm or orchard coupled with management services. They are offering an opportunity to contribute money and to share in the profits of a large citrus fruit enterprise managed and partly owned by respondents. They are offering this opportunity to persons who reside in distant locations and who lack the equipment and experience requisite to the cultivation, harvesting and marketing of citrus products. Such persons have no desire to occupy the land or to develop it themselves; they are attracted solely by the prospects of a return on their investment. Indeed, individual development of the plots of land that are offered and sold would seldom be economically feasible due to their small size... . A common enterprise managed by respondents or third parties with adequate personnel and equipment is therefore essential if the investors are to achieve their paramount aim of a return on their investments.ⁿ¹⁰

The Howey definition of investment contract was articulated in the context of the federal securities laws. However, nearly every state blue sky law includes the category in the definition of security,ⁿ¹¹ and Howey has long supplied the common frame of reference in all investment contract analyses.ⁿ¹² It is a definition particularly suited for use in the application of blue sky laws. Indeed, it "[e]mbodies a flexible rather than a static principle, one that is capable of adaptation to meet the countless and variable schemes devised by those who seek the use of the money of others on the promise of profits."ⁿ¹³

Howey thus prescribes criteria for identifying an investment contract security:

- (1) an investment of money;
- (2) a common enterprise; and
- (3) an expectation of profits to come solely from the efforts of others.ⁿ¹⁴

Through the years, these three elements of an investment contract under Howey have been dissected in the courts, most recently again by the U.S. Supreme Court in SEC v. Edwards,ⁿ¹⁵ and thus a closer look at each of them in application is necessary to a full understanding of the meaning of the term.

[a] Investment of Money

For investment contract analysis, "investment of money" is a broader notion than the payment for purchase of property or an interest in some tangible thing. First, "money" in this context means anything of value, any consideration, including, as one state court has said, any "benefit to the promisor or detriment to the promisee."ⁿ¹⁶ Whether the value given up fits the notion of traditional purchase consideration, is labeled a "fee,"ⁿ¹⁷ or is characterized in any other manner, the most important notion here is that money or value is committed to something having no separate value or economic viability apart from some coupled scheme or mechanism for shared fortunes. Any purchase, of any thing, may well be considered an "investment" by the purchaser, but this general perception is not the focus of securities law protection. The U.S. Supreme Court has itself said that "economic interest" characterizes every form of commercial dealing, but that naked interest is not what operates to create a security.ⁿ¹⁸

The Howey notion of investment of money means that investors commit value to an enterprise or venture in such a manner as to subject themselves to financial loss from a risk they cannot effectively manage. It is the "investment" in the common enterprise, not the thing itself, that matters in the creation of a security.

Rzepka v. Michael ⁿ¹⁹ illustrates this point. The purchaser of discounted accounts receivable of an on going business sought relief under the Michigan blue sky law, claiming he had purchased an investment contract. The court disagreed, explaining that the transactions may have amounted to the purchase and sale of accounts governed by the Uniform Commercial Code, but no investment contract was present. The purchase of the accounts receivables was more of an investment in those accounts rather than in the common enterprise, said the court. The court found essential that:

[R]egardless of what might happen to Personnel, plaintiff had a right to the proceeds of the receivables. The plaintiff did not subject his capital to the risks of the enterprise. Rather, plaintiff subjected his capital to the risks that the receivables listed in the agreements, or others of equal value, would not eventually be paid.ⁿ²⁰

[b] Common Enterprise

Plainly, the root of any investment contract is a common enterprise--the common thread on which "investments" of money are strung. Common enterprise connotes some form of pooled interest. As a Washington appellate court succinctly stated, the term denotes "a dependence by one party for his profit on the success of some other party in performing his part of the venture."ⁿ²¹ A simple contract relationship with another will not generally constitute a common enterprise, which presumes the existence of other investors, and an intertwining of the investors' interests and expectations.

Interpretations of the common enterprise element of an investment contract have spawned two views of the type of "commonality" required. Horizontal commonality requires the pooling of funds of multiple participants in a single project or program.ⁿ²² On the other hand, vertical commonality, a less stringent approach, requires only that the fortunes of an investor be tied to and dependent upon the success of the seller or a third party. This approach allows for a common enterprise between a single investor and the promoter/seller without regard to the presence of others or any pooling of interests.ⁿ²³ Critics of vertical commonality being sufficient for finding a security argue that the approach actually eliminates the Howey common enterprise requirement.ⁿ²⁴ Nevertheless, even where vertical commonality is accepted as a sufficient common enterprise, it must still be shown that there is actual interdependence between the parties.ⁿ²⁵

It is also clear today that common enterprise for purposes of an investment contract does not mean that investors must share proportionately in profits or losses of the enterprise. Individual contracts providing for a fixed rate of return satisfy the common enterprise element when any expected return is tied to the significant managerial efforts of others. In SEC v. The Infinity Group Co. ⁿ²⁶ investors were offered an opportunity to invest with the expectation of exceedingly high returns and minimal risk. They executed "property transfer contracts" pursuant to which they contributed large sums of money to a trust for the trust to invest. The trust guaranteed investors that they would receive an annual rate of return ranging from 138 percent to 181 percent depending on the amount of the participant's investment. The guarantees were based upon the trust's purported experience, financial connections, and the ability to pool large amounts of money. Each individual contract provided for repayment on demand. It was in fact a Ponzi scheme. Defendants argued, however, that there was no requisite common enterprise by which the property transfer contracts could be made into securities. The court flatly rejected the argument because it was clear that investors had in fact "pooled" their contributions through the trust to create highly leveraged investment power that would yield high rates of return. The fact that each participant investor entered into a separate contract providing for a fixed rate of return payable on demand was inconsequential because the fixed return was dependent upon the overarching enterprise of the trust.

This fundamental notion of common enterprise is key to many particular applications of investment contract analysis that are presented below. It is also very much involved in the 2004 assessment by the U.S. Supreme Court in SEC v. Edwards of the expected "profit" element of investment contracts that is discussed immediately below.

[c] An Expectation of Profits to Come Solely From the Efforts of Others

The third criterion of Howey, an expectation of profits to come solely from the efforts of others, has received the greatest attention in investment contract analysis. There are two aspects to the element: (1) an expected "profit"; and (2) the extent to which it is to come from the "efforts of others." In SEC v. Edwards n27 the U.S Supreme Court spoke definitively to the "profit" element of investment contract analysis.

The defendant in Edwards was the chairman, chief executive officer and sole shareholder of ETS Payphones, Inc, which sold pay phones to the public through a network of independent distributors. The pay phones were offered with an agreement under which ETS leased back the pay phone from the purchaser for a fixed monthly payment, thereby providing purchasers a fixed 14 percent annual return on their investment. The leaseback arrangement included a site lease, a management agreement, and a buyback agreement. Purchasers were not involved in any day-to-day operation of the payphones they owned. ETS selected the site for the payphone, installed the equipment, arranged for connection and long distance service, collected coin revenues and maintained and repaired the payphones. The payphones ultimately did not generate enough revenue for ETS to meet its payment obligations to purchasers. An SEC enforcement action was brought on the premise that the payphone sale and leaseback program created an investment contract. The defendant successfully argued in the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, however, that there was no investment contract because the arrangement did not offer either capital appreciation or a participation in the earnings of an enterprise. The Court of Appeals also concluded that because the purchasers had a contractual entitlement to return the payphones and repayment of their purchase price the requirement that a return on the investment be derived solely from the efforts of others could not be satisfied. The Supreme Court reversed on both grounds, focusing principally on the erroneous notion that an investment contract cannot be found where a fixed obligation or rate of return is involved.

The Supreme Court made clear in Edwards that "profits" for purposes of investment contract analysis means the profits that investors seek on their investment, not the profits of the scheme in which they invest. Profit, said the Court, is used in the sense of income or return to include, for example, dividends, other periodic payments, or the increased value of the investment. There is no reason to distinguish between promises of fixed returns and promises of variable returns for purposes of the investment contract test. To conclude otherwise would read into the securities laws a limitation that would undermine the laws' purposes. The Court also summarily dismissed the notion that because purchasers had a contractual entitlement to a return, the "solely from the efforts of others" could not be satisfied. The fact that investors have a bargained-for return on their investment, said the Court, does not mean that the return is not also expected to come solely from the efforts of others.

An investment contract will not be found where putative "investors" are empowered in the transaction with the leverage or ability to protect themselves, and to manage the enterprise risk in which they are participating. It cannot be gainsaid that the existence of an investment contract presumes a passive investor.ⁿ²⁸ This is the baseline difference between security transactions and joint venture or general partnership relationships, which are the antithesis of investment contracts.ⁿ²⁹ This Howey criterion suggests that any involvement in those activities or efforts that are important in the success of the enterprise would preclude investment contract status. Courts have not applied the criterion so strictly,ⁿ³⁰ particularly where it is clear that the investor's ability to exercise, or control, the significant managerial activities of an enterprise is curtailed to the point that there is no reasonable alternative to reliance on the seller/promoter. Thus, in Ball

v. Volken, n31 an investment contract was present where a franchise agreement granted the right to sell frozen food distributorships, and receive income from bulk sales of frozen foods through them. However, the franchisee had no choice but to rely on the efforts and activities of the franchisor to ensure the viability of the business and produce most of any profit that might inure from it. The same rationale has been applied to convert what are ostensibly general partnerships, in which there is a presumption of shared control, into investment contracts when the empowerment is in fact illusory.n32

Among federal courts, the Howey "solely" term has been interpreted in a manner such that when the functions or activities an investor performs are not managerial, but are rather ministerial, investment contract status will not be denied merely because profits are not derived "solely" from the efforts of others.n33 State courts have followed the federal lead, with the focus today being on an expectation of profits based primarily on the efforts of others.n34

The risk capital alternative in defining a security has also been embraced, either in case law or by express incorporation into the blue sky law definition, where the Howey "solely" language might limit application of investment contract analysis in other situations, but where blue sky law protection is nevertheless deemed necessary in the eyes of courts or legislatures. In some situations, as illustrated by this approach in Ohio case law, an investment contract is thus defined in terms of the "risk capital" definition of a security generally, rather than the Howey tripartite construct. Under this approach, an investment contract is created whenever:

- (1) an offeree furnishes initial value to an offeror;
- (2) a portion of the initial value is subjected to the risks of the enterprise;
- (3) the furnishing of the initial value is induced by the offeror's promises or representations which give rise to a reasonable understanding that a valuable benefit of some kind, over and above the initial value, will accrue to the offeree as a result of the operation of the enterprise; and
- (4) the offeree does not receive the right to exercise practical and actual control over managerial decisions of the enterprise.n35

Howey otherwise enjoys widespread acceptance among the states as the baseline test for the existence of an investment contract.n36 Inroads upon it through "risk capital" analysis,n37 or the importation of broader notions associated with risk capital, only serve to underscore that the presence of a security, in any form and in any set of circumstances, is a function of the separation of an "investor" from control over value determinants of the thing acquired or the expected return on the interest obtained. Closer consideration of particular blue sky law applications of the investment contract definition further exemplify the critical point.

[2] Particular Applications

[a] Partnerships and Joint Ventures

There is perhaps no better illustration of the fundamental elements of a security, and of investment contracts in particular, than in the treatment of partnerships and joint ventures under state and federal securities laws. The creation of securities through these forms of organization and association in the pursuit of an enterprise has already been considered in depth.n38 Apart from consideration of partnership and joint venture interests as securities in their own right, however, investment contract analysis is often applied to determine whether ostensible "general partnership" or joint venture interests are in fact securities.

In the main, whether partnership or joint venture interests are deemed investment contracts is generally a function of the degree of managerial control actually retained by the putative partner. State courts apply the third Howey element, an expectation of profits solely from the efforts of others, to determine whether a "partner" who invests in a common enterprise retains a measure of control over the partnership and its activities such that he or she is not dependent on the entrepreneurial or managerial ability of the promoter or manager, or that he or she cannot replace the manager or otherwise exercise meaningful powers.ⁿ³⁹ In Sparks v. Baxter,ⁿ⁴⁰ for example, an argument that joint venture interests in oil and gas projects were actually investment contracts within the ambit of the Texas blue sky law was rejected where the appeals court found, among other things, that:

[t]he record reflects that the enterprise vested considerable power in the Baxters, including the selection of investors and the choosing of oil and gas properties. The record reveals the experience of the Baxters, particularly that of the senior Baxter, as a businessman, financier, entrepreneur and oilman. Sparks brought to the enterprise relevant experience and expertise, but his ability was not unique, or so irreplaceable that it prevented the Baxters' exercise of meaningful venture powers.ⁿ⁴¹

On the other hand, in Corporate East Associates v. Meester,ⁿ⁴² a general partnership interest was held to be an investment contract under the Iowa blue sky law where:

[t]he partnership agreement provided that the managing partner had exclusive authority to conduct the ordinary business of the partnership, including negotiating leases and refinancing the building... . Meester owned two units. He had no expectation of being involved in the operation of the partnership. Under the agreement he could not do anything unless he acted in concert with others who, with him, owned sixty six and two thirds percent of the partnership. Taking substance over form, we think his rights are those of a limited partner.ⁿ⁴³

The baseline issue for investment contract analysis of partnership and joint venture interests will always be one of fact. Yet it is important to remember that in assessing the actual powers of a partner under the Howey construct, it is not whether one has been deprived of or denied the right to exercise partnership powers, but rather whether the structure of the partnership or joint venture is such that the participant has no real opportunity to exercise the power presumed to be available to a true general partner or joint venturer. Even when general partners do not individually have decisive control over major decisions, if they do have the sort of influence which generally provides them with access to important information and protection against a dependence on others, a security is not likely to be found.ⁿ⁴⁴

[b] Real Estate

Howey, of course, stands as the model for application of blue sky laws to the sale of interests in real estate via investment contract analysis. State courts have had little difficulty with its application to a wide variety of real estate related investment programs and schemes.ⁿ⁴⁵ There are determinative factors which consistently emerge when real estate transactions are examined under Blue Sky laws. If the investor is induced by a profit motive for entering the venture and is truly passive in regard to management or operation of the property, a security will likely be found.ⁿ⁴⁶ It does not matter that purchasers, as property owners, have the usual rights of ownership if in fact they are led to expect profits derived mainly from the managerial efforts of others.ⁿ⁴⁷

Moreover, most real estate related programs deemed to be securities involve agreements, guarantees, or some other mechanism directly that plainly impacts the "investment" expectations of purchasers, which create a common enterprise, and which lead the purchaser to expect significant value from the efforts or associated program of the sellers.ⁿ⁴⁸

Motives for entering into the transaction typically depend on the promotional efforts and intended activities of the seller.ⁿ⁴⁹

On the other hand, in Almaden Plaza Associates v. United Trust Fund Limited Partnership ⁿ⁵⁰ the sale and leaseback of an office building in an arrangement involving the purchaser/landlord's unconditional right to receive a fixed rental payment and to realize any future gain in the value of the property was held not to be a security. The plaintiffs purchased a heavily encumbered property, which they leased back to the seller for rents substantially above market. They argued that because no other tenant would be willing to pay such rents, the arrangement left them dependent on the lessee's profitability, and thus created an investment contract. The court rejected the notion because there was no sharing of profits, and because, subject to certain options, the ultimate value of the property inured solely to the benefit of the purchaser/lessors. Thus, said the court, because the fixed rent lease did not include any conditions to payment, and any change in the value of the property would not be shared between the parties, there was no intertwining of profits and losses, and no common enterprise.ⁿ⁵¹

Cases such as this illustrate the importance of focusing on the actual risk involved in a transaction. The risk of non payment of an above market rate of rent was not an investment risk. The same notion applies when there is no profit to be anticipated in purchasing the realty interest, such as when it is to be used for the buyer's own residential or recreational purposes. In All Seasons Resorts, Inc. v. Abrams,ⁿ⁵² for example, the sale of campground "memberships," which conferred upon purchasers the right to nonexclusive, nonspecific use of campgrounds and related facilities was held not to involve the sale of a security. Purchasers did not have a profit motive, and acquired no opportunity to share in any gains, or acquire any interest in the promoter's assets.ⁿ⁵³ As the U.S. Supreme Court made clear in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman,ⁿ⁵⁴ the same holds true where the purchase involves residential real estate.ⁿ⁵⁵

All of this is baseline investment contract analysis under the Howey construct. It may be insignificant, however, in some states which expressly include or exclude particular real estate interests in the definition of security.ⁿ⁵⁶ The effect of some of these statutes may be to turn what would ordinarily be considered a non security transaction into one covered by blue sky laws.

An example of this type of situation arises in those states that have statutes requiring sales of real property located outside of the state to be treated as securities.ⁿ⁵⁷ A Missouri court interpreting such a provision pointed out that the purpose of making these interests securities is to protect residents from being cheated when purchasing land in distant places where opportunity for examination prior to purchase is extremely limited.ⁿ⁵⁸

Against the Howey backdrop, and apart from the impact of any specific state provision relating to particular types of real estate or interests in real estate as securities, common questions under blue sky laws arise in regard to the particular real estate interests considered further below.

[i] Cooperative Housing

There is some disagreement as to whether or not interests in cooperative housing are securities. While cooperatives may exist in a number of different forms,ⁿ⁵⁹ the commonly used form is a corporation. In simplest terms, under the corporate plan, the real estate containing the housing is owned by a corporation. Housing residents purchase shares of stock which they receive coupled with a lease granting the right of occupancy in a particular apartment or housing unit.ⁿ⁶⁰

Whether any form of interest or instrument associated with a housing cooperative may be deemed to be a security has today largely been resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court in United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman,ⁿ⁶¹ which has had substantial impact on decisions under the blue sky laws because of the similarities in state and federal definitions of security. The Supreme Court held in Forman that "stock" in a non-profit cooperative housing project was not a security. The fact that interests, representing the right to reside in the project, were represented by stock was held not to have the same meaning as stock holdings have in the commercial world.ⁿ⁶² The Court further opined that the interests represented by "stock" did not constitute investment contracts, despite any monetary gains to tenants from tax deductions, rental charges to commercial enterprises and lower rental for apartments than was otherwise available. The overriding feature of cooperative housing in the Court's mind was its residential purposes, not commercial investment as it is ordinarily understood.ⁿ⁶³

All of this does not mean that cooperative housing interests will always free from state blue sky regulation. New York, for example, has a separate section in its securities law relating solely to real estate syndication offerings, specifically including cooperatives.ⁿ⁶⁴ In addition, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Iowa and Massachusetts provide that certain cooperative housing interests are exempt from their securities acts, thus implying that such interests ordinarily constitute securities and that some such interests are subject to regulation.ⁿ⁶⁵ These interests have been made subject to other laws in some states.ⁿ⁶⁶ With the application of investment contract analysis, variations on residential cooperative arrangements and relationships might well fundamentally alter expectations of purchasers, and operate to separate them from value determinants associated with their property interest. In the end, however, whether any particular cooperative interest is deemed to be a security under state or federal securities laws will be a function of the expectations of participants in the relationship. People entering into a housing cooperative relationship generally do so intending to reap the benefits of the relationship, not in the expectation of profits to be generated from it. Advantages of a housing cooperative accrue because of the association with others in an ownership vehicle. Profit is not an incident of membership, and while the perception of residential cooperative members or participants may involve ultimate gains or appreciation in the value of property, such expectations are not derived from any independent enterprise.

[ii] Condominiums

Although there are many differently worded definitions of "condominium," the modern concept anticipates ownership of a real property interest, usually in fee simple, in a particular portion or unit of multi-unit property, together with an undivided interest with other owners in common areas of the whole property. The creation or sale of condominiums may be subject to particular regulation,ⁿ⁶⁷ but in the absence of other circumstances which transform the simple ownership of real property into an investment risk undertaking by the purchaser, condominiums are not considered securities. This is true even when the buyer plans to lease his individual unit for profit, since it has been ruled that such situations are not within the Howey investment contract test.ⁿ⁶⁸

If the nature of the offering is one where condominium purchasers are expected to buy for the purpose of leasing their interests to others through the agency of the promoter or a third party, then the transaction may be held to be an investment of money in a common enterprise with the expectation of profits solely from the efforts of others, and thus an investment contract.ⁿ⁶⁹ Where condominium properties are offered for sale with emphasis on investment considerations, and with coupled programs for management and income production--particularly rental pooling arrangements--investment contract analysis is easily applied.ⁿ⁷⁰

Blue sky statutes in some states can be interpreted to include "condominium" within the meaning of "security."ⁿ⁷¹ Out of state condominium interests would probably be considered securities in those states having provisions making interests in realty located in other states securities.ⁿ⁷² Only the New York statute leaves no doubt that condominium interests are always securities.ⁿ⁷³ The New York and New Jersey securities statutes were compared in Maplewood Village Tenants Association v. Maplewood Village,ⁿ⁷⁴ a New Jersey case involving condominiums. The court noted that New Jersey's statute was fashioned after New York's and since the New York statute included condominiums within the definition of security and New Jersey did not, it was the unmistakable intent of the latter's legislature to exclude such interests from the securities act.ⁿ⁷⁵

[iii] Cemetery Lots and Burial Rights

The sale of a cemetery lot to an individual is usually for the use of the individual and is analogous to any other purchase of real estate. As such, it would not generally come within the notion of something that is commonly understood as involving a security.ⁿ⁷⁶ Nevertheless, historically circumstances have arisen in which sales of burial plots have triggered concerns for investor protection under blue sky laws, and securities have been found. In those situations it is commonly the case that the number of burial plots purchased is well beyond what the buyer could use, and both the seller and the buyer expected that the plots would be resold at a profit.ⁿ⁷⁷

The cemetery lot cases mostly predate the pronouncement of investment contract principles in Howey and its progeny. But the message of state courts in them was a precursor of what was to come. In one of the early considerations of the sale of burial plots in circumstances giving rise to investor protection concerns, a New York court spoke of the "modern" way in which a security is used when it held the sale of burial plots to be within the purview of blue sky regulation: "In general, it may be said that any form of instrument used for the purpose of financing and promoting enterprises, and which is designed for investment, is a security according to the modern meaning of the term."ⁿ⁷⁸

Through the years, the issue of whether the sale of burial plots is impacted by blue sky laws has been confronted in Maine,ⁿ⁷⁹ Indiana,ⁿ⁸⁰ Minnesota,ⁿ⁸¹ and Utah (by statute).ⁿ⁸²

[c] Investment Programs in Personal Property

"Investment" inducements associated with the sale of personal property often create investment contracts and trigger blue sky law coverage. Most often such inducements are a function of "repurchase guarantees" or other mechanisms for enhancing the investment potential.

As is common with real estate related investment contracts, attached management or "service" agreements most often convert the sale of property into a passive investment. In Waterman v. Alta Verde Industries, Inc.,ⁿ⁸³ for example, plaintiff purchased cattle and feed from the inventory of defendant in transactions arranged and financed by defendant. Defendant's service to purchasers consisted of feeding and maintaining the cattle, and in being available as a ready repurchaser of the fattened cattle. Sales literature emphasized the increase in value a purchaser could expect through the feeding program, and the defendant's expertise in the selection and sale of cattle. An investment contract was found because, among other things, the purchaser had no real control over the management of the investment, and because the defendant represented to investors that its program would provide "a turnkey package of buying, financing and caring for on a first class basis."ⁿ⁸⁴

Cattle breeding or feeding programs, in which not only breeding, but managed maintenance and sale of animals in a herd are critical to the success or failure of the program, and which control the value of the livestock actually owned by an investor, are invariably found to be investment contracts under blue sky laws.ⁿ⁸⁵ On the other hand, livestock purchase programs that allow the purchaser to exercise practical and actual control over managerial decisions concerning the livestock will be denied investment contract status. For example, in *Pride of the Andes, Inc. v. Soberay*ⁿ⁸⁶ the purchase of a herd of pregnant Alpacas on terms that permitted the seller to purchase offspring was not an investment contract under the Ohio blue sky law because the herd purchaser retained a contractual right to determine if any offspring would in fact be sold to other buyers. This retained authority to control the ultimate disposition of the offspring amounted to the right to exercise practical and actual control over managerial decisions of the enterprise and precluded an investment contract. The court thus affirmed a directed verdict on a statutory claim for rescission under the Ohio Securities Act.

Precious metal sales programs,ⁿ⁸⁷ art works programs,ⁿ⁸⁸ rare coin programs,ⁿ⁸⁹ master video or audio recordings,ⁿ⁹⁰ and programs involving everything from macadamia nutsⁿ⁹¹ and lactic culturesⁿ⁹² to financial interests in the outcome of an intended lawsuitⁿ⁹³ have been held to create investment contract securities. Ahead of the 2004 U.S. Supreme Court decision in SEC v. Edwards pay telephone programs dominated the enforcement agendas of state securities administrators, and continue to receive close attention.ⁿ⁹⁴ The value of the thing purchased, or in many cases leased,ⁿ⁹⁵ is determined not by the thing itself, but rather by the coupled marketing mechanism or services. The common enterprise in these cases may or may not involve traditional pooling of investors' fortunes. Indeed, in many such cases the relationship between the seller/promoter and the purchaser/investor may be a unitary one, in which the fortunes of other purchasers of the same items are not intertwined. However, the key consideration in these programs is the degree to which the value of the thing involved depends on the managerial efforts of the promoter/seller, and the presence of a marketing effort built around "investment" potential.ⁿ⁹⁶

The defining consideration is perhaps best illustrated by the court's assessment of allegations in Rzepka v. Michael ⁿ⁹⁷ that the purchase of a corporation's accounts receivable was the purchase of a security under the Michigan blue sky law. In Rzepka, a corporation advertised and contacted financial brokers in an effort to obtain financing for accounts receivable. A newspaper ad placed by the corporation spoke of a good investment for high profits. Plaintiff responded, entering into a "Finance Broker Agreement," pursuant to which he was to be paid a fifteen percent return based upon all cash payments received from the particular debtor identified in the agreement. In exchange for a post dated check for the full amount of the receivable and the corporation's agreement to pursue collection, the plaintiff paid the corporation two thirds of the face value. However, the corporation eventually ceased operations, and the receivables went uncollected. Plaintiff sought recovery under the blue sky law, claiming that the agreements by which he financed the corporation's receivables constituted securities.

The court declined to extend the reach of blue sky remedies to this transaction, holding that no security was created. The rationale is instructive:

"[T]he agreements at issue clearly set forth that plaintiff purchased, and Personnel sold, accounts receivable, with recourse, at a discount. Plaintiff received the accounts receivable in exchange for his capital. Regardless of what might happen to Personnel, plaintiff had a right to the proceeds of the receivables. The plaintiff did not subject his capital to the risks of the enterprise. Rather, plaintiff subjected his capital to the risks that the receivables listed in the agreements, or others of equal value, would not eventually be paid."ⁿ⁹⁸

The court added that the purchase of accounts receivable amounted to an investment in those accounts, rather than in any common enterprise. Thus, in finding no security the court necessarily found that the value of the thing purchased was not determined by anything other than the thing itself. The risk involved was not tied to the success or failure of the corporate enterprise.

Meaningful participation by the purchaser in value determining activities also prevents investment contract status from attaching to sales of personal property. Thus, in Routh v. Philatelic Leasing, Ltd., ⁿ⁹⁹ no investment contract was found in the lease of photographic equipment and plates used for printing postage stamps. The court found that the plaintiff/lessee was obligated to perform the essential managerial efforts which affected the success or failure of the enterprise. Namely, plaintiff had to distribute stamps printed from the master; the defendant/lessor had no role in this. The plaintiff/lessee's role precluded the existence of any requisite common enterprise between the parties.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ In other situations the absence of a common enterprise in a traditional pooling, or "horizontal" sense, has also been determinative.ⁿ¹⁰¹ But where "syndications" of personal property are involved, as, for example, with race horses,ⁿ¹⁰² no such problem will be presented.

In the end, with "investment" programs in personal property, as with real estate and any other program, the caveat found in SEC v. C.M. Joiner Leasing Corp. is universal: "In the enforcement of an act such as this it is not inappropriate that promoters' offerings be judged as being what they were represented to be."ⁿ¹⁰³

[d] Pyramids, Multi-level Distributorships and Franchises

The existence of an investment contract is premised on the fact that profits from an enterprise will derive from the seller's or some third party's entrepreneurial or managerial efforts. Where a purchaser is required to make some significant effort toward the success of the enterprise, or be involved in its operation in such a fashion as to retain some control over realization of an expected return, the third element of the tripartite Howey test will not be met. Moreover, characterization of the investment as "risk capital" is inappropriate since both case law and statutory formulations of that approach to defining a security also entail a presumption that the purchaser has no practical or actual control over

"managerial" decisions.n104

The application of blue sky laws to pyramid sales schemes, multilevel distributorships and franchises generally is almost always a function of the degree of managerial control vested with the participant/franchisee. Attempts to characterize business franchises as securities through investment contract analysis have most often failed by reason of the control retained by the franchisee.n105 A typical business franchisee is not presumed to be a passive investor, and usually must work to make the franchise succeed. The promise of profit from the performance of one's own efforts does not create a security.n106

On the other hand, a "franchise" in name only will be deemed an investment contract where the "franchisee" is in fact required to rely upon the efforts of others to generate profit. In Ball v. Volken, n107 a franchisee/licensee acquired the right to sell other frozen food distributorships/franchises for area sales offices. The franchisee's expected profit derived from those sales, and from a division of the profits, if any, from the bulk sales of frozen food by the area offices. The plaintiff was prohibited from selling frozen food directly. Although the defendant urged that success or failure of the business depended primarily on the plaintiff's efforts, the court held that the real profit generating efforts, those essential to the success of the business, would not come from plaintiff.n108

This is the premise for holding multi-level distributorships and pyramid sales schemes to be securities. The assessment of a Michigan court in People v. Cooper n109 is illustrative. In Cooper, participants purchased skin care products, and, more importantly, paid for the right to recruit other participants. Their primary profit potential was the right to receive bonuses based upon those subsequent participants' purchases of skin care products, and the subsequent participants' successful recruiting of still more participants. The only effort required of original participants was to bring in others as the next level of participants. Thus, the court concluded:

[O]nce a participant in the plan recruited the first generation of people, the participant merely continued to invest $20 per month. The success or failure of the plan essentially depended upon the managerial and entrepreneurial skills of defendants.n110

Cooper exemplifies the typical form of multilevel distributorship, established through "pyramid" promotions in which a company represents its intention to manufacture or sell a line of products. The company purports to offer franchises or distributorships for those products, but the real focus is on a series of levels of distributorships which link the promoting company and the entire distribution chain, and in which the "profit" potential is entirely a function of continuous enrollment of new participants rather than any "sales" effort involving the company's product.

The treatment of pyramids and multi-level distributorships under state and federal securities laws has been dictated to a large extent by federal court decisions in SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary, Inc., n111 and SEC v. Glen W. Turner Enterprises, n112 both of which involved multilevel distributorships holding out the promise of profits based upon the continuous entry of new participants. The significant efforts in making this happen were those of the promoters, who would induce others whom existing purchasers had recruited to invest in the program. Applying Howey investment contract analysis in these settings, both courts concluded that despite the fact that "distributors" had to expend some effort in recruiting people, the promoters' efforts were managerial and were the undeniably significant ones affecting success or failure.n113 This modification of the "solely from the efforts of others" element of Howey is important, and necessary for the extension of securities law protections into an area that is otherwise plainly an "investment" scenario.n114

A pure pyramid scheme, involving no product or distribution network, further de-emphasizes any meaningful role of the participant. The Nebraska Supreme Court, for example, affirmed the criminal conviction of the participation manager of "The Friends Network," a pyramid gifting program in which participants made money "gifts" to other participants above them in the pyramid.n115

A participant in the program was required to recruit others to join the pyramid in order to herself advance up the pyramid to a level at which she would receive gifts. However, the promoter managed the lists that moved participants to the top of the pyramid, and set up new lists to continue the scheme. The promoter distributed the "gifts" from new participants, and collected a substantial management fee from participants who arrived at the top of the pyramid. The promoter met with new recruits and assisted participants in finding new participants. All of this, said the court, demonstrated that the promoter's managerial efforts were the important ones for the success of the pyramid, and that investment contract analysis was properly applied.ⁿ¹¹⁶

Pyramids and multi-level distributorship programs have attracted specific legislative attention in some states. In North Dakota, for example, a security is expressly defined to include:

[A]ny ... arrangement in which persons invest in a common enterprise the returns of which depend to any extent upon inducing other persons to participate or invest in the enterprise... ⁿ¹¹⁷

Legitimate franchises, conventional distributorships, and any form of business opportunity in which the purchaser is in control of her own business and profit potential do not present any investment contract. But if the real economic attraction, and viability of the enterprise, depends on what the seller/promoter is to do, blue sky laws have plain impact.

[e] Insurance and Annuities

Standard "insurance" products are generally excluded from the definition of security in blue sky laws. The Uniform Act expressly provides: " '[S]ecurity' does not include any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay [a fixed sum of] money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or for some other specified period."ⁿ¹¹⁸

Where other "insurance products," typically variable annuities, are deemed to be investment contracts, it is because they present investment characteristics. A variable annuity contract which provides for deferred income based upon the value of an interest in a managed portfolio of investment assets evidences far more in the way of investment risk than it does any characteristics of an insurance policy. The purchaser of a variable annuity assumes all investment risk concerning the value of his or her interest and the success of the issuing company's success in managing the investment portfolio. In SEC v. Variable Life Insurance Co. (VALIC), ⁿ¹¹⁹ the U.S. Supreme Court determined as a matter of the federal securities laws that by reason of these risk characteristics variable annuities would be deemed to be securities, either as investment contracts or as certificates of interest or participation in a profit sharing agreement. A variable annuity, said the Court, "places all the investment risks on the annuitant, none on the company. The holder gets only a pro rata share of what the portfolio of equity interest reflects--which may be a lot, a little, or nothing."ⁿ¹²⁰

VALIC notwithstanding, the majority of states have excluded annuities generally from coverage of their blue sky laws, although several impose the condition that the annuity be issued by an "insurance company" otherwise regulated by the state. Thus, in California, for example:

"Security" does not include ... any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company admitted in this state promises to pay a sum of money (whether or not based upon the investment performance of a segregated fund) either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period... ⁿ¹²¹

Generally, exclusion of annuities from blue sky coverage is a function of other state regulation of insurance and insurance companies.ⁿ¹²² Some states, however, provide no blue sky exclusion, and thus leave open the opportunity for regulation of the products as securities in addition to subjecting issuers to the entire scheme of state insurance regulation.ⁿ¹²³

Other "insurance" related programs or arrangements may be subject to blue sky laws notwithstanding any applicable exclusion for the underlying product. For example, insurance premium funding plans, under which securities (such as mutual fund shares) are purchased and then pledged to secure a loan to finance the purchase of an insurance policy plainly involve securities transactions as an integral part of the plan. Such "life funding" or "secured funding" programs have been deemed to be investment contracts as a matter of federal law.ⁿ¹²⁴ There is no obvious reason for state regulators or courts to opine otherwise simply because "insurance" is involved.

[f] Equity-Indexed Annuities

Equity-indexed annuities (EIAs) are a hybrid species of annuity contract offered by insurance companies. EIAs guarantee a minimum value to purchasers if the contract is held to maturity, but provide for a return in excess of the minimum that is linked to returns to the performance of an equity index during an accumulation period.ⁿ¹²⁵ A single premium EIA, for example, might guarantee a minimum value not less than 90% of the premiums paid, plus at least 3% in annual interest, less any withdrawals. However, the key feature of an EIA is that during an accumulation period the insurance company will credit the purchaser with a return that is based on changes in an equity index, such as the S & P 500 Composite Stock Price Index. The value built up during the accumulation period becomes the basis for determining the amount of annuity payments that will be made to the purchaser (or paid as a death benefit). To the extent the accumulated value exceeds the guaranteed minimum at the maturity date, the purchaser benefits from capital appreciation in the linked equity index. The minimum value guaranteed for an EIA is a benchmark of a fixed annuity. But the index-linked return is a function of investment performance, which as discussed above is a benchmark of variable annuities.

Simply applying investment contract analysis, the similarities of EIAs with variable annuities argue persuasively for concluding EIAs are securities. There is little case authority on point, however, although one federal District Court has implicitly held that EIAs fall under the broad definition of security that includes all investment contracts.ⁿ¹²⁶ But EIAs are complex contracts. Their complexity is largely the result of varying ways in which index-based returns to be credited during the accumulation period are determined. For example, EIAs vary as to indexing methods, indexing periods, participation rates in the index used, or upper limits (caps) on the index-linked rate. To be sure, in simplest terms, EIAs combine features of a traditional fixed annuity (guaranteed minimum return) and securities (return linked to equity markets). Although the indexed rate or return payable by the insurance company may exceed the amount guaranteed under the contract, insurance company issuers have generally taken the position that because of the guaranteed minimum value and the asserted absence of investment risk because a purchaser cannot lose money, EIAs are not securities and thus are not subject to registration requirements and antifraud protections under federal and state securities laws.

Although losses can be incurred with an EIA depending on terms related to early cancellation--as, for example, if the EIA guaranteed minimum is based on an amount less than the full amount of the purchase payments. There also may be significant surrender charges. It has been suggested, however, that such losses are irrelevant to "investment risk" that is the essential element of a security, and at least one court has agreed.ⁿ¹²⁷ On the other hand, the amount of any excess return, which is the key marketing feature of EIAs, is entirely dependent upon the performance of the index, which is undeniably an "investment" risk. Moreover, the complexity in methodologies used to determine the gain on the index itself that actually inures to the benefit of the EIA purchaser may add meaningful risk to attaining an expected or desired return that is borne by the purchaser.

As insurance products, regulation of EIAs is left solely to state insurance authorities. But some state securities regulators argue that EIAs impose significant investment risks, and are too often instruments of fraud and abuse, particularly given the fact that marketing initiatives disproportionately targeted senior citizens. Securities regulators also focus on the fact that EIAs involve steep front-end charges and substantial surrender charges, such that the guaranteed cash value is significantly less than the original investment for many years after the purchase. The debate continues.

In 2008, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission proposed a rule that would subject EIAs to regulation under the federal securities laws.ⁿ¹²⁸ Proposed Rule 151A under the federal Securities Act would clarify the status under the federal securities laws of indexed annuities in which payments to the purchaser are dependent on the performance of a securities index. In the proposing Release, the SEC observed:

Individuals who purchase indexed annuities are exposed to a significant investment risk--i.e., the volatility of the underlying securities index. Insurance companies have successfully utilized this investment feature, which appeals to purchasers not on the usual insurance basis of stability and security, but on the prospect of investment growth. Indexed annuities are attractive to purchasers because they promise to offer market-related gains. Thus, these purchasers obtain indexed annuity contracts for many of the same reasons that individuals purchase mutual funds and variable annuities, and open brokerage accounts.ⁿ¹²⁹

The Commission further concluded that when amounts payable by an insurance company are more likely than not to exceed the minimum amount guaranteed under the contract, the majority of investment risk is borne by the purchaser. Yet they do not receive the benefits of mandated disclosure and sales practice protections.ⁿ¹³⁰ To assure that EIAs are subject to securities regulation, proposed Rule 151A would define a class of indexed annuities that are not eligible for the federal exemption under section 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act,ⁿ¹³¹ by specifically excluding any annuity contract: (1) for which amounts payable by the issuer under the contract are calculated in whole or in part by reference to the performance of a security, including a group or index of securities; and (2) amounts payable by the issuer under the contract are more likely than not to exceed the amounts guaranteed by the contract.ⁿ¹³²

State securities laws vary in their statutory treatment of insurance products as securities, although the common definition of "security" based on the Uniform Securities Act provides that security does not include "any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay [a fixed sum of] money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or for some other specified period."ⁿ¹³³ This exclusion has been carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, except that an optional term "or variable" is inserted in addition to the exclusion for fixed annuities.ⁿ¹³⁴ The variable insurance product exclusion in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act reflects the fact that a considerable number of states exclude variable annuities from their definitions of security, or provide an exemption from registration.ⁿ¹³⁵

Blue Sky laws do not contain any specific provision dealing with EIAs as securities. Thus, investment contract analysis would necessarily be applied to make the determination. That would be problematic in those states which exclude variable annuities from the definition of security, or provide an exemption from registration. Proposed SEC Rule 151A assumes that EIAs are securities, because its function is to eliminate them as a category of exempt securities. Of course, the proposed SEC rule would not control determinations and treatment of EIAs under state securities laws. It is a powerful statement of the need for regulation under securities laws, however, and may well influence state administrators in proposing their own rules or encouraging legislative action. What is clear, however, is that EIAs present an emergent challenge to state regulators, and to purchasers in need of the protection and remedies from abusive sales practices that only state Blue Sky laws can provide.

[g] Viatical and Life Settlements

Viatical settlements are transactions or arrangements whereby one or more persons acquire an interest in the future death benefit of the life insurance policy of a terminally ill person in exchange for current payment of some discounted percentage of the future benefit. "Life Settlement" contracts are functionally the same, although without the specific focus on a terminally ill person. With a Life Settlement contract, typically, an elderly person chooses to sell his or her life insurance policy to a company that would offer it to investors who would purchase the policy at less than face value. With Life Settlements, the insured would, for example, be expected to live three to six years based on a represented medical evaluation.ⁿ¹³⁶

As investment opportunities, viatical and life settlements have been offered by promoters who acquire policies, package interests in them, and resell them to third parties. The promoters offering interests in viatical and life settlements undertake to determine life expectancy of the insureds whose policies are purchased, and to provide various post-sale services such as continuing premium payments, tracking the status of the insured, and obtaining payment of death benefits. "Investor" funds are used to maintain the policies in force, and to pay fees and commissions of the offering companies, salespersons, and escrow agents. There are variations in programs, and in the types of services undertaken or offered by promoters. In the main, however, purchasers of interests in viatical and life settlements expect very large percentage returns on their investments representing the spread between what is currently paid and the death benefit eventually collected. In SEC v. Life Partners, Inc.,ⁿ¹³⁷ a sharply divided U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit held that viatical settlements, or fractional interests in them, are not securities subject to regulation under the federal securities laws. Applying investment contract analysis a majority of the court concluded that pre-purchase services of the promoting company in the evaluation of life expectancy, and largely ministerial post-purchase services were not sufficient to establish that investor profits would flow predominantly from the efforts of others. On the other hand, although the death benefit of each life insurance policy involved in a viatical settlement is fixed, and the investor has no control over the eventual date of death of any insured, actual return to a completely passive as tied to efforts of the promoter company in making evaluations, reviewing policies, negotiating the actual purchase of policies and drafting necessary documents. These are managerial or entrepreneurial efforts that are not insubstantial. Moreover, viatical settlements may be offered and sold as investments, advertising high rates of return and thus inviting investor protection expectations.

Life Partners was never well-received among federal courts. In Securities & Exchange Commission v. Mutual Benefits Corp.,ⁿ¹³⁸ for example, the Eleventh Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals concluded that viatical contracts were plainly intended to be, and were considered investments in a common enterprise, involving an expectation of profits. On the critical point, whether the expected profits was based upon the efforts of the promoter or third party, the Mutual Benefits court flatly rejected Life Partners and its notion that with viaticals, there is no significant post-purchase activity, and therefore, no reliance upon the efforts of others. The Mutual Benefits court reasoned that there are very significant pre- and post-purchase efforts of the promoters that are essential to making investments in viatical settlements profitable. Investors relied on the promoter to identify terminally ill insureds, negotiate purchase prices, pay premiums, and perform life expectancy evaluations that were critical to the success of the venture. The combination of significant pre- and post-purchase managerial activities were sufficient to make the viatical settlements into investment contracts. Rejecting Life Partners was made easier by the fact that in the interim U.S. Supreme Court decision in Securities & Exchange Commission v. Edwards,ⁿ¹³⁹ re-emphasized the importance of broadly defining "security" to encompass virtually any instrument that might be sold as an investment. State regulators exhibited no hesitation in their response to the offer and sale of viatical settlements, and to the potential for fraud or abuse that exists by reason of risks of which investors may not be aware, and the potential for unscrupulous promoters to misrepresent them. Viatical settlements were quickly subjected to regulation as securities under Blue Sky Laws. In Ohio, for example, the Division of Securities announced that "in virtually all instances," viatical settlements are securities subject to the regulatory framework of that state's Blue Sky Law.ⁿ¹⁴⁰ This view is premised entirely upon investment contract analysis, amplified by a risk capital assessment that investors' initial value is "clearly" subject to the risks of an enterprise in which all managerial responsibilities are either retained by the viatical company or delegated to an escrow agent. State courts throughout the country agree.ⁿ¹⁴¹

Several states have amended their blue sky law definitions expressly to include viatical settlements. "Viatical settlement contracts" are, for example, expressly included in the definition of security in North Dakota.ⁿ¹⁴² They have also been addressed administratively under securities laws in several other states.ⁿ¹⁴³ Other states approach viaticals as a matter of insurance regulation. In all cases, however, the concern evidenced by state regulators is a reflection of the historic mission of blue sky regulation to protect the public from fraud. Regardless of what evolves as a matter of federal securities regulation, it is clear that state regulators are prepared to act under the broadest interpretation of investment contract or risk capital principles to extend the reach of blue sky laws where protection is needed. Thus, emergent variants on viatical settlements such as "senior" settlements will be subjected to the same investment contract analysis.ⁿ¹⁴⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Gaudina v. Haberman, 644 P.2d 159 (Wyo. 1982) ("Inter vivos trusts" held to be investment contracts in circumstances in which they were sold to individuals who were in reality investing money with an expectation of profits from the efforts of a promoter); see also Fore Way Express v. Bast, 178 Wis.2d 693, 505 N.W.2d 408 (Ct. App. 1993) (employee "profit sharing plan" held not to be an investment contract).

(n2)Footnote 2. People v. Smith, 215 Cal. App. 3d 230, 263 Cal. Rptr. 684 (1989).

(n3)Footnote 3. 328 U.S. 293, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 90 L. Ed. 1244. (1946) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Id. Prior to Howey, indeed before enactment of the federal securities laws, state courts interpreted investment contracts in terms of an outlay of capital in expectation of a profitable return. In State v. Gopher Tire & Rubber Co., 146 Minn. 52, 177 N.W. 937 (1920) , for example, the court offered the meaning of investment contract as: "the placing of capital or laying out of money in a way intended to secure income or profit from its employment... ." 177 N.W. at 938 . Gopher involved the sale of certificates that entitled purchasers to assist in the sale of the seller/defendant's products, and to receive a percentage of sales revenues, along with the opportunity to obtain additional cash or stock through distributions of excess earnings.

(n5)Footnote 5. See People v. Frederick, 142 Cal. App. 4th 400, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585 (2006), in which an "elaborate chain scheme" was held to be an investment contract. Criminal convictions for violation of the California Corporate Securities Law were affirmed, with the court finding: Mercedes, Felix, and Frederick carried out the managerial functions of LLDO. They alone made the important management decisions essential to LLDO's operations. LLDO members, many of whom were poor and uneducated, were not in charge and could not influence the management of LLDO. The success or failure of LLDO rested upon defendants' managerial efforts, not the efforts of its members... . When an investor entrusts money or other consideration to a promoter through any arrangement but retains substantial power to affect the success of the enterprise, he has not "risked capital" within the meaning of the Corporate Securities Law... . Here, LLDO investors did not retain "substantial power" to affect the success of LLDO. 142 Cal. App. 4th at 414 (citations omitted).

(n6)Footnote 6. 320 U.S. 344, 64 S. Ct. 120, 88 L. Ed. 88 (1943).

(n7)Footnote 7. Id. at 348, 64 S. Ct. at 122, 88 L. Ed. at 92 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Contrast the notion of unmanageable risk that is essential to the presence of an investment contract with a negotiated service agreement entered into between parties. In Broadview Fin. v. Entech Management Servs. Corp., 859 F. Supp. 444 (D. Colo. 1994), the court held that a financial consulting agreement, whereby one party was retained to assist the other in the identification of a suitable acquisition candidate was not an investment contract within the coverage of the Colorado blue sky law. Although the agreement provided that the consultant would be entitled to a fee of 10 percent of the value of any transaction ultimately consummated, such expected "profit" would come as a result of its own efforts. The agreement constituted only a contract for a private service transaction.

(n9)Footnote 9. 977 S.W.2d 934 (Mo. App. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 328 U.S. 293, 299, 66 S. Ct. 1100, 1103, 90 L. Ed. 1244, 1250 (1946) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Only New York, Rhode Island and Vermont do not expressly include investment contracts within their statutory definitions of security. In New York, however, the term is specifically included in a regulation defining certain securities. See 13 N.Y. Comp. R. & Regs. § 80.1(j)(4).

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.08

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Gallion v. Alabama Market Centers, Inc., 282 Ala. 679, 23 So. 2d 841 (1968); Sauer v. Hays, 36 Colo. App. 190, 539 P.2d 1343 (1975); State v. Bull Inv. Group, Inc., 32 Conn. Supp. 279, 351 A.2d 879 (1974); Georgia Mkt. Ctrs. v. Fortson, 225 Ga. 854, 171 S.E.2d 620 (1969); Polikoff v. Levy, 55 Ill. App. 2d 229, 204 N.E.2d 807 (1969); Scholarship Counselors, Inc. v. Waddle, 507 S.W.2d 138 (Ky. Ct. App. 1974); State v. Investors Sec. Corp., 297 Minn. 1, 209 N.W.2d 405 (1973); Garbo v. Hilleary Franchise Systems, Inc., 479 S.W.2d 491 (Mo. Ct. App. 1972); State v. Silberberg, 166 Ohio St. 101, 139 N.E.2d 342 (1956); Commonwealth ex rel. Pennsylvania Sec. Com. v. Consumers Research Consultants, Inc., 414 Pa. 253, 199 A.2d 428 (1964); Koscot Interplanetary, Inc. v. King, 452 S.W.2d 531 (Tex. Civ. App. 1970); First National Savings Foundation v. Samp, 274 Wis. 118, 80 N.W.2d 249 (1956).

(n13)Footnote 13. SEC v. W.J. Howey Co., 328 U.S. at 299, 66 S. Ct. at 1003, 90 L. Ed. at 1250; see also Cellular Engineering, Ltd. v. O'Neill, 118 Wash. 2d 16, 820 P.2d 941 (1991) (the purpose of securities laws is to regulate investments, in whatever form they are made and by whatever name they are called).

(n14)Footnote 14. The three Howey criteria have on occasion been divided into four, with "expectation of profit" being separated for consideration in its own right. See In re Walling Heirs Association, [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,530 (Okla. Ad. Proc. 1990). There may be some logic in doing so where it appears that the expected return on an investment of money is in no way dependent upon the activities of a common venture. See, e.g., Straub v. Mountain Trails Resort, Inc., [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,931 (Colo. Ct. App. 1988) (no expectation of profit associated with non profit campground memberships). However, it makes no practical difference in the analysis and there is no compelling reason to carve out a separate element.

(n15)Footnote 15. 540 U.S. 389, 124 S. Ct. 892, 157 L. Ed. 2d 813 (2004) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Murphy v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,053 (S. Ct. D.C. Civ. 1972); see also State ex rel. Healy v. Consumer Business System, Inc., 5 Or. App. 19, 482 P.2d 549 (1971) (omitting "money" reference entirely).

(n17)Footnote 17. In Cellular Engineering Ltd. v. O'Neill, 118 Wash. 2d 16, 820 P.2d 941 (1991), individuals paid "fees" to the plaintiff firm for the preparation and submission of application materials for participation in the lottery system for licenses to establish cellular telephone systems in particular areas. In an action to collect fees from a dissatisfied participant, the plaintiff firm confronted a defense assertion that the arrangement created an investment contract, for which there had been no blue sky law compliance. Whether an "investment of money" was present depended upon whether the payment of fees which, admittedly, did not represent capital to finance a common business venture, nevertheless satisfied the first Howey element. The court agreed that there was a requisite investment of money. Not the least among reasons offered in support of the conclusion was the fact that the firm's promotional literature emphasized the tremendous profit potential of the cellular telephone industry. Viewing the scheme in its entirety, said the court, demonstrated that customers did anticipate a return on their payment of fees.

See also American Microtel v. Secretary of State, 3 Mass. L. Rptr. 479 (Mass. Super. 1995) (fee for one time "investment" for wireless cable television lottery application filing service held to be the basis for an investment contract).

(n18)Footnote 18. See United Housing Found., Inc. v. Forman, 421 U.S. 837, 852, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 2062, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621, 632 (1975).

(n19)Footnote 19. 171 Mich. App. 748, 431 N.W.2d 441 (1988).

(n20)Footnote 20. Id. at 758 .

See also Roddy v. Alexander, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 4487 (Oct. 5, 2001), in which the court found no investment contract where plaintiffs purchased, and were titled owners of, separate real estate properties that were not part of any combined project or otherwise connected to each other, and over which they retained practical and actual control.

But see Securities Adm'r v. College Assistance Plan (Guam), Inc., 533 F. Supp. 118, aff'd, 700 F.2d 548 (9th Cir. 1983) in which interests in a pre need college tuition purchase plan in which the plan agreed to pay for the college costs of a designated beneficiary upon remittance of a lump sum or installment payments were investment contracts, and therefore securities, under the Guam Uniform Securities Act, considering the plan provided broad opportunity for wrong doing and the plan's activities were not regulated by any governmental agency.

(n21)Footnote 21. State v. Argo, 81 Wash. App. 552, 560, 915 P.2d 1103, 1107 (1996); see also Jenkins v. Jacobs, 748 P.2d 1318 (Colo. 1987) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Rother v. La Renovista Estates, Inc., 603 F. Supp. 533 (D. Colo. 1984) (Oklahoma law).

But see Roddy v. Alexander, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 4487 (Oct. 5, 2001), in which the transactions at issue involved 41 separate real estate purchases of existing properties, as to which there was no "project" and no indication that the transactions shared any type of commonality. The only common thread, said the court, was the alleged intent of the defendants to fleece the plaintiffs, a fact that does not transform real estate sales into securities.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Activator Supply Company, Inc. v. Wurth, 239 Kan. 610, 722 P.2d 1081 (1986).

Courts uncertain of the specific applicable standard in case law often accept either horizontal and vertical commonality, see Integrated Research Servs. v. Ill. Secy. of State, 328 Ill. App. 3d 67, 765 N.E.2d 130, 262 Ill. Dec. 304 (2002) (discretionary trading account).

Others apply both tests, see 537721 Ontario, Inc. v. Mays, [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,042 (Kan. Ct. App. 1989). Indeed both tests, as alternatives, may be encompassed in applicable law. See Daggett v. Jackie Fine Arts, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,466 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1986).

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g., Deckebach v. La Vida Charters, Inc., 867 F.2d 278 (6th Cir. 1989).

(n25)Footnote 25. Winkler v. Trico Financial Corp., 693 F. Supp. 896 (W.D. Wash. 1988) (Washington law). Winkler illustrates the notion of interdependence in a vertical commonality relationship. The case focused on an equipment leasing program involving computers designed to conserve energy. Plaintiffs alleged that the program created an investment contract, and that a common enterprise existed between the lessor/promoter and the individual lessees by reason of the involvement of the lessor or its affiliate in locating sites, and in managing computer units efficiently. Defendants claimed that there was no direct relationship between the success of the lessors and individual lessees, and thus no requisite commonality for the creation of an investment contract. The court disagreed, and offered this explanation of why vertical commonality was satisfied:

[F]irst, the success of the Winklers' investment was directly dependent [on] ALH's ability to locate a profitable site for the Energy Brain and manage the unit efficiently. Second, since the Winklers' lease payments to Saxon after the first year were equal to 75 percent of the Winklers' net revenues from the system, Saxon remained a viable lessor only to the extent that the Winklers and its other lessees prospered. Third, Enersonics relied on Saxon to repay a 25 year note for each Energy Brain. Thus, the entire Leasing Program survived only if Saxon located enough investors to generate profitable leases... . [T]he Winklers' fortunes were inextricably and directly tied to the efforts and fortunes of their promoters. 693 F. Supp. at 899.

(n26)Footnote 26. 212 F.3d. 180 (3d. Cir. 2000) .

(n27)Footnote 27. 540 U.S. 389, 124 S. Ct. 892, 157 L. Ed. 2d 813 (2004) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Weiss v. Lehman, 713 F. Supp. 489 (D.D.C. 1989) (D.C. law); see also Torres v. Divis, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,447 (Ill. App. Ct. 1986).

(n29)Footnote 29. For an evaluation of partnerships and joint ventures under investment contract criteria, see § 2.07[2], below.

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g., State v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,096 (Utah Dist. Ct. 1972).

(n31)Footnote 31. 741 P.2d 958 (Utah 1987) .

(n32)Footnote 32. The willingness of state courts to broadly interpret the third Howey criteria is well illustrated by People v. Sala, 258 A.D.2d 182, 695 N.Y.S.2d 169 (App. Div., 3d Dept. 1999) , in which the court opined that Howey merely requires that investors be led to expect profits solely from the efforts of others. In Sala the defendant was portrayed to investors as an expert in the numismatic coin market, and that profitability of coin investments was ensured by such expertise in selecting coins, monitoring their value and aiding in resale transactions. This, said the court, supported a finding that investors were led to believe that the promoter's efforts would influence the value of their coin portfolios.

See also State v. LaCount, 2008 WI 59, 750 N.W.2d 780, in which the Wisconsin Supreme Court rejected the argument that in order for a security to be found, an investor may not put forth any efforts himself or herself. The Court opined that such an approach would frustrate the remedial purposes of the state securities law by making it easy to evade the law by having an investor put forth a modicum of effort. Instead, the court concluded that an investor may have a role in managerial efforts so long as the investor does not provide the essential managerial efforts.

(n33)Footnote 33. See SEC v. Glenn W. Turner Enterprises, Inc., 474 F.2d 476 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 821, 94 S. Ct. 117, 38 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1973) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See State v. Danek, 118 N.M. 8, 878 P.2d 326 (1994) . The New Mexico Supreme Court upheld a jury instruction defining "investment contract" as:

[A]contract where an individual invests his or her money ... in an undertaking or venture of two or more people or entities ... with an expectation of profit ... based primarily on the efforts of others. An 'investment' is the use of money to make more money.

(n35)Footnote 35. State v. George, 50 Ohio App. 2d 297, 302 362 N.E.2d 1223, 1227 (1975). This is the definition for a security articulated in State by Commissioner of Sec. v. Hawaii Mkt. Ctr., 52 Hawaii 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Gallion v. Alabama Market Centers, Inc., 282 Ala. 679, 213 So. 2d 841 (1968); Wheeler v. State, 659 P.2d 1241 (Alaska 1983); Sullivan v. Metro Products, 150 Ariz. 573, 724 P.2d 1242 (1986), cert. denied, State ex rel. Miller v. Pace, 479 U.S. 1102, 107 S. Ct. 1334, 94 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987); In re Secured Commodities of Ark., Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,125 (Dep't of Commerce, Sec. Div. 1974); Jenkins v. Jacobs, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,644 (Colo. 1987); State v. Bull Inv. Group, Inc., 32 Conn. Sup. 279, 351 A.2d 879 (1974); Yeomans v. State, Dep't of Banking & Finance, Div. of Sec., 452 So. 2d 1011 (Fla. 1984); Georgia Mkt. Ctrs. v. Fortson, 225 Ga. 854, 171 S.E.2d 620 (1969); Polikoff v. Levy, 55 Ill. App. 2d 229, 204 N.E.2d 807, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 903, 86 S. Ct. 237, 15 L. Ed. 2d 156 (1965); Schwartz v. Bache & Co., 340 F. Supp. 995 (S.D. Iowa 1972); Activator Supply Co. v. Wurth, 239 Kan. 610, 722 P.2d 1081 (1986);

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.08

Scholarship Counselors, Inc. v. Waddle, 507 S.W.2d 138 (Ky. Ct. App. 1974); State v. Investors Security Corp., 297 Minn. 1, 209 N.W.2d 405 (1973); Garbo v. Hilleary Franchise Systems, Inc. 479 S.W.2d 491 (Mo. Ct. App. 1972); Conroy v. Schultz, 80 N.J. Super. 443, 194 A.2d 20 (1963); New Mexico v. Shade, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,452 (1986); People v. Monex Int'l, Ltd., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,156 (N.Y. Sup. 1974); Waterman v. Alta Verde Industries, Inc., 643 F. Supp. 797 (E.D.N.C. 1986); Emery v. So-Soft of Ohio, Inc., 94 Ohio Law Abs. 357, 199 N.E.2d 120 (1964); Commonwealth ex rel. Pennsylvania Sec. Com. v. Consumers Research Consultants, Inc., 414 Pa. 253, 199 A.2d 428 (1964); Bruner v. State, 463 S.W.2d 205 (Tex. Crim. App. 1970); Payable Accounting Corp. v. McKinley, 667 P.2d 15 (Utah 1983); Overthrust Mineral Corp. v. Wyoming Secretary of State, [1984-1985 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,243 (Wyo. 1985).

(n37)Footnote 37. See § 2.01 above.

(n38)Footnote 38. Partnerships and interests in joint ventures as securities are specifically considered at § 2.07, above.

(n39)Footnote 39. See Garrett v. Snedigar, 293 S.C. 176, 359 S.E.2d 283 (Ct. App. 1987).

(n40)Footnote 40. 854 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n41)Footnote 41. Id. at 114 ; see also Kansas v. Ribadeneira, [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,551 (Kan. Ct. App. 1991) (whether a general partnership interest is a security is a question of fact involving whether the investor does or does not have any real managerial functions).

(n42)Footnote 42. 442 N.W.2d 105 (Iowa 1989) .

(n43)Footnote 43. Id. at 107 .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Rivanna Trawlers Unlimited v. Thompson Trawlers, Inc., 650 F. Supp. 1378, 138-84 (W.D. Va. 1986) (managerial powers and the right of inspection vested in general partners takes them outside the intended scope of the federal securities laws).

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., State v. Brill, [1961-1971 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 70,918 (Wis. Cir. 1971), in which the defendant sold parcels of real estate, or undivided interests in them, to individual investors at inflated prices, and then leased back the property. Investors were promised that defendant's management of the property would yield a 12 percent annual return on this investment. The arrangement, defendant argued, was no more than a lease arrangement. Although the court suggested that had this been a single transaction there would be an open question as to whether a security was created, the defendant's repeated activities over a period of years brought the scheme within coverage of the Wisconsin blue sky law.

(n46)Footnote 46. See People v. Miller, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,632 (Cal. App. 1987) (sale of fractional shares of real property trust deeds securing notes held to be securities under the risk capital test); Smith v. Sherman, 206 Cal. App. 2d 93, 23 Cal. Rptr. 487 (1962); State v. Investors Security Corp., 297 Minn. 1, 209 N.W.2d 405 (1973); Bergquist v. Int'l Realty, Ltd., 272 Or. 416, 537 P.2d 553 (1975).

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., People v. Destro, 2008 Colo. App. LEXIS 896 (May 29, 2008). In Destro, a program involving the purchase and "flipping" of real estate was held to be an investment contract security under the Colorado Blue Sky law. Under the program the promoter purchased properties for resale to participating buyers. The buyers signed a contract to lease the properties to the promoter, and to sell the property back to the promoter within one year, at which time the buyer and the promoter would split any profits. Essential aspects of financing the properties and making mortgage payments remained the responsibility of the promoter, and the buyers of the properties were dependent upon the promoter to meet these obligations. The buyers were "owners" of the properties, but they were dependent upon the promoter for the generation of profits from their purchase and eventual resale.

(n48)Footnote 48. See, e.g., In re Hilton Head Vacation Rentals and Sales, Inc., [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,674 (So. Car. Admin. 1992) (agreement for property management and rental guarantee).

(n49)Footnote 49. In contrast, see Weiss v. Lehman, 713 F. Supp. 489 (D.D.C. 1989) (no investment contract where purchasers of real estate assumed active management roles with regard to the properties, and their motives for purchasing did not depend on the efforts of the sellers).

(n50)Footnote 50. 123 Or. App. 372, 860 P.2d 289 (1993).

(n51)Footnote 51. See also Roddy v. Alexander, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 4487 (Oct. 5, 2001) (purchasers maintained control over real estate properties and each transaction was a separate purchase involving no common enterprise).

(n52)Footnote 52. 68 N.Y.2d 81, 506 N.Y.S.2d 10, 497 N.E.2d 33 (N.Y. 1986) .

(n53)Footnote 53. See also Straub v. Mountain Trails Resort, Inc., [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,931 (Colo. Ct. App. 1988). But see State v. Shade, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,452 (N.M. Ct. App. 1986) (time share memberships held to be securities).

(n54)Footnote 54. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n55)Footnote 55. The approach has been extended to residential leases as well. See, e.g., Aschenbach v. Covenant Living Centers-North, Inc., 482 F. Supp. 1241 (E.D. Wis. 1980); see also AMR Realty Co. v. State, Bureau of Sec., 149 N.J. Super. 329, 373 A.2d 1002 (1977) (shares in housing cooperative entitling purchaser to lease an apartment are not securities unless further evidence would show investment contract criteria being met). Interests in housing cooperatives as securities are considered in further detail in § 2.08[2][i], below.

(n56)Footnote 56. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 45.55.130(12) ("security" means a certificate of interest or participation in any sale of or indenture or bond or contract for the conveyance of land or interest in land"); see also Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-2(16):

"[S]ecurity" shall not mean any interest in a residential unit and a rental management arrangement relating to such residential unit so long as the owner participant under the rental management arrangement, whether optional or mandatory, do not participate directly in the income derived from the rental of units owned by others.

(n57)Footnote 57. See e.g., 9 Vt. Stat. ann. § 4202: " 'Security' shall include land situated outside of the state."

See also Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.005(12):

"Security" means any sale or indenture, bond or contract for the conveyance of land or any interest therein where such land is situated outside of the state of Washington and such sale or its offering is not conducted by a real estate broker licensed by the state of Washington.

(n58)Footnote 58. Florida Realty, Inc. v. Kirkpatrick, 509 S.W.2d 114, 117 (Mo. 1974).

(n59)Footnote 59. Possible cooperative forms include joint tenancies, tenancies in common and trusts.

(n60)Footnote 60. Other features of cooperatives give the shareholder tenant the right to vote in the management of the corporation and the right to take income tax deductions on part of the shareholder tenant's share of carrying charges. If commercial enterprises are part of the premises, this income is generally used to decrease the monthly expenses of residents.

(n61)Footnote 61. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n62)Footnote 62. 421 U.S. at 851 .

(n63)Footnote 63. See 421 U.S. at 851, 95 S. Ct. at 2061, 44 L. Ed. 2d at 631 ; see also AMR Realty Co. v. New Jersey [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,350 (N.J. Sup. A.D. 1977):

[S]hares in a housing cooperative which entitle the purchaser to lease an apartment in the cooperative and do not possess the common attributes of stock ... are not securities within the intendment of [the New Jersey] Uniform Securities Law. Therefore, one who engages in the business of selling such shares is not required to register with the Bureau of Securities as a broker dealer or agent, as the case may be. Id. at 68,147.

(n64)Footnote 64. See N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 352-e(1)(a).

(n65)Footnote 65. See Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 36-490(a)(12); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(15); Hawaii Rev. L. §§ 485-6(13), 485-7; Iowa Code § 502.202(12); Mass. Gen. L. Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(13) and Mass. Reg. § 402(b)(13)(C)(iii).

Although the Pennsylvania statute is silent on the subject, a Securities Commission Bulletin indicates that cooperative interests will be considered securities. See [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 41,340 (June 1, 1971).

(n66)Footnote 66. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 711-31; N.J. Stat. Ann. Sections 49:3-27 et seq.

(n67)Footnote 67. See, e.g., Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 11-101; Mich. Comp. Laws § 559.31; N.Y. Real Prop. Law §§ 339-d, 339-ii; Va. Code Ann. §§ 55-79.1, 55-79.38.

(n68)Footnote 68. See, e.g., Dufour v. U.S. Home Corp., 581 So. 2d 765 (La. App. 1991) (court held that the purchase of condominium units for investment purposes does not create an investment contract in the absence of a showing that purchasers were required to participate in a rental program managed by the promoter or a third party).

See also Opinion of the Attorney General, No. 73 100, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,215 (Ga. 1973); Opinion of the Attorney General, No. 66- 8 (Hawaii); Maryland Securities Act Releases Nos. 4, 8, 1A Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) PP 30,553 and 30,554; Ohio Securities Bulletin, October 1973, 2 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 38,759; Oregon Securities Rule 815 30 056; Statement of Policy, Deputy South Carolina Securities Commissioner, January 2, 1985.

(n69)Footnote 69. See New Mexico v. Shade, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,452 (N.M. 1986). This case involved the sale of time share intervals in condominiums. The purchase of a time share entitled the purchaser to a minimum of one week's use of the condominium every year for 40 years. Title in the condominium property never passed to the purchaser. The purchasers were induced to purchase time shares based on representations that the purchase was a good investment and would be profitable. The court held that this offering was an investment contract under the Howey test.

But see O'Quinn v. Beach Associates, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,450 (S.C. 1978) (no investment contract where the sale of condominium units was without substantial reliance on the efforts of the seller or third parties for a return on the investment).

(n70)Footnote 70. At the federal level, in 1973 the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission addressed offerings of resort condominiums in which "investment" opportunities were the major marketing thrust, and supplied useful guidelines in determining whether a security is likely to be found in the sale of condominium units. See Securities Act Rel. No. 5347, [1972-1973 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 79,163 (SEC Jan. 4, 1973).

(n71)Footnote 71. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 45.55.130(12).

(n72)Footnote 72. This basic provision, with some variation, exists in Maine, Missouri, Ohio, Vermont and Washington.

(n73)Footnote 73. Section 339-ee(1) of the New York Real Property Law mandates that condominiums be deemed securities under Section 352-e of the General Business Law.

(n74)Footnote 74. 116 N.J. Super. 372, 282 A.2d 428 (1971) .

(n75)Footnote 75. Id. at 431-32. It was also decided that condominium interests for non income generating purposes was not a security within the definition "real property security" under N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-27.

(n76)Footnote 76. See Memorial Gardens v. Love, 5 Utah 2d 270, 300 P.2d 628, 630 (1956).

(n77)Footnote 77. Holloway v. Thompson, 112 Ind. App. 229, 42 N.E.2d 421 (1942) ; State v. Cushing, 137 Me. 112, 15 A.2d 740 (1940) ; see State v. Lorentz, 221 Minn. 366, 22 N.W.2d 313 (1946); In re Waldstein, 160 Misc. 763, 291 N.Y.S. 697 (1936) .

(n78)Footnote 78. In re Waldstein, 160 Misc. 763, 291 N.Y.S. 697, 700-701 (1936) .

(n79)Footnote 79. State v. Cushing, 137 Me. 112, 15 A.2d 740 (1940) (burial lots fell within the statute).

(n80)Footnote 80. Holloway v. Thompson, 112 Ind. App. 229, 42 N.E.2d 421 (1942) (circumstances such that cemetery lots could be interests commonly known as securities).

(n81)Footnote 81. State v. Lorentz, 221 Minn. 366, 22 N.W.2d 313 (1946) (Joiner analysis applied to find a security).

(n82)Footnote 82. See Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-13(17). But see Memorial Gardens v. Love, 5 Utah 2d 270, 300 P.2d 628 (1956) (added services insufficient to bring sale of burial plots within statutory coverage).

(n83)Footnote 83. 643 F. Supp. 797 (E.D.N.C. 1986) (North Carolina law).

(n84)Footnote 84. The court added:

[W]hile plaintiff may have expressed more interest in his investment than some others, there is nothing to indicate that he ever intended to become involved in the maintenance and care of his cattle or that defendant had the least expectation that he would do so.

Id. at 806 .

(n85)Footnote 85. See, e.g., Busse v. Pacific Cattle Feeding Fund #1, 896 S.W.2d 807 (Tex. App. 1994); Ronnett v. American Breeding Herds, Inc., 124 Ill. App. 3d 842, 464 N.E.2d 1201 (1984).

(n86)Footnote 86. Pride of the Andes, Inc. v. Soberay, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 36 (Jan. 10, 2001).

(n87)Footnote 87. In re Certified Silver Exchange, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,353

(Montana Sec. Dept. 1985).

Precious metals or gemstones may also fall within an express "commodity" definition, and as such be subject directly to particular state blue sky laws. Michigan, for example, extends coverage of its blue sky law to "commodity contracts." In Aaronson v. Lindsay & Hauer International Ltd., 235 Mich. App. 259, 597 N.W.2d 227 (1998), the court concluded that the offer and sale of precious or semi-precious gemstones, the value of which was not readily ascertainable by members of the general public, and which were offered to the general public as an investment, involved contracts for the sale of commodities and fell directly under the Michigan Uniform Securities Act. The court particularly emphasized the manner in which the stones were marketed, noting, for example, that the seller's literature was "punctuated with investment terminology." Although the Michigan court looked to the express coverage of commodity contracts under the Blue Sky law, precious stone "investment" programs are subject to the same assessments under straightforward investment contract analysis.

(n88)Footnote 88. Daggett v. Jackie Fine Arts, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,466 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1986).

(n89)Footnote 89. People v. Sala, 258 A.D.2d 182, 695 N.Y.S.2d 169 (1999) (numismatic coin portfolio program satisfied Howey elements); In re Gold Coast Rarities, Inc., [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,765 (Wis. Comm. 1987).

(n90)Footnote 90. Sullivan v. Metro Prods., 150 Ariz. 573, 724 P.2d 1242 (Ct. App.), cert. denied sub nom. State ex rel. Miller v. Sullivan, 479 U.S. 1102, 107 S. Ct. 1334, 94 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987) (master videotape sales program); Allison v. Southampton Music Company, [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,441 (D. Or. 1986) (audio records and tapes).

(n91)Footnote 91. In re Macadamia Plantations of Panama, Inc., [1986-1987 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,360 (Me. Bureau 1985).

(n92)Footnote 92. Activator Supply Co. v. Wurth, 239 Kan. 610, 722 P.2d 1081 (1986).

(n93)Footnote 93. State v. Tyler, 512 N.W.2d 552 (Iowa 1994) (expectation of profit contingent upon completion of a lawsuit); see also State v. Kraklio, 560 N.W.2d 16 (Iowa 1997) (sale of claims in a non existent suit against the federal government held to be investment contract securities).

(n94)Footnote 94. See, e.g., Garvin v. Secretary of State, 266 Ga. App. 66, 596 S.E.2d 166 (2004); State ex rel. Miller v. Pace, 677 N.W.2d 761 (2004).

(n95)Footnote 95. Equipment leasing programs have often been deemed to be investment contracts. See, e.g., Winkler v. Trico Financial Corp., [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,949 (W.D. Wash. 1988) (Wash. law).

(n96)Footnote 96. See, e.g., In re Gardner, [1979 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 96,757 (Spec. Ter. N.Y. S. Ct. 1979); State v. Gertsch, 137 Idaho 387, 49 P.3d 392 (2002) ("Investment" opportunity presented to individuals to provide loans to Defendant to finance complementary vacation packages).

(n97)Footnote 97. 171 Mich. App. 748, 431 N.W.2d 441 (1988).

(n98)Footnote 98. 171 Mich. App. at 757.

(n99)Footnote 99. [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,707 (E.D.Wash. 1988) (Wash. law).

(n100)Footnote 100. See also Information Leasing Corp. v. Borda, 2003-Ohio-4834, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4367

(Sept. 12, 2003) (ATM lease agreements were not investment contracts where the lessee was to provide a place of business at which the ATMs would be located, and there was no pooling of lease payments).

(n101)Footnote 101. See, e.g., Deckebach v. La Vida Charters, Inc., 867 F.2d 278 (6th Cir. 1989) . In Deckebach a yacht purchase and associated management program did not create an investment contract under the Ohio blue sky law where there was no contribution or pooling of venture capital. A finding of "horizontal commonality" would be required. The relationship involved, however, was known by the purchaser from the outset to be "[e]ssentially the hiring of an independent contractor to perform services to produce rental income to permit ultimate payment and retention of the yacht for personal use." Id. at 283 .

(n102)Footnote 102. See In re Croy Thoroughbreds, [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,653 (Ga. Comm. 1987).

(n103)Footnote 103. 320 U.S. 344, 353, 64 S. Ct. 120, 124, 88 L. Ed. 88, 94 (1943) .

(n104)Footnote 104. State by Commissioner of Sec. v. Hawaii Mkt. Ctr., 52 Hawaii 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971).

(n105)Footnote 105. Regardless of whether blue sky laws are applied to a franchise through investment contract analysis, other state laws addressing franchising, or franchise investments generally, may apply. See, e.g., California Franchise Investment Law, Cal. Corp. Code §§ 31000-31019.

(n106)Footnote 106. See Emery v. So-Soft of Ohio, Inc., 94 Ohio Law Abs. 357, 199 N.E.2d 120 (Ct. App. 1964). In Emery, plaintiff purchased a water softener unit in a program involving a "referral" agreement under which the defendant seller was to pay $100 for each person referred by plaintiff. The court held that the referral agreement was not an investment contract under the Ohio blue sky law: "[S]uch instrument or certificate cannot be deemed a security when it merely represents a purchaser's right to reap a profit from his own services, and such profit is guaranteed upon the performance of those services..." Id. at 124.

(n107)Footnote 107. 741 P.2d 958 (Utah 1987) .

(n108)Footnote 108. The court noted:

Ball could not sell food directly to the public, and he had to rely on the efforts of others to generate those profits. Because his efforts would generate only limited profits and he had to rely on the efforts of others to ensure the viability of his business, Ball's contract with Westland was an investment contract.

Id. at 960 .

(n109)Footnote 109. [1987-1988 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,729 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987).

(n110)Footnote 110. Id. at 73,089.

(n111)Footnote 111. 497 F.2d 473 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n112)Footnote 112. 474 F.2d 476 (9th Cir.) , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 821, 94 S. Ct. 117, 38 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1973) .

(n113)Footnote 113. See also Webster v. Omnitrition Int'l, 79 F.3d 776 (9th Cir. 1996).

(n114)Footnote 114. Thus, in People v. Cooper, 166 Mich. App. 638, 421 N.W.2d 177 (1987), for example, the court observed that once a participant in such a plan recruited the first generation of people, the participant merely continued to invest $20 per month. The success or failure of the plan essentially depended upon the managerial and entrepreneurial skills of the promoters.

(n115)Footnote 115. State v. Irons, 254 Neb. 18, 574 N.W.2d 144 (1998) .

(n116)Footnote 116. See also State v. Jones, 235 Neb. 1, 453 N.W.2d 447 (1990) (eliminating the Howey requirement that profits must be derived solely from the entrepreneurial or managerial efforts of others).

(n117)Footnote 117. N.D.C.C. § 10 04 02(12); see also Meadow Fresh Farms v. Sandstrom, 333 N.W.2d 780 (N.D. 1983).

(n118)Footnote 118. Unif. Securities Act § 401(1). The bracketed words are optional, intended to allow states the opportunity to exclude variable annuities along with so called "orthodox," or fixed, annuities from blue sky laws. See Official Comment, § 401(1). States adopting the Uniform Securities Act, but not the bracketed language, thus simply exclude any insurance policy or annuity contract which promises to pay money "either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period." See, e.g., Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(k)(i). The option to exclude variable annuities from the definition of security is carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, see 2002 Unif. Securities Act § 102(28).

See also Dryden v. Sun Life Assurance Co., 737 F. Supp. 1058 (S.D. Ind. 1989) (court held that the right to receive such dividends as may be declared in the discretion of the board of directors does not operate to convert a standard life insurance policy into a security as a matter of Indiana and federal securities laws).

(n119)Footnote 119. 359 U.S. 65, 79 S. Ct. 618, 3 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1959) .

(n120)Footnote 120. Id. at 71-72 , 79 S. Ct. at 621, 3 L. Ed. 2d at 644 . In a subsequent case, focusing on an annuity product in which the allocation of investment risk was changed to shift some risk to the issuing company, while still preserving the "variable" feature, the Court still found an investment contract. The thrust of the program was the opportunity to share in the investment experience of the company's portfolio, a point that was "pitched" to purchasers. See SEC v. United Benefit Life Insurance Co., 387 U.S. 202, 87 S. Ct. 1557, 18 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1967) .

(n121)Footnote 121. Cal. Corp. Code § 25019; see also Idaho Code § 30-1402(12) (annuity must be issued by an insurance company that is subject to supervision of the state Department of Insurance); Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662, § 36-471(m); Ga. Code Ann. § 10 5 2(16); La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:702(15)(a); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A 2(11).

(n122)Footnote 122. See, e.g., People v. Coventry First LLC, 52 A.D. 3d 345, 861 N.Y.S. 2d 9, CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 74,716, at 79,799 (1st Dept. 2008) (variable annuity policies already subject to regulation by the Department of Insurance are not securities under the New York Blue Sky Law--the Martin Act).

(n123)Footnote 123. States making no mention of insurance or annuities in their blue sky law definitions of security include: Arizona, Florida, Illinois, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, and Rhode Island.

(n124)Footnote 124. See Securities Act Rel. No. 4491, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1043 (1962). Concluding that such plans or programs are themselves investment contracts, the SEC opined, among other things: "The several components should ... be considered realistically as a single investment medium in which the purchaser invests his money and depends upon the efforts of the promoters or other third persons to garner for him the benefits of the enterprise."

(n125)Footnote 125. Although the focus here is on equity indexed annuities, other indexed annuities offered and sold by insurance companies may be linked to some other index, a bond index for example, to determine the return to be credited during the accumulation period.

(n126)Footnote 126. Holding v. Cook, 521 F. Supp. 2d 832, 836 (C.D. Ill. 2007).

See also Associates in Adolescent Psychiatry, S.C. v. Home Life Ins. Co., 941 F. 2d 561, 565 (7th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1099 (1992) (concluding that all annuity products "are securities, broadly understood, because they entail entrusting money to the hands of others in pursuit of appreciation").

The debate over the status of EIAs as securities follows logically from the 1967 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in SEC v. United Ben. Life Ins. Co., 387 U.S. 202 (1967). In United Benefit, the Supreme Court considered whether a "flexible fund" annuity product was a security. With this annuity contract, the purchaser was credited during the accumulation period with an amount that depended upon the investment performance of a separate fund. At maturity, the contract was converted into a fixed annuity based upon the amount thus accumulated, and the annuity pay-out was that amount. The product also featured a guaranteed minimum amount that would be credited to the annuitant to fund the payments. On this basis, and the conversion feature, the company argued that sufficient investment risk related to return was assumed by the insurance company as to keep the annuity from being deemed a security. The Supreme Court disagreed. The Court acknowledged that the company had taken risk as to the minimum amount to be credited at maturity, the minimum was fixed so low that it did not significantly impact the investment risk being taken by the annuitant.

(n127)Footnote 127. See Malone v. Addison Ins. Mktg., Inc., 225 F. Supp. 2d. 743, 753 (W.D. Ky. 2002). In Malone, the court disregarded risks such that the guaranteed return was contingent on a ten-year holding period.

(n128)Footnote 128. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-8933, 73 F.R. 127 (July 1, 2008).

(n129)Footnote 129. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-8933, 73 F.R. 127, at 37752.

(n130)Footnote 130. Id.

(n131)Footnote 131. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(8) (2000). Section 3(a)(8) provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for:

Any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or optional annuity contract, issued by a corporation subject to the supervision of the insurance commissioner, bank commissioner, or any agency or officer performing like functions, of any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia.

(n132)Footnote 132. Proposed Rule 151A(a)(1)-(2), Rel. No. 33-8933, above.

(n133)Footnote 133. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(l).

(n134)Footnote 134. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(28)(B).

(n135)Footnote 135. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(28)(B), Official Comment 27; see also § 2.08[2][e], above.

(n136)Footnote 136. See, e.g., Steller v. Pennsylvania Sec. Comm'n, 877 A.2d 518 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2005) (Life Settlements are viaticals based on recognized and accepted definitions, and despite the fact that they involve individuals whose life expectancies are greater than the two years for terminally ill persons upon which viatical settlements are often based).

(n137)Footnote 137. 87 F.3d 536, 318 U.S. App. D.C. 302 (D.C.Cir. 1996) , reh'g denied, 102 F.3d. 587, 322 U.S. App. D.C. 189 (D.C. Cir. 1996) .

(n138)Footnote 138. 408 F.3d 737 (11th Cir. 2005).

(n139)Footnote 139. 540 U.S. 389, 157 L. Ed. 2d 813, 124 S. Ct. 892 (2004).

(n140)Footnote 140. "Division Announces its Position on Viatical Settlements," Ohio Sec. Bulletin 98:3 (1998).

(n141)Footnote 141. See, e.g., Security Trust Corp. v. Estate of Fisher, 797 N.E.2d 789 (Ind. Ct. App. 2003); Accelerated Benefits Corp. v. Peaslee, 818 N.E.2d 73 (Ind. Ct. App. 2004) (As further noted below, Indiana amended its Blue Sky Law specifically to include viatical settlements among the statutory list of "securities." At the time of activities out of which the decisions in Security Trust Corp. and Accelerated Benefits arose, the statute had not yet been changed.); Kligfeld v. Office of Financial Regulation, 876 So. 2d 36 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004); Siporin v. Carrington, 200 Ariz. 97, 93 P.3d 92 (Ct. App. 2001); Michelson v. Voison, 254 Mich. App. 691, 658 N.E.2d 188 (2003); Joseph v. Viatica Mgmt. LLC, 55 P.3d 264 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002); Poyser v. Flora, 780 N.E.2d 1191 (Ind. Ct. App. 2003).

(n142)Footnote 142. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-02(15). Subject to certain exclusions, North Dakota defines "viatical settlement contract" as:

[a]n agreement for the purchase, sale, assignment, transfer, devise, or bequest of any portion of the death benefit or ownership of a life insurance policy or certificate, for consideration that is less than the expected death benefit of the life insurance policy or certificate.

(n143)Footnote 143. For a thorough examination of the extent of state securities regulatory attention to viatical settlements see Miriam R. Albert, The Future of Death Futures: Why Viatical Settlements Must be Classified Securities, 19 Pace L. Rev. 345 (Spring 1999).

(n144)Footnote 144. "Senior settlements" involve life insurance policies acquired from elderly persons. Functionally, they are no different from any other viatical or "life settlement" contract.

See, e.g., In re Robert Kurtis Mauss, SSB Dkt. No. 03-027, 2003 Tex. Sec. LEXIS 34 (Tx. Sec. Bd. 2003).

24 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.09

§ 2.09 Risk Capital as Defining the Existence of a Security

[1] Risk Capital--Generally

Defining the existence of a security using strict investment contract analysis may result in too much emphasis being placed on specific Howey elements without adequate focus on the fundamental element of investment risk that is the basis for any determination. To assure a broader assessment based upon economic reality, the "risk capital" approach to defining a security, which developed in state courts, teaches that investment risk is risk to initial value as capital for an enterprise, rather than the risk of the future operation of that enterprise. While the reasonable understanding that some future "profit," a valuable benefit of some kind over and above the initial value will accrue is important, the main focus is on the extent to which the "initial value" paid in is immediately consumed as risk capital of an enterprise over which the contributor will have no control over managerial decisions.

The risk capital approach to defining a security is more often than not best understood in terms of venture capital. There is a broader notion, however. There is implicit here, the notion that if the fair market value is paid in exchange for something, and all other things being equal, no portion of "initial value" can be said to be risk capital. This is so in spite of whatever expectation the purchaser may have for realizing some future benefit from what he or she purchases. On the other hand, payment of initial value in excess of what is shown to be actual or fair market value, such that the excess value is deemed to be given in consideration for the right to receive the future benefit to be produced by an enterprise being financed by the excess initial value leads to a different conclusion. The Supreme Court of Hawaii, which first articulated the risk capital approach, has further explained the point.

In Trivectra v. Ushijima,ⁿ¹ the court applied risk capital analysis to uphold a determination by the Hawaii Commissioner of Securities that rights sold to individual to operate online "shopping malls" by hosting a customized Internet Web site containing links retailers were securities. Under the program, purchasers ("mall owners") paid $79 for three months of service through the seller/promoter's program, which included maintenance, server hosting, and assistance with web design. Mall owners could make money either: (1) through commissions paid by online merchants whenever a purchase was made by a third party using a link from the mall owner's website; or (2) by recruiting other people to purchase online shopping malls. A prime focus in the case was whether the $79 price paid by mall owners represented "initial value" for purposes of the risk capital analysis in finding a security.

As it had in its seminal Hawaii Market Center case,ⁿ² the Hawaii Supreme Court determined the existence and amount of "initial value" paid in by an investor to participate in a program by focusing on the disparity between the amount paid for the product and the wholesale cost of the product. In Trivectra, the appellants argued that the $79 paid to become a "mall owner" represented the fair market price for the online shopping mall site that it supplied. The Securities Commissioner, on the other hand, maintained that of the $79 price, $49 represented initial value invested by a purchaser based on undisputed evidence that the actual operating cost of the website was approximately $30 per owner, and that the rest of the price paid was used to pay commissions to people selling additional online shopping malls. The Supreme Court agreed that at least $49 of the price was given in consideration of the right to receive future income, and thus, was initial value. The court then concluded that even though the excess value being paid by individual mall owners was not traditional venture capital, the seller company was nevertheless engaged in raising capital that was necessary to the continuing business from which mall owners would derive income, not the least of which was the payment of commissions for selling malls to other people. The court explained:

"[U]nder Trivectra's program, the payment of initial capital was required for an individual to participate in the OSM commission program While, in order to earn commissions, it was necessary that a member make actual sales, by requiring the initial investment payment, Trivectra transformed garden variety sales representatives into equity holders in the enterprise. As such, members could only realize a return if Trivectra remained viable and sufficiently capitalized to honor its OSM commission commitments."³

Finding a security in spite of the fact that a purchaser had to be actively involved in making sales on which commissions would be paid perfectly, illustrates the key distinction between the risk capital approach to defining a security and the alternative investment contract analysis. The time and energy committed by mall owners in Trivectra produced value only to the extent that the promoter's business venture succeeded. Thus, a security is present when capital is paid into a business by investors, in order to derive income from the use of that capital in the business, is put at risk in the event the business venture fails.

The genesis of the risk capital approach to defining a security is in "membership" cases, where up-front fees or the cost of membership are in fact financing development of the project in which memberships are sold. The particular application of risk capital analysis in this context is discussed below.

[2] Memberships

"Memberships" that in reality only mask the commitment of risk capital to an enterprise are often deemed investment contracts. Often, however, what is labeled a "membership" does not immediately evidence the profit expectation most closely associated with the notion of a securities investment. Historically, without the expectation of pecuniary gain, the common view was that a "membership" transaction should not be subject to securities regulation.⁴ Whether a security was created by the payment of money toward membership in organizations depended heavily upon the monetary advantage offered to those joining, and investment contract analysis most often controlled. That continues to be true.⁵

A different challenge is presented to courts and blue sky administrators by memberships in country, social, or athletic clubs. These clubs offer the member no right to share in the profits of the enterprise, and limit membership rights to the use of club facilities. Memberships in campgrounds and recreational facilities present the same problem. Indeed, memberships that represent only the right to personal use and enjoyment of any facility hold out no economic "profit" potential, and do not normally produce concern for securities law protection.

On the other hand, a program that entitled "charter members" to receive 16 percent interest, share equally in a percentage of the profits of an enterprise, and have the option of acquiring stock in exchange for each $1,500 paid to become a "charter member" of the enterprise, held out an inducement that was entirely economic. Thus, in State v. Jones,⁶ the Nebraska Supreme Court had no trouble concluding: "It is self evident from the membership sale agreement that each member's $1,500 was an investment, and that there was a common enterprise involving at least 100 people." The court found that the written investment contract did not require the purchaser to do anything more than invest funds.

Although expectations and inducements associated with "membership" may not be plainly economic, concern for protection under blue sky laws may nevertheless arise when membership programs are in fact capital formation or financing vehicles. When money paid for a "membership" becomes risk capital is perhaps best illustrated by Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski,ⁿ⁷ in which the California Supreme Court held that the outright purchase of a country club membership is not in and of itself the purchase of a security, but if the promoters use purchase funds to finance the venture, the purchaser runs a high risk of losing his money. This, said the court, is enough to establish the existence of a security.ⁿ⁸ Silver Hills established two important concepts in finding a membership to be a security under blue sky laws:

- (1) the outright application of the independent "risk capital" test;ⁿ⁹ and;
- (2) elimination of the necessity of strict economic "profit" from the traditional definition construct.

While other courts have applied the risk capital approach to profit motivated investments, California has at least paved the way to its application where economic profit is not the motivation associated with a commitment of value in a transaction.ⁿ¹⁰ The more common approach to non-economic motivation is illustrated by the New York Court of Appeals examination of a program involving the sale of memberships allowing the use of outdoor resort campgrounds in All Seasons Resorts, Inc. v. Abrams.ⁿ¹¹ The court held that memberships in a system of outdoor resort campgrounds did not constitute securities. The court determined that a security was not present under Howey because there was no expectation of financial gain or profit, and while not specifically endorsing the risk capital test, went on to further conclude that members bought the right to use existing campgrounds and were not funding a developing business.

Under the terms of the offering in Abrams, each campground was or would be developed for recreational vehicles with electrical, water, and sewer services. In addition, at a typical campground, All Seasons provided a general store, recreational hall, a swimming area, and facilities and equipment for various athletic and recreational activities. Members paid an initial fee ranging from $4,995 to $6,095 depending on certain optional features, and a yearly dues of $152, which could increase only up to the yearly increase in a specified consumer price index. Membership conferred only a license for nonexclusive use of any facilities that might be made available by All Seasons through purchase, lease, operation, or otherwise. The location and nature of these facilities were subject to change by All Seasons, but it undertook to use best efforts to maintain or improve the existing quality of the properties and resorts. All Seasons was not obliged to increase the number of resorts and could dispose of resorts at any time, but in that event would provide alternate facilities. Finding no investment contract in these circumstances, the New York court also opined that the interests were not participation interests or investments in real estate or a cooperative interest in real estate, which are specifically included under the New York definition of securities.

One who acquires only a privilege through a membership does not purchase an investment contract, even if the privilege is such as to permit the purchaser to engage in a revenue producing activity. Stock exchange memberships, for example, entitle holders to engage in certain trading activities on the exchange, and revenues realized by the exchange reduce the dues and assessments of members. However, applying investment contract analysis "profit" to members of an exchange is a result of their own profit-making activity. Exchange membership supplies the platform, or privilege, but the essential efforts for success are those of the member.ⁿ¹²

To be sure, membership cases do illustrate that the expectation of future "profit" can be defined in terms of an expectation of some valuable benefit, and that a security may be present if there is actual risk to initial value being given up pursuant to that expectation. The risk, however, is that associated with capital formation and financing, where the payment of initial value is not for the privilege to use or consume, but rather to finance the development of the subject facility or enterprise. The critical inquiry in these is whether true risk capital is involved, and whether the "membership" is in fact a financing device. In some cases, this leads to a distinction between initial and subsequent members.ⁿ¹³ But applying the more flexible "risk capital" approach to defining a security, such a distinction may be quite logical.ⁿ¹⁴

Traditional venture capital risk, of course, continues to be important in other settings. "Membership" cases like Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski,ⁿ¹⁵ illustrate that where one contributes the risk capital that is used to create an enterprise, it is the initial risk that is meaningful. Indeed, it is only because of that risk that there is any chance for an enterprise capable of producing any future benefit.ⁿ¹⁶ A risk capital orientation in defining unconventional forms of securities like investment contracts for purposes of state blue sky laws is not inconsistent with the traditional tripartite Howey federal model. In practice, and as the risk capital approach continues to be refined in case law and now expressly included in some blue sky law definitions,ⁿ¹⁷ there are likely to be relatively few instances in which an investment contract or other unconventional form of security would be found by applying one approach but not the other, although Trivectra, discussed above, presents an excellent example of circumstances in which it can happen. A risk capital approach is more fluid and flexible, but in practice, it still focuses on an assessment of managerial control over an enterprise, the separation of ownership from value determinants that is a fundamental element of any security under any approach.

The Tennessee Supreme Court decision in King v. Pope ⁿ¹⁸ provides an excellent illustration of the application of risk capital analysis in circumstances that have for the most part been evaluated using traditional Howey investment contract criteria. King involved the offer and sale of a pay telephone program for a company that provided discount pay telephone long distance service. The offering was a sale and leaseback program in which participants bought at least three pay telephones at a fixed price, but did not take possession and did not choose locations for their phones. There was no pooling in the traditional "common enterprise" sense, and a lower court determination that no security was present based on this finding was challenged in the state supreme court. The Tennessee Supreme Court reversed, holding that risk capital analysis should have been applied, and finding that its elements were all established.

Initial value was furnished by purchasers by paying for the telephones in circumstances demonstrating clearly that the selling company was raising money for its own capital expenditures and expansion. The company was not in the business of selling pay telephones, but rather was in the business of providing discount long distance service. The initial value given up by purchasers, said the court, was then made subject to the risks of the enterprise, the success of which depended upon the profitability of the entire enterprise. The participants were plainly induced to expect a benefit in excess of the initial value, in this case an exceptional 18 percent return for five years. Finally, the purchasers had no right to exercise practical or actual control over managerial decisions of the enterprise.

King adopts the risk capital test generally for application to defining a security in Tennessee. In this particular application the court well illustrated its greater flexibility. In applying conventional Howey criteria to find no security the lower court demonstrated at least the danger that investor protection might be thwarted by a too rigid analysis. The Supreme Court emphasized: "This Court also believes that the danger in adopting the stricter Howey-Forman test for 'investment contract' is that it allows unscrupulous promoters to circumvent the law."ⁿ¹⁹

Applying a risk capital "test" or approach to defining a security does not violate any principle enunciated in Howey. State courts and regulators often assess situations under both approaches.ⁿ²⁰ However, in some cases it assures that the historic mission of state blue sky regulation to protect the public against fraudulent "investment" schemes will be carried out by permitting flexibility in localized, solicitation settings and ostensible capital formation or franchise schemes that are commonly confronted by state regulators.ⁿ²¹ There is no common approach to application of risk capital analysis among the states,ⁿ²² and none should be expected. Each situation must be evaluated independently. Where risk capital is the dominant feature, state courts and regulators at least have the option to concentrate the focus on risk capital rather than on the Howey mandated role of "others" in producing expected profits in the operation of an enterprise. And as the statutory approach discussed above that has been taken in North Dakota illustrates, regulators will take the broadest view of value committed to the risk of a venture and the benefit expectations associated with it.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Trivectra v. Ushijima, 112 Haw. 90, 144 P.3d 1 (2006).

(n2)Footnote 2. State by Commissioner of Sec. v. Hawaii Mkt. Ctr., 52 Haw. 642, 485 P.2d 105 (1971).

(n3)Footnote 3. Trivectra v. Ushijima, 112 Haw. 90, 100, 144 P.3d 1, 11 (2006).

(n4)Footnote 4. But see In re Walling Heirs Association, [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,530 (Okla. Admin. 1990). In Walling Heirs, memberships in an "association" created to facilitate the identification of assets and claims that might be owed to "members" from an estate also evidenced plain economic motivation, and were deemed to be investment contracts. The association was in the nature of a syndicate, and the individuals who became members expected to profit from sharing in assets, without exercising any control over the activities, including any lawsuits that would be necessary (and funded by memberships). The expectation associated with "memberships" such as these is plainly economic, and the inducement is quite different from that associated with clubs or recreational facilities.

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Caldwell v. State, 95 S.W.3d 563 (Tex. App. 2002) (defendant recruited people to join an "investment club" by paying an annual fee, joining a team, and giving the team money for investment, with an expectation of profits from 100 to 300 percent); In re Daily Portfolios.com and Matthew Taylor, No. 2001-11-021 (Pa. Sec. Comm., Nov. 29, 2001) ("Members" were offered an investment opportunity involving FOREX trading by the Respondents' traders).

See also Scholarship Counselors, Inc. v. Waddle, 507 S.W.2d 138 (Ky. Ct. App. 1974), in which memberships were sold in a scholarship trust fund. After the entrance fee required of a participant was paid, he was to place a stated amount of money into a savings account and irrevocably assign the interest on the account to the trust fund. Administration of the trust was handled by a group of trustees without any control of the member. The member also named a beneficiary who would receive the benefit of the fund in the future or, more specifically, upon entrance of the beneficiary into his or her sophomore year in college. When the beneficiary became eligible, certain college expenses were to be paid out of the fund. However, success of the plan was dependent on the fact that not all named beneficiaries would be eligible for the fund. Taken into account were school dropout and death factors which would eliminate a number of beneficiaries from eligibility. The argument was that the "solely from the efforts of others" portion of the Howey test should be strictly applied in order to find participation by the investor in that the investor was required to make the deposit and not withdraw it, and remain qualified to receive the scholarship. The court refused to sustain the argument and instead applied the more liberal interpretation of the Howey rule, implying that the member's control of the funds was not substantial. The court also found that efforts of the member or the beneficiary did nothing to produce the profit necessary to the scholarship fund.

(n6)Footnote 6. State v. Jones, 235 Neb. 1, 453 N.W.2d 447 (1990).

(n7)Footnote 7. Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906 (1961).

(n8)Footnote 8. Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906, 908-909.

(n9)Footnote 9. See § 2.08[3], below for discussion of the risk capital approach to defining a security.

(n10)Footnote 10. Interestingly, California also explicitly includes memberships within the statutory definition of security. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25019: "'Security' means any ... membership in an incorporated or unincorporated association."

The California Commissioner of Corporations, in Release No. 15 C (1970), has stated with respect to this section:

The term "membership" as used in Section 25019 refers to memberships, such as those issued by nonprofit organizations, which confer a proprietary right on the holder. A proprietary right may be defined as a right to the ownership of the assets or earnings of an organization or the right to control of such organization. A right to control is normally evidenced by voting rights, whether conferred by the charter documents or under the provisions of the Corporations Code.

A membership sold by a profit making organization which is a license to use the facilities constitutes a security if the proceeds from the sale of such membership are used to provide facilities necessary to the full utilization of the membership, that is, where the purchaser provides the risk capital for the enterprise, such as for the construction of a golf course and related facilities.

Not every right, privilege, benefit or license sold by a profit making organization and which is labeled a "membership" is a membership within the meaning of Section 25019. A membership which confers upon the holder nothing more than the right to enjoy the facilities which are provided, such as key club privileges, the use of a swimming pool, or the use of golf facilities, is not a membership within the meaning of Section 25019 and, in the absence of the "risk" element, is not a security. If the sale of a right to use facilities includes a right to a return of money paid or a right to share in the income or profits, it constitutes the sale of a security, in the nature of an evidence of indebtedness or of an investment contract.

Wisconsin uses a definition similarly worded to the California statute in its blue sky regulations. See Wis. Adm. Code § 1.05(5).

(n11)Footnote 11. All Seasons Resorts, Inc. v. Abrams, 68 N.Y.2d 81, 506 N.Y.S.2d 10, 497 N.E.2d 33 (1986).

(n12)Footnote 12. American Stock Exchange, Inc., SEC No Action Letter [1998 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) [par] 77,472 (July 10, 1998).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Jet Set Travel Club v. Corporation Comm'r, 21 Or. App. 362, 535 P.2d 109 (1975), in which memberships in an airline travel club were held not to be securities. The court opined that "risk capital" must be "initial capital." The club, in this case, had existed for a year before any memberships were sold in Oregon. Initial capital had been raised through membership sales in the state of Washington and such members had already realized club benefits. The court observed:

We have searched the record and conclude that the initial capital used by Jet Set to initiate its operations was not provided by memberships sold in Oregon. Jet Set had been flying scheduled flights for a full year before any memberships were sold in Oregon. The money provided by the sale of the "select memberships" in Washington, plus the money from the promotional agreement with the Seattle area spas, provided at least a part of the initial operating capital. "Select memberships" were not sold in Oregon. Jet Set was a fully operating organization by the time the first memberships were sold in Oregon.

The case at bar is different from Silver Hills in that the memberships are nothing more than a sale of a right to use existing facilities. The requirements of the "risk capital" test are not fulfilled because the benefits of the membership have materialized and have been realized by other members prior to any capital raised by the sale of Oregon memberships.

(n14)Footnote 14. See also Opinion of the Georgia Attorney General, No. 73-25, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,213 (1973), which held that recreational memberships similar to those in Silver Hills were securities. However, in Dunwoody Country Club of Atlanta, Inc. v. Fortson, [1978-1981 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,493 (Ga. 1979), the Georgia Supreme Court said it was looking to the "underlying economic reality" to find that redeemable membership certificates in a nonprofit country club were not securities. The purchasers acquired no expectation of profit from the memberships, only social or recreational opportunities. Interestingly, the court said it would reach the same result under the combined form of "risk capital" and managerial efforts test that the legislature added to the statute.

(n15)Footnote 15. Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906 (1961).

(n16)Footnote 16. The notion of venture capital is prominent here. In Cunha v. Ward Foods, Inc., 545 F. Supp. 94 (D. Haw. 1982), the court rejected a claim that an employee's interest in a company's non-contributory, compulsory pension plan was a security. The court applied risk capital analysis to conclude that there was no risk of loss associated with an investment of "venture capital to be used in a business enterprise," and that no one had solicited funds from participants for the purpose of raising venture capital.

(n17)Footnote 17. North Dakota has uniquely incorporated the risk capital concept directly into its definition. In addition to the common list of instruments and categories, North Dakota also includes the:

"[i]nvestment of money or money's worth including goods furnished or services performed in the risk capital of a venture with the expectation of profit or some other form of benefit to the investor where the investor has no direct control over the investment or policy decisions of the venture... ." N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-01(15).

Washington similarly, although not quite so broadly, defines security specifically to include the "investment of money or other consideration in the risk capital of a venture with the expectation of some valuable benefit to the investor where the investor does not receive the right exercise practical and actual control over the managerial decisions of the venture." Rev. Code Wash. § 21.20.005(12).

See also Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.801 (2002) (Security defined by using the language of Hawaii Market Center).

(n18)Footnote 18. King v. Pope, 91 S.W.3d 314 (Tenn. 2002).

(n19)Footnote 19. King v. Pope, 91 S.W.3d 314, 324 (Tenn. 2002).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Artistic Door Corp. v. Rheney, 384 So. 2d 179 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1980) (solicitation of "subcontractor agreements" were found to involve investments of money under Howey criteria, and also represented risk capital to be used to initiate the seller corporation's business).

Some jurisdictions prefer only a "liberalized" Howey approach. See, e.g., Murphy v. Dare to Be Great, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,053 (D.C. Sup. Ct. 1972).

(n21)Footnote 21. See State ex rel. Healy v. Consumer Business System, Inc., 5 Or. App. 19, 482 P.2d 549 (1971); Fulsas v. Janitorial Enterprise, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,345 (Ga. Ct. App. 1977); Bergquist v. International Realty, Ltd., 272 Or. 416, 537 P.2d 553 (1975) .

(n22)Footnote 22. States differ, for example, on whether use of risk capital analysis should be limited to initial capital formation settings. California and Oregon have such limitations. This has been criticized, however, as ignoring situations in which an unseasoned enterprise sets out to raise additional capital, and which presents a risk little different from that of initial capital formation. See State ex rel. Park v. Glenn Turner Enterprises, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,023 (Idaho Dist. 1972). Other states that have included risk capital expressly within the statutory definition of security--Alaska, Georgia, Michigan, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Washington--make no limitation, and the most recent analysis by the Hawaii Supreme Court in Trivectra, discussed above, makes clear that there should be none.

25 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 2 Definition of Security

1-2 Blue Sky Regulation § 2.10

§ 2.10 Other Categories of Securities

[1] Certificate of Interest or Participation in Any Profit Sharing Agreement

Among the unconventional, catch all categories of securities in blue sky law definitions, "certificate of interest or participation in any profit sharing agreement," though often referenced in tandem with "investment contract,"ⁿ¹ is an independent category of security included in most blue sky law definitions. Apart from the criterion that a "certificate" be involved, there are no prescribed attributes of this form of security. Its usefulness is illustrated in situations involving such things as "certificates of beneficial interest" offered as "gifts" in a promotional offering for ski resorts,ⁿ² or certificates of participation in a church trust fund.ⁿ³ The availability of such a category is primarily important as a vehicle of maximum flexibility for blue sky regulators to respond to the ingenuity of promoters and the variety of "investment" schemes that may be deemed to be securities via its application.

[2] Any Interest or Instrument Commonly Known as a Security

The broad undefined category of any interest or instrument commonly known as a security is included in the Uniform Act, the vast majority of blue sky law definitions, and the federal definitions. Guidance in its application is available mostly at the federal level, through cases such as United Housing Foundation, Inc. v. Forman,ⁿ⁴ in which the U.S. Supreme Court held that shares of "stock" in a state sponsored housing cooperative project were not securities, and Landreth v. Landreth Timber Co.,ⁿ⁵ in which corporate stock possessing traditional attributes was deemed to be a security on its face. In Landreth the Court suggested that an interest commonly known as a security should be defined in terms of "investment contract" criteria if the instrument or interest being examined did not hold true to a label attached. Explicating its earlier analysis in Forman, the Landreth Court stated:

We stated, as part of our analysis of whether the instruments were "investment contracts," that we perceived "no distinction for present purposes between an 'investment contract' and an instrument commonly known as a 'security'" This was not to say that the Howey test applied to any case in which an instrument was alleged to be a security, but only that once the label "stock" did not hold true, we perceived no reason to analyze the case differently whether we viewed the instruments as "investment contracts" or as falling within another general category of the definition--an "investment commonly known as a 'security.'" Under either of these general categories, the Howey test would apply.ⁿ⁶

In determining what may be "commonly" known as a security, federal and state courts are often urged to look to each others' decisions for precedent. For example, in SEC v. Koscot Interplanetary Inc.,ⁿ⁷ the SEC argued that several states had accepted the risk capital approach to defining a security and, thus, that: "[a] security is 'commonly known' to exist whenever an investor subjects his money to the risk of an enterprise over which he exercises no management control...".ⁿ⁸ The court was not satisfied that the existence of some degree of state precedent was sufficient to establish what is commonly known to be a security for purposes of federal law, but the approach to the question is illustrative of the search for a common perception or standard. Thus, in another setting, Texas authorities accepted federal precedent as a standard for what is commonly known as a security for purposes of that state's blue sky law.ⁿ⁹

Other states have functionally construed the category in terms, for example, of any form of instrument used for financing or promoting enterprises, or which is designed for investment.ⁿ¹⁰ Holding that an investment in a trust qualifies as an interest commonly known as a security, a Connecticut court looked to the Black's Law Dictionary definition of security to anchor its determination.ⁿ¹¹ In the end, one may safely conclude that any "common" perception of a security will be a function of developed criteria of general application, which, in turn, means investment contract analysis or, where available, risk capital assessment.

[3] Foreign Currency

Several states specifically address foreign currency within the definition of security. In Ohio, for example, "the currency of any government other than those of the United States and Canada" is explicitly defined itself to be a security.ⁿ¹² More commonly, blue sky definitions include exchange-traded options or rights associated with foreign currency. California, Illinois, Maine, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Vermont and Washington all specifically include a "put, call, straddle or option entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currency" within their definitions.ⁿ¹³ North Dakota includes "foreign currency commodity contract."ⁿ¹⁴

Any "investment" program involving foreign currency or currency options is likely to face scrutiny under Blue Sky laws, whether or not expressly covered in the definition of security. In Prudential Bache Securities, Inc. v. Cullather,ⁿ¹⁵ for example, commodity options were held to be within the "broad and open ended" provisions of the Virginia blue sky law despite the fact that they were not explicitly mentioned in the statute. The court was satisfied that because federal acts include commodity and currency options within their definitions, they should fall within the state definition as well. In any event, investment contract analysis may be applied to bring foreign currencies or programs involving them within the ambit of blue sky laws.ⁿ¹⁶

The scope of state securities regulatory authority where foreign currency is involved may be ultimately limited by the so-called "Treasury Amendment" to the federal Commodity Exchange Act,ⁿ¹⁷ which excepted foreign currency from federal regulation under the Act, and which has been interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court as impacting federal authority to regulate non-exchange traded foreign currency options as well.ⁿ¹⁸ Although there is no clear intent to preempt any state securities regulatory authority where foreign currency or non-exchange traded currency options are involved, the combined effect of the Treasury Amendment and federal case law may be such as to exclude state authority in an area in which "boiler room" practices and the potential for fraud would otherwise invite active attention under blue sky laws.ⁿ¹⁹

[4] Miscellaneous Securities

Individual state Blue Sky definitions vary in their inclusion of other interests or instrument categories in addition to the common categories heretofore considered. Some of these include commodity futures or other commodity related investments, particular forms of real estate interests, "beneficial" interests of various forms,ⁿ²⁰ "investment certificates," and whiskey warehouse receipts. Where included, or where other interests or instruments fairly fit within their scope, these kinds of special provisions are broadly interpreted.

The inclusion of any particular miscellaneous interest or instrument within the definition of security reflects only that the thing involved is susceptible to use or promotion as an "investment" vehicle. Whiskey warehouse receipts, for example, have been held to be investment contracts,ⁿ²¹ regardless of whether they are expressly included as a separate category in a definition. Thus, the fact that a handful of states expressly include themⁿ²² is inconsequential.ⁿ²³ Any such instrument promoted as an investment and representing a financing device for the seller/promoter will not escape blue sky law coverage under one of the catch all categories. The controlling consideration is not the particular features or characteristics of a whiskey warehouse receipt, but rather the manner in which it is promoted and what it represents in the hands of the purchaser.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Indeed, as a matter of federal law, the U.S. Supreme Court has suggested that the test for determining an investment contract and other catch all categories is essentially the same. See Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. In re Strack Securities Service Corp., [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,350 (Pa. Admin. 1991).

(n3)Footnote 3. In re Missions and Church Extension Trust Fund, [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,630 (Mich. Admin. 1992).

(n4)Footnote 4. 421 U.S. 837, 95 S. Ct. 2051, 44 L. Ed. 2d 621 (1975) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 471 U.S. 681, 105 S. Ct. 2297, 85 L. Ed. 2d 692 (1985).

(n6)Footnote 6. Id. at 692, 105 S. Ct. at 2304, 85 L. Ed. 2d at 701 .

(n7)Footnote 7. 365 F. Supp. 588 (N.D. Ga. 1973) , rev'd, 497 F.2d 473 (5th Cir. 1974) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 365 F. Supp. at 591 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Texas Attorney General Opinion No. H-116, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,100 (1973).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Holloway v. Thompson, 112 Ind. App. 229, 42 N.E.2d 421 (1942).

Other attempts to establish some standard or "common" criteria have been undertaken in Pennsylvania. See Attorney General Opinion No. 49, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,094 (1973); see also In re Secured Commodities, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,125 (1974).

Other states making findings or conclusions on the point include Wisconsin, see First Nat'l Sav. Foundation v. Samp, 274 Wis. 118, 80 N.W.2d 249 (1956)>; Maryland, see Shapiro v. First Federated Commodity Trust Corp., Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,071 (Md. Cir. 1973), aff'd, 272 Md. 329, 322 A.2d 539 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1974); Oklahoma, see In re Goldstein, Samuelson, Inc., [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,095 (Okla. Sec. Dept. 1973).

(n11)Footnote 11. Champaign v. Scarso, 25 Conn. L. Repr. 368 (Conn. Super. 1999). Black's Law Dictionary (5th ed. 1979) defines "security" as:

[W]hether the scheme involves an investment of money in the common enterprise with profits to come solely from the efforts of others so that whenever an investor relinquishes control of his funds and submits their control to another for the purpose and hopeful expectation of deriving profits therefrom he is in fact investing his funds in a security.

(n12)Footnote 12. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(B).

(n13)Footnote 13. See e.g., Gen. Laws. R.I. § 7-11-101(20).

(n14)Footnote 14. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-01 (15).

(n15)Footnote 15. 678 F. Supp. 601 (E.D. Va. 1987) (Virginia and federal law).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Integrated Research Servs. v. Ill. Secy. of State, 328 Ill. App. 3d 67, 765 N.E.2d 130, 262 Ill. Dec. 304 (2002).

(n17)Footnote 17. 7 U.S.C. § 2(ii).

(n18)Footnote 18. Dunn v. CFTC, 519 U.S. 465, 117 S. Ct. 913, 137 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1997).

(n19)Footnote 19. But see Eastern Vanguard Forex, Ltd. v. Ariz. Corp. Comm'n, 206 Ariz. 399, 79 P.3d 86 (Ct. App. 2003) (Treasury Amendment did not preempt state authority to regulate off-exchange transactions in foreign currency when they are offered and sold as securities in the form of commodity investment contracts).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-102(t) ("security means any ... share of beneficial interest in a business trust").

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Iowa Attorney General's Opinion, [1971-1978 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,153 (1973) (Howey investment contract analysis applied); Maryland Securities Act Rel. No. 17, 2 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 23,624 (1974).

(n22)Footnote 22. Blue sky law definitions in Florida, North Carolina and Ohio expressly include warehouse receipts for intoxicating liquor as securities, although (as in Ohio) there is typically an exclusion for sales of warehouse receipts to distillers, rectifiers or to any person engaged in the business of dealing in warehouse receipts.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Commentary, Uniform Act § 401(1) ("some legislatures have outdone themselves in the addition of altogether unnecessary phrases").

26 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation 3.syn

§ 3.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3: "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

§ 3.01 Introduction

[1] Statutory Definitions

[2] "Value" Determinations--Generally

§ 3.02 Statutory Inclusions within the Definitions of "Offer" and "Sale"

[1] Securities Given as Bonuses

[2] Gifts of Assessable Stock

[3] Warrants, Subscriptions, and Convertible Securities

[4] Rescission Offers

§ 3.03 Statutory Exclusions from the Definitions of "Offer" and "Sale"

[1] Pledges or Loans

[2] Stock Dividends

[3] Changes in Securities Provisions and Business Combinations

[4] Advertisements, Circulars, Pamphlets, and Prospectuses

§ 3.04 Identifying "Sellers"

§ 3.05 Offers and Sales in Cyberspace

27 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.01

§ 3.01 Introduction

Given the existence of a security, what constitutes an "offer" or "sale" of that security is of paramount importance, as these are the events that trigger concerns for investor protection and the operation of Blue Sky laws. There must be an "offer" or "sale" of a security for a transaction to come within the scope of Blue Sky laws.

An "offer" of a security, standing alone, has consequences under Blue Sky laws without regard to whether there is in fact a subsequent "sale." Liability under Blue Sky laws attaches to an offer of a security in violation of the law as well as to a completed sale in violation of the law.ⁿ¹ Fraud in connection with the "offer" of a security will subject the party committing the fraud to the same potential enforcement consequences as fraud in connection with the completed sale of a security.ⁿ² However, civil liability will not normally result from an offer only, because there is no transaction upon which the typical rescission or damages civil remedy in Blue Sky laws may be based. Nevertheless, civil liability may in fact result from:

- (1) a fraudulent statement made in an offer and a purchase of the securities at a later date by the party to whom the statement was made;
- (2) an illegal offer of unregistered securities and a subsequent registration prior to sale;ⁿ³ and
- (3) an illegal offer in one state followed by a legal sale in another state.

For the most part, the focus in Blue Sky regulation is on the meaning of "sale," which broadly encompasses the elements of an "offer" as well. To engage in the "sale" of a security is to undertake any attempt to dispose of the security for value. To offer a security for sale is to confront another with an investment decision. Blue Sky laws protect persons making investment decisions through qualitative or merit review processes where applicable today, or by assuring adequate and accurate information upon which to base a decision otherwise, coupled with administrative and enforcement powers and civil remedies. The essence of a "sale," and the setting in which this protection operates, is an attempt to dispose for value.ⁿ⁴ In this analysis, definitions or interpretations of the terms employed in the common law for contracts or other purposes are irrelevant.ⁿ⁵

The principal characteristic of a sale is the presence of "value" -- something given up either for or in connection with the receipt of a security. The presence of value is not determined by consideration in the traditional contract sense, but rather in a manner consistent with the intended protections of Blue Sky laws. First and foremost is the presence of an investment decision brought about by any set of circumstances in which a purchaser meaningfully alters an economic position or interest in reliance upon the value of the security received. This may occur with the payment of money, but it may as easily occur with an exchange of securities. It may occur with "bonus" distributions of stock, or indeed, even with the "free" distribution of stock, warrants or rights. The essential element of "value" involved in a sale may be that obtained by the "seller," whether or not it is represented by anything tangible actually given up by the buyer. This is particularly well illustrated in "free" stock and other "bonus" promotions involving the distribution of shares.

As seen below, statutory definitions of "sale" illuminate two constituent considerations: (1) the process leading up to or bringing about an investment decision; and (2) an actual disposition of the security for value. In the analysis of each, it is essential to recognize that the terms "sell" and "sale" are used in a broad sense. In discussing corollary considerations under the federal securities laws, the U.S. Supreme Court observed in United States v. Naftalin:ⁿ⁶ "The statutory terms ["offer" and "sell"], which Congress expressly intended to define broadly, are expansive enough to encompass the entire selling process ..." Thus, courts will look to any attempt to dispose a security, and to find "value," in ways that will best effectuate investor protection by requiring Securities Act compliance and by allowing operation of liberalized antifraud protections.ⁿ⁷ But it will also be seen that for purposes of Blue Sky laws, "value" may be related to induced expectations of the putative purchaser or to value on the other side of the transaction, that is, value that comes as consequence of or is generated for the benefit of one inducing a decision. "Value" is a two-sided concept. The disposition or attempted disposition of a security may be for value that is substantially, if not entirely, meaningful only to the seller, as, for example, in the creation of a trading market for shares distributed to the public through a stock dividend to holders of shares of a shell corporation where the intent is to avoid compliance with provisions of the Securities Act.

Against this backdrop the meaning of offer and sale under Blue Sky laws in a variety of contexts may be considered further. In all of it the constant key to application, as with the critical definition of "security" in Blue Sky laws, is identification of those circumstances in which the need for Blue Sky protection is manifest. The starting point in all cases is the statutory definition, the discussion of which follows below.

[1] Statutory Definitions The Uniform Act section 401(j)(1) provides: " 'Sale' or 'sell' includes every contract of sale of, contract to sell, or disposition of, a security or interest in a security for value." "Offer" or "offer to sell" are defined in the Uniform Act to include: "every attempt to offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value."ⁿ⁸ The basic Uniform Act definition of "sale" or an analog is in place in all states.ⁿ⁹ Variations among states involve the extent to which the specific inclusions and exclusions made a part of Uniform Act section 401(j) are incorporated, although most have adopted the specific inclusions in section 401(j), such that:

- (A) Any security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing is considered to constitute part of the subject of the purchase and to have been offered and sold for value;
- (B) A purported gift of assessable stock is considered to involve an offer and sale; and
- (C) Every sale or offer of a warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to another security of the same or another issuer, as well as every sale or offer of a security which gives the holder a present or future right or privilege to convert into another security of the same or another issuer, is considered to include an offer of the other security.ⁿ¹⁰

Specific exclusions from the definition contained in the Uniform Act are not so commonly adopted as such. However, if not adopted as definition exclusions, states include them among transaction exemptions, and thus, one way or another, offer to sell and sale do not include:

(A) any bona fide pledge or loan; (B) any stock dividend, whether the corporation distributing the dividend is the issuer of the stock or not, if nothing of value is given by stockholders for the dividend other than the surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend when each stockholder may elect to take the dividend in cash or property or in stock; (C) any act incident to a class vote by stockholders, pursuant to the certificate of incorporation or the applicable corporation statute, on a merger, consolidation, reclassification of securities, or sale of corporate assets in consideration of the issuance of securities of another corporation; or (D) any act incident to a judicially approved reorganization in which a security is issued in exchange for one or more outstanding securities, claims, or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash.ⁿ¹¹

As a matter of statutory construction, some states have broadened their definition of "sale" to include offers or offers to sell.ⁿ¹² As seen above, this is not the approach of the Uniform Act, which separately defines "offer" or "offer to sell."ⁿ¹³ The differing approaches have no practical significance.

The statutory definitions do not encompass attempts to purchase securities. The "solicitation of an offer to buy," is covered, but not an unsolicited offer otherwise.ⁿ¹⁴ Thus, if a person in the market to buy securities makes an offer to buy, it is not an "offer" within the statutory definition unless the offer has been solicited by the seller. This principle is also applicable in states not adopting the Uniform Act definition, although as noted earlier, antifraud remedies may expressly extend to defrauded purchasers. These express remedies key on the presence in the statute of a general antifraud provision addressing fraud or deception in connection with the offer, sale or purchase of securities. An offer to purchase, however, is generally not a defined term in these states.ⁿ¹⁵ That the offer is made by the purchaser does not, however, exclude the transaction from being a sale once the sale is consummated or a contract to sell is executed.ⁿ¹⁶

The statutory intent is to expand the definition of "offer" and "sale" beyond their common law limitations;ⁿ¹⁷ how far beyond is the question. California courts have held that mere talk by promoters to possible investors as to the possibility of organizing a corporation does not amount to solicitation or preliminary negotiations contemplated by the California statute.ⁿ¹⁸ A distinction has also been drawn in that state between an offer to sell a corporate interest and participation of entrepreneurs who stand on equal footing;ⁿ¹⁹ and, in a criminal prosecution for securities act violations, the court refused to hold that a contract to form a corporation in the future constituted an offer or sale under California law where the buyers involved were to manage stores owned by the corporation.ⁿ²⁰ However, that the securities are not in existence at the time the offer is made is not enough to remove the offer from the scope of the California Blue Sky law.ⁿ²¹

California also has a unique provision in its "sale" definition. Under California law, a change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on outstanding securities constitutes a sale.ⁿ²² Accordingly, a change in stock voting rights from cumulative voting to straight voting has been held to be a sale of securities.ⁿ²³ The same result was reached when a corporation attempted to change its nonassessable outstanding stock into assessable shares.ⁿ²⁴

As a general rule, a change in the form of an enterprise will not result in a sale under the Blue Sky laws. For example, when a partnership incorporates, the transfer of partnership assets for corporate stock has been held not to be a sale under the Blue Sky laws.ⁿ²⁵ Similarly, a syndicate that transferred its realty in exchange for stock in a corporation formed to succeed the syndicate was not a sale of securities.ⁿ²⁶

In the latter case, it was held that the transfer did not involve consideration and was therefore not a sale.ⁿ²⁷ What type of consideration will bring a transaction within the definition of a sale of securities has been addressed generally in the Blue Sky statutes. Every state defining "offer" or "sale" requires that the sale or offer be in exchange for some value.ⁿ²⁸ In the early days of Blue Sky regulation, it was contended in one state that an exchange or trade of securities constituted a barter and was not a sale encompassed by the statute.ⁿ²⁹ The view was rejectedⁿ³⁰ and the decision that security trades were sales was followed in other states.ⁿ³¹ Today, a number of states specifically include exchanges of securities as sales in the statutes,ⁿ³² although it is unlikely that the omission of such phrasing (as in the Uniform Securities Act)

would remove barter from the scope of Blue Sky laws.ⁿ³³

[2] "Value" Determinations--Generally Clearly, under the statutory definitions a transfer of a security, or interest in a security, must be "for value." For that reason outright gifts of securities are not sales within the meaning of the definition and are therefore excluded from the scope of Blue Sky laws.ⁿ³⁴ On the other hand, an ostensible "gift" of securities can plainly be seen as a sale for value when other considerations are involved. For example, the "gift" is effected with payment of "administrative fees" or "transfer fees" that exceed the actual cost of the transfer, and actually represent payment for the securities, or that are part of an inducement program for the purchase of further shares.ⁿ³⁵ Similarly, "promotional" gifts of stock, in exchange for visiting a resort development, have been deemed to be sales.ⁿ³⁶ Additionally, the distribution of gift shares by a privately held shell corporation without remuneration has been held to be the sale of those shares where economic benefits were obtained by the seller, even though the benefits flowed indirectly from the marketplace rather than directly from the recipients of the stock. In Capital Gen. Corp. v. Utah ⁿ³⁷ the court rejected an assertion that a "good faith gift" was involved in these circumstances, and agreed with an administrative determination that: "CGC's veiled but fairly obvious purpose was to advance its own economic objectives rather than to make a gift for reasons of simple generosity." In an administrative proceeding arising out of the same situation, the SEC concluded that the distribution of "gift" shares was a sale within the meaning of the Securities Act because of the value which accrued to the issuer by virtue of creating a public market for its securities.ⁿ³⁸ Even states that have adopted "sale" definitions different from the Uniform Act provision are in accord with this principle.ⁿ³⁹

"Free" stock promotions and distributions, most of which have been associated with visiting or registering on Internet sites, have raised similar "value" issues. The distribution of "free" stock to individuals who visit or register on an Internet site constitutes a sale of the shares when there is in fact something given up in order to obtain them, or when a valuable benefit accrues to the issuer in the distribution. In HotYellow98.com, Inc., ⁿ⁴⁰ for example, Respondents offered and sold, or participated in the offer and sale of, unregistered securities by giving "free" stock as an inducement to purchase goods and services, including lifetime charter webmaster memberships. And in James Bartel, et al., ⁿ⁴¹ for a one year subscription to a financial news publication at a price of $49.00, subscribers would receive 100 shares of "free" stock in a public company. The subscriber to a $79.00 two year subscription was offered 300 shares of the free stock. In both cases the Alaska administrator brought enforcement proceedings based on the offer and sale of the unregistered "free" securities.ⁿ⁴²

Normally a "sale" presumes a decision to give up something of tangible value, "Free" stock promotions illustrate, however, that traditional value assessments involved in identifying a sale for purposes of state securities law protections may be given a different meaning through emphasis placed on value obtained by an issuer in a distribution process rather than a transaction supported by particular consideration. Enforcement authority under Blue Sky laws is not limited to the conventional purchase and sale context, and will, rather, extend to situations in which a security is used to induce or encourage people to make decisions or take particular actions on the expectation of some valuable benefit associated with receiving the security.

Long before on-line promotions and other marketing campaigns involving distributions of free securities, the drafters of the Uniform Act recognized specific situations in which "bonuses," "gifts" of stock, or some rights to acquire securities must be included in the definition of offer or sale, and thus fall within the scope of Blue Sky law coverage. Conversely, there are particular situations in which it is clear that no need for protection is presented, and which should clearly be excluded from coverage. It is for that reason that the key definition provisions of the Uniform Act and its progeny provide, in addition to a basic definition, specific inclusions and exclusions. These are "value" based provisions, and they are discussed more fully in sections 3.03 and 3.04 below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The securities registration requirement in the Uniform Act, for example, declares: "It is unlawful for any person to offer or sell any security in this state unless (1) it is registered under this act or (2) the security or transaction is exempted under section 402." Unif. Sec. Act § 301 (emphasis added). This prohibition is found in all state securities laws, and any violation triggers both civil and criminal liabilities.

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 409 of the Uniform Act, for example, prescribes criminal penalties for any person who willfully violates any provision of the act. Analogs of Uniform Act section 409 are found in all state securities laws.

(n3)Footnote 3. see Diskin v. Lomasney & Co., 452 F.2d 871 (2d Cir. 1971) (rescission of sale for violation of Federal Securities Act of 1933 section 5 registration and prospectus requirements)

(n4)Footnote 4. The traditional role of state securities law protections has been oriented to the distribution, or offering, side of transactions. Antifraud provisions and remedies in Blue Sky laws are not so limited however. Indeed, several state civil remedy provisions expressly extend protection to sellers who are deceived by purchasers of their securities. New Hampshire, for example, extends its civil remedy for fraud as follows:

Any person who violates [the general antifraud provision] in connection with the purchase or sale of any security shall be liable to any person damaged by the violation of that section who sold such security to him or to whom he sold such security... Damages in an action pursuant to this paragraph shall include the actual damages sustained plus interest from the date of payment or sale, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees. N.H. Rev. Stat. § 421-B:25(II).

Thus, while the common focus of state securities regulators in applications of Blue Sky laws is on the distribution side of transactions or activities, antifraud remedies are often broader. The scope of antifraud protection and remedies is presented in Chapters 13 and 15, infra.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Green v. Weis, Voisin, Cannon, Inc., 479 F.2d 462 (7th Cir. 1973) (the state in which the common law definition of "sale" would place the consummation of the sale is irrelevant to the definition of "sale" under the Illinois Securities Act).

The Uniform Act definitions of "offer" and "sale" were "borrowed substantially" from § 2(3) of the Securities Act of 1933. Official Code Comment to Uniform Securities Act § 401(j)(1)(2). The definition of the term "offer to sell" in § 2(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 goes "well beyond" the common law concept of an offer. 1 Loss & Seligman, Securities Regulation 1138.19. (Aspen Law & Business 3d ed.).

(n6)Footnote 6. 441 U.S. 768, 773, 99 S. Ct. 2077, 2081, 60 L. Ed. 2d 624, 629 (1979) (citations omitted); see also Pinter v. Dahl, 486 U.S. 622, 108 S. Ct. 2063, 100 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1988) . In Pinter, the Supreme Court considered the scope of "seller" liability under Securities Act § 12 as including persons who actively solicit a buyer.

(n7)Footnote 7. See also Cook v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 726 F. Supp. 151 (S.D. Tex. 1989) ; Hocking v. DuBois, 885 F.2d 1449 (9th Cir. 1989) , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078, 110 S. Ct. 1805, 108 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1990) (the term "offer" has a far different and far broader meaning in securities law than in contract law); Raiford v. BusLease, Inc., 825 F.2d 351 (11th Cir. 1987) . See also Pinter v. Dahl, 486 U.S. 622, 108 S. Ct. 2063, 100 L. Ed. 2d 658 (1988) . In Pinter, the Supreme Court observed that the statutory definitions of "sale" and "sell" are expansive and intended to encompass the entire selling process.

The "for value" element in defining a sale clearly implies the notion that a change of position or change of investment risk is present. As thoroughly discussed in Chapter 2, committing to an investment risk means subjecting some value to the risks of an enterprise. A transaction need not involve cash consideration to constitute a sale under Blue Sky laws. However, there must be some identifiable economic change of position in relation to investment risk or what the security represents. Thus, for example, a stock split that simply distributes two or more pieces of paper for one cannot be deemed to be a "sale." Some states expressly exclude such transactions from the statutory definition of sale or offer to sell. In Nevada, for example, the terms expressly do not include:

[A] stock dividend, whether the corporation distributing the dividend is the issuer of the stock or not, if:

- (1) The distribution of the dividend is not for the purpose of evading the provisions of this chapter governing the registration of securities; and
- (2) Nothing of value is given by the stockholders for the dividend other than surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend and each stockholder may elect to take the dividend in cash, property or stock.

Nev. Rev. Stat. § 90.280(6)(b). Other specific statutory exclusions from definitions of these terms in Blue Sky laws are discussed in § 3.03, infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(2); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13); Unif. Sec. Act (2002) § 102(36), which parallel Unif. Sec. Act 401(j).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(a); Iowa Code § 502.102(16)(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(3)-(5); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(iii)-(v); Unif. Sec. Act (2002) § 102(26)(A)-(C).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi). The Uniform Securities Act (2002) no longer retains the provision in the definition section, but deals with each circumstance by way of transaction exemptions.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Ore. Rev. Stat. 59.015(17)(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. Uniform Sec. Act § 401(j)(2) defines "offer"; "Offer" or "offer to sell" to include every attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value." See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(i). In some states, the definition is very close to the Uniform Act definition except that the terms include a "solicitation of an order to buy" a security in addition to a "solicitation of an offer to buy." As a practical matter, this excess verbiage probably would not change the meaning of the section. In other respects, the definition in these states is substantially the same as that contained in the Uniform Act. See, e.g., Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-105(L)(2); N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-02(13).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Kreis v. Mates Investment Fund, Inc., 473 F.2d 1308 (8th Cir. 1973), applying Missouri law.

(n15)Footnote 15. But see Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-101(19)(iii) ("Offer to purchase" includes every attempt, or offer to obtain, or solicitation of an offer to sell, a security or interest in a security for value...").

New York has no provision defining "offer." However, in New York's regulation governing registration of intrastate offerings of securities an "offering" includes "a written or oral request to participate in an investment initiated initially by either a potential seller or buyer of a security." 13 N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. § 80.1(j)(1); see also State v. American Microtel, Inc., No. CV 93-21626 (Super. Ct. Ariz. 5/26/95) (Memorandum informing investors of wireless cable enterprise and requesting payment constitutes offer).

(n16)Footnote 16. But see Lane v. Griswald, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968), in which it was held that when a purchaser of securities places an unsolicited order with her broker, a principal-agent relationship is created. The broker, acting as agent, is not the seller, since title passes directly to the purchaser once the broker obtains the securities from his vendor. As a result, as between a buyer placing an unsolicited order and a broker acting as agent on that order, a sale does not take place.

A number of states have an exemption for non-issuer transactions made pursuant to an unsolicited offer to buy securities. The exemption would, therefore, cover the sale as well as the offer. See ch. 9 infra.

(n17)Footnote 17.

Illinois: Green v. Weis, Voisin, Cannon, Inc., 479 F.2d 462 (7th Cir. 1973) , rev'g, 348 F. Supp. 558 (N.D. Ill. 1972) .

Iowa: Getter v. R.G. Dickinson & Co., 366 F. Supp. 559 (S.D. Iowa 1973) .

Missouri: Kreis v. Mates Investment Fund, Inc., 473 F.2d 1308 (8th Cir. 1973) .

Wisconsin: Klatt v. Guaranteed Bond Co., 213 Wis. 12, 250 N.W. 825 (1933) .

(n18)Footnote 18. B.C. Turf & Country Club v. Dougherty, 94 Cal. App.2d 320, 210 P.2d 760 (1949) . Cf. State v. American Microtel, Inc., No. CV 93-21626 (Super. Ct. Ariz. 5/26/95) (memoranda informing investors of wireless cable enterprise and requesting payment constitutes offer).

(n19)Footnote 19. Holmberg v. Marsden, 39 Cal.2d 592, 248 P.2d 417 (1952) .

(n20)Footnote 20. People v. Staver, 115 Cal. App.2d 711, 252 P.2d 700 (1953) .

(n21)Footnote 21. People v. Jacques, 137 Cal. App.2d 823, 291 P.2d 124 (1955) . The court in this case also held that an agreement to agree on a future sale of stock constituted an "offer to sell" securities. See also Towery v. Lucas, 128 Or. App. 555, 876 P.2d 814 (Or. Ct. App. 1994) (settlement agreement providing for issuance of stock in formation of new corporation).

(n22)Footnote 22. Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(a):

"Sale" or "sell" includes every contract of sale of, contract to sell, or disposition of, a security or interest in a security for value. "Sale" or "sell" includes any exchange of securities and any change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on outstanding securities.

See also § 3.03[3] infra. Except for some provisions in other states, that exclude from the definition of "sale" certain corporate reorganizations, it is unclear how far this view of the law would apply in such other states. A judicial approach much like the view taken in the California statute was enforced under the Federal Public Utility Holding Company Act. The definition of "sale" in that statute is similar to the one contained in the Securities Act of 1933. See SEC v. Associated G. & Elec. Co., 99 F.2d 795 (2d Cir. 1938) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Schutzbank, 258 Cal. App.2d 218, 66 Cal. Rptr. 293 (1968) ; Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Sobieski, 191 Cal. App.2d 399, 12 Cal. Rptr. 719 (1961) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Keller Street Develop. Co. v. Department of Investment, 227 Cal. App.2d 760, 39 Cal. Rptr. 44 (1964) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Fayette Wholesale Grocery Co. v. Brown Bros., 102 W.Va. 181, 135 S.E. 235 (1926) ; Conway v. Bailey, 91 W. Va. 324, 112 S.E. 579 (1922) . See also Doherty v. Kahn, et. al., Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH Dec.

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.01

1996-1997), 74,145 (Ill. Ct. App. 1997).

(n26)Footnote 26. Lapidus v. Rever, 174 So.2d 459 (Fla. App.) cert. denied, 183 So.2d 210 (Fla. Supp. 1965) .

(n27)Footnote 27. Id., 174 So.2d at 461 .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Lawn v. Camino Heights, Inc., 15 Cal. App.3d 973, 93 Cal. Rptr. 621 (1971) where a promise of labor to and for a corporation in exchange for stock was held a sale; see also Computer Concepts, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan v. Brandt, [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,037 (Ore. Ct. App. 1989) (movie investment contract with profit sharing option could constitute sale).

(n29)Footnote 29. Marney v. Home Royalty Ass'n, 34 N.M. 632, 286 P. 979 (1930) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Id. See also Farrar v. Hood, 56 N.M. 724, 249 P.2d 759 (1952) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See Wigington v. Mid-Continent Royalty Co., 130 Kan. 785, 288 P. 749 (1930) ; Thomas v. United Royalty Co., 1937 OK 183, 180 Okla. 230, 68 P.2d 490 (1937) ; Hofer v. General Discount Corporation, 86 S.D. 133, 192 N.W.2d 718 (1971) ; Klatt v. Guaranteed Bond Co., 213 Wis. 12, 250 N.W. 825 (1933) ; Josslyn v. Dahinden-Schmitz Co., 208 Wis. 468, 243 N.W. 473 (1932) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(C)(1): " 'Sale' also includes a contract to sell, an exchange, an attempt to sell, on option of sale, a solicitation of sale, a solicitation of an offer to buy, a subscription, or an offer to sell, directly or indirectly, by agent, circular, pamphlet, advertisement, or otherwise."

See also 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(r)(i): " 'Sale' or 'sell' includes every sale, disposition or exchange, and every contract of sale of, or contract to sell, a security or interest in a security for value..." However, many states exempt from registration exchanges of securities where the trade involves an exchange by an issuer for other securities of the same issuer. See ch. 8 infra. See also the discussion of the reorganizational exclusion at § 3.03[3] infra .

(n33)Footnote 33. Since the intent of the Blue Sky laws is to prohibit more than actual sales of unregistered securities, nondelivery of a promised consideration for a security would not take the transaction out of the statutory scheme. See Ogier v. Pacific Oil and Gas Development Corporation, 135 Cal. App.2d 776, 288 P.2d 101 (1955) . See also Levitz v. Warrington, 877 P.2d 1245 (Utah Ct. App. 1994) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See Andrews v. Chase, 89 Utah 51, 49 P.2d 938 (1935) , reh'g denied, 89 Utah 73, 57 P.2d 702 (1936) . It was further held that gifts of securities are not within the statute even when the donor hopes to receive something in return.

But see In the Matter of H & B Carriers, Inc., Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,727 (Utah Sec. Comm. 1988), where the Utah Securities Commission held that a corporation's program of incorporating other companies and causing them to go public by acquiring their stock for a nominal amount and gifting the shares to numerous individuals was a sale of the shares because it involved a distribution for value. The value included the benefit to the corporation of the creation of goodwill and the promotion of the corporation's business. See also In the Matter of the Offering of Securities by Wade Bruce Cook, et al, [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,976 (Arizona Corp. Comm. 1989) (sale includes every contract of sale or disposition of a security or interest in a security for value; offer includes every attempt or offer to dispose of or solicitation of an offer to buy).

See § 3.02[2] infra for a discussion of gifts of assessable stock as being within the definition of "sale."

(n35)Footnote 35. In re Offering of Securities by Wade Bruce Cook, Ariz. Corp. Comm. Dec. No. 56492, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,976 (1989).

(n36)Footnote 36. In re Strack Sec. Serv. Corp., Pa. Sec. Comm. Dkt. No. 8812-25, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,979 (1989).

The transfer of shares of stock as either "boot" or a commission for a real estate transaction has been held to be the sale of the securities for value where they were given or delivered with the purchase of another thing offered and sold for value. Dean v. Humphries, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,026 (Idaho 1989).

(n37)Footnote 37. [1988-1990 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,997 (Utah App. 1989).

(n38)Footnote 38. In the Matter of Capital General Corp., Sec. Act Rel. No. 7008, [1993 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) P 85,223 (1993).

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1801(21): " 'Sale' or 'sell' means a sale or other disposition of a security or interest in a security for value and includes a contract to make such sale or disposition."

See also Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-4(E): "The terms 'sale' or 'offer to sell' or 'sell' shall include every disposition, or attempt to dispose of a security for value."

(n40)Footnote 40. Alaska Order No. 00- 11 S, 2000 Alas. Sec. LEXIS 15 (Div. Banking, Sec. and Corp., May 31, 2000)

(n41)Footnote 41. Alaska Order No 91-1, 1990 Alas. Sec. LEXIS 1 (Div. Banking, Sec. and Corp., Nov. 6, 1990) .

(n42)Footnote 42. See also Citizens Power of Alaska, LLC., Order No. 98- 09 S, 1998 Alas. Sec. LEXIS 2 (Div. Banking, Sec. and Corp., Mar. 19, 1998) (Mailing and door-to-door solicitation campaign requesting residents to identify and register themselves to receive stock as a bonus in connection with an offer to purchase property interests).

28 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.02

§ 3.02 Statutory Inclusions within the Definitions of "Offer" and "Sale"

In addition to the basic definition of "offer" and "sale" Blue Sky laws also define specific types of dispositions of securities (such as securities given as bonuses, gifts of assessable stock, warrants, subscriptions, and convertible securities) as an offer and sale. Many of the statutory inclusions within the definition of "offer" and "sale," such as a security given as a bonus, as well as many of the statutory exclusions from those definitions, such as stock dividends,ⁿ¹ result from a determination that the disposition has been made either for value or not for value.

[1] Securities Given as Bonuses Most states provide that if a security is given with the purchase of any other property, it constitutes an offer and sale of the security.ⁿ² The Uniform Securities Act states: "Any security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing is considered to constitute part of the subject of the purchase and to have been offered and sold for value."ⁿ³ The focus here is plainly upon the value given up in the context of the transaction and, as with "free" securities transferred in connection with promotional campaigns, inducements, or purchases of something else, the presence of value is a function of the entire transactional context.ⁿ⁴ The objective is to identify those settings in which securities law protection is necessary and appropriate. For example, a parent company plan to issue American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) for its stock to a broad class of employees of the company and its subsidiaries, at no direct cost to such individuals (but subject to a vesting schedule) as an additional incentive to make their maximum contribution to the growth and development of the company, was viewed as not triggering investor protection concerns and not involving a sale within the ambit of section 2(3) of the federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ⁵ As will be seen, however, other employment-related situations could involve an investment-oriented election to receive shares, and trigger concern for protection. In a federal case, Feret v. Corestates Financial Corp.,ⁿ⁶ company employees who voluntarily entered into agreements under which they received incentive stock options in exchange for continuing services were deemed to be purchasers for purposes of asserting antifraud claims despite the fact that they did not make any direct payment to obtain the options. The court was satisfied that an employment agreement containing stock options constitutes a sale.ⁿ⁷

In the light of the broad statutory definition of "sale," which includes bonuses, generally in effect today, a different result would probably be reached.

[2] Gifts of Assessable Stock When a corporation has the power to have its stockholders pay additional sums for their stock, the stock is referred to as "assessable."ⁿ⁸ The word "assessable" is used in connection with corporate stock to mean that the corporation has the right to demand that shareholders pay additional amounts on fully paid stock.ⁿ⁹ Assessments may be enforced by suits against the stockholder or by forced sale of the stock.ⁿ¹⁰ Unpaid stock subject to call is sometimes said to be subject to assessment.ⁿ¹¹

Under the provisions of the Uniform Securities Actⁿ¹² and the statutes of a number of states,ⁿ¹³ gifts of assessable stock are transactions involving an offer and sale. This is entirely consistent with the statutory definitions of "offer" and "sale," since stock recipients must pay value to retain their securities.

The draftsmen of the Uniform Securities Act indicate that at least two states had taken this position even though their statutes did not have the specific requirement.ⁿ¹⁴ Whether all states without the statutory provision will take a similar position when assessable stock is given as a gift is uncertain. Prior to Utah'sⁿ¹⁵ adoption of the Uniform Act inclusion, the Utah Supreme Court held, over a strong dissent, a gift of assessable stock was not a sale.ⁿ¹⁶ The deciding factor was that the recipients had a choice in paying assessments.ⁿ¹⁷ The Uniform Act's draftsmen expressly intended to include the gifts of assessable stock described in this case as offers and sales under the statutory definition.ⁿ¹⁸

[3] Warrants, Subscriptions, and Convertible Securities When warrants, subscriptions, or similar rights to purchase other securities are offered or sold, the problem arises as to when the "other" securities must be registered. Does the offer or sale of a subscription right to stock immediately constitute the offer of the stock that must be registered at the time the subscription is offered, or is the underlying security not considered offered until the right is exercised? The same problem arises with respect to convertible securities. Does the offer of a debt security convertible into a company's stock mean that the stock itself is being simultaneously offered?

In a comparatively early Oregon case,ⁿ¹⁹ the position was taken that the offer of a stock subscription was a continuing offer of the stock itself which culminated in a sale when the stock was paid for, regardless of whether an actual stock certificate was then delivered. Consequently, a permit to sell the stock was required before the subscriptions were offered.

A principle similar to this has been codified in a number of states that have adopted the provision recommended by the Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ²⁰ Under the Act, the offer or sale of a warrant, purchase right, or subscription to another security, or the offer or sale of a convertible security, is an offer of the other security. Even the gift of a warrant involves an offer to sell the underlying stock called for by the warrant.ⁿ²¹ A statutory inclusion similar in purpose to the Act provision has also been adopted in some non-Uniform Act states.ⁿ²² In all of these jurisdictions, the security that the holder of the rights is entitled to purchase or convert for must be registered at the time the warrant, right or convertible security is offered, unless there is an exemption.ⁿ²³

The approach of the Uniform Securities Act is not exclusive. The purpose of the Act's provision is to make it unnecessary to decide whether the right is exercisable at the time of its sale or some time in the future. This is accomplished by deeming all underlying securities as being offered at the time the warrant, purchase right, or convertible security is offered or sold.ⁿ²⁴ But some states have preferred to follow the example set in the Federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ²⁵ In these states a distinction is drawn between a purchase or conversion right that is immediately exercisable and one exercisable in the future.ⁿ²⁶ If the right may be exercised immediately, the offer of both securities is considered to have been made at the same time and both must be registered at the time the rights offering is made. However, if the purchase or conversion right may not be exercised until some future date, although the initial security must be registered at the time it is offered or sold, the security that may be called or converted for cannot be registered until the right is exercised. The offer and sale of the second security is not deemed to have occurred until the right is exercisable.

There are even variations on this theme. Texas does not refer to either immediate or future rights in its statute,ⁿ²⁷ but sets forth the rule that the second security is not deemed offered or sold until the right is actually exercised. Presumably this means that the underlying security need not be registered until the right is exercised, even if the right may be exercised immediately. The Illinois statuteⁿ²⁸ refers only to convertible securities (there is no mention of warrants or subscription rights), and does not include the conversion into the second security as a sale unless additional consideration is paid.

Some states have no statutory provision bringing warrants, subscriptions, and convertible securities within the definition of "offer."ⁿ²⁹ However, many states have provisions that exempt from registration securities that are the subject of a conversion privilege.ⁿ³⁰

[4] Rescission Offers Pennsylvania has a unique provision that includes an offer of rescission within its definition of offer and sale.ⁿ³¹ A rescission offer may be made by a buyer or seller as a defense against a civil action for violation of the registration or antifraud provisions. The offer must be sent before suit is commenced and (1) state the respect in which liability arises; (2) advise the potential plaintiff of his rights; (3) state the terms of the rescission and restitution offer regarding the security and the consideration; and (4) provide that the offer may be accepted within thirty days or such shorter period as the Commission may prescribe.ⁿ³²

Rescission offers are processed in the same way as offerings to be registered by qualification; there are no exemptions from registration for rescission offers.ⁿ³³

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Statutory exclusions from the definitions of "offer" and "sale" are discussed in § 3.03 infra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., D.C. Code Ann. § 2-2601(11)(C): "Any security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing is considered to constitute a part of the subject of the purchase and to have been offered and sold for value."

In Ohio, the provision does not include the giving of securities with property other than other securities: "Any security given with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities is conclusively presumed to constitute a part of the subject of the purchase, and has been 'sold.'" Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(C)(5).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(3); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101 (13)(iii).

Most states which differ from the Uniform Act provision use stronger language with respect to the presumption which arises when securities are given or delivered with other securities or other property. In these states such gifts or bonuses are "conclusively presumed" to be sales of securities. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.021(18): Any security given or delivered with, or as a bonus on account of, any purchase of securities or any other thing, is conclusively presumed to constitute a part of the subject of the purchase and to have been sold for value.

A number of states have issued interpretive opinions regarding registration requirements in cases of promotional offerings of securities. For example, Illinois holds that the delivery of zero coupon bonds with, or the giving of promotional securities as a bonus for, the purchase of goods, services, or merchandise constitutes the sale of a security. As such it and requires compliance with the applicable securities, dealer, and salesperson registration provisions, advertising submission provisions, and antifraud prohibitions of the Illinois Blue Sky law. However, the Securities Department will not require the registration of the vendor as a dealer or its employees as salespersons for transactions in which a registered dealer is involved, if the promotion is limited in duration, advertising meets predissemination requirements, and required disclosures are made. See Securities Department Special Bulletin No. 6, March 25, 1985.

Kansas considers a promotional campaign in which a customer receives a security, usually a zero-coupon bond, upon the purchase of a particular item to be the sale of a security. Automobile dealers, home builders, and others in retail trade involved in such transactions are subject to the broker-dealer registration requirements under Kansas Blue Sky law. Quarterly Bulletin, July-September 1984.

In Michigan, the offer of a bonds, debentures, stock, or government securities to customers who purchase specified products or services involves the offer or sale of securities. Such promotional campaigns are permissible, however, if the securities are exempt from registration, the securities are adequately described, and the campaign is of limited duration and frequency. Rel. No. 84-28, November 2, 1984.

Wisconsin determined to take no action to require broker-dealer registration of a realtor who proposed to offer for a two-year period municipal bonds in a face amount equal to the sales price of residential property purchased by buyers who obtained delivery of the bonds through licensed broker-dealers. The no-action letter declared, however, that the promotion involved the offer and sale of securities and was subject to the securities registration, advertising-filing, and antifraud provisions of the securities law. No-Action Letter, November 16, 1984, amended December 12, 1984.

(n4)Footnote 4. "This [bonus portion of federal Securities Act § 2(3)] means, for example, that a package transaction which includes the sale of a horse for $100 and a gift of a security to the purchaser nevertheless constitutes an offer and sale of the security for value within the meaning of the Securities Act of 1933." SEC v. Addison, 194 F. Supp. 709, 722 (N.D. Tex. 1961) .

A more practical example might occur when shares of stock are used as an inducement for a loan, e.g., the borrower, in addition to his promissory note for the loan, gives the lender corporate stock. Even though the lender will receive a return of his principal with interest according to the terms of the note, the delivery of the stock constitutes a sale under the Blue Sky law. State v. MacLean, 142 Kan. 215, 46 P.2d 879 (1935) ; State v. Dobson, 140 Kan. 445, 37 P.2d 10 (1934) .

See also Computer Concepts, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan v. Brandt, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH Dec. 1988-1990), 73,037 (Ore. Ct. App. 1989) (movie investment contract with profit sharing option could constitute sale); see also Lawrence v. SEC, 398 F.2d 276, 280 (1st Cir. 1968) ; Diskin v. Lomasney & Co., 452 F.2d 871 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n5)Footnote 5. MCA Inc., SEC No-Action Letter, [1992 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 76,251 (May 26, 1992).

(n6)Footnote 6. [1998 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) P 90,267 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

(n7)Footnote 7. But see Beebe v. Compaq Computer Corp., 940 S.W.2d 304 (Tex. App. 1997) (No investment decision, and thus no sale, possible when plaintiffs' employment terminated with them holding options that never vested).

But see State v. Svoboda, 147 Kan. 245, 76 P.2d 814 (1938) in which the purchaser bought an interest in a gold mine. He then had the option of leasing the interest back to an operating company in exchange for company stock. The purchaser was entitled to his share of the mine's production regardless of whether he participated in the lease arrangement. It was acknowledged to the purchaser that the company stock was worthless but would not affect his income from the mine's production. The court held the stock in the operating company was part of a separate transaction and would not be considered a bonus given with the purchase of the mining interests.

(n8)Footnote 8. Arroyo Ditch & Water Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 28 P. 54 (1891) ; Stewart v. Walla Walla Print & Pub. Co., 1 Wash. 521, 20 P. 605 (1889) .

(n9)Footnote 9. More v. Courier-News, 29 N.D. 385, 151 N.W. 2 (1915) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Quintet Oil Co. v. Big Five Oil Co., 71 Colo. 232, 205 P. 949 (1922) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Porter v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 36 N.D. 199, 161 N.W. 1012 (1917) . Actually, there is a distinction between a call and an assessment. Call refers to payments due on unpaid subscriptions and assessment refers to additional payments on fully paid shares. See Wall v. Basin Mining Co., 16 Idaho 313, 101 P. 733 (1909) .

The term "assessment" has also been used when referring to forced payment by shareholders of sums due corporate creditors under statutory liability. See Leach v. Arthur Sav. Bank, 203 Iowa 1052, 213 N.W. 772 (1927) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(4): "A purported gift of assessable stock is considered to involve an offer and sale." See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(iv).

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7302 (16)(b); Idaho Code § 30-1402(10); Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.310(11). All of these provisions specifically include the levying of an assessment within the definition of offer and sale.

(n14)Footnote 14. Draftsmen's Commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law, at 345 (1958) . The two states are California and Iowa and involved comparatively early positions stated in opinions of the attorneys general.

(n15)Footnote 15. Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-1322(c)(ii).

(n16)Footnote 16. Andrews v. Chase, 89 Utah 5, 49 P.2d 938 (1935) , reh'g denied, 89 Utah 73, 57 P.2d 702 (1936) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Id. On the question of what constitutes a gift, the court noted that although the donor hoped for something in return (that the donees would pay assessments) for his gift, that alone was not enough to turn the gift into a sale. 49 P.2d at 942 .

(n18)Footnote 18. See n. 14 supra.

(n19)Footnote 19. State v. Gerritson, 124 Ore. 525, 265 P. 422 (1928) .

(n20)Footnote 20. Every sale or offer of a warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to another security of the same or another issuer, as well as every sale or offer of a security which gives the holder a present or future right or privilege to convert into another security of the same or another issuer, is considered to include an offer of the other security.

Uniform Sec. Act § 401(j)(5); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(v).

See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-2(8)(e). North Carolina requires registration of an offer of securities to be issued pursuant to warrants held by North Carolina residents in the absence of an exemption, notwithstanding the fact that the warrants, when originally offered, were not subject to registration because they were not offered in the state. Opinion Letter of North Carolina Securities Deputy (June 20, 1983).

See also 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(r)(iv); Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-102(12)(E).

(n21)Footnote 21. Consequently, registration of the underlying stock is necessary before the warrants can even be given away. Official Code Comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(5). See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(14).

Moreover, as long as the conversion privilege or purchase right remains exercisable, the underlying security remains registered and the issuer subject to any reporting requirements which may be imposed under such state's securities laws. Id.

However, Uniform Act § 402(b)(11) exempts offers to existing security holders under certain conditions. See ch. 8 infra. This exemption does not excuse registration of the underlying security at the time the warrant is offered because there is a continuing offer of the underlying security and the offerees are not yet existing security holders. The exemption becomes available, however, when the warrant is exercised within the required 90 days of its issuance. Official Code Comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(5).

(n22)Footnote 22. The provision in these states makes it unmistakable that the intent of the statutes is to include all the "other" securities as being offered at the time the warrant, subscription, or conversion right is offered or sold. There is a certain amount of uniformity See N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-02(9):

Every sale or offer for sale of a warrant or right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer or of another issuer, and every sale or offer for sale of a security which gives the holder thereof a present or future right or privilege to convert such security into another security of the same issuer or of another issuer, shall be deemed an offer to sell the security to be acquired by subscription or conversion.

See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(e):

Every sale or offer of a warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to another security of the same or another issuer, as well as every sale or offer of a security which gives the holder a present or future right or privilege to convert the security into another security of the same or another issuer, includes an offer and sale of the other security only at the time of the offer or sale of the warrant or right or convertible security; but neither the exercise of the right to purchase or subscribe nor the issuance of securities pursuant thereto is an offer or sale.

(n23)Footnote 23. See ch. 8 infra for discussion of the transactional exemption for exchanges of convertible securities and the exercise of the right to purchase other securities.

(n24)Footnote 24. Draftsmen's Commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(5):

This Clause is designed to avoid the ambiguities and difficulties inherent in most of the state statutes as well as the federal statute with reference to convertible securities and warrants or rights. When a company offers bonds or preferred stock convertible into common, or employs warrants or rights, the question immediately arises: Must there be registration of one or both securities--or perhaps three securities in the case, for example, of an offering of preferred stock with warrants attached to buy common, since the warrants themselves are defined as securities in § 401(1)? The answer may depend, under existing statutes, on a number of factors: Is the bond or preferred stock convertible immediately or only at some future date? Is the warrant or right exercisable immediately or only at some future date? Is the warrant or right distributed to existing stockholders, or is it attached to stock which is sold, in which event the warrant or right, too, is the subject of a "sale" under § 401(j)(3)? Even though the conversion privilege or warrant is immediately exercisable as a legal matter, what if it will not be exercised in the foreseeable future as a practical matter because the exercise price is substantially higher than the current market price of the stock called for? Clause (5) neatly resolves all these questions by providing that there is always an 'offer' of the security called for by the conversion privilege or the warrant.

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(3). See also Sec. Act Rel. 4936 (1968).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:702(13).

"... The issue or transfer of a right or privilege, when originally issued or transferred with a security, giving the holder of such security the right to convert such security into another security of the same issuer or of another person, or giving a right to subscribe to another security of the same issuer or of another person, which right cannot be exercised until some future date, shall not be deemed to be an offer or sale of such other security, but the issue or transfer of such other security upon the exercise of such right of conversion or subscription shall be deemed a sale of such other security."

Often there is an exemption available for this type of transaction. See ch. 8 infra.

(n27)Footnote 27.

Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-4(E): The sale of a security under conditions which entitle the purchaser or subsequent holder to exchange the same for, or to purchase some other security, shall not be deemed a sale or offer for sale of such other security; but no exchange for or sale of such other security shall ever be made unless and until the sale thereof shall have first been authorized in Texas under this Act, if not exempt hereunder, or by other provisions of law.

(n28)Footnote 28. Ill. Comp. Stat., Ch. 815 § 2.5: "A privilege to convert a security into another security shall not be deemed a sale of such other security, provided no consideration from the holder in addition to the surrender or cancellation of the convertible security is required to effect the conversion."

(n29)Footnote 29. E.g., New York, Ohio and Vermont.

(n30)Footnote 30. See ch. 8 infra for discussion of the transactional exemption from registration.

(n31)Footnote 31. 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(r)(vi): "An offer of rescission made pursuant to section 504(e) involves an offer and sale."

(n32)Footnote 32. 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-504(e).

(n33)Footnote 33. Bongiovanni & Bongiovanni, 2 Pennsylvania Transaction Guide at 10-124 .

29 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.03

§ 3.03 Statutory Exclusions from the Definitions of "Offer" and "Sale"

[1] Pledges or Loans A security given as an inducement for a loan¹ constitutes a sale of the security.² The issuance of a promissory note in exchange for a loan also constitutes the sale of a security.³ These fact patterns are distinguishable from a situation where X lends money to Y, and Y, in return, hands over to X securities as a pledge or collateral for the cash loan. Absent a statutory provision, courts had been in conflict as to whether pledges of securities were sales under the securities acts.⁴ A majority of jurisdictions exclude these transactions from their Blue Sky laws by providing that "any bona fide pledge or loan" is not to be included within the definitions of "offer" and "sale."⁵ This is the provision recommended in the Uniform Securities Act.⁶ However, if the pledge is not bona fide (i.e., made with the intent of evading the statute) then it would constitute a sale and be subject to all Blue Sky requirements. A problem may arise, however, when the borrower defaults on his loan and the lender sells the securities to recoup his losses. Pledge transactions are sales under the Blue Sky laws, but in most states they are exempt from registration.⁷

[2] Stock Dividends The declaration and distribution of an ordinary stock dividend by a corporation does not require shareholders to pay any additional value or consideration for the dividend; consequently, there is no offer or sale under the Blue Sky laws. A problem may arise if the corporate dividend permits the shareholder to choose between receiving his dividend in cash or in stock. If stock is taken, the right to the cash has been forfeited, and value has been given for the stock dividend.

The problem has been solved under the Uniform Securities Act by excluding from the definitions of "offer" and "sale:"

[a]ny stock dividend, whether the corporation distributing the dividend is the issuer of the stock or not, if nothing of value is given by stockholders for the dividend other than the surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend when each stockholder may elect to take the dividend in cash or property or in stock.⁸

Although this provision has been adopted in a number of states,⁹ other states limit the nature of the dividend that may be declared without complying with the Blue Sky laws. In California¹⁰ a stock dividend is excluded from the Blue Sky law only if the corporation has only one class of voting stock, the dividend is distributed to holders of common stock, and the subject of the dividend is such common stock.¹¹ The exclusion is further restricted by the Corporation Commissioner's regulation taking a position totally opposite to the Uniform Securities Act recommendation. In California, distribution of the stock that is the subject of the dividend is a sale of securities which must be registered (unless otherwise exempted) if the shareholders are given the choice of accepting cash or the additional shares of common stock.ⁿ¹²

The Pennsylvania exclusionary provision is silent on the election of dividends, but is still more restrictive by its terms than the comparable section of the Uniform Securities Act. Under Pennsylvania law, a stock dividend constitutes a sale of securities if the dividend securities are issued by any entity other than the one distributing the dividend, even if the recipient of the dividend gives no value or consideration for the dividend.ⁿ¹³

Several states exclude stock dividends as sales, but the statutes do not address the choice of dividend questions.ⁿ¹⁴

That stock dividends are not excluded from Blue Sky law coverage in a particular jurisdiction does not necessarily mean that registration is required. A number of state statutes treat transactions in these interests as sales, but exempt stock dividends from registration. Again, the same questions with respect to an election of dividends arise. A few states have substantially adopted the Uniform Securities Act's exclusion as a transactional exemption from registration.ⁿ¹⁵ Other states have adopted an exemption for stock dividends, but have left the choice of dividend questions in a gray area.ⁿ¹⁶

As noted, California and Pennsylvania specifically require that stock distributed as a dividend be issued by the declarer of the dividend. It seems likely that that requirement is directed against the practice of "going public through the back door," that is, distributing stock to the public without going through the registration process. Thus, private company A may "go public" in the following manner: (1) it exchanges its stock for stock of company B, an issuer whose stock is held by the public (2) B then distributes its A stock to its shareholders in the form of a dividend. A's stock becomes publicly held and, as B's shareholders trade their A shares, a public market develops.ⁿ¹⁷ "Going public through the back door" has been made the subject of an important Securities and Exchange Commission Releaseⁿ¹⁸ and enforcement action under federal law has successfully attacked the practice in some instances.ⁿ¹⁹ Because the Uniform Securities Act and states following its example permit the dividend to consist of stock not issued by the declarer, it is unclear whether the "back door" methods that utilize stock dividends would be required to be registered under many state securities laws.

None of the states nor the Uniform Act specifically address the handling of the liquidating dividend, the net balance remaining to be distributed among the shareholders after all the assets of a dissolved corporation have been collected and all the debts paid.ⁿ²⁰ If the liquidating dividend were treated as an ordinary stock dividend, it would not involve an "offer" or "sale" under the Uniform Act exclusion of "any stock dividend."ⁿ²¹

[3] Changes in Securities Provisions and Business Combinations As previously noted, California considers changes in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on outstanding securities as sales.ⁿ²² This rule has been applied to such corporate actions as a change from cumulative voting to straight voting.ⁿ²³ The implications of the California provision reach even further. In the case of a corporate merger or consolidation there is, to say the least, a change in the nature of corporate stock.ⁿ²⁴ A similar situation exists where corporate assets are sold in exchange for securities of the purchasing corporation. In fact, the California statute would apply to any reclassification of corporate securities, or any other comparable action permitted by charter or law that the corporation may take affecting its securities.ⁿ²⁵

The approach of the Uniform Securities Act is to exclude all such corporate actions affecting securities from the definitions of "offer" and "sale" where the action is taken by a class vote of stockholders.ⁿ²⁶ The exclusion applies to "any act incident to a class vote by stockholders, pursuant to the certificate of incorporation or the applicable corporation statute, on a merger, consolidation, reclassification of securities, or sale of corporate assets in consideration of the issuance of securities of another corporation. ..."n27

These corporate actions are treated as Blue Sky exclusions rather than registration exemptions since, inter alia, remedial measures for breaches of good faith on the part of the corporation toward its stockholders are within the province of corporation law rather than securities law. Although a few states have adopted this view,ⁿ²⁸ others have preferred to leave the anti-fraud provisions applicable to the situation by granting only a transactional exemption from registration. The transactional exemption provisions display a distinct lack of uniformity.ⁿ²⁹

Further excluded from "offer" and "sale" under the Uniform Act are securities issued pursuant to a judicially approved corporate reorganization when the securities are exchanged for outstanding securities, claims, or property interests. The exclusion applies to "[a]ny act incident to a judicially approved reorganization in which a security is issued in exchange for one or more outstanding securities, claims, or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash."ⁿ³⁰

The provision has been substantially adopted in a number of states as either an exclusionⁿ³¹ or as a transaction exempt from registration.

[4] Advertisements, Circulars, Pamphlets, and Prospectuses The exclusions from "offer" and "sale" discussed to this point encompass all the exclusions recommended by the Uniform Securities Act. In addition, a few states have enacted other exclusions. Primary among these is the use for specified purposes of advertising and sales literature.

An advertisement soliciting purchasers of securities constitutes an offer under the Blue Sky laws.ⁿ³² Some states include advertising generally within their statutory definitions of "offer" or "sale."ⁿ³³ However, in a couple of jurisdictions, the use of certain advertising material and sales literature is deemed to be outside the scope of the securities acts.

Illinois,ⁿ³⁴ for example, permits the circulation of an identifying statement, circular, or preliminary prospectus in accordance with regulations of the Secretary of State.ⁿ³⁵

In Ohio there are two provisions allowing the use of certain advertising material without constituting a sale. In the first, the advertising material must bear a certain legend, and the sale must be made to the issuer, a dealer or an institutional investor.ⁿ³⁶ In the second, the offering may be made by any person in conjunction with an offering by a licensed dealer if there is no other attempt to sell the securities in the state.ⁿ³⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 3.02[1] supra.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 3.02 supra; see also Computer Concepts, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan v. Brandt, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH Dec. 1988-1990), P 73,037 (Ore. Ct. App. 1989); Bellevue v. Business Files Institute, Inc., 61 Cal.2d 488, 393 P.2d 401, 39 Cal. Rptr. 201 (1964), rev'd 37 Cal. Rptr. 382 (Cal. App. 1964); People v. Smith, 180 Cal. App.2d 420, 4 Cal. Rptr. 282 (1960).

(n3)Footnote 3. State v. Weisser, 161 N.W.2d 360 (N.D. Sup. 1968).

(n4)Footnote 4. In Cecil B. De Mille Productions v. Woolery, 61 F.2d 45 (9th Cir. 1932), a federal court, interpreting California law, held that pledges of securities for loans were sales under the Blue Sky law. See also the ruling of the Court in SEC v. Guild Films Co. Inc., 178 F.Supp. 418 (S.D.N.Y. 1959) aff'd 279 F.2d 485 (2d Cir. 1960) where a bank was found to have engaged in a sale transaction when it offered for sale shares of stock which had been pledged as collateral for a loan which subsequently went into default. The federal Holding Company Act defines sale to include a pledge.

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.03

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59-01517(c)(A): " 'Sale' and 'sell' do not include... a bona fide pledge or loan of securities."

The Pennsylvania provision excludes "any bona fide secured transaction in, or loan of, outstanding securities." 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(r)(vii)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(A); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi), substituting "security interest" for "pledge" to reflect current usage. Official Code Comment to RUSA 101(13)(vi).

(n7)Footnote 7. Some states that exempt the sale by the pledgee do not have a statutory exclusion or exemption for the transaction between the pledgor and the pledgee. None of these states has any judicial decisions on the subject, but it would seem illogical to exempt the pledgee sale while requiring registration of the initial transaction. However, if the assumption is made that the initial transaction is not required to be registered, the question still remains whether it is exempt or excluded from these Blue Sky laws.

The National Securities Markets Improvements Act ("NSMIA"), Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996), effective October 11, 1996, as amended by Pub. L. No. 105-353, effective November 3, 1998, amended 18 of the Securities Act of 1933 and other federal statutes regulating the securities industry by providing for limited pre-emption of state Blue Sky laws. The legislation pre-empts state authority to require registration of "federal covered securities" and limits state regulation of securities disclosure documents and certain investment personnel. NSMIA also pre-empts state regulation of advertising or sales literature with regard to a federal covered security. The states retain their authority to bring enforcement actions with respect to "fraud or deceit" or "unlawful conduct by a broker or dealer." However, states may not use their retained authority to circumvent pre-empted regulation. See 18(c)(1), National Securities Markets Improvement Act, Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996), effective October 11, 1996; H.R. Rep. No. 104-622, 104th Cong., 2d Sess. (June 17, 1996).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(B); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi).

The election of dividends question has been answered differently under federal securities law than under the Uniform Act. The General Counsel of the SEC took the position that there is a sale when a cash dividend is first declared and then shareholders are given a right to take stock instead, because the shareholders are giving value (their pre-existing and vested right to the dividend in cash) for the securities, see Sec. Act. Rel. No. 929, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 1121 (1936). On the subject of stock dividends under federal securities law, see Federal Securities Act of 1933, § 2.02[2] (Matthew Bender); 2 Loss & Seligman, Securities Regulation 1138.28 (3d ed. Aspen Law & Business).

The position that there is an "offer" when stockholders may waive a cash dividend already declared in favor of securities, but no "offer" when the dividend is declared in cash or stock in the alternative has been criticized as "illogical." See Comment (4)(b) to Section 202(143), ALI Federal Securities Code, which treats the issuance of a security in return for the surrender of a right or alternate right to a cash or property dividend as an "offer" and "sale." Id., Section 202 (143)(F)(iii)(II).

(n9)Footnote 9. See A.C.A. § 23-42-102 (2006); Ark. Stat. Ann. § 23-42-102(13)(B)(ii); Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(i)(8)(ii); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-2(8)(f)(2).

In North Carolina, the statute speaks of a "security dividend" rather than a "stock dividend." The draftsmen of the Uniform Securities Act have taken the position that as a practical matter there is no difference in principle between the two. See Draftsmen's Commentary to Unif. Sec. Act. § 401(j)(6)(B), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law p. 346 (1958): "The phrase 'stock dividend' rather than 'security dividend' was chosen because dividends in other securities are rare; but, since there is no difference in principle, the phrase 'security dividend' might well be substituted when technical amendments of the Act are considered."

But note that the referred to technical amendment was not made.

North Carolina's provision also removes stock splits from the "offer" and "sale" definitions. This may be the unspecified intention of the Uniform Act and its following states since the proportion of equity an individual has in the corporation would not be affected. In this connection, see Mertz v. H.D. Hudson Mfg. Co., 194 Minn. 636, 261 N.W. 472 (1935). A few states treat stock splits as exempt transactions. See ch. 8 infra.

The Virginia provision is not an exclusion from the definition, but is stated as a total exemption that removes stock dividends from all the provisions of the Blue Sky law including the fraud provisions. The effect of the Virginia provision is the same as under the Uniform Act. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(14).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(f)(2):

"Sale," "sell," "offer" or "offer to sell" does not include:

any stock dividend payable with respect to common stock of a corporation solely (except for any cash or script paid for fractional shares) in shares of such common stock, if the corporation has no other class of voting stock outstanding; provided, that shares issued in any such dividend shall be subject to any conditions previously imposed by the commissioner applicable to the shares with respect to which they are issued. ...

(n11)Footnote 11. The California Corporation Commissioner has attempted to explain the statute in Regulation 260.017. The Commission's theory is that if the issuer has more than one class of voting stock or the dividend is not in common stock or payable in common stock, the rights preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on other outstanding securities of the issuer will be changed. The California "sale" definition contains a clause which includes as a sale any change in such rights, preferences privileges or restrictions of or on outstanding securities. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. California Securities Rule 260.017.

However, the California Securities Rule definition of "stock dividend" excludes a stock split (as defined in Securities Rule 260.103(f)) or an exchange or reclassification of shares.

The Iowa statute is similarly restrictive. See Iowa Code § 502.102(6)(f)(2). The exclusion from "offer" and "sale" in Iowa is for:

[a]ny stock split, other than a reverse stock split, or security dividend payable with respect to the securities of a corporation in the same or any other class of securities of such corporation, provided nothing of value, including the surrender of a right or an option to receive a cash or property dividend, is given by security holders for the security dividend.

For exclusion eligibility, the securities must be:

1. Issued by the corporation declaring the dividend.
2. Not in exchange for any value including an option to receive cash or property.

However, Iowa Code § 502.203(15) provides a registration exemption where dividend securities of the issuer are offered in lieu of cash or property dividend when each shareholder may elect to take the dividend.

(n13)Footnote 13. 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-102(r)(vii), (viii):

(vii) The terms 'sale,' 'sell,' 'offer' and 'offer to sell' do not include ... any dividend payable with respect to the securities of a corporation in the same or any other class of securities of such corporation.

(viii) A dividend or distribution by any person to all or any class of its security holders of the securities of any other person, whether or not such dividend or distribution is for value, involves a sale.

However, there is a transaction exemption for "any stock dividend, where the corporation distributing the dividend is not the issuer, if nothing of value is given by stockholders for the dividend other than the surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend in lieu of the stock and if the dividend is issued pro rata by class. ..." See 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-203(q).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-201(13)(h): "The terms included in this subsection ... do not include ... any stock dividend if nothing of value of given by stockholders for the dividend."

See also Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.14(p)(17)(6): "The terms defined in this subsection... do not include... any stock dividend whether the corporation distributing is the issuer of the stock or not."

(n15)Footnote 15. For example, the Alabama provision exempts:

The issuance of any stock dividend, whether the corporation distributing the dividend is the issuer of the stock or not, if nothing of value is given by the stockholders for the distribution other than the surrender of a right to a cash dividend where the stockholder can elect to take a dividend in cash or stock.

Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(12).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1844(5), which exempts "the distribution by a corporation of capital stock or other securities to its stockholders or other security holders as a stock dividend or other distribution out of retained earnings."

See also Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-5(D), which exempts "[t]he distribution by a corporation of securities direct to its stockholders as a stock dividend or other distribution paid out of earnings or surplus."

(n17)Footnote 17. This is only one of several methods of "going public through the back door."

(n18)Footnote 18. Sec. Act Rel. No. 4982 [1967-1969 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 77,516 (1969).

(n19)Footnote 19. SEC v. Datronics Engineers, Inc., 490 F.2d 250 (4th Cir. 1973) , cert. denied sub. nom., Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH Dec. 1973-1974) 94,470 (4/15/74); SEC v. Harwyn Industries Corp., 326 Fed. Supp. 943 (SDNY, 1971) . See also Rathbone v. Rathbone, 508 F. Supp. 515 (E.D. La. 1980) , aff'd on other grounds, 683 F. 2d 914 (5th Cir. 1982) .

See also United States v. Robinson, [1975-1976 Transfer Binder] Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 95,508 (2d Cir. 1976).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Hampton Roads Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Coburn Motor Car Co., 158 Va. 675, 164 S.E. 723, 724 (Va. 1932) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Loss, n. 8 supra.

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.03

(n22)Footnote 22. 'Sale' or 'Sell' includes... any change in the rights, preferences, privileges, or restrictions of or on outstanding securities." Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Schutzbank, 258 Cal. App.2d 218, 66 Cal. Rptr. 293 (1968) ; Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Sobieski, 191 Cal. App.2d 399, 12 Cal. Rptr. 719 (1961) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Since a merger or consolidation usually requires at least some shareholders to exchange their stock for the stock of the new or surviving corporation, a sale would probably exist unless there were a statutory provision to the contrary.

(n25)Footnote 25. Logic would seem to dictate that under the broad definition of "sale," such actions would be sales unless there were a statutory provision to the contrary. One case under the federal securities laws has already been noted, see § 3.01[1] n. 22 supra. An early Blue Sky case under a former Michigan statute was in accord. See Edward v. Ioor, 205 Mich. 617, 172 N.W. 620 (1919) .

(n26)Footnote 26. The Act's draftsmen have stated that the term "class vote" is intended to mean that a specified majority of a class may bind all members of that class, subject to appraisal rights of dissenters. There is no intention to make the provision inapplicable when there is only a single class of stock. See Draftsmen's Commentary to Unif. Sec. Act 401(j)(6).

See also: Missouri: 15 CSR § 30-50.010(S)(1):

For the purpose of Section 409.401(j)(6)(C) of the Act, the phrase 'any act incident to a class vote by stockholders' shall include the issuance of securities by a corporation and the distribution thereof to its security holders or to another corporation or to the security holders of such other corporation, by the issuing corporation or by such other corporation in connection with any merger, consolidation, reclassification of securities, or sale of corporate assets referred to in [said section].

(n27)Footnote 27. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(C); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi), which deletes the exception for statutory mergers and sales of assets in light of the federal registration requirements under SEC Rule 145 under the 1933 Act for corporate combinations involving the exchange of stock. Official Code comment to RUSA 101(13)(vi). But see the RUSA 402(17) exemption.

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-201(13)(g); Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(19); N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-49(j)(6)(iii).

Delaware also has an exclusionary provision based on the Uniform Act's. However, the Delaware exclusion has been modified to coincide with the corporation law that permits certain corporate actions without a formal meeting of shareholders. See 8 Del. Code Ann. § 228.

The Delaware Blue Sky provision (6 Del. Code Ann. § 7302(a)(11)(d)) excludes from "offer" and "sale":

[a]ny act incident to a vote by stockholders or approval pursuant to § 228 of Title 8 without a meeting, pursuant to the certificate of incorporation or the provisions of this title, on a merger, consolidation, reclassification of securities, dissolution, or sale of corporate assets in consideration of the issuances of securities of the same or another corporation. ...

Note that the above provision also excludes corporate dissolutions.

Pennsylvania takes the opposite approach and includes as a "sale" "[a]ny issuance of securities pursuant to any merger, consolidation, sale of assets or other corporate reorganization, involving the exchange of securities, in whole or in part, for the securities of any other person." 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(r)(i).

See, however, the transaction exemption provision in Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(o).

(n29)Footnote 29. For example, the Michigan exemption applies to:

- (1) "phantom bank" reorganizations used by bank holding companies to acquire an operating or target bank;
- (2) "share exchanges," in which shareholders of the target corporation in a merger vote to approve an exchange of their target shares for shares of the surviving corporation; and
- (3) the purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of a business trust or real estate investment trust ("REIT") in exchange for a corporation's stock and the subsequent termination of the trust or REIT with the distribution of the stock to the beneficial owners of the trust or REIT.

See Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(19). Michigan will not issue no-action letters and interpretive opinions concerning transactions substantially similar to these fact situations. Release No. 82-5, "Availability of Section 402(b)(19) Exemption," Corporation and Securities Bureau (July 26, 1982).

The extent to which the statutes apply varies. Each should be consulted before a decision is made on exemption status. While virtually all the states that provide a transactional exemption exempt security exchanges pursuant to mergers or consolidations, such actions as sale of corporate assets in exchange for securities or reclassifications are not always mentioned. Further, a number of conditions may have to be fulfilled. A few states, for example, require filings for the exemption.

See, e.g., Minn. Stat. § 80A.15(2)(l), which exempts

"[t]he issuance and delivery of any securities of one corporation to another corporation or its security holders in connection with a merger, exchange of shares, or transfer of assets whereby the approval of stockholders of the other corporation is required to be obtained, provided, that the commissioner has been furnished with a general description of the transaction and with other information as the commissioner by rule prescribes not less than ten days prior to the issuance and delivery."

(n30)Footnote 30. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(D). See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi).

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g., 6 Del Code Ann. § 7302(11)(d); Nev. Rev. Stat. § 90.280(6)(c); S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-2013(f)(iv).

Connecticut and Massachusetts have adopted statutory exclusions from the definitions of "offer" and "sale" that are strikingly similar to the Securities Act of 1933 § 3(a)(10) transactional exemption for securities issued in reorganizations and exchanges with judicial or administrative approval.

Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 36b-3(15)(g)(iv) excludes

[A]ny security which is issued in exchange for one or more bona fide outstanding securities, claims or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash, where the terms and conditions of such issuance and exchange are approved by any state or federal court.

Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 401(i)(6)(D) excludes

[A]ny act incident to a reorganization in which a security is issued in exchange for one or more outstanding securities, claims, or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash, if the terms and conditions of the issuance and exchange are approved, after a hearing upon their fairness at which all persons to whom it is proposed to issue securities in the exchange have the right to appear, by any court, any official or agency of the United States, or any state authority expressly authorized by law to grant such approval."

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g., In the Matter of Brown Motors, Inc., [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,964 (Ga. Sec. Comm. 1984), where an advertisement placed in a trade publication of general circulation for the purpose of soliciting buyers of corporate stock constituted an offer to sell securities under the Georgia Securities Act.

But see Andrew Peck Assoc., Inc. v. Crease, [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,963 (Kan. D.C. 1984), where advertisements soliciting applications to open margin accounts with a brokerage firm that appeared in a publication directed to investors did not constitute offers to sell under the Kansas Securities Act where the name, quantity, price or other terms of the proposed agreement were not specified.

See § 3.01[1] supra.

(n33)Footnote 33. The states that include advertising in the definition do not define "offer" but use a broad definition of "sale" which includes offers to sell securities.

See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code 1707.01(C)(1). But see n. 36 infra.

(n34)Footnote 34. Ch. 815, §§2.5; 2.5a: Ill. Comp. Stat.

(n35)Footnote 35. Ill. Admin. Code §130.210.

(n36)Footnote 36. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(C)(3):

The use of advertisements, circulars, or pamphlets in connection with the sale of securities in this state exclusively to the purchasers specified in division (D) of section 1707.03 of the Revised Code is not a sale when the advertisements, circulars, and pamphlets describing and offering such securities bear a readily legible legend in substance as follows: "This offer is made on behalf of dealers licensed under sections 1707.01 to 1707.45 of the Revised Code, and is confined in this state exclusively to institutional investors and licensed dealers."

(n37)Footnote 37. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01 (C)(4): "The offering of securities by any person in conjunction with a licensed dealer, by use of advertisement, circular, or pamphlet is not a sale if such person does not otherwise attempt to sell such securities in this state."

30 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.04

§ 3.04 Identifying "Sellers"

In liability determinations under Blue Sky laws, administrators and courts look to activities of the parties to determine whether a sale is made and to determine who is the seller for purposes of liability.ⁿ¹ A comprehensive analysis of the question was undertaken in Brown v. Cole, a leading Texas case.ⁿ² The appellant in Brown offered a number of defenses against alleged violations of the Texas Securities Law contending that he was not the seller of securities. None was sustained by the court. No merit was found in the argument that since the appellant also purchased the securities, and lost his money along with the buyers, he was not the seller. The Texas court noted that a securities dealer could purchase part of his own offering and sell the balance to others. That a person purchases securities does not prevent him from being the seller of the same securities.ⁿ³ Of greater interest was the argument that the appellant was acting as an agent for the purchasers, not as their vendor. Here, the court looked at the appellant's activities. Important factors were that the subject of the securities transaction was proposed by appellant to the purchasers, the major contacts in purchasing the securities were with appellant, and, if not for appellant's efforts, the securities would not have been purchased by the respondents.ⁿ⁴ A third party had actually received the funds and transferred the securities, but this did not prevent the Texas court from finding more than one seller in a given transaction. A seller, said the court, "may be any link in the chain of the selling process."ⁿ⁵

A Louisiana appellate court offered this practical assessment of conduct amounting to an offer to sell or sale in Godair v. Place Vendome Corporation of America:ⁿ⁶

[W]e conclude that Essmeier "offered to sell" or "sold" the security to plaintiff. This finding is supported by the following facts: (1) he approached the plaintiff, stating that he represented Place Vendome; (2) he related to plaintiff all of the information concerning the project; (3) he asked plaintiff to invest in the project; (4) he got Thornton to phone plaintiff to give plaintiff additional information; (5) he went to plaintiff's place of business and received a cashier's check for $100,000 from plaintiff; (6) he gave plaintiff a promissory note for $200,000 in return for the cashier's check; (7) he delivered the check to Recile in Baton Rouge. Thus, Essmeier was actively involved in the disposition of the promissory note to plaintiff for value, i.e. $100,000, and acted as a salesman of the security.

This fact assessment well illustrates the type of active role that will allow seller status to attach to a party who is not the actual seller in the sense of being one who passes title of securities, or who is not in direct privity with the buyer. Persons who knowingly facilitate a sale or the selling process may thus be subjected to primary liability for violations of Blue Sky laws, particularly registration related violations.

A more difficult question arises when a sale has been made, but the identity of the seller is challenged. In a California case,ⁿ⁷ decided under a former statute, a company argued that the sale was made by its president, and that the transaction was therefore exempt from the Blue Sky provisions. The court, looking to the activities of the parties, rejected this contention since the company: (1) contracted to sell the securities and (2) received and cancelled the president's stock and issued new shares to the purchasers.ⁿ⁸

Another factor that might be employed to determine whether an offer has been made is the intent of the parties. In one case in point, a California courtⁿ⁹ ruled that the intent of the alleged seller but not that of the buyer is critical. In this case, the defendant, charged with selling unregistered securities, argued that his vendee, a police officer investigating the defendant, never intended to consummate the sale. The court held that defendant's intent to sell the securities was the decisive factor and noted that, under the Blue Sky law, an offer or an attempt to sell securities is a sale.ⁿ¹⁰

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Seaboard Planning Corp. v. Powell, 3 C.C.H. Blue Sky L. Rep. P 71,443 (Miss. Sup. Ct. 1978). Without participation in the wrongdoing (e.g., inducement or knowledge), and in the absence of a principal-agent relationship, the issuer as such is not a statutory "seller" under the Mississippi Blue Sky law. More activity must be shown than a remote connection with the chain of distribution. See also State v. American Microtel, Inc., No. CV 93-21626 (Super. Ct. Ariz. 5/26/95) (memoranda informing investors of wireless cable enterprise and requesting payment constitutes offer).

(n2)Footnote 2. 155 Tex. 624, 291 S.W.2d 704 (1956) , affg 276 S.W.2d 369 (Tex. Civ. App. 1955) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 291 S.W.2d at 708 .

(n4)Footnote 4. 291 S.W.2d at 709 .

In a Texas case decided subsequent to Brown the question of agency as opposed to selling was also raised. In Smith v. Smith, 424 S.W.2d 244 (Tex. Civ. App. 1968) , the contending parties were brothers. The court still found that the activities involved caused a sale and not an agency. The court pointed out that the purchaser first became interested in the securities when solicited by his brother, all information relevant to the investment came from the brother through whom the purchase was made, the selling brother had taken initial steps to begin a business to sell generally the securities in question and a letter written by the selling brother contained a strong sales pitch without disclosing the names of any principals who could be contacted for investment.

See also In the Matter of Mistigull Jewelry Co., Inc., [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,485 (Ill. Sec. of State 1978) in which an officer of an issuing corporation was not allowed to deny his participation in the sale of unregistered securities on the basis of his status as an agent of the corporation. His telephone conversations with an investor culminated in an agreement to purchase stock, and this was sufficient to bring him within the "sale" provision of the statute. But see Bacon v. Smith, Barney, Shearson, Inc., Blue Sky L. Rep., 1996 CCH Decisions, 74,105 (D.N.H. 1996) (misrepresentation of tax consequences of closing IRA account which resulted in sale of stocks not advice given in connection with purchase or sale of security).

(n5)Footnote 5. 291 S.W.2d at 708 .

In Dean v. State, 433 S.W.2d 173 (Tex. Crim. App. 1968) , the person who signed the contract of sale was a seller although all representations relied on by purchasers concerning the security were made by others. Following Brown, n. 2 supra , it was determined that there can be more than one seller.

See also Gonia v. E.I. Hagen Co., 251 Ore. 1, 433 P.2d 634 (1968) .

(n6)Footnote 6. La. App. 93-1818, 648 So.2d 440, 446-447, 1994 La. App. LEXIS 3643 (La. App. 1994) .

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.04

(n7)Footnote 7. Castle v. Acme Ice Cream Co., 101 Cal. App. 396, 281 P. 396 (1929) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Id., 281 P. at 398 .

(n9)Footnote 9. People v. Mills, 148 Cal. App.2d 392, 306 P.2d 1005 (1957) . See also State of Iowa v. Diacide Distrib., Inc., Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 74,188 (Iowa 1999).

(n10)Footnote 10. 306 P.2d at 1015 .

31 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 3 "Offers" or "Sales" of Securities

1-3 Blue Sky Regulation § 3.05

§ 3.05 Offers and Sales in Cyberspace

The advent of the Internet as a tool for e-commerce has resulted in an explosion of online securities offerings. The proliferation of on-line "free" stock promotions, and regulatory responses to them, illustrate the breadth of the meaning of sale in the application of securities law protections. At the federal level, in a series of no-action letters the SEC has cautioned that the distribution of "free" stock to individuals who visit or register on Internet sites constitutes a sale of those shares within the purview of the federal securities laws where there is in fact something given up in order to obtain them, or when a valuable benefit accrues to the issuer in the distribution. Requiring cash payments to defray the cost of processing "free" shares, or requiring the purchase of a product or service,ⁿ¹ or even the simple requirement that an individual register on a company web site may create an event of sale.ⁿ² These considerations are no less meaningful in the application of state Blue Sky laws, and guide state regulators in their own aggressive monitoring of Internet "offering" communications that are clearly directed to residents.

Intermediaries likewise make extensive use of the Internet to advertise investment products and services. The scope and application of Blue Sky laws for the protection of investors in these areas must be balanced against the interest in facilitating electronic commerce and communication. States have responded with rules or policies aimed at furthering both objectives. Pennsylvania, for example, was the first state to develop an exemption for Internet offers, allowing an exemption if:

- (1) the Internet Offer indicates directly or indirectly that the securities are not to be offered to persons in the state;
- (2) an offer is not otherwise specifically directed to any person in the state by or on behalf of the issuer; and
- (3) no sales of the issuer's securities are made in the state as a result of the Internet Offer.ⁿ³

NASAA endorsed Pennsylvania's position, issuing a resolution encouraging state regulators to exempt Internet offers and using substantially similar language.ⁿ⁴ State responses are discussed in greater detail in Chapter 4.03[3] and extensively in Chapter 12--Blue Sky Laws and the Internet.ⁿ⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. American Brewing Co., SEC No Action Letter, [1999 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) P 77,521 (Jan.27, 1999) ("Free" share of non-voting common stock for each case of issuer's beer purchased at retail would constitute a sale).

(n2)Footnote 2. In Vanderkam & Sanders, SEC No Action Letter, [1999 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) P 77,520 (Jan. 27, 1999), for example, a company proposal to operate and maintain an internet-based auto referral service in which shares of the company's common stock would be issued to any person who registered on the site was viewed by the SEC staff as an event of sale. There was no cash, property or services required to receive shares of the stock, which, when issued, would have been uncertificated and non-transferable. However, the company proposed to issue additional shares in exchange for referrals of others to its web site. The SEC staff was satisfied that the issuance of the shares in consideration of registration on or visit to the web site constituted a sale, and declined no-action advice that the company could proceed without compliance with the registration provisions of the Securities Act.

See also Andrew Jones, SEC No Action Letter, [1999 Transfer Binder] Fed.Sec.L.Rep. (CCH) P 77,565 (June 8, 1999) (Issuance of non-transferable free shares of common stock to the first one million people registering on a linked web site, and additional shares to persons who refer others to the web site would constitute an event of sale whether or not the distribution was through the issuer's web site).

(n3)Footnote 3. Pa. Code 203.190(a). See also Admin. Order, Pa. Sec. Comm. (9/2/97).

(n4)Footnote 4. The NASAA resolution encourages states to exempt Internet offers from their registration provision when

(A) the Internet offer indicates, directly or indirectly, that the securities are not being offered to residents of a particular state and

(B) an offer is not otherwise specifically directed to any person in any state by, or on behalf of the issuer of securities.

Resolution Regarding Securities on the Internet, adopted by NASAA 1-7-96. The Resolution further encourages states to allow sales that were the subject of an Internet offer if no sales of securities were made in the state until the offering was registered and declared effective and the final prospectus or Form U-7 was delivered to the investor prior to the sale, or the sales are exempt from registration. Id.

(n5)Footnote 5. See also Winn, Regulating the Use of the Internet in Securities Markets, 54 Bus. L. 443 (Nov. 1998); Coffee, Brave New World? The Impact(s) of the Internet on Modern Securities Regulation, 52 Bus. L. 1195, 1231 (Aug. 1997); Bertram, Offers and Sales of Securities on the Internet, 42 Practical Lawyer, No. 7, 23 (Oct. 1996).

32 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation 4.syn

§ 4.syn Synopsis to Chapter 4: State Investor Protection Authority

§ 4.01 Introduction--The Scope of Jurisdiction under Blue Sky Laws

§ 4.02 The Impact of NSMIA on State Authority

[1] Regulation of Securities Offerings

[2] Intermediary Regulation

§ 4.03 Conflict Preemption of State Law

[1] Conflict Preemption

§ 4.04 Jurisdictional Predicates

[1] Offer and Sale Activities

[2] Intermediary Activities: "Transacting Business"

[3] Cyberspace Issues

§ 4.05 State Jurisdiction Over Takeovers and Contests for Corporate Control

§ 4.06 Challenges of Functional Regulation

33 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.01

§ 4.01 Introduction--The Scope of Jurisdiction under Blue Sky Laws

In the preceding chapters the two essential predicates to the operation of state securities laws are identified: (1) the presence of a "security;" and (2) activity that triggers concern for investor protection. The latter is most often viewed in terms of whether there is (or is intended to be) an "offer" or "sale" of a security in the state, but should not be understood so narrowly. The jurisdiction of state securities regulators, and the availability of remedial provisions under Blue Sky laws generally, has historically extended well beyond the distribution, or capital formation, setting to encompass qualifications on, and the activities of, intermediaries such as dealers, salespersons, and investment advisers in a variety of market and transactional settings. Blue Sky laws are accorded the widest possible reach to effectuate their goal of investor protection. Thus, for example, in Texas Capital Securities, Inc. v. Sandefer,ⁿ¹ remedies under the Texas Blue Sky law were applied against a broker-dealer for securities transactions that occurred in the public secondary, i.e. trading, market. The court held that the Blue Sky law is not limited in application to initial, or primary, offerings, and that the rescission remedy should be available against any intermediary who forms a link in the chain of any selling process in which there is a violation of the law. Unlike its federal counterpart,ⁿ² said the court, the Texas Blue Sky remedy contains no limitation in scope that would prevent its application in secondary market settings.

In People v. Napolitano ⁿ³ New York's Blue Sky law--the "Martin Act"ⁿ⁴--was the basis for state prosecution of a defendant for conduct amounting to "insider trading." The law of insider trading has evolved almost exclusively under the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, most particularly section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act and SEC Rule 10b-5. Nevertheless, the Martin Act is a broad antifraud law, and in affirming the state convictions for insider trading under it the Napolitano court simply imported federal jurisprudence as defining the basis for conviction for the same conduct under it. The case illustrates an aggressive approach to enforcement under Blue Sky law antifraud provisions today that is in some ways a by-product of the redefinition of federal and state regulatory roles imposed by the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA"),ⁿ⁵ which is examined more closely in

As discussed in section 4.02 below, despite the enactment of NSMIA, the savings clauses of both the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 remain intact.ⁿ⁶ The scope of state investor protection authority and the availability of private remedies for antifraud violations were not affected. The legislative history of NSMIA itself makes congressional intent clear in regard to the continuing scope of investor protection under Blue Sky laws:

"It is also the Committee's intention not to alter, limit, expand or otherwise affect in any way any State authority or common law with respect to fraud or deceit, including broker-dealer sales practices, in connection with securities and securities transactions."⁷

Consistent with the express reservation of powers in NSMIA and their historic mission, state regulators will broadly interpret and exercise the scope of their jurisdiction to protect against fraud, and state courts will likewise liberally define its limits. As a Utah appellate court observed in a pre-NSMIA setting:

[I]t is clear that Congress did not intend the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to displace state law in the same area. It is also clear that Congress expressly gave the states the authority to regulate securities, especially securities that are being traded in a fraudulent manner ... It cannot be said that Utah's regulation of a fraudulent security does not at the same time fulfill the purposes and objectives of federal law.⁸

Apart from the broad reach of investor protection authority under Blue Sky antifraud provisions, a functional approach to state regulation means that intermediary regulation through licensing and enforcement is now, in many settings, the prime focus of state jurisdiction. In the assessment of intermediary activities under Blue Sky laws the starting point for determining the scope of state securities regulatory authority is in all cases the identification of an event or activity covered by the Blue Sky law. Despite whatever degree of uniformity has been achieved in state securities regulation through widespread adoption of the Uniform Securities Act in either its original or 1985 revised form, and today with the 2002 Uniform Act,⁹ there remain numerous and significant variants among the states which are a trap for the unwary. Consider, for example, the exemption from dealer licensing requirements allowed by Section 202 of the Revised Uniform Act in states adopting that version for broker-dealers where:

[T]he transactions effected by the broker-dealer in this State are exclusively with the issuer of the securities involved in the transaction, other broker-dealers licensed or exempt under this [Act], or financial or institutional investors.

Other states provide an exemption from dealer licensing if the dealer has no place of business in the state, and if transactions are effected exclusively with the issuer of the securities involved in the transactions or other broker-dealers registered or exempt in the state, but with no mention of transactions exclusively with "institutional investors." And in Ohio, although the Blue Sky law exempts offers and sales of securities to "institutional investors" from registration, dealer licensing is nevertheless expressly required even for those who effect transactions solely with such investors.¹⁰

These are critically important jurisdictional considerations for multi-state intermediary firms engaged, for example, in large private placements of senior or debt securities with major financial institutions. The compliance stakes are high, in that rescission remedies for transactions involving licensing violations are typically provided in addition to whatever administrative penalties may be imposed.

The offering and distribution of securities, and the activities of intermediaries, in Cyberspace present an entirely new set of challenges in defining the scope and application of state securities regulatory jurisdiction. Electronic offers of securities by issuers or intermediaries through the global medium of the Internet explode traditional notions of discrete territorial activity directed at or within investors of a particular state. Cyberspace jurisdictional issues thus drive an emergent emphasis on actual sales rather than traditional "offer" and solicitation activities as the trigger for application of state regulation. Here again, however, approaches among the states are not uniform. Moreover, where the jurisdictional focus shifts from pure distribution issues to anti-fraud protection, and given the fertile new ground for fraudulent schemes and investment scams that the Internet offers, state securities regulators have undertaken to expand their own resources and abilities to exercise the full scope of enforcement powers in this rapidly evolving technological environment.

The functional, or activity-oriented, scope of state Blue Sky jurisdiction also extends to corporate governance, through securities or corporate law provisions in various states relating to takeover attempts or so-called "control share" bids or acquisitions. Though posing a federal constitutional quandary, and serious preemption issues, properly measured and applied state jurisdiction to regulate in this area is today for the most part upheld with decisions such as WLR Foods, Inc. v. Tyson Foods, Inc.,ⁿ¹¹ which recognize legitimate state interests in regulating relationships that affect corporations that are located within the state and are a product of its laws.ⁿ¹²

It is thus apparent that the limits of state securities regulatory authority face new tests. States themselves have acted to limit their own jurisdiction by excluding various types of de minimis activities within their boundaries from coverage under Blue Sky laws. By creating threshold levels applicable, for example, to activities of unlicensed securities salespersons employed by licensed dealer firms, states recognize situations in which there is no practical need for the exercise of jurisdiction beyond fraud-based enforcement powers. De minimis exceptions to the exercise of regulatory jurisdiction vary among the states, but impact both capital formation and intermediary activities.ⁿ¹³

Understanding the circumstances that define state securities regulatory authority is an essential predicate to understanding the operation of Blue Sky laws themselves. Accordingly, activities or events constituting jurisdictional predicates are examined more closely below. In doing so, the historic protective mission of Blue Sky laws is a paramount consideration because the limits on authority today are both explained and understood by it.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 58 S.W.3d 760 , reh. denied, 2001 Tex. App. LEXIS 5004 (Tex. App. 2001) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 12(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77l (a)(2), creates a rescission remedy for purchasers of securities offered or sold "by means of a prospectus or oral communication" containing an information failure. This provision in the federal statute has been held to mean that the remedy is available only in circumstances of an initial, or primary, offering of securities. See Gustafson v. Alloyd Co., 513 U.S. 561, 115 S.Ct. 1061, 131 L.Ed.2d 1 (1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 282 A.D.2d 49, 724 N.Y.S.2d 702 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS (App. Div. 1st Dept. 2001).

(n4)Footnote 4. N.Y. General Business Law, Art. 23-A.

(n5)Footnote 5. P.L. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996). The National Securities Markets Improvement Act replaced, in its entirety, Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r, and fundamentally altered the role of state Blue Sky laws by eliminating most state registration and qualification requirements for securities offerings that are national in character.

But see Kamen v. Lindly, 94 Cal. App. 4th 197, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127 (Cal. App. 2001) (Availability of a private civil remedy for violation of the market manipulation provision of the California Blue Sky law denied on the basis of unusually strong persuasive federal precedent on construction of such provisions and the scope of liability under them).

See also Daniel Boone Area School District v. Lehman Brothers, Inc., 187 F. Supp. 2d 400, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2355 (W.D. Pa. 2002) , in which the court opined that civil remedies under the Pennsylvania Blue Sky law are limited to what is provided in the law, and that violations may not be civilly enforced through negligence actions).

The availability and scope of private remedies generally under Blue Sky laws is presented in depth in Chapter 15 infra . In the enforcement of Blue Sky laws the scope of state investor protection authority is broadly interpreted. These cases illustrate, however, that private rights of action do not necessarily enjoy the same degree of flexibility.

(n6)Footnote 6. State Blue Sky laws significantly predated the federal securities laws, and the creation of the federal regulatory scheme, with passage of the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, was not intended to displace non-conflicting state jurisdiction. As section 28(a) of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. 78bb(a), declares:

The rights and remedies provided by this chapter shall be in addition to any and all other rights and remedies that may exist at law or in equity... Nothing in this chapter shall affect the jurisdiction of the securities commissions (or any agency or officer performing like functions) of any State over any security or any person insofar as it does not conflict with the provisions of this chapter or the rules and regulations thereunder.

See also Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Ware, 414 U.S. 117, 94 S. Ct. 383, 38 L. Ed. 2d 348 (1973)

(n7)Footnote 7. H.R. Rep. No. 104-622, 104th Cong., 2d Sess. 34 (1996); see also IDS Bond Fund, Inc., v. Gleacher NatWest, Inc., CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. P 74,264, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4073 (D. Minn. 2002) (No NSMIA preemption of state securities law fraud claims).

(n8)Footnote 8. Johnson-Bowles Company, Inc. v. Utah Department of Commerce, 829 P.2d 101, 109 , [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,582, at 75,559-60 (Utah App. 1992), cert. denied, 843 P.2d 516 (Utah 1992) .

But see Dahl v. Charles Schwab & Co., 545 N.W.2d 918 (Minn. 1996) . In Dahl the Minnesota Supreme Court opined that state law may not be applied to the securities industry in a manner that is inconsistent with federal law. The court declined to permit application of state consumer protection laws to the disclosure of "payment for order flow" practices by securities broker-dealers. Application of stricter state law requirements, said the court, would be an obstacle to the accomplishment of federal regulatory purposes, have an adverse effect on securities markets nationwide, and conflict with the federal securities regulatory scheme.

See also Olde Discount Corporation v. Tupman, 1 F.3d 202 (3d Cir. 1993) , cert. denied. 510 U.S. 704 (1994) , in which the attempted exercise of jurisdiction by the Delaware Securities Commissioner to order rescission of security transactions on behalf of two broker-dealer customers through a state administrative proceeding was held to be precluded as being in conflict with rights secured to the broker-dealer under the Federal Arbitration Act.

(n9)Footnote 9. The 2002 Uniform Act is designed to modernize the Uniform Securities Act in light of NSMIA, significant recent changes in the technology of securities trading and regulation, and the increasingly interstate and international aspects of securities transactions. Unif. Sec. Act (2002), Prefatory Note. Although it is a new uniform act, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act contains several sections that are identical or substantively identical to sections of the original and/or revised acts. Here and throughout this treatise references are to the original and revised Uniform Acts as currently adopted in states, with further references to the 2002 Uniform Act where modifications or additions are noteworthy. The 2002 Uniform Act is reproduced in its entirety in the Appendix materials, at entirety in the Appendix materials, in Volume 2.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.14(A)(2), which provides in pertinent part:

Notwithstanding the exceptions to licensure set forth in ... this section, no person other than an issuer selling its own securities shall engage in the business of selling securities to an institutional investor unless such person is licensed as a dealer.

(n11)Footnote 11. 65 F.3d 1172 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n12)Footnote 12. State jurisdiction in the area of takeover bids and control share acquisitions is considered in greater depth in § 4.04 infra .

State Blue Sky authority in matters of corporate governance extends in some states to proxy regulation. The Alaska Blue Sky law, for example, expressly prohibits misrepresentations in proxy solicitations, see Alaska Stat. § 25.55.160, and administrative regulations further prescribe its application to proxy statements, see 3 Alaska Admin. Code § 08.315(a). In Meidinger v. Koniag, Inc., 31 P.3d 77, 2001 Alas. LEXIS 95 (Alaska 2001) , the Alaska Supreme Court affirmed an award of injunctive relief against a proxy solicitation involving a proxy statement containing materially false and misleading statements.

(n13)Footnote 13. As states limit the scope of securities regulation under Blue Sky laws tension arises over perceptions of what should be the proper scope of investor protection and the responsibility of state administrators in the exercise of their authority. In First National Bank of the North v. Miller & Schroeder Financial, Inc., 709 N.W.2d 295 Minn. App. LEXIS (Minn. App. 2006), banks that had purchased defaulted debt securities claimed that the State of Minnesota was liable in tort because registration of the securities by coordination was "approved" by the state's securities administrator despite knowledge that the offering would not meet Minnesota merit-related registration requirements. The banks alleged that the administrator knew that the offering would not meet qualification requirements without including cash flow from borrowing.

Dismissal of the banks' claim against the state under the Minnesota Tort Claims Act was affirmed because the registration of securities for sale in Minnesota was an act of licensing or other authorization for which there is statutory immunity under the Tort Claims Act. The court held that the fact that a security was registered did not constitute a finding by the administrator that any materials filed by the issuer as part of the application was true, complete, and not misleading. While the focus of the decision was on the state's general authority in regard to licenses, permits or other authorization in connection with the registration of securities for sale, the practical issue was that the securities were registered by coordination, and the administrator did not apply standards that might otherwise apply if the registration were by qualification. The banks' claim against the state was in fact that a merit review standard had not been for their protection since the issuer could not fund its debentures. The outcome in Miller & Schroeder Financial turned on state immunity. It is clear, however, that the substantive challenge arose out of a perception of the scope of state investor protection authority in a changing regulatory environment.

34 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.02

§ 4.02 The Impact of NSMIA on State Authority

[1] Regulation of Securities Offerings

NSMIA, the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996, was passed "in order to promote efficiency and capital formation in the financial markets"ⁿ¹ and preempts state registration and qualification authority over certain securities offerings. As the U.S Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has observed, NSMIA was enacted primarily to:

[p]reempt state "Blue Sky" laws which required issuers to register many securities with state authorities prior to marketing in the state. By 1996, Congress recognized the redundancy and inefficiencies inherent in such a system and passed NSMIA to preclude states from requiring issuers to register or qualify certain securities with state authorities.ⁿ²

After NSMIA, states may not directly or indirectly impose registration requirements, prohibit the offering or sale, impose conditions or additional disclosure requirements on the use of offering documents, proxy statements and other disclosure documents prepared by an issuer, or engage in merit regulation, with regard to four classes of "covered" securities. These are:

- (1) Securities listed or authorized for listing on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange, or listed on the National Market System of the NASDAQ Stock Market, or listed or authorized for listing on a national securities exchange which the Securities and Exchange Commission determines to have substantially similar listing standards, or securities equal in seniority or senior to securities described above;
- (2) Securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act;
- (3) Securities offered or sold to a "qualified purchaser" as defined by the Commission; and
- (4) Securities offered or sold pursuant to certain exemptions under the 1933 Act,

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.02

including transactions exempt under Section 4(1)n3 (by persons other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer) and Section 4(3)n4 (dealer transactions) in securities of reporting issuers; transactions exempt under Section 4(4)n5 (brokers' transactions); transactions in securities exempt under Section 3(a)n6 (except for securities of religious or charitable organizations, securities issued in intrastate offerings and municipal securities offered in their home state); and securities offered and sold pursuant to exemptions by SEC rules and regulations issued under section 4(2) of the Securities Act.

States may continue to investigate and bring enforcement actions with respect to "fraud or deceit" or "unlawful conduct by a broker or dealer" in connection with these securities transactions. For securities offerings that would formerly have been subject to registration requirements, they may also require "notice filings" and filing fees (except relating to listed securities), and may suspend the offer or sale of securities within state borders for failure to file or to pay such fees.n7

The preservation of state authority in regard to fraud and intermediary activities is considerable. Nevertheless, an essential element in that preservation of authority is that it may not be exercised so as indirectly to impose conditions on the use of an issuer's offering documents, or to impose conditions based on the merits of an offering or issuer of a NSMIA covered security. However, in IDS Bond Fund, Inc. v. Gleacher NatWest, Inc., n8 the court rejected an assertion that application of the antifraud remedy in the Minnesota Blue Sky law to private claims that an offering document contained false or misleading statements would necessarily constitute a NSMIA prohibited limitation or condition. Although antifraud claims made under the Blue Sky law would, if successful, impose limits on the use of the offering document by subjecting the defendants to damages for misstatements contained in it, the court found that such claims under state law posed no impediment to achieving the goal of NSMIA, and were expressly preserved.

A key consideration in IDS Bond Fund was that both state and federal securities laws prohibit fraud in the offer and sale of securities. Express preservation of antifraud authority aside, the application of an antifraud remedy under the state Blue Sky law is consistent with federal regulation. In contrast, a provision in the California Blue Sky law that placed limitations on the use of "penalty" bids in offerings of covered securities was held to be preempted by NSMIA in Myers v. Merrill Lynch & Co. n9 Because there was no such limitation imposed under the federal securities laws or SEC rules, the conflict between state and federal law resulted in NSMIA preemption.

The scope of NSMIA preemption of state authority has been examined most extensively in the critical area of offerings carried out pursuant to Rule 506 of SEC Regulation D under the Securities Actn10 Rule 506 of Regulation D was adopted under section 4(2) of the federal Securities Act--the federal "private offering" exemption.As such, securities offered and sold qualify as NSMIA covered securities, and state registration-related authority over them is preempted. But Rule 506 operates as a safe harbor to assure the validity of the section 4(2) exemption. As a safe harbor, Rule 506 and all of Regulation D of which it is a part mandate specific compliance requirements. The validity of a claimed Rule 506 exemption becomes critical in determining whether the securities offered are in fact NSMIA covered securities. Without the Rule 506 exemption, these offerings would not be covered securities, as NSMIA does not include stand-alone exempt offerings under section 4(2) within the definition of covered securities.

In NSMIA, Congress made no provision for any determination as to the validity of a claim that a security in an offering is, in fact, a covered security. Whether NSMIA preemption rests on actual validity of--versus claimed reliance on--the rule 506 exemption is critical in assessing the permitted scope of state authority to regulate offerings. State regulators and courts have challenged the existence of NSMIA preemption where there is merely claimed reliance on, and perhaps not actual compliance with, the Rule 506 exemption.

In 2005 the Alabama Supreme Court held that a registration-related claim under the Alabama Blue Sky law involving no fraud element was not preempted by NSMIA. In *Buist v. Time Domain Corp.*n11 the plaintiff purchased stock of a company in several transactions that were carried out in reliance upon the exemption from federal registration afforded by Rule 506 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933. Securities offered in compliance with Rule 506 of Regulation D are NSMIA "covered securities," and thus, state registration requirements are ostensibly preempted. However, the plaintiff in Buist alleged that the sales of stock were subject to the registration provisions of the Alabama securities law because the company did not have a valid federal exemption under Rule 506. Plaintiff argued that because the company did not prove that the sales to him complied the conditions and requirements of Rule 506, the securities were not NSMIA covered securities. The defendant company, on the other hand, urged that because it had undertaken the transactions in reliance upon Rule 506, and had in fact made the necessary Form D notice filing with the Alabama Securities Commission, NSMIA preempted state registration requirements without any further need for the seller to prove the federal exemption was available.

The trial court in Buist granted summary judgment to the defendant company, and its officers and directors who had also sold stock to the plaintiff. The lower court found no material issue of fact, and the record included evidence indicating that the company had made at least two Form D notice filings that the Alabama Securities Commission accepted as satisfying its requirements. The plaintiff's position that all requirements of Rule 506 and Regulation D were not followed, thus making the exemption unavailable and precluding NSMIA covered security status, was rejected.

The Alabama Supreme Court ultimately defined the central issue in the case as whether evidence indicating that all requirements of federal Rule 506 were satisfied is necessary to prove NSMIA preemption. The defendants had only presented evidence of compliance with Form D notice filing requirements, and plaintiff alleged that in fact the defendants had not complied with other requirements and could not claim the Rule 506 exemption. The Alabama Supreme Court agreed, to the extent of holding that the defendants, in order to avoid summary judgment, were required to submit evidence of compliance with all elements of Rule 506 and Regulation D, and not merely evidence of compliance with notice filing requirements. Under federal Rule 506, said the Court, the federal exemption and preemption under NSMIA are "functionally equivalent."¹² The Court stated:

Specifically, under the rule, the defendants can demonstrate that the [federal] Securities Act preempts the ASA because the transactions in question are exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act. The remaining question is whether evidence indicating that all of the requirements of Rule 506 were satisfied is necessary to preemption.¹³

The Court answered that question in the affirmative. Failure to comply with all requirements of Rule 506, said the Court, voids the federal exemption, and thereby eliminates the possibility of preemption. Summary judgment for the defendants was reversed, and the case remanded because:

[T]he exempt status of the sale of securities that deviates from any of the material commitments made in its Form D filing is repealed retroactively. Therefore, because Time Domain submitted no evidence indicating that its sales of securities were actually made in conformity with Regulation D, it did not make a prima facie showing that there was no genuine issue of material fact as to its exemption under Rule 506.¹⁴

The Alabama Supreme Court's holding in Buist that NSMIA did not preempt the plaintiff's state securities registration claims would presumably also permit a state administrator to examine the validity of the federal exemption in a Rule 506 offering in order to determine whether state registration requirements are preempted as to the particular offering. A state administrator, rather than the SEC, would be empowered to determine the validity of the federal exemption in order to determine whether an actual NSMIA covered security is involved in the offering. Such an exercise of state administrative authority over what are ostensibly covered securities under NSMIA, when there is no fraud involved, flies in the face of NSMIA's express preemption.

The Alabama court's approach had previously been rejected by federal courts for that very reason. In *Temple v. Gorman*¹⁵ and *Lillard v. Stockton*¹⁶ federal district courts concluded that private offerings made in reliance upon Rule 506 of federal Regulation D could not be subjected to state court registration requirements on grounds that the offerings did not comply with federal Regulation D requirements. In Temple the court made clear: "Regardless of whether the private placement actually complied with the substantive requirements of Regulation D or Rule 506, the securities sold to Plaintiffs are federal 'covered securities' because they were sold pursuant to those rules."¹⁷ The court added:

Furthermore, any attempt by Florida to require registration of such securities or securities transaction would be preempted by NSMIA. Congress expressed its intent in NSMIA that federal regulations alone should govern the registration of national securities offerings. Where a Form D was filed with the SEC for a transaction that purported to merit an exemption from federal registration pursuant to Regulation D, Florida law could not require a duplicative registration or a transactional exemption from registration.¹⁸

The Alabama Supreme Court considered these federal decisions only to be persuasive authority with little analysis, and without any controlling effect. A subsequent Arkansas federal district court likewise concluded that NSMIA preemption of state authority is dependent upon the validity of the Rule 506 exemption.¹⁹ Recognizing that Congress did not by NSMIA completely preempt the field of securities regulation, the Arkansas federal court opined that the only way to assert federal preemption is to first show that the federal exemption from registration actually applies. Recitations in an agreement tracking the requirements of federal Regulation D were insufficient to show that the sales were in fact exempt. Therefore, state securities law claims were not preempted. The result was the same in Grubka v. Webaccess International, Inc.,²⁰ in which a Colorado federal district court held that registration claims asserted under the Colorado securities law would be preempted only if a defendant proved the validity of the federal exemption. Rejecting the contrary reasoning of Temple v. Gorman, the Colorado federal court concluded that the NSMIA definition of covered security is not satisfied simply because securities are sold pursuant to a putative federal exemption. The Court observed:

If Congress had intended that an offeror's representation of exemption should suffice it could have said so, but it did not. Such an intent seems unlikely, in any event; that a defendant could avoid liability under state law simply by disclaiming its alleged compliance with Regulation D is an unsavory proposition and would eviscerate the statute.²¹

The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit echoed this reasoning in Brown v. Earthboard Sports USA, Inc.,²² and in In re Blue Flame Energy Corp.,²³ an Ohio appellate court upheld the authority of the Ohio Division of Securities to issue a cease-and-desist order finding that the respondents violated the Ohio Securities Law in the sale of unregistered securities that were claimed to be exempt under Rule 506. The Ohio court concluded that NSMIA cannot be read to allow an issuer to avoid state regulation or liability under state securities laws in regard to an offering simply by claiming compliance with Regulation D.²⁴ The weight of federal and state authority today clearly favors the exercise of state regulatory authority to determine the validity of a claimed Rule 506 exemption for purposes of NSMIA preemption.²⁵ Courts have likewise upheld state authority under the NSMIA "savings" clause²⁶ to exercise antifraud enforcement authority to deal with disclosures made in offering documents for covered securities.²⁷

As case law evolves, Practitioners must at least presume that state administrators and litigation plaintiffs will assert authority and, as commentators have counseled, it is essential to bear in mind that Rule 506 preemption from full state regulation can be lost if the private offering does not in fact comply with the specific requirements of the rule.²⁸

[2] Intermediary Regulation

NSMIA also impacts directly on state regulation of intermediary activities. For broker-dealers, federal law now limits state authority to impose requirements relating to such things as capital, margin, books and records, bonding and reports that are different from what is required by federal law. NSMIA does not eliminate state authority to regulate on these matters. It does, however, mandate that any state law dealing with them may not impose requirements that differ from or are in addition to those imposed under federal law.²⁹

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.02

NSMIA does not alter or limit the authority of states to require licensing of broker-dealers, or affect whatever standard may be applied in determining what may constitute transacting business. It does, however, prevent states whose contacts are de minimis from prohibiting an associated person of a broker-dealer from effecting transactions where, among other conditions, the associated person and the broker-dealer firm are already registered in a single state. Exchange Act section 15(h)(2) declares:

No law, rule, regulation, or order, or other administrative action of any State or political subdivision thereof may prohibit an associated person of a broker or dealer from affecting a ["described transaction"] for a customer in such state if--

(A) Such associated person is not ineligible to register with such State for any reason other than such a transaction;

(B) Such associated persons registered with a registered securities association [NASD] and at least one State; and

(C) The broker or dealer with which such person is associated is registered with such State.ⁿ³⁰

A "described transaction" for purposes of the limitation on jurisdiction is defined as one on behalf of a customer who has for at least 30 days maintained an account with the broker-dealer; is effected by an associated person who has a pre-existing service relationship of at least 14 days prior to the transaction; and the associated person is registered with a state in which the customer was resident or present for at least 30 consecutive days during the 1-year period prior to the day of the transaction. This provision is aimed at permitting a continuing service relationship with a transient or vacationing customer who is away from home for a period of time, as long as the associated person is registered in the state in which the customer permanently resides or was present for 30 days or more during the previous year. However, if the customer is present in another state for 30 days or more, or permanently changes his or her residence, the associated person will be subject to the jurisdiction of that new state and its registration/licensing requirements.

"Described transaction" also includes one executed on behalf of a customer who has been a customer of the broker-dealer for at least 30 days, by an associated person who has filed an application for registration in the state in which the transaction occurs. This provision anticipates situations in which an associated person executes a transaction for an existing customer in a state in which the associated person has made application for registration. The act provides a temporal window in relation to a pending application to register during which such associated persons may effect transactions.ⁿ³¹

Limiting the scope of state jurisdiction in this manner, NSMIA allocates authority away from states that do not have sufficient contacts to apply their laws. Such an allocation of authority is also accomplished in regard to investment advisers. NSMIA added new Section 203A(b)(1)(A) to the Investment Advisers Act of 1940ⁿ³² which provides that no state may impose license, registration, or qualification requirements on a federally registered investment adviser or investment adviser representative except in the case of a representative who has a place of business located in the state. While NSMIA also broadly reallocated federal and state regulatory authority over investment advisers generally so as to place principal authority with the states for regulation of investment advisers having assets under management of $25 million or less,ⁿ³³ a national de minimis standard limiting that jurisdiction was also established. Section 222(d) of the Investment Advisers Actⁿ³⁴ declares that no state may impose registration, licensing or qualification requirements on an investment adviser that does not have a place of business in the state, and who has during the prior twelve month period had fewer than six clients who are residents of the state.ⁿ³⁵

In the same manner that NSMIA prohibits states from imposing qualification requirements relating to such things as books and records that differ from or are in addition to federal requirements in regard to broker-dealers, it establishes like prohibition regarding investment advisers, but keying on the state of principal place of business rather than federal requirements. Sections 222(b) and (c) of the Investment Advisers Act³⁶ thus prohibit states from imposing or enforcing any law that imposes on an investment adviser books-and-records, net capital or bond requirements greater than those imposed by the state in which the adviser has its principal place of business.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996) (codified as amended in scattered sections of 15 U.S.C.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lander v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co., 251 F.3d 101, 109 (2d Cir. 2001) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. The status of state registration requirements in the wake of NSMIA, and state registration requirements generally, are examined in Chapter 5, infra .

(n8)Footnote 8. CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. P 74,264, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4073 (D. Minn. 2002) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22642 (N.D. Cal. 1999) , aff'd, 249 F.3d 1087 (9th Cir. 2001) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 17 C.F.R. § 230.506 (2008) ("Exemption for Limited Offers and Sales Without Regard to Dollar Amount of Offering").

(n11)Footnote 11. 926 So.2d 290, 2005 Ala. LEXIS 120 (2005) .

(n12)Footnote 12. 926 So.2d at 296 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Id.

(n14)Footnote 14. Id., at 298 .

(n15)Footnote 15. 201 F. Supp.2d 1238 (S.D. Fla. 2002) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 267 F. Supp.2d 1081 N.D. Okla. 2003).

(n17)Footnote 17. 201 F. Supp.2d at 1244 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Id. See also, Pinnacle Communications International, Inc. v. American Family Mortgage Corp., 417 F. Supp.2d 1073, 1087 (D. Minn. 2006) ("When an offering purports to be exempt under Regulation D, any allegation of improper registration is covered exclusively by federal law").

(n19)Footnote 19. Hamby v. Clearwater Consulting Concepts, LLP, 428 F. Supp. 2d 915 (E.D. Ark. 2006) .

(n20)Footnote 20. 445 F. Supp.2d 1259, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44721 (D. Colo. 2006) .

(n21)Footnote 21. 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44721, at *29 .

(n22)Footnote 22. 481 F. 3d 901 (6th Cir. 2007) .

(n23)Footnote 23. 871 N.E.2d 1227 (Ohio Ct. App. 2006) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Id., at 1244 .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Robert N. Rapp & Fritz E. Berckmueller, "Testing the Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure," 63 Bus. Lawyer 809 (May 2008).

(n26)Footnote 26. Securities Act § 18(c)(1), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(1) (2000). The NSMIA "savings" clause is an express exception to preemption.

(n27)Footnote 27. See Rapp & Berckmueller, supra, at 827-835.

(n28)Footnote 28. See Hugh H. Makens, Blue Sky Practice--Part I: Doing it Right, SL075 ALI-ABA 549, 554 (Mar. 16, 2006).

(n29)Footnote 29. NSMIA amended Section 15 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. § 78o, by adding new subsection (h), "Limitations on State Law," which includes the provision that:

No law, rule, regulation, or order, or other administrative action of any State or political subdivision thereof shall establish capital, custody, margin, financial responsibility, making and keeping records, bonding or financial or operational reporting requirements for brokers, dealers, municipal securities dealers, government securities brokers, or government securities dealers that differ from, or are in addition to, the requirements in those areas established under this title. The Commission shall consult periodically the securities commissions (or any agency or office performing like functions) of the States concerning the adequacy of such requirements as established under this title.

(n30)Footnote 30. 15 U.S.C. § 78k(h) (2000).

(n31)Footnote 31. See generally H.R. Rep. No. 104-864, Joint Explanatory Statement of the Conference Committee, 104th Cong., 2d Sess. (Sept. 28, 1996).

(n32)Footnote 32. 15 U.S.C. § 80b-3a(b)(1).

(n33)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 80b-3a(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. 15 U.S.C. § 80b-22(d).

(n35)Footnote 35. Notwithstanding the allocation of authority and the imposition of a de minimis standard as part of NSMIA changes to investment adviser regulation, it is also clear that all state enforcement authority relating to fraud remains intact. Indeed, Section 203A(b)(2) of the Act, 15 U.S.C. § 80b-3a(b)(2), provides:

Nothing in this subsection shall prohibit the securities commission (or any agency or office performing like functions) of any State from investigating and bringing enforcement actions with respect to fraud or deceit against any investment adviser or person associated with an investment adviser.

(n36)Footnote 36. 15 U.S.C. § 80b-22(b)-(c).

35 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.03

§ 4.03 Conflict Preemption of State Law

[1] Conflict Preemption

In the realignment of federal and state securities regulatory roles through NSMIA preemption of certain national market elements of Blue Sky laws, Congress carefully preserved state antifraud enforcement authority and most of the historic state function of licensing market intermediaries. In the assessment of NSMIA impact, the extent to which Congress preserved state authority is as significant as what was preempted. Moreover, NSMIA did not limit state common law fraud claims, or otherwise impinge upon such private rights of action and remedies available under state securities laws.ⁿ¹ "Savings" clauses in the federal securities laws and NSMIA make clear that there is no federal field preemption in the context of securities regulation.ⁿ²

However, the scope of investor protection under state securities laws may nevertheless be impacted by another form of legal preemption. The principle of conflict preemption operates where a federal statutory or regulatory scheme, although not displacing state law, supersedes it to the extent that it conflicts with federal law. Conflict preemption exists where a party's compliance with both federal and state law would be impossible, or where state law would pose an obstacle to the accomplishment of congressional objectives. In this context, federal regulations have no less preemptive effect than federal statutes.ⁿ³

The Eighth and Ninth Circuit U.S. Courts of Appeals have both applied the principle of conflict preemption to uphold dismissals of state law fraud claims arising out of "naked" short selling which drove down the market price for the stocks of two plaintiffs companies, and which the plaintiffs alleged was facilitated by a program operated by national "clearing agencies" registered under the federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Section 17A of the Exchange Actⁿ⁴ provides for the registration of "clearing agencies," which provide centralized clearance, settlement and transaction information for virtually all broker-to-broker equity, corporate bond, municipal and other securities transactions in the United States. These functions are centralized by the National Securities Clearance Corporation (NSCC) and Depository Trust Company (DTC), which are both subsidiaries of Depository Trust & Clearing Corporation (DTCC). Together, they operate a uniform national system for clearance and settlement of securities transactions.ⁿ⁵

NSCC also operates a "Stock Borrow Program" designed to electronically deal with temporary, short term failures to deliver stock that has been sold. The NSCC program allows it to facilitate settlement of transactions in which there has been a "fail-to-deliver" by "borrowing" the requisite number of shares, and delivering the "borrowed" shares to the purchaser through the electronic settlement system. In this process, NSCC is a central counterparty, meaning that NSCC guarantees the transactions it processes by assuming the obligation of sellers to deliver shares. The process is seamless, and the buyer is credited with the shares never knowing that there has been a fail-to-deliver. It is intended to operate quickly, and temporarily, to permit timely settlement. NSCC obtains shares to cover a fail-to-deliver from lending its members. The Stock Borrow Program operates under rules adopted by NSCC and approved by the SEC under its statutory authority.

A "short" sale of securities occurs when the seller of shares does not at the time of the "short" sale own the shares being sold, and the seller must borrow shares to deliver on the settlement date. In most instances the short seller arranges to borrow the shares for delivery through a broker, and later purchases the identical shares to return to the broker, hoping that the price paid to "cover" the short sale is less than that received in making it. A "naked" short sale occurs when the seller not only does not own the shares being sold, but also does not borrow shares to deliver when due. Naked short sales thus trigger the NSCC Stock Borrow Program. Naked short selling may be deemed to be a fraudulent or manipulative practice where the naked short seller has no intention to obtaining sufficient shares to deliver on settlement date.

In Pet Quarters, Inc. v. Depository Trust and Clearing Corp.,ⁿ⁶ and Whistler Investments, Inc. v. The Depository Trust and Clearing Corp.,ⁿ⁷ plaintiffs were companies whose stock is publicly traded in the open market. Each company alleged that it had been victimized by "naked" short sellers, who drove down the market prices by selling shares without having stock available for delivery, and then intentionally failing to deliver. Both companies, in their separate actions, alleged that NSCC and its affiliates facilitated naked short selling by defects in the operation of the Stock Borrow Program. Whistler, for example, claimed that at times fails-to-deliver shares are not cured for long periods of time, and that the Stock Borrow Program creates more electronic shares in the marketplace, which in turn operates to depress the market price. Pet Quarters similarly claimed that defective methods of accounting for shares borrowed under the program allowed "phantom shares" in the market place, which diluted the value of its stock. Both made state tort law claims that included market manipulation, misrepresentation, breach of implied covenants and conspiracy. The district courts in both cases dismissed all claims on grounds of conflict preemption.

The dismissals in both Pet Quarters and Whistler were affirmed, as both the Eighth and Ninth Circuits concluded that state law challenges to the existence or operation of the Stock Borrow Program would conflict with the congressional directive evident in the adoption of Exchange Act section 17A. As the Pet Quarters court observed, in section 17A: "Congress directed the [SEC] to facilitate the establishment of a prompt, accurate national clearance and settlement system to protect investors and the public interest."ⁿ⁸ The SEC did so, said the court, when it approved the NSCC's creation of the Stock Borrow Program and the rules governing its operation. Thus, the court added:

To the extent that any of Pet Quarters's state law claims challenge this program or its rules, a favorable ruling on them would necessarily conflict with Commission regulation and control of the national securities clearing and settlement system and pose an obstacle to the congressional objectives in Section 17A.ⁿ⁹

The Whistler court likewise concluded that plaintiff's claims amounted to a direct challenge to the federally approved operation of the program, and conflicted with the SEC approval of its existence and operation.ⁿ¹⁰

Conflict preemption was also applied to bar claims under state law for practices that are specifically permitted by SEC rules. In Guice v. Charles Schwab & Co.,ⁿ¹¹ the New York Court of Appeals held that a state law challenge to order flow payment practices was preempted because the SEC had promulgated detailed rules addressing the precise timing, form and degree of disclosure required as to payment for order flow. In the end, it is not clear to what extent state law relating to fraud, manipulation and related conduct will be irreconcilable with obligations defined by federal law or the federal regulatory structure. In Guice, it appeared certain that permitting remedies under state law for practices that are expressly permitted under SEC rules presented a head-on conflict. On the other hand, obligations imposed under the federal regulatory scheme may be entirely compatible with asserted obligations and remedies as a matter of late law as, for example, where federal regulations establish an applicable duty or standard of care upon which liability might be premised under the traditional statutory tort theory.

As a matter of state enforcement authority, it is certainly not clear after NSMIA to what extent the exercise of authority to investigate and address fraud--which is expressly preserved--could present the basis for challenge on conflict preemption grounds. NSMIA is a clear statement of congressional intent to preserve broad antifraud enforcement powers of state regulators. For that reason, the question of scope of authority is better addressed under NSMIA than separately considered in the context of conflict preemption. Both Pet Quarters and Whistler Investments, however, leave the door open to such a broader assessment.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, eg., Zuri-Invest AG v. Natwest Fin., Inc., 177 F. Supp.2d, 189 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

(n2)Footnote 2. Field preemption is based on the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution, and operates as an implied preemption of state law where a federal statutory or regulatory scheme is so pervasive in scope that it occupies the field, leaving no room for state action. See Fid. Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. de la Cuesta, 458 U.S. 141, 152-53, 102 S.Ct. 3014 (1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Id., 458 U.S. at 153.

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 78q-1(a)(1)(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. The clearance and settlement process involves book-entry transfers of securities positions among participants in the system, and to beneficial owners of securities. Clearance and settlement takes place through NSCC, while book-entry transfers are effected among brokers' accounts at DTC.

(n6)Footnote 6. 559 F.3d 772 (8th Cir. 2009) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 539 F.3d 1159 (9th Cir. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 559 F.3d at 780 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Id.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 539 F.3d at 1167 .

(n11)Footnote 11. 674 N.E.2d 282 (N.Y. 1996) .

36 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

§ 4.04 Jurisdictional Predicates

[1] Offer and Sale Activities

Armed with merit-based qualification criteria for securities offerings, state securities regulators historically functioned as gatekeepers. Without regard to the interstate character of any distribution, absent an exemption or, today, NSMIA "covered security" status, offers and sales within a particular state are permitted only upon advance approval of an administrator or pursuant to prescribed procedures. Likewise, the full range of enforcement powers under Blue Sky laws, which commonly includes cease-and-desist and civil injunctive authority, is premised upon a single act within a state amounting to a non-complying offer or sale.ⁿ¹ And private civil remedies for non-complying transactions, and for fraud, are likewise linked to a single jurisdictional predicate activity. The broad general definition of "offer" as encompassing every attempt to dispose of a security, or anything amounting to a solicitation of an offer to buy one,ⁿ² thus makes the particular notion of what constitutes an actual offer or sales related activity in a state a critical consideration where interstate transactions are contemplated. Moreover, as provided in the Uniform Act, state jurisdiction may be exercised on the basis of an offer or sale despite the fact that neither party to the transaction is actually present in the state. Section 414(c) of the Uniform Act, which prescribes the scope of the Act, declares:

For the purpose of this section, an offer to sell or to buy is made in this state, whether or not either party is then present in this state, when the offer (1) originates from this state or (2) is directed by the offeror to this state and received at the place to which it is directed (or at any post office in this state in the case of a mailed offer).ⁿ³

The drafters of the original Uniform Securities Act proceeded on the premise that the scope of individual state jurisdiction in interstate transactions should be made as explicit as possible, and that differences in construction and interpretation leading to conflict of laws problems should be minimized. Section 414 of the Act is thus a more or less comprehensive statement of criteria for determining when an offer is made in a state for purposes of jurisdiction under the Blue Sky law.ⁿ⁴ Uniform Act section 414 is preserved in the 2002 Uniform Act,ⁿ⁵ which the drafters describe as not only defining the application of the act to interstate, but also international transactions when only some of the elements of a violation occur in the state. As the drafters further point out, the law is now settled that a person may violate the law of a particular state without ever being within the state or performing each act necessary to violate the law within that state.ⁿ⁶

Although the mission of Blue Sky laws is protection of the citizens of the state, section 414 criteria manifest a decidedly transactional focus. The jurisdictional predicate is not a function of an offer to a resident, but rather the act of originating an offer in or directing it into the state regardless of the citizenship or residence of the recipient. Because section 414 speaks in terms of offers as well as purchases and sale, there is no requirement that a transaction actually be completed in the state. It is also true that an offer originating in one state and directed into another is made in both states. The Blue Sky law of the originating state would apply under section 414(c)(1), and the law of the recipient state would apply under section 414(c)(2). This prevents a seller in one state from using that state as a base of operations for defrauding persons in other states. In practical terms there may be little concern for application of a Blue Sky law to such isolated transient events in a state as one might imagine, as, for example, an offer made during a meeting between two non-resident travelers in an airport transit lounge. However, the scope of jurisdiction under section 414 and all Blue Sky laws is defined so as to be certain that activity impacting the legitimate protective interests of the state and its citizens will not escape coverage.

Section 414 makes certain distinctions in the scope of jurisdiction under the Act depending upon the predicate conduct involved. The provisions governing fraud, registration of broker-dealers and agents, registration of securities, making unlawful statements to the effect that the administrator has recommended or approved of any registered seller or security, and civil liability apply to persons who sell or offer to sell when (1) an offer to sell (as defined above) is made in the state, or (2) an offer to buy is made and accepted in the state.ⁿ⁷ For an offer to buy to be "accepted" for purposes of jurisdiction under Section 414 means that acceptance of the offer is:

(1) communicated to the offeror in this state and (2) has not previously been communicated to the offeror, orally or in writing, outside this state; and acceptance is communicated to the offeror in this state, whether or not either party is then present in this state, when the offeree directs it to the offeror in this state reasonably believing the offeror to be in this state and it is received at the place to which it is directed (or at any post office in this state in the case of a mailed acceptance).

Uniform Act provisions relating to advisory activities, along with broker-dealer and agent licensing, apply to persons who buy or offer to buy when (1) an offer to buy is made in the state, or (2) an offer to sell is made and accepted in the state. The activity of intermediaries which serves as a jurisdictional predicate is considered later.ⁿ⁸ Here again, however, the transactional focus of the Act's approach is apparent. The jurisdictional premise is some purposeful undertaking which is either designed to produce or actually results in an investment decision within the protected borders. As will be seen, however, that focus is too narrow. The jurisdictional umbrella of Blue Sky laws is defined by the extent of activities which take place within a state that are so connected to offers and sales of securities that they supply a jurisdictional nexus without regard to whether actual residents of the states are the ultimately protected purchasers. This is the key consideration in understanding the extra-territorial impact of blue sky laws in interstate transactions. Certain principles of "long-arm" jurisdiction provide a starting point.

Conduct undertaken outside the borders of a state which has either purposeful or reasonably anticipated transactional consequences within a state has historically supported the exercise of long-arm personal jurisdiction by state courts. In Cody v. Ward,ⁿ⁹ for example, a California defendant who posted messages to an on-line service investment forum, purporting to provide reliable information concerning common stock of a video game company was held subject to suit by an investor in Connecticut. The Connecticut investor alleged that the defendant's on-line messages, and direct telephone follow-ups, concerning the company and its business prospects were fraudulent, leading to the investor's purchase of the company's stock and eventual loss of the funds invested. Upholding the exercise of personal jurisdiction over the out-of-state defendant the court opined that although he was not in Connecticut when the alleged misrepresentations were made, the defendant had purposefully communicated to the investor for the purpose of causing him to invest, and should have reasonably anticipated being sued in Connecticut if the plaintiff suffered the loss of his investment.ⁿ¹⁰

The protective mission of blue sky laws militates strongly in favor of such expansive assessments of the limits of jurisdiction. In Bernie v. Waterfront Limited Dividend Housing Association,ⁿ¹¹ the court upheld the application of the Ohio Blue Sky law through the state's long-arm statute in circumstances in which the plaintiff Ohio resident learned of the investment opportunity during a trip to New York City and received offering materials during that trip. Once back in Ohio, the plaintiff initiated contact with representatives of the issuer in New York, and in response received further documents, mailed to him from New York, including subscription documents which the plaintiff then executed in Ohio, and thus committed himself to the purchase. On these facts, the court concluded that plaintiff had made a prima facie showing of jurisdiction and offered this insight into considerations overriding the fact that negotiation and solicitation of the investment occurred in New York:

With respect to whether Defendants purposefully availed themselves of the privilege of acting in Ohio or causing a consequence there, the court notes that the fact that much of the negotiation and solicitation of Plaintiff's investment occurred in New York is not as determinative of this issue as are the consequences of the contractual obligation in Ohio and the degree of interest which Ohio has in seeing that said obligations were faithfully executed... . The Ohio blue sky laws are evidence of Ohio's interest in protecting its citizens by making certain requirements of investment arrangements before they can be distributed in Ohio. Defendants, whether directly or through there agent, Continental, mailed a subscription agreement to Plaintiff in Ohio for his signature, thus freely and intentionally encouraging and allowing an Ohio resident to make a substantial investment in Waterfront.ⁿ¹²

Purposefully availing one's self of the "privilege" of entering a regulated securities market in a forum state was recognized as a proper basis for the exercise of regulatory jurisdiction under the New Jersey Blue Sky law in Silverman v. Berkson,ⁿ¹³ in which the state Supreme Court upheld extra-territorial subpoena authority of the Bureau of Securities. The court held that the agency may properly exercise its authority to compel attendance of out-of-state witnesses in an investigation where the witness is one who has engaged in purposeful conduct expressly aimed at regulated securities markets within the state.ⁿ¹⁴

Technological advances in communication among participants in national markets have added a further dimension in assessing the scope of state jurisdiction. E-mail and other electronic communications enable parties to conduct enormous volumes of business within a state without physically entering it. As an example, the New York Court of Appeals has held that so long as a party avails itself of the benefits of the forum state, has sufficient minimum contacts, and should reasonably expect to defend its actions there, the party may be subjected to jurisdiction in that state without ever being physically present. Thus, a Montana state agency that managed the investment program for public funds, the public retirement system and state compensation insurance funds was required to defend in New York when it broke a $15 million investment transaction that had been negotiated and effected by e-mail. The Montana state agency, said the Court, was a sophisticated institutional trader that entered New York to transact business by knowingly initiating and pursuing a negotiation a transaction with a brokerage firm representative in New York that culminated in the sale. The agency should reasonably have expected to defend its actions in New York, particular given the fact that it had previously engaged in bond transactions with the same brokerage firm representative in New York, and had availed itself of the benefits of doing business there.ⁿ¹⁵

Long-arm jurisdiction cases are helpful in understanding the sense of nexus; between an offer or sale of securities and a state that is the essential jurisdictional predicate under Blue Sky laws. Activities having little or no relationship to the offer or sale of securities in a state will not support application of the Blue Sky law. *In re Revco Securities Litigation*ⁿ¹⁶ well illustrates the point. In Revco the court dismissed claims under the Ohio securities law where the subject purchase of securities of an Ohio issuer was by a New York investor through a Delaware intermediary, on the basis of information disseminated and representations made and received entirely outside of Ohio. Although the court considered a number of activities occurring in Ohio in regard to the issuing company, none of them were found to directly concern the sale of the securities to the New York investor. No sufficient nexus was shown between the subject sale of securities and the State of Ohio such that remedies under the Blue Sky law could properly be invoked.

On one hand, Revco stands simply for the point that no sale occurred within Ohio for purposes of the Blue Sky law. On the other hand, the broader notion of requisite nexus between the transaction and Ohio is much more meaningful, as other cases illustrate. In Skurnick v. Ainsworth, n17 for example, a New York licensed broker-dealer who received an order and payment for the purchase of securities mailed to New York by a Florida resident was held to have effected a sale in Florida for purposes of the Florida Blue Sky law. The broker had not solicited the Florida purchaser, and had acted only on the request of the purchaser. Nevertheless, the court found that the Florida statute unambiguously applied to activities of brokers outside the state who sell to persons within the state. Similarly, in Ansbro v. Southeast Energy Group, Ltd., n18 although an agreement to purchase securities was executed in Indiana, the pre-agreement solicitation and meaningful communications were made from Illinois, where the agreement and payment were also sent. Those activities in Illinois were deemed to constitute sufficient nexus with Illinois to constitute a sale there for purposes of invoking the Blue Sky law.n19

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

In Arizona Corp. Comm'n v. Media Products, Inc. n20 the court added a further dimension to the nexus requirement in holding that the sale of securities by a foreign corporation whose base of operations was in that state would be a sale "from" the state for purposes of the Blue Sky law. The court determined that the securities were offered or sold from Arizona, even though: (1) all of the sales activities were conducted by out-of-state broker-dealers in states other than Arizona; (2) the offers to purchase were made and accepted out-of-state; and (3) no sale or offer of sale was made to any resident of Arizona.n21 The determining factors in favor of finding sales for purposes of the Blue Sky law included: (1) the issuer's principal place of business and base of operations was within the state; (2) the officers and directors resided in the state; (3) "selling agency agreements" that were material to the subject transactions were delivered to the company in the state; (4) Board of Directors meetings took place in the state; (5) the escrow agent bank was in the state; (6) stock certificates were delivered to the escrow agent versus payment at a closing in the state; and (7) stock certificates were prepared and issued by a transfer agent in the state. These factors, said the court, amounted to more than ministerial actions, and were sufficient to support application of the Blue Sky law to offers and sales that were thus made "from" the state.

To be sure, the Media Products court also opined that despite sufficient jurisdictional nexus, application of the Blue Sky law would impermissibly interfere with interstate commerce, an issue discussed further below. However, the jurisdictional nexus identified in sale-related activity and circumstances within the state is no less meaningful in understanding the scope of potential applications.n22

It is certain, however, that mere presence in a state, for example, by reason of incorporation, without activities connected to unlawful activity outside the state is not a sufficient basis on which to invoke jurisdiction of that state's Blue Sky law to address the out-of-state misconduct. In Singer v. The Magnavox Company, n23 the Delaware Supreme Court declined to extend coverage of that state's Blue Sky law to alleged fraud in connection with solicitation of proxies by a company incorporated in Delaware for a merger vote where all materials disseminated in connection with the transaction had a point of origin outside Delaware. The plaintiffs were not solicited in Delaware, and no part of the "sale" occurred there. The court observed that the Blue Sky law should not be read to apply merely because a corporation is incorporated in the state, and further declared:

We are not persuaded that because the corporate merger was held in Delaware this is a sufficient connection with the alleged fraud to permit plaintiffs to invoke the Act. That is simply too fragile a basis on which to establish subject matter jurisdiction over an alleged fraud in Pennsylvania or over a contract made in New York. And plaintiffs' arguments based on registration of the merger documents in Delaware ... and the statutory situs of the Magnavox stock in this state ... are equally tenuous and we reject them for the same reason.n24

Section 414 of the Uniform Act incorporates the notion of jurisdictional nexus in prescribing an offer or sale as occurring within a state when it originates from the state, and also in the provision declaring that an offer or sale may occur "whether or not either party is then present in this state." The latter clause is intended to cover the situation of an offeror or offeree who is absent from the state at the time the offer is made. For example: A is the offeror residing in

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

State X. B is the offeree residing in State Y. If A placed an interstate phone call to B, there would be little doubt that the law of State X would be applicable since the offer originated from that State, and one state should not be used as a base of operations to defraud persons in other states.ⁿ²⁵ However, suppose that A travels to see B in State Y. Would the law of State X still be applicable? Under Section 414(c), the offer may still be deemed to have originated from State X. Under Section 414(c), the law of State Y would also apply since the offer originating in one state and directed to another is made in both states.ⁿ²⁶ The construction of Uniform Act section 414 also clearly contemplates that the Blue Sky law of more than one jurisdiction may be applied to a given transaction.ⁿ²⁷

To the extent that different private civil remedies may be available, it is useful to consider such possible applications of one state Blue Sky law to a transaction in another state based on isolated instances of travel or communication that result in or are connected with that transaction. However, the focus of Blue Sky laws on conduct or activity within the state that gives rise to concern for investor protection suggests that jurisdiction will in practical terms be determined based upon a course of conduct that, even if directed outside the state, has the realistic potential for impact within the state. In Newsome v. Diamond Oil Producers, Inc.,ⁿ²⁸ for example, the court applied the Oklahoma Blue Sky law to offers and sales made from Oklahoma facilities exclusively to residents of other states. Jurisdiction in regard to offers originating from the state, said the court, was clear, and thus:

Even when Defendants' assertions in regard to the location of offerees or purchasers are taken as true, the Act will apply when any portion of the selling process of securities covered by the Act occurs in Oklahoma. In this situation, the Act regulates Oklahoma promoters who sell only to residents of other states.ⁿ²⁹

Without regard to Section 414 of the Uniform Act, application of multiple Blue Sky laws to a single securities transaction has been upheld as a matter of legitimate state interests in regulating securities transactions. In Chrysler Capital Corp. v. Century Power Corp.,ⁿ³⁰ the court upheld the right of a plaintiff to sue under multiple state securities laws. Subsequently revisiting the issue on a request for reconsideration, the court underscored that a state's Blue Sky law may properly be applied when an issuer has performed significant actions within the state in connection with a transaction, although the transaction itself is consummated outside the state.ⁿ³¹ The controlling notion is that a state has a legitimate interest in preventing it from being used as a base of operations for marauders outside the state.ⁿ³²

That is not to say, however, that when there is no activity in a state that is meaningfully connected to or facilitative of conduct that takes place entirely in another state that jurisdiction under the first state's Blue Sky law may be asserted. As discussed earlier in Singer v. Magnavox Co.,ⁿ³³ for example, plaintiffs brought a class action alleging violations of the Delaware Blue Sky law, even though the activity violating the act occurred entirely in another state. The Delaware Supreme Court applied the general presumption that a law is not intended to apply outside the territorial jurisdiction of the state in which it is enacted, and refused to apply the Delaware Blue Sky law despite the fact that the company was incorporated in Delaware. State courts have consistently declined to apply Blue Sky laws on the basis of activity that occurs entirely in another state.ⁿ³⁴ Also as noted earlier,ⁿ³⁵ the application of Blue Sky laws on the basis of sales activity occurring outside the state may raise a federal constitutional question in regard to interference with interstate commerce. The application of multiple State Blue sky laws to single transactions has been considered in that context. In Chrysler II and other cases that considered such constitutional challenges, the arguments have been rejected on grounds that at least the antifraud protections of state Blue Sky laws are remedial, not preventative, and that they neither impose unreasonable burdens on interstate commerce or nor impede interstate transactions.

In interstate settings it is also recognized that state conflict of laws principles will generally not be applied to give effect to choice of law provisions contained in transaction documents or agreements where to do so would contravene public policy. Public policy in all states strongly favors regulation of securities transactions for the protection of investors under Blue Sky laws. In Brenner v. Oppenheimer & Co., Inc.,ⁿ³⁶ the Kansas Supreme Court refused to give effect to a customary choice of law provision in a brokerage agreement when the law of the chosen state would have prevented the assertion of a private right of action against the clearing broker defendant for participation in the sale of unregistered securities to Kansas plaintiffs. There was in this case a clear conflict in the laws of the two states on the issue. Because a strong public policy in favor of rigid governmental regulation of the sale of securities and protection of investors was clearly established, the Kansas Supreme Court held that the public policy exception to enforcement of a choice of law provision should be applied, and that the choice of law provision in the standard form agreement could not stand. A contractual provision, said the court, would not be allowed to negate Blue Sky laws enacted to the place the sales of securities under rigid regulation.ⁿ³⁷

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

Blue Sky laws do not often actually conflict as in Brenner. Moreover, it is widely recognized that the securities laws of two or more states may be applicable to a single transaction without presenting any conflict of laws question.ⁿ³⁸ Thus, courts do not often engage in traditional conflict of laws analysis. In most instances the only question is whether there is sufficient nexus between activities of defendants and the state asserting its jurisdiction under the Blue Sky law. Moreover, the express preservation of antifraud enforcement authority of the states in NSMIA leaves little doubt that states will continue to exercise regulatory power and make Blue Sky law remedies available on the basis of broadly defined jurisdictional predicates.

As discussed earlier, the Uniform Act also addresses jurisdictional predicates in terms of an offer being "accepted" in a state. Section 414(d) provides:

For the purpose of this section, an offer to buy or sell is accepted in this state when acceptance (1) is communicated to the offeror in this state and (2) has not previously been communicated to the offeror, orally or in writing, outside this state; and acceptance is communicated to the offeror in this state, whether or not either party is then present in this state, when the offeree directs it to the offeror in this state reasonably believing the offeror to be in this state and it is received at the place to which it is directed (or at any post office in this state in the case of a mailed acceptance).ⁿ³⁹

Acts constituting acceptance of an offer are significant when a seller receives an offer to buy, because under the Uniform Act the Blue Sky law of the buyer's state is applicable only if both offer and acceptance take place in the state where the buyer resides. If, for example, B in State Y calls A in State X, and B offers to buy securities, there is an offer which originated in State Y. However, if the offer is not then accepted and B subsequently visits A in State X, at which time A accepts the offer, then only the law of State X applies to the transaction. State X's law is applicable because the offer was made in the state (it was directed there) and it was accepted in that state. On the other hand, if A sends his acceptance to B in State Y, then State Y's blue sky law would be applicable since the offer originated from and was accepted in State Y.

In another example, if all negotiations leading to a sale take place in State X, merely the fact that the buyer makes her acceptance by mailing a check from State Y is not enough to bring State Y's law into operation.ⁿ⁴⁰ In addition, under the Uniform Act, where there is an offer to buy, the mere confirmation of sale or the delivery of securities by the seller does not render the buyer's state law applicable unless such confirmation or delivery constitutes acceptance.ⁿ⁴¹

Jurisdictional issues arising out of communications constituting offers of securities disseminated across state lines in conventional print and broadcast media are specifically addressed by the Uniform Act. Anticipating those situations in which material published or broadcast in one state finds its way into another, Section 414(e) provides:

An offer to sell or to buy is not made in this state when (1) the publisher circulates or there is circulated on his behalf in this state any bona fide newspaper or other publication of general, regular, and paid circulation which is not published in this state, or which is published in this state but has had more than two-thirds of its circulation outside this state during the past twelve months, or (2) a radio or television program originating outside this state is received in this state.ⁿ⁴²

The 2002 Uniform Act includes the same provision regarding print media.ⁿ⁴³ For broadcast media, however,

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

modification of the original provision is more extensive, in order to more precisely define the meaning of "originating" when applied to a program, and also by introducing the notion of "other electronic communication" into consideration. Section 610(3) of the 2000 Act provides that a radio or television program, or other electronic communication is considered as having originated in the state if either the broadcast studio or the originating source of the transmission is located in the state, unless:

- (1) the program or communication is syndicated and distributed from outside this State for redistribution to the general public in this State;
- (2) the program or communication is supplied by a radio, television or other electronic network with the electronic signal originating from outside this State for redistribution to the general public in this State;
- (3) the program or communication is an electronic signal that originates outside this State and is captured for redistribution to the general public in this State by a community antenna or cable, radio, cable television or other electronic system; or
- (4) the program or communication consists of an electronic signal that originates in this State, but which is not intended for redistribution to the general public in this State.ⁿ⁴⁴

As for conventional print media situations, the typical approach under Blue Sky laws is illustrated in Martin v. Steubner.ⁿ⁴⁵ In that case defendants advertised in the Midwest edition of the Wall Street Journal, soliciting investors for a Minnesota real estate development. The plaintiff, an Ohio resident, became aware of the solicitation by reading the advertisement, which he answered by requesting more information. He received a reply addressed to him in Ohio, which he in turn followed up with a visit to the development in Minnesota. Ultimately, plaintiff made the investment and wired funds representing the purchase price from Ohio to a Minnesota bank. He received and signed the subscription agreement in Ohio. The Ohio Blue Sky law was held applicable for the protection of the Ohio purchaser, with the court endorsing the view that given the state's interest in protecting its citizens, the extension of requirements of the Blue Sky law was fair, and further, that ample contacts with the state supported the exercise of jurisdiction.ⁿ⁴⁶

State regulators assert jurisdiction in interstate offerings when an advertisement originates within the state, or when, as in Martin, it originates outside but is circulated in the state and inviting a response. In most cases of originating publications, dissemination of the advertisement to persons within the state will be apparent. However, as previously seen, an offer entirely to non-residents may nevertheless support application of the originating state law under the "marauding" notion where meaningful activities are in fact occurring in that state and there is fraudulent conduct.ⁿ⁴⁷

The Uniform Act, in Section 414(e)(1), addresses some of the thorny interstate publication issues regarding print media by providing:

An offer to sell or to buy is not made in this state when ... the publisher circulates or there is circulated on his behalf in this state any bona fide newspaper or other publication of general, regular, and paid circulation which is not published in this state, or which is published in this state but has had more than two-thirds of its circulation outside this state during the past twelve months ...

The Act thus affords relief for any advertisement in a regular newspaper or periodical by limiting jurisdiction only to the state in which it is published, and, because the place of publication of a nationally circulated periodical may be entirely fortuitous, jurisdiction will lie with the state where published only if at least one-third of the circulation is also in that state.ⁿ⁴⁸ Thus, a seller may place an advertisement in the national edition of the New York Times and have it freely circulated in all jurisdictions without the advertisement constituting an offer to sell securities in any jurisdiction other than the state of publication.

One must keep in mind, however, that the section 414(e) jurisdictional exclusion for what appears in newspapers or publications of general circulation attaches only to what is contained in that publication, as it is disseminated. While there may be no offer to sell or to buy simply by reason of the publication that comes to rest in a state, anything inviting action in response by a recipient, and follow-up activity associated with it, may well trigger application of the blue sky law. The cases previously considered in this chapter make clear that an advertisement disseminated into a state as part of a generally circulated publication can easily become an offer, and that the strong policy at work in the states will tilt every consideration in favor of finding a jurisdictional nexus where there is a reasonably anticipated next stage of activity as a result of the published matter.ⁿ⁴⁹

In the case of unintended circulation of a local publication beyond the state of its original publication, Uniform Act section 414(e)(1) provides that such ads are not offers in the states where the newspaper was not published.ⁿ⁵⁰ The Uniform Act treats advertisements in nationally circulated magazines the same as newspapers.ⁿ⁵¹

Section 414(e) invites certain critical inquiries concerning newspapers and magazines. For example, what is a "bona fide" newspaper? Would an advertisement in a newspaper that is distributed free qualify under section 414(e)(1)? There is some guidance in case law on the issue of bona fides, although not in this specific context. In SEC v. Wall Street Transcript Corp.,ⁿ⁵² the trial and appellate courts addressed the issue of a bona fide newspaper for purposes of the federal Investment Advisers Act. The lower court's approach was to compare characteristics of the subject publication--content, manner in which it is compiled, distribution system--with those of an acknowledged newspaper of general circulation. On appeal, however, the Second Circuit counseled that the content of a publication should be the focus. Content, said the court, should be evaluated in terms of what is or is not consistent with the purpose of the exclusion of a publication from regulatory coverage. Under that approach, even if the form and other characteristics match those of an acknowledged newspaper or generally circulated publication, the content could nevertheless render it within the scope of coverage. This assessment would be considerably easier, and more meaningful, in the context of investment adviser regulation than for the assessment of the more generalized issue of offers for purposes of Blue Sky laws. Still, between both approaches a notion of bona fides emerges that is at least helpful in making necessary judgments. A publication intended as, or emphasizing its role as, a medium for communication of investment opportunities, for example, would have to stand heavier scrutiny for an advertiser to claim relief under Uniform Act section 414(e).

Another inquiry invited by section 414(e) is the meaning of the word "general" as used in regard to circulation of a publication. Does, for example, "general" circulation in section 414(e)(1) mean large and diverse circulation or that the publication is available to anyone willing to pay the subscription price? Is a publication available on a paid subscription basis only to lawyers, for example, a publication with general circulation?

Use of print media in connection with the offer and sale of securities can present special issues where third party publications are involved. If a published third party report or other information piece is being used by the issuer or someone acting on behalf of the issuer to offer or sell securities, straightforward analysis under Uniform Act section 414 to determine the scope of the offering for purposes of state securities law jurisdiction is in order. It may be the case, however, that a more fundamental inquiry is necessary first to determine whether the third party publication is in fact a solicitation or advertisement. Some limited guidance in this inquiry is available in interpretative materials for SEC Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, which establishes safe harbors from federal registration requirements for certain types of limited offerings. "Manner of offering" limitations in Regulation D prohibit any form of general solicitation or general advertising.ⁿ⁵³ Where truly third party publications are involved, limited guidance available from the SEC suggests that the susceptibility to use by participants in an offering may determine whether the publication actually involves an offer within the scope of securities law coverage.ⁿ⁵⁴ For purposes of Blue Sky laws, any independent character of a third party publication would be lost where the facts demonstrate a significant degree of involvement by the issuer or a planned use of the information in support of solicitations.

Issues relating to third party communications are clearly not confined to print media. The rise in popularity of cable television channels devoted exclusively to financial news and commentary has spawned questions concerning appearances on behalf of issuers, the independence of commentators, and other use of the medium in a manner that causes investor protection concerns. Radio and television generally advertising is covered by Uniform Act section 414(e)(2). For purposes of section 414(e)(2), a radio or television program originates in the state where the microphone or television camera is located, not in the state in which there is a relay station.ⁿ⁵⁵ But with broadcast media the question is essentially one of intent, or at least reasonable belief in the extent to which a broadcast message will be received in other states by persons who have the power to act on it. Apart from the issue whether a communication is amounts to an offer of securities, myriad possibilities associated with national, local or syndicated programming or advertisements invite jurisdictional issues under Blue Sky laws. Most, however, will be resolved in common sense applications based upon what the issuer or person acting on behalf of an issuer set out to accomplish with the communication and the choice of the medium.

In Booth v. Verity, Inc., ⁿ⁵⁶ plaintiff stock purchasers alleged that non-resident senior executives and directors of the defendant corporation could be liable under Kentucky law for selling stock or stock options to Kentucky residents. Plaintiffs alleged that the individual defendants possessed the power and authority to control the contents of the company's presentations to security analysts and the general market. The complaint alleged that the company, whose shares traded in the Nasdaq Stock Market, disseminated false or misleading information that was subsequently reported in the financial press and analyst reports. Plaintiffs alleged that defendants also caused the information to be reported, and thus to reach them in Kentucky, over "the public airwaves, periodicals, telephone, the Internet and other sources."ⁿ⁵⁷ This, they alleged, amounted to defendants soliciting business in Kentucky, and thus satisfied the Kentucky long-arm statute. Although substantive claims were asserted under the Kentucky Blue Sky law, the threshold issue was determined by the court to be the scope of personal jurisdiction over the non-resident defendants.

Plaintiffs in Booth claimed that the individual defendants had purposefully reached out to them in Kentucky, and caused the sale of the securities to be made, with the resultant injury to Plaintiffs when the market price of the shares dramatically declined. They claimed that the defendants had done "everything within their respective powers to reach Plaintiffs in Kentucky."ⁿ⁵⁸ The court, however, rejected their jurisdictional assertions:

[T]hough Plaintiffs assert that the Defendant Directors sold stock to them in Kentucky, Plaintiffs have not alleged any act to accomplish this. Nor have Plaintiffs alleged any advertisement in Kentucky or even that they sold the stock or stock options directly to Plaintiffs. Purchasing securities in a secondary market located outside of Kentucky does not establish a contact with Kentucky. Nor is the mere ability to view a passive web page or a mass media report a contact with Kentucky rendering Defendants subject to jurisdiction of Kentucky courts.ⁿ⁵⁹

The court buttressed its conclusion with the Kentucky Blue Sky law provision declaring that an "offer to sell" does not occur in the state when it is made by means of a newspaper or radio broadcast originating outside the state.ⁿ⁶⁰ No facts were alleged to support a conclusion that the individual defendants had done anything purposefully to reach out to the plaintiffs in Kentucky, and claims under the Blue Sky law made against them were dismissed.

The jurisdictional assessment in regard to individual defendants in Booth well illustrates the notion of one purposefully acting to engage in conduct within the ambit of Blue Sky law protection. The knowing use of a medium of communication that reaches multiple states is not the same as the purposeful use of that medium to accomplish the offer or sale of securities. In this analysis the manner in which states have dealt with the truly unlimited medium of the Internet helps considerably in understanding and resolving jurisdictional issues that arise from the use of all media. Before considering that, however, Booth also highlights the fundamental notion of "transacting business" that is critical to application of state Blue Sky laws to activities of intermediaries.

[2] Intermediary Activities: "Transacting Business"

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

Application of Blue Sky laws to intermediaries, particularly as to registration or licensing provisions, is a function of "transacting business" in the state. As a general matter, "transacts a business" has been held to mean "more than a trivial or de minimis business."ⁿ⁶¹

As applied specifically to the business of investment intermediaries, the scope of Blue Sky law jurisdiction is well illustrated by the decision in Garretto v. Elite Advisory Services, Inc.,ⁿ⁶² which upheld a claim of strict liability of an unlicensed investment adviser under the Wisconsin Blue Sky law. The defendant firm, a financial planning service company, was based in Illinois and engaged in business there as an investment adviser. Plaintiff and the defendant's representative held meetings in Illinois, leading to the plaintiff's execution, in Illinois, of an advisory agreement and commitment letter to participation in a particular investment offering then being formed. Plaintiff, a resident of Wisconsin, continued to communicate and correspond concerning the relationship and contemplated investments. Plaintiff ultimately sued the adviser to rescind his investment on grounds that the defendant firm had transacted business as an investment adviser in Wisconsin without being licensed as required by law.ⁿ⁶³

After concluding that the defendant firm's activities did, by definition, constitute transacting business as an investment adviser, the Garretto court further concluded that the activity fell within the scope of the Wisconsin Blue Sky law. Indeed, the court found that a "significant portion" of the adviser's conduct took place in Wisconsin, as follows:

Although all of the meetings between Garretto and Tomlinson appear to have taken place in Illinois, much of the exchange of information necessary in order to prepare a financial plan for Garretto and to execute plaintiff's investment in Elite Properties took place via telephone calls and letters to and from Garretto in Wisconsin... . These letters, together with the other correspondence and phone calls directed to Garretto at his Kenosha residence, reflect a course of conduct through which the defendants, to borrow a phrase commonly used in personal jurisdiction analysis, "purposefully established" and maintained contact with Wisconsin residents and procured their purchase of securities.ⁿ⁶⁴

Notably, the Garretto court flatly rejected a defense contention that the adviser had neither knowledge nor intent concerning the scope of its activities directed to the plaintiff in Wisconsin. The facts, said the court, left no issue whether the defendant transacted business there. The rescission remedy provided in the Wisconsin Blue Sky law for transactions in violation of the statute was thus appropriately applied.

The Uniform Act declares it is unlawful for any person to "transact business" in the state as a broker-dealer, agent of a broker-dealer or investment adviser unless registered under the Act.ⁿ⁶⁵ As Garretto illustrates, "transacting business" issues arise when an intermediary in one state has customers in another. For example, assume that a broker-dealer or investment adviser licensed in New York has a few customers who live in New Jersey or are vacationing in Florida. Must the intermediary be registered in either of these other states? The Uniform Act takes a realistic view of the problem by recognizing that it is quite likely that broker-dealers will have some customers in other states. As long as there are only a limited number of such customers in each state, there may be little need to require licensing for such a nominal business presence. The Uniform Act deals with the situation through key definitions. It thus excludes from the definition of "broker-dealer":

[a] person who has no place of business in the state if ... during any period of twelve consecutive months he does not direct more than fifteen offers to sell or buy into this state in any manner ... whether or not the offeror or any of the offerees is then present in this state.ⁿ⁶⁶

The Act likewise excludes from the definition of "investment adviser" any adviser who:

[h]as no place of business in this state if (A) his only clients in this state are other investment advisers, broker-dealers, banks, savings institutions, trust companies, insurance companies, investment companies ... pension or profit-sharing trusts, or other financial institutions or institutional buyers ... or

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.04

(B) during any period of twelve consecutive months he does not direct business communications into this state in any manner to more than five clients other than those specified in clause (A), whether or not he or any of the persons to whom the communications are directed is then present in this state.ⁿ⁶⁷

The Uniform Act approach to limiting the scope of licensing jurisdiction for broker-dealers was adopted in nearly states, so as to make provision for some de minimis level of activity by an intermediary with no office in the state. That continues to be the case. However, Blue Sky laws were directly impacted by NSMIA in this regard, and have throughout the country been modified to satisfy NSMIA requirements generally, and to address the realities of an increasingly transient population specifically. It is for that reason that the 2002 Uniform Act, which amalgamates post-NSMIA exemptions from Blue Sky coverage, is most useful. Section 401 of the 2002 Uniform Act, in pertinent part, exempts broker-dealers from registration as follows:

(1) a broker-dealer without a place of business in this State if its only transactions effected in this state are with ...

(E) a bona fide preexisting customer whose principal place of residence is not in this State and the person is registered as a broker-dealer under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or not required to be registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is registered under the securities act of the State in which the customer maintains a principal place of residence;

(F) a bona fide preexisting customer whose principal place of residence is in this State but was not present in this State when the customer relationship was established, if:

(i) the broker-dealer is registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or not required to be registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is registered under the securities laws of the State in which the customer relationship was established or where the customer had maintained a principal place of residence; and

(ii) within 45 days after the customer's first transaction in this State, the person files an application for registration as a broker-dealer in this State and a further transaction is not effected more than 75 days after the date on which the application is filed, or, if earlier, the date on which the administrator notifies the person that the administrator has denied the application for registration or has stayed the pendency of the application for good cause;

(G) not more than three customers in this State during the previous 12 months, in addition to those specified in subparagraphs [above] if the broker is registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or not required to be registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and is registered under the securities act of the State in which the broker-dealer has its principal place of business ...ⁿ⁶⁸

Coordinate exemptions are provided for "agents" of broker-dealers exempt from registration in any state under these provisions,ⁿ⁶⁹ and the same approach is taken for investment advisers and their representatives.ⁿ⁷⁰ The full scope of exemptions from broker-dealer and investment adviser registration requirements is presented in Chapter 11 of this Treatise. It is important here, however, to understand that the notion of "transacting business" sufficient to trigger application of the Blue Sky law of a particular state to an intermediary is controlled by conduct and practices that have a meaningful nexus with the state. One normally thinks of activities amounting to the offer and sale of securities as triggering investor protection concerns. Clearly, however, the evolution of exemptions from the key definition of broker-dealer or investment adviser under the Uniform, Revised Uniform and now 2002 Uniform Acts discloses that there is a degree of such activity that does not trigger such concerns because of a limited nexus, particularly when the intermediary involved is already subject to "home" state regulation.

There must be sufficient in-state conduct to support application of the Blue Sky law to an intermediary. In First Providence Financial Group LLC v. Burke, n71 administrative sanctions against a broker-dealer registered in Connecticut for employing unregistered agents were overturned. The Connecticut Uniform Securities Act prohibits the employment of unregistered agents, and there was no issue in the case that the broker-dealer did in fact employ agents not registered in the state. However, the broker-dealer did not maintain any office in Connecticut, and all of the activities of unregistered agents that were the subject of the administrative action took place outside Connecticut. The Connecticut registration requirement applied to persons who transacted business as an agent in the state. Because the activities constituting a violation of the Blue Sky law did not occur in the state, the court found that the Connecticut securities commissioner had no jurisdiction to revoke the broker-dealer's registration.

It may well be that a broker-dealer registered in one state that engages in acts or conduct in another state that, if conducted in its home state, would violate the Blue Sky law may be ultimately subjected to administrative sanctions under qualitative fitness standards that govern the registration process. However, cases such as First Providence Financial Group make clear that the meaning of "transacting business" as a threshold determination is not left to subjective judgments.

For all intermediaries, "transacting business" within a state may often be a difficult threshold issue. Broker-dealer and investment adviser definitions speak only generally in terms of transacting business, or "engaging in the business of ..." for purposes of triggering regulatory jurisdiction. In Manns v. Skolnik, n72 the respondent was the spouse of a lawyer who represented a client in connection with closing a real estate transaction. When she became aware that the client had received funds from the transaction which she wished to invest, respondent informed the individual concerning a foreign investment opportunity, and thereafter talked to the individual concerning its prospects and the fact that other people had invested. The individual ultimately tendered funds to the respondent for the investment, and executed an agreement in connection that the Indiana Securities Commissioner concluded was a security. Respondent was not a licensed broker-dealer, and was administratively sanctioned by the securities Commissioner. She challenged the jurisdiction of the Commissioner both as to subject matter and the claim that she violated the Blue Sky law by not being licensed. The sanction, however, was upheld.

Manns was not engaged in business as a broker-dealer, but for purposes of applying the Indiana Blue Sky law, she was held to have transacted business as such. Affirming the Commissioner's order, the court observed:

[T]he commissioner found that before [the investor] went to the bank to deposit the $20,000, Manns told her about the Indonesian platinum transaction. Manns told [the investor] that she needed additional funds and additional investors, that the transaction would be profitable, and that she was trying to purchase samples of Indonesian platinum. As previously mentioned, the commissioner properly found the agreement to constitute a security.

Upon our review, we find that Manns' acts demonstrate an affirmative action to secure financing for the platinum transaction. Because the agreement constituted a security, we find that the evidence supports the commissioner's conclusion that Manns was trying to "effect the purchase" of a security for her own benefit and, therefore, that Manns offer and sale of the agreement violated the securities regulation.ⁿ⁷³

The notion of "transacting business" may fairly imply some degree of regularity in conduct or activities before state jurisdiction attaches. In Musson v. Rice,ⁿ⁷⁴ for example, an individual who sold three fractional interests in an oil well within a one week period was held not to be "engaged in the business of selling securities" for purposes of the Oklahoma Blue Sky law broker-dealer registration provisions. The Oklahoma Supreme Court opined that "engaged in the business" means the performance of acts which "occupy the time, attention and labor of persons for the purpose of livelihood, profit or pleasure." This definition, said the court, emphasizes a certain regularity of activity. The doing of a single act pertaining to one's particular business will not be considered as carrying on, transacting, or doing business within the contemplation of the statute. The court added:

We refuse to hold that the legislature, in drafting the words "engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities" would intend the seller in this case to fall within the definition of broker-dealer. The fractionalization and sale of a single $43,000 interest in oil and gas does not ipso facto make one a broker-dealer engaged in the business of securities; had the legislature so intended, issuers would not be exempt from registration.ⁿ⁷⁵

This does not mean that a single transaction, or closed-end set, should never trigger jurisdiction. The broad objectives of blue sky laws would no doubt permit a "transacting business" conclusion where necessary to prevent fraud. Nevertheless, the exercise of jurisdiction over isolated intermediary activity by persons who should not be fairly characterized as actually engaging in business as such is problematic. The reasonable implication for the exercise of any state jurisdiction under blue sky laws is that there is a need for protection in the circumstances presented.

Where an intermediary firm is registered in a particular state, there is a persistent sub-issue of state jurisdiction in regard to activities of associated persons, representatives or salespersons. All states requiring licensing of broker-dealers also impose licensing requirements for sales or associated persons who transact business in the state. Multi-state customer bases, and the mobility of investment clients generally, add a further important dimension to blue sky law compliance. Servicing a single customer in a state typically triggers regulatory requirements applicable to the individual representative without regard to the qualification of the firm itself. As with offers of securities generally, the challenge of compliance with licensing requirements at both the firm and salesperson level in a Cyberspace environment is even more daunting.ⁿ⁷⁶

State de minimis exclusions or exemptions applicable to investment advisers are not available to broker-dealers and their associated persons. In the conventional multi-state securities industry environment the exercise of state jurisdiction over what amounts to de minimis; activity by an associated person of a firm that is itself licensed in the state makes little sense. Thus, in NSMIA Congress specifically limited the authority of states to impose regulation on associated persons of otherwise licensed broker-dealers when the activity of those associated persons in the state meets certain de minimis standards. NSMIA also allocates federal and state regulatory roles in regard to investment advisers. The result today is Blue Sky law provisions that are substantially reflected in the 2002 Uniform Act provisions discussed earlier.

Foreign transactions present a new set of challenges to the regulation of intermediary activities under the notion of "transacting business," particularly as a result of worldwide access to intermediaries and investors through the Internet. The drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act recognized the increasingly transnational nature of securities brokerage, and by section 401(d) of the Act established rulemaking authority for state administrators to permit transactions by a Canadian or other foreign broker-dealer with a person from the foreign country who is a resident of the state, or with a person in the state who established a broker-customer relationship with the foreign intermediary while being temporarily or permanently resident in the foreign country.ⁿ⁷⁷ The 2002 Uniform Act would not permit activities generally by a Canadian or foreign intermediary, but rather is limited to interactions with foreign nationals residing in a particular state. The drafters also make clear that to give effect to any action taken by rule or order under section 401(d) there must be a transaction exemption that will enable securities transactions to take place in customer accounts involving the foreign intermediary.ⁿ⁷⁸

The 2002 Uniform Act provision is the first large scale undertaking specifically to accommodate an aspect of cross-border offerings of financial products and services in Blue Sky laws, and the reality of worldwide Internet access. The role of state Blue Sky laws is no longer defined in terms of "national" financial markets, but rather global markets and global intermediary activities, and the scope of investor protection authority will be defined in a new paradigm.

[3] Cyberspace Issues

Internet Offers. Offers of securities made over the Internet add another dimension in assessing the scope of state jurisdiction and investor protection authority under Blue Sky laws. A communication made on the Internet is directed generally to anyone who has access to the Internet without regard to state, or indeed national, borders. In the case of Internet offerings the issue will typically not be one of definition--the "offer" will be plainly communicated. Rather, the question is whether the Internet disseminated offer will be deemed to have been made in a particular state for purposes of Blue Sky law compliance and state administrators' enforcement authority. The same is true for determining whether an intermediary is transacting business in a state simply because a web page is accessible.

Internet offerings are, of course, demonstrably "national," and today NSMIA materially circumscribes state jurisdiction over offerings that are national in character. However, NSMIA also defines such offerings ("covered securities") in terms that preserve considerable freedom of action for state regulators. Small entrepreneurial issuers most likely to utilize the Internet in seeking to minimize costs in capital formation will rarely be offering "nationally traded securities" under NSMIA. Such issuers may, of course, attempt to structure their offering to meet "qualified purchaser" criteria under NSMIA, or to qualify the offering for an available exemption under the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ⁷⁹ But undertaking the latter NSMIA route to avoiding individual state registration and qualification procedures regarding an offering may itself involve state scrutiny of the manner of claiming the exemption,ⁿ⁸⁰ and also will not escape the antifraud enforcement and intermediary regulatory authority expressly preserved for the states by NSMIA.

As noted earlier, in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, section 610(e) addressing offers communicated via broadcast media also covers offers by means of any "other electronic communication" originating outside a state and received in the state. This provision can fairly be deemed to cover Internet disseminated communications, although its application to offerings simply posted on an issuer web site is unclear.ⁿ⁸¹ In those states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act regulators have primarily acted administratively to cement the position that an Internet communication designed to raise capital constitutes a general solicitation and an offer subject to their jurisdiction.

Pennsylvania first addressed the issue of Internet offers, approaching them with the assumption that an Internet communication originating outside the state has a nexus to persons within the state. Under this approach, an Internet offer is considered to be directed to every place that the offer could be viewed or downloaded, and thus, presumptively, directed to investors within the state for purposes of the Blue Sky law.

Implicit in any offer that is deemed to be subject to state jurisdiction, however, is the notion that it is a purposeful undertaking by the issuer or an intermediary in the state. Pennsylvania regulators recognized that Internet offers may not actually be intended to be offered in their state, and administratively promulgated the first form of a conditional exemption from registration and qualification for offerings made on the Internet.ⁿ⁸² The Pennsylvania exemption is conditioned upon: (1) the issuer representing that no offer or sale of securities in the state is intended; (2) that the issuer and any person acting on behalf of the issuer is not directing the offer to any person in the state; and (3) that no sales are made in the state as a result of the Internet offer. Notwithstanding the exemption from registration and qualification procedures, Pennsylvania expressly preserved its antifraud enforcement authority with respect to any Internet offer.

Other states followed the Pennsylvania lead in creating or interpreting administrative exemptions for Internet offers not intended to be offers in their state, and to enable issuers to comply by including relatively simple on-line exclusionary language. Ohio, for example, administratively adopted an exemption for Internet offers not specifically directed to any person in the state provided the offer "[i]ndicates, directly or indirectly, that securities are not being offered to any person in this state and the issuer does not otherwise attempt to sell securities in this state."ⁿ⁸³ That is accomplished quite simply, with the issuer either directly stating that residents of the state are not eligible to purchase securities being offered, or indirectly, by a stated limitation that the offer is directed only to persons elsewhere.

Other means of complying with "indication" requirements of Internet offer exemptions may also be available. PIN or password protected access, or other gateway mechanisms, that prevent residents of a state from viewing or downloading a prospectus or subscription agreement, for example, may well eliminate an inadvertent invitation to send subscription funds. The principal concern is prevention of responsive action, whether it be communicating an expression of interest to an issuer or intermediary or actually subscribing or sending funds, by residents who receive the Internet communication.ⁿ⁸⁴

To address blue sky issues associated with Internet offers more comprehensively and uniformly among the states, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA), in its 1996 "Resolution Regarding Securities Offered on the Internet," advocated two conditions to be imposed by states for exemption of Internet offers from registration and qualification provisions of Blue Sky laws. The NASAA Resolution prescribes these conditions:

- (1) The Internet Offer indicates, directly or indirectly, that the securities are not being offered to the residents of a particular state; and
- (2) An offer is not otherwise specifically directed to any person in a state by, or on behalf of the issuer of securities.ⁿ⁸⁵

The NASAA resolution further encourages states to take steps to allow sales of securities that were the subject of an Internet offer once there is compliance with applicable registration requirements or another exemption is available.ⁿ⁸⁶

Many states have by rules, administrative orders, or policy statements embraced, in whole or part, the NASAA Resolution.ⁿ⁸⁷ Others have adopted the Pennsylvania form of exemption which, although similar to the NASAA provision, differs in the treatment of a registration application made after an Internet offer.ⁿ⁸⁸ Whereas the NASAA form of exemption permits subsequent registration by an issuer without affecting the prior exemption for offers, the Pennsylvania approach conditions the Internet offer exemption on no sales being later made in the state as a result of it.

Other states deal with the issue informally, or in some cases by statute. Virginia, for example, has created a statutory exemption for: "Any offer that is communicated on the Internet, World Wide Web or similar proprietary or common carrier electronic system ..." provided there is compliance with administrative rules. By rule, the state imposes the following conditions: (1) The Internet offer is communicated by or on behalf of the issuer of the security; (2) The Internet offer indicates, directly or indirectly, that it is not directed specifically to the state; (3) An offer is not otherwise directed specifically to the state by or on behalf of the issuer; (4) Any order, offer to buy or subscription agreement received from a person in the state pursuant to the Internet offer is rejected; and (5) No sale pursuant to the Internet offer is made in the state without compliance with or another available exemption from registration provisions.ⁿ⁸⁹

While it is clear that states have approached activity in Cyberspace realistically, it is also clear that issuers and intermediaries must be keenly aware of the particular requirements of every state in which no offer is intended. With nearly all state policies on Internet offers now being based on either the NASAA or Pennsylvania exemption constructs, there is a degree of uniformity that permits confidence in approaching common compliance requirements such as the necessary indication or disclaimer in regard to securities not being offered to persons within a particular state.

Electronic screening, or "gateway" mechanisms, to prevent access to on-line offering materials by persons in states in which no offer is intended are demonstrably effective means of avoiding Blue Sky jurisdictional and compliance issues. The emergence of specialized service providers with software platforms for the facilitation of Internet offerings by issuers who might not otherwise attempt such on-line screening portends a much higher level of confidence in the offering process. Gateway programs utilizing advance registration, log-on and validation procedures for individuals wishing access to corporate listing areas or web sites allows for limiting any solicitation or viewing of an offering document to persons in states in which the offering has been approved or in which an exemption is applicable.ⁿ⁹⁰ Issuers can, of course, self-screen access to offering materials on their websites through questionnaire and password mechanisms.

The foregoing discussion addresses circumstances in which an actual offer is made via the Internet in one or more states in which Blue Sky law jurisdiction and compliance requirements are assumed to attach. It must be remembered, however, that "offer" is a broadly defined term, and that communications disseminated via the Internet may be determined by state regulators to constitute an attempt to dispose or facilitate the disposition of a security, subjecting the issuer and any intermediary acting on its behalf to the full scope of enforcement authority. An undertaking by an issuer, for example, to utilize an Internet communication or web page posting to "test the waters" for a possible offering would itself by definition amount to an offer, and unless limited or restricted in accordance with controlling law and policy among the states, would violate blue sky laws. All states may permit Internet offers, but the permissive policies, rules, or exemptions are conditional. Any Internet communication which by definition is an "offer" must meet the conditions to avoid state jurisdiction attaching.

Intermediary activities. Web-based activity by intermediaries presents its own set of issues under the "transacting" business" or "engaging in business" triggers for licensing or registration requirements in Blue Sky laws. The Internet has produced a proliferation of websites, "platforms" and "portals" operated by intermediaries and designed to facilitate communication and dealing. These are considered in detail in Chapter 12--Blue Sky Laws and the Internet. The critical point in understanding the scope of jurisdiction under Blue Sky laws in regard to websites that are universally accessible is that states have accepted gateway or "firewall" technology as the means of assuring that purposeful, direct, communication with prospective customers or clients in a state will not occur unless the intermediary is licensed or exempt from licensing requirements in that state.

Websites operated by financial intermediaries are limited to the dissemination of general information on products and services, and do not involve either effecting or attempting to effect transactions in securities, or the rendering of personalized investment advice. A NASAA Model Interpretive Order concerning intermediaries using the Internet sets the parameters by which the use of the Internet will not be deemed to be "transacting business" within a state for purposes of licensing requirements. There are two elements. First, the website must carry a legend that makes clear that the intermediary may only transact business in a state in which it is licensed (or has been excluded from licensing requirements), and that there can be no individualized follow-up by the intermediary without compliance with the Blue Sky law. Second, the website must include a mechanism designed to assure that prior to any direct communication or individualized follow-up the intermediary must be qualified in the state.ⁿ⁹¹

Because these are licensing issues, the states continue to exercise the primary regulatory and investor protection function in regard to Web-based activities of intermediaries.ⁿ⁹² By preserving state authority in regard to intermediary licensing and antifraud enforcement, NSMIA assured that states will play the essential role in policing cyberspace activities because the Internet, from an investor protection perspective is only an intermediary tool. Federal enforcement authority is no less important, and clearly the SEC authority to regulate Web-based activities in regard to the offer and sale of securities under registration and antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws is meaningful. Nevertheless, intermediary activity as such remains the frontline concern of state regulators, whose challenge is today one of global proportions as an international intermediary community reaches out to potential investors and customers via the Internet.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Constitutional aspects of state regulatory jurisdiction over transactions in financial products offered and sold by an out-of-state intermediary were considered in Life Partners, Inc. v. Miller, 420 F. Supp.2d 452 (E.D. Va. 2006) , in which application of the Virginia Viatical Settlements Act to the plaintiff viatical settlements provider was challenged. The plaintiff, a Texas company, negotiated a viatical settlement with a Virginia resident by telephone, and by sending several sales proposals to her. The agreement ultimately entered into provided, among other things, that the transaction was entered into in Texas and was to be governed by and subject to the rules and regulations of the Texas Insurance Code. The agreement was executed by the viator in Virginia and returned to Life Partners in Texas, where it was signed on behalf of the company. Subsequently, the Virginia Bureau of Insurance investigated the transaction, and ordered that Life Partners show cause why it did not become licensed in Virginia prior to effecting the viatical settlement transaction.

In Life Partner's suit for a declaratory judgment that the Virginia Insurance Bureau had no constitutional authority to regulate the transaction at issue, the company alleged that there were no sufficient ties to Virginia, and that the agreement made clear that it was entered into in Texas and would be governed under Texas regulatory authority. It argued that to permit Virginia regulatory authority to be exercised would violate the dormant Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The argument was rejected, however, because (1) Virginia had a legitimate state interest in protecting its citizens; and (2) there were sufficient minimum contacts with Virginia to warrant compliance with its regulatory scheme. The viator resided in Virginia, and never left the state during negotiations leading up to the viatical settlement agreement. She placed and received calls in Virginia. She received multiple settlement agreements sent to her in Virginia for her review, and she signed the final agreement in Virginia. The court thus concluded that the viatical settlement agreement was not the product of a purely Texas based transaction, and that Virginia has regulatory jurisdiction. The choice-of-law provision in the agreement was deemed to have no effect on the scope of Virginia regulatory authority. Beyond the contacts and interest approach to assessing the scope of regulatory authority the court also concluded that the Virginia law regulated transactions evenhandedly, did not discriminate against interstate providers, and had only incidental effects on interstate commerce.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Uniform Act § 401(j)(2) ("Offer" or "offer to sell" includes every attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value).

"A communication is an offer when its language can be expected to stimulate interest in the security and condition the public mind about the security." State v. American Microtel, Inc., [1993-1994 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,900, at 76,569 (Super. Ct. Ariz. 1994).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 414(a)-(e); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 801.

Among the states that have substantially adopted section 414(c) there are some subtle variations. Iowa, for example, provides that an offer directed into the state does not trigger application of the Act until the offer is actually received by the offeree in the state. Also, the provision in section 414(c) regarding delivery to a post office is eliminated, and in its place is a statement to the effect that for purposes of qualification of securities to be offered, "an offer to sell which is not directed to or received by the offeree in this state is not made in this state."

See also Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-702(b); California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25008(b), for further examples.

(n4)Footnote 4. Official Code Comment to Unif. Sec. Act §§ 414(a)-(f) (Section 414 "defines and delimits the application of the Act in interstate or international transactions with only some of their elements in the state").

(n5)Footnote 5. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 610.

(n6)Footnote 6. Id., Official Comment 1.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(a).

See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25008(a) applies when the offer to buy is accepted in the state. However, it need not be made there. If both purchaser and seller are domiciled in California the statute applies when the security is delivered to the purchaser in the state.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 414(a).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.814(a).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:30(I).

New Jersey: N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-51(a).

Some states have modified the Uniform Act provision by making all portions of the statute that concern sales or offers to sell applicable whenever the offer to sell is made in the state or whenever the offer to buy is made and accepted in the state.

See, e.g.:

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-702(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 4.04[2] infra.

(n9)Footnote 9. 954 F. Supp. 43 (D. Conn. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 10. The court's conclusion that personal jurisdiction was properly exercised in Cody did not rest on whether the defendant's on-line postings were alone sufficient. To the contrary, the court declined to decide whether such electronic messages themselves amounted to purposeful contact with Connecticut, since there were also direct telephone contacts with and personal e-mail messages to the plaintiff investor. However, the extent to which on-line or Internet posting activity generally can, or should, support the exercise of state securities regulatory jurisdiction is considered briefly in § 4.03[3], and in depth in Chapter 12, infra .

(n11)Footnote 11. 614 F. Supp. 651 (S.D. Ohio 1985) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Id., at 654 (emphasis added).

(n13)Footnote 13. 141 N.J. 412, 661 A.2d 1266 (1995) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See also Brown v. Investment Management and Research, Inc., [1995-1996 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep P 74,112 (S.C. 1996), in which personal jurisdiction under the South Carolina Blue Sky law was upheld against non-resident defendant sellers of securities on the basis of an agency relationship with persons within the state who in fact interacted directly with investors.

(n15)Footnote 15. Deutsche Bank Securities, Inc. v. Montana Board of Investments, 7 N.Y.3d 65, 818 N.Y.S.2d 164, 850 N.E.2d 1140 (2006) .

Cyberspace issues and challenges in the context of jurisdictional predicates for the application of Blue Sky laws are considered in more detail in § 4.03[3], infra.

(n16)Footnote 16. [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,609 (N.D. Ohio 1991).

(n17)Footnote 17. 591 So.2d 904 (Fla. 1991) .

(n18)Footnote 18. 658 F. Supp. 566 (N.D. Ill. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See also Green v. Weis, Voisin, Cannon, Inc., 479 F.2d 462 (7th Cir. 1973) (where all preliminary steps in connection with sale of unregistered corporate stock were taken in Illinois; confirmations and stock certificates were delivered in Illinois to Illinois residents, there were "sales" in Illinois that properly triggered the Illinois Securities Act, even though, underwriter's checks were forwarded to New York offices and deposited in New York bank account, and confirmations and stock certificates were issued from New York); Kries v. Mate's Investment Fund, Inc., 473 F.2d 1308 (8th Cir. 1973) (where private citizen in Missouri sent check to investment company in New York requesting that company sell him shares, and where company sent back confirmation of purchase to buyer in Missouri, both offer and acceptance occurred in Missouri and triggered application of Missouri Blue Sky law); Shapple v. State, 520 S.W.2d 766 (Tex. Crim. App. 1974) (criminal conviction under Texas Blue Sky law upheld: offer to sell securities made via telephone negotiations between appellant seller in Scottsdale, Arizona and buyer in Texas governed by Texas law, under which appellant was not a licensed dealer); Ah Moo v. AG Becker Paribas, Inc., 857 F.2d 615, 620 (9th Cir. 1988) (Hawaii's securities act applies if there was physical nexus between sale or offer to sell and state of Hawaii); Sullivan v. Metro Productions, Inc., 150 Ariz. 573, 724 P.2d 1242 (Ariz. App. 1986) , cert. denied sub nom., Miller v. Sullivan, 479 U.S. 1102, 107 S. Ct. 1334, 94 L. Ed. 2d 185 (1987) (promotion of videotape investment contract by California based defendants resulting in execution of contracts in Arizona upon advice of accountant induced by defendants to recruit investors in Arizona, and subsequent down payment in Arizona, amounted to sufficient contacts under Arizona Blue Sky law); Oil Resources, Inc. v. State of Fla. Dept. of Banking & Fin., Div. of Sec., 583 F. Supp. 1027, 1030 (S.D. Fla. 1984) , aff'd, 746 F.2d 814 (11th Cir. 1984) (Florida statute preventing sale of securities in or from offices in state to persons outside state did not violate Commerce Clause); In re Benjamin Cablevision Programming Inv., 114 Ill. 2d 150, 102 Ill. Dec. 296, 499 N.E.2d 1309 (Ill. 1986) (sale occurred in Illinois statute when defendant, a limited partnership established under laws of Illinois with principal place of business there, sold limited partnership interest to plaintiff pursuant to solicitations directed to him in California and plaintiff mailed subscription agreement and check to defendant in Chicago).

But see Jasper v. Zara, 595 So.2d 1075 (Fla. App. 1992) (New York-based financial planner not subject to Florida jurisdiction for telephone advice to Florida resident who called him in New York).

(n20)Footnote 20. 158 Ariz. 463, 763 P.2d 527 (Ariz. App. 1988) .

(n21)Footnote 21. Id., at 529 .

(n22)Footnote 22. See also In re Benjamin Cablevision Programming Inv., 114 Ill. 2d 150, 102 Ill. Dec. 296, 499 N.E.2d 1309 (Ill. 1986) (sale occurred under Illinois statute when defendant, a limited partnership established under laws of Illinois with principal place of business there, sold limited partnership interest to plaintiff pursuant to solicitations directed to him in California and plaintiff mailed subscription agreement and check to defendant in Chicago: court found defendant's execution of agreement and cashing of check in state could constitute acceptance of plaintiff's offer to purchase securities and created physical nexus to Illinois); In re Activision Sec. Litig., 621 F. Supp. 415 [1984-1985 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep.P 72,218, at 71,123 (N.D. Cal. 1995) (jurisdictional requirement met when offering emanated from California headquarters and acceptances were directed there); Martin v. Steubner, 485 F. Supp. 88 (D.C. Ohio 1979) , aff'd, 652 F.2d 652 (6th Cir. 1981) , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1148, 102 S. Ct. 1013, 71 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1982) (out-of-state seller's mailing of two letters and subscription agreement into Ohio for investor's signature constituted sale in Ohio); Enntex Oil & Gas Co. (of Nevada) v. State, 560 S.W.2d 494 (Texas Civ. App. 1977) ; Rio Grand Oil Co. v. State, 539 S.W.2d 917, 55 O.&G.R. 499 (Texas Civ. App. 1976) (Texas Securities Act applied to solicitation of offers to buy and to sales made by phone and by mail from Texas to out-of-state residents); State v. Hayes, 305 So.2d 819 (Fla. App. 1975) (Florida Blue Sky law applied to the offer and sale of securities by defendants from within Florida to out-of-state residents).

(n23)Footnote 23. 380 A.2d 969 (Del. 1977) , overruled on other grounds sub nom, Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., 457 A.2d 701 (Del. 1983) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Id., at 982 .

(n25)Footnote 25. Official Code Comment to Unif. Sec. Act §§ 414(a)-(f); see also Official Code Comment to Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 801. These provisions continue unchanged in section 610 of the 2002 Uniform Act.

(n26)Footnote 26. Id.

(n27)Footnote 27. Id.

The phrase "whether or not either party is then present in this state" also applies when the offeree is temporarily absent from the state. If A mails a written offer to sell to B in State Y, State Y's law would apply even if B is not then present in the state to receive the offer when it arrives.

Another problem that may arise is solved by the parenthetical phrase at the end of Section 414(c), which deems an offer to be made in the state when it arrives at a post office located in the state. If offeror A in State X mails the offer to offeree B in State Y while B is temporarily living in State Z, and the offer is then forwarded to B by the post office, it is the law of State Y, and not State Z, that will apply. This prevents entrapment of innocent persons who have no reason to believe that an offer will be forwarded into another state whose Blue Sky laws may not have been complied with.

(n28)Footnote 28. [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. P 71,869 (Okla. Dist. Ct. 1983).

(n29)Footnote 29. Id., (emphasis added); see also McCullough v. Leede Oil & Gas, Inc., 617 F. Supp. 384 (W.D. Okla. 1985) .

(n30)Footnote 30. [1991-1993 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,632 (S.D.N.Y. 1992).

See also Lintz v. Carey Manor, Ltd., 613 F. Supp. 543 (W.D. Va. 1985) ; Barnebey v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 715 F. Supp. 1512 (M.D. Fla. 1989) .

(n31)Footnote 31. Chrysler Capital Corp. v. Century Power Corp., 800 F. Supp. 1189 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) ("Chrysler II").

(n32)Footnote 32. Id., Chrysler II, 800 F. Supp. at 1192 .

(n33)Footnote 33. N. 51, supra.

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Allen v. Oakbrook Securities Corp., 763 So.2d 1099 (Fla. App. 1999) (Florida Blue Sky law not applicable to sales of securities that took place entirely in other states despite the fact that the securities consisted of stock in a company which as incorporated in Florida and had its principal place of business there); Cors v. Langham, 683 F. Supp. 1056 (E.D. Va. 1988) (Complaint did not state a claim under Maryland Blue Sky law when all acts complained of took place in Virginia); McCullough v. Leede Oil & Gas, Inc., 617 F. Supp. 384 (W.D. Okla. 1985) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See Arizona Corp. Comm'n v. Media Products, Inc., n.48, supra , and accompanying text.

(n36)Footnote 36. 273 Kan. 525, 2002 Kan. LEXIS 133, 44 P.3d 364 (Kan. 2002) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Id., 44 P.3d at 377.

The principle that an otherwise proper application of a Blue Sky law based upon activities having a nexus to the state cannot, as a matter of public policy, be avoided through private agreements is widely recognized. See Eisenbaum v. Western Energy Sources, Inc., 218 Cal. App. 3d 314, 267 Cal. Rptr. 5 , [1990-1991 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L.

Rep. P 73,246 at 74,580 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) (parties may not waive application of California law to transaction by private agreement); Hall v. Orange County, 758 F.2d 421, [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 71,929 at 70,341 (Cal. Ct. App. 1983) (same); Getter v. R.G. Dickinson & Co., 366 F. Supp. 559 (S.D. Iowa 1973) (stock purchase agreement provided New York law would apply; court held that the Iowa Securities Act applied to the sale); Boehnen v. Walston & Co., Inc., 358 F. Supp. 537 (D.S.D. 1973) (customer agreement provided for New York law to apply; court held that New York law does not govern and South Dakota law would apply if evidence at trial shows a solicitation in South Dakota). Whether a choice of law provision would be enforced has been viewed as a question of whether the plaintiffs waived the protection of the blue sky law that would apply to the transaction, in favor of the law specified in the choice of law provision of the agreement between the parties. Waiver as a defense to civil liability under Blue Sky laws is discussed in Chapter 15 infra.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Barnebey v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 715 F. Supp. 1512, 1533 (M.D. Fla. 1989) ; Simms Inv. Co. v. E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc., 699 F. Supp. 543, 545 (M.D.N.C. 1988) ; Lintz v. Carey Manor, Ltd., 613 F. Supp. 543 (W. D. Va. 1985) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(d). This provision has been substantially adopted in the following states:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25008(b) (provision deletes the portion of § 414(d) that requires acceptance not to have been previously communicated to the offeror, orally or in writing outside the state).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36-33(d).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 414(d).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.814(d).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:30 (IV).

New Jersey: N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-51(d).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-702(c) (Uniform Act provision has been modified; for scope of modification, see notation following the Iowa citation, supra).

Some states have adopted the language of the Revised Act, see, e.g.:

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13-B-54(D).

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-801(d).

(n40)Footnote 40. Official Code Comment, Unif. Sec. Act § 414(a)-(f); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 801 and Official Code Comment.

(n41)Footnote 41. Id.

(n42)Footnote 42. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(e). This provision has been substantially adopted in the following states:.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25008(c).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 414(e).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.814(e).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:30(v).

New Jersey: N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-51(e).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-702(d) (statute omits the provision regarding a newspaper or other publication that is published in the state but has had more than two-thirds of its circulation outside the state during the preceding twelve months).

(n43)Footnote 43. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 610(e).

(n44)Footnote 44. Id., § 610(e)(1)-(4).

(n45)Footnote 45. 652 F.2d 6th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 1148, 102 S. Ct. 1013, 71 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1982).

(n46)Footnote 46. See also Ledgebrook Corporation v. Lefkowitz, 77 Misc. 2d 867, 354 N.Y.S.2d 318 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974) . In Ledgebrook, New York's Martin Act was held to apply to an advertisement for the sale of out-of-state condominiums placed in the New York Times, New York Law Journal, and Herald Statesman (published in Yonkers, N.Y.) on thirty occasions. The ads, each with the disclaimer: "This does not constitute an offer where an offer may not legally be made," were deemed to be public offers' in New York for purposes of the New York law.

(n47)Footnote 47. On the other hand, if a publication is demonstrably disseminated entirely outside the state of origination, it is well to keep in mind that individual states may as a matter of policy or administrative regulation exempt it from coverage. California, for example, exempts any offer or sale of a security by or through a licensed broker-dealer to an out-of-state resident so long as the sale is not in violation of that purchaser's home state law. See Cal. Code of Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.2 (out of state sales and sales to broker-dealers).

(n48)Footnote 48. Official Code Comment, Unif. Sec. Act § 414(a)-(f).

(n49)Footnote 49. Another caveat is in order. Although an advertisement itself may not be an offer to sell securities within a state, the person placing the ad may still have to comply with the securities and broker-dealer registration requirements of a state in which the advertisement appears if, for example, one of the newspaper's readers responds to the ad by making an offer to purchase the securities and the seller communicates acceptance to the offeror in the offeror's home state. See Unif. Sec. Act § 414(a)(2).

(n50)Footnote 50. See Unif. Sec. Act § 414(e)(1).

(n51)Footnote 51. Some national newspapers and magazines are published in regional editions, with national ads and regional ads. How separate editions are treated for the purpose of section 414(e) of the Uniform Act is important in those states where the circulation of the regional edition outside the state is insufficient to exempt the ad from local regulation. In California, for example, "in the case of a newspaper or magazine which publishes a separate edition circulated in this State which does not carry the same advertising as that of other editions of the same publication, such separate edition shall be considered a separate newspaper or magazine from other editions of the same publication with respect to any advertisement which is not to be carried in all editions of the newspaper or magazine." Cal. Code of Regs. tit. 10, § 260.008; Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 801(f).

(n52)Footnote 52. 294 F. Supp. 298 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) , rev'd, 422 F.2d 1371 (2d Cir.1970) .

(n53)Footnote 53. See Rule 502(c), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(c).

(n54)Footnote 54. See Securities Act Rel. No. 33-6455 (Mar. 10, 1983); see also Alma Securities Corp., SEC No Action Letter, 1982 SEC No-Act LEXIS 2647 (Aug. 2, 1982); Oil and Gas Investor, SEC No Action Letter, 1983 SEC No-Act LEXIS 2788 (Sept. 9, 1983).

(n55)Footnote 55. Official Code Comment, Unif. Sec. Act § 414(a)-(f).

(n56)Footnote 56. 124 F. Supp.2d 452, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18684 (W.D. Ky. 2000) .

(n57)Footnote 57. Id., 124 F. Supp.2d at 458.

(n58)Footnote 58. Id.

(n59)Footnote 59. Id., at 459 .

(n60)Footnote 60. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.313.

(n61)Footnote 61. United States v. Schwartz, 464 F.2d 499, 506 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1009, 93 S. Ct. 443, 34 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1972) .

(n62)Footnote 62. 793 F. Supp. 796 (N.D. Ill. 1992) .

(n63)Footnote 63. Like all states requiring licensing of investment advisors, the former Wisconsin law provides: "[i]t is unlawful for any person to transact business in [Wisconsin] as an investment adviser unless so licensed or licensed as a broker-dealer ... " Wisconsin has since adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. Nothing in this provision has changed, however. See Wis. Stat. § 551.403(1).

(n64)Footnote 64. 793 F. Supp. at 806 .

(n65)Footnote 65. Unif. Sec. Act § 201; see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 201, 203; 2002 Unif. Sec. Act. §§ 401, 403.

(n66)Footnote 66. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(c).

(n67)Footnote 67. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(f); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 204 (establishing the criteria as an exemption from investment adviser licensing requirements rather than a definitional exclusion in the manner of the Uniform Act); 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 403(a).

(n68)Footnote 68. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(E)-(G).

(n69)Footnote 69. Id., § 402(b)(2).

(n70)Footnote 70. Id., §§ 403(b), 404(b).

(n71)Footnote 71. CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 74,243, 2001 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3287 (Conn. Super. Ct. 2001) .

(n72)Footnote 72. 666 N.E.2d 1236 (Ind. Ct. App. 1996) .

(n73)Footnote 73. 666 N.E.2d at 1247.

See also Kinsela v. Dept. of Finance, 117 Idaho 632, 790 P.2d 1388 (1990) . Defendant sought to avoid application of the Idaho blue sky law provisions governing investment advisers by claiming that in simply giving advice, rather than actually offering or selling securities, he did not transact business within the purview of intended regulation. The adviser relied on an administrative regulation defining "transacting business" as including only the sale of or contract to sell securities, which conflicted with the statutory definition of investment adviser. The Idaho Supreme Court dismissed the argument, and dismissed the notion that an administrative regulation could be read as overriding the statute.

(n74)Footnote 74. 1987 OK 66, 739 P.2d 1004 (Okla. 1987) .

(n75)Footnote 75. 739 P.2d at 1006 .

See also Heligman v. Otto, 161 Mich. App. 735, 411 N.W.2d 844 (Mich. Ct. App. 1987) , in which the court offered this additional assessment of the key notion:

We agree that in order for a person to be engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities or commodity contracts under the Uniform Securities Act, he must have performed such transactions often enough to demonstrate that they are in fact a part of his or her business. We do not believe that the Legislature intended to impose the registration requirements applicable to broker-dealers upon individuals who, as did Otto in this case, facilitate a single commodity contract without making any profit thereon and apparently without the intent of participating in such transactions in the future. 161 Mich. App. at 741 .

(n76)Footnote 76. The manner of controlling access to Internet offers is discussed briefly in § 4.03[3], infra , and in more detail in Chapter 12. The same technology also permits limiting interactions between investors and individual sales or associated persons of broker-dealer firms only to those states in which the person is registered. See, e.g., Investment Management & Research, Inc., No Action or Interpretive Letter, Illinois Securities Dept. (Sept. 25, 1996) (gateway designed to be exclusive means of accessing a web site would only permit access to individuals residing in states in which the representative is registered).

See also "Interpretive Order Concerning Certain Broker-Dealers, Their Agents and Investment Advisers Who Use the Internet for Information Distribution on Products and Services," Michigan Corporation, Securities and Land Development Bureau (Sept. 24, 1997) (legending Internet communications and requiring mechanisms to ensure that interactions between prospective customers do not trigger licensing requirements and involve only dissemination of information on products and services).

(n77)Footnote 77. The 2002 Uniform Act provision is aimed at particular situations in which (1) a citizen of a foreign country temporarily resides in the state and for whom there is a bona fide pre-existing customer relationship with the foreign intermediary; or (2) the foreign citizen resident in the state has a self-directed retirement investment account in the foreign county; or (3) an individual present in the state has a pre-existing broker-customer relationship that arose while that individual was temporarily or permanently resident in a foreign country. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 401(d)(A)-(C).

(n78)Footnote 78. Official Comment 8, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 401(d).

(n79)Footnote 79. "Covered securities" under NSMIA, and the dual roles of state and federal regulation in regard to registration and qualification of securities offerings generally are discussed in depth in Chapter 5--Securities Registration, infra.

(n80)Footnote 80. State regulators can be expected, for example, to scrutinize offeree qualifications or subscription limitations contained in an Internet communicated offer that are designed to secure exemptions relating to "accredited investors." The issue becomes one of disclosure, that is, whether actual qualifying criteria for accredited investor status are presented in the offer or subscription information so as to permit the determination to be made.

(n81)Footnote 81. The Revised Uniform Act language covering "electronic communications" is carried into the 2002 Uniform Act as section 610(e), and the Official Comment makes clear that references to electronic means of communication in the Act is coextensive with computer or other information technology. Official Comment, § 610, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act.

(n82)Footnote 82. 64 Pa. Code Regs. § 203.190 ("Certain Internet Offers Exempt").

(n83)Footnote 83. Ohio Admin. Code, Rule 1301:6-3-03 (D)(9). As with the Pennsylvania exemption, availability is also conditioned on no sales being made in the state as a result of the Internet offer unless registered or otherwise qualified for an exemption.

(n84)Footnote 84. See, e.g., In re Millennium Interactive Technologies Corp., Emergency Cease and Desist Order, No. 98 E 043 (Kansas Sec. Comm'r., Aug. 7, 1997) (an Internet offer limited to "qualified investors" only included information concerning how to obtain the prospectus, and led at least one Kansas resident to respond and request additional information concerning the investment).

See also In re The Gambler, Inc., Summary Order to Cease and Desist, No. 9612-09 (Pa. Sec. Comm., Jan. 15, 1997) (Internet offer of stock through an advertisement that did not directly or indirectly indicate that the securities were not being offered in Pennsylvania, coupled with telephone follow-up and facsimile transmission of documents in reply to an e-mail inquiry by a Pennsylvania resident).

(n85)Footnote 85. "Resolution Regarding Securities Offered on the Internet," CCH NASAA Reports P 7040 (Jan. 7, 1996).

(n86)Footnote 86. Id.

(n87)Footnote 87. Those states embracing the substance (with minor variations in some instances) of the NASAA Resolution by administrative orders or other formal statements include: Alabama, California, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

(n88)Footnote 88. States following the Pennsylvania example include: Alaska, Indiana, Maryland, South Dakota, Texas and Utah.

(n89)Footnote 89. 21 Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-110 (1997).

(n90)Footnote 90. See, Internet Capital Corporation, SEC No Action Letter (Available Dec. 24, 1997) (Website able to limit access to offering documents only to persons in states where approved); IPONET, SEC No Action Letter (Available July 26, 1996) (Qualification of accredited or other eligible investors utilizing a password protected web page).

(n91)Footnote 91. Interpretive Order Concerning Broker-Dealers, Investment Advisers, broker-Dealer Agents and Investment Adviser Representatives Using the Internet for General Dissemination of Information on Products and Services, CCH NASAA Reports P 2191 (Apr. 23, 1997). The NASAA Model Interpretive Order and approaches among the states are considered in detail in Chapter 12, infra.

(n92)Footnote 92. In regard to investment advisers, NSMIA established a dual scheme under which certain advisers, based on size criteria, are federal covered advisers subject to registration with the SEC, and only to "notice" filing requirements under state Blue Sky laws. However, investment adviser representatives, or agents, remain fully subject to licensing or registration requirements imposed by state laws, regardless of the status of the adviser itself as a federal covered adviser. The dual regulatory scheme applicable to investment advisers is discussed in Chapter 11, infra.

37 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.05

§ 4.05 State Jurisdiction Over Takeovers and Contests for Corporate Control

Following passage of the federal Williams Act (Sections 13 and 14 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934) in 1968, a large majority of states enacted laws regulating hostile takeover bids for corporations having prescribed jurisdictional ties to the state. Most commonly, the application of state takeover laws was predicated upon the corporation being incorporated in the state, or having its principal place of business or substantial assets there. The so-called "first generation" of state laws in this area was decidedly anti-takeover, imposing significant burdens on the process of unfriendly offers and interjecting state administrative authority, all in a manner that departed from the disclosure and timing provisions of the federal securities law provisions.ⁿ¹

From the outset, the extension of state jurisdiction by anti-takeover laws raised serious federal constitutional issues and questions of federal preemption. The Supreme Court first reached the merits of these issues in Edgar v. MITE Corp.,ⁿ² in which the court held the notice and hearing provisions of the Illinois Business Take-Over Act unconstitutional under the Commerce Clause. A plurality of Justices also found that the Illinois statute frustrated the objectives of federal law and should be invalidated by reason of federal preemption. The Illinois statute applied to every tender offer for a corporation of which ten percent of the shares were owned by persons located in the state, or which met two of three conditions: (1) organization under Illinois law, (2) principal executive office in Illinois, or (3) at least ten percent of stated capital and paid-in surplus represented in Illinois. The Supreme Court invalidated the statute since it overburdened interstate commerce in relation to local interests served, especially by allowing a state official to block a nationwide tender offer.ⁿ³

The decision in Mite sounded the death-knell for "first generation" state anti-takeover laws. In Hyde Park Partners, L.P. v. Connolly,ⁿ⁴ for example, the First Circuit, upheld a post-Mite preliminary injunction against the enforcement of the Massachusetts Take-Over Bid Regulation Act.ⁿ⁵ The Massachusetts statute required a prospective offeror to make an advance disclosure of intent to seek control of a target company prior to acquiring five percent of its stock. A penalty provision imposed a one year moratorium on making a takeover bid after failure to disclose control intent. The First Circuit agreed that enforcement of the provision violated the federal Commerce clause, and on application of a balancing test relative to local benefits. The court also concluded that the Massachusetts provision conflicted with the objectives of the federal Williams Act, despite the fact that a bidder could comply with both sets of requirements. According to the court, the provision intruded upon the careful balance struck by Congress between providing disclosure to investors and enabling tender offers by:

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.05

(1) depriving a purchaser intent on acquiring control of the right to increase its stake beyond 5% before disclosing the existence of such toehold by the end of ten days, and

(2) assisting incumbent management by giving more time to prepare defensive maneuvers.ⁿ⁶

Numerous federal and state cases with the same result followed, each striking down first generation anti-takeover laws on Commerce Clause and preemption grounds. States would not be permitted to extend their jurisdiction to interdict tender offers even if enforcement was sought solely as to offers to and purchases from residents of the state.ⁿ⁷

This does not mean, however, that state regulators may exercise no authority in regard to takeover bids. States may continue to impose filing and review requirements to the extent consistent with federal Williams Act processes and objectives, and which are not unduly burdensome to interstate commerce.ⁿ⁸ As a practical matter, however, the surviving vestiges of first generation state anti-takeover authority have little impact.

In the wake of Mite a new, second, generation of state laws emerged which have passed federal constitutional muster, and which provide a meaningful role for state law processes, if not administrative authority, in contests for corporate control. Second generation statutes fall under various descriptive titles. Most commonly they are referred to as "business combination," "interested shareholder," or "control share acquisition" laws. "Business combination" (or sometimes also titled "merger moratorium") statutes typically prohibit various forms of corporate transactions between a subject corporation and an "interested shareholder" for a specified period unless the transaction is approved by management; by shareholders under defined voting requirements; or in some cases unless fair price requirements are met. "Control share acquisition" laws control such transactions by mandating shareholder votes, but stripping voting rights from one who accumulates specified levels of shares of the company through means such as tender offers.ⁿ⁹ Their validity today is largely the result of the U.S. Supreme Court revisiting the subject of the proper scope of state authority in CTS Corp. v. Dynamics Corp. of America,ⁿ¹⁰ which upheld Indiana's "control share acquisition" statute.ⁿ¹¹

In CTS the Supreme Court upheld an Indiana law providing that an acquirer of more than twenty percent of shares of an issuer organized in Indiana may not vote those shares without first obtaining the approval of a majority of all disinterested shareholders. The court opined that the law did not conflict with the Williams Act or offend the Commerce Clause. The law did not discriminate against out-of-state offerors, was firmly rooted in state power to regulate voting rights in domestic corporations, and did not present a risk of inconsistent regulation among different states. Rather, said the court, it was a legitimate attempt to set conditions for acquisition of control of publicly traded companies incorporated in the state and to protect the voice of shareholders in the affairs of those companies.ⁿ¹² The scope of state authority was explained by the Supreme Court as follows:

Every State in this country has enacted laws regulating corporate governance. By prohibiting certain transactions, and regulating others, such laws necessarily affect certain aspects of interstate commerce. This necessarily is true with respect to corporations with shareholders in States other than the State of incorporation. Large corporations that are listed on national exchanges, or even regional exchanges, will have shareholders in many States and shares that are traded frequently. The markets that facilitate this national and international participation in ownership of corporations are essential for providing capital not only for new enterprises but also for established companies that need to expand their businesses. This beneficial free market system depends at its core upon the fact that a corporation--except in the rarest situations--is organized under, and governed by, the law of a single jurisdiction, traditionally the corporate law of the State of its incorporation.ⁿ¹³

The fact that the burden of state regulation falls on some interstate companies does not by itself establish a claim that it discriminates against or unacceptably interferes with interstate commerce. In the Supreme Court's view, any impact of the Indiana statute on interstate commerce was consistent with Indiana's legitimate interests in regulating its domestic corporations. The Court considered the statute to be non-discriminatory. It had the same effects on tender offers whether or not the offeror is a domiciliary or resident of Indiana. Further, the court noted, the statute pursued the legitimate objective of protecting the shareholders of Indiana corporations by affording them an opportunity, when a takeover offer is made, to decide collectively whether that change would be desirable--a power that may be especially beneficial where a hostile tender offer may coerce shareholders into tendering their shares. Finally, unlike the Illinois statute considered in MITE, the Indiana statute applied only to corporations that have a substantial number of shareholders in Indiana. As a result, every application of the statute would affect a substantial number of Indiana residents, whom Indiana has a legitimate interest in protecting.ⁿ¹⁴

Unlike the first generation state laws considered in Kidwell, MITE, and their progeny, Indiana's regulatory scheme did not involve any process of filing with or approval by the State. Instead, Indiana's statute relied on the processes of corporate suffrage. The Indiana law provides that:

(1) the acquirer of "control shares" in an Indiana corporation covered by the statute,ⁿ¹⁵ is not entitled to vote those shares unless the exercise of its voting privileges is approved by a majority of the issuer's shareholders;

(2) the shareholders' determination is made at the next regularly scheduled shareholders' meeting, or at a special meeting. The acquirer can require the issuer's management to convene such a special meeting within 50 days by filing an acquiring person's statement with the issuer and agreeing to pay the expenses of the meeting;

(3) if the shareholders do not vote to restore voting rights, the issuer may, but is not required to, redeem the control shares from the acquirer at fair market value;

(4) if the acquirer fails to file the acquiring person's statement with the issuer, the issuer may, if its by-laws or articles of incorporation provide, redeem the shares at any time after 60 days after the acquirer's last acquisition.ⁿ¹⁶

Some twenty-six states have enacted control share acquisition statutes.ⁿ¹⁷ Thirty-five have enacted some form of business combination statute, and a substantial number among them have both. There are other hybrid approaches as well. In the wake of CTS these various second generation state laws have been upheld against constitutional challenges. In WLR Foods, Inc. v. Tyson Foods, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁸ for example, the court upheld each of Virginia's second generation anti-takeover laws in the face of federal preemption and Commerce Clause attacks. The state, said the court, "[h]as a clear interest in regulating the relationships that affect the corporations that are located within its territory and are a product of its own laws."ⁿ¹⁹ The court held that the Virginia laws--which include both a control share acquisition law and a business combinations law--do not offend the Commerce Clause because they do not discriminate against interstate commerce and, to the extent there is a burden on interstate commerce, it is justified by the legitimate interest of the state in regulating its corporations.ⁿ²⁰

To be sure, the path to upholding second generation state laws has not been without twists and turns. Discriminatory statutes creating the risk of inconsistent regulation have fared no better in the post-CTS era than before. In Campeau Corp. v. Federated Department Stores, Inc.,ⁿ²¹ for example, the court struck down the Ohio "Foreign Business Acquisitions Act," which regulated acquisitions of Ohio corporations by certain statutorily defined foreign corporations. The statute required foreign businesses to file an "application for approval of an acquisition," but did not impose the same requirement on either similarly situated offerors incorporated in the United States or foreign offerors already having a substantial interest in Ohio. Similarly, in Tyson Foods, Inc. v. McReynolds,ⁿ²² the Sixth Circuit held Tennessee provisions aimed at takeovers by foreign corporations to be in violation of the Commerce Clause because, among other things, they represented direct regulation of foreign corporations and deterred nationwide tender offers. In addition, control share acquisition statutes have not escaped scrutiny. In Luxottica Group S.p.A v. United States Shoe Co. n23 the court held provisions of the Ohio control share acquisition statute which had the effect of disenfranchising certain shareholders to be unconstitutional where the process applied in determining which shares were eligible to vote meant that a tender offer could not be completed within the period prescribed by the federal Williams Act.n24

Scope of coverage issues will also arise. In Kaplan v. Booth Creek Ski Group, Inc., n25 the New Hampshire Supreme Court held that state's Security Takeover Disclosure Actn26 did not apply to a statutory merger. Unlike a tender offer in which shareholders are asked to tender their shares directly to an acquiring entity, in a statutory merger the board of directors of each corporation must adopt a plan of merger, which is then submitted for shareholder approval. Thereafter, the transaction is accomplished by a stock-for-stock exchange or payment of other specified consideration. In Kaplan the court determined that because in a statutory merger the acquiring company does not directly solicit tenders of securities, but rather enters into a negotiated plan of merger there is no need for protection afforded by the Takeover Disclosure Law. Instead, the issue, if any, is the fiduciary duty of the board of directors to the shareholders in negotiating the best transaction and approving the plan. Thus, said the court, applying the Takeover Act to such transactions would not further the Act's central purpose of protecting shareholders.

Such continuing assessments notwithstanding, the second generation state laws governing takeovers are now solidly a part of the regulatory landscape. The contours of state jurisdiction are today shaped by what the U.S. Supreme Court articulated as the states' legitimate interest "in defining the attributes of shares in its corporations and in protecting shareholders."n27 States may legislate for the governance of the corporations they create, and so long as their laws do not discriminate against out-of-state interests, and do not undermine operation of federal regulation of tender offers, those laws will stand.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Most of these statutes protected incumbent management in ways not contemplated by the Williams Act. Documents were usually required to be filed with the state and sent to the target anywhere from ten to sixty days preceding the offer, with disclosures that were frequently more detailed than those called for by the Williams Act. Commonly, the state required an administrative hearing on the bid before letting it proceed. Tender offers were, however, exempted by a number of states if the target's management recommended acceptance.

(n2)Footnote 2. 457 U.S. 624, 102 S. Ct. 2629, 73 L. Ed. 2d 269 (1982) .

The first significant constitutional challenge to state anti-takeover legislation was raised in Great Western United Corp. v. Kidwell, 577 F.2d 1256 (5th Cir. 1978) , rev'd for improper venue, 443 U.S. 173, 99 S. Ct. 2710, 61 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1979) , in which the Fifth Circuit held the Idaho anti-takeover law invalid under the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution, and as being preempted by the Williams Act. The U.S. Supreme Court reversed on procedural grounds and did not reach the constitutional and preemption issues. See Leroy v. Great Western United Corp., 443 U.S. 173, 99 S. Ct. 2710, 61 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1979) . In the wake of Kidwell courts split on the constitutional issues. See generally; 1 Lipton & Steinberger, Takeovers and Freezeouts § 5.02[2] (Law Journal Seminars-Press 1997).

(n3)Footnote 3. 457 U.S. at 643, 102 S. Ct. at 2641 .

(n4)Footnote 4. 839 F.2d 837 (1st Cir. 1988) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Mass. Ann. Laws Ch. 110C, §§ 1 through 13.

(n6)Footnote 6. But see Nomad Acquisition Corp. v. Damon Corp., 701 F. Supp. 10 (D. Mass. 1988) (Tender offeror failed to show irreparable harm from application by target company of the Massachusetts control share acquisition statute--a form of "second generation" anti-takeover law discussed further below).

(n7)Footnote 7. Martin Marietta Corp. v. Bendix Corp., 690 F.2d 558 (6th Cir. 1982) (enforcement of antifraud provisions of Michigan statute held unconstitutional even if applied only to prevent purchases by Michigan residents).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cardiff Acquisitions, Inc. v. Hatch, 751 F.2d 906 (8th Cir. 1984) (state officials may require disclosures in addition to those required by the Williams Act so long as they are purely factual and not judgmental in nature, are not inconsistent with the Williams Act, and do not unduly burden interstate commerce).

But see Batus, Inc. v. McKay, 684 F. Supp. 637 (D. Nev. 1988) (state law mandating completion of a tender offer within 60 days was preempted by the Williams Act).

(n9)Footnote 9. "Business combination" laws have on occasion been characterized as "third generation" state anti-takeover laws, see Amanda Acquisitions Corp. v. Universal Foods Corp., 877 F.2d 496 (7th Cir. 1989) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 481 U.S. 69, 107 S. Ct. 1637, 95 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1987) .

(n11)Footnote 11. Ind. Code § 23-1-42-1 et seq.

(n12)Footnote 12. 481 U.S. at 85-86 .

(n13)Footnote 13. 481 U.S. at 89-90 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Id., at 93-94 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Control shares are defined as shares acquired that would bring the acquirer's voting power to or above any of three thresholds: 20%, 33 1/3%, or 50%. Ind. Code 23-1-42-1. The statute applies to any corporation that has 100 or more shareholders, has its principal office or substantial assets in Indiana, and has either (1) more than 10% of its shareholders resident in Indiana, (2) more than 10% of its shares owned by Indiana residents, or (3) ten thousand shareholders resident in Indiana. Ind. Code 23-1-42-4(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Ind.Code § 23-1-42-1-23-1-42-11.

(n17)Footnote 17.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 10-2741-2743.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 33-840-845.

Delaware: 8 Del. Code Ann. § 203.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. Ch. 607.0902.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. §§ 14-2-111, 14-2-1131-1133.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1701-1710.

Illinois: 805 ILCS 5/7.85, 5/11.75 (2006).

Indiana: Ind. Code §§ 23-1-43-1-23-1-43-24.

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-12, 100-104.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 271B.12-200-271B.12-230.

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12:132-134.

Maine: 13A Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 611-A.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann., Corps. & Ass'ns § 3-701-709.

Massachusetts: Mass. Ann. Laws, Ch. 110C, §§ 1 through 13.

Michigan: Michigan Comp. Laws §§ 450.1775-1784.

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 302A.673.

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 79-25-1-9.

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 351.459.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 21-2431-2453.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 78.411-444.

New Jersey: N.J. Rev. Stat. §§ 14A:10A-1-10A6.

New York: N.Y. Bus. Corp. L. § 912.

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 55-9-01-05.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code §§ 1701.831-.832.

Oklahoma: 18 Okla. Stat. § 1090.3.

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. §§ 60.825-.971.

Pennsylvania: 15 Pa. Cons. Stat. §§ 2551-2556.

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. §§ 7-5.2-1-8.

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. §§ 35-2-101-226.

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws §§ 47-33-1 through 47-33-19.

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 48-35-201-209.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. §§ 13.1-725-727.1.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code §§ 23B.19.010-.050.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. §§ 180.1130-1150.

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. §§ 17-18-101-403.

(n18)Footnote 18. 65 F.3d 1172 (4th Cir. 1995) .

(n19)Footnote 19. Id., at 1182 .

See also Amanda Acquisition Corp. v. Universal Foods Corp., 877 F.2d 496 (7th Cir.) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 955, 110 S. Ct. 367, 107 L. Ed. 2d 353 (1989) (Wisconsin business combination statute upheld).

(n20)Footnote 20. See also BNS, Inc. v. Koppers Co., 683 F. Supp. 458 (D.Del. 1988) (upholding Delaware business combination law); RP Acquisitions Corp. v. Staley Continental, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 476 (D. Del. 1988) .

(n21)Footnote 21. 679 F. Supp. 735 (S.D. Ohio 1988) .

(n22)Footnote 22. 700 F. Supp. 906 (M.D. Tenn. 1988) , aff'd, 865 F.2d 99 (6th Cir. 1989) .

(n23)Footnote 23. 919 F. Supp. 1085 (S.D. Ohio 1995) .

(n24)Footnote 24. But see United Dominion Industries, Inc. v. Commercial Intertech Corp., 943 F. Supp. 857 (S.D. Ohio 1996) (Ohio statute upheld where process associated with "interested share" determinations could be accomplished within time frame mandated by the Williams Act).

(n25)Footnote 25. 147 N.H. 202, 785 A.2d 412, 2001 N.H. LEXIS 199 (N.H. 2001) .

(n26)Footnote 26. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. ch. 421-A.

(n27)Footnote 27. CTS Corp. v. Dynamics Corp. of America, supra, 481 U.S. at 94.

38 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 4 State Investor Protection Authority

1-4 Blue Sky Regulation § 4.06

§ 4.06 Challenges of Functional Regulation

Spawned by the stock market crash of 1929 and the ensuing Great Depression, New Deal-Era legislative initiatives in fairly short order produced the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the Banking Act of 1933, the latter being better known as the Glass-Steagall Act.ⁿ¹ The Glass-Steagall Act mandated separation of commercial banking from investment banking, and confined banks to business activities that were scrutinized and regulated by designated banking authorities. At the same time, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) was established to regulate securities distributions, trading markets and other aspects of securities transactions by issuers and intermediaries. Later, in 1945, Congress passed the McCarran-Ferguson Act,ⁿ² which provided for state regulatory authority over the insurance industry. Overall, the federal legislative approach to regulation of financial institutions and intermediaries was based on the separate and distinct activities of each of these segments of the financial services industry--banking, insurance and securities--and the desire to place each segment under the authority of regulators having specialized expertise.

The Depression-Era regulatory scheme was based on the distinct separation of activities within what steadily evolved in later decades as a true financial services industry. The 1930's bright lines between banking, securities and insurance activities were increasingly blurred. As financial institutions were driven by competition and a relaxing regulatory environment, banks offered securities brokerage and other investment-related services through "Section 20" subsidiaries,ⁿ³ broker-dealers created money-market funds into which they could sweep accounts, take deposits and allow check-writing, and insurance companies offered variable annuity products with investment features akin to and directly competitive with mutual funds. In time, the concept of "functional" regulation fully emerged, by which particular segments of business activity within a single institution became subject to regulation by the subject matter, or functional, expert in regard to that business segment.

The evolution of functional regulation was not without some resistance. In the insurance industry, for example, the scope of authority of securities regulators over variable annuity insurance products was ultimately determined in the United States Supreme Court. In SEC v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co. of America (VALIC),ⁿ⁴ the Supreme Court held that variable annuities, in which all investment risk fell on the purchaser, are not "insurance," and are subject to regulation as securities. Subsequently, in SEC v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co.,ⁿ⁵ the Supreme Court held that so-called "flexible fund" annuities, which were structured to include an increased level of risk to the company in order to address the holding in VALIC, were also securities and subject to regulation as such.ⁿ⁶ Similarly, for thrift institutions, the Supreme Court determined in 1967 that "withdrawable capital shares" issued by a savings and loan institution were securities for purposes of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws.ⁿ⁷

Throughout the evolutionary process in which functional regulation came into its own, state securities regulators maintained their historic focus on the licensing of investment professionals, registration of securities offerings, and vigorous enforcement. The melding of securities, banking and insurance products and services, however, progressively changed the landscape of the financial services marketplace. With the enactment of the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999 (GLBA)ⁿ⁸ the change was fully consummated. GLBA, among other things, repealed key provisions of the Glass-Steagall Act, and ushered in major changes in the businesses that financial organizations are permitted to conduct, how they may conduct them, and how they are regulated. GLBA permitted the affiliation of banks with securities firms and insurance companies, and significantly reduced the restrictions on the activities conducted by those entities. Bank affiliates, for example, are no longer prohibited from engaging in the full range of securities activities, including organizing, sponsoring, and distributing mutual funds.

GLBA established functional regulation as the norm in the new financial services marketplace. Thus, bank regulators continue to regulate banking activities, securities regulators continue to regulate securities activities, and state insurance regulators continue to regulate insurance activities. GLBA required for the first time, however, that the separate functional regulators undertake to coordinate examinations, engage in information-sharing, and consult with each other prior to promulgating regulations that would apply across business lines. To effectuate functional regulation GLBA also removed the prior exemption of banks from the definitions of "broker" or "dealer" under the federal securities laws,ⁿ⁹ and provided for the creation of functionally regulated subsidiaries, specifically including a broker-dealer, investment adviser, investment company, or an insurance agency or company. In doing so, it supports the conduct of brokerage activities by banks through "Third Party Brokerage Arrangements" under which a bank may have a contractual relationship with a registered broker-dealer for providing securities brokerage and related services.

The role of state securities regulation in the new financial services environment is unchanged and, indeed, is firmly fixed after GLBA as a matter of functional regulation. State securities commissions continue to have regulatory authority over sales practices and licensing of intermediaries. Nevertheless, the new challenge for state regulators in functional regulation is also clearly apparent, as Blue Sky laws must now be administered and enforced in cooperation with banking and insurance counterparts. State regulators have thus entered into new information-sharing agreements with other functional regulators,ⁿ¹⁰ and are more focused on consistency and uniformity. In that regard, section 608 of the 2002 Uniform Act sets the stage:

Objective of uniformity. The administrator shall, in its discretion, cooperate, coordinate, consult, and, subject to Section 607, share records and information with the securities regulator of another State, Canada, a Canadian province or territory, a foreign jurisdiction, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the United States Department of Justice, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, a self-regulatory organization, a national or international organization of securities regulators, a federal or state banking and insurance regulator, and a government law enforcement agency to effectuate greater uniformity in securities matters among the federal government, self-regulatory organizations, States, and foreign governments.ⁿ¹¹

The challenge for Blue Sky administrators in functional regulation is largely one of communication and cooperation. As discussed more fully elsewhere in this Treatise,ⁿ¹² state securities regulators increasingly demonstrate the view that the scope of investor protection under Blue Sky laws encompasses the integrity of national markets for securities that are sold locally, and the conduct of intermediaries in those markets that impacts public investors. There have been remarkable examples of cooperative enforcement initiatives--best illustrated by the 2002 formal inquiry into market practices concerning research analysts jointly conducted by the SEC, self-regulatory organizations, the New York Attorney General, NASAA and a number of states. The challenge in functional regulation after GLBA, however, is more subtle. Regulatory efficiency is at stake. Regulatory objectives must mesh, such that, for example, regulation for investor protection is not inconsistent with prudential regulation of an umbrella financial institution.

While the distinct role of Blue Sky regulation is unchanged in the post-GLBA functional regulation era, the scope of state investor protection authority is a matter for continuous redefinition. It will also be the subject of continuing tension. A significant number of states, for example, do not provide for functional regulation by securities commissioners of intermediaries selling variable annuity products despite the fact that they have long been determined to be "securities"ⁿ¹³ under the federal securities laws. On the other hand, insurance and securities regulators have worked together in many states to coordinate the regulation of viatical settlement contracts. Additionally, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and NASAA have jointly established an Enforcement Coordination Subgroup in order to increase communication and cooperation between state insurance and securities regulators in areas of regulatory overlap. Functional regulation today is a dynamic process in which the scope of regulatory authority is molded to permit the most efficient achievement of objectives in a multi-jurisdictional setting.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Banking Act of 1933, Pub. L. No. 33-66, 48 Stat. 162 (1933) (codified in scattered sections of 12 U.S.C.).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 1012, et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Section 4(c)(8) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1843(c)(8), permitted bank holding companies to invest in and control any company the activities of which the Federal Reserve Board determined to be "so closely related to banking [or to managing or controlling banks] as to be a proper incident thereto." Through an interpretation of section 4(c)(8) and section 20 of the Glass-Steagall Act, the Federal Reserve permitted bank holding companies to engage in securities activities through so-called "Section 20" subsidiaries.

(n4)Footnote 4. 359 U.S. 65, 79 S.Ct. 618, 3 L.Ed. 2d 640 (1959) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 387 U.S. 202, 87 S.Ct. 1557, 18 L.Ed. 2d 673 (1967) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See also NationsBank of North Carolina, N.A. v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., Inc., 513 U.S. 251, 115 S. Ct. 810, 130 L. Ed. 2d 740 (1995) , in which the Supreme Court upheld a ruling of the Comptroller of the Currency that interpreted certain provisions of the National Bank Act as prohibiting banks from selling insurance to classify variable annuities as investments rather than insurance.

(n7)Footnote 7. Tcherepnin v. Knight, 389 U.S. 332, 88 S. Ct. 548, 19 L. Ed. 2d 564 (1967) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Pub. L. 106-102, 113 Stat. 134 (Nov. 12, 1999).

(n9)Footnote 9. To effectuate this change at the state level, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act likewise eliminates the exclusion contained in both the Uniform and Revised Uniform Acts from the definition of broker-dealer for a bank, savings institution or trust company. Although certain exclusions based on they type or extent of securities activity are allowed in conformity with GLBA, under the 2002 Uniform Act banks, savings institutions, and other depository institutions are be required to register under section 401 and generally, like all other broker dealers, to be subject to regulatory and liability provisions of the Act.

(n10)Footnote 10. See NASAA Vision Statement, "The New Economy and State Securities Regulation," CCH NASAA Reports, P 19,005 (Sept. 19, 2000).

(n11)Footnote 11. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 608(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Chapter 14, "Administration and Enforcement."

(n13)Footnote 13. The tension on this particular matter of Blue Sky law coverage is such that the 2002 Uniform Act incorporates optional language for those state that wish variable insurance products to be included in the definition of security, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102 (28)(B).

39 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation 5.syn

§ 5.syn Synopsis to Chapter 5: Securities Registration

§ 5.01 In General

[1] Introduction

[2] Registration Requirements

[3] Notice Filing

§ 5.02 Types of Registration

[1] Registration by Notification

[2] Registration by Coordination

[3] Registration by Qualification

[4] Other Types of Registration

[a] Registration by "Filing"

[b] Registration by "Description"

[c] Registration by "Announcement"

[d] Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR)

[e] Registration in New York: The Martin Act

[f] Multijurisdictional Disclosure System Offerings

§ 5.03 The Registration and Offering Process

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation 5.syn

[1] Who Must Register

[2] Qualification to Do Business

[3] Documents to Be Filed

[a] The Prospectus

[b] Consent to Service of Process

[c] Surety Bonds

[d] Registration Forms

[e] Financial Statements

[4] Conditions of Registration

[5] Effective Date of Registration

[6] Period of Registration

[7] Filing Fees

[8] Advertising Requirements and Restrictions

§ 5.04 Registration of Non-Issuer Transactions

[1] Generally

[2] Particular Requirements

§ 5.05 Withdrawal or Abandonment of Registration

§ 5.06 Post Effective Filing Requirements and Amendments

[1] Reporting Requirements

[2] Amendments

§ 5.07 Administrative Authority

[1] Denial, Suspension and Revocation of Registration

[a] Standards--Generally

[b] Particular Standards

[2] NSMIA "Use" Preemption: Offering Documents

[3] Review of Denial, Suspension, or Revocation of Registration

§ 5.08 Uniformity, cooperation and coordination

40 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.01

§ 5.01 In General

[1] Introduction

For more than sixty years the process of creating securities and their distribution into the hands of the investing public was carried out under a system of dual federal and state regulation. From the outset, however, the philosophical underpinnings and the approach of state and federal securities laws fundamentally differed. State Blue Sky laws were the product of early 20th Century Populism, and, with pure paternalistic motives, were enacted to prevent investors from losing their assets in fraudulent or highly speculative schemes and "to afford those who risk their capital at least a fair chance of realizing their objectives in legitimate ventures."¹

The notion of merit regulation of the distribution of securities became central in state securities regulation. Registration and "qualification" processes under most Blue Sky laws were designed to position a regulatory authority between issuers and potential investors for the purpose of determining essential fairness and, fundamentally, to make a determination whether citizens should be permitted even to consider the offering. For the most part, Blue Sky law registration requirements were thus aimed at creating information for submission to and review by regulators, and only secondarily focused on the dissemination of information to potential purchasers.²

In contrast, the registration mechanisms of the federal securities laws, all of which spring from Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933,³ are "disclosure" oriented; that is, they prescribe the creation and dissemination of structured information to potential investors in the distribution process. Congress eschewed the paternalistic philosophy of Blue Sky regulation in favor of a system in which the central feature is a "registration" statement comprised primarily of the prospectus, a structured disclosure document that is reviewed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, but for the manner and completeness of its disclosure content rather than substantive fairness or merit of the offering. As a reviewing authority, the SEC is concerned with the adequacy and accuracy of information contained in the issuer's registration statement, of which the main part is the prospectus that will be distributed to prospective and actual purchasers of the covered securities. Although the SEC may, under the mantle of full disclosure, impose requirements intended to illuminate substantive aspects of an offering in a manner that suggests fairness concerns or heightens attention on particular risks, under the federal regulatory scheme, the SEC does not purport to judge the merit or worth of the offered securities.

Meaningful attempts were made to meld federal and state regulatory schemes relating to registration of securities offerings that are national in character. For example, states adopted provisions for registration by "coordination," when the offering also involved the issuer filing a registration statement with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933. Registration by this method avoids duplication in submissions between federal and state agencies, and streamlines the reviewing process at the state level. Many states also adopted outright exemptions from Blue Sky registration and qualification requirements for securities listed or approved for listing on principal national securities exchanges and the National Market System tier of the Nasdaq Stock Market. Despite these efforts, the dual regulation of securities offerings in a national market setting was seen as raising the cost of capital for issuers without any apparent corresponding incremental benefit in the protection of investors. Duplicative regulation in the registration process was challenged as costly, and the validity of merit regulation itself was questioned. These concerns were ultimately addressed with enactment of The National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA"),ⁿ⁴ which realigned state and federal roles in regard to registration requirements, and reallocated regulatory responsibility between state and federal authorities based upon the nature of a securities offering.

NSMIA fundamentally altered the role of Blue Sky regulation by eliminating most state registration and qualification requirements for offerings that are: (a) national in character; or (b) for which a uniform national policy or rule for an exemption is appropriate.⁵ By creating classes of "covered securities,"ⁿ⁵ federal law now restricts state regulatory authority principally to the context of smaller regional, and intrastate offerings, but preserves broad enforcement authority with respect to fraud or deceit, and to unlawful conduct of broker-dealers.

Most states base their registration requirements on the original Uniform Securities Act, and, after NSMIA, on the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which has been adopted in several states and is under active consideration in others.ⁿ⁶ⁿ⁷ The 2002 Uniform Act was drafted to fully reflect NSMIA. Blue Sky laws in states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act have been amended to deal with basic NSMIA preemption, although in most instances there remain provisions that no longer have relevance after NSMIA. Nevertheless, there remains in every state some provision for registration, if not qualification, of securities offerings. Registration under Blue Sky laws remains an essential consideration for "intrastate" offerings exempted from federal registration requirements, and for offerings carried out pursuant to Rules 504 and 505 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, neither of which involve NSMIA covered securities.ⁿ⁸ More broadly, real estate programs, equipment leasing programs, oil and gas offerings, and other partnership and non-corporate offerings, as well as corporate offerings in a variety of non-exempt settings that do not involve NSMIA "covered" securities continue to be subject to registration and qualification requirements, including merit review in those states that apply it.

[2] Registration Requirements

Section 301 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act prescribes the baseline, post-NSMIA registration requirement that is part of all state securities laws. Section 301 provides in pertinent part:

It is unlawful for a person to offer or sell a security in this State unless:

- (1) the security is a federal covered security;
- (2) the security, transaction, or offer is exempted from registration under Sections 201 through 203; or
- (3) the security is registered under this [Act].ⁿ⁹

"Sale" under the 2002 Uniform Act is broadly defined to include every disposition of a security or interest in a security for value, and every attempt to offer or dispose of, to solicit an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value.ⁿ¹⁰ Whether "offer" and "sale" are defined together or separately, the breadth of their definition is no different among all state securities laws. The registration requirement is triggered by any attempt to dispose, or solicitation of an offer to buy, for value, of a security for which no exemption is available.ⁿ¹¹ As presented in the State Guides, some states make specific provision for "testing the waters,"ⁿ¹² or permit other pre-filing activity that would otherwise trigger registration requirements. However, there is no uniformity among the states in making such allowances.

[3] Notice Filing

Where "covered" securities are involved in an offering, NSMIA precludes state registration and qualification requirements. However, NSMIA expressly permits state to require "notice" filings, and, to the extent that the covered securities are not listed securities, to assess filing fees.ⁿ¹³ The permitted notice filing may include the requirement to file any document filed with the SEC, as well as to file annual or periodic reports of the value of securities sold or offered for sale in the state. Section 302 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act carries this authority into operation as follows:

(a) [Required filing of records.] With respect to a federal covered security, as defined in Section 18(b)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933..., that is not otherwise exempt under Sections 201 through 203, a rule adopted or order issued under the [Act] may require the filing of any or all of the following records:

(1) before the initial offer of a federal covered security in this State, all records that are part of a federal registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Securities Act of 1933 and a consent to service of process ... signed by the issuer and the payment of a fee of $[];

(2) after the initial offer of the federal covered security in this State, all records that are part of an amendment to a federal registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Securities Act of 1933; and

(3) to the extent necessary or appropriate to compute fees, a report of the value of the federal covered securities sold or offered to persons present in this State, if the sales data are not included in records filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and payment of a fee of $[].ⁿ¹⁴

The 2002 Uniform Act permits state administrators to issue "stop orders" suspending an offering in the event there is a failure to comply with the notice filing or fee requirements. The stop order authority relating to non-payment of notice filing fees, however, does not extend to offerings involving listed securities.ⁿ¹⁵

States adopting the 2002 Uniform Act have for the most part adopted section 302 verbatim, although in most cases adding a provision for waiver of the requirements by rule or an order issued by the administrator.ⁿ¹⁶ Notice filing provisions in other states vary somewhat as to form and mechanics. In all cases, however, as specifically permitted under NSMIA, state administrators may issue stop orders or suspend the offering of covered securities when notice filing requirements are not satisfied.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 1 Silver Hills Country Club v. Sobieski, 55 Cal. 2d 811, 815, 13 Cal. Rptr. 186, 361 P.2d 906 (1961); see also People v. Baumgart, 218 Cal. App. 3d 1207, 267 Cal. Rptr. 534 (Ct. App. 1990) (main object of securities law is to protect public against imposition of unsubstantial, unlawful, and fraudulent stock and investment schemes and to promote full disclosure of all information necessary to make informed and intelligent investment decisions); Crater v. International Resources, Inc., 92 Ohio App. 3d 18, 633 N.E.2d 1212 (Ohio Ct. App. 1993) (purpose of registration statute is to protect public "from its own stupidity, gullibility and avariciousness"); Grand Prairie Sav. & Loan Assoc.

v. Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A., 298 Ark. 542, 769 S.W.2d 20 (Ark. 1989) (purpose of state act is remedial and intended to prevent fraudulent practices and activities from becoming a burden on unsophisticated investors and the general public).

(n2)Footnote 2. The philosophy of merit regulation, and its implications in practice, is considered specifically in Chapter 6 of this Treatise. As discussed further there, even before the major federalism adjustments that have now curtailed the role of merit regulation, merit regulation was not universally applied among the states.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77e (2000).

(n4)Footnote 4. P.L. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996). NSMIA replaced, in its entirety, Section 18 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r (2000). NSMIA is introduced in § 1.02[4], supra, and its impact on various aspects of state securities regulation is addressed throughout this Treatise, see, e.g., § 4.02 ("The Impact of NSMIA on State Authority").

(n5)Footnote 5. NSMIA defines four categories of covered securities:

(1) Nationally Traded Securities. These securities comprise those listed or authorized for listing on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, or which are listed or will upon completion of the offering be listed for trading in the National Market System tier of the Nasdaq Stock Market, or any national securities exchange designated by the SEC as having listing standards substantially similar to the named markets.

(2) Securities issued by an investment company registered or filing for registration under the Investment Company Act of 1940. There is exclusive federal jurisdiction with regard to investment company securities.

(3) Securities sold to "Qualified Purchasers." Any security will be a covered security for purposes of the preemption of state regulation if it is offered and sold to persons who are defined by the SEC to be "qualified purchasers." NSMIA itself prescribes no criteria for defining the class of persons who will be deemed qualified. It does, however, expressly permit the SEC to classify buyers by reference to types of securities being offered, "consistent with the public interest and the protection of investors." Acting under that authority, the Commission has proposed a rule that would confer qualified purchaser status on any "accredited investor" as that term is defined in Rule 501(a) under the Securities Act. The list of accredited investors in Rule 501(a) includes individuals meeting certain net worth or income levels.

(4) Securities involved in transactions exempt under certain federal Securities Act provisions. NSMIA extends the "covered security" umbrella over a broad range of exempt securities or transactions under Sections 3 and 4 of the Securities Act of 1933. With the exception of Securities Act section 3(a)(4) (eleemosynary issuer), section 3(a)(10) (securities issued in exchange transactions pursuant to judicially or administrative fairness proceedings), section 3(a)(11) (intrastate offerings), and municipal securities offered and sold in the state in which the issuer is located, all other securities exempt under section 3(a) of the Securities Act are covered securities.

(n6)Footnote 6. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act is discussed throughout this Treatise. It has been adopted in Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, U.S. Virgin Islands, Vermont and Wisconsin.

(n7)Footnote 7. The full text of the original Uniform Act, the Revised Uniform Act, and the 2002 Uniform Act, is reprinted in Volume 2, at page UA-1 et seq. infra.

(n8)Footnote 8. Rule 504, 17 C.F.R § 230.504, provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for limited offers and sales of securities not exceeding $1,000,000. There are general conditions to be met under Regulation D. However, a compliant Rule 504 offering does not involve NSMIA "covered" securities, and thus remains fully subject to state registration and qualification requirements. This is also the case with offerings carried out in compliance with Rule 505 of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.505, which provides an exemption from federal registration for offerings up to $5,000,000 to an unlimited number of accredited investors and up to 35 other persons who meet certain sophistication or wealth standards. Through widespread adoption of the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption, most states accommodate Rule 505 offerings with an exemption from state requirements as well when ULOE criteria are met.

Securities offered and sold pursuant to Rule 506 of Regulation D, 17 C.F.R. § 230.506, are NSMIA covered securities, Rule 506 provides a federal exemption for offers and sales of securities without regard to the dollar amount of the offering, provided the general conditions of Regulation D are satisfied and specific conditions of Rule 506 dealing with the number and nature of purchasers are also met. States have nevertheless asserted authority to determine the validity of the federal Rule 506 exemption in order to determine whether NSMIA covered securities are in fact involved in an offering that would otherwise be subject to state requirements for registration or an available exemption. See Rapp & Berckmueller, "Testing the Limits of NSMIA Preemption: State Authority to Determine the Validity of Covered Securities and to Regulate Disclosure," 63 Bus. Lawyer 809 (May 2008).

(n9)Footnote 9. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 301.

(n10)Footnote 10. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(26).

(n11)Footnote 11. The meaning of "offer" and "sale" of securities in the application of Blue Sky laws is considered in detail in Chapter 3, supra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Alaska, 3 AAC § 08.087; Virginia, 21 VAC 5-40-70. In most instances these provisions permit solicitations of interest before the filing of a registration statement to the extent that an issuer may make an "offer," but not a sale, for the sole purpose of receiving a prospectus if certain conditions are met. Conditions on "testing the waters" focus on the nature of the issuer involved, the proper qualification of agents making the solicitation, the manner of making solicitations, and the use of a prescribed legend on soliciting materials. In most cases an advance filing of a solicitation of interest form with the administrator is required, and there is a filing fee.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Securities Act of 1933 § 18(c)(2), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(2) (2000). Listed securities are specifically excluded from state authority to impose filing fees. However, there is no exclusion from any state notice filing requirement.

(n14)Footnote 14. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 302(a).

A notice filing under this provision is effective for one year commencing on the later of the notice filing or the effectiveness of the offering filed with the SEC. The notice filing may be renewed. Id., § 302(b).

(n15)Footnote 15. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 302(d).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Wisconsin, Wis. Stat. § 551.302(5).

41 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.02

§ 5.02 Types of Registration

Blue Sky laws commonly provide three alternative forms for the registration of securities. They are: (a) Registration by notification (referred to in some Blue Sky laws as registration by "description" or "filing"), a procedure generally reserved for higher quality issues; (b) Registration by coordination, a method used when the issue is also being registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission; and (c) Registration by qualification, the method that is the most demanding for the issuer. Each of these is considered in further detail below.

[1] Registration by Notification

Registration by notification is the simplest method of registration. As the name implies, compliance is accomplished via registration forms which need only contain basic identifying and descriptive information concerning the issuer and the offering of securities involved. Typical content requirements are set out in Section 302 of the original Uniform Securities Act Act,ⁿ¹ which has been adopted in the majority of states that retain a provision for this type of registration.ⁿ²

Nomenclature may differ. California, for example, provides for "qualification by notification."ⁿ³ Other state provide for registration by "description."ⁿ⁴ However labeled, the availability of registration by notification is conditioned upon meeting certain criteria. This simplified form of compliance with state registration requirements is reserved for comparatively high quality securities, as measured by prescribed characteristics of the issuer.ⁿ⁵ The original Uniform Act thus provides that to qualify for registration by notification, an issuer must have been in continuous operation for at least five years; must not have defaulted in the payment of principal, interest, or dividends of any security during the preceding three fiscal years; and must have had average earnings of at least five percent on its common shares. Particular states may impose other qualifying transactional criteria, such as limiting the number or purchasers, or the extent of commissions, or providing for escrow of funds, or other requirements relating to use of an offering document.ⁿ⁶

By meeting these qualitative criteria (and demonstrating so on the face of the registration form) an issuer is permitted to file a much simpler form of registration statement, containing only certain basic identifying information and other items describing the character of its business, the security involved, the proposed offering terms, a description of any stock options, and financial data under certain conditions. A copy of any prospectus or other sales literature must be submitted with the registration statement.

An important advantage of registration by notification beyond the simplicity of the process, is its speed. The original Uniform Act provides that unless there is a stop order in effect, a registration by notification is automatically effective on the second full business day after the filing, or at such earlier time the Administrator determines. Some states vary the effective date provision. Alabama, for example, provides that the registration is effective on the fifth, rather than the second, full business day after filing,ⁿ⁷ while Michigan provides for effectiveness on the twentieth day.ⁿ⁸ However specified in the statutes, effective dates are not necessarily automatic, and careful attention must be paid to administrative rules or interpretations. In Ohio, for example, by statute a registration by description is complete upon certified mailing of the complete registration statement and requisite fee to the administrative agency.ⁿ⁹ Administrative rules governing registration by notification or description often provide for review of such registration statements, and admonish issuers not to proceed until that additional processing is completed and an acknowledgment is issued.ⁿ¹⁰ In addition, all state agencies are authorized to suspend effectiveness of a registration statement.ⁿ¹¹

Variations among the states include the qualifying period of time that an issuer must have been in business before registration by notification is possible. The original Uniform Act, for example, provides a five-year prerequisite. Texas, on the other hand, provides that securities issued by corporations that have been in operation for not less than three years may register their securities by notification.ⁿ¹² Other variations involve restrictions on use of the notification procedure by the type of security being offered. Minnesota, for example, provides that only tax-exempt industrial revenue bonds and securities issued by nonprofit organizations may be registered by notification.ⁿ¹³ The same is true in New Hampshire.ⁿ¹⁴

Such variations notwithstanding, registration by notification is generally available for all types of comparatively higher quality securities, as measured by qualifying characteristics of the issuer, and otherwise controlled, if at all, by limitations on the offering or the selling process. This, and any, type of state registration is nevertheless subject to suspension, or a "stop order," issued by the administrator if it fails to meet qualifying requirements, or, as set out in Section 306 of the original Uniform Act, if it is determined that the offering works, tends to work, or would work a fraud upon purchasers.ⁿ¹⁵ Merit, or fairness, criteria of individual states may thus be applied.

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act eliminated registration by notification, with the drafters noting that it was little used, and that the notice filing requirement for federal covered securities essentially replaces the need for registration by notification.ⁿ¹⁶ Nevertheless, in many of the states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act, registration by notification, or an analog, remains an available form of registration.

[2] Registration by Coordination

Registration by coordination is available under Blue Sky laws when a registration statement for the same offering has been filed with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933. Federal-state coordination permits the issuer to avoid duplication and to use substantially the same materials in complying with registration requirements at both levels. The procedure is set out in original Uniform Act Section 303,ⁿ¹⁷ and is carried into the 2002 Uniform Act, also as section 303. It is available in most states.ⁿ¹⁸ Registration by coordination avoids duplication by federal and state agencies. The information required to be filed with the various states is essentially the same as that filed with the SEC, including the prospectus and such other documents as may be requested by a particular state administrator. A uniform application to register securities, Form U-1, is used in the process.ⁿ¹⁹

The key element of registration by coordination is the registration statement relating to the same offering of the same securities that is filed under the Securities Act of 1933. Compliance with state submission requirements is entirely premised upon the federal process. As noted above, Form U-1 is available for use, although individual states prescribe their own submission requirements and the content of forms. Generally, registration by coordination at the state level entails submission of all documents filed with the SEC as part of the federal registration statement, along with certain other documents such as the articles of incorporation, any agreement among underwriters, any indenture or other instrument governing the issuance or terms of the particular security, and a specimen of the security.ⁿ²⁰

As part of the federal registration statement, a prospectus containing specified financial statements must also be submitted. Item 16(b) of Form S-1, "Financial Statements," governs what financial information must be included in this section of the prospectus: a balance sheet, an income statement, and a statement of source and application of funds.ⁿ²¹ The form and content of these financial statements are in turn determined by Regulation S-X under the Securities Act.ⁿ²²

Each of the states permitting registration by coordination requires that a certain number of copies of the prospectus filed under the Securities Act of 1933 accompany the state registration. Although the number of copies of this prospectus requested by the Commissioner may vary,ⁿ²³ All but one stateⁿ²⁴ require that they be the latest or final copy of the prospectus and any amendments thereto. Under the Uniform Act, registration by coordination in a state automatically becomes effective when the federal registration becomes effective if (1) no stop order is in effect; (2) the registration has been on file with the state commissioner for ten days; and (3) a statement of the maximum and minimum proposed offering prices and the maximum underwriting discounts has been on file for two days. Some states vary the requirement for the time in which the registration statement must have been on file.ⁿ²⁵ Others vary the time in which pricing data must be on file.ⁿ²⁶ In all cases, however, the registrant must notify each state's administrator of the federal statement's effectiveness, and must file a post-effective amendment containing the information and documents that were filed with the SEC as the "price amendment," to the registration statement.ⁿ²⁷

Since the adoption of SEC Rule 430A under the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ²⁸ the process of a traditional "price amendment" for a federal registration statement has been eliminated. The form of prospectus filed as a part of the federal registration statement that is declared effective may omit price and underwriting information. Rule 430A prescribes that such information is now supplied to the SEC by filing the final prospectus. Since there is no longer a need for a federal "price amendment," the original Uniform Act provision for post-effective submission of that specifically identified information as a condition to effectiveness at the state level should be satisfied by submission of the final prospectus. Most states provide needed flexibility in this process by expressly allowing for waiver by the administrator of the time requirements for which information must be on file, and also for interaction with the administrator in order to avoid gaps in the effective dates of federal and state registrations.ⁿ²⁹ In any case, if the registrant fails to file the required notification of federal effectiveness and make whatever post-effective amendment is necessary at the state level, the administrator may enter a stop order retroactively denying or suspending effectiveness until compliance at the state level is complete.

"Shelf" Registration. SEC Rule 415 under the Securities Act,ⁿ³⁰ which permits the registration of securities to be offered and sold on a delayed or continuous basis in the future ("shelf registration"), raises special questions for state registration by coordination.ⁿ³¹ For example, Section 305(i) of the original Uniform Securities Act provides that a registration statement remains effective for a period of one year from its effective date, or such longer period during which the offering is actually being made by an underwriter. The effective periods for registration statements in particular states vary. Shelf registrations, however, clearly contemplate that potentially longer periods of time will be involved. To deal with such issues many states have adopted specific procedures for the shelf registration by coordination for debt and equity securities that are registered with the SEC for primary offerings under Rule 415, if not otherwise exempt under state law.ⁿ³² Generally, the shelf registration statement filed with the SEC is annexed to Uniform Form U-1, "Uniform Application to Register Securities," and filed with the appropriate fee with the state administrator.ⁿ³³ Further filings must be made relating to particular offerings, and as each offering of securities (or "takedown") covered by the registration statement is offered for sale and sold, the registrant will be required to file prospectus supplements or post-effective amendments to the registration statement, or both types of filings.

[3] Registration by Qualification

Registration by qualification is the most demanding method of state registration. In the post-NSMIA regulatory environment, and given the pre-existing alternative for registration by coordination where broad scale offerings are involved, registration by qualification will be relied upon most often for "intrastate" offerings exempt from federal registration by Securities Act Section 3(a)(11), and also for limited offerings of securities pursuant to SEC Rules 504 and 505 of Regulation D, which are not deemed to be covered securities for purposes of federal preemption under NSMIA, and which are not typically exempted from state registration requirements.ⁿ³⁴ Original Uniform Act Section 304 sets out this alternative, which is carried into the 2002 Uniform Act. The original Uniform Act provision for registration by qualification has been adopted by a majority of states,ⁿ³⁵ and non-Uniform Act states have essentially the same provisions and requirements. Any security may be registered by qualification, whether or not another type provisions and requirements. Any security may be registered by qualification, whether or not another type of registration is available. As a practical matter, registration by qualification is used by an issuer when no other less demanding form is available.

Registration by qualification involves the submission of numerous categories of information and documents that must accompany each such application. As spelled out in the original Uniform Securities Act, these include:

- (1) Basic information about the issuer and any subsidiaries, if any, the character and location of its business, and the general competitive conditions in the industry;
- (2) Personal data about corporate officers and their security holdings including a description of any material interest or transaction effected between the issuer and the officer for a period of three years;
- (3) Remuneration paid to corporate officers during the previous twelve months;
- (4) Details relating to capitalization and long term debt; information about the securities such as price, estimated underwriting and selling discounts or commissions;
- (5) Cash proceeds expected from the offering, and the proposed use of such proceeds; a description and amount of any stock options;
- (6) Copies of any material contracts made otherwise than in the ordinary course of business;
- (7) Pending litigation;
- (8) Copies of any prospectus or sales literature to be used;
- (9) A copy of the security being registered;
- (10) An opinion of counsel as to the legality of the security being offered;
- (11) Consents from any professional, e.g., accountant, engineer, if such person is named as having prepared or certified a report used in the registration process;
- (12) A balance sheet and profit and loss statement; and
- (13) Any additional information required by the Administrator.ⁿ³⁶

The majority of states mandate all of the Uniform Act categories of information and documents for registration by qualification. Some, however, require more or less information, depending most commonly on whether the state engages in merit review of registration statements. Merit review of registration statements involves the application of qualitative standards to the offering, and a determination by the administrator whether to permit in the state based on a statutory standard and particular guidelines applicable in the state.ⁿ³⁷

Although registration by qualification is the most burdensome form of registration under Blue Sky laws, it may be the only alternative for smaller, localized distributions. So as not to unduly impede capital formation, a NASAA sponsored modification of the procedure for small company offerings has been widely adopted. For eligible issuers, the Small Company Offering Registration ("SCOR") is made on Form U-7. It is a registration by qualification, but the information requirements specified in Form U-7, particularly for financial statements, are significantly lessened. SCOR registrations are discussed further in section 5.02[4][d] below.

A registration by qualification becomes effective when the Administrator so orders,ⁿ³⁸ although the 2002 Uniform Act illustrates a commonly adopted approach of automatic effectiveness within a stated time period unless action is taken by the administrator.ⁿ³⁹

[4] Other Types of Registration

Among states that have not adopted a version of the Uniform Act, or that vary to one degree or another the nomenclature or substance of registration alternatives, there are functional equivalents of the simplified notification or coordination registration processes. There are also variants available in some states for particular types of offerings. Non-Uniform Act types of registration are discussed below.

[a] Registration by "Filing"

This simplified method of registration is based on section 302 of the Revised Uniform Securities Act, which takes the place of registration by notification.ⁿ⁴⁰ As illustrated in Rhode Island, the procedure is separate from registration by coordination and authorizes the registration of certain securities for which a statement has been filed under the 1933 Act, whether or not they would be eligible for filing under the registration by coordination or registration by qualification provisions of the Blue Sky law,ⁿ⁴¹ provided certain conditions are satisfied. These include certain residency and duration of business operations requirements, registration under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, a minimum net worth, and other criteria designed to demonstrate that the issuer is a seasoned company with substantial marketplace information and activity.ⁿ⁴²

[b] Registration by "Description"

As an available method of simplified registration in Arizona,ⁿ⁴³ North Dakota,ⁿ⁴⁴ and Ohio,ⁿ⁴⁵ registration by description is similar to registration by notification. In Arizona, for example, the registration by description is available if the issuer has been in continuous operation for a minimum three-year period and has shown specified net earnings for recent reporting periods. The statute requires that the registration statement specify the name and address of both the person doing the filing and of the issuer and the title, amount, and price of the securities being offered. Further, financial data, i.e., balance sheet and profit and loss statements, and a prospectus, if one was filed in conjunction with a federal filing, must be submitted. A registration statement filed in Arizona pursuant to the description method becomes effective when filed.

[c] Registration by "Announcement"

This procedure is available only to non-issuers in North Dakota.ⁿ⁴⁶ It is available for securities "that have been outstanding and in the hands of the public for not less than one year as a result of prior original registration,"ⁿ⁴⁷ or for securities of life insurance companies that have been in continuous operation for twenty years. The announcement that must be filed with the North Dakota Commissioner of Securities by a registered dealer must contain the name and address of the issuer and a description of the security being offered. In addition, the issuer must mail a current balance sheet to the Commissioner. The effective date of such registration is the date of the filing of the announcement.

[d] Small Company Offering Registration (SCOR)

As a less burdensome form of registration by qualification, SCOR registrations are made on Form U-7, the "Small Company Offering Registration Form." The procedure is intended to foster capital formation by smaller enterprises and to encourage investment. Small issuers raising small amounts capital face special problems not faced by issuers raising larger amounts, and with NASAA sponsorship, states have recognized that the standards appropriate to registrations of larger offerings may be unduly burdensome when applied to small offerings. The optional method of a SCOR registration is thus intended to reduce costs and burdens of raising capital for small business without sacrificing investor protection, and to maximize the amount of offering proceeds available to the SCOR issuer for investment in the business.

SCOR is intended to allow small companies to conduct limited offerings. For qualifying issuers the information requirements of Form U-7, particularly the financial statement requirements, are much less burdensome. Virginia, for example, provides that financial statements included in the application for registration need not be audited if the issuer meets certain qualifying criteria. The issuer may not previously have sold securities through an offering involving general solicitation, and must not previously have been required under any federal or state securities law to submit audited financial statements in connection with any sale of its securities.ⁿ⁴⁸ All states also limit SCOR availability by the size of the offering, most commonly specifying that the aggregate offering price of the securities offered may not exceed $1,000,000, with some provision for integration of prior offerings within a particular time period in making that calculation. Thus, for example, in Washington, the aggregate offering price of the securities offered may not exceed $1,000,000 less the aggregate offering price of all securities sold by the issuer within the twelve months before the start of the offering, as well as during the offering in reliance on an exemption from the federal securities laws.ⁿ⁴⁹

Consistent with its purpose and the fact that the Form U-7 format will not provide adequate disclosure for certain issuers, SCOR registration is also generally limited to certain types of issuers, or is deemed to be unsuitable for certain issuers without permission of the administrator. As illustrated again in Washington, a SCOR issuer must be a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company, and must not have a complex capital structure.ⁿ⁵⁰ These restrictions (and several others) on SCOR availability are all part of the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations,ⁿ⁵¹ which explains that SCOR registration is designed to provide uniform treatment of small company offerings which are exempt from federal registration under Rule 504 of Regulation D, Regulation A, or section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933. Thus, in addition to all other requirements, the Policy Statement requires that SCOR offerings be conducted in compliance with those federal provisions. However, it also makes clear that state administrators are free to waive any standard in the Policy Statement, and impose substantive conditions not contained in the Policy Statement. Most states embracing SCOR have adopted the NASAA Policy Statement. Others simply make Form U-7 generally available, relying on the form itself as setting out the instructions for availability.ⁿ⁵²

Interstate use of Form U-7 and SCOR registration has been significantly advanced through state initiatives to allow coordinated review through regions of the country. The process of coordinated review of SCOR registrations, and other programs for coordinated review of equity offerings on a regional basis is discussed more fully in Chapter 6. Coordinated review for SCOR registrations means that a lead reviewer represents all of the states in a particular region, thus streamlining the process and reducing the costs of capital formation for smaller issuers.

[e] Registration in New York: The Martin Act

While traditional regulation of securities offerings under Blue Sky laws is based on the registration of securities, and in some cases the merit review of offerings, regulation of securities offerings in New York is primarily accomplished through regulation of those persons who engage in the process of offering and selling securities. The Martin Actⁿ⁵³ regulates persons engaged in the business of selling securities to the public. "Registration" principally focuses on registration of the intermediaries who carry out offerings, and issuers engaged in the sale of their own securities. That is not to say, however, that the Martin Act has no traditional registration elements. Intrastate offerings, along with real estate and theatrical syndication offerings involve procedures akin to traditional securities registration. Intrastate offerings, are governed by Section 359-ff of the Martin Act, and specific regulations under it which comprise the New York Intrastate Financing Act.ⁿ⁵⁴ In addition to enumerated disclosure requirements, the regulations provide for exemptions based upon offerings to special classes of investors, including related or sophisticated persons, promoter groups, and small offerings of specialized securities such as employee stock purchase plans or investment clubs.ⁿ⁵⁵

Intrastate public offerings--principally consisting of those carried out pursuant to Rule 504 of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ⁵⁶ which involve general solicitations and where resales will not be restricted, are fully subject to state regulation. In New York, intrastate offerings are subject to "registration," although the registration filing consists of a disclosure document that satisfies content requirements. Section 359-ff of the Martin Act makes it unlawful for any person to offer or sell securities in an intrastate offering unless an "offering prospectus" which makes full and fair disclosure of all material facts is first filed by the issuer. The offering prospectus must include, without limitation, a description of the securities offered and terms of the offering, the nature of the issuer's business, the purpose of the offering and the application of proceeds by the issuer. It must also contain background information regarding management, and any pending material litigation. Specified financial statements of the issuer are also required.ⁿ⁵⁷ A prospectus is required for intrastate offerings, and New York Form INTRASTATE-1 is prescribed for that purpose.

No registration in New York is required with respect to intrastate offerings that are subject to an effective registration statement filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant to the federal Securities Act of 1933, or for an offering which otherwise qualifies for an exemption from federal registration under any securities or transaction exemption other than section 3(a)(11) (the intrastate offering exemption) of the federal Securities Act of 1933. Intrastate offerings by issuers whose securities are registered under the federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are likewise exempt from filing in New York. Certain other securities that are subject to regulation under other provisions of New York law are also exempt.ⁿ⁵⁸

Other than specific provisions for intrastate offerings, filing requirements for securities offerings in New York are built around a "State Notice" and a "Further State Notice" to be filed by broker-dealers who engage in the offering.⁹ These requirements prohibit a broker or dealer from buying or selling, or offering to buy or sell, securities until the dealer or broker identifies itselfⁿ⁵⁹ and, in the case of a "Further State Notice," the dealer must provide the name of the security and the name of the issuer of the securities to be sold.ⁿ⁶⁰ These simple filings are built around the more substantial filing requirement--the "Broker-Dealer Statement"--for broker-dealers who engage in the offer and sale of securities.

[f] Multijurisdictional Disclosure System Offerings

Many states participate in the SEC Multijurisdictional Disclosure System ("MJDS") to facilitate cross border offerings by certain Canadian issuers.ⁿ⁶¹ The MJDS allows qualifying Canadian issuers to file their Canadian registration and disclosure documents with the SEC, and to register by filing in the states in which the offering will be made.ⁿ⁶² In order to harmonize state registration procedures with the MJDS, state requirements regarding content and time-on-file for eligible offerings are modified.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 302, which has substituted a "registration by filing" procedure for the Uniform Act notification procedure. States that have adopted this method, with some additional local requirements, include Rhode Island, see R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-302.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.080.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25112.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.350.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-502.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-61.2.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cal. Corp. Code Section 25112.

(n4)Footnote 4. See:

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-07.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.08.

(n5)Footnote 5. In Kentucky, for example, the following securities may be registered by notification:

(a) Any security whose issuer and any predecessors have been in continuous operation for at least five (5) years if:

1. There has been no default during the current fiscal year or within the three (3) preceding fiscal years in the payment of principal, interest, or dividends on any security of the issuer (or any predecessor) with a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision; and

2. The issuer and any predecessors during the past three (3) fiscal years have had average net earnings, determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting practices, which are applicable to all securities without a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision and which equal at least five percent (5%) of the amount of securities without a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision outstanding at the date the registration statement is filed (as measured by the maximum offering price or the market price on a day selected by the registrant within thirty (30) days before the date of filing the registration statement, whichever is higher, or if there is neither a readily determinable market price nor an offering price, book value on a day selected by the registrant within ninety (90) days of the date of filing the registration statement), or if the issuer and any predecessors have not had any securities without a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision outstanding for three (3) full fiscal years, equal at least five percent (5%) of the amount (as measured by the maximum public offering price) of such securities which will be outstanding if all the securities being offered or proposed to be offered (whether or not they are proposed to be registered or offered in this state) are issued;

(b) Any security registered for nonissuer distribution if any security of the same class has ever been registered under this chapter or a predecessor law, or the security being registered was originally issued pursuant to an exemption under this chapter or a predecessor law or, if previously publicly offered and sold, was not offered and sold within this state.

Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.350.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat., Art. 6, §§ 44-1871 through 44-1878 (additional information filing requirements and provision for escrows or impoundment of funds in certain cases).

see also.:

Maryland: Md. Code. Ann. § 11-502(c) (requiring use of a prospectus containing specified information).

(n7)Footnote 7. Ala. Code § 8-6-5(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.702(c).

For other state variations on the effective date provision, see:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25112(c) (10th day).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-502(d)(1) (10th day).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:12(III) (5th day).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-7(B)(2)(b) (5th day).

(n9)Footnote 9. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.08.

(n10)Footnote 10. Ohio Admin. Code § 1301:6-3-06(B).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a) (power to issue a stop order denying effectiveness to, or suspending or revoking effectiveness of, any registration statement where appropriate in the public interest or in other circumstances involving deficiencies).

(n12)Footnote 12. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-7(B)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.09(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:12(I).

(n15)Footnote 15. Suspension of registration and related powers and considerations applicable to all registrations are more fully considered in § 5.07 infra .

(n16)Footnote 16. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 302, Off. Comment 1.

(n17)Footnote 17. See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 303.

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.090.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25111.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 5A.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 302.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-61.1.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.091.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-205.

Here again, nomenclature may vary. Florida incorporates the procedure into its provision for registration by notification. See Fla. Stat. § 517.082(2).

(n19)Footnote 19. A copy of Form U-1 is included at UF-1 infra.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unif. Sec. Act § 303(b)(2).

(n21)Footnote 21. In some instances, Form S-1 requires the filing of consolidated financial statements. See Instructions As To Financial Statements, Part B, Form S-1.

(n22)Footnote 22. 17 C.F.R. pt. 210.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25111 (1 copy).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 110A, § 302 (3 copies).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.091 (3 copies).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-7C (3 copies).

(n24)Footnote 24. Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-205 (2 copies of the preliminary prospectus accepted).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g.:

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.703(c)(2) (twenty days).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:13(III)(b) (twenty days).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.:

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7305(c)(3) (must be on file at time of federal effectiveness).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1.509(C) (three days).

(n27)Footnote 27. Unif. Sec. Act § 303(c).

(n28)Footnote 28. 17 C.F.R. § 230.430A. Rule 430A provides in pertinent part:

The form of prospectus filed as part of a registration statement that is declared effective may omit information with respect to the public offering price, underwriting syndicate (including any material relationships between the registrant and underwriters not named therein), underwriting discounts or commissions, discounts or commissions to dealers, amount of proceeds, conversion rates, call prices and other items dependent upon the offering price, delivery dates and terms of the securities dependent on the offering date ...

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.:

Rhode Island: Gen. Laws R.I. Sec. 7-1-303(f),(g).

(n30)Footnote 30. 17 C.F.R. § 230.415.

(n31)Footnote 31. Rule 415 is available for the following securities offerings:

- secondary offerings;
- securities offered pursuant to dividend or interest reimbursement or employee benefit plans;
- securities underlying options, warrants, or rights issuable upon conversions;
- securities pledged as collateral;
- depository shares evidenced by American Depository Receipts registered on Form F-6; and
- mortgage-related securities.

Rule 415 is also available to the following securities if the securities were registered in an amount which, at the time the registration statement became effective, were reasonably expected to be offered and sold within two years from the initial effective date of the registration:

- securities issued in connection with business combination transactions;
- securities, the offering of which will be commenced promptly, be made on a continuous basis, and may continue for over thirty days from the date of initial effectiveness; and
- securities to be registered, or qualified to be registered on S-3 or F-3 (forms of registration statements typically used by issuers widely followed by professional security analysts).

For a more detailed discussion of Securities Act Rule 415, see Federal Securities Act of 1933 § 7A.03[4] (Matthew Bender).

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g.:

California: Release 70-C. An abbreviated registration procedure is available for primary delayed or continuous offerings of securities registered by a Securities Act Form S-3 registrant. It is not available for traditional shelf offerings. The procedure requires the filing of an application for qualification by coordination to be filed at the same time, but ordinarily not later than two business days after, a shelf registration statement is filed with the Commission. 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 12,560.

Florida: Rule 3E-800.001, Dep't Banking & Fin., Div. Sec. Shelf registrations on a Notification Registration Application are to be filed with a copy of the initial registration statement, written consent to service of process, and payment of a fee. Prospectus supplements for each subsequent takedown are to be filed during the permit period. 1A Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 17,497.

Illinois: Securities Department Special Bulletin No. 52, December 20, 1984. Shelf offerings made by a single issuer can be registered under a single application, and the effectiveness coincides with the federal registration provided the necessary documents and fees are filed. Registration is valid for one year and may be renewed before expiration. Offerings by a series of issuers must be registered under separate applications with separate fees. 1A Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 23,214.

Texas: Securities Rule § 113.11. Texas permits registration by coordination of securities under SEC Rule 415. Each series or takedown requires separate registration except when it is disclosed in the prospectus that neither the security nor the selling method may be varied from one series or takedown to the next or, in the case of certain debt offerings, by substantial issuers that are eligible to use SEC Form S-2 or S-3. 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 55,590A.

(n33)Footnote 33. A copy of Form U-1 is reproduced at UF-1 infra.

(n34)Footnote 34. Rule 504 creates an exemption from federal registration for limited offerings and sales of securities not exceeding $1 million, where conditions are met. Rule 505 operates likewise for offerings up to $5 million. Both provisions, however, are grounded in Section 3(b) of the Securities Act, and are thus outside the definition of NSMIA covered securities. State law private or limited offering exemptions key on Section 4(2) of the Securities Act, and thus Rule 504 and 505 offerings remain subject to state registration requirements, although exemptions may nevertheless be available.

(n35)Footnote 35. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.100.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25113.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.081.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 5/5B.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-61.

(n36)Footnote 36. Unif. Sec. Act § 304(b).

(n37)Footnote 37. Merit review of securities offerings is thoroughly considered in Chapter 6, infra.

(n38)Footnote 38. Unif. Sec. Act § 304(c).

(n39)Footnote 39. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 304(c). As adopted in Tennessee, for example:

A registration statement under this section shall become effective twenty (20) days following filing unless the commissioner by order specifies an earlier effective days, or he may by order defer the effective for any reason shown to be in the public interest and necessary for the protection of investors. Tenn. Code Ann. Sec. 48-2-106(c).

In this process the administrator is empowered to delay effectiveness, and to act on any request by the registrant that effectiveness be delayed. This process allows for completion of administrative review and interaction between the registrant and the administrator in addressing any concerns, particularly in those states that engage in merit review. The simpler "when the Administrator so orders" approach of the Uniform Act practically allows for the same interactive process, but without the mandate of prescribed time limits and procedures that are meaningful to issuers.

(n40)Footnote 40. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 302.

(n41)Footnote 41. R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-302.

(n42)Footnote 42. See Official Code Comment to Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 302.

(n43)Footnote 43. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1871.

(n44)Footnote 44. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-07.

(n45)Footnote 45. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.08.

(n46)Footnote 46. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-07.1.

(n47)Footnote 47. Id. § 10-04-07.1(1).

(n48)Footnote 48. Va. Corp. Comm. Rules, Rule 21 VAC 5-30-90(B).

(n49)Footnote 49. Wa. Admin. Code § WAC 460-17A-030(2)(e).

(n50)Footnote 50. Wa. Admin. Code § WAC 460-17A-030(2)(a).

(n51)Footnote 51. CCH NASAA Reports P 413 (Apr. 28, 1996).

(n52)Footnote 52. See, e.g.:

Texas: Tex. Admin. Code, Sec. 133.33(9).

A SCOR Issuer's Manual--NASAA Small Company Offering Registration Manual--is available to guide companies in determining availability and in the registration process itself, see CCH NASAA Reports P 415.

(n53)Footnote 53. N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law, Ch. 20, Art. 23-A (McKinney 1996).

(n54)Footnote 54. 13 N.Y.C.R.R. Part 80.

(n55)Footnote 55. 13 N.Y.C.R.R. § 80.8.

(n56)Footnote 56. 17 C.F.R. § 230.504.

(n57)Footnote 57. Gen. Bus. Law § 359-ff.1.

(n58)Footnote 58. See Gen. Bus. Law § 359-ff.5.

(n59)Footnote 59. Id. § 359-e2.

(n60)Footnote 60. Id. § 359-e8.

(n61)Footnote 61. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Reg. Conn. State Agencies § 36b-31-19d.

(n62)Footnote 62. See 1 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 6371.

42 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.03

§ 5.03 The Registration and Offering Process

Blue Sky laws make it unlawful for any person to offer or sell a security in the state unless (1) it is registered; (2) either the security or the transaction is exempt from registration; or (3) it is a federal covered security.ⁿ¹ As triggering events, definitions of the terms "offer" and "sale" are critical and must be carefully considered in the planning process for creating and distributing securities. They are specifically considered elsewhere in this text.ⁿ² Equally important, however, are Blue Sky law prescriptions of "scope" of coverage, most often as stated in section 414 of the Uniform Act, to encompass any offer or sale that originates within the state.ⁿ³ Although these provisions are most prominent in assessing jurisdiction of state administrators over out-of-state communications directed into a state, as shown below their effect in the application of registration requirements where offers and sales are directed entirely outside a state is no less significant.

The practical scope of state authority under baseline registration requirements is not defined by whether securities are actually offered and sold in the state, but rather by whether the state has a legitimate interest within its boundaries that is impacted by one who engages in non-fraudulent offers and sales securities from that state, even if entirely to outsiders. In A.S. Goldman & Company, Inc. v. New Jersey Bureau of Securities,ⁿ⁴ the authority of the state administrator to enforce the registration requirement of the New Jersey securities law was upheld against a U.S. constitutional challenge by a New Jersey-based underwriter planning to engage in an initial public offering of securities, registered in other states, to persons outside New Jersey. Because the securities were not registered or exempt from registration in New Jersey, the Bureau of Securities sought, and obtained, a cease and desist order prohibiting the underwriting firm from, among other things, offering or selling the subject securities in or from that state to any members of the public.

Arguing that the New Jersey order violated the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution, the underwriter claimed in federal court that New Jersey had no authority under its Blue Sky law to interdict the sale of securities outside its borders. The district court concluded that absent fraud, New Jersey had no interest in regulating transactions outside its borders, and that the attempt to mandate registration in these circumstances constituted an excessive burden on interstate commerce relative to any local benefit. However, on appeal by the administrator the Third Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals reversed. The Court of Appeals opined that state authority to require registration of securities offered and sold from the state furthers a legitimate interest, and is not an impermissible burden on commerce. Particular state interests involved, said the court, are: (1) preventing New Jersey companies from offering suspect securities to outsiders helps preserve the reputation of legitimate securities issuers in the state; and (2) protecting New Jersey residents from dubious securities that might enter the state in secondary market transactions. As to the latter, the Court declared:

The risk is particularly great because a broker-dealer such as Goldman could otherwise delay or even avoid the Bureau's scrutiny through an initial sale to a cooperative party outside New Jersey. Because there is no filing requirement for secondary transactions, Goldman could arrange to "sell" to a friendly out-of-state party, immediately buy back the security, and then sell it freely to New Jersey residents using possibly questionable sales practices ... New Jersey's most effective means of preventing such an undesirable result would be to block the initial public offering.ⁿ⁵

In A.S. Goldman the Third Circuit took comfort from the historical fact that commerce clause and other constitutional challenges to Blue Sky laws have generally been rejected. Nevertheless, upholding authority under Blue Sky laws to impose registration requirements on securities offered wholly outside the state on the assumption that they could come back into the state through unregulated secondary transactions tests the limits of state authority in the post-NSMIA regulatory environment. That said, however, the case underscores the significance of Blue Sky registration requirements, and demonstrates that in the absence of a NSMIA covered security, those requirements will be applied to whatever extent is reasonably necessary to achieve their protective purpose. Against that backdrop, essential considerations bearing upon the registration process are presented below.

[1] Who Must Register

Section 305(a) of the original Uniform Securities Act provides that "[a] registration statement may be filed by the issuer, any other person on whose behalf the offering is to be made, or a registered broker-dealer."ⁿ⁶ The reference to "any other person on whose behalf the offering is made is designed for non-issuer distributions. "Secondary" offerings by controlling persons or affiliates of an issuer, venture capitalists and others seeking liquidity in an investment position. The drafters also explained that the provision for a registered broker-dealer to file a registration statement makes it possible for a local intermediary to file independently of the issuer or an underwriter. This may be meaningful in situations involving federal/state registration by coordination in circumstances in which the issuer or underwriter chooses not to register in a particular state in which another intermediary wishes to make the offering and establish a market for the securities.ⁿ⁷

Some states technically vary the basic provision. Several states, for example, have modified the basic provision to specify that securities may be registered by the issuer or a registered dealer, thus eliminating the broader "any other person" of the Uniform Act. States with such language include Florida, Texas, and Louisiana.ⁿ⁸ Most, however, have substantially adopted the language of the original Uniform Act.ⁿ⁹

Some states modify the basic provision with different rules concerning the proper party for registering an issue for each different type of registration that is provided. In Arizona, for example, an issuer must file a registration by qualification, whereas either the issuer or a dealer may file a registration by description.ⁿ¹⁰ North Dakota permits either the issuer or a registered dealer to file a registration by description or by qualification.ⁿ¹¹ However, only a dealer may file a registration by announcement (notification) statement.ⁿ¹² In Alabama, the issuer, "any other person," or a dealer may file a registration by notification, coordination, or qualification.ⁿ¹³ Ohio permits an issuer, a majority of the incorporators prior to the election of officers, or licensed broker-dealers to file a registration by description.ⁿ¹⁴ Only the issuer or a licensed broker-dealer, however, may file a registration by qualification.ⁿ¹⁵

Some states more clearly contemplate secondary distributions by security holders. Oregon's broad statute, for example, allows registration by the issuer or any other person on whose behalf the offering is to be made, or a registered broker-dealer, and/or the owner of the securities.ⁿ¹⁶ Illinois provides that applications for registration by coordination or qualification may be filed by the issuer, a controlling person, or a registered dealer.ⁿ¹⁷ California eliminates the broker-dealer as one who may register, limiting the filing in an issuer transaction to the issuer and in a non-issuer transaction to "the person on whose behalf the offering is being made or by the issuer on behalf of such person."ⁿ¹⁸ On the other hand, in Tennessee, only the issuer or a broker-dealer may file a registration statement,ⁿ¹⁹

Such variations among the states that control who may register securities for an offering, or the type of registration available to a particular person, illustrate the significance and desirability of contractual provisions providing for securities registration rights in finance and investment relationships. A contract right to compel an issuer to file a registration statement for the eventual offering and sale of securities acquired and held by a significant investor, or to assure a "piggyback" registration right in the event the issuer files a registration statement for its own offering, are thus common, particularly in venture capital relationships. Liquidity considerations associated with any significant minority position likewise compel concern for both the availability of registration, and its concomitant expense.

[2] Qualification to Do Business

A corollary compliance consideration for a corporate issuer that undertakes to offer securities within a state other than its state of incorporation is whether doing so constitutes "doing business" in the state. If so, the issuer will first have to "qualify" with the Secretary of State or similar administrator in charge of corporate registration. In most states the offering and sale of securities by a foreign corporation does not constitute doing business for purposes of qualification requirements.ⁿ²⁰ The rationale behind this view is that selling stock or stock subscriptions is preliminary to the actual conduct of business. Further, if the issuing corporation ceases its acts within the particular jurisdiction upon the completion of the sale of its stock and conducts no further business dealings within the state, then no business, i.e., the customary acts that constitute doing business by a corporation, has been transacted, and the foreign corporation need not qualify. There is a separation between activity involved in the offer and sale of securities, which is regulated under the Blue Sky law, and carrying on actual business activity in the state, for which qualification is necessary. Foreign corporations may do one or the other, or both, but are subject to applicable requirements independently.

A minority view, adopted in only a few states, holds that the sale of stock does constitute doing business, and that a foreign corporation must qualify to do business in the state prior to or in connection with an offering.ⁿ²¹ Lastly, courts in several jurisdictions have held that a foreign corporation selling stock plus transacting some other corporate activity constitutes doing business in the state.ⁿ²²

[3] Documents to Be Filed

Although content and materials required to be filed as part of a registration varies from state to state, in all cases some form of registration statement is required, and the Blue Sky laws in all states specify essential content. The original Uniform Securities Act provides:

Every registration statement shall specify (1) the amount of securities to be offered in this state; (2) the states in which a registration statement or similar document in connection with the offering has been or is to be filed; and (3) any adverse order, judgment or decree entered in connection with the offering by the regulatory authorities in each state or by any court or the Securities and Exchange Commission.ⁿ²³

Variations among states involve expansion of the baseline content requirement. In Pennsylvania, for example, every registration statement must also include the names of any underwriters and broker-dealers selling or offering the securities for sale in the state.ⁿ²⁴

The basic form of registration statement under Blue Sky laws is Form U-1--"Uniform Application to Register Securities."ⁿ²⁵ All states have adopted Form U-1, although requirements for submission of additional information and materials vary. In the federal/state regulatory environment NSMIA, the challenge of dealing with variations in submission requirements is substantially diminished by federal preemption of state registration requirements for offerings of NSMIA covered securities. Equity offerings of a national character are likely to fall within the "nationally traded securities" classification of covered securities. However, in those circumstances in which state registration requirements continue to apply, in addition to whatever basic form is involved, there are rules requiring the filing of prospectuses, consents to service of process,ⁿ²⁶ and other materials including surety bonds, sales literature, additional financial data, periodic reports, corporate resolutions authorizing the offering, bylaws, underwriting documents, opinions of counsel, specimen stock certificates, and miscellaneous other documents. Particular elements of commonly required submissions are considered further below.

[a] The Prospectus

As a structured disclosure document containing material facts about the issuer, its business and the securities being offered for sale, the prospectus has always played a central role as a matter of federal law governing the distribution of securities. In state securities regulation the mandated use of a structured disclosure document (whether identified as a prospectus, offering circular or memorandum) has evolved into an important element of the registration and qualification processes. A 1987 North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) amendment to section 304 of the Uniform Act added a specific provision empowering the state administrator to require as a condition of registration by qualification that a prospectus containing designated parts of the information specified to be included in a registration statement be sent or given to every person to whom a written offer is made, and prior to or concurrently with confirming any sale. States embracing the NASAA amendment include Michigan, which, for registrations by qualification, declares:

The administrator may by rule or order require as a condition of registration under this subsection that a prospectus be sent or given to each person to whom an offer is made. The administrator may by rule or order fix the requirements as to the use, content, revision and supplementation of the prospectus.ⁿ²⁷

Although a "prospectus" is most often thought of in terms of a structured disclosure document presenting a description of a new security issue supplied to prospective purchasers and giving detailed information concerning the company's business and financial standing, its character as a matter of law is much broader. In practice it is in fact any written or broadcast communication which "offers" a security for sale, or which confirms a sale. The Uniform Act defines "offer" or "offer to sell" as including: "every attempt to offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to buy, a security or interest in a security for value."ⁿ²⁸

The primary section of the original Uniform Act dealing with the prospectus is Section 304(d), which states that in a registration by qualification procedure, the state administrator may require that a prospectus be provided to each person to whom an offer is made. In addition, Section 303, which deals with registration by coordination, requires that copies of the latest form of prospectus filed by the issuer under the federal act be included.ⁿ²⁹ Although not prescribed in terms of a prospectus, a filing is also required for registration by notification. This includes "a description of the security being registered ... and the information and documents specified in clauses (8), (10), and (12) of Section 304(b)."ⁿ³⁰ Documents specified in section 304(b) include a copy of any prospectus, pamphlet, circular, form letter, advertisement, or other sales literature to be used in connection with the offering. Many states have expressly added to their simplified notification or description registration procedures the requirement that prospectuses or offering documents be filed with the basic form.ⁿ³¹

The specific information required to be included in a prospectus varies from state to state, but commonly includes general information about the issuer; expected use of proceeds of the offering; summary of earnings; capitalization; history and business, including employee relations; property of the issuer; competitive conditions in the industry; management and control, including remuneration of officers and directors; outstanding options or warrants; capital stock being registered; long-term debt being registered; other securities (if not capital stock or long-term debt) being registered; rights of shareholders; principal holders of securities; parents of issuer; escrow provisions; underwriting or plan of distribution; pending legal proceedings; opinion of counsel with respect to the legality of the offering; and miscellaneous financial statements.ⁿ³²

Some states prescribe content by incorporating requirements under federal law. Thus, a prospectus meeting the requirements of the Securities Act of 1933 Act is deemed to satisfy the state's requirements.ⁿ³³

For qualified small corporate offerings, most states have approved the use of the NASAA Form U-7 registration statement (the "SCOR Form") as the prospectus.ⁿ³⁴ Form U-7 is a simplified registration statement designed to promote uniformity among the state for smaller offerings. In these offerings the SCOR form itself becomes the main disclosure document. It prescribes certain categories of information to be included in all filings in a structured format. Importantly however, Form U-7 also requires information concerning other material factors concerning a particular company and its business. Issuers must add such specific material disclosures to the Form U-7 format. Specific additional documents or exhibits may also be required as part of the filing.ⁿ³⁵

[b] Consent to Service of Process

The Uniform Act provides that every issuer that proposes to offer a security must file an irrevocable consent appointing the state's administrator to be the issuer's attorney "to receive service of any lawful process in any non-criminal suit, action or proceeding ... which arises under this act or any rule or order hereunder after the consent has been filed."ⁿ³⁶ Every state that provides for registration of securities before their issuance and sale within that state, has, somewhere within its statute or regulations, a similar provision for consent to service of process. The majority of states have adopted the original Uniform Act's language essentially verbatim.ⁿ³⁷ In these states, every applicant for registration under the Act, including broker-dealers acting on a "firm commitment" basis,ⁿ³⁸ and every issuer, resident or non-resident, that has employed a "broker-dealer" or other party in an agency capacity (e.g., a "best efforts" underwriting)ⁿ³⁹ must file this consent to service of process with the state's administrator. In each instance, it is the "principal" party involved in the registration that is required to file the consent to service of process. However, whether it be the applicant or the issuer, a person who has filed such a consent in connection with a previous registration need not file another.ⁿ⁴⁰

A minority of states requires non-resident issuers only to file the consent (i.e., even if a registered broker-dealer is acting on a firm commitment basis, the actual issuer still must submit its own consent to service of process). However, this may be mitigated by limiting the type of registration to which this rule applies.ⁿ⁴¹ In these states that limit the application of this rule to a particular form of registration, broker-dealers, acting on a firm commitment basis, are free to file the required consent for those types of registration not covered by the statute and thus eliminate the need for the issuer also to file.

A third group of states provides that no additional consent to service of process need be filed if the applicant is a corporation organized under the laws of that state or is a registered broker-dealer in the stateⁿ⁴² acting on a firm commitment basis. Thus, even if the issuer is a non-resident, it need not file an additional consent to service of process, provided that a registered broker-dealer is the applicant for the registration.

[c] Surety Bonds

It is not common for states to require the issuer to post surety bonds in connection with the registration of securities.ⁿ⁴³ However, in line with the original Uniform Securities Act policy relating to intermediaries,ⁿ⁴⁴ some states require registered broker-dealers, their agents, and investment advisers to post bonds in varying amounts as a requirement for licensing.ⁿ⁴⁵ Thus, to the extent that any offering is undertaken with the involvement of regulated intermediaries, the offering is, in effect, conditioned on those intermediaries' compliance with all licensing and registration provisions, including whatever surety or fidelity bond may be required in the conduct of their activities. Investor protection from issuer abuses contemplated under Blue Sky laws in the offering setting is directly achieved through other mechanisms such as required escrow or impoundment of proceeds of an offering and other administratively imposed requirements designed to enforce the quasi-fiduciary responsibilities of promoters.

[d] Registration Forms

Every state prescribes the use of certain registration forms depending upon the type of registration involved. Collaborative efforts to bring uniformity among states for the benefit of issuers produced a series of uniform forms now in widespread use. These include: (1) Form U-1, Uniform Application To Register Securities; (2) Form U-2, Uniform Consent to Service of Process; (3) Form U-2a, Uniform Form of Corporate Resolution; (4) Form U-SB, Uniform Surety Bond; and (5) Form U-7, The Small Corporate Offering Registration Form.ⁿ⁴⁶

Form U-1, approved by NASAA in 1962, is used in those situations in which a registration statement has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Thus, this form is specifically applicable to a registration by coordination. However, even in those states that make no provision for registration by coordination, Form U-1 is specified as the basic form of registration statement to be filed for all forms of registration with the exception of qualified SCOR offerings.ⁿ⁴⁷ And Form U-1 is widely available, if not prescribed, as the basic form of registration statement to be filed by issuers seeking registration by qualification.ⁿ⁴⁸ Some states accept not only Form U-1, but also provide for their own forms for each type of registration. Other states, such as Colorado, accept Form U-1 but also prescribe an additional "Application for Registration of Securities," which is basically a one page form with supplemental pages for the form specifically applicable to registration by coordination, qualification, or notification.

The Uniform Consent to Service of Process (Form U-2) is a written authorization by a corporation appointing the state securities administrator as agent to receive process on behalf of the corporation. Form U-2A, the Uniform Form of Corporate Resolution is submitted on behalf of a corporation that authorizes the corporate officers to perform any acts they deem necessary in order to meet the registration requirements of any particular state. Form U-SB, the Uniform Surety Bond is a standardized form to implement the Uniform Act requirement for the posting of bonds by registered broker dealers.ⁿ⁴⁹

Form U-7 is the Small Corporate Offerings Registration Form, or "SCOR Form," and is limited to certain qualifying small corporate offerings exempt under provisions of the Securities Act of 1933. The procedure provides for use of a disclosure document arranged in a question and answer format, which was adopted by the North American Securities Administrators Association ("NASAA") in 1989. Use of the fifty-question Form U-7 results in lower costs for issuers, and by mandating the use of "plain English," is intended to provide investors with an offering document that is clear and easily understood. In many instances, states require use of Form U-7 in conjunction with Form U-1, as the Form U-7 is a disclosure document delivered in the offering process, while Form U-1 is more precisely the application document.

[e] Financial Statements

In most instances, when a Blue Sky law requires a financial statement to accompany the registration application for a proposed offering,ⁿ⁵⁰ one or more of the following must be submitted: a balance sheet, an income statement, and an analysis of surplus. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act reflects the requirement in most states, requiring for registration by qualification:

[A] balance sheet of the issuer as of a date within four (4) months before the filing of the registration statement; a statement of income and changes in financial position for each of the three fiscal years preceding the date of the balance sheet and for any period between the close of the immediately previous fiscal year and the date of the balance sheet, or for the period of the issuer's and any predecessor's existence if less than three years; and, if any part of the proceeds of the offering is to be applied to the purchase of a business, the financial statements that would be required if that business were the registrant. ... ⁿ⁵¹

The balance sheet is a summary of the financial position of an enterprise as of a particular date. In form, it is expressed in the basic accounting equation "Assets = Liabilities + Shareholders Equity." With allowances for any adjustments in valuation, the balance sheet reveals the consequences that would result from the immediate liquidation of the business on a given date, if the amount realized on the sale of the assets were to equal their book value (i.e., their initial or net costs, less depreciation). Thus, the balance sheet reveals, in essence, what is owned, what is owed, and the source of funds used for acquisitions.

The financial statement of greatest interest to people who deal with any business enterprise is the income statement. While the balance sheet is equivalent to a snapshot glimpse of a company's financial condition at one point in time, the income statement is designed to reveal the financial results of business activity over a given period of time. Although the income statement may vary in content and form, depending on the company's operation and for whom the statement is being prepared, its purpose is to reveal the profit or loss as a result of operations over the accounting period.ⁿ⁵² This is achieved by setting forth in the income statement the amount and sources of revenue for the period, with the corresponding costs and expenses deducted. Thus, despite differences in content, all income statements begin with gross sales or operating income and end with net income or loss.

An "analysis of surplus" is usually integrated with either the balance sheet or the income statement. However, it may be issued independently.

Requirements for financial statements in the registration process may vary not only by state, but also as to the type of registration involved and the nature of the issuer. Requirements for registration applicable to ongoing business concerns differ from those for promotional or developmental enterprises. In addition, it must be remembered that state administrators are usually given broad, discretionary powers to alter general rules. This discretionary authority is most consistently employed for registration by qualification, although it could be equally utilized for any type of registration statement. Against this backdrop, particular common considerations for financial statement requirements associated with each type of registration are discussed below.ⁿ⁵³

[4] Conditions of Registration

As reflected in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, states may impose certain conditions of registration. Most commonly, a requirement for escrow of securities issued to promoters proceeds of an offering, and impoundment of proceeds of the offering in the state pending receipt by the issuer of a specified amount of proceeds from sales of the securities. Section 305(f) of the 2002 Uniform Act is representative of many such provisions:

[Escrow and impoundment.] A rule adopted or order issued under this [Act] may require as a condition of registration that a security issued within the previous five years or to be issued to a promoter for a consideration substantially less than the public offering price or to a person for a consideration other than cash be deposited in escrow; and that the proceeds from the sale of the registered security in this state be impounded until the issuer receives a specified amount from the sale of the security either in this State or elsewhere. The conditions of any escrow or impoundment required under this subsection may be established by rule adopted or order issued under this [Act], but the administrator may not reject a depository institution solely because of its location in another State.ⁿ⁵⁴

As also illustrated in the 2002 Uniform Act, states may, as a condition of registration, require that the securities be sold only by a specified form of subscription or sales contract, and that a signed or conformed copy of each contract be filed, or preserved for a period specified by rule or order.ⁿ⁵⁵ Both of these provisions for conditions on registration were included in the original Uniform Act as well, and they are common in Blue Sky laws or regulations.ⁿ⁵⁶ Additionally, in states which engage in merit review of registrations by qualification, a specific NASAA Guideline on the impoundment of proceeds is in place.ⁿ⁵⁷

[5] Effective Date of Registration

The original Uniform Act, with its three methods for the registration of securities, also has three separate provisions relating to the time when a filed registration statement is effective. Section 302 of the Act provides that a registration by notification becomes effective "[i]f no stop order is in effect and no proceeding is pending under Section 306 ... at [three o'clock Eastern Standard time] in the afternoon of the second full business day after the filing of the registration statement or the last amendment, or at such earlier time as the Administrator determines."ⁿ⁵⁸ As for registration by coordination, section 303 declares that a registration becomes effective:

[A]t the moment the federal registration statement becomes effective if all the following conditions are satisfied: (1) no stop order is in effect and no proceeding is pending under Section 306; (2) the registration statement has been on file with the Administrator for at least ten days; and (3) a statement of the maximum and minimum proposed offering prices and the maximum underwriting discounts and commissions has been on file for two full business days or such shorter period as the Administrator permits by rule or otherwise and the offering is made within those limitations.ⁿ⁵⁹ Finally, for registration by qualification, section 304 of the Act simply provides that a registration by qualification becomes effective "when the Administrator so orders."ⁿ⁶⁰

Nearly every state has followed the Uniform Act registration by notification provision quite closely, with only a few modifications. Some states, for example, deal differently with the time of effectiveness under a registration by qualification. Under the Uniform Act, a registration by qualification becomes effective when ordered by the Administrator. The 2002 Uniform Act, however, reflects common provisions among the states providing that such a registration becomes effective on the thirtieth day after filing (or such earlier date as the commissioner may determine).ⁿ⁶¹ This statutory approach illustrates what is commonly involved in all registration by qualification situations, whether formally prescribed in the statute or simply as a matter of practice. Interaction between administrators and registrants will normally identify any areas of concern in the review process and prompt cooperative action to delay effectiveness while those concerns are addressed. Administrators in all states have ultimate authority to initiate stop order proceedings regardless of any provision for automatic effectiveness, and some have specific delaying authority as illustrated in the 2002 Uniform Act:

The administrator may delay effectiveness once for not more than 90 days if the administrator determines that the registration statement is not complete in all material respects and promptly notifies the registrant of the determination. The administrator may delay effectiveness for a single period not to exceed 30 days if the administrator determines that delay is necessary or appropriate.ⁿ⁶²

Delays outside or beyond the scope of these provisions are addressed and imposed by way of stop orders.

[6] Period of Registration

The original Uniform Act declares:

Every registration statement is effective for one year from its effective date, or any longer period during which the security is being offered or distributed in a non-exempted transaction by or for the account of the issuer or other person on whose behalf the offering is being made or by any underwriter or broker-dealer who is still offering part of an unsold allotment or subscription taken by him as a participant in the distribution, except during the time a stop order is in effect under Section 306. ... ⁿ⁶³

Most states have adopted the Uniform Act effective period of registration provision.ⁿ⁶⁴ Variations include provision for renewal registrations in the event securities registered for sale are not sold within twelve months and the issuer desires to continue the offering.ⁿ⁶⁵ Other states provide that registration remains in effect for the indefinite period during which the securities are being offered or distributed in a nonexempt transaction by or for the account of the issuer, or by an underwriter or broker-dealer who continues to offer part of an unsold allotment or subscription taken as a participant in the distribution.ⁿ⁶⁶ Still other states provide for effectiveness until revoked by the administrator, terminated by the registrant, or both.ⁿ⁶⁷

[7] Filing Fees

All states require that every person filing a registration statement must pay a filing fee,ⁿ⁶⁸ but the amount is left for determination in each state. Some states have a fixed fee; the majority, however, have adopted the Uniform Act language providing for a fee based on a percentage of offering price, with a typical statute requiring a fee of one-tenth of one percent of the aggregate price.ⁿ⁶⁹ Further, if a particular state has more than one method of registration, there generally is a different fee requirement for each type offered.

[8] Advertising Requirements and Restrictions

Most states have, in either their statutes or by rules, some requirement relating to pre- or post-registration advertising. Requirements vary considerably. The original Uniform Act addresses advertising in Section 403, declaring that:

The Administrator may by rule or order require the filing of any prospectus, pamphlet, circular, form letter, advertisement, or other sales literature or advertising communication addressed or intended for distribution to prospective investors, including clients or prospective clients of an investment adviser unless the security or transaction is exempted by Section 402.ⁿ⁷⁰

In Alabama, all advertising and sales literature must be authorized in writing by the Securities Commissioner before it can be used in newspapers or other public communication.ⁿ⁷¹ Alaska has adopted the Uniform Act language nearly verbatim, and has in addition adopted certain requirements and restrictions by rule. Specifically, the rule provides, in part, that a copy of all proposed advertising material be submitted to the administrator at least five days before its dissemination, and, if not disallowed within five days from filing, the use of such material will be permitted. The rules then lay out a series of specific prohibitions, such as "distribution of any non-factual or inaccurate data or material by words, pictures, charts, graphs or otherwise, based on conjectural, unfounded, extravagant, or flamboyant claims, assertions, predictions, or excessive optimism."ⁿ⁷² Arizona requires the filing of any proposed advertising at least three days before its use. The rule also contains several proscriptions; for example, no advertisement shall contain any "statement or inference that the securities offered are without risk, that dividend returns are assured, or that failure or loss is not possible."ⁿ⁷³ In addition, the Arizona rule establishes certain requirements as to contents and form of all advertising matter.ⁿ⁷⁴ The Arkansas statuteⁿ⁷⁵ is much like the Uniform Act provision; however, Arkansas' regulationsⁿ⁷⁶ require filing at least five days prior to use and contain certain exceptions to the filing requirement and certain specified prohibitions. One prohibition, for example, is for:

[a]ny package or bonus deal, prize, gift, gimmick or similar inducement, combined with or dependent upon the sale of some other product, contract or service, unless such unit or combination has been fully disclosed and specifically described and identified in the application as the security being offered.ⁿ⁷⁷

California prohibits the publication of any advertisement concerning a security unless a copy is filed three days prior to its use.ⁿ⁷⁸ However, the statute also provides exceptions. For instance, California permits certain published advertisements by licensed broker-dealers if they are not effecting a transaction in the security as an underwriter or other participant for the issuer.ⁿ⁷⁹ Florida regulations forbid the use of deceptive or misleading sales material, require filing at least ten days prior to publication, and require written authorization by the state before publication or circulation (unless FINRA-approved or in conformance with 1933 Act requirements, or limited to certain factual price and identifying particulars).ⁿ⁸⁰ In Hawaii, regulations concerning advertising are sparse, simply stating that all security-related advertisements must be filed at least two days prior to their proposed use.ⁿ⁸¹

The Massachusetts statute echoes the Uniform Act provision but excludes the final phrase pertaining to clients of an investment adviser.ⁿ⁸² The regulations provide that any person, including a broker-dealer, its agent, or an issuer's agent, other than an issuer of a security, must file any sales literature used in connection with the offer or sale of security in the Commonwealth.ⁿ⁸³ One copy must be filed with the director before or simultaneously with the first use of the sales literature.ⁿ⁸⁴ However, the regulations exempt the issuer of any non-exempted security issued or guaranteed by the Commonwealth or any subdivision from filing sales literature.ⁿ⁸⁵ Pennsylvania has no formal filing requirement, but restrictions apply to the kind of advertising literature used,ⁿ⁸⁶ and specifically as to the advertising of securities issued by governments, governmental agencies, and political subdivisionsⁿ⁸⁷ and securities issued or guaranteed by banks or credit unions.ⁿ⁸⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 301.

(n2)Footnote 2. The meanings of "offer" and "sale" for all purposes under state Blue Sky laws are discussed in ch.3 supra.

(n3)Footnote 3. Identifying the "Scope of the Act," section 414(c) of the original Uniform Act provides:

For purposes of this section, an offer to sell or buy is made in this state, whether or not either party is then present in this state, when the offer (1) originates from this state or (2) is directed by the offeror to this state and received at the place to which it is directed (or at any post office in this state in the case of a mailed offer).

(n4)Footnote 4. 163 F.3d 780 (3d Cir.) , cert. denied, 528 U.S. 868 (1999) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 163 F.3d at 788-89 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(a); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(a), Official Code Comment.

(n8)Footnote 8.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.081(2).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-7.

(n9)Footnote 9.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.110(a).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A § 304(a).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-62(a).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. 1-207(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 44-1892, 44-1872.

(n11)Footnote 11. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-07, 10-04-08.

(n12)Footnote 12. Id. § 10-04-07.1.

(n13)Footnote 13. Ala. Code § 8-6-8(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.08.

(n15)Footnote 15. Id. § 1707.09.

(n16)Footnote 16. Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.065(1); Or. Admin. Rule 441-65-010.

(n17)Footnote 17. Ill. Comp. Stat., ch. 815, § 5/5.

(n18)Footnote 18. Cal. Corp. Code § 25115.

(n19)Footnote 19. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-107(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g.:

Michigan: Edward v. Ioor, 205 Mich. 617, 172 N.W. 620, 621 (1919) .

Georgia: Gold v. Pioneer Fund, Inc., 107 Ga. App. 855, 132 S.E.2d 144 (Ct. App. 1963) .

Kansas: Scrivner v. Twin Americas Agric. & Indus. Dev., Inc., 1 Kan. App. 2d 404, 573 P.2d 614 (Kan. Ct. App. 1977) ; Home Lumber Co. v. Hopkins, 107 Kan. 153, 190 P. 601 (1970) .

Missouri: Meir v. Crossley, 305 Mo. 206, 264 S.W. 882 (1974) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g.:

Rhode Island: White v. Shiller Chemicals, Inc., 379 F. Supp. 101 (D.R.I. 1974) , aff'd, 503 F.2d 1396 (1st Cir. 1974) .

Wisconsin: Kappus v. Western Hills Oil, Inc., 24 F.R.D. 123 (E.D. Wis. 1959) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Atkinson v. U.S. Operating Co., 129 Minn. 232, 152 N.W. 410 (1915) .

Pennsylvania: Sampson-Miller Associated Cos. v. Washington Home, Inc., 303 F. Supp. 739 (D. Pa. 1969) .

Washington: Banker's Holding Corp. v. Maybury, 161 Wash. 681, 297 P. 740 (1931) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(c).

(n24)Footnote 24. Pa. Stat. Ann. Sec. 207(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. Form U-1 is reproduced at UF-1 infra.

(n26)Footnote 26. The consent to service of process typically requires the filing of a consent appointing the Secretary of State as the lawful representative to receive lawful process. See § 5.03[3][b] infra.

(n27)Footnote 27. Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.704(d). By rule, Michigan prescribes a specific form (form PI) for a prospectus to be used for securities registered by qualification, requiring that it be filed with the administrator, and that it be sent or given to each prospective purchaser within a reasonable time before a commitment to purchase is made. Revision and supplementation requirements are also included. See Mich. Admin Code R 451.704.1.

(n28)Footnote 28. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(2).

In this context, a prospectus is synonymous with an advertisement that offers any security for sale or confirms the sale of any security. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25002 (defining "advertisement" as "any written or printed communication or any communication by means of recorded telephone messages or spoken on radio, television, or similar communications media, published in connection with the offer or sale of a security").

(n29)Footnote 29. Unif. Sec. Act § 303(b)(1).

(n30)Footnote 30. Unif. Sec. Act § 302(b)(4), (5).

Those documents specified in § 304(b) include information on the offering price (the basis if other than cash); a description of any stock options or other security options outstanding, or to be created in connection with the offering; and a copy of any prospectus, pamphlet, circular, advertisement, etc. intended as of the effective date to be used in connection with the offering.

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Code Ala. § 8-6-5(b)(9) (Copy of an offering circular or prospectus to be used in connection with the offering).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-25(b)(5) (Copy of any prospectus and other offering materials).

(n32)Footnote 32. See e.g.:

Delaware: Del. Sec. Reg. Rule 6(A), Schedule A.

Hawaii: Haw. Sec. Reg. 16-38-9.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815, § 5B(3).

New Mexico: Sec. Div. Rule 86-5.14.

(n33)Footnote 33. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Admin. Code § 3 AAC 08.120.

Florida: Fla. Sec. Reg. 3E-700.002.

New Jersey: N.J. Reg. § 13:47A-10.3.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.09.

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g.:

New Hampshire: Sec. 421-B:15-a.

Ohio: Rule 1301:6-3-09.

(n35)Footnote 35. See, e.g.:

Washington: Washington Regs. WAC 460-17A-060 (Documents to be filed with administrator by SCOR registrant).

The availability of Form U-7 is also generally conditioned on adherence to the NASAA Statement of Policy regarding Small Company Offering Registrations. These requirements are discussed in section 5.02[4][d], supra.

(n36)Footnote 36. Unif. Sec. Act § 414(g); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 611. All state consent forms, including Form U-2, the Uniform Consent to Service of Process, are reproduced in Parts III and IV infra.

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.980(g).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 414.

New Jersey: N.J. Reg. § 13:47A-7.1.

(n38)Footnote 38. The underwriter or broker-dealer that is operating on a "firm commitment" basis obligates itself to purchase the security from the issuer or from selling security holders. It then distributes the security to the public. Under these circumstances, the term "applicant" under the original Uniform Securities Act and those state statutes similarly worded includes the underwriter, and it must then file the consent to service of process.

(n39)Footnote 39. "Best efforts" underwritings are those in which the underwriter or broker-dealer merely agrees to use its best efforts to market the security for a commission without obligating itself to make the sales. This is the type of underwriting referred to in Section 414(g) of the original Uniform Securities Act when it states that the issuer "proposes to offer a security ... through any person acting on an agency basis in the common-law sense."

(n40)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Unif. Sec. Act § 414(g).

(n41)Footnote 41. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1892 (applies only to registration by qualification).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 485.12 (applies to registration by coordination and qualification).

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 352-a.

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-8.

(n42)Footnote 42. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1872 (applies only to registration by description).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25165.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.11 (this jurisdiction only has this exception for an incorporated or unincorporated issuer; no exception is provided for registered broker-dealers).

(n43)Footnote 43. But see Ga. Code § 10-5-6(b)(1).

(n44)Footnote 44. Unif. Sec. Act § 202.

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25.216(e).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.602(e).

See also Form U-SB, the Uniform Surety Bond.

(n46)Footnote 46. All uniform forms are reproduced in Volume 2 infra.

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Statements of Policy, Form U-1 Registration Applications, 1 CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. P 9616 (Ariz. Corp. Comm. Apr. 3, 1987).

Vermont: Policy Statement No. S-91:1, Securities Filing Requirements, 3A CCH Blue Sky L.Rep. [par] 58,415 (Sec. Div. Mar. 1, 1994 as amended).

(n48)Footnote 48. See, e.g.:

West Virginia: Comm. Sec. Admin. Regs. Sec. 14.03.

(n49)Footnote 49. See Unif. Sec. Act § 202; § 5.03[3][c] supra .

(n50)Footnote 50. Although Form U-1 is widely utilized as the basic form of registration statement under Blue Sky laws, it does not include any requirement for audited financial statements. As will be seen, however, states impose their own requirements in this area and others. While Form U-1 sets basic requirements, individual states prescribe other categories or forms of information necessary for whatever type of registration and review is involved. This is particularly evident in the manner in which financial statement requirements vary among the states.

(n51)Footnote 51. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 304(b)(17).

(n52)Footnote 52. The accounting period for which the profit or loss is computed on a published income statement is generally the fiscal year of the company, although interim statements are often required for both internal use and for submission as quarterly reports under blue sky regulations. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.081(1)(e). The fiscal year may be coextensive with the calendar year or, if the operating cycle of the company is terminated at a time other than December 31, with some other twelve month period. For a discussion of the propriety of adding "forward looking" information to the financial statements, see Massachusetts Blue Sky Policy Statement, Mass. Securities Quarterly Spring 1987, CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 31,616. Such information is permitted in Massachusetts only upon full disclosure in the offering documents of the underlying assumptions, and a showing "either that the assumptions are reasonable or that the intended offeree is fully capable of understanding and evaluating the information." Id.

(n53)Footnote 53. In all considerations of financial statement requirements in the registration process, references to "certified," financial statements are commonly grounded in the requirement, as Hawaii illustrates, that:

Financial statements as required hereunder shall be prepared, audited and certified by independent certified public accountants or licensed independent public accountants in accordance with generally accepted accounting procedures and practices, applied on a consistent basis. If a report contains exceptions of a material nature it will not be considered to be certified. Haw. Regs., 16-38-11.1.

(n54)Footnote 54. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(f); see, e.g., Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-12a305 (f).

(n55)Footnote 55. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(g).

(n56)Footnote 56. See, e.g.:

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.3803(a)-(b).

(n57)Footnote 57. See, e.g.:

Massachusetts: Code Mass. Regs. § 13.305(A).

(n58)Footnote 58. Unif. Sec. Act. § 302(c); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 303(e).

(n59)Footnote 59. Unif. Sec. Act. § 303(c); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 303(c).

(n60)Footnote 60. Unif. Sec. Act § 304(c).

(n61)Footnote 61. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 304(c).

(n62)Footnote 62. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 304(d).

(n63)Footnote 63. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(i).

See also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(h).

(n64)Footnote 64. See, e.g.:

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.07.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-62(g).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 1-207(j).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. §§ 581-7(B)(2)(b), 581-7(c)(3).

(n65)Footnote 65. See, eg.:

Georgia: 10 Code Ga. Ann. § 10-5-6(i).

(n66)Footnote 66. See, e.g.:

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. § 7307(d).

(n67)Footnote 67. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-8(f).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-511.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code. § 21-20.260.

(n68)Footnote 68. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(b).

(n69)Footnote 69. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(b).

(n70)Footnote 70. Unif. Sec. Act § 403. This provision was carried into the 2002 Uniform Act as part of its antifraud provisions, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 504 ("Filing of Sales and Advertising Literature").

(n71)Footnote 71. Ala. Reg. Rule 830-X-2.06 (however, so called "tombstone ads" are exempted from this rule).

(n72)Footnote 72. Alaska Admin. Code tit. 3, § 3 AAC 08.900(2)(F). The rules also provide that the following forms and types of advertising are permitted without the necessity for filing or the prior authorization of the administrator:

(1) So-called "tombstone" advertising, containing no more than the following information:

- (i) name and address of issuer;
- (ii) identity or title of security;
- (iii) per unit offering price, number of shares and amount of the offering;
- (iv) brief, general description of business;
- (v) name and address of underwriter, or address where offering circular or prospectus can be obtained; and
- (vi) date of issuance;

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.03

- (2) Dividend notices, proxy statements and reports to shareholders including investment company quarterly and semi-annual reports;
- (3) Sales literature, advertising or market letters prepared in conformity with the applicable regulations and in compliance with the filing requirements of the SEC, NASD, or a recognized national securities exchange;
- (4) Factual or information letters, bulletins or releases, similar to "news letters," relating to issuer's progress or activities, status of the offering or current financial condition; and
- (5) Dissemination of any data incorporated in the offering circular or prospectus, so long as the use of such material out of context does not tend to detract from, distort, supersede or express a different meaning than the representations or disclosures contained therein.

Id. § 3 AAC 08.900(3).

(n73)Footnote 73. Sec. Reg. § R14-4-103(B)(2). See also State of Arizona v. English, 3 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 73,853 (Ariz. Sup. Ct. 1992), in which the court held that using promotional material advertising low risk and high return on investment violated Arizona Blue Sky antifraud provisions. In Arizona, a self-addressed stamped envelope must accompany the advertising material for acknowledgment. Ariz. Blue Sky Policy Statement, CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 9617 (Apr. 3, 1987). If the material does not conform to the state's standards, a letter indicating the areas of noncompliance will be sent to the issuer within three days after receipt of the material. Id.

(n74)Footnote 74. Sec. Reg. § R14-4-103(C)-(F).

(n75)Footnote 75. Ark. Code Ann. § 23-42-502.

(n76)Footnote 76. See generally Ark. Sec. Rule 502.

(n77)Footnote 77. Ark. Sec. Reg. Rule 502.03(G).

(n78)Footnote 78. Cal. Corp. Code § 25300(a).

(n79)Footnote 79. Id., § 25300(b).

(n80)Footnote 80. Fla. Sec. Reg. § 3E-100.007.

(n81)Footnote 81. Haw. Sec. Reg. § 16-38-18.

(n82)Footnote 82. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 100A, § 403 (statute additionally prohibits the administrator from requiring affirmative approval or filing of sales literature before its use or requiring issuers outside the Commonwealth to file such literature).

(n83)Footnote 83. Mass. Sec. Reg. 14.403(A).

(n84)Footnote 84. Mass. Sec. Reg. 14.403(A).

(n85)Footnote 85. Mass. Sec. Reg. 14.403(A). For the definition of "sales literature," see Mass. Sec. Reg. 14.403(C)).

(n86)Footnote 86. Pa. Sec. Reg. § 606.031.

The Pennsylvania Securities Commission has issued a media guide on illegal securities advertisements to Pennsylvania newspapers, magazines and other periodicals, as well as radio and television stations. The guide explains in general language how to recognize securities advertisements and those that are potentially illegal. See 3 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 48,680V.

(n87)Footnote 87. Pa. Sec. Reg. § 606.033.

(n88)Footnote 88. Id. § 606.034.

43 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.04

§ 5.04 Registration of Non-Issuer Transactions

[1] Generally

Non-issuer transactions fall into two general categories: (1) "resale" transactions; and (2) "secondary" distributions. Resale transactions involve persons purchasing securities of an issuer in an offering that is either registered or exempt under provisions of state and federal law who then resell those securities. In practical terms there is a two step process here. By one means or another securities have come into the hands of an investor, who then proceeds independently to resell them. Although most easily understood in terms of resales in relation to a primary offering by the issuer, it is important to keep in mind that registration issues associated with non-issuer transactions are entirely independent from the circumstances under which a non-issuer acquired the securities, and whether or not, or to what extent, registration or other state regulation was involved in the process whereby securities reached the hands of one who seeks to dispose of them by resale. "Secondary" distributions are those in which securities held by a non-issuer are offered and sold by control persons or affiliates of the issuer in circumstances indistinguishable from a primary offering, and in which the concerns for investor protection are the same.

For the most part, state Blue Sky laws provide exemptions applicable to "resale" transactions by non-issuers. The most common examples are those contained in section 402(b) of the original Uniform Securities Act, which exempts:

- (1) Any "isolated" non-issuer transaction;
- (2) Any non-issuer sale of an outstanding security that is "manualized," that is, the issuer is listed in a recognized securities manual containing certain basic management and financial data; and
- (3) Any non-issuer transaction effected by or through a registered broker-dealer pursuant to an unsolicited order or offer to buy.ⁿ¹ State exemptions applicable to listed or traded securities are likewise equally available for non-issuer transactions.

As a matter of federal law in the non-issuer setting, NSMIA eliminates state jurisdiction over non-issuer, or resale, transactions in many instances. A "covered security" under the act includes any security involved in a transaction federally exempt under sections 4(1) and 4(3) of the Securities Act so long as the issuer is a reporting company under provisions of the Exchange Act. In addition, transactions exempt under Section 4(4) are all deemed covered securities.

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.04

The combination of these federal transactional exemptions will blanket many transactions by non-issuers and eliminate any question concerning registration requirements under state securities laws.

The second classification of non-issuer transactions, "secondary distributions," is a more difficult matter under state Blue Sky laws. "Secondary distribution" is not a defined term as a matter of state or federal securities laws. It is, however, a transaction whose characteristics are such that the non-issuer, who may be a control person of the issuer, or is perhaps a very large holder disposing of a substantial block of securities in an underwritten offering involving all of the mechanics and processes of a primary offering, is a person not entitled to claim an exemption at the federal level under section 4(1) of the Securities Act for a transaction not involving "an issuer, underwriter or dealer." A key consideration is the presence of an "underwriter," which, under federal law, is defined to include:

[a]ny person who has purchased from an issuer with a view to, or offers or sells for an issuer in connection with, the distribution of any security, or participates or has a direct participation in any such undertaking, or participates in or has a participation in the direct or indirect underwriting of any such undertaking As used in this paragraph the term "issuer" shall include, in addition to an issuer, any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect common control with the issuer.ⁿ²

Thus, one who is a non-issuer, but who is nevertheless a statutory' underwriter cannot claim the federal Securities Act section 4(1) exemption, and may also be a statutory "issuer," impacting the availability of exemptions for others engaging in resales of securities acquired from her. At the state level, the non-issuer's reliance on an "isolated transaction" exemption in circumstances involving the presence of a control person "issuer" and a statutory "underwriter" becomes problematic.

Blue Sky laws, and their transaction exemptions, historically did not focus on secondary distributions or the basic question of when or if registration is required. Indeed, drafters of the original Uniform Act cogently identified the problem:

Perhaps the most difficult aspect of the area of securities registration, and often the most ambiguous under the present statutes, is the application of the registration provisions to secondary distributions or other transactions not involving the issuer of the security. In many statutes it is difficult or impossible to say with any certainty when registration is required in such a case; who must or may register; how many units of the security should be registered; who may sell once a registration becomes effective; and, as a result, who is civilly liable.ⁿ³

It is clear that a registration statement may be filed not only by an issuer, but also any person on whose behalf an offering is to be made.ⁿ⁴ Moreover, the 2002 Uniform Act recognizes that in the case of a non-issuer distribution, information or a record otherwise required of an issuer may not be required unless it is known to the person filing the registration statement, or to the person on whose behalf the distribution is to be made, or unless it can be furnished by those persons without unreasonable effort or expense.ⁿ⁵ There is no simple answer, however, to the question whether a non-issuer transaction is subject to registration requirements, except to say that it must be registered unless an exemption is available. As a general matter, the focus will be on the "isolated non-issuer transaction" exemption found in one form or another in all Blue Sky laws.ⁿ⁶ However, as explained in Official Comments to the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the exemption does not cover sales by a person or a group in circumstances that constitute a "distribution" as that term is used for purposes of the federal securities laws, or are too frequent to be considered "isolated" under the relevant state law.ⁿ⁷

Secondary distributions are subject to registration requirements because they raise the same concerns and investor protection needs as a primary distribution by an issuer. Blue Sky laws will apply, and the array of "issuer" exemptions available in state laws are not available to non-issuers or for non-issuer distributions. There are, however, various transactions exemptions from registration requirements specifically for non-issuers in addition to the isolated transaction exemption. These non-issuer exemptions generally address transactions by a non-issuer by or through a registered (or exempt) broker-dealer in securities meeting particular criteria. For example, section 202(2) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act reflects a common exemption in Blue Sky laws for nonissuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer registered or exempt from registration in a security of a class that has been outstanding in the hands of the investing public for at least 90 days, where certain qualifying criteria concerning the issuer, the security, or the transaction are met.ⁿ⁸ One criterion, for example, is that the security is sold at a price reasonably related to its current market price. Another is that there is current publicly available business and financial information concerning the issuer.ⁿ⁹

"Class" Registration. Section 305(i) of the original Uniform Securities Act established the concept of "class" registration of securities specifically to address non-issuer transactions. It provides in pertinent part:

All outstanding of the same class as a registered security are considered to be registered for the purpose of any non-issuer transaction (1) so long as the registration statement is effective and (2) between the thirtieth day after the entry of any stop order suspending or revoking the effectiveness of the registration statement under section 306 (if the registration statement did not relate in whole or in part to a non-issuer distribution) and one year from the effective date of the registration statement.ⁿ¹⁰

Class registration under section 305(i) or an equivalent is carried into most Blue Sky laws,ⁿ¹¹ and in a simplified form, is also part of the 2002 Uniform Act.ⁿ¹² The principal effects of class registration are support the secondary trading market, and avoiding the prospect of finding a secondary distribution in the aftermarket triggering registration requirements. There is a fundamental issue, however, when and to what extent particular non-issuer sales would not be considered to be a secondary distribution subject to registration requirements. The Uniform Act provisions for class registration come in the context of setting the effective period of a registration statement, which in most cases is one year unless extended by order. Thus, the flexibility for non-issuer transactions afforded by class registration is necessarily limited only to the period during which the registration is effective. Moreover, the statutory underwriter concept is not abrogated by these provisions and in any given set of circumstances at any time, a non-issuer transaction may be deemed to be a secondary distribution subject to registration requirements as a matter of federal or state securities laws.ⁿ¹³

[2] Particular Requirements

As a general rule, there is not much difference between procedures applicable to a primary registration and those for a secondary registration. However, under the Uniform Act, if the non-issuer registration is by qualification, the registrant is relieved from filing otherwise required information "unless it is known to the person filing the registration statement or to the persons on whose behalf the distribution is to be made, or can be furnished by them without unreasonable effort or expense."ⁿ¹⁴

A similar rule is applicable to any periodic reports that may be required to keep information in the application current.ⁿ¹⁵ The provision is intended to apply to the non-issuer seller who is not in possession of audited financial statements and other information normally required to be filed. If the non-issuer applicant is in a control relationship with the issuer, or such person otherwise has access to required information, then the phrase "without unreasonable effort or expense" is not applicable. This particular provision has been substantially adopted in a number of states.ⁿ¹⁶

Recognizing the special circumstances that may often be involved with non-issuer registrations, North Carolina includes a special registration procedure for non-issuer sellers known as registration by announcement.ⁿ¹⁷ The procedure is applicable only for securities "that have been outstanding and in the hands of the public for not less than one year as a result of prior original registration,"ⁿ¹⁸ or for securities of life insurance companies that have been in continuous operation for twenty years. The announcement that must be filed with the North Dakota Commissioner of Securities by a registered dealer must contain the name and address of the issuer and a description of the security being offered. In addition, the issuer must mail a current balance sheet to the Commissioner. The effective date of such registration is the date of the filing of the announcement.

Non-issuer distributions of securities are in practice most often accomplished through so-called "piggy-back" arrangements by which shares offered and sold by an individual or institutional holder are included in a registration statement for securities being offered by the issuer. In any situation in which securities are offered and sold by one party as part of a registration undertaken by another, there is a risk to the secondary offeror/seller that the party on whom he or she has piggy-backed might voluntarily withdraw the registration. Such an action would automatically affect non-issuer sellers who have placed reliance for their own sales on the fact that the securities are registered. Non-issuer sellers unaware of the withdrawal could find themselves in violation of law and open to otherwise unwarranted civil liability. To guard against such an occurrence, the original Uniform Act provides:

A registration statement may not be withdrawn for one year from its effective date if any securities of the same class are outstanding. A registration statement may be withdrawn otherwise only in the discretion of the Administrator.ⁿ¹⁹

Similar protection for a non-issuer distribution has been offered in a number of states that allow non-issuers to sell securities registered by another person.ⁿ²⁰

Some special consideration is necessary in regard to secondary offerings of interests or participations in oil, gas, or mining titles or leases or in payments out of production under such titles or leases, all of which are specifically defined to be securities.ⁿ²¹ Under the Uniform Act, these securities are deemed not to have an issuer as such.ⁿ²² Consequently, the offer and sale of these interests are always considered non-issuer transactions both in the Uniform Act and in the states adopting the provision.ⁿ²³ The position in these states may have a practical bearing on securities that may be registered by notification.

As is discussed in more detail earlier,ⁿ²⁴ Registration by notification is a simplified registration procedure generally applicable when an issuer has a proven record of earnings and no default in payments due on any senior securities. Under the Uniform Securities Act, non-issuer distributions may be eligible for registration by notification if the same class of securities was previously registered or was originally issued pursuant to an exemption.ⁿ²⁵ However, because oil, gas, and mineral interests have no issuer, under ordinary circumstances, all such distributions would be eligible for registration by notification by non-issuers.ⁿ²⁶ As a result, the Uniform Act specifically excludes the eligibility of non-issuer distributions of such securities from registration by notification.ⁿ²⁷ This position has been adopted by most of the states that declare that there is no issuer for these securitiesⁿ²⁸ and by a few states that do not statutorily consider such interests as having no issuer.ⁿ²⁹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(1)-(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Securities Act § 2(11), 15 U.S.C. § 77b(11).

(n3)Footnote 3. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act. §§ 305(i), 305(j).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(i); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(e).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(1), Off. Comment No.2.

(n8)Footnote 8. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Id., § 202(2)(D).

(n10)Footnote 10. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(i).

The original Uniform Act provision protects investors in a primary distribution by allowing such investors to sell securities so purchased even though a stop order has been issued against further sales of the original issue. If a stop order is entered against the seller of the original issue, all trading, including non-issuer trading, in that security must cease immediately. However, after thirty days, during which time it is presumed that the public has become aware of the stop order and the reason for it, non-issuer trading may resume and continue until one year from the date the registration of the original issue became effective. This rule applies only to registration statements filed in connection with a primary distribution. If the registration statement in effect is for a secondary distribution and a stop order is issued, all trading must stop and may not continue unless the order is vacated or modified by the administrator.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g.:

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. 292.380(6).

Massachusetts: G.L. Mass. Sec.304(g).

In states adopting this particular Uniform Act provision, it seems that administrators would give their respective state statutes the same interpretation as given in the various commentaries to the Uniform Act. A few states have opted not to adopt the Uniform Act provision, but the position of these states is still reasonably clear. These statutes provide, in effect, that all outstanding securities of the same class as a registered security are considered registered for the purpose of non-issuer transactions or distributions.

A comparable California provision allows non-issuer distributions to be made without registration if they fall within the terms of a transactional exemption. Cal. Corp. Code § 25104(h). Generally, a distribution of securities of the same class may be made without registration if a primary registration statement became effective within eighteen months prior to the non-issuer offer or sale. If the non-issuer sales are of a class of securities registered pursuant to a primary registration of securities issued in a reorganization or recapitalization, or if the sales are of a class of securities previously registered for purposes of a non-issuer distribution, then the registration must have become effective within twelve months prior to the offer or sale. The exemption applies to non-issuer distributions meeting the following conditions:

Any offer or sale of a security if a qualification under chapter 2 (commencing with Section 25110) of this part for any securities of the same class has become effective within 18 months or longer period as the Commissioner may order provided that each consecutive order shall be for no more than six months, prior to such offer or sale or if a qualification under chapter 3 (commencing with Section 25120) or chapter 4 (commencing with Section 25130) of this part for any securities of the same class has become effective within 12 months prior to such offer or sale, provided no order under Section 25140 or subdivision (a) of Section 25143 is in effect under this division with respect to such qualification, and, provided further, that this exemption does not apply to such securities offered pursuant to a registration under the Securities Act of 1933 or pursuant to an exemption under Regulation A [Reg. § 230.252] under that act if the aggregate offering price of the securities offered under such exemption exceeds fifty thousand dollars ($50,000). The commissioner may, by rule or order, withhold this exemption with respect to securities qualified only pursuant to a limited offering qualification.

(n12)Footnote 12. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(h) ("For the purposes of a nonissuer transaction, all outstanding securities of the same class identified in the registration statement as a security registered under this [Act] are considered to be registered while the registration statement is effective").

(n13)Footnote 13. See also 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-207(j):

The fact that a registration statement has been effective in this State with respect to any security does not permit sales of securities of the same class by the issuer or an affiliate of the issuer if such person did not file the registration statement, unless a separate registration statement is filed and declared effective with respect thereto, or an exemption from registration is available ...

(n14)Footnote 14. Unif. Sec. Act. § 305(f); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(g).

(n15)Footnote 15. Id.

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.110(f).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 304(f).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-28(f).

See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25131(d) (applicable to non-issuer registration by notification).

(n17)Footnote 17.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-07.1.

(n18)Footnote 18. Id. § 10-04-07.1(1).

(n19)Footnote 19. Unif. Sec. Act. § 305(i); 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(h).

(n20)Footnote 20. States providing such protection include Alaska, Massachusetts, and New Jersey.

Other states that permit non-issuer sales when any registration statement is in effect have adopted a provision to the effect that post effective withdrawal will be allowed only with the consent of the administrator. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-511.

Many states, while requiring non-issuer registration, do not make their position clear as to when such persons are required to register the securities they wish to sell. Of these states, a few have adopted a provision that disallows post effective withdrawals without the consent of the administrator. See, e.g.:

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7307(d).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-207(j).

(n21)Footnote 21. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(l).

(n22)Footnote 22. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(g)(2).

The term "issuer" when applied to factional interests in oil, gas or other mineral leases, rights or royalties means the person who first divides the interest sold into fractional interests and each fractional interest holder who subsequently divides and conveys the interest. Ill. Adm. Code tit. 14 § 130.205.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.:

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-49(h)(2).

(n24)Footnote 24. See § 5.02[1], supra.

(n25)Footnote 25. Unif. Sec. Act § 302(a)(2); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 302 ("registration by filing").

(n26)Footnote 26. Official Comment to Unif. Sec. Act. § 302(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. Unif. Sec. Act § 302(a)(2). This issue would not arise in states adopting the Rev. Unif. Sec. Act approach, as the owners offering such interests are deemed to be issuers.

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.080(a)(2).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-502(a)(2).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.702(a)(2).

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-5(a)(2).

44 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.05

§ 5.05 Withdrawal or Abandonment of Registration

For a variety of reasons, although most often in the face of either insufficient investor interest or in anticipation of unfavorable action by the administrator on a pending registration, an issuer or offeror may seek to abandon or withdraw the registration. Once filed, a registration statement under any of the available procedures may not simply be withdrawn, but is rather contingent on the approval of the administrator. In Illinois, for example:

Any application for registration or any amendment or exhibit thereto may be withdrawn, prior to registration, upon application, if the Secretary of State, finding the withdrawal consistent with the public interest and the protection of investors, consents thereto. The application for the consent shall be signed and shall state fully the grounds upon which made. The examination fee paid upon the filing of the application will not be returned. All papers comprising the application for registration or amendment, with the exception of the application form and correspondence, will be removed from the files of the Secretary of State and destroyed unless the applicant has requested return of the papers required to be retained by this Part. The application form will be plainly marked with the date of the giving of the consent, and in the following manner: "Withdrawn upon the request of the applicant, the Secretary of State consenting thereto."¹

However stated, in all states a registration statement may be withdrawn only in the discretion of the administrator. While most often a withdrawal would occur prior to the effectiveness of a registration, permission to withdraw after effectiveness will be made subject to appropriate undertakings for appropriate notifications, the cancellation of any subscriptions and return of any purchase payments. Specific requirements in some states include notification to all persons making a market in the issuer's securities.

Withdrawal in some instances occurs by operation of law, as a registration statement is presumed to be withdrawn if the registrant takes no affirmative action to complete the registration within a prescribed period of time.² More often, however, inaction and the passage of time in the registration process is treated as an abandonment. Thus in Maryland, for example, a registration statement that has not been made effective within one year from the date of initial filing may be deemed by the Commissioner as abandoned.³ The principal danger in abandonment of a registration is that the administrator may proceed to issue an adverse order, with consequences extending to registrations pending in other states either at the time or at some time in the future. Orders amounting to a denial of effectiveness, even on the basis of abandonment, may adversely impact the issuer's ability to meet qualifying criteria in the same or other states for subsequent or related registrations. Thus, withdrawal of the registration will normally be the most desirable course in the face of obstacles to effectiveness in a particular state. Post-effective withdrawals will be closely scrutinized.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Illinois: Ill. Adm. Code tit. 14, § 130.538.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, eg.:

Kentucky: Ky. Admin Regs. Rule 808 KAR 10:050 (No action to consummate the registration for a period in excess of ninety days).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ann. Code Md. § 11-508(c).

45 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.06

§ 5.06 Post Effective Filing Requirements and Amendments

[1] Reporting Requirements

Completion of the registration process does not end the process of compliance with filing requirements. As a general matter, states require post-effective periodic reports, which detail the progress and status of sales within the state, to be filed. Section 305(j) of the original Uniform Act provides:

So long as a registration statement is effective, the Administrator may by rule or order require the person who filed the registration statement to file reports, not more often than quarterly, to keep reasonably current the information contained in the registration statement and to disclose the progress of the offering.ⁿ¹

States adopting this or similar provisions require issuers to submit sales reports on a monthly, quarterly, or annual basis.ⁿ² In addition to sales reporting requirements, many states require that when sales within a state are completed the issuer must file a termination report specifying the date the offer terminated and statistics concerning the results of the offering. Alabama is typical:

Any issuer, whose securities have been registered by qualification ... who has completed the sale of the securities so registered, or who desires to discontinue the sale of said registered securities, and who desires to be discharged from further supervision of the commissioner or from further compliance with the Alabama securities law, may file with the commissioner a notice in writing to such effect, and the commissioner may thereupon enter an order canceling the registration of such securities, and such issuer shall thereupon be discharged from filing any financial report except as the commissioner may require up to and including the date of the filing of said notice as hereinabove provided. No such notice may be filed within one year after the effective date of the registration statement if any securities of the same class as those registered are outstanding.ⁿ³

Some states empower the administrator to extend post-effective filing or reporting requirements for additional periods of time beyond that otherwise provided. These types of requirements, and discretion built into their application, illustrate one mechanism by which controls and conditions may be imposed in particular situations to meet concerns of administrators in assuring that issuers of securities offered and sold in the state remain faithful to represented undertakings and their intended enterprise in seeking capital.

[2] Amendments

Blue Sky laws widely contemplate post-effective amendments to registrations for the purpose of increasing the securities specified as proposed to be offered. The Uniform Act originally addressed post-effective amendments as an accommodation to investment companies (mutual funds) that continually offer their securities. The Uniform Act thus provides for a registration statement relating to a security issued by an investment company, or unit investment trust, to be amended after its effective date in order to add securities simply by paying an additional fee.ⁿ⁴

The provision for post-effective amendment of a registration is not restricted to mutual funds. As reflected in section 305(j) of the 2002 Uniform Act, any registration statement may be amended after its effective date.ⁿ⁵ Thus, for example, in Maryland, a registration statement relating to any security registered by notification, coordination or qualification may be amended after its effective date so as to increase the securities proposed to be offered.ⁿ⁶ Amendments under these provisions require an additional filing fee, calculated in the manner specified for offerings generally, and become effective upon an order of the administrator if the excess securities have not yet been sold. In the case of securities that are sold in an amount in excess of the amount or number specified in an effective registration statement, states may provide for effectiveness of an amendment covering those securities as of the date of sale if time limitations and fee requirements are met.ⁿ⁷ In any case, amendments may expressly be conditioned on the offering price and underwriters' commissions and discounts remaining unchanged from those previously reported.ⁿ⁸

Although not always addressed in terms of amendments to a registration, states commonly require attention to the accuracy of information contained in a registration statement throughout the effective period of an offering, and make provision for correction or updating of information. As discussed in section 5.06[2] below, stop orders suspending or revoking a registration may be issued based upon the completeness and accuracy of the registration statement as of its effective date. Drafters of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act explained:

A registration statement must be kept current with changing developments until the effectiveness date, but a registration statement is not required to be amended after the effective date except to correct inaccuracies or deficiencies which existed as of the effective date. An administrator, however, separately may require ... periodic reports or amendments to keep reasonably current the information contained in the registration statement.ⁿ⁹

Louisiana addresses the point by providing for supplementation of a prospectus, a procedure common used:

Any prospectus forming a part of a registration statement which has become effective ... may be supplemented without amending such registration statement by adding information regarding factual developments which occurred after the effective date of such registration statement and by deleting statements of fact which may be misleading or immaterial.ⁿ¹⁰

The prospectus, as supplemented, must be filed, may be used five business days after filing, or a shorter time as the commissioner may allow. The supplementing process is commonly referred to as "stickering" a prospectus, as the means of supplementation is most often by attaching or "stickering" the information to the prospectus rather than making substantive changes to the body of the document in use.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unif. Sec. Act § 305(j); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(i).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.110(j); Alaska Sec. Reg. § 08.230.

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25145, 25146. See also Cal. Sec. Rule 260.146, which requires registrants through open qualification to submit semi-annual financial reports within 120 days after the end of their fiscal year and within 90 days after the end of the first six months of their fiscal year. Issuers exempted by Cal. Corp. Code § 25146 and issuers filing reports pursuant to Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 are exempted from these requirements.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.380(7).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 304(h) (secretary may require the filing of such reports).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-62(h); N.J. Sec. Reg. § 13:47A-6.3.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-207(K); see also Pa. Reg. § 207.110 (reports of receipts and expenditures of proceeds are to be filed within 30 days after each three-month period from the effective date of the offering; a complete balance sheet and profit and loss statement are required for the termination period of the offering).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ala. Code § 8-6-8(h).

See also:

Delaware: Del. Sec. Reg. Rule 7(e):

If an offering of securities registered by coordination has been completed the person who filed the registration statement may be relieved of filing further reports by notifying the Commissioner in writing of the fact that the offering has been completed.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unif. Sec. Act. § 305(k).

(n5)Footnote 5. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 305(j).

(n6)Footnote 6. Ann. Code Md. § 11-510.

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g.:

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.705(j).

(n8)Footnote 8. See:

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-6(m).

(n9)Footnote 9. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act. § 305, Off. Comment (3).

(n10)Footnote 10. La. Rev. Stat. § 51:706 (J)(2).

46 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.07

§ 5.07 Administrative Authority

[1] Denial, Suspension and Revocation of Registration

The historic mission of Blue Sky laws has always been grounded in the gatekeeper's role, and intercession of state administrators to prevent the offering of unsound or fraudulent securities. State authority to deny, suspend or revoke the registration of securities is a significant element of the Blue Sky registration process. Section 306 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act exemplifies the basic authority that is in place in all states:

(a) [Stop orders.] The administrator may issue a stop order denying effectiveness to, or suspending or revoking the effectiveness of, a registration statement if the administrator finds that the order is in the public interest and that:

(1) the registration statement as of its effective date or before the effective date in the case of an order denying effectiveness, an amendment under Section 305(j) as of its effective date, or a report under Section 305(i), is incomplete in a material respect or contains a statement that, in the light of the circumstances under which it was made, was false or misleading with respect to a material fact;

(2) this [Act] or a rule adopted or order issued under this [Act] or a condition imposed under this [Act] has been willfully violated, in connection with the offering, by the person filing the registration statement; by the issuer, a partner, officer, or director of the issuer or a person having a similar status or performing a similar function; a promoter of the issuer; or a person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer; but only if the person filing the registration statement is directly or indirectly controlled by or acting for the issuer; or by an underwriter;

(3) the security registered or sought to be registered is the subject of a permanent or temporary injunction of a court of competent jurisdiction or an administrative stop order or similar order issued under any federal, foreign, or state law other than this [Act] applicable to the offering, but the administrator may not institute a proceeding against an effective registration statement under this paragraph more than one year after the date of the order or injunction on which it is based, and the administrator may not issue an order

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.07

under this paragraph on the basis of an order or injunction issued under the securities act of another State unless the order or injunction was based on conduct that would constitute, as of the date of the order, a ground for a stop order under this section;

(4) the issuer's enterprise or method of business includes or would include activities that are unlawful where performed;

(5) with respect to a security sought to be registered under Section 303, there has been a failure to comply with the undertaking required by Section 303(b)(4);

(6) the applicant or registrant has not paid the filing fee, but the administrator shall void the order if the deficiency is corrected; or

(7) the offering:

(A) will work or tend to work a fraud upon purchasers or would so operate; [or]

(B) has been or would be made with unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions, or other compensation, or promoters' profits or participations, or unreasonable amounts or kinds of options[; or

(C) is being made on terms that are unfair, unjust, or inequitable].n1

Section 306(a)(7) above presents the common provisions in Blue Sky laws for both merit and disclosure-based regulation of offerings. NSMIA preempted state authority in regard to merit regulation of offerings of "covered securities," but states remain free to engage in the process with respect to other offerings. Even before NSMIA, however, not all states engaged in merit review of offerings.n2 A significant number of states chose instead to evaluate only disclosure associated with an offering rather than its qualitative characteristics and elements. That continues to be the case today with respect to offerings of securities that are not NSMIA covered securities. Nevertheless, all Blue Sky laws contain some broadly stated fraud-based or fairness standard as the basis for administrative authority to deny, suspend or revoke registration regardless of what approach is taken in the review of an offering.

Post-NSMIA, state administrators retain general antifraud enforcement authority over securities offerings whether or not a NSMIA covered security is involved. However, the states' retained antifraud enforcement authority does not preserve authority to regulate the registration or offering process for NSMIA covered securities by imposing requirements concerning the content of prospectuses or offering documents, or otherwise imposing procedures for review that operate to control content. This is a matter of NSMIA "use" preemption relating to offering documents, and is discussed in further detail later in this chapter.n3

The power to suspend the offer or sale of securities within a state, without regard to the security's NSMIA "covered" status, is expressly preserved in regard to the failure of an issuer to make any required filing, or to pay any requisite fee. Except where NSMIA covered securities falling under the classification of "nationally traded securities" are involved, states may require notice filings and assess fees in connection with an offering in the state. Enforcement authority in regard to these permitted requirements is the power to suspend the offering.n4

[a] Standards--Generally

Where NSMIA covered securities are not involved, state authority in regard to registration or qualification of securities for offer and sale is unfettered, and state powers remain defined by the statutes. Depending on the type of registration involved, a registration statement may become effective upon filing, or be subject to review, including the full scope of merit review, prior to effectiveness. In any case, once effective, a registration statement is subject to suspension and/or revocation under a variety of circumstances and upon application of varying standards.

The standards for suspension or revocation of an effective registration are, at the baseline, the same as those applied for denying qualification where an offering is subject to pre-effective merit review. Orders suspending or revoking the effectiveness of a registration are, however, reviewable in accordance with the applicable provision of a state's administrative procedures act or code, and thus involve not only the baseline standards, but also the manner and process by which the discretion exercised in applying them is undertaken.ⁿ⁵

As illustrated by section 307 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act discussed above, standards applied in the process are formulated in varying ways among the states. Many state standards sound in "fraud," others speak in terms of degrees of "fairness," and still others speak of what is or is not "fair, just and equitable." In discussing the basis on which a state's administrator decides whether or not to grant an issuer the right to sell its securities within the state, or make a determination that it should be terminated, several general groupings of states can be made, but with hybrid standards some states fall into more than one group.

First, there are states where an application for registration will be denied or an already effective registration statement will be suspended or revoked if the administrator finds that a denial, suspension, or revocation would be in the public interest and that any or all of the following apply: (1) the registration statement is incomplete or contains any false or misleading facts; (2) the issuer or any controlling person willfully violated the blue sky law; (3) the security is subject to an administrative stop order or a judicial injunction; (4) the issuer's method of business is illegal; (5) the offering has worked or tended to work a fraud upon the public; (6) there is an unreasonable amount of discounts, commissions, or options connected with the offering; (7) if sought to be registered by notification, it is not eligible; (8) if sought to be registered by coordination, the necessary undertaking has not been obtained; or (9) the proper filing fee has not been paid.ⁿ⁶

Another group of states can be referred to as the "fair, just, and equitable" states.ⁿ⁷ This group includes California,ⁿ⁸ Florida,ⁿ⁹ North Dakota,ⁿ¹⁰ Oregon,ⁿ¹¹ Tennessee,ⁿ¹² and Texas.ⁿ¹³ In these states, a registration statement will be denied or suspended (or more practically, the administrator will permit the issuer to modify the offering so as to meet that state's standards) if the offering is not fair, just, or equitable.

The categories of information required and the state standards for the denial, suspension, or revocation of registration based upon the proffered data vary widely. States employing a fraud standard permit denial, suspension, or revocation of registration if the offering would tend to work a fraud upon purchasers,ⁿ¹⁴ although, as with the Uniform Act, this particular fraud-based standard is part of a series of disqualifying criteria, including such things as illegality and unreasonable intermediary compensation.ⁿ¹⁵

Merit regulation states employ any number of qualitative grounds available to the administrator on which to authorize stop orders or denials, revocations, or suspensions of registration. The language often used is "unfair, unjust or inequitable."ⁿ¹⁶ The mid-ground rests with states that have adopted the language of § 306(a)(2)(F) of the Uniform Act as their prime standard,ⁿ¹⁷ and focus their attention on whether the offering involves "unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions, or other compensation."ⁿ¹⁸

[b] Particular Standards

In Chapter 6, the subject of "merit regulation" is considered in depth, including qualitative standards applied throughout the states in regard to particular aspects of an offering. However, as an introduction to that extensive analysis, and in order to fully understand the process of Blue Sky registration and the exercise of authority in regard to denial, suspension or revocation, it is useful here to examine the bases for administrative action, and some of the particular standards on which it is premised.

The standards applied by state administrators demonstrate two basic patterns. First, there are generic rules dealing with such things as promotional shares, excessive warrants and options, non-voting common stock or common stock with disproportionate voting rights, or preferred stock dividend and debenture interest coverage, as well as debt securities generally. Second, there are separate guidelines to address specific classes of issues or offerings, such as real estate, oil and gas, cattle feeding or equipment leasing. In all cases, standards applied in individual states are characterized as guidelines, particular to the state. However, in an effort to bring some uniformity and greater certainty in application, such guidelines and statements of policy have been promulgated by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA), and have been widely adopted, in one form or another, among the states.ⁿ¹⁹ As an example, NASAA adopted a statement of policy aimed specifically at debt securities, which provides in part as follows:

.....

A public offering of debt securities may be disallowed by the Administrator if the Issuer's adjusted cash flow for the last fiscal year or its average adjusted cash flow for the last three (3) fiscal years prior to the public offering was insufficient to cover its fixed charges, meet its debt obligations as they became due, and service the debt securities being offered.ⁿ²⁰

Some states have regulations containing specific standards that are applied by the administrator in determining whether to grant an initial application for registration or cancel an existing registration.ⁿ²¹ Many of the standards are quite similar to one another, and thus an examination of a few representative provisions is illustrative of their application in practice.

The regulations pertaining to registration standards in Missouriⁿ²² address nearly twenty considerations that may form the basis of the administrator's determination to deny, suspend, or revoke a registration. This list includes: (1) commissions and expenses; (2) offering price; (3) options and warrants; (4) cheap stock; (5) promoters' equity investment; (6) escrow requirements; (7) impoundment requirements; (8) voting rights; (9) preferred stock and debt securities; and (10) transactions with officers, directors, or employees. Consider how just these ten considerations are applied:

(1) Commissions and expenses that have been or are to be paid in connection with the offering of a security must be reasonable and must not exceed specified percentages.ⁿ²³

(2) The offering price for the securities must bear a reasonable relationship to the established market price (if there is an established market price).ⁿ²⁴

(3) Options or warrants granted or reserved to persons other than pro rata to all of the securities' purchasers must be reasonable in number and method and must "not exceed a number equal to 15% of the number of shares to be outstanding upon completion of the offering." There are also other restrictions that include when the options or warrants may be exercised, their initial exercise price in terms of their public offering price, and the fact that they may be issued only by a relatively small company in its promotional stage or one that lacks public ownership.ⁿ²⁵

(4) Cheap stock, also called promotional securities, is sold to promoters or underwriters for an amount less than the public offering price or for a consideration other than cash. The sale of such securities must fall within certain conditions, and the Administrator may require a certain percentage of shares to be held in escrow subject to staggered release dates.ⁿ²⁶

(5) The equity investment of the promoters of an issuer in the promotional or developmental stage must equal at least 10% of the aggregate public offering.ⁿ²⁷

(6) Stock that is required to be placed in escrow must be deposited into a bank or with an individual approved by the commissioner, and the deposit is subject to the approval of the Commissioner.ⁿ²⁸

(7) Proceeds from the sale of securities that are required to be impounded must be deposited into a bank or with an individual approved by the commissioner, and the deposit is subject to the approval of the commissioner.ⁿ²⁹

(8) Unless justified, the offering cannot include a class of securities that either has no voting rights or has less than equal voting rights.ⁿ³⁰

(9) If preferred stock is being offered, the issuer's net earnings for its last year or average of its last three years must be sufficient to cover proposed dividends; if debt securities are being offered, the cash flow of the issuer for its last year or average of its last three years must be sufficient to cover all debt service requirements.ⁿ³¹

(10) Unless justified, loans to officers, directors, or employees made out of the ordinary course of business, or remuneration paid to officers, directors, or employees from the proceeds of an offering or that fail to meet other conditions are looked upon with disfavor by the commissioner.ⁿ³²

California applies meaningful state standards dealing with such prominent regulatory concerns in an offering as selling expenses, offering price, options or warrants, promotional securities or preferred stock.ⁿ³³ In an offering in California, an issuer of securities may only incur those expenses that are reasonably necessary for the sale and issuance of the securities. "Selling expenses," including commissions, are deemed reasonable if they do not exceed fifteen percent of the aggregate offering price and are computed only on that portion actually paid to the issuer.ⁿ³⁴ As for offering price, although it is stated that the Commissioner will not consider the fairness of the offering price, there is an exception to this rule. If the offering price, when compared to the price at which securities of the same class have recently been sold to others, would make these latter securities promotional shares, resulting in unreasonable promoter's profits or participations, an examination by the Commissioner will result.ⁿ³⁵ In all other instances, securities must be sold at a price that is fair to the issuer and the purchasers.ⁿ³⁶

Options, warrants or similar rights involved in an offering receive special attention because of the dilutive effect they may have on existing shareholders or those purchasers who do not receive the rights on a pro rata basis. With regard to options, and with the exception of sales to existing shareholders on a pro rata basis,ⁿ³⁷ California limits the number of options (including warrants and similar rights) to thirty percent of the outstanding shares of the issuer.ⁿ³⁸

As in Missouri and other states, California limits the amount of promotional securities or "cheap stock."ⁿ³⁹ There is a presumption that for "unseasoned companies," the amount of promotional shares that is reasonable is limited to twenty-five percent of all common shares issued and proposed to be issued by the corporation.ⁿ⁴⁰

Lastly, the California regulations provide that common shares and similar equity securities should normally carry equal voting rights on all matters, where such vote is permitted by applicable law.ⁿ⁴¹ A class of securities, however, can be created without voting rights if the holders of the class are provided with reasonable representation on the board of directorsⁿ⁴² and afforded other protective measures.ⁿ⁴³

Other state standards focus on protection of investors in developmental or start-up situations. Florida, for example, requires the proceeds from the sale of developmental or promotional securities to be escrowed for a period of time.ⁿ⁴⁴ The escrow agent in all instances must be a commercial bank or trust company, and all checks, drafts, or money orders for the period during which the securities are escrowed are to be made payable to this agent.ⁿ⁴⁵ Another guideline used in Florida, as well as in other states, is commonly referred to as the "promoters' equity investment ratio." Unless the promoters' equity investment is equal to a given percentage, the new issue will be disallowed registration. In Florida, in offerings where the issuer is in the promotional or development phase, registration will be denied unless the equity investment by promoters or insiders is at least fifteen percent of the total equity investment resulting from the sale of the entire offering.ⁿ⁴⁶

Finally, Florida limits the sale or issuance of nonvoting common stock, preferred stock, and debt securities. Nonvoting common stock will not be permitted unless notice is given to the prospective buyer that he will not be entitled to vote the shares, the corporation seeking to register these securities has been in business for at least two years, and dividend rights on voting stock and nonvoting stock are equal.ⁿ⁴⁷ Issuers in the promotional or developmental phase will likewise not ordinarily qualify to issue preferred shares or debt securities because of the amount of earnings required by the regulations.ⁿ⁴⁸

Demonstration of compliance with qualifying criteria or standards is a part of the registration process. Registration by qualification involves forms and submission requirements setting out information upon which the applicable qualitative standards may be applied. However, the burden of compliance is continuing. If, for example, an escrow arrangement for offering proceeds or for promoters shares is made, but not implemented or maintained fully in accordance with the requirement or undertaking, administrative power to suspend or revoke the registration will be exercised. The effectiveness of a registration, whatever type may be involved, is conditional. The forms involve less burdensome submission requirements, but the power of an administrator to suspend or revoke is no different, and the general standards for doing so, applied in hindsight, are no less meaningful. Where particular standards are applied ahead of effectiveness, however, the continuing burden of compliance must be a key concern of issuers.

[2] NSMIA "Use" Preemption: Offering Documents

NSMIA limitations on state authority in registration or qualification of transactions involving covered securities also extends to any state regulation of the use of an offering document prepared by or on behalf of the issuer. The principal impact of "use" preemption is to prohibit state requirements for content, and to eliminate any qualification role in the offering process through controls on the use of an offering document. "Offering document" is defined in NSMIA by reference to the definition of "prospectus" in section 2(10) of the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ⁴⁹ It also incorporates communications determined or permitted by SEC rules as not constituting an offer of a security.ⁿ⁵⁰ Thus, communications excluded from the definition of "prospectus" via SEC Rules 134 or 135ⁿ⁵¹ are immune from state regulation other than the retained investigative and enforcement authority with respect to fraud.ⁿ⁵²

The impact of NSMIA use preemption is well illustrated by the declaratory statement of the Head of the Florida Department of Banking and Finance that the state's offering circular requirements for certain municipal bond issues are preempted. In Petition for Declaratory Statement of the City of Chicago, Illinois ⁿ⁵³ the administrator concluded that Florida's regulatory requirements for disclosing information in an offering circular for new bonds concerning a default on bonds previously issued by the municipality were inapplicable to the new bonds. The new bonds, general airport refunding bonds, proposed for offer and sale by the City of Chicago in Florida were deemed to be NSMIA covered securities, and thus under NSMIA section 18(a)(2)(a) Florida could not impose any content conditions or limitations on an offering document prepared by or on behalf of the issuer. The administrator concluded:

Section 19(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 exempts a covered security from state laws, rules and regulations (unless the regulating state is also the state of incorporation of the issuer) that directly or indirectly, limit or impose conditions on the use of any offering statement that is prepared by or on behalf of the issuer of the covered security.ⁿ⁵⁴

The scope of state authority over offering documents is also prescribed by the NSMIA mandated authority of the SEC to define the meaning of the key qualifying term. By rule, the SEC has determined that for purposes of section 18(d)(1) of NSMIA an offering document is "prepared by or on behalf of the issuer" if the issuer or an agent of the issuer authorizes the document's production, and approves the document before its use.ⁿ⁵⁵ The scope of agency of an issuer in regard to preparation of an offering document is surely broad enough to cover materials prepared by officers, directors, controlling persons generally, as well as underwriters, attorneys, accountants and any others who have normal or delegated responsibility for the preparation of materials or parts of documents. However, documents prepared and circulated without issuer authorization are not covered offering documents under NSMIA.

[3] Review of Denial, Suspension, or Revocation of Registration

Administrative action taken in regard to a registration will produce an order which is reviewable after it is made final or which may be challenged before it becomes final. The suspension of a registration, for example, although it may be done summarily under most statutes, is subject to proper notice requirements and to challenge through an administrative hearing procedure.ⁿ⁵⁶ Those hearings will generally be controlled by the particular state's administrative procedures act, although the Blue Sky law or regulations may dictate the form and content of notices issued in regard to suspension or other orders. Summary suspensions or "initial" orders do not become final until completion, or waiver, of the hearing process. Through that process it may also be shown why no order should issue, and the administrator may rescind or revoke any initial order.

The denial or postponement of effectiveness of a registration statement likewise involves orders which fall within the administrative hearing process and are initially reviewable in this manner. As seen above, denials of effectiveness of registration statements are often referenced under the heading of stop orders, with the Uniform Act declaring, for example: "The [Administrator] may issue a stop order denying effectiveness to ... any registration statement" ⁿ⁵⁷ The "stop order" or suspension process is obviously most efficient in regard to those types of registration which allow for automatic effectiveness. A registration by qualification entails an actual order for effectiveness, the denial of which is treated no differently for purposes of the right to be heard in an administrative review procedure.

Blue Sky laws specifically provide for judicial review of a final order of denial, suspension, or revocation of a registration statement as a part of providing for review of any order of an administrator. The original Uniform Act, for example, provides in section 411:

Any person aggrieved by a final order of the [Administrator] may obtain a review of the order in the [insert name of appropriate court] by filing in court, within sixty days after entry of the order, a written petition praying that the order be modified or set aside in whole or part ⁿ⁵⁸

The final order limitation on seeking judicial review means that orders, such as stop orders, that are summarily issued must first be reviewed through whatever administrative process is established. Failure to do so precludes any judicial review through application of the exhaustion of administrative remedies principle generally, and particular state law provisions.ⁿ⁵⁹

The standard procedure is to file an appeal in the appropriate court within the time allotted. It must be cautioned, however, that unless ordered by the reviewing court, a judicial appeal does not operate as a stay of the original order. Furthermore, notice of the pending judicial review must be served on the appropriate party defendant (namely, the Administrator), and in some cases, a bond must be posted to assure faithful prosecution of the appeal.

As would be expected, courts give considerable deference to the securities' administrator's experience and discretionary powers in issuing any final order from which an appeal is taken.ⁿ⁶⁰ Indeed, in some instances statutes themselves so mandate. In West Virginia, for example, while a reviewing court has the power to affirm, modify, enforce, or set aside the commissioner's order, "[t]he findings of the commissioner as to the facts, if supported by competent, material and substantial evidence, are conclusive."n61

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306.

(n2)Footnote 2. "Merit review" of securities offerings by states is considered separately in Chapter [(" "], infra.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 5. [], infra.

(n4)Footnote 4. Securities Exchange Act Section 18(c)(3) provides:

Nothing in this section shall prohibit the securities commission (or any agency or office performing like functions) of any State from suspending the offer or sale of securities within such state as a result of the failure to submit any filing or fee required under law and permitted under this section.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 5.05[4] infra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a); see also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a). States that have enacted, in whole or in part, such a statute include:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.120.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat., ch. 672a, § 36b-20.

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7308.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 485-13.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A § 305.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 1-208.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.280.

Other states have adopted an abbreviated version of the Uniform Securities Act provision. See, e.g., Ga. Stat. Ann. § 10-5-7(a)(5); see also Ill. Comp. Stat. ch 815. § 5/11(E) (nonuniform state but similar in formulation of fraud language).

(n7)Footnote 7. See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a) (offers states an election to adopt "fair, just and equitable" language in lieu of "tending to work a fraud" language in Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(2)(E)).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Corp. Code § 25140(a)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.111(1)(i).

(n10)Footnote 10. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-09.

(n11)Footnote 11. Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.105(1)(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-112(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. § 581-7(C)(2); see In re Plantation Oil, Inc., [1982-1984 Transfer Binder] CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 71,870 (Texas State Securities Board 1983), in which the Commissioner denied an application for registration of securities for a prospective offering after determining that the offering could not be considered fair, just, or equitable because:

- (1) the plan of business failed to provide safeguards against conflicts of interest between management and investors where fiduciary relationship existed;
- (2) the requisite state-registered dealer was not involved; and
- (3) deficiencies in disclosure would tend to work a fraud on purchasers.

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Md. Code Ann. Corps. & Ass'ns § 11-511(a)(5); Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-513(a)(7).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a). Note that in addition to the particularized standards for denial, suspension, or revocation of a registration statement, the Uniform Act also broadly prohibits fraud via Section 101, a state law analog to SEC Rule 10b-5 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 17 C.F.R. § which declares:

It is unlawful for any person, in connection with the offer, sale or purchase of any security, directly or indirectly,

- (a) to employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud,
- (b) to make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they were made, not misleading, or
- (c) to engage in any act, practice or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person.

As one criterion for denial, suspension, or revocation of a registration set out in Section 306, the Uniform Act declares that an order may issue on a finding that "any provision of this act ... has been willfully violated in connection with the offering." Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(2)(B).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. § 517.111(1)(a)-(j) (which, among other grounds, authorizes denial, revocation, or suspension if the offer is not "fair, just or equitable" or if the issuer has "demonstrated any evidence of unworthiness"); Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.105(1)(a)-(h) (grounds include issuer in unsound financial condition; offer generates unreasonable amounts or kinds of commissions).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(2)(F).

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-20; Pa. Cons. Stat. § 1-208(a)(V); Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(2)(F); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(6).

(n19)Footnote 19. 1 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 6211; CCH NASAA Reports PP 351-3802.

(n20)Footnote 20. CCH NASAA Reports PP 1221-1227. The NASAA guideline for public offerings of debt securities also includes the requirement for a "Trust Indenture," which must incorporate specific provisions designed to interpose an indenture trustee between the issuer and purchasers to protect the rights of purchasers in the event of certain circumstances or transactions.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Sec. Reg. Art 2, §§ 3AAC 08.130 through 3 AAC 08.220.

California: Cal. Sec. Reg. art. 4, Rule 260.140 et seq.

Florida: Fla. Sec. Reg. §§ 3E-700.005 et seq.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.105(1)(a).

Texas: Tex. Sec. Reg. Ch.117 (real estate programs); Ch.119 (cattle feeding programs); Ch.121 (oil and gas programs).

(n22)Footnote 22. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, §§ 30-52-030 et seq.

(n23)Footnote 23. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.040. Missouri has adopted the NASAA Policy Statement Regarding Selling Expenses and Securities Holders. See CCH NASAA Reports P 3671. of the registration rules. Those issues disallowed registration upon application of the above criteria confirmed what had been suspected; namely, that underwriters charged higher commissions and incurred greater expenses for selling securities that were considered less desirable. Consequently, there was some justification in using this yardstick for reliability of performance.

(n24)Footnote 24. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.050.

(n25)Footnote 25. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.060.

The "same conditions apply to options or warrants by selling shareholders, unless evidence indicates that the selling shareholders are so separated from the issuer and so lacking in control of the issuer as to require different treatment." Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.060(1)(d)(8). See also CCH NASAA Reports PP 2801-2807, Statement of Policy Regarding Options and Warrants.

(n26)Footnote 26. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.070. Missouri has adopted the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Promotional Shares. See CCH NASAA Reports PP 3201-3205.

The rationale for this standard is to assure that the promoters actually contribute a reasonable value for their stock. If the promoter's contribution is not in the form of tangible assets, the issuance of cheap stock can only be justified in terms of intangibles that lead to the issuer's subsequent successful operation. This, in turn, explains why the Commissioner, as in Missouri and elsewhere, may require that excessive cheap stock be escrowed under terms that will permit its release if and when justified by the issuer's performance.

(n27)Footnote 27. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.080. Missouri has adopted the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Promoter's Equity Investment, CCH NASAA Reports PP 3102-3104.

(n28)Footnote 28. Former Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 52.090. Missouri rescinded its regulation in favor of the NASAA Policy. See CCH NASAA Reports PP 3203-3205. Other states have retained similar language. See Alaska Admin. Code tit. 3, § 08.180.

(n29)Footnote 29. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.100:

(1) Proceeds from the sale of registered securities which are required to be impounded (Section 409.305(f)(2)) shall ordinarily be impounded in accordance with the following provisions:

(A) An impoundment depository may be a bank or trust company or other person satisfactory to the commissioner.

(B) The impoundment shall be covered by agreement which shall be executed subject to the written approval of the commissioner, in substantially the format, and in accordance with such terms as the commissioner may determine.

(C) The form of impoundment agreement may be obtained from the commissioner upon request

(n30)Footnote 30. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.110:

(1) Unless preferential treatment as to cumulative dividends and liquidation is provided with respect to the publicly offered securities or the differentiation is otherwise justified, the offering or proposed offering of equity securities of an issuer having more than one class of equity securities authorized or outstanding shall not include a class of equity securities which has no voting rights, or has less than equal voting rights in proportion to the number of shares of each class outstanding and in proportion to the par value or fair value of each class outstanding, on all matters including the election of members to the board of directors of the issuer.

(n31)Footnote 31. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.120.

(n32)Footnote 32. Mo. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 30-52.130. Missouri has adopted the NASAA Statement Regarding Loans and Other Material Affiliated Transactions. NASAA Reports (CCH) PP 371-376.

(n33)Footnote 33. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.

(n34)Footnote 34. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.20:

"Selling expenses," as used in this Article, means the total underwriting and brokerage discounts and commissions (including fees of the underwriters' attorneys paid by the issuer) paid in connection with the offering plus all other expenses actually incurred by the issuer relating to printing, engraving, mailing, salaries of employees while engaged in sales activity, charges of transfer agents, registrars, trustees, escrow holders, depositories, and engineers and other experts, expenses of qualification of the sale of the securities under Federal and State laws, including taxes and fees, and any other expenses actually incurred by the issuer and directly related to the offering and sale of the securities, but excluding accountants' and the issuer's attorneys' fees and options to underwriters.

(n35)Footnote 35. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.50.

(n36)Footnote 36. Id. In determining whether the price is fair, predominant weight will be given to the following:

(a) If securities of the same class are publicly traded on an active market of substantial depth, the recent market price of such securities;

(b) If securities of the same class have not been so publicly traded, the price at which securities of reasonably comparable corporations (if any) in the same industry are being traded, subject to appropriate adjustments for the dissimilarities between the corporations being compared.

Id.

(n37)Footnote 37. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, §§ 260.140.40, 43 (sales made to shareholders on a pro rata basis may be not more than 15% below the preexisting market price and still be presumptively reasonable).

(n38)Footnote 38. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.45 (30% figure is exclusive of shares subject to promotional waivers).

(n39)Footnote 39. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.30:

"Promotional shares" means any securities which are (a) issued in consideration for services rendered in connection with the founding or organizing of a business enterprise, or (b) issued to a promoter in consideration for any tangible or intangible property, such as patents, copyrights or goodwill, to the extent that the value has not been satisfactorily established, or (c) issued to a promoter in the recent past or proposed to be issued at a price substantially lower than the price at which other securities of the same class or substantially similar class have been or are to be sold without any change in the conditions of the market or in the circumstances of the issuer which would justify such different price.

(n40)Footnote 40. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.31.

This regulation does allow, however, for the issuance of additional promotional shares in light of the services rendered and other consideration given to the corporation by the promoters, the nature and circumstances of the business enterprise being promoted, and the identity of the investors.

(n41)Footnote 41. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.1.

(n42)Footnote 42. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.2.

(n43)Footnote 43. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.140.3.

These protective measures include a provision that: the dividends on such shares be cumulative; a prohibition of dividends on common stock during the existence of any arrears on the preferred shares; an appropriate requirement for the approval by the vote or written consent of a specified percentage of preferred shareholders of any adverse change in the rights of such preferred shares; and appropriate dividend restrictions on common stock. Id.

(n44)Footnote 44. Fla. Sec. Reg. § 3E-700.009.

(n45)Footnote 45. Id.

(n46)Footnote 46. Fla. Sec. Reg. § 3E-700.005.

An exception to this rule is permitted, however, when the net worth of the issuer is in excess of $100,000 and the offering is supported by the firm commitment of an underwriter registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Id.

(n47)Footnote 47. Fla. Sec. Reg. § 3E-700.006.

(n48)Footnote 48. Fla. Sec. Reg. § 3E-700.010. An issuer of preferred stock or debt securities must have, after provision for federal income taxes determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, earnings, for both the last and current fiscal years, excluding extraordinary items, sufficient to pay dividends or interest, respectively, on the securities to be offered to the public. Id.

(n49)Footnote 49. Section 18(d)(1)(A) of NSMIA provides that offering document "has the meaning given the term 'prospectus' in Section 2(10), but without regard to the provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of that section." In pertinent part, Securities Act section 2(10) defines a prospectus as:

[Any] prospectus, notice, circular, advertisement, letter or communication, written or by radio or television, which offers any security for sale or confirms the sale of any security.

(n50)Footnote 50. Section 18(d)(1)(B) declares that offering document also includes "a communication that is not deemed to offer a security pursuant to a rule of the Commission."

(n51)Footnote 51. SEC Rule 134 under the Securities Act permits the creation and use of certain written materials after the filing of a registration statement under Section 5 of the Act, but prior to the effective date. Rule 135 permits a pre-filing notice of a public offering. The content of all forms of communications permitted under these rules is limited by the rules. The permitted communications are, by virtue of authority granted to the SEC in Section 2(10) of the Act, excluded from the definition of "prospectus."

(n52)Footnote 52. In practice, there may be uncertainty over state authority in situations involving documents that may, under the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Gustafson v. Alloyd Co., 513 U.S. 561, 115 S. Ct. 1061, 131 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1995), not be prospectuses, and thus not "offering documents" within the NSMIA definition. In Gustafson, the Court opined that, at least for purposes of a private remedy for fraud contained in the Securities Act of 1933, a written communication that is for all practical purposes a "prospectus" is not a prospectus in a non-public, exempt, offering of securities. Such an offering may well involve a covered security under Section 18(b)(3) or (b)(4)--as, for example, an offering carried out pursuant to SEC Rule 506 under the Securities Act--and utilize a disclosure document. Under Gustafson, however, if the disclosure document in a non-public offering setting is excluded from the definition of "prospectus," it is also excluded from the definition of "offering document" for purposes of the "use" preemption of state authority under NSMIA.

(n53)Footnote 53. File No. 2848-S-8/99, 1999 Fla. Sec. LEXIS 119 (Fla. Dept. Banking and Finance, Div/ Sec. Nov. 1, 1999).

(n54)Footnote 54. Id.

(n55)Footnote 55. Securities Act Rule 146(a), 17 C.F.R. § 230.146(a).

(n56)Footnote 56. See, e.g., Unif. Sec. Act §§ 204(c), (f).

(n57)Footnote 57. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a).

(n58)Footnote 58. Unif. Sec. Act § 411; Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 711(b).

See also:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.940.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25609.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.241.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 411.

(n59)Footnote 59. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.24(2).

Orders of the division are subject to judicial review ... but orders originally entered without a hearing may be reviewed only if the party seeking review has requested a hearing within the time provided [for administrative review]. Wis. Stat. § 551.61(5).

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Fehrman v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, 2001 Ohio 4225, 141 Ohio App. 3d, 503, 751 N.E.2d 1089 (10th Dist. App. 2001).

(n61)Footnote 61. Code W. Va. § 32-4-411(a).

47 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 5 Securities Registration

1-5 Blue Sky Regulation § 5.08

§ 5.08 Uniformity, cooperation and coordination

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act is grounded in three general policies to be taken into account by state securities regulators in carrying out the public interest:

- (1) Maximizing effectiveness of regulation for the protection of investors;
- (2) Maximizing uniformity in federal state and regulatory standards; and
- (3) Minimizing burdens on the business of capital formation, without adversely affecting essentials of investor protection.n1

Among the subjects specifically targeted by the drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act for cooperation and coordination in regard to registration of securities are:

- (a) Establishing or employing one or more designees as a central depository for registration and notice filings;
- (b) Developing and maintaining uniform forms;
- (c) Coordinating registrations; and
- (d) Formulating common systems and procedures.n2

NSMIA redefined federal and state regulatory roles so as to eliminate much of state authority in regard to registration of securities which are, or are traded in markets that are, national in character. Yet at the same time, NSMIA underscored the role of the states in protecting investors through registration requirements that remain fully operational at local and state levels, and indeed, without any limitations at all where non-covered securities are involved. Non-exempt offerings of securities that are not NSMIA covered securities--oil and gas interests, real estate programs, cattle feeding programs, for example--remain subject to state registration requirements and, where applicable, merit review. Uniformity, cooperation and coordination in state registration processes in connection with such offerings thus continue to be important policy objectives. State securities regulators, particularly in combined efforts through NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--have achieved significant uniformity in forms,ⁿ³ and in standards applied in merit review. Through the development of uniform forms, the creation of coordinate registration programs procedures at the regional level and uniform statements of policy,ⁿ⁴ states have in fact taken significant steps to enforce uniformity in the registration of securities offerings. Much has been accomplished in reducing the burden of compliance at all levels without compromising investor protection.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 608(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Id., § 608(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. One of the most significant innovations, for example, has been the creation of a simplified registration form for small businesses. This is known as the Small Corporate Offering Registration form ("SCOR" or the Uniform Form 7) which has been adopted or recognized and accepted in 47 states. The principal innovation of this form is its question and answer format that permit a business person to fill in the blanks, file it with a state securities administrator and, upon approval, use it as a disclosure document in a public offering.

(n4)Footnote 4. Programs and mechanisms already in place for coordinated regional review of securities offerings are discussed in Chapter 6.

48 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation 6.syn

§ 6.syn Synopsis to Chapter 6: Merit Regulation

§ 6.01 Introduction

[1] Merit Regulation in Historical Context

[2] Contemporary Relevance of Merit Regulation

§ 6.02 Merit Regulation: A Process Overview

[1] Generally

[2] Merit Standards

[a] The Uniform Securities Act

[i] Escrow of Cheap Stock.

[ii] Impound of Proceeds.

[iii] Illegal Business.

[iv] Commissions and Expenses.

[v] Options.

[vi] Advertising and Sales Material.

[b] The 2002 Uniform Securities Act

[c] NASAA Statements of Policy: General Application

[i] Promotional Shares.

- [ii] Promoters' Equity Investment.
 - [iii] Options and Warrants.
 - [iv] Impoundment of Proceeds.
 - [v] Unsound Financial Condition.
 - [vi] Underwriting and Selling Expenses.
 - [vii] Preferred Stock.
 - [viii] Loans and Affiliated Transactions.
 - [ix] Specificity in Use of Proceeds.
 - [x] Unequal Voting Rights.
 - [xi] Corporate Securities Definitions.
- [d] Particular NASAA Statements of Policy.
- [i] Oil and Gas Programs.
 - [ii] Church Bonds.
 - [iii] Real Estate Investment Trusts.
 - [iv] Variable Annuities Companies and Trusts.
 - [v] Debt Securities.
 - [vi] Asset-Backed Securities.
 - [vii] Commodity Pool Programs.
 - [viii] Cattle Feeding Programs.
 - [ix] Real Estate Programs.
 - [x] Equipment Programs.
 - [xi] Health Care Facility Offerings.
 - [xii] Mortgage Programs.
 - [xiii] Viatical Investments.
- [e] NASAA Omnibus Guidelines.

- [f] Chart: NASAA Statements of Policy Adoptions.
- [g] Central Securities Administrators Council Statements of Policy
- [h] Other Common Standards
 - [i] Offering Price and Dilution.
 - [ii] Cheap Stock.
 - [iii] Promoters' Equity Investment.
 - [iv] Escrow or Restriction of Promotional Shares.
 - [v] Impound of Proceeds.
 - [vi] Options and Warrants.
 - [vii] Offering Expenses and Commissions.
 - [viii] Rights and Protective Covenants.
 - [ix] Preemptive Rights.
 - [x] Voting Rights.
 - [xi] Conflicts of Interest.
 - [xii] Loans to Key Employees and Officers.
 - [xiii] Debt Securities and Preferred Stock.
 - [xiv] Capital Structure and Capitalization Generally.
 - [xv] Miscellaneous and Special Standards.
- [A] Plan of Business.
- [B] Financial Condition.
- [C] Honesty or Reputation.
- [D] Credit and Installment Sales.
- [E] Advertising and Sales Material.
- [F] Differing Consideration.
- [G] Special Standards Generally.

§ 6.03 Merit Safe Harbors and Coordinated Equity Review

§ 6.04 Disclosure in Merit Jurisdictions

§ 6.05 Compliance Challenges

49 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.01

§ 6.01 Introduction

[1] Merit Regulation in Historical Context

In Chapter 5, the historic paternalistic mission of state Blue Sky laws to protect individual investors through the process of merit regulation was introduced in the context of registration and qualification requirements for the offer and sale of securities. Simply put, merit regulation under Blue Sky laws involves the interpositioning of an administrator between the issuer of a security and the investing public, with the administrator acting as gatekeeper and opining, on qualitative grounds, whether a particular security may be offered for sale in the state. Such assessments are anchored in variously worded statutory "fairness" standards that are applied without regard to the extent of information disclosure that may be made to prospective purchasers in the offering process.ⁿ¹

In one form or another, these standards are contained in virtually every state securities law and set the basis upon which an administrator may deny, suspend, or revoke the effectiveness of a registration statement. Section 306 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, for example, provides that the administrator may deny, suspend, or revoke the effectiveness of a registration statement when it is in the public interest to do so, and upon grounds that include the offering "will work or tend to work a fraud upon purchasers or would so operate."ⁿ² Beyond broadly worded statutory standards, however, a significant number of states adopted particular standards for merit regulation of securities offerings. The authority of states to act in this regard was a central feature of the dual federal-state securities regulatory scheme that came with the enactment of the federal Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, which expressly preserved protections afforded to investors by state Blue Sky laws by adding savings clauses to the federal statutes.

The founding premises for merit regulation of securities offerings are simple enough:

- (1) Public investors have inadequate access to information on which to make an informed judgment;
- (2) Even when they have all the facts, the average public investor is not capable of properly evaluating them; and
- (3) Some securities or their terms are inherently unfair or fraudulent, and no amount of disclosure will correct those attributes.ⁿ³

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.01

That is to say, requiring only disclosure to investors of the terms of an offering does not go far enough to protect them from overreaching and unfairness. Thus, merit regulation has been described in contemporary terms as a regulatory system that allows administrators to deny registration to a securities offering unless the substantive terms of the offering and associated transactions: (1) ensure a fair relation between promoters and public investors; and (2) provide public investors with a reasonable relation of risk to return.ⁿ⁴

While all states have registration procedures (absent an available exemption), not all of them engage in merit review, and the states that do are not uniform in the extent to which their Blue Sky administrators actually do so. The 1986 ABA Report found that 39 states provided, in one form or another, for merit regulation of securities offerings.ⁿ⁵ Among these, some 20 were in more recent years described as "traditional" merit review jurisdictions, providing for evaluation of securities registrations on the basis of some variant of fairness and equity to investors.ⁿ⁶

States making no provision for traditional merit review opted for the federal model, by which administrators review the adequacy of disclosures and are empowered to deny qualification, but do not make qualitative assessments. The Maryland statute is typical. For registration of securities by qualification, the Maryland Blue Sky law and implementing regulations require disclosure of extensive information in a registration statement and prospectus (the use and dissemination requirements for which are also prescribed) filed with the Commissioner.ⁿ⁷ Subject to stop order authority of the Commissioner, a registration statement becomes effective upon the order of the Commissioner. Stop order authority provides for denial, suspension, or revocation of the registration on a finding, among others, that the registration statement is incomplete in a material respect, "or contains a statement that was, in the light of the circumstances under which it was made, false or misleading with respect to a material fact."ⁿ⁸ Stop order authority is also specified in circumstances in which an offering has worked, tended to work, or would work a fraud upon purchasers.ⁿ⁹ However, there are no qualitative standards prescribed for making such determinations.ⁿ¹⁰

Over time, states thus became identified as either "merit" or "disclosure-only" states. Merit review states exercised authority to reject an offering for reasons, as simply stated in practical terms, that it was a bad investment. Disclosure states prohibited fraud and in most cases mandated the dissemination of structured disclosure documents, but did not exclude offerings on substantive terms. Yet, as capital and financial markets evolved on an ever-growing national, and indeed global, basis, the wisdom of merit regulation of securities offerings by states became a leading policy debate concerning United States securities regulation. In the context of this debate, states themselves substantially limited the scope of merit regulation of securities offering through enactment of an array of exemptions from registration requirements that recognized the national character of certain securities offerings, or the fact that some types of limited or private offerings carried out in conformity with federal requirements did not need the protection of state merit review. Thus, for example, a "marketplace" or "listed securities" exemption from state securities registration was universally adopted to exclude most larger scale public offerings from the merit review process.ⁿ¹¹ For most private offerings that satisfied the requirements of SEC Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ¹² the Uniform Limited Offering exemption (ULOE) promulgated by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) in 1983 was adopted to provide an exemption from state registration requirements for qualifying limited offerings. States adopted other "merit safe harbors" and other provisions designed to lessen the burden of merit regulation in circumstances in which the need for merit review was significantly diminished or nonexistent. As discussed in Chapter 5, to a significant degree, states likewise adopted provisions for registration by "coordination," by which state requirements for registration were substantially reduced for securities issuers that also file a registration statement under the federal Securities Act of 1933.

Many states providing for merit review also elected to limit that authority or significantly streamline its exercise through the adoption of "merit safe harbors." By such fast-track provisions, offerings that meet conditions of the safe harbor are, presumptively, deemed to meet the applicable fairness standard, or whatever particular standard is applied to any aspect of an offering.ⁿ¹³ Streamlined, coordinated, merit review procedures were also established to make the process for multistate qualification of offerings by smaller issuers, or those offerings which are undertaken pursuant to a registration statement filed with the SEC pursuant to the Securities Act of 1933, more efficient.ⁿ¹⁴

Nevertheless, fundamental tensions between state and federal securities laws regarding securities offerings that are national in character persisted, and with the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 ("NSMIA"), Congress restructured the dual federal-state scheme of securities regulation in the United States. A key aspect of NSMIA is the limitation of merit regulation by states. NSMIA preempted state merit regulation when securities being offered and sold are "covered securities" as defined by NSMIA.ⁿ¹⁵

[2] Contemporary Relevance of Merit Regulation

Well before NSMIA, the role of merit regulation in the landscape of securities regulation in the United States had been substantially reduced. The number of offerings actually subjected to merit review under state Blue Sky laws had dramatically declined, as the vast majority of securities sales were carried out in reliance upon available exemptions from registration. Merit review was applied to a relatively narrow class of offerings, primarily those by small businesses and new ventures seeking to raise relatively small amounts of money. This diminished, but continuing, role focused on small business may be seen as entirely consistent with the historic mission of merit regulation. Merit review is appropriate, and indeed necessary, for investor protection in connection with small business offerings that are not subject to the discipline and scrutiny markets and intermediaries. On the other hand, state registration on merit review may be seen as impeding the flow of capital to small businesses by, among other things, imposing high costs on small issuers when there is an increasing need for equity investment to support new ventures, small business generally, and job creation that results. The principal benefits of merit review are the prevention of fraud and a reasonable assurance of investor protection against substantively flawed investment offerings. But it is not clear in today's capital markets and regulatory setting how effective, or necessary, merit review actually is in the prevention of fraudulent or insubstantial and excessively risky offerings. What is clear, however, is that there have been fundamental changes in securities and capital markets, not the least of which is the integration of regional, national, and global financial markets that quite simply changed the paradigm of state securities regulation.

NSMIA stripped the states of merit regulatory authority over all categories of federal covered securities. Nevertheless, while the definition of "covered securities" under NSMIA is broad, state authority to engage in merit regulation of securities offerings not involving covered securities remains unaffected. State authority with respect to intrastate offerings, or localized offerings that are ineligible for Rule 506 of Regulation D, for example, remains intact. States may also continue to require registration, and engage in merit review, of public offerings by non-bank, non-governmental issuers whose securities are not listed or to be listed on a NSMIA-covered marketplace.ⁿ¹⁶

In practical terms, this translates into securities including: (a) securities quoted in the Nasdaq Capital Marketⁿ¹⁷ or the NASD over-the-counter Bulletin Board; (b) securities quoted in the over-the-counter "pink sheets"; (c) securities listed on exchanges other than the New York or American Stock Exchanges, or the top tiers of the Nasdaq Stock Market; (d) various securities of non-listed issuers, such as asset-backed and mortgage-backed securities; (e) private placements of securities under section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 that do not meet the requirements of Rule 506 of Regulation D; and (f) securities issued in exempt offerings under Regulation A and Rules 504 and 505 of Regulation D. Among these categories, NASAA has identified offerings of so-called "small cap" securities--those registered with the SEC and the states that are typically traded in the Nasdaq Capital Market tier, on certain regional exchanges, and on the NASD over-the-counter "Bulletin Board"--as particularly needing the scrutiny of merit regulation, and for which there is empirical evidence of the "value added" through application of substantive state review standards.ⁿ¹⁸

It is for small business issuers that state merit regulation authority after NSMIA has its greatest impact. In most cases, only Rule 506 of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act will present a realistic opportunity to engage in an offering of covered securities, and thus avoid state qualification requirements.ⁿ¹⁹ However, Rule 506 has its own set of qualifications and restrictions on its use, and may not be well suited to the needs of a small business issuer in particular circumstances. A private placement transaction carried out in reliance on section 4(2) of the federal Securities Act of 1933 outside of Rule 506 of Regulation D, and offerings pursuant to Rule 505 of Regulation D, or SEC Regulation A offerings, are not NSMIA covered transactions. While there may be a coordinate state exemption from registration and qualification requirements for some of these offerings, they are not uniform among the states. Offerings by small business issuers made in reliance upon Rule 504 of Regulation D likewise remain fully subject to state merit regulation unless there is an available exemption.ⁿ²⁰

Many states offer small business issuers the opportunity to carry out securities offerings under SCOR--Small Corporate Offering Registration--procedures. This simplified form of registration for qualifying issuers utilizing Form U-7 substantially lessens the burden and expense of registration by qualification procedures that would otherwise apply. However, SCOR is not an exemption from registration, and in those state that engage in merit review, a SCOR registration remains fully subject to that process. "Intrastate" offerings, unless they meet an applicable de minimis issuer exemption, will also be subject to state registration, and applicable merit review standards. For the small issuer that is either unable or unwilling to proceed under Rule 506 of Regulation D, the challenge of individual state compliance with available exemptions, or regular qualification and merit review procedures, thus remains.ⁿ²¹

To be sure, for offerings of all securities that remain subject to Blue Sky registration and qualification requirements there are mechanisms in place to smooth the qualification process. An SEC study undertaken in 1997 found that states have taken a number of significant actions to increase uniformity in regulating offerings of such securities that are not NSMIA "covered securities." Examples noted by the SEC include: (1) a uniform registration statement for offerings exempt at the federal level and a regional state review program for this form; and (2) statements of policy on several matters that enhance uniformity in review among the states.ⁿ²² These mechanisms do nothing for the small business issuer that seeks to avoid any interdiction by states in capital formation, but they are meaningful for multi-state smaller offerings that remain subject to registration requirements, and for which greater speed and uniformity is needed.ⁿ²³ Thus, while it is true that after NSMIA merit regulation in the broadest sense may be seen as a thing of the past, for small business capital formation in particular, it is still an absolutely relevant consideration. Merit review standards or guidelines have, for the most part, not been changed to accommodate small issuers, and it is essential therefore that they be understood and appreciated in advance so that an offering can be structured at the outset so as to minimize the burden and cost that the qualification process will entail in those states where merit review is a part of the regulatory process.

In sum, the relevance of state merit regulation after NSMIA is confined primarily, but importantly, to small business offerings undertaken outside of Rule 506 of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act. Nevertheless, the continued authority for merit regulation of securities offerings that are not excluded by so-called "marketplace preemption," that is, the offer and sale of securities that are not eligible for listing in a NSMIA covered exchange or market, is meaningful and encompasses a broader set of offerings that are undertaken pursuant to federal registration, which may or may not be registered by coordination at the state level, but which are subject to merit review in any event. It is also true that all federally exempt intrastate offerings are subject to state merit regulation, and that certain municipal securities offered in the state where the issuer is located may also be subject to merit regulation, although in most instances a state exemption would be available depending upon the particular type of security involved.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. In its 1986 "Report on State Merit Regulation of Securities Offerings," 41 Bus. Lawyer 785, 795 (May 1986), an Ad Hoc Subcommittee of the ABA State Regulation of Securities Committee offered, in response to the question what is merit regulation?, the following: There is no accepted definition of merit regulation. It has been variously defined as "a composite of substantive standards" as a "discretionary power" allowing the administrator "to pass on the investment merits of an issue of securities proposed to be offered to the public" as a device "which attempts to lessen the investment risks for investors in newly promoted firms" and as a "quality of issue assessment ... based on a comparison of regulatory standards to the corresponding values of the issue."

The Ad Hoc Subcommittee Report is referenced throughout this chapter as the "ABA Report."

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(7)(A). Two additional, but optional, provisions in section 306 empower the administrator to act if the offering has been or would be made with unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' commissions or other unreasonable compensation; or if the offering is being made on terms that are unfair, unjust, or inequitable. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act. §§ 306 (a)(7)(B)-(C). These standards built into the 2002 Uniform Act and state Blue Sky laws generally, are discussed further in § 6.03[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. From the earliest days, the purpose of Blue Sky laws was seen as "to protect the public against imposition of unsubstantial schemes and the securities based upon them." Merrick v. N. W. Halsey & Co., 242 U.S. 568, 61 L. Ed. 498, 37 S. Ct. 227 (1917).

(n4)Footnote 4. See ABA Report, 41 Bus. Lawyer at 829.

By rule, Tennessee defines baseline merit review in terms incorporating modern financial economic principles, as follows:

All securities covered by this rule shall be offered upon such terms and conditions that the potential rewards to the investors and to the promoter or issuer of the securities bear a reasonable relation to the risks assumed by each. Tenn. Rule 0780-4-2-.06, 3.

(n5)Footnote 5. ABA Report, 41 Bus. Lawyer at 788-89.

(n6)Footnote 6. See 1 Louis Loss & Joel Seligman, Securities Regulation 112 (3d ed. 1998).

Those identified as "traditional" states include:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1921(3),(4)

Arkansas: Ark. Code Ann. § 23-42-405(a)(2)(E)(ii)

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25,140(a)(2)

Colorado: Col. Sec. Act § 11-51-306(b)

Florida: Fla. Stats. § 517.111(l)

Iowa: Code of Iowa § 502.306(1)(g)-(h)

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 17-12a306

Maine: Maine Rev. Stat. Ann. § 16306(G)

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.706(a)(5)

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 80A.13(l)(6)

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 409.3-306(a)(7)

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.01

Nebraska: Rev. Stat. Neb. § 8-1109.01(2)

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B16(I)(b)(7)

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-09(1)

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.13

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 59.105(2)(a), (b)

Texas: Vernon's Tex. Civ. Stats. § 581-23(A)

Virginia: Code of Va. § 13.1-513(a)(5)

(n7)Footnote 7. Md. Code Ann. § 11-504.

(n8)Footnote 8. Id., § 11-511.

(n9)Footnote 9. Id., § 11-511(5).

(n10)Footnote 10. Examples of other disclosure jurisdictions include Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, New Hampshire, North Carolina, and Wisconsin.

Wisconsin is an example of the contemporary shift among states away from merit regulation. Effective January 1, 1997, Wisconsin repealed its entire array of merit standards, in favor of a disclosure-based system for registration by qualification. See Wis. Admin. Code Ch. DFI-Sec. 3. Note, however, that a number of published fairness standards which have included within them disclosure aspects have been specifically adopted in Wisconsin for use in evaluating the adequacy of disclosure. Wisconsin formally adopted several Statements of Policy promulgated by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) to the extent they require disclosures regarding certain matters, but not as setting any standards on which to assess the merits of the offering.

(n11)Footnote 11. The critical element in the availability of the marketplace exemption was satisfaction of marketplace listing requirements, which are themselves qualitative standards. In 1990, NASAA, the principal national securities exchanges and NASD (which was at the time the operator of the Nasdaq Stock Market) entered into a Memorandum of Understanding providing for a common set of minimum listing standards. See "Memorandum of Understanding: The Uniform Model Marketplace Exemption from State Securities Exemption Requirements," NASAA Reports (CCH) P 2351, at 1391 (July 1990).

(n12)Footnote 12. Regulation D is comprised of Rules 504-506 under the Securities Act of 1933; see 17 C.F.R. §§ 230.504-.506. These provisions, and the entire set of federal exemptions for limited or private offerings, are discussed in detail in Chapter 8 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25140(d) (The price at which a security is offered shall not be considered unfair whenever the security is the subject of a firm commitment underwriting, publicly offered for cash, pursuant to a registration statement filed under the Securities Act of 1933).

Merit safe harbors are considered in more detail in § 6.03 .

(n14)Footnote 14. The uniform "Small Corporate Offering Registration" (SCOR), and the "Coordinated Equity Review" (CER) program for offerings that are also the subject of a federal registration, are considered further in § 6.03.

(n15)Footnote 15. As addressed throughout this Treatise, section 18(b) of the Securities Act of 1933, added by NSMIA, establishes four types of "covered securities" as to which state merit regulatory is preempted:

- (1) Securities listed or authorized for listing on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE); the American Stock Exchange (Amex); the Nasdaq National Market System (NMS) tier; or other securities exchanges registered with the SEC (or any tier market) if the SEC determines by rule that their listing standards are substantially similar to those of the NYSE, Amex, or Nasdaq NMS; and any security of the same issuer that is equal in seniority or senior to any security listed on the NYSE, Amex, or Nasdaq NMS;
- (2) Securities issued by an investment company registered with the SEC under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
- (3) Securities offered or sold to "qualified purchasers," as that term may be defined by the SEC; and
- (4) Securities issued under specified exemptions in the Securities Act of 1933, as follows: (A) Sections 4(1) (transactions by persons other than an issuer, underwriter, or dealer); and 4(3) (dealers after specified periods of time in relation to an offering), when the issuer is reporting to the SEC under sections 13 or 15(d) of the Act; (B) Section 4(4) (unsolicited brokerage transactions); (C) Securities offered and sold pursuant to Securities Act exemptions in Section 3(a), with the exception of the charitable issuer exemption in section 3(a)(4), the exchange exemption in Section 3(a)(10), the intrastate exemption in Section 3(a)(11), and the municipal securities exemption in Section 3(a)(2), but only as to the offer or sale of such a security in the state in which the issuer is located; and (D) Securities issued in compliance with SEC rules under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933.

(n16)Footnote 16. In the wake of NSMIA, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) identified the securities remaining open to merit regulation under Blue Sky laws as follows:

- (1) Certain equity securities registered with the SEC and the states;
- (2) Smaller offerings generally exempt from federal registration but registered with the states;
- (3) A narrow "band" of often illiquid securities registered with both the SEC and the states; and
- (4) Securities offered in certain types of non-public offerings exempt from SEC and state registration.

NASAA "Submission for Mandated Study Under NSMIA on the Uniformity of State Regulatory Requirements for Securities and Securities Transactions That Are Not Covered Securities," CCH NASAA Reports P13,047, at 13,118 (Aug. 22, 1997) (hereinafter the "NASAA Uniformity Submission").

(n17)Footnote 17. The Nasdaq Capital Market tier is the former Nasdaq "SmallCap" market. Also, the former top tier of the Nasdaq Stock Market--the National Market System (NMS) tier--is today divided into two top tiers, the Nasdaq Global Select Market and the Nasdaq Global Market. Listing standards for Nasdaq Global Market securities are equivalent to those formerly applied to NMS securities. For Global Select securities, the standards are higher. Both of the new top tiers of Nasdaq will satisfy the NMS requirement for covered security status under NSMIA.

(n18)Footnote 18. Id.

Substantive review standards cited by NASAA as being commonly applied in regard to these offerings to prevent the promotion of fraudulent or inequitable issues are merit standards going to: (1) excessive underwriting commissions and offering expenses; (2) "cheap stock"; (3) the inclusion of unequal voting rights; (4) loans and affiliate transactions; and (5) the presence of excessive options and warrants.

(n19)Footnote 19. "Covered security" status for purposes of NSMIA preemption of state registration and qualification requirements that would otherwise be applicable to an offering made under Rule 506 may depend upon the actual validity of the Rule 506 exemption rather than simply invoking or claiming it for an offering. In Buist v. Time Domain Corp., 926 So. 2d 290 (Ala. 2005), the Alabama Supreme Court held that an offering made pursuant to Rule 506 of Regulation D must actually comply with Rule 506 conditions in order for the securities to constitute NSMIA "covered securities." The Court rejected the assertion that as long as one offers and sells securities in reliance upon Rule 506, the securities are covered securities and NSMIA preemption applies. The same conclusion was reached in Grubka v. WebAccess Int'l, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 2d 1259 (D. Colo. 2006), and Blue Flame Energy Corp. v. Ohio Dep't of Commerce, Div. of Sec., 2006 Ohio 6892 (Ct. App. 2006), in which the courts held that NSMIA expressly preempts state laws from regulating the issuance and sale of those securities that are actually exempt under Rule 506.

After, NSMIA states retain the authority to require notice filings and fee payments for Rule 506 offerings. Thus, armed with the fundamental requirement for actual compliance with the requirements of Rule 506, a state administrator may examine Rule 506 notice filings and the offering for compliance, exercising full regulatory authority, i.e., finding a registration violation in the event the Rule 506 exemption is determined by the administrator to be invalid.

(n20)Footnote 20. As a practical matter, a small business issuer offering securities in reliance upon Rule 504 of Regulation D would expect to comply with applicable state registration and qualification requirements in order that the securities being offered and sold would not be deemed to be "restricted" securities as a matter of the federal securities laws. SEC Rule 504 provides that securities sold pursuant to the Rule are restricted, and thus subject to certain resale limitations unless they were acquired in a state-registered offering or state accredited investor offering. See Rule 504(b)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.504(b)(1); Rule 502(d), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(d). "Restricted" securities are subject to resale limitations imposed under SEC Rule 144(k) under the Securities Act of 1933, 17 C.F.R. § 230.144(k), which permits resales free of all restrictions by non-affiliates of the issuer after a two-year holding period.

(n21)Footnote 21. See also Rutherford B. Campbell, Jr., "The Impact of NSMIA on Small Issuers," 53 Bus. Lawyer 575 (Feb. 1998).

(n22)Footnote 22. "Report on the Uniformity of State Regulatory Requirements for Offerings of Securities That Are Not 'Covered Securities' " (SEC Oct. 1997).

(n23)Footnote 23. For multi-state offerings of non-covered securities, "Coordinated Equity Review" (CER or "CR-EQUITY") provides a uniform procedure designed to coordinate the registration process among states in which the issuer seeks to sell its securities. In addition to creating uniformity in review standards, CER is designed to expedite the registration process, saving the issuer time and money. CER is discussed fully in § 6.03.

50 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

§ 6.02 Merit Regulation: A Process Overview

[1] Generally

States providing for merit regulation authorize administrators to evaluate the quality of securities proposed to be offered, and to prohibit those which are seen as defective. Normally, this process operates under the registration by "qualification" provisions discussed in Chapter 5,ⁿ¹ on the basis of determining what is "fair, just, and equitable" to investors or determining whether the terms of a security or offering will "tend to work a fraud" or whether such terms are "grossly unfair."ⁿ² Mechanically, the process is accomplished by disclosure of information to the administrator in prescribed filings and submissions.ⁿ³ All states have adopted Form U-1 as the uniform form of registration statement in this process, and most have likewise adopted Form U-7 for use by qualifying SCOR or other small business issuer offerings. Form U-7 is a simplified question and answer format submission that also serves as the structured disclosure document for dissemination to prospective investors. Once submitted to the administrator, the Blue Sky law in each state prescribes the timing and conditions for effectiveness.ⁿ⁴ For an offering subject to merit review, the timing will normally be adjusted by request of the issuer to provide sufficient time for completion of the process. Failure of the issuer to make such a request would, in most cases, lead to an order by the administrator delaying effectiveness.

Among the states that engage in merit regulation of securities offerings, the fairness objective and focus of administrators in merit reviews are common threads. Common areas of focus by state administrators in the merit review process include:

- Offering price
- Promoter or "cheap" stock
- Promoters' equity investment
- Escrow or restrictions on cheap stock
- Impound of funds
- Options and warrants

- Underwriting expenses and commissions
- Offering expenses generally
- Capital structure of the issuer
- Rights of investors
- Conflicts of interest
- Preferred dividends and debt coverage
- Sinking fund provisions
- Indentures and protective covenants generally
- Issuer's plan of business
- Issuer's financial condition.

Today, states engaging in merit review of securities offerings apply policy statements, or guidelines, promulgated and published by the North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. (NASAA). The NASAA Statements of Policy provide a more or less common anchor for merit assessment of a wide variety of offerings and particular considerations attendant to them. NASAA Statements of Policy range from the broad guideline regarding "unsound financial condition,"ⁿ⁵ to quite specific, detailed prescriptions for particular types of offerings.ⁿ⁶

Ideally, the publication of NASAA policies means that issuers and intermediaries have a common frame of reference, and approach the qualification process with a significantly higher degree of confidence. NASAA Statements of Policy and guidelines have been adopted, although in varying versions, in a large number of states.ⁿ⁷ The effort to achieve uniformity and predictability in merit review standards through the NASAA statements of policy and guidelines has achieved some degree of success in such areas as cheap stock, dilution, promoters' equity participation, options and warrants, offering expenses and other areas of common concern that principally impact companies in the promotional or developmental stage, and their promoters.ⁿ⁸ Nevertheless, the guidelines do supply comprehensive criteria with which to evaluate particular types of offerings, as for example "real estate programs," or "direct participation programs" in general, and on which to make broader qualitative judgments on common matters such as underwriting expenses, disclosure guidelines, or dishonest or unethical business practices. Merit standards in all of these areas, whether grounded in NASAA policies or independently prescribed in particular states, are more specifically considered in § 6.02[2].

[2] Merit Standards

For offerings that remain subject to merit regulation in the wake of NSMIA, reviewing states continue to carry out the process through the application of merit standards or guidelines. In most cases, as with states that have adopted the original Uniform Securities Act, the starting point is the general statement of authority to deny, suspend, or revoke a registration statement on fraud or fairness grounds, and the particular statutory grounds that are provided. In the exercise and extension of that authority, states then proceed in the application of particular merit standards. Growing acceptance of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act has not fundamentally altered the sources and use of state merit standards. The 2002 Uniform Act, however, eliminates most of the specific statutory standards and powers of the original Uniform Act, leaving state authority to be defined in terms of a broadly stated fraud standard. This section examines the principal sets of standards available or in use in those circumstances in which state authority remains intact.ⁿ⁹ These standards derive from the Uniform Securities Act, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, NASAA Statements of Policy, or the standards of individual states historically applied. Each category is considered further below.

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

[a] The Uniform Securities Act The original 1956 version of the Uniform Securities Act is the basis for a majority of state Blue Sky laws. In Uniform Act states that have preserved merit regulation, the specific standards set out in the Act itself are the starting point from which other particular merit standards or guidelines may be derived or added. Each of these statutory standards is considered further below.

[i] Escrow of Cheap Stock. Under Uniform Act § 305(g)(1), securities registrations by qualification or coordination may require the escrow of "cheap stock"--securities issued up to three years prior to the registration where a substantial difference exists between the insider or promoter price and that paid by the public. The section provides a similar requirement where the insider or promoter paid for securities with consideration other than cash. The conditions of the escrow are left to the discretion of the administrator.

[ii] Impound of Proceeds. Under Uniform Act § 305(g)(2), the proceeds from the sale of securities registered by qualification or notification may be impounded by the administrator until a specified amount of funding is obtained from the sale of the securities registered. The conditions of the impound are left to the discretion of the administrator.

[iii] Illegal Business. Under Uniform Act § 306(a)(D), the administrator may prevent the sale of securities when it is determined that the enterprise, or method of business of the issuer is illegal where it is to be performed.

[iv] Commissions and Expenses. Under Uniform Act § 306(a)(F), the administrator can prevent the offering of securities where it is determined that the commissions and expenses associated with the offering are excessive or unreasonable. Such expenses are defined as underwriter and seller discounts, commissions, promoters profits or participation, and options.

[v] Options. The issuance of unreasonable amounts of options may prevent the offering under Uniform Act § 306(a)(F).

[vi] Advertising and Sales Material. Uniform Act § 403 requires the filing of all advertising and sales material. That section, when combined with the authority of the administrator under Uniform Act § 412(a),ⁿ¹⁰ allows the prevention of securities sales based on the material utilized. The administrator is afforded, therefore, the ability to pass judgment on these materials.

[b] The 2002 Uniform Securities Act

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act has been adopted by several states and is under consideration in several others. It addresses state Blue Sky regulatory authority after NSMIA, and is designed to harmonize state investor protection goal with the national character of financial and capital markets that gave birth to the NSMIA federal "covered security." To that end, the 2002 Uniform Act retains only two merit regulation provisions.ⁿ¹¹ Both are prescribed as part of the administrator's authority to deny, suspend, or revoke the effectiveness of a registration statement. First, section 306(a)(7)(A) permits the exercise of merit regulatory authority if "the offering will work or tend to work a fraud upon purchasers or would so operate."ⁿ¹² Secondly, the administrator may deny effectiveness if:ⁿ¹³

[T]he offering has been or would be made with unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions, or other compensation, or promoters' profits or participations or unreasonable amounts or kinds of options.

Section 306 of the 2002 Uniform Act also includes a bracketed, optional, merit regulatory provision where "the offering is being made on terms that are unfair, unjust, or inequitable."ⁿ¹⁴

Although these general merit review provisions are included in the 2002 Uniform Act, the Act is also clear that to the extent practicable, an administrator must, by rules or orders, publish standards that provide notice of conduct that violates the generally stated section 306(a)(7) standards.ⁿ¹⁵ In all of this there is, of course, the over-arching objective of the 2002 Uniform Act to promote uniformity and cooperation among state, federal, and self-regulatory organizations.ⁿ¹⁶ Well before NSMIA, Statements of Policy or Guidelines formulated by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) were developed for this purpose, and have worked well to promote not only uniformity but also to provide fair and objective notice of the standards to which issuers will be held. The NASAA Statements of Policy and Guidelines (most often referred to as the NASAA "Guidelines") thus continue to function in response to the mandate for notice and objectivity in the 2002 Uniform Act, as well as continuing to play a critical role in the continuing merit regulatory processes in states operating under prior versions of the Uniform Act or independently of it. The NASAA Guidelines are discussed in detail below.

[c] NASAA Statements of Policy: General Application NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--was founded in 1918 as the National Association of Securities Administrators. The name of the organization was changed to the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) in 1957. Today, NASAA is an organization of state securities regulators from the United States, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

NASAA adopts "Statements of Policy," which are defined as:ⁿ¹⁷

Statements of general purpose and prospective applicability to implement, interpret or prescribe model laws, regulations, forms, or policies pertaining to investor protection and securities regulation, including statements regarding the registration of securities, registration and business practices of securities industry and investment advisory licensees, and enforcement of anti-fraud laws, for implementation among jurisdictions of the North American Securities Administrators, Inc.

NASAA policies, or "guidelines," do not become policies of the states until, and unless, they are adopted by individual states as rules or regulations. As will be seen below, NASAA policies may be adopted selectively, or not at all.

In 1997, NASAA undertook to promote uniformity and facilitate implementation of the Coordinated Equity Review Program (CER)ⁿ¹⁸ by revising its Statements of Policy that have general application to NSMIA non-covered equity securities offerings, and adding three new ones. The policies of general application to equity offerings are as follows:

[i] Promotional Shares. The revised NASAA policy authorizes the escrow, or "lock-in," of some or all promotional shares as a condition for qualification of the offering. Promotional shares are those issued to a "promoter," which by definition, includes officers and directors, and others who receive five percent or more of the securities as consideration for services and/or property. The extent of the escrow or lock-in arrangement that may be required is determined by a prescribed calculation, as is the extent of any release of shares from the escrow or lock-in.ⁿ¹⁹

[ii] Promoters' Equity Investment. This revised NASAA policy mandates specific, and significant, percentage components of promoter's investment in the "aggregate public offering" price of the securities. The policy requires that the promoters' investment must constitute at least ten percent of the first $1 million of the aggregate public offering, seven percent of the next $500,000, five percent of the next $500,000, and two and one-half percent of the balance over $2 million.ⁿ²⁰

[iii] Options and Warrants. This revised NASAA policy limits the amount of options and warrants issued or reserved for issuance within one year following the offering generally to 15% of shares of the issuer outstanding plus the shares being offered. Exclusions permit some degree of flexibility in the calculation of the numbers of options and warrants being issued, but the limitation is otherwise straightforward.ⁿ²¹

[iv] Impoundment of Proceeds. The revised NASAA policy covering impoundment of proceeds declares that, if determined necessary by an administrator, the entire proceeds of an offering may be impounded in an escrow or trust account under the terms of an "Impoundment Agreement." The agreement controls the terms and conditions of the impoundment, most importantly, including the release of the impounded proceeds to the issuer. The policy statement does not prescribe any standards or conditions for determining the necessity of an impoundment.ⁿ²²

[v] Unsound Financial Condition. This newly adopted policy statement grants authority to an administrator to deny qualification where the financial statements of an issuer have a "going concern" qualification by the auditor, or where certain other indicia of an unsound condition are present. The latter include an accumulated deficit, negative shareholders equity, an inability to meet current obligations, and negative cash flow. There are no other standards prescribed. However, the policy statement does include mechanisms, including specific disclosure requirements, for permitting qualification upon satisfaction of the administrator that conditions will improve.ⁿ²³

[vi] Underwriting and Selling Expenses. This revised Statement of Policy imposes limits on underwriting commissions, options, warrants, and selling expenses generally. Underwriting expenses may not exceed seventeen percent (17%) of the gross proceeds of the offering. The total of direct and indirect selling expenses are limited to twenty percent (20%) of the gross proceeds of the offering. The latter includes some, but not all, of the items that would comprise underwriting expenses, thus providing some flexibility in making the percentage calculations. The policy statement prescribes calculations for warrants and options in determining the amount of underwriting expenses, and sets certain further conditions on the use of options and warrants in regard to underwriters.ⁿ²⁴

[vii] Preferred Stock. This revised Statement of Policy permits an offering of preferred stock to be disallowed when it is determined by the administrator that the issuer has insufficient earnings to meet its fixed charges and preferred stock dividends. Alternative "adjusted net earnings" or "cash analysis" methodologies are prescribed for making the determination. The policy is expressly stated as not being applicable to offerings of convertible preferred stock having certain preference characteristics that make it superior in right to payment of dividends, interest, and liquidation proceeds to other convertible debt or preferred stock held by promoters.ⁿ²⁵

[viii] Loans and Affiliated Transactions. With this Statement of Policy, administrators are empowered to disallow an offering in circumstances in which there will be loans outstanding to the issuer or its affiliates after the offering, or where the issuer intends to make loans or loan guarantees on behalf of promoters. Provision is made for permitting certain loans outstanding at the time of the offering that represent advances for travel and other ordinary business and operating expenses. And certain issuers whose primary business is making loans are also permitted to have loans outstanding where conditions are met such that the existence of such loans in the ordinary course of a commercial lending business is apparent. Otherwise, subject to waiver authority by the administrator, all loans existing at the time of registration must be repaid.ⁿ²⁶

[ix] Specificity in Use of Proceeds. This Statement of Policy imposes particular disclosure requirements in regard to the issuer's use of proceeds of an offering. It is not a qualitative standard as such, but rather, mandates the manner and extent of disclosure as a condition to qualification of an offering. The policy statement requires that the prospectus contain a tabular presentation of estimated cash proceeds of the offering, the purposes for which the proceeds will be used, the amount to be used for each purpose, and the order of priority in usage. The issuer must also include information explaining other sources of funds for the same purposes and the relative role of offering proceeds versus other sources in regard to those purposes.

Although the use of proceeds in the Statement of Policy is a disclosure provision, it also prescribes a qualitative standard in stating that an issuer normally may not reserve more than fifteen percent (15%) of the proceeds of an offering for working capital or general corporate purposes. If the issuer requires greater flexibility in the use of proceeds, the Statement of Policy mandates further disclosure.ⁿ²⁷

[x] Unequal Voting Rights. Although it was not one revised or newly adopted by NASAA in conjunction with implementation of CER, the Statement of Policy regarding unequal voting rights is one of general application to corporate equity offerings. Under it, an administrator may deny qualification if the shares being offered have less than equal voting rights, unless they are given preferential treatment as to dividends and liquidation or the disparity in voting rights is justified to the satisfaction of the administrator. If there is to be a disparity in voting rights, the Statement of Policy provides for prominent disclosure in the issuer's offering circular or prospectus.ⁿ²⁸

[xi] Corporate Securities Definitions. As noted earlier, this Statement of Policy supplies the common definitions for use in all of the NASAA policies of general application. The definitions policy statement expressly provides for its application to each of the Statements of Policy discussed above. Of particular significance in the definitions policy statement is the broad definition of "promoter," as well as "promotional shares," "promoters' equity investment," "affiliate," and the earnings definitions that are central to certain of the policy statements.ⁿ²⁹

These are the NASAA Statements of Policy by which participating states in the CER program agree that corporate equity offerings will be reviewed. All of them, however, are also available to non-participating CER states, and for application to offerings not submitted for CER review. However, as with every NASAA Statement of Policy, each of the policies of general application contains the proviso that nothing contained in it shall prevent the securities administrator of a state from applying a different standard.

[d] Particular NASAA Statements of Policy.ⁿ³⁰ NASAA Statements of Policy intended for specific applications are examined in more detail below. Note that in most instances, the contents of particular NASAA Statements of Policy are, by design, referred to in the policy as "guidelines." The distinction indicates that while applications not conforming to the stated standard are disfavored, where good cause is shown, "guidelines" may be modified or waived by the administrator.

[i] Oil and Gas Programs. NASAA guidelines for oil and gas programs, originally adopted in 1976 and last amended in 1991, are generally aimed at programs in the form of limited partnerships.ⁿ³¹ However, they are also intended for application by analogy to programs in other forms.

The guidelines first provide thirty (30) definitions applicable to oil and gas programs. They then impose sponsor requirements in the areas of experience and net worth, set requirements for tax rulings or opinions, program investment, reports, and fiduciary duty. Brokerage commissions are required to be only in cash. Warrants or options to broker/dealers are possible in the case of a firm underwriting. Sales material must be provided to the securities administrator in advance of use.

A number of suitability standards are prescribed for participants. These include standards regarding a purchaser's level of understanding regarding risks and particular characteristics of the offering and the sponsor. Minimum income and net worth standards are prescribed depending upon whether the program is an income or drilling program, and the particular characteristics of each type of program. For example, for drilling programs which do not provide the participant with statutory protection against unlimited liability, each participant must have a minimum net worth of $225,000 or $100,000 for the current year and for each of the two previous years. Alternatively, the suitability standard may be satisfied by a participant with minimum net worth in excess of $1,000,000, or minimum net worth of $500,000, and minimum annual gross income of $200,000.

Organization and offering expenses must be reasonable. The total, plus management fees cannot exceed fifteen percent (15%) of the initial subscriptions, and all commissions must be paid in cash. Additional standards are set in the area of sponsor or affiliate compensation. The reimbursement of sponsors and affiliates for program expenses is also addressed as are transactions with affiliates and conflicts of interest. The rights and obligations of participants are covered in the policy statement, as are standards regarding $1,000,000 minimum program capital and minimum disclosure requirements.

[ii] Church Bonds.ⁿ³² The current NASAA guidelines for offerings of church bonds were adopted in 2002. Although church bonds are generally exempt from federal registration, that is not the case in most states, and a considerable number of states have adopted the NASAA policy, or similar policy, regarding these issues.ⁿ³³

The standards are intended to be useful in determining the ability of the individual church issuing bonds to repay the bonds, and to insure full and adequate disclosure. The guidelines prescribe offering circular and trust indenture requirements. In addition, the total debt of the church at completion of the offering is not to exceed four times the church revenues of the last 12 months. These revenues are exclusive of nonrecurring bequests and other extraordinary items.

[iii] Real Estate Investment Trusts. The current NASAA guidelines for real estate investment trusts were adopted in 1993. These complex guidelines spell out requirements for REIT sponsors, advisors, trustees, and affiliates--all in the context of 31 defined terms. Real estate investment trusts must have no less than three trustees, each elected by shareholders, with a term not greater than one year. Rights and obligations of shareholders generally are prescribed, with specific attention to governance and a range of shareholder protective provisions that include special protections in "roll up" situations. Indeed, this NASAA Statement of Policy involves principally the imposition of a governance structure rather than a measure of the fairness of particular terms of an offering. It is unique among the NASAA Statements of Policy in that regard.

The policy statement provides that the trustees are obligated to evaluate the performance of advisors prior to entering into or renewing advisory contracts. The compensation to be provided for advisory services is also prescribed as a trustee responsibility. Fees, compensation, and expenses of the REIT generally are addressed, with limits being imposed. Total operating expenses, for example, shall (in the absence of a satisfactory showing to the contrary), be considered excessive if they exceed, in any fiscal year, the greater of two percent of average invested assets or 25% of net income for such year. The policy imposes a fiduciary duty on trustees to limit expenses in this manner. If such fees and expenses exceed the set limits, shareholders must be informed within 60 days of the end of the fiscal quarter concerned. Disclosures required quarterly are the ratio of the cost of raising capital to the capital raised, and the aggregate amount of advisory fees and the aggregate amount of other fees paid to the advisor and advisor affiliates.

There are various investment restrictions and conditions. Meaningful suitability criteria for REIT shareholders are prescribed, with the burden first placed upon sponsors to impose income and net worth standards that are reasonable in relation to the type of REIT and the risks involved. Minimum standards are prescribed, and the affirmative responsibility imposed upon sponsors and every person selling shares on behalf of the sponsor to make a reasonable effort to assure that every purchaser meets suitability criteria and understands the nature of the investment and its particular risks.

Finally, there are specific prescriptions in regard to disclosure and marketing. The policy statement focuses particularly upon the use of forecasts and projections in REIT offerings, placing controls on both the use and content of such presentations in offering materials.

[iv] Variable Annuities Companies and Trusts. The NASAA policy statement for Variable Annuities Companies and Trusts was repealed in October 2004.

[v] Debt Securities. Under this Statement of Policy, a public offering of debt securities may be disallowed if the issuer's "adjusted cash flow"ⁿ³⁴ for the last fiscal year or its average adjusted cash flow for the last three fiscal years prior to the offering was insufficient to cover its fixed charges, meet its debt obligations as they become due, and service the debt securities being offered. The administrator is allowed considerable flexibility in application of the policy, such that in his or her discretion, the basic policy need not be applied to offerings of convertible debt securities that are superior in right of payment of interest and liquidation proceeds to any convertible debt that is held by promoters.

Notwithstanding flexibility in regard to convertible debt offerings, public offerings of debt securities must be made pursuant to a trust indenture that provides for specified purchaser protections. Also, if the administrator determines that the issuer's cash flow is subject to cyclical fluctuation, sinking fund or redemption requirements may be imposed.

[vi] Asset-Backed Securities. Asset-backed securities are, by NASAA definition, those which provide a stated rate of return to holders, and which are primarily serviced as to both return of investment and return on investment by the cash flow from certain "eligible" assets. Eligible assets are, generally, financial or commercial assets that are (a) homogeneous in nature; (b) subject to reasonably objective valuation; (c) investment grade, or if not, then self-liquidating or easily liquidated; and (d) if not investment grade, capable of generating a predictable cash flow. The NASAA guidelines, adopted in 1995 for offerings of these securities, set requirements for sponsors of such offerings in regard to experience and financial condition, and other requirements aimed at establishing a reasonable likelihood that a stated rate of return will be realized. Provisions for credit enhancement, portfolio characteristics, and particular disclosures in the prospectus focus on the eligible assets backing such securities.

Further provisions of the guidelines impose requirements on issuers, servicers, and trustees, and also impose specific suitability requirements for security holders. The latter entails a mandated affirmative determination by the sponsor. The offering process itself is addressed further with disclosure requirements relating to fees, compensation, and expenses to conflicts of interest, and to the types and content of performance representations contained in the prospectus.

[vii] Commodity Pool Programs. The current NASAA guidelines for commodity pool programs were adopted in 1990. The intended focus of the guidelines is on commodity pool limited partnerships or analogous corporate offerings of securities rather than the technical aspects of futures trading. The guidelines make clear that they are not intended to supplant any existing or future rules of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission or the National Futures Association (NFA).

The guidelines are extensive and, in general, prescribe standards for sponsors in terms of experience, financial condition, program investment, reporting requirements, tax rulings and opinions, and liabilities. Suitability standards are prescribed for participants. The guidelines specify constraints on fees, compensation, and expenses. The rights and obligations of participants are prescribed in terms of voting rights, information access, liability, and rights to program transferability. There are significant suitability standards as well. Minimum program capital requirements, disclosure standards, and marketing standards are provided.

[viii] Cattle Feeding Programs. NASAA guidelines for cattle-feeding programs were adopted in 1980. The guidelines specify standards for sponsor experience, capitalization, compensation, reporting requirements, and a variety of other areas in the operational area. Standards regarding the plan of distribution, the prospectus, and disclosure are also provided.

[ix] Real Estate Programs. The current NASAA guidelines for real estate programs were adopted in 1991. They are expressly aimed at real estate limited partnerships, but may be applied by analogy to other forms of real estate programs.ⁿ³⁵ The guidelines include key definitions, and constitute the most complex of NASAA Statements of Policy. They specify requirements for sponsors regarding experience, net worth, requirements, and liability. Participant suitability requirements are also detailed. There is considerable attention paid to fees, compensation and expenses generally, and those associated with the investment in properties in particular. Sponsor investment standards are provided as well as standards in the conflict of interest and program investments areas. The guidelines include a Real Estate Guidelines Cross Reference Sheet to be completed and filed with registrations.

[x] Equipment Programs. The current version of these NASAA guidelines promulgated for equipment programs was adopted in 1986 and subsequently amended 1991. The standards apply to public programs designed to acquire and own and then either lease or operate any type of equipment. The guidelines are not intended for use in programs where equipment ownership or operation is incidental to the program business.

Requirements regarding experience, net worth, tax rulings and opinions, reporting obligations, and liability of the sponsor are provided as are the participant suitability standards. Standards for compensation and expenses, conflicts of interest and investment restrictions, the rights and obligations of participants, and disclosure requirements, are also provided.

[xi] Health Care Facility Offerings. The guidelines for non-profit health care facility offerings were adopted in 1985. Under the guidelines, an issuer must prove substantial compliance with certain principal standards, including:

- (1) the financial ability to cover the debt service requirements for all debt securities already outstanding, plus those proposed to be offered, based on operations in the current fiscal year and certain expenses during the three years prior to the offering;
- (2) the existence of a feasibility study undertaken in connection with a new health care facility;
- (3) issuance of the bonds under a trust indenture meeting certain minimum standards;
- (4) acquisition of a fixed-price contract and completion bond or another "acceptance form of assurance of performance"; and
- (5) provision of financial statements for the last three fiscal years, including an audited statement for the most recent fiscal year, to investors.

[xii] Mortgage Programs.

NASAA Mortgage Program Guidelines were adopted in 1996 and apply to registrations of direct participation mortgage programs in the form of limited partnerships, trusts, limited liability companies, and limited liability partnerships. The Mortgage Program guidelines are a counterpart to the Real Estate Programs policy statement. They impose specific requirements on sponsors regarding experience and financial condition, and in turn require program sponsors to establish minimum income and net worth standards for persons who purchase program interests. Fees, compensation, and expenses associated with a program must be reasonable, and the guidelines also deal specifically with investments in mortgages, conflicts of interest and investment restrictions, the rights and obligations of participants, and disclosure and marketing requirements.

[xiii] Viatical Investments.

NASAA takes the position that viatical investments, which are commonly known as viatical, senior, or life settlement contracts are securities, and are subject to registration under state Blue Sky laws. The NASAA Guidelines regarding viatical investments impose requirements on viatical issuers relating to experience, financial condition, and financial statements. The suitability of participants is also addressed. Additionally, there are escrow requirements, specific pre- and post-sale structured disclosure requirements, and requirements relating to record retention.

[e] NASAA Omnibus Guidelines. NASAA "omnibus" guidelines were adopted for application to the registration and qualification of offerings of programsⁿ³⁶ for which policy statements have not been adopted. The guidelines set requirements for sponsors of covered programs, establish suitability requirements for participants, and address other matters of common concern. These include fees, compensation and expenses, conflicts of interest, investment restrictions, rights and obligations of participants, disclosure, marketing, and other miscellaneous aspects of such offerings.ⁿ³⁷

The omnibus guidelines have been formally adopted by a handful of states.ⁿ³⁸ Their application is primarily to offerings of limited partnership interests in programs involving something other than real estate or oil and gas properties. Many of the basic elements of the Omnibus Guidelines are similar to the elements of the NASAA real estate Statement of Policy, and in practice, the NASAA real estate guidelines were often applied to non-real estate programs. Thus, consistency is still afforded to issuers in those jurisdictions adopting the Omnibus Guidelines.

[f] Chart: NASAA Statements of Policy Adoptions. States formally adopting NASAA Statements of Policy are listed in the following chart. The list presented here includes only those states that have formally adopted particular NASAA Statements or Guidelines in a rule or published statement for application to registrations qualification.ⁿ³⁹ CCH paragraph references are to CCH Blue Sky Law Reporter, where both formal and informal adoptions, as for example by confirming letters, may be found.

Chart--NASAA Statements of Policy Adoptions

Policy Statement	State	CCH P	Adopted As
1. Affiliated Transactions and Loans	Alabama	7462	Rule 830-X-4-.21
	Alaska	8434E	Rule 3 AAC 08.190
	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rule 13.305(A)(1)
	Minnesota	33,499, 33,500	Rule 2875.3060, .3070
	Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
	Nebraska	37,424	Rules, Ch. 24
	Nevada	38,453	Rule 90.405(a)
	New Mexico	41,566J	Rule 12.11.9.10
	Ohio	45,709, 45,712	Bulletin 2003:12 & 7/86
	Pennsylvania	48,661	Bulletin 3/83
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2.06
	Texas	55,590F	Rule 113.16
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(g)
2. Asset-Backed Securities	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Kansas	26,407A	Rule 81-7-2(a)(12)
	Missouri	35,453	Rule Sec. 3052.030
	Ohio	45,733	Bulletin 96:2
	Pennsylvania	48,684TT	Rel. 95-CF-4
	Texas	55,671	Rule 129.1
3. Cattle Feeding Programs	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(q)
	Indiana	24,593A	Sec. 710 IAC 1128
	Kansas	26,407A	Rules, Sec. 8172
	Massachusetts	31,605	Rules Sec. 13.305

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

		Minnesota	33,530	Rule 2875.6100
		Missouri	35,468	Sec. 30-52.180
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313(c)
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Utah	57,406A	Rule R164111(B)
		Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 5-30-80(5)
		Washington	61,582B	Rule WAC 46016A-205
		W. Virginia	63,478	Rules Sec. 14.08
		Wyoming	66,435	Rules Sec. 2(f)
4.	Church	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Bonds	California	11,929M	Rule 260.140.72.5
		Florida	17,431	69W-400.001
		Indiana	24,593A	Sec. 710 IAC 1128
		Kansas	26,407A; 26,617	Rule 81-7-2(10)
		Michigan	32,560	Rel. 2/19/91, amended 3/24/94
		Missouri	35,507	Rules, Sec. 3054.070
		Nebraska	37,435	Rules, Ch. 35
		Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
		North Carolina	43,419	Rule 1209
		Pennsylvania	48,686A	Rel. No. 02CF-1
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 078042.06
		Texas	55,651	Rule 125.1
		Utah	57,406A	Rule R164111(B)
		Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 53080
		Washington	61,582B	Rules WAC-16A-205
		W. Virginia	63,479	Sec. 14.09
5.	Church	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Extension	Kansas	26,617	Rule Sec. 8172
	Funds/	Missouri	35,507	Rules, Sec. 3054.070
	General	Nebraska	37,436	Rules Ch. 36
	Obligation	Nevada	38,453	Rules Sec. 90.405
	Financing	Pennsylvania	48,684T	Rel. No. 95CF-3
		South Dakota	52,810Z	Rules, Sec. 20:08:07:33
		Tennessee	54,411; 54,412	Rule 078042.06, .07
		Washington	61,582B	Rules WAC-16A-205

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

6.	Commodity Pool Programs	Alabama	7462	Rule 830-X-4-.21
		Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
		Indiana	24,593A	Sec. 710 IAC 1128
		Iowa	25,457	Rule, Sec. 9150.57
		Kansas	26,407A	Rule 81-7-2(a)(6)
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rule 13.305(a)
		Minnesota	33,534	Rule 2875.8100
		Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
		Missouri	35,453	Rule 30-52.180
		Nebraska	37,433	Rules, Ch. 20
		Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313
		Ohio	45,605	Bulletin 10/88
		Pennsylvania	48,673	Bulletin 6/86
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(b)
		Wyoming	66,435	Rule Sec. 2(f)(vi)
7.	Corporate Securities Definitions	Idaho	21,405	Rule Sec. 005
		Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
		Massachusetts	31,465	13.305(A)(3)
		Missouri	35,453	Rule Sec. 3052.030
		Nevada	38,453	Rule Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566G	Rule 12.11.9.7
		Pennsylvania	48,685H	Rel. No. 97CF-3
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,590D	Rule 113.14
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(m)
8.	Equipment Programs	Alabama	7462	Rule 830-X-4-.21
		Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116 11/27/84
		Indiana	24,593A	Rule 710 IAC 1-12-8
		Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
		Kansas	26,407A	Rule 81-7-2(a)(4)
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rule 13.305(A)(5)
		Michigan	32,589	Update Spr. 1983
		Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

		Missouri	35,453	Rule 30-52.030
		Nebraska	37,420	Rule Ch. 20
		Nevada	38,453	Rule 90.405(a)
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313
		Ohio	45,604	Bulletin 7/86
		Pennsylvania	48,667	Notice 7/29/83
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-3-.06
		Texas	55,590B	Rule 113.12(6)
		Utah	57,406A	Rule R164-11-1(B)
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(c)
		Wyoming	66,435	Rule Sec. 2(f)(vii) 11/27/84
9.	Health Care	Indiana	24,593A	Rule 710 IAC 1-12-8(5)
	Facility	Nebraska	37,422	Rule Ch. 22
	Offerings	Nevada	38,453	Rule 90.405(a)
		North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313
		Pennsylvania	48,673A	Bulletin 11/83
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(l)
10.	Impound-	Alabama	7451	Rule 830X-4.11
	ment of	Alaska	8432	Rule 3 AAC 08.190
	Proceeds	Arizona	9522, 9523	Rules, Sec. R14-4-112
		Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01
		California	12,111-118	Rule 260.141.20-.27
		Colorado	13,106	Rule 11-51-302(5)
		Delaware	15,121	Rule 7321
		Florida	17,479	Rule 69W-700.009
		Hawaii	20,456	Rule 16-38-11.5
		Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
		Indiana	24,593B	710 IAC 1-12-9
		Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
		Kansas	26,407	Rule 81-7-1(e)
		Maryland	30,426	Rule 06
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rule 13.305(A)(7)
		Michigan	32,438	Rule 451.705.3
		Minnesota	33,484-486	Rule 2875.2440
		Missouri	35,460	Rule 30-52.100

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

		New Jersey	40,513	Rule 13:47A-10.3
		New Mexico	41,566I	Rule 12.11.9.9
		New York	42,571	Policy Statement 100
		North Carolina	43,438	Rule 1314
		Oregon	47,571	Rule 441-65-150
		Pennsylvania	48,117, 48,469, 49,685H	Bulletin 3/83
		South Carolina	51,514	Rule 13303
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,590E	Rule 113.15
		Utah	57,407	Rule R164-11-1(B)b
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(n)
		West Virginia	63,483	Rule 14.13
11.	Mortgage Programs	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
		Iowa	25,457	Rule Sec. 19150.57(502)
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
		Missouri	35,453	Rule Sec. 3052.030
		Nevada	38,453	Rule Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		Washington	61,582B	Rules WAC-16A-205
12.	Oil and Gas Programs	Alabama	7462	Rule 830X-4.21
		Alaska	8424	3 AAC 08.110
		Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
		Indiana	24,593A	Rules, Sec. 710 IAC 1128
		Iowa	25,457	Rules, Sec. 19150.57(502)
		Kansas	26,407A	Rules, Sec. 8172
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
		Michigan	32,589	Update Spring 1983
		Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
		Missouri	35,453	Rule Sec. 30-52.030
		Nebraska	37,433	Rules Ch. 33
		Nevada	38,453	Rules, 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313(c)
		Pennsylvania	48,667	Notice 7-29-83
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,631	Rule 121.1

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

	Utah	57,406A	Rule R164111(B)
	Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 5-30-80
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(d)
	West Virginia	63,477	Sec. 14.07
	Wyoming	66,436	Rule Sec. 2(f)(i)
13. Options and Warrants	Alabama	7462	Rule 830-X-4-.14
			Rule 830-X-4-.15
	Alaska	8428	3 AAC 08.150
	Arizona	9516	Rules, Sec. R144106
			11/27/84
	Florida	17,477	69W-700.007
	Hawaii	20,455	Rules Sec. 163811.4
	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Indiana	24,588	Sec. 710 IAC 1-2-22
	Iowa	25,457	Rules, Sec. 19150.57(502)
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
	Missouri	35,453	Rules, Sec. 3052.030
	Nebraska	37,402	Chapter 10
	Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
	New Mexico	41,566K	Rule 12.11.9.11.
	North Carolina	43,431	Rule 1307(c)
	Ohio	45,719A	Bulletin 3/93
	Oregon	47,582E	Rule 44185020
	South Carolina	51,516	Rule 13305
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
	Texas	55,590G	Rule 113.17
	Utah	57,409	Rule R164121f
	Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 53080
	Washington	61,582B	Rules WAC-16A-205
14. Preferred Stock and Debentures	Alabama	7450	Rule 830-X-4-.10
	Alaska	8435	Rule 3 AAC 08.220
	Arizona	9527	Rules, Sec. R144117
	Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01
	California	11,853	Rule 260.140.3
	Florida	17,480	3E-700.010
	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

	Indiana	24,591	Rule 710 IAC 1-12-5
	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
	Kansas	26,407A	Rules, Sec. 8172
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305)
	Missouri	35,453	Rule 30-52.120
	Nebraska	37,402; 37,429	Rule Ch. 9
	Nevada	38,453	Rule 90.405(a)
	New Mexico	41,566R	Rule 12.11.9.18; 12.11.9.19
	Ohio	45,708. 45,711	Bulletin 5/86 & 2003:12
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06(j)
	Texas	55,590H	Rule 113.18
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(o)
	Wyoming	66,435	Rule Ch. 7 Sec. 2(f)(v)
15.	Promoters'
	Equity
	Investment
	Alaska	8430	3 AAC 08.170
	Arizona	9517	Rule R14-4-107
	Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01(G)
	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Florida	17,475	Rule 69W-700.005
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Missouri	35,453	Rule 30-52.080
	Nebraska	37,402	Rule Ch. 7
	Nevada	38,453	Rule 90.405(a)
	New Mexico	41,566L	Rule 12.11.9.12
	South Carolina	51,518	Rule 13307
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
	Texas	55,590I	Rule 113.3(9)
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(p)
16.	Promotional
	Shares
	Alaska	8429	3 AAC 08.160
	Alabama	7462	Rule 830X-4.21
	Arizona	9515	Rule R14-4-105
	Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01(C)
	California	11,881; 11,882; 11,883	Rules 260.140.30, .32
	Florida	17,475	Rule 69W-700.005
	Hawaii	20,454	Rules Sec. 163811.3

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Indiana	24,589	Rule 710 IAC 1-12-3
	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
	Kansas	26,407	Rules Sec. 8171
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Missouri	35,453	Rule 3052.030
	Nebraska	37,422	Rules, Ch. 22
	Nevada	38,453	Rules, 90.405
	New Mexico	41,566M	Rule 12.11.9.13
	Ohio	45,719	Bulletin 4/87, 3/93
	Pennsylvania	48,468; 48,685H	Rel No. 97-CF-3
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
	Texas	55,590J	Rule 113.20
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205
17. Real Estate	Alabama	7462	Rule 830X-4.21
Investment	Alaska	8433	3 AAC 08.200
Trusts	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Hawaii	20,458	Rules Sec. 163811.7
	Indiana	24,593A	Rules Sec. 710 IAC 128
	Iowa	25,457	Rules Sec 19150.57(502)
	Kansas	26,407A	Rules Sec. 8172
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
	Missouri	35,453	Rules, Sec. 30-52.030
	Nebraska	37,432	Rules Ch. 32
	Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
	New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
	North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1313(c)
	Ohio	45,603	Bulletin 7/86
	Pennsylvania	48,679A	Notice 3/29/86
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
	Texas	55,741	Rule 143.1
	Utah	57,406A	Rule R164111(B)
	Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 53080
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(f)
	Wyoming	66,435	Rule Ch. 7 2(f)(ii)
18. Real Estate	Alabama	7462	Rule 830X-4.21

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

Programs	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Indiana	24,593A	Rules Sec. 710 IAC 1128
	Iowa	25,457	Sec. 510-50.58 (502)
	Kansas	26,407A	Rules Sec. 8172
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
	Missouri	35,453	Rules, Sec. 30-52030
	Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
	New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
	North Carolina	43,437	Rule 1312(c)
	Ohio	45,702	Policy Notice 6-1-84
	Pennsylvania	48,679A	Notice 5-1-82
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2.06
	Texas	55,601	Rule 117.1
	Utah	57,406A	Rule R164111(B)
	Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 5-30-80
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205
	Wyoming	66,435	Rule Ch. 7 2(f)(iv)
19. Underwriting and Selling Expenses	Alaska	8426	3 AAC 08.130
	Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01(E)
	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
	Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
	Mississippi	34,429E	Rule 219
	Missouri	35,453	Rules, Sec. 3052.030
	Nebraska	37,421	Rules, Ch. 21
	Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
	New Mexico	41,566O	Rule 12.11.9.15
	Oregon	47,582D	Rule 44185010
	South Carolina	51,515	Rule 13304
	Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
	Texas	55,590L	Rule 113.22
	Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 5-30-80(2)
	Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(t)
20. Unequal Voting Rights	Alabama	7462	Rule 830-X-4-.21
	Alaska	8434	3 AAC 08.210
	Arkansas	10,437	Rule 404.01(H)

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

		California	11,851	Rule 260.140.1
		Florida	17,476	Rule 3E-700.006
		Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
		Indiana	24,590	Rule 710 IAC 1-12-4
		Kansas	26,407	Rule 81-7-1(h)
		Minnesota	33,501	Rule 2875.3080
		Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
		Missouri	35,453	Rule 30-52.110
		Nebraska	37,426	Chapter 8
		Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566P	Rule 12.11.9.16
		Ohio	45,707	Bulletin 5/86
		Pennsylvania	48,661	Bulletin 3/83
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,590N	Rule 113.23
		Washington	61,582B	Rule 460-16A-040, 045
21.	Unsound	Alaska	8425E	3 AAC 08.125
	Financial	Idaho	21,406	Rules, Sec. 005
	Condition	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
		Missouri	35,453	Rules Sec. 3052.030
		Nebraska	37,428	Rules, Ch. 28
		Nevada	38,453	Rules Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,556Q	Rule 12.11.9.17
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,590M	Rule 113.23
		Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 5-30-80
		Washington	61,582B; 61,585G	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(u)
22.	Use of	Alaska	8426E	3 AAC 08.135
	Proceeds	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	(Specificity)	Iowa	25,457	Rule 191-50.57(502)
		Missouri	35,453	Rules Sec. 3052.030
		Nebraska	37,428	Rules Ch. 28
		Nevada	38,453	Rules, Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566N	Rule 12.11.9.14
		Tennessee	54,411	Rule 0780-4-2-.06
		Texas	55,590K	Rule 113.21
		Washington	61,582B;	Rule 460-16A-205(1)(s)

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

			61,585G
23.	Viatical	Idaho	21,405	Rules, Sec. 005
	Investments	Kansas	26,618	Admin. Order 7/23/02
		Missouri	35,453	Rules Sec. 3052.030
		South Dakota	52,810X	Rules, Sec. 20:08:07:31
		Virginia	60,435B	Rule 21 VAC 53080
24.	Omnibus	Arizona	9526	Rules, Sec. R144116
	Guidelines	Indiana	24,679	Policy Statement 2/5/93
		Iowa	25,457	Rules Sec. 19150.57(502)
		Kansas	26,407A	Rules Sec. 8172
		Massachusetts	31,465	Rules Sec. 13.305
		Mississippi	34,429F	Rule 221
		Missouri	35,453	Rules Sec. 3053.030
		Nevada	38,453	Rules Sec. 90.405
		New Mexico	41,566H	Rule 12.11.9.8
		Pennsylvania	48,683K	Rel. No. 92CF-2
		Washington	61,582	Rules WAC-16A-205

[g] Central Securities Administrators Council Statements of Policy The Central Securities Administrators Council (CSAC) has approved and published certain statements of policy that have, variously, been embraced by states comprising the council. CSAC policies address qualification of certain types of offerings, and have limited application. Certain of them addressing investment company offerings are no longer viable after NSMIA and the preemption of state regulatory authority over investment company securities generally.ⁿ⁴⁰ Other CSAC policies address offerings of finance company debt securities and commodity pool programs. Only two policies have general applications: "Terms of Escrow Requirements," for offerings involving cheap stockⁿ⁴¹ and "Loans to Company Officials."ⁿ⁴²

[h] Other Common Standards

[i] Offering Price and Dilution. Standards set in the area of offering price and dilution are intended to protect new investors from immediate excessive loss in value. The investor without access to information prior to the offering is the person of primary concern here, although in some cases, such regulations can assist new investors with access to information from excessive dilution by promoters or insiders who provide inadequate, misleading, or misrepresentative information. Merit standards are generally placed on the offering priceⁿ⁴³ of new unseasoned offerings in accordance with one or more of the techniques of price estimation described below.

Established Market Price. When an issuer is applying to register securities for public sale, the current market price of similar outstanding securities of the issuer may be considered appropriate. This situation may be the case only if the agency determines that there is an established market for similar class securities of the issuer. For an adequate public market to be deemed existent, it is usually necessary to show that there is a minimum number of shareholders of record. A common benchmark is 500 shareholders. The technique is, therefore, not typically available to small firms. While the number of shareholders of record is the most common standard, other tests of an adequate market may include the evaluation of the number of shares outstanding, the number of market-makers regularly making a market in the similar securities, the average or total number of transactions taking place over a specified period of time, or the existence of regular price quotation in an acceptable source, such as a securities manual.ⁿ⁴⁴

New Issue Underwriter Pricing. Where the underwriter has a firm commitment to purchase an issue with no prior history of earnings, or where there is no established market, the proposed underwriter offering price may be considered acceptable. An underwriter memorandum may be required to provide the basis for such price. The underwriter may additionally be required to provide verification of ability to complete the firm underwriting commitment. This verification is usually based on statements of financial position in terms of net capital. Additionally, the underwriter expertise at setting the offering price may be questioned and, therefore, may require some proof of reliability.

Comparable Firm Market Price. When there is a basis for argument that the filing non-public issuer is comparable to a firm currently trading publicly, the comparable firm's trading price may be allowed as the initial offering price. Generally, to be comparable, the issuer must be similar in terms of one or more of the following characteristics: asset size, industry, products, or other relevant factors. An underwriter memorandum may be required for such a price-setting request.ⁿ⁴⁵

Acceptable Level of Dilution. The initial offering price may be reviewed in relation to an acceptable level of dilution. Dilution is the difference per share outstanding after the offering between the offering price and the present net book value of the shares, increased by the net proceeds of the offering. Dilution levels are normally stated in terms of a percentage decrease from the offering price. The offering price may be deemed excessive if the percentage decrease in net book value of the shares versus the offering price is too high. Maximum allowable dilution varies among the states, and may vary in a state as between start-up and seasoned issuers.ⁿ⁴⁶

In addition to assisting in maximum offering price determinations, a dilution standard is often utilized in connection with cheap stock and promoter investment guidelines.

Insider Multiple. Whether formally or informally stated, merit standards are occasionally set in the area of price multiples of the insider price. The multiple may in fact be a value related to an acceptable dilution percentage or it may be set in a more arbitrary manner. For example, a multiple of two might be set for jurisdictions with a dilution percentage maximum of 25%. Where the insider price is $2.00, the public offering price would be set no higher than two times $2.00, or $4.00. Where the dilution is restricted to 33 one-third percent, the multiple might be set at three. Thus providing an offering price of three times $2.00, or $6.00.

Price Earnings Multiple. For those firms not in the promotional or developmental stage, it may be possible to utilize the price earnings multiple method of offering price determination. This technique is applicable only to firms with some history of earnings prior to the offering date. The minimum earnings history is generally two years. The earnings value used may be based on the most recent earnings value or on an average of the period covered. The multiple standard set by the regulatory agency usually represents a maximum multiple of earnings for all firms and does not vary with industries or economic conditions. The administrator may approve, in some cases, an alternative multiple of earnings where there is adequate evidence that such a multiple is more relevant for the issuer.ⁿ⁴⁷

Stated Offering Price. In some cases, the merit standards may simply include a low stated maximum price per share as the alternative if no other method is applicable.

[ii] Cheap Stock. Merit jurisdictions generally restrict the amount of cheap stock that may be sold to insiders or promoters.ⁿ⁴⁸ Cheap stock may generally be described as stock issued to promoters or insiders prior to the public offering where the insider or promoter price paid is significantly below that proposed to be paid by the public investor. Alternatively, it may be described simply as stock where the insider or promoter price bears no relationship to that paid by the public.

Usually cheap stock is made available to insiders as consideration for risk or performance in the development of the firm. Such stock may also be utilized as an employment enhancement to obtain and retain management or key employees. Additionally, cheap stock is often utilized as compensation for consultants, underwriters, and others. The purpose of merit standards regarding cheap stock is to eliminate the excessive issue of such stock. Some statutes specify maximum amounts, while others address only the reasonableness of cheap stock issues. The intent is to prohibit excessive dilution to new investors. In addition, such prohibitions may, in fact, restrain insiders from maintaining control of the firm through the use of stock while simultaneously not relinquishing equitable amounts of personal funds.

The use of cheap stock is generally disfavored,ⁿ⁴⁹ and conditions are commonly imposed. Apart from a general condition that the number of shares issued as cheap stock be justifiable in amount, and that the consideration have a reasonable relationship to the public offering price, particular standards prescribed usually pertain to some allowable level of dilution of ownership or value to new investors after completion of the offering. The standards may refer to some prescribed maximum proportion of total stock outstanding after issue or to allowable amounts of dilution after issue completion. Standards may differ within a jurisdiction depending on the industry of the filing issuer or the stage of development of that issuer.

In determining the maximum amount of cheap stock allowed, the standards usually prescribe some proportion-oriented rule such as:

Fair Value of Equity
Total Equity Investment

To determine the proportion standards, there is generally a stated multiple of the calculated proportion. For example, where the proportion is determined to be ten percent or less, the maximum percentage of cheap stock authorized may be defined as three times that proportion. Where the proportion is greater than ten percent the maximum percentage of cheap stock authorized may be stated as two times the proportion. A specific stated maximum boundary such as 80% or 90% may also be specified.

An alternative approach is to set a scale of boundaries relating the calculated proportion to the allowable percentage of cheap stock. The following is an example of such a standard scale.

Calculated Proportion	Maximum Percent of Cheap Stock
5%	15%
10%	30%
15%	40%
20%	50%
30%	70%
40%	90%
50%	90%

Cheap stock rules may be coordinated directly or indirectly with standards dealing with offering price, dilution, cheap stock, promoters investment, and voting rights.

[iii] Promoters' Equity Investment. The intent of the minimum promoters' equity investment requirement is to instill a sense of good faith in the promoter. The assumption is that the new investor will be provided more protection when the promoter has personal funds at risk. Such promoters and insiders are expected to be more conscientious and success-oriented when significant personal investment is involved. Such standards further discourage the unscrupulous promoter from raising funds for personal gain and with no intent to make the venture a successful and viable enterprise. Personal risk is the driving force of this form of merit standard. By providing a method of increasing insider and promoter concern for success of the underlying firm, these standards are, in fact, a means of minimizing the principal-agent problem that may exist between management, insiders, and public owners.

Promoter equity investment standards⁵⁰ are applied only when the underlying entity is in the promotional or developmental stage. By general definition, promotional or developmental firms are those with no significant earnings or operating record. Specific definitions vary from state to state. Such investment by promoters may, unless otherwise stated, be in the form of cash or tangible assets valued at reasonable amounts in accordance with some acceptable valuation technique. Reasonable value assessment is usually based on an independent appraisal of tangible assets. In certain cases, where the issuer has a history of operations and where there is an earned surplus, promoter investment credit may be granted the promoters for any earned surplus funding previously provided the issuer. In any case, the acceptable minimum amount of investment is often stated as a proportion of the total equity capital to be available at the completion of the offering in question.⁵¹ In other situations a scale such as ten percent or more for the first 1,000,000 of total equity capital and an additional five percent thereafter may be utilized. Other jurisdictions cite specific minimums at all levels of total equity investment. These are generally stated at the five percent to 15% level.

The promoters' equity investment standards must often be considered in conjunction with the standards dealing with offering price, dilution, cheap stock, and voting rights.

The promoters' equity investment standard can usually be met by the investment of assets such as real estate or motor vehicles. When such is the case, an independent appraisal, especially of the real estate, by a qualified appraiser can smooth the qualification procedure. Practitioners may also seek to negotiate for a lower promoters' investment standard than is normally required. In those situations, a cheap stock escrow greater than is normally required may be requested. Alternatively, the promoter may be required to invest assets that are extremely liquid, such as cash or marketable securities.

[iv] Escrow or Restriction of Promotional Shares. Merit standards requiring the escrow of promoter or insider stock or other restrictions relating to such stock are also intended to assure good faith of promoters and insiders. Since such stock is generally either escrowed or restricted as letter stock until some minimum level of earnings is attained, or until the passage of some specified period of time, there is an underlying assumption that escrow or restriction provides an increased incentive to perform effectively and toward the same goal that is in the best interest of the public investor.

When a disparity of substantial proportion exists between the promoter or inside price paid for securities and the price paid by the new public investor, an escrow or lettering of all or part of the promotional or cheap securities may be required. Certain jurisdictions may require promoter or insider stock to be escrowed or lettered regardless of whether there is a disparity in price.⁵²

Escrow restrictions generally restrict such stock to escrow for a minimum stated time or until earnings meet specified standards. The standards may specify that earnings after tax be equal to some stated percentage of the public offering price times the average number of shares outstanding each respective year of escrow. For example, where the percentage is stated as five percent and where the initial public price was $6.00 per share, the required after-tax earnings level will be $30,000 if the average number of shares outstanding over the escrow period is 100,000 shares.

Alternatively, the standard may be stated in terms of dividend payout in relation to the initial public offering price. The standard may, for example, require the escrow to continue until investors have received dividends of at least six percent of the initial offering price for a specified period of time. Where the initial offering price is $6.00 per share, and 100,000 shares are outstanding, dividends of $36,000 must have been paid to allow the release of cheap stock from escrow.

In some cases, special escrow provisions are provided for particular types of offerings whether registered or exempt. One such example is the non-profit issue escrow requirement of Georgia.ⁿ⁵³

The conditions for the escrow of cheap stock are often left to the discretion of the securities administrator. Negotiation may be possible, however, and may set an acceptable precedent for other administrators. It may, for example, be possible to get release terms based on a measure of performance other than earnings, such as minimum rate of return on equity investment or sales growth.

Such letter restrictions and escrow requirements, additionally, serve as a dilution prevention measure. When cheap stock is provided to promoters and insiders and there is a significant difference in either offering price or secondary market price during the first four to six weeks or more in the market, there are gains from trading to be made by such insiders or promoters. Restricting the trading activity provides, therefore, dilution protection as well as insurance that the promoters or insiders continue to have monetary interest in the entity. Dilution and promoter investment standards are often tied to these standards.

[v] Impound of Proceeds. Where the offering being registered for public sale is based on an all-or-none, or a best efforts underwriting, all or part of the proceeds may be impounded until either the end of some stated period of time or the successful completion of the underwriting effort.ⁿ⁵⁴

For an all-or-none underwriting, all funds will usually be escrowed pending the complete sale of the issue. For a best-efforts underwriting, funds will generally be impounded until some minimum amount of funds are obtained. If, in either case, the marketing effort is unsuccessful, the impounded proceeds will be returned to the public investors in full plus any interest earned on the impound and less any expenses assessed for the administration of the impound.

The determination of the amount of impound varies across jurisdictions and, whether by rule or statutory section, generally provides the state administrator with the ability to impound the amount of proceeds deemed appropriate in each case.

[vi] Options and Warrants. Options and warrants may be issued for a variety of reasons. Frequently, such securities are utilized as sweeteners to enhance the marketability of an issue. They may also be provided to management and other key employees as payment for services or as incentives to induce productivity and/or continued loyalty to the issuing firm. Options and warrants may further be utilized as payment for services by consultants, attorneys, accountants, and underwriters. Such securities may also be viewed as an alternative to the issuance of cheap stock as a means of maintaining future promoter or insider firm control.

Option and warrant restrictions are primarily intended to protect the new investor from future excessive dilution in value, earnings per share, or control. The key here is that such restrictions constrain the amount of options and warrants or the amount of securities into which such options and warrants may be converted. The standards imposed, therefore, do not attempt to eliminate such securities or attachments from being issued but rather their issue in excessive amounts.

Option and warrant standardsⁿ⁵⁵ usually limit the volume of options and warrants that may be issued as attachments to issuer securities or that may be issued as separate securities. Merit standards may also restrict the amount of securities that options or warrants may be utilized to purchase. Merit standards restricting the issue of options and warrants generally restrict the amount of options and warrants simply to some reasonable amount, but may also impose a cap. Such standards provide flexibility to the regulator as well as to the issuer.

Specific restrictions may set time frames that must lapse prior to execution of the option or warrant. Such standards may additionally specify a percentage of shares that may be made available upon exercise. A typical standard would prevent exercise for 11 to 12 months from the date of issuance and would restrict the amount of shares available through exercise to less than or equal to ten percent of the total shares offered to the public.ⁿ⁵⁶

Additional restrictions may provide for a step-up of exercise price over time,ⁿ⁵⁷ usually set by a scale. Another approach may allow, after a minimum waiting period, for unrestricted exercise at a price equal to the offering price plus some step-up amount. Generally, options and warrants to underwriters will be authorized only where there is a firm underwriting.ⁿ⁵⁸ In addition, the financial capability of the underwriter to fulfill the underwriting commitment is considered.

Specific option and warrant rules or guidelines may be set for areas such as qualified employee stock plans and employee stock purchase plans.ⁿ⁵⁹

[vii] Offering Expenses and Commissions. States commonly address the power of administrators to deal with the level of selling expenses, particularly underwriter commissions, discounts and other compensation, via general statutory authority to deny qualification for an offering that would be made with "unreasonable amounts of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions or other compensation." This is the approach of the Uniform Act.ⁿ⁶⁰ Other additional or more specific expense restrictions are found in a number of states. Whether prescribed as a part of merit review, or generally, the attention to offering expenses is a constant in Blue Sky regulation.ⁿ⁶¹

Expenses include such items as cash, securities, options, warrants, commissions, discounts to underwriters, finders' fees, or generally anything of value provided to underwriters or similar parties as compensation. Certain states include vague terminology covering expenses not strictly accounted for in any way. A typical commission and expenses rule will require the total of all commissions and expenses to be less than or equal to some percentage of the gross proceeds from the offering. The expenses will usually include items such as: underwriter discounts and commissions; the value of options and warrants to underwriters; finders fees; the cost of printing and engraving; advertising expenses; registration expenses for blue skying and SEC federal registration; legal costs; accounting fees; and in general, any other expense associated with bringing the offering to the marketplace.ⁿ⁶²

Where the marketing expenses are segregated, the amount allowed in this area is also usually less than or equal to some stated percentage of the gross proceeds. These expenses are generally limited to: underwriter discounts and commissions; options and warrants to underwriters; and any other expenses associated with selling or marketing the issue. Thus, for example, where the total expenses may be limited to 20% of the gross proceeds, there may be an additional limitation that a maximum of 15% of the gross proceeds may be spent on marketing expenses.

Given the inherent level of risk associated with promotional or developmental-stage issues, these are the offerings most often affected by expense and commission limitations.ⁿ⁶³ States utilize one of two general varieties of commission and expense rules. The rule may be specific in terms of the maximum allowable percentage of the aggregate value or selling price that may be spent on such items.ⁿ⁶⁴

Alternatively, the rule may be somewhat subjective and require only that commissions and expenses be reasonable in amount.ⁿ⁶⁵ Such open-ended standards can be more strenuous for compliance purposes due to the use of unwritten rules and their subjective nature. The aggregate value or selling price often includes warrants and options to underwriters. In some states, the value is based only on actual purchases, not to include pledges to purchase. In other states, pledges are considered as part of the aggregate value.

A challenge in Blue Sky compliance is presented by the variety of expenses addressed among states.ⁿ⁶⁶ In addition, the restrictions can vary with the type of underwriting, size of the offering, and type of security being registered. In some cases, percentage limitations may be modified in relation to the size of the offering. Thus, in Kansas, for example, the fifteen percent (15%) of aggregate offering price overall expense limitation imposed may be waived for offerings of $3 million or less.ⁿ⁶⁷

A number of jurisdictions set limitations on the combined amount of underwriter compensation and expenses to include legal fees, prospectus and offering circular printing costs, and accounting fees.ⁿ⁶⁸ Several states separate underwriter compensation and other expenses setting different restrictions in each area.ⁿ⁶⁹ A few states set restrictions only in the area of underwriter compensation.ⁿ⁷⁰ Underwriter compensation generally includes such items as finders' fees, commissions, and discounts. Stated percentages are generally, however, meant only as safe harbor rules. Registration may be granted where expenses exceed these standards when some basis-in-fact for a non-qualifying amount of expense can be presented and is deemed as necessary expense by the regulatory agency.

The determination of compliance may be especially difficult in states where the restriction is stated as reasonable. In those cases, where a limit of reasonable amount is stated, the implication is that some published or unpublished limits may exist as a benchmark. The registration will not necessarily be denied for non-compliance if a basis for costs over this standard can be shown and is proven to be both necessary and reasonable.

The restrictions affect promotional or developmental-stage issues more than established firms, because of the inherent high level of risk associated with such issues. As the risk of an issue increases, marketing success decreases. As a result, underwriters require additional compensation for services rendered to these issuers. This is especially true in the case of the firm commitment underwriting.

[viii] Rights and Protective Covenants. In general, rights protection comes in several forms: preemptive rights; voting rights; conflict of interest; loans to employees, directors, and officers; and capital structure.

[ix] Preemptive Rights. Several merit review states attempt to insure that there is no question as to the preemptive rights of stockholders.ⁿ⁷¹ Ordinarily, state corporation laws will provide such rights, and merit standards in these cases are merely an additional safeguard. The provisions may, however, be more explicit than the state corporation law and may guarantee a preemptive right to subscription of additional issues of any similar class of stock. The rights in these standards often also refer to stock splits and stock dividends.

[x] Voting Rights. Another common area of rights protection is that of voting rights. Several states either preclude non-voting stock outright, or impose requirements for qualification of an offering.ⁿ⁷² Generally, the merit standards set here attempt to provide equity between the classes of stock. Equity is evaluated on the basis of the voting rights provided each class. The proportion of shares outstanding in the stated classes is also considered in the equity of rights analysis.

An offering of similar class stock may be authorized without equitable voting rights. Such authorization can usually be obtained when the issuer can prove that alternative or offsetting rights with regard to preference are provided in areas such as dividend payment and liquidation. This is the approach taken in the NASAA Statement of Policy, and is the cornerstone of most state merit review policies on point. Thus in Texas, for example:

In offerings of non-voting shares or shares with disproportionate voting rights, which offerings normally are not fair, just and equitable, the commissioner may consider whether or not the disparity in voting rights is a temporary condition and whether or not the deprived shareholder receives an offsetting benefit (e.g., dividend preference or preference in liquidation) to compensate for such disparity.ⁿ⁷³

[xi] Conflicts of Interest. When there is a potential for conflict of interest between insiders, promoters, and public investors, merit standards may require that protective covenants or safeguards be instituted to protect the public investor.ⁿ⁷⁴

[xii] Loans to Key Employees and Officers. Loans to key employees are restricted for the same reasons a conflict of interest standard is promulgated generally. The ability of key employees and officers to obtain loans from the issuer is not considered to be in the best interest of the public investor. Such loans may not be adequately collateralized and may have a rate of interest below that available in other investments. The issuer may often be prohibited or constrained by merit restrictions on these loans.ⁿ⁷⁵

[xiii] Debt Securities and Preferred Stock. Where debt securities are the subject of registration, merit states generally require verification of adequate earnings or cash flow from operations to cover the payment of required debt service, or make provision for other kinds of protections.ⁿ⁷⁶ Such requirements are generally based on tests of earnings exclusive of extraordinary items. Tests in this area are often based on verification of a record of historical earnings over a specified period of time. However, it may also be possible to meet fairness standards based upon substantiated future net earnings or cash flow capability. In Ohio, for example, an issuer may satisfy the administrator that it has "made material contracts, acquisitions or other significant changes in its business operations which will result in future net earnings or cash flow sufficient to cover the annual dividend, interest and principal amortization requirements on all such securities" while also meeting obligations on other outstanding senior securities.ⁿ⁷⁷

A number of jurisdictions require minimum protective covenants or issuer restrictions to be included in the indenture.ⁿ⁷⁸ Sinking fund requirements are common in this area. A sinking fund restriction might require, for example, that 75% of the principal repayment amount be placed into a sinking fund before the repayment date. Alternatively, the issue may be serial in nature. Where the sinking fund applies, it may not be necessary to institute such a fund until some period of time has elapsed. Generally, debt of short-term maturity such as five years or fewer will not have to meet sinking fund provisions. Additional indenture requirements provide that a maximum debt-to-equity capital structure be observed. Collateral requirements may also be imposed as a measure of protection. In a number of jurisdictions, a minimum amount of capitalization or equity capitalization is required before debt securities will be authorized for sale in the state.

For preferred stock issues, some merit jurisdictions require verification of adequate earnings, exclusive of extraordinary items, to pay preferred dividends. Such tests, as with debt issues, usually require verification of such earnings on an average or annual basis over a specified period of time prior to issue. In neither the debt nor the preferred stock case is there a requirement for principal repayment.

Certain restrictions regarding promotional-stage issuers may prohibit their issuance of debt or preferred stock.ⁿ⁷⁹ Special provisions may also be provided for issues of industrial revenue bonds, reorganization issues, or issues of non-profit or eleemosynary organizations.ⁿ⁸⁰

For either debt or interest coverage, the specified interest or dividend standards may be waived. This is generally possible only where some collateral is made available in trust or where, as noted above, a reasonable forecast of future earnings or cash flow indicates sufficient coverage. Substantiation is necessary in some manner.

[xiv] Capital Structure and Capitalization Generally. Inadequate capitalization has often been found to be the primary cause of business failure. Similarly, firms using an inordinate amount of fixed cost financing are candidates for failure due to inadequate coverage of such fixed costs. Thus, certain jurisdictions require minimal amounts of capitalization before allowing public offerings.ⁿ⁸¹ Such capitalization generally includes the amount of funding to be obtained from the offering.

The actual capital structure may be addressed in capitalization standards or as a separate standard. In some states, only common stock issues will be authorized for sale where the issuer is in the promotional or developmental phase or where there is no history of operating profit.ⁿ⁸²

[xv] Miscellaneous and Special Standards. A number of miscellaneous standards or specific sets of standards for types of issues may also exist in various jurisdictions. Some of the more common include:

[A] Plan of Business. The plan of business or operations may be evaluated in certain jurisdictions.ⁿ⁸³ The intent of any plan of business evaluation is to ascertain if the operations of the issuer are based on sound business practices.

[B] Financial Condition. Specific standards may be set in the area of financial condition.ⁿ⁸⁴ Such standards are generally concerned with capitalization and protection in terms of issuer solvency.

[C] Honesty or Reputation. Some jurisdictions provide somewhat subjective provisions dealing with the honesty or business repute of the issuer.ⁿ⁸⁵

[D] Credit and Installment Sales. Standards restricting the sale of an issue on a credit or installment basis are provided in a number of jurisdictions.ⁿ⁸⁶

[E] Advertising and Sales Material. A number of jurisdictions apply standards to the advertising and sales literature pertaining to an offering. While such statutory provisions and rules may apply to both merit and non-merit filings, the restrictions may in fact be a form of merit regulation.ⁿ⁸⁷

[F] Differing Consideration. Contemporaneous sales of the same or similar securities to different purchasers at varying prices or for different consideration may be presumptively unfair. Sliding scale or quantity discount arrangements may be possible under some circumstances, but as a general rule the offering and sale of securities of the same class to different purchasers at different prices in the same offering or at approximately the same time will be deemed unfair to purchasers.ⁿ⁸⁸

[G] Special Standards Generally. Specific requirements regarding protective covenants, voting rights, capitalization, and other similar characteristics are provided for specialized programs and offerings by many jurisdictions. These special areas of standard setting are generally to be found in the following types of offerings:

- (1) Real Estate Investment Trusts,ⁿ⁸⁹
- (2) Real Estate Programs,ⁿ⁹⁰
- (3) Oil and Gas Programs,ⁿ⁹¹
- (4) Commodity Pool Programs,ⁿ⁹² and
- (5) Cattle Feeding Programs.ⁿ⁹³

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 5.02[3] .

(n2)Footnote 2. Section 306(a)(2)(E) of the original Uniform Act prescribes that the administrator may deny effectiveness of a registration statement on a finding that the offering would work or tend to work a fraud on purchasers. While the language of section 306(a)(2)(E) is not as broad as the "fair, just, and equitable" standard prescribed in some state laws, it is general enough when taken in conjunction with the broad definition of "fraud" in the Act to allow for some discretion in application of what amounts to a fairness standard. Indeed, section 401(d) of the Act makes clear that the definition of "fraud" for purposes of the Act is not limited to common law deceit.

Section 306 of the Uniform Act also prescribes several specific grounds upon which an offering may be rejected: (1) that underwriting and selling expenses are unreasonably high; (2) that promoters profits or participation is unreasonable; and (3) that there are unreasonable amounts or kinds of options involved.

(n3)Footnote 3. Although the first priority in merit review is submission of information to the administrator, regulatory requirements evolved so as to assure that disclosure to prospective investors via prospectuses or other informational offering documents is also typically involved. The role of disclosure in merit regulation is discussed in § 6.04.

(n4)Footnote 4. Section 304(c) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is representative of the most common provisions in prescribing:

A registration statement under this section becomes effective 30 days, or any shorter period provided by rule adopted or order issued under this [Act], after the date the registration statement or the last amendment other than a price amendment is filed if:

- (1) a stop order is not in effect and a proceeding is not pending under Section 306;
- (2) the administrator has not issued an order under Section 306 delaying effectiveness; and
- (3) the applicant or registrant has not requested that effectiveness be delayed.

(n5)Footnote 5. The NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Unsound Financial Condition, adopted in 1997, provides for denial of an application for registration, or the imposition of certain conditions on approval, when the financial statements of an issuer contain a "going concern" qualification or other specified indicia of unsound financial condition. CCH NASAA Reports P 3826.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., "Real Estate Programs," CCH NASAA Reports P 3601.

(n7)Footnote 7. For a complete presentation of NASAA Statement of Policy adoptions among the states see CCH NASAA Reports P 291, and the chart included in § 6.02[f]. The extent of, and variations in, adoption among the states is fully considered in § 6.02.

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally, 3D Harold S. Bloomenthal and Samuel Wolff, Securities and Federal Corporate Law §§ 14.11-14.19 (West Group 1997).

Particular NASAA guidelines in application have not escaped serious criticism, see, e.g., Hurwitz, "Founders Shares: An Analysis of Merit Review Under the Oregon Securities Law," 32 Willamette L. Rev. 249 (1996) (addressing the "sometimes absurd nature" of certain NASAA policies).

(n9)Footnote 9. Although the focus here is on the extent of state authority for continuing merit review in regard to NSMIA "uncovered" securities, states also retain certain authority in connection with offerings of "covered" securities. With respect to these offerings (other than nationally traded securities), the states are empowered by NSMIA to require fee payments and/or notice filings. Residual authority over covered securities is discussed in Chapter 5.

(n10)Footnote 10. provides that 'The [Administrator] may, from time to time, make, amend, and rescind such rules, forms, and orders as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, including rules and forms governing registration statements, applications, and reports, and defining any terms, whether or not used in this act, insofar as the definitions are not inconsistent with the provisions of this act. For the purpose of rules and forms, the [Administrator] may classify securities, persons, and matters within his jurisdiction, and prescribe different requirements for different classes.'

(n11)Footnote 11. Although it is not a merit review provision as such, the 2002 Uniform Act also retains the administrator's authority to require escrow of securities or impoundment of proceeds of an offering in certain circumstances as a condition of registration. Section 305(f) of the 2002 Uniform Act provides:

A rule adopted or order issued under this [Act] may require, as a condition of registration, that a security issued within the previous five years or to be issued to a promoter for a consideration substantially less than the public offering price or to a person for a consideration other than cash be deposited in escrow; and that the proceeds from the sale of the registered security in this State be impounded until the issuer receives a specified amount from the sale of the security either in this State or elsewhere. The conditions of any escrow or impoundment required under this subsection may be established by rule adopted or order issued under this [Act], but the administrator may not reject a depository institution solely because of its location in another state.

(n12)Footnote 12. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(7)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(7)(B).

(n14)Footnote 14. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(7)(C).

(n15)Footnote 15. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 306(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 608(c)(9) (Cooperation and coordination to include "formulating rules, statements of policy, guidelines, forms, and interpretive opinions and releases).

(n17)Footnote 17. "Procedure for the Adoption of Statements of Policy by the North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc.," CCH NASAA Reports P 352 (June 25, 1994).

(n18)Footnote 18. Coordinated Equity Review, also referred to as CR-EQUITY, is discussed in § 6.04.

(n19)Footnote 19. CCH NASAA Reports P 3203, at 1821 (Nov. 18, 1997). Definitions applicable to all of the new or revised NASAA Statements of Policy are contained in the separate (new) NASAA "Statement of Policy Regarding Corporate Securities Definition," CCH NASAA Reports P 3812, at 2087 (Apr. 27, 1997).

Throughout this chapter, citations of current NASAA Statements of Policy are to CCH NASAA Reports. For quick reference, NASAA Statements of Policy are also reproduced in Volume 3.

(n20)Footnote 20. CCH NASAA Reports P3103, at 1801 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n21)Footnote 21. CCH NASAA Reports P 2806, at 1601 (Nov. 18, 1997).

(n22)Footnote 22. CCH NASAA Reports P 2161, at 1251 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n23)Footnote 23. CCH NASAA Reports P 3826, at 2093 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n24)Footnote 24. CCH NASAA Reports P 3671, at 2071 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n25)Footnote 25. CCH NASAA Reports P 3006, at 1701 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n26)Footnote 26. CCH NASAA Reports P 374, at 371 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n27)Footnote 27. CCH NASAA Reports P 3835, at 2095 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n28)Footnote 28. CCH NASAA Reports P 2401, at 1501 (Oct. 24, 1991).

(n29)Footnote 29. CCH NASAA Reports P 3812, at 2087 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n30)Footnote 30. A complete collection of current NASAA Statements of Policy and Guidelines is contained in Volume 3.

(n31)Footnote 31. "Program," for purposes of the guidelines, is defined as:

One or more limited or general partnerships or other investment vehicles formed, or to be formed, for the primary purpose of exploring for oil, gas, and other hydrocarbon substances or investing or holding any property interests which permit the exploration for or production of hydrocarbons or the receipt of such production or the proceeds thereof (a prospectus may offer a series of programs with individual programs being formed in sequence).

(n32)Footnote 32. In a related area, the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Church Extension Fund Securities was adopted in its current form in 2004. The standards prescribed in this Statement of Policy apply to the offer and sale of notes issued by a church extension fund, the proceeds of which are used primarily to finance or refinance the purchase, construction, or improvement of church property. The policy statement is not applicable to a single project financing by individual churches or congregations, but rather applies to a continuous offering to provide ongoing financing for affiliated churches. A single project financing by an individual church is covered by the NASAA Church Bond policy statement.

(n33)Footnote 33. See Matthew Bender's Securities Regulation Series, Federal Securities Act of 1933, Chapter 3 for a complete discussion of Securities Act § 3(a)(4), the exemption for any security issued by a person organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, or charitable purposes.

(n34)Footnote 34. As with most of the newer versions of NASAA Statements of Policy, this one, adopted in 1993, includes a number of definitions of key terms. "Adjusted cash flow," for purposes of a debt offering, means cash flow adjusted to reflect the effect such things as payments of interest or fees associated with other securities, outstanding proposed or required acquisitions, or capital expenditures that materially affect cash flow, accrued dividends, and other payments, or material changes to the issuer's future cash flow.

(n35)Footnote 35. A comment to the guidelines makes clear that the standards are "primarily designed for public real estate syndications and programs which make or invest in mortgage loans." As for the latter, all provisions of the guidelines are deemed applicable unless specifically excluded or modified.

(n36)Footnote 36. "Program" is defined for purposes of the guidelines as: "A limited or general partnership, joint venture, unincorporated association, or similar organization other than a corporation formed and operated for the primary purpose of investment in and the operation of or gain from and interest in the assets to be acquired by such entity." CCH NASAA Reports P 2321, at 1381, 1383 (Mar. 29, 1992).

(n37)Footnote 37. Id.

(n38)Footnote 38. Those states formally adopting the guidelines are: Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Washington.

(n39)Footnote 39. Although Wisconsin repealed NASAA Statements of Policy in 1997, and South Dakota did the same in 2001, in both states, the disclosure related provisions of many NASAA Statements of Policy or guidelines may be used for the purpose of reviewing the adequacy of disclosure in the prospectus filed with the registration application, but not for purposes of merit review, see Wisconsin: DFI-Sec. 3.03(4); South Dakota: Regs. Sec. 20:08:04:115.

In Oklahoma, the Administrator in his or her discretion, may apply any Statements of Policy or guidelines adopted by NASAA. None is specifically prescribed for application, however, see Okla. Rule Sec. 660:11-9-34.

(n40)Footnote 40. Securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 are "covered" securities under NSMIA, see Securities Act section 18(b)(2), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(2).

(n41)Footnote 41. CCH NASAA Reports P 5412, at 1497-8 (Aug. 14, 1973).

This CSAC policy has been adopted by Indiana, Michigan and Minnesota.

(n42)Footnote 42. Id., P 5421, at 1497-10.

This CSAC policy has been adopted by Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri and Ohio.

(n43)Footnote 43.

Alaska: Securities Rule 3 AAC 08.140.

Arkansas: Securities Rule 404.01(I).

California: Securities Rules 260.140.50, 260.140.51.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.15.

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-11.8.

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-6.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(i).

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 KAR 10:080.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.050.

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1310.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code Ann. § 10-04-08.1(5).

Ohio: OSB 3.01 II ("Offering Price of Equity Securities"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3-06(4)(d).

Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(2), (3), (4).

Utah: Securities Rule § 164-10.2(G)(1).

(n44)Footnote 44. The burden of demonstrating a "market" falls upon the issuer. In Ohio, for example, the proposed offering price of either a going concern or a promotional company will not be considered excessive if it is the same as or within a few points of a "recent market price" of securities of the same class. However, "[t]he applicant has the burden of establishing or demonstrating to the satisfaction of the Division that securities of the same class are publicly traded in an active market of substantial depth." OSB 3.01 II, Written Policy Guidelines, (June 1973).

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-6(b) ("Comparative Justification").

(n46)Footnote 46.

Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4-.08.

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-11.3(b). This provision applies to promotional securities.

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 KAR 10:080(2)(a).

Mississippi: Securities Rule 217.

Utah: Securities Rule R164-10-(G)(2).

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-26(a).

(n48)Footnote 48.

Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.160.

Arizona: Securities Rule § R14-4-105.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.30-.32.

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-11.3.

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-3.

Iowa: Securities Rule § 191-50.37.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(c).

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 KAR 10:080(1)(c).

Minnesota: Securities Rule Part 2875.3010.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.070.

Montana: Securities Rules §§ 6.10.104, 6.10.105.

Nebraska: Securities Rule Ch. 6.001.01.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.1(1).

Ohio: OSB 3.01 IV ("Profits and Compensation of Promoters and Affiliates of the Issuer"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Tennessee: Securities Rule § 0780-4-2-.06(4)(h).

West Virginia: Securities Rule §§ 14.05, 14.15.

(n49)Footnote 49. West Virginia, for example, declares by rule:

"[R]egistration of securities where cheap stock has been or will be issued may be looked upon with disfavor and as tending to work an imposition, as being an offering upon unfair terms, and as involving an unreasonable amount of underwriters' and sellers' discounts, commissions or other compensation unless [certain] minimum conditions are met" W. Va. Admin. Reg., Comm. Sec. § 14.05.

(n50)Footnote 50.

Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4.07.

Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.170.

Arizona: Securities Rule R14-4-107.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.005.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(f).

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 KAR 10:080(1)(c).

Minnesota: Securities Rule Part 2875.3000.

Mississippi: Securities Rule 221.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.080.

Nebraska: Ch. 7.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 90,510(f).

New Mexico: Securities Rule 86-5.05.

Ohio: OSB 3.01 III ("Capitalization of a Promotional Company: Promoters' and Managers' Contributions to Capital"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Oklahoma: Securities Rule 660:10-9-36.

South Dakota: Securities Rule § 20.08:04:23-24.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3-.06(4)(i).

Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(9).

Utah: Securities Rule R164-11-1(C) (development stage companies).

West Virginia: Securities Rules §§ 14.11, 14.15.

(n51)Footnote 51. See, e.g., Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(9).

(n52)Footnote 52.

Alabama: Ala. Code Ann. § 8-6-8(b)(1), Securities Rule 830-X-4-.12.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. Ann. § 45.55.110(g), Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.180.

Arizona: Securities Rule § R14-4-105(B).

California: Cal. Code Ann. §§ 25133, 25141, 25149, Securities Rules 260.140.8, 260.141.1-260.141.3, 260.141.10-260.141.15.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.181.

Georgia: Securities Rules 590-4-3-.01, 590-4-3-.07.

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 485.18.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1428(1).

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-2-23(c).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 80A.12(5).

Mississippi: Securities Rule 221

Missouri: Securities Rules §§ 30-52.070-30-52.090.

Montana: Securities Rule § 6.10.104.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 8-1108(2), Securities Rule Ch. 6.001.03.

New Mexico: Securities Rule § 86-5.04.

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-28(g).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.(1).

Ohio: Securities Rule 1301:6-3-09(C)(1) see also OSB 3.01 V ("Escrow Requirements and Procedures"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Oklahoma: Securities Rule 660:10-9-32.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.085(3).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 207(g), Securities Rule § 207.071.

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-950.

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws § 47-31-14.2 Securities Rule §§ 20:08:04:09 16-22.

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-107(f)(1), Securities Rule 0780-4-2-.06(4)(f)(3).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-9(A), Securities Rule § 113.3(5).

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4223.

Virginia: Va. Code § 13.1-510(h).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 32-3-305(h), Securities Rule § 14.12

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. § 17-4-111(g), Securities Rule Sec. 2(b)(iv).

(n53)Footnote 53. See Ga. Securities Rule 590-4-3-.07.

(n54)Footnote 54.

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-8(b)(1), Securities Rule 830-X-4-.09.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.110(g), Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.190.

Arizona: Securities Rules §§ R14-4-112, R14-4-113.

Arkansas: Securities Rule 404.01(D).

California: Securities Rules 260.141.20-260.141.27.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-304(7).

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.009.

Georgia: Securities Rule 590-4-3-.01.

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 16-38-11.5.

Idaho: Securities Rule § 30-1428(2).

Iowa: Securities Rules §§ 191-50.31(502).

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(c)(2).

Maryland: Securities Rule 06(A).

Michigan: Securities Rule R451.705.3.

Minnesota: Securities Rule 2875.2440.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.100.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 8-1108(2)(a).

New Jersey: Securities Rule § 13:47A-9.11.

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-28(g)(ii), Securities Rule 1314.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.1(2).

Ohio: Securities Rule 1301:6-3-19.

Oklahoma: Securities Rule R-305(f).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.085(3) Securities Rule 441-65-150.

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 207(g).

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-950, Securities Rules 113-8, 113-9.

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws § 47-31A-305(g)(2).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-107(f)(2), Securities Rule 0780-4-3-.06(4)(1).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-9(A).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.250.

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 32-3-305(h), Securities Rule § 14.13.

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. § 17-4-111(g)(ii), Securities Rule Sec. 2(b)(iv).

(n55)Footnote 55.

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-9(a)(9), Securities Rules 830-X-4-.14, 830-X-4-15.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.120(a)(6), Securities Rule 3 AAC 08.150.

Arizona: Securities Rule R14-4-106.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.21, 260.140.40-260.140.45.

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. § 7308(a)(6).

Florida: Securities Rules 3E-700.07, 3E-700.08.

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 485-13(a)(6), Securities Rule 16-38-11.4.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1431(9).

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-2.

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.02

Iowa: Securities Rule §§ 510-50.38.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(d).

Michigan: Securities Rule R451.706.8.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Part 2875.3020, 2875.3030, 2875.3040.

Mississippi: Securities Rule 221.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52-060.

Montana: Securities Rule § 6.10.111.

Nebraska: Securities Rules Chs. 5, 10.

New Mexico: Securities Rule § 86-5.03(A).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.1(3).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. § 306(a)(2)(F).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 208(a)(v).

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-1010(b)(vi), Securities Rule 113.11.

Tennessee: Securities Rules 0780-4-2-.06(3)(e)(2), 0780-2-3-.06(4)(c).

Texas: Securities Rules 113.3(10)(11).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-12(f).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. § 17-4-112(a)(vi).

(n56)Footnote 56. See, e.g.:

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-2-12(c), (f) (time limits on exercise plus total number of options and warrants issued and outstanding or reserved for issuance at the date of the offering may not exceed ten percent of the number of shares to be outstanding upon completion of the offering).

(n57)Footnote 57. See, e.g.,

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-2-12(c)(3)(A).

Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(11)(C)(iii).

(n58)Footnote 58. See, e.g.:

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.007(1)(a).

(n59)Footnote 59. See, e.g.:

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-2-22(a), (b).

(n60)Footnote 60. Unif. Sec. Act § 306(a)(F).

(n61)Footnote 61.

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-9(a)(9), Securities Rule 830-X-4.09.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.120(a)(6), Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.130.

Arizona: Securities Rules R14-4-108, R14-4-111.

Arkansas: Securities Rule 23-42-405(F).

California: Securities Rule 260.140.20(a).

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. § 7308(a)(6).

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. §§ 485-10(c), 485-13(a)(6), Securities Rule § 16-38-11.2.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1431(9).

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-1.

Iowa: Securities Rules §§ 50.36(502).

Kansas: Securities Rule 81-7-1(B).

Massachusetts: Securities Rule § 13.305(A)(13).

Minnesota: Securities Rule Part 2875.3050.

Mississippi: Securities Rule 219.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.040.

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-207(i).

Nebraska: Securities Rules Ch. 5.

Nevada: Securities Rule 90-4051(b).

New Mexico: Securities Rule 86-5.01(A).

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1307.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.1(6).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.09(J) Securities Rule 1301:6-3-05 see also OSB 3.01 VI ("Selling Expenses and Underwriters' Compensation"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Oklahoma: Securities Rule R-306(a)(2)(F).

Oregon: Securities Rule 441-65-030(h).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 208(a)(v).

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-1010(b)(vi), Securities Rule 113-12.

South Dakota: Securities Rule 20:08:04:02.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-2.06(4)(e).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-9(B), Securities Rule 113.4(f).

Utah: Securities Rule 164-10-2(G)(4).

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4208(4).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 32-3-306(a)(2)(F), Securities Rule § 14.14(7).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. § 17-4-112(a)(vi).

(n62)Footnote 62. NASD member firms involved as underwriters are subject to the separate policy and procedures for review of corporate financings by the NASD. That review as well focuses on the extent of underwriter compensation, and operates independently of any state review.

(n63)Footnote 63. While not generally stated as the purpose of the restrictions, expenses and commission constraints serve as a means of keeping high risk issues from the market. The amount of underwriter compensation will vary directly with level of risk assessment in marketing the issue. The marketing risk can also be shown to be directly related to the potential success of the underlying enterprise. As a result, the imposition of expense and commission limitation serves as a means of identifying and eliminating high risk issues.

(n64)Footnote 64. See, e.g., Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4.09.

(n65)Footnote 65. See, e.g., Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 208(a)(v).

(n66)Footnote 66. See, e.g., Kansas: Securities Rule 81-7-1(b).

(n67)Footnote 67. Id.

(n68)Footnote 68. See, e.g., Alaska: Securities Rule §3 AAC 08.130.

(n69)Footnote 69. See, e.g., Utah: Securities Rules R164-10-2(G)(4), R164-12-1f.

(n70)Footnote 70. See, e.g., South Carolina: Securities Rule 113-12.

(n71)Footnote 71.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.1-260.140.10.

Iowa: Securities Rule § 510-50.44.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-1-7(L).

Louisiana: Securities Rule C-08.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.3060, 2875.3070.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.130.

Montana: Securities Rule § 6.10.105.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-08.1(7).

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3-.06(3)(d)(1), (4)(b).

Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(8), (13).

Washington: Securities Rules WAC 460-16A-110, WAC 460-16A-145.

(n72)Footnote 72.

Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.210.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.1, 260.140.2.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.006.

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-12-4.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(h).

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.3080, 2875.3510.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.110.

Nebraska: Securities Rule Ch. 8.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3.06(4)(i).

Texas: Securities Rule P 113.3(6).

Washington: Securities Rule WAC 460-16A-040 (as to voting rights for preferred stock only).

(n73)Footnote 73. Tx. Admin. Code § 113.3(6).

(n74)Footnote 74. See e.g., Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(8).

(n75)Footnote 75. See, e.g., Minnesota: Securities Rule Part 2875.3060.

(n76)Footnote 76.

Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4-.10.

Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.220.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.4-260.140.6.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.010.

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-11.6.

Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-22-5.

Michigan: Securities Rule R451.706.2.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.3500-2875.3540.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.120.

Nebraska: Securities Rule Ch. 9.

Ohio: OSB 3.01 VII ("Senior Securities: Preferred Stock and Debt Securities"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. Ann. § 207(h).

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-2-.06(4)(j).

Texas: Securities Rule §113.3(7).

Washington: Securities Rules WAC 460-16A-045, WAC 460-16A-065.

West Virginia: Securities Rule § 14.09 (applies only to church securities debt).

(n77)Footnote 77. OSB 3.01 VII(1) ("General Standards Concerning Earnings or Cash Flow Capability for Dividend or Debt Service"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

(n78)Footnote 78. See, e.g., Texas: Securities Rule § 113.3(7).

(n79)Footnote 79. See, e.g., Indiana: Securities Rule § 710 IAC 1-2-25.

(n80)Footnote 80. See, e.g., Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.220.

(n81)Footnote 81. See, e.g., Iowa: Securities Rule § 510-50.44.

(N82)Footnote 82. See, e.g., Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4-.13.

(n83)Footnote 83. See, e.g., California: Cal. Code § 25140.

(n84)Footnote 84. See, e.g., Minnesota: Securities Rule Part 2875.3000.

(n85)Footnote 85. See, e.g., California: Cal. Code § 25140.

(n86)Footnote 86.

Alabama: Securities Rule 830-X-4-.17.

Arizona: Securities Rule R 14-4-110.

Georgia: Securities Rule 590-4-4-.02.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-7-1(j).

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.140.

(n87)Footnote 87.

Arizona: Securities Rule R14-4-103.

Iowa: Securities Rule § 191-50.25.

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-10-1.

Maryland: Securities Rule 08.

Massachusetts: Securities Rule § 14.403.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-53.010.

Montana: Securities Rule § 6.10.103.

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1308.

Oklahoma: Securities Rule 660:10-13-1 through 4.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-2-.04.

(n88)Footnote 88. See, e.g., Ohio: OSB 3.01 X ("Consideration and Payment for Securities"), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 9 (June 1973).

(n89)Footnote 89.

Alaska: Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.200.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.110.1.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-700.014.

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-11.7.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.7100-2875.7290.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.150.

Nebraska: Securities Rule Chap. 19.

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1313.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-2-.06.

West Virginia: Securities Rule § 14.06.

See also § 6.023[2][d][iii] for discussion of the NASAA Statement of Policy on Real Estate Investment Trusts.

(n90)Footnote 90.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.4500-2875.5280.

Missouri: Securities Rule § 30-52.190.

Nebraska: Securities Rule Ch. 20.

New Mexico: Securities Rule § 86-5.06.

New York: Securities Rules §§ 16.1-22.6, 80.1-80.16.

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1313.

Oregon: Securities Rule 441-65-050 (Condominium Securities).

West Virginia: Securities Rule § 14.06.

See also § 6.02[2][d][ix] for discussion of NASAA Statement of Policy on Real Estate Programs.

(n91)Footnote 91.

California: Securities Rules 260.140.120-260.140.139.

Florida: Securities Rules 3E-700.011, 3E-700.012.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.5600-2875.5780.

New Mexico: Securities Rule § 86-5.07.

North Carolina: Securities Rule 1313.

Ohio: OSB 5.01 (Regulatory Standards: Oil and Gas Offerings), Ohio Sec. Bulletin 5 (October 1973).

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3-.06(4)(m)(3).

See also § 6.02[2][d][i] for discussion of the NASAA Statement of Policy on Oil and Gas Programs.

(n92)Footnote 92.

Minnesota: Securities Rule Parts 2875.8100-2875.8170.

See also § 6.02[2][d][vii] for discussion of NASAA Statement of Policy on Commodity Pool Programs.

(n93)Footnote 93.

Minnesota: Securities Rules Parts 2875.6100-2875.6260.

New Mexico: Securities Rule § 86-5.10.

Tennessee: Securities Rule 0780-4-3-.06(4)(m)(2).

West Virginia: Securities Rule § 14.08.

See also § 6.02[2][d][viii] for discussion of NASAA Statement of Policy on Cattle Feeding Programs.

51 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.03

§ 6.03 Merit Safe Harbors and Coordinated Equity Review

Merit Safe Harbors. For those offerings which remain subject to merit review, in some circumstances the process itself can be significantly streamlined. "Presumptive merit," "fast track," or "merit safe harbor" rules substitute particular criteria for merit standards so as to permit qualification of offerings having characteristics that lessen concerns for investor protection. These are not exemptions from registration and merit review. Rather, such rules provide that offerings which meet specified criteria will be deemed to meet the state's fairness standard, or be excused from compliance with one or more particular merit standards.

The ABA Reportⁿ¹ identified the major examples of such safe harbor provisions as operating in the circumstances of firm commitment underwritten offerings. In these situations, according to the ABA Report, there is at least the proposition that firmly committed underwriters can be relied upon "to ensure that the issuer is relatively stable, to negotiate offering terms reasonable fair to the public investor, to restrain self-dealing by the promoters, and to set a reasonable offering price."ⁿ²

Some underwriting safe harbors are quite narrow. California, for example, provides only that the offering price will not be considered unfair if securities are publicly offered for cash pursuant to a registration statement filed under the Securities Act of 1933 in a firm commitment underwriting by an underwriter or syndicate of underwriters all of whom are registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ³ West Virginia eliminates restrictions on "cheap and promotional shares" in firm commitment underwritings of at least $4 million of securities at an offering price not less than $5 per share, that involve the participation of at least 15 underwriting firms, each of which purchases at least $100,000 of the securities being offered.ⁿ⁴ On the other hand, Michigan more broadly declares that a corporate equity offering firmly underwritten by a qualified underwriter, in which dilution and promoter's compensation are fully disclosed, and which meets all requirements of the Conduct Rules and policies of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD) shall not be deemed "on unfair terms" or in violation of particular merit standards.ⁿ⁵

Michigan provides a further safe harbor when 25% of a corporate equity offering is purchased by accredited investors, and all other investors purchase on the same terms as the accredited investors.ⁿ⁶ Safe harbors such as this are grounded in the notion that a substantial group of purchasers will be positioned to ensure fairness in the terms of an offering, and that non-accredited investors will share the benefit. Investor suitability criteria are sometimes used to satisfy regulatory objectives.

Merit safe harbors available in other states generally fall into the categories evidenced by the above examples. Although the validity of the premise may be open to question where the availability of a safe harbor is controlled by minimal suitability criteria, the essential consideration is that there are countervailing factors impacting the need for traditional Blue Sky merit regulation. However formulated, merit safe harbors must be approached state-by-state, an inherently inefficient process. It is for that reason that streamlined merit review through the Coordinated Equity Review program presents a utilitarian mechanism for at least some multi-state offerings that remain subject to merit regulation.

Coordinated Equity Review. The NASAA-sponsored Coordinated Equity Review (CER) program aims to make the process of multi-state qualification of offerings of NSMIA uncovered securities which are the subject of a registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission more efficient. The program was implemented in April 1997, in conjunction with revisions to NASAA Statements of Policy relating to public offerings of corporate equity securities. CER is available for corporate equity offerings that are registered with the SEC, and is intended particularly to benefit initial public offerings of smaller issuers.ⁿ⁷ Blue Sky qualification requirements for those offerings have not been changed, but the process in participating states has been altered considerably.ⁿ⁸

CER functions on the basis of two "lead" state reviews of the registration statement and prospectus filed by an issuer with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933. An issuer desiring to take advantage of CER sends its registration materials to each state in which it intends to offer its stock, accompanied by a one page application form--Form CER-1 (also referred to as Form CR-EQUITY-1)--requesting CER. The same package is sent to the Pennsylvania Securities Commission, which functions as the CER program administrator. Within three days, the Pennsylvania administrator designates two lead states. Non-lead states to which the registration package has been sent may comment on the filing within ten days. All states participating in CER agree that offerings will be reviewed on the basis of NASAA Statements of Policy.

Comments of all participating states are collected, and the two lead states --one of which is responsible for disclosure issues, the other for merit review--collect comments into a single comment letter. The single comment letter is then sent to the issuer for resolution with the two lead states. Once the lead states clear the application, all participating states agree to clear it as well. Issuers requesting CER are advised that the process requires a minimum of 30 days. CER thus shifts the burden of collecting and collating state comments from the issuer to the regulator, and in the process saves time and reduces costs.

In conjunction with the implementation of CER, NASAA revised certain of its Statements of Policy having general application to equity offerings,ⁿ⁹ and promulgated three more, one of which establishes common definitions for use in all others. The revised Statements of Policy address: (1) loans and other material affiliated transactions; (2) preferred stock; (3) underwriting expenses, underwriter's warrants, selling expense, and selling securities holders; (4) options and warrants; (5) promoter's equity investment; (6) promotional shares; (7) the impoundment of proceeds; (8) specificity in use of proceeds; (9) unsound financial condition; (10) corporate securities definitions; and (11) unequal voting rights. The revisions were undertaken by NASAA in order to make guidelines less rigid, and to take into account the structure of equity offerings in today's marketplace.ⁿ¹⁰

CER generally is intended only for initial public offerings of common stock, preferred stock, warrants, rights and units comprised of equity securities that do not constitute NSMIA covered securities. The offering must also be registered (or be in the process of registering) with the SEC under the Securities Act of 1933. Particular forms are prescribed for submission by an issuer in each state in which it intends to offer the securities. State review under CER takes at least 30 days.

CER furthers uniformity and efficiency in the continuing exercise of state regulatory authority in regard to NSMIA non-covered securities. Acceptance of the revised NASAA Statements of Policy against which all CER offerings are to be reviewed is critical in the process, particularly since each participating state must still enter its own order clearing an offering, and each such state may become directly involved with an issuer in regard to issues that may not be resolved by the lead reviews. In any case, it is certain that CER and the revised NASAA Statements of Policy that accompanied its implementation, signal a genuine commitment to uniformity and the elimination of unnecessary barriers to capital formation.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 41 Bus. Lawyer at 802-804.

(n2)Footnote 2. Id., at 804.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25140(d). The California safe harbor illustrates the comfort factor attendant to a firm commitment underwriting by financially responsible, regulated, intermediaries. However, the safe harbor also makes clear that nothing contained in it denies authority of the Commissioner to issue a stop order or refuse to issue a permit in circumstances where the underwriting nevertheless involves "unreasonable discounts, commissions or other compensation to underwriters, sellers, or others, unreasonable promoters' profits or participations or unreasonable amounts or kinds of options." Id.

(n4)Footnote 4. W. Va. Admin. Reg. 14.15.

(n5)Footnote 5. Mich. Admin. Code R. 451.706.26(2)(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Mich. Admin. Code R. 451.706.26(2)(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See NASAA Uniformity Submission, supra. NASAA identified the expected beneficiaries of the program as follows:

The CER program is targeted at equity offerings between $5 million and $20 million in size that typically are filed on SEC Forms SB-1, SB-2, and S-1, and F-1. These companies usually trade on the NASDAQ Small Cap, the OTC Bulletin Board and/or other smaller exchanges. CER is designed to shift some of the burden of gaining clearance to sell securities in individual states from the issuer to the states. Id., at 13,119.

(n8)Footnote 8. Of the 43 states that require review of non-exempt equity offerings, 37 states have joined the CER program. The remaining six--Illinois, Ohio, Nebraska, Minnesota, Tennessee, and Wyoming--have elected not to participate.

(n9)Footnote 9. CER is available only for equity securities. However, by definition, an equity security includes one convertible into common stock. Thus, offerings of convertible debt are eligible. See NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Corporate Securities Definitions, CCH NASAA Reports P 3812 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n10)Footnote 10. NASAA Uniformity Submission, supra, at 13,120. These and other NASAA Statements of Policy are considered further in conjunction with an examination of merit standards generally in § 6.02[2].

52 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.04

§ 6.04 Disclosure in Merit Jurisdictions

As noted throughout, many merit review policies and state standards include particular disclosure requirements as conditions to approval. The NASAA Statement of Policy regarding specificity in use of proceeds, for example, mandates not only the content of, but also the manner of presenting information concerning estimated cash proceeds of an offering in the prospectus as a condition to qualification.ⁿ¹ Additionally, the NASAA Omnibus Guidelines address content and disclosure of certain kinds of information in prospectuses.ⁿ²

Beyond special disclosure requirements where particular policies or standards are applicable, all states mandate the use of a structured disclosure document regardless of the fact that an offering is subject to merit review. Contents of prospectuses, including requirements for financial statements to be a part of them, are often prescribed by the statute.ⁿ³ The Uniform Act, on the other hand, provides that the administrator may by rule or order require as a condition of registration that a prospectus containing specified information be sent or given to each offeree before or concurrently with certain stages of the selling process.ⁿ⁴ In application, the Uniform Act provision has been converted into a mandate for use of a disclosure document.

Whether prescribed by statute or rule, the general content of prospectuses for Blue Sky compliance is similar to that required for prospectuses in registration statements filed under the Securities Act of 1933. The adequacy of disclosure, that is, the required content as well as the substance and manner in which it is presented, is part of the merit review process. State administrators are generally empowered to require, in addition to any specified category of information, any other information deemed necessary or appropriate.ⁿ⁵ Disclosure is thus a further tool in the merit review process. With it, an administrator may compel and control the presentation of information to offerees to an extent that the terms of an offering may well be adjusted in response to a directive regarding their disclosure. There is great flexibility afforded to administrators in this process to use disclosure as a means of addressing troublesome issues and terms that are not directly controlled by an applicable policy or guideline.ⁿ⁶

The ultimate objective of "full disclosure" under state Blue Sky laws is no different than that underlying the federal Securities Act of 1933. Certainly in those states that are today "disclosure" jurisdictions the objective is paramount--allowing for an informed investment decision. The difference is that at the state level disclosure can be as much a part of merit regulation as the application of merit standards themselves. The power to assess the adequacy of disclosure, and to make valutive judgments on content, manner of presentation and the very need to disclose particular information at all as a condition to qualification, exemplifies the baseline distinction between merit and disclosure-based regulation. Both regulatory approaches mandate the preparation and dissemination of a structured disclosure document, and then provide meaningful remedies for fraud and information failures. Merit jurisdictions, however, use the disclosure document as a means to achieving fairness ex ante. Disclosure is an extremely meaningful tool available to merit regulators, and its role in merit jurisdictions cannot be overestimated.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. CCH NASAA Reports P 3835, at 2095 (Apr. 27, 1997). The NASAA use of proceeds policy is discussed in § 6.02[2][c][ix].

(n2)Footnote 2. CCH NASAA Reports P 2328, at 1389-17 (Mar. 29, 1992).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1892-1895.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unif. Sec. Act § 304(d).

See also Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.702(17)(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Iowa Reg. § 191-50.27(3):

Every prospectus required to be delivered ... shall be in a form acceptable to the administrator and shall contain the information specified in paragraphs (a) through (k) and paragraph (p) of subsection 2 of section 207 of the Act and any other information which the Administrator may deem necessary and appropriate.

NASAA "Uniform Disclosure Guidelines--Legends" prescribe uniform cover page legends for prospectuses or offering documents. The Guidelines set out specific language for regulatory disclaimers and legends, and regarding restrictions on transfer or resale that are involved in offerings made pursuant to exemption from state and federal registration requirements. As with all NASAA "guidelines," these may be waived or modified by an administrator where good cause is shown. However, the regulatory disclaimer and legend prescribed by the guideline may fairly be described as being universally required and utilized. For the Disclosure Guideline and the specific legends, see CCH NASAA Reports P 1352, at 851 (Apr. 29, 1989).

(n6)Footnote 6. In Minnesota, for example, qualification of an offering that is deemed by the administrator to be "speculative" may be conditioned to require:

[T]hat the prospectus or offering circular conspicuously state on its cover that the securities offered thereby are speculative or a brief description of material risks involved in the purchase of the securities with a cross-reference to further discussion (in greater detail) in the body of the prospectus and/or that each investor receive a statement concerning the speculative nature of the securities, sign a copy thereof, and file same with the commissioner. Minn. Rules 2875.3100(A).

53 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 6 Merit Regulation

1-6 Blue Sky Regulation § 6.05

§ 6.05 Compliance Challenges

As discussed throughout this Chapter, meaningful steps have been taken toward greater efficiency in the administration of Blue Sky laws generally, and merit regulation in particular. NSMIA has at the same time rationalized the dual state/federal system to account for national markets. But where it remains operative, merit-based Blue Sky regulation is still not homogeneous among the states, and challenges in compliance remain as issuers must contend with different sets of rules and resultant increased transaction costs. As seen earlier in the discussion of what securities remain subject to merit regulation, the issuers facing these challenges are most likely to be those least able to afford the costs.

Non-uniformity is the major source of confusion and complexity of compliance in offerings undertaken in two or more merit jurisdictions. Since each state has the ability to set its own standards, indeed its own "smell test," it is only when there is an agreement in philosophy and regulatory technique that some measure of uniformity exists. NASAA Statements of Policy have not been uniformly adopted, and even among states adopting particular Statements of Policy, the version officially adopted may not be the same. The more flexible, and efficient, approach more evident today is that exemplified by Massachusetts, which adopts specified NASAA Statements of Policy "in effect at the time of application" by an issuer for registration by qualification.ⁿ¹

Moreover, there is ample room in the application of the NASAA Statements of Policy for key assessments left to individual administrators. "Promoters' equity investment," for example is defined in the NASAA Corporate Securities Definition Statement of Policy as: "the total of cash and tangible assets that has been contributed by the promoters to the Issuer" ⁿ² However, the express proviso is that the value of tangible assets contributed must be accepted by the Administrator. Without regard to flexible definitions, each of the NASAA Policies of General Application is prefaced with the admonition that: "Nothing shall prevent the Securities Administrator ... from applying different standards than those contained in this Statement of Policy."ⁿ³

Unquestionably, compliance challenges associated with merit regulation have been significantly ameliorated by NSMIA preemption. As a practical matter, there simply will be far fewer multistate offerings of securities that remain subject to state registration and qualification procedures, and as discussed in § 6.03 above, Coordinated Equity Review is specifically available. It is also true that far more offerings that remain subject to merit review are of small amounts by small business issuers. State securities commissions are much more able to deal efficiently with merit reviews of a small number of relatively small offerings that are carried out on a localized basis. Moreover, many states have also enacted various forms of small issuer or limited offering exemptions that afford significant opportunities for capital formation without any consideration of costs associated with registration and qualification procedures, thus further limiting the extent to which merit regulation will actually present compliance challenges.ⁿ⁴ When registration is required, procedures such as SCOR minimize the burden on qualifying small business issuers, and also streamline reviews in a single or multi-state compliance setting.

In the past there have been compliance challenges in the merit regulation process that ranged from dealing with unpublished guidelines or standards to the inadequacy of administrative staff to engage in the process, to a pervasive uncertainty in how to deal promptly and uniformly with new and evolving markets, investment products and financial technology. NSMIA largely eliminated the uncertainty for issuers that merit review injected into capital formation in integrated national and world markets. Securities administrators and NASAA have made major progress addressing other challenges that have historically made the merit review process burdensome and expensive. This is critical today, with the focus of the process on NSMIA non-covered securities that disproportionately impacts small business capital formation.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Cd. Mass. Regs. Sec. 13.305(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. CCH NASAA Reports P 3812, at 2090 (Apr. 27, 1997).

(n3)Footnote 3. On the other hand, merit review states generally make provision for waiver of any policies, or for approval of registrations which do not comply. See, e.g., Code Mass. Regs. § 13.305(A) ("Nothing contained herein shall preclude establishing compliance ... in those instances in which the registration statement does not comply with the applicable statement of policy").

See also NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Real Estate Investment Trusts, CCH NASAA Reports P 3401, at 1901 (Sept. 29, 1993) ("While applications not conforming to the standards contained herein shall be looked upon with disfavor, where good cause is shown, certain guidelines may be modified or waived by the Administrator").

(n4)Footnote 4. The array of issuer exemptions from registration and qualification requirements is presented in Chapter 8.

54 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation 7.syn

§ 7.syn Synopsis to Chapter 7: Exempt Securities

§ 7.01 Exempt Securities--Generally

§ 7.02 Statutory Exclusions

§ 7.03 NSMIA and State Securities Exemptions

§ 7.04 2002 Uniform Securities Act Exemption Summary

§ 7.05 The State Guides

§ 7.06 Common Blue Sky Securities Exemptions

[1] Government Securities

[a] Domestic Government Securities

[b] Foreign Government Securities

[2] Depository Institutions

[a] Banks

[b] Savings and Loan Associations

[c] Credit Unions

[3] Insurance Company Securities

[4] Common Carriers, Public Utilities, and Holding Companies

[a] Generally

[b] Equipment Trust Certificates

[5] Listed Securities

[a] Listed Securities as NSMIA Federal Covered Securities

[b] Listed Securities--Generally

[c] OTC Margin Stocks

[d] Foreign Exchange Listed Securities

[6] The "Blue Chip" Exemption

[7] World Class Securities

[8] Securities of Nonprofit Organizations

[9] Commercial Paper

[10] Employee Benefit Plan Interests

[11] Securities of Cooperative Associations

§ 7.07 Administrative Authority over Security Exemptions

55 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.01

§ 7.01 Exempt Securities--Generally

All Blue Sky laws contain an array of exemptions from registration requirements for particular types of securities, as well as for transactions where the protections of registration are not necessary, or are achieved in some different manner. Where certain types of securities are involved, for example, investor protection objectives are satisfied by the very nature of the issuer, as with securities issued by the United States government or its agencies. For other types of securities the same objectives are met through some other regulatory scheme or system, as with bank deposit instruments or bank instruments issued in a federally supervised and regulated environment. Transaction exemptions have been similarly created in Blue Sky laws to permit offers and sales of securities in particular circumstances in which the need for registration and qualification is not present, or may be addressed by lesser, "limited" means.ⁿ¹

The operation, indeed the relevance, of certain security exemptions in Blue Sky laws have been impacted by NSMIA--the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996--which established classes of federal "covered securities" that are not subject to state registration and qualification requirements in any case. The role of NSMIA in regard to security exemptions, and its effect on exemptions remaining a part of state securities statutes is separately addressed later in this Chapter.ⁿ² As a general matter, however, other than those states which have adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which was drafted fully to reflect NSMIA and to modernize all aspects of a model Blue Sky law, states have not made wholesale changes except as absolutely needed, as, for example, to eliminate federal covered securities from registration and qualification requirements and impose permissible notice filing and fee requirements. Exemptions, both for securities and transactions, remain largely untouched. Perhaps the best example is the exemption for exchange listed securities, based in most cases on section 402(a)(8) of the original Uniform Securities Act, which remains intact today despite the fact that most listed securities are now NSMIA federal covered securities for which state registration requirements were preempted.ⁿ³ These federal covered securities are not subject to the securities registration requirements of Blue Sky laws without regard to any exemption. However, the relevance of a post-NSMIA exemption relating to exchange listed securities is illustrated by section 201(6) of the 2002 Uniform Act,ⁿ⁴ which addresses derivative securities based on exchange listed securities. The post-NSMIA version of this exemption is discussed later in this chapter.ⁿ⁵

Whether exempt securities or transactions are involved, the exemption applies only to registration requirements. Antifraud provisions of state securities laws remain fully in force and available to both administrators and investors under civil remedy provisions to address fraud and deception in the offer and sale of otherwise exempt securities. Likewise, exemptions from registration have no impact on broker-dealer, agent, investment adviser or investment adviser representative licensing requirements.ⁿ⁶

There is an important distinction to be made between an exempt security and an exempt transaction. If a security is exempt, it is usually always exempt regardless of the number of times it is offered or sold by the issuer, provided the requirements for the exemption are met. On the other hand, a transaction exemption is available only as to a particular offer or sale. If, for example, there is an exemption for offers or sales to accredited investors,ⁿ⁷ it is necessary to examine each transaction in the security to ascertain whether the offeree or buyer does in fact qualify as accredited within the meaning of the exemption. Security exemptions in Blue Sky laws are for the most part issuer exemptions, and their availability depends upon the issuer meeting qualifying criteria. Thus, a security issued by and representing an interest in, or a debt, or that is insured or guaranteed by, an insurance company authorized to do business in a state is often exempt from registration.ⁿ⁸ Normally this means that the security retains its exempt status through the course of any subsequent transactions so long as the issuer remains qualified under the terms of the exemption. Trading, or secondary market, transactions in exempt securities may, however, impact exempt status. For example, subsequent transactions in a security of an issuer organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes may adversely impact the availability of that common security exemption when the subsequent transactions involve ineligible purchasers or otherwise violate the qualifications placed on the security exemption. For the most part, however, an exempt security remains exempt, and subsequent transactions will not trigger registration requirements.

Because all Blue Sky laws include both securities and transaction exemptions, and because a considerable number of state laws are not based upon the Uniform Securities Act or its progeny, there are variations in exemptions themselves and how they are classified. What constitutes an exempt security under the original Uniform Securities Act may be treated as an exempt transaction in one or more states. For example, securities issued pursuant to ERISA regulated employee benefit plans are exempt securities under the Uniform Act,ⁿ⁹ but in Florida,ⁿ¹⁰ North Dakotaⁿ¹¹ and Texas,ⁿ¹² the exemption is transactional. In states adopting the 2002 Uniform Securities Act such interests are excluded from the definition of security entirely. Texasⁿ¹³ treats securities issued by cooperatives as exempt transactions, while the Uniform Act exempts the security itself.ⁿ¹⁴ Some states exempt securities that are not addressed the Uniform Securities Act. For example, North Carolinaⁿ¹⁵ exempts certain securities issued by professional associations. A comparable transactional exemption exists in other states.ⁿ¹⁶

In several states the administrator is empowered to create exemptions by rule or order, sometimes to accomplish particular state objectives such as economic development.ⁿ¹⁷ It is also common for state administrators to be empowered to revoke or suspend an exemption if such action is deemed to be in the public interest, and specified administrative procedures are followed.ⁿ¹⁸ In many states as well, the administrator may waive any conditions for an exemption. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act recognizes the broad authority of administrators to issue orders waiving, in whole or part, any conditions for an exemption.ⁿ¹⁹

Most security exemptions in Blue Sky laws are self-executing, meaning that no notice, fee, application, or approval process is required. Some states, however, require a pre-sale filing for certain exempt securities, as for example, those issued by not-for-profit organizations. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act provides specifically with respect to the offer and sale of notes, bonds, debentures, or other evidences of indebtedness by a non-profit issuer that rules may be adopted to limit the availability of the exemption, specifying its scope, and requiring the issuer to file a notice specifying material terms of the proposed offering and copies of any sales literature. The 2002 Uniform Act also authorizes a requirement that an issuer make a request for exemption authorization.ⁿ²⁰ The original Uniform Securities Act includes an advance notice filing requirement for investment contracts issued in connection with employee benefit plans, and this requirement is carried into several state Blue Sky laws.ⁿ²¹

In most cases, an advance notice requirement does not equate with advance approval. The notice requirement is intended to provide an opportunity for review by the administrator, and for further interaction or inquiry as may be deemed necessary or appropriate ahead of a proposed offering. As a practical matter, the ability of an administrator to suspend an exemption in the exercise of administrative enforcement powers underscores the importance of the review process that is built into advance notice procedures. This procedure, as with administrative authority regarding exemptions generally, is discussed further in § 7.04.

As a prelude to consideration of the set of securities exemptions included in all Blue Sky laws, it is necessary first to examine statutory exclusions from the definition of "security" that are contained in Blue Sky laws. The effect of an exclusion from the definition of security is to remove the instrument or interest from all consideration under the Blue Sky law. Although there are few such exclusions, and none universally adopted,ⁿ²² the effect of an exclusion or exception is to eliminate coverage of the Blue Sky law entirely. Statutory exclusions are considered further below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Transaction exemptions in Blue Sky laws are addressed in Chapter 8, with expanded consideration of non-issuer transaction exemptions taken up in Chapter 9.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 7.03, "NSMIA and Security Exemptions," below.

(n3)Footnote 3. As now defined in section 18(b)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(1) (2000), added by NSMIA, provides that "covered securities" include:

Securities listed or authorized to be listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, the Global tier of the NASDAQ Stock Market, or any other national securities exchange approved by the SEC as having substantially similar listing standards.

(n4)Footnote 4. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(6).

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 7.04 ("2002 Uniform Securities Act Exemption Summary"), infra.

(n6)Footnote 6. Official Comments to the 2002 Uniform Act make clear:

"Section 201 includes exempt securities and Section 202 includes exempt transactions. Both exempt securities and exempt transactions are exempt from the securities registration, notice filing requirement of Section 302, and the filing of sales literature Section 504 of this Act. Neither Section 201 nor Section 202 provides an exemption from the Act's antifraud provisions in Article 5, nor the broker-dealer, agent, investment adviser or investment adviser representative requirements in Article 4." Official Comments 2002 Unif. Sec. Act Art. 2.

In most cases it is explicitly stated that the exemptions apply only for purposes of registration. See Chester v. McDaniel, 264 Or. 303, 504 P.2d 726 (1972). The states not utilizing qualified language contain other statutory provisions retaining fraud jurisdiction. See Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-29 (penal provisions); 581-33 (civil liabilities).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ch. 8 for a complete analysis of all transactional exemptions.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(4).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(11).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(15).

(n11)Footnote 11. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(11).

(n12)Footnote 12. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-5(I)(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-5(N).

(n14)Footnote 14. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(12); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(13).

(n15)Footnote 15. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-16(13).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs tit. 10, § 260.105.6; Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(14).

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Virginia: Code Va. § 13.1-514.1 (any security offered or sold as part of a community undertaking to attract new business or industry to the community, when certain conditions are met).

(n18)Footnote 18. Administrative authority over security exemptions is discussed in § 7.07, infra.

(n19)Footnote 19. See 2002 Unif Sec. Act § 203.

(n20)Footnote 20. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(7). This and the 2002 Uniform Act security exemptions generally, are summarized in § 7.04, infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Massachusetts, 110A M.G.L. § 402(a)(11).

(n22)Footnote 22. The original Uniform Securities Act, which is the basis of a majority of state Blue Sky laws contains only one exclusion from the definition of "security." Section 401(l) of the Uniform Act provides that "security" does not include any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or for some other specified period. There is optional language provided to allow the exclusion to be based on payment of a fixed sum of money. Uniform Act states have widely adopted this exclusion in one form or another. However, as discussed below, there are variations, and additionally, exclusions for variable annuity insurance products are much more problematic.

56 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.02

§ 7.02 Statutory Exclusions

The significance of distinguishing between an exemption and an exclusion was recognized in the original Uniform Securities Act. The Official Comment to § 402(a) of the Uniform Act states: "The distinction between exemptions and exceptions from definitions is important in view of the fact that the exemptions enumerated in § 402 are not exemptions from the anti-fraud provisions" The drafters' commentary to the Act added:

In this statute the draftsmen have been careful to distinguish between exemptions and exceptions from definitions, both because there is usually a clear and inherent distinction and because the distinction assumes practical importance in view of the fact that the exemptions enumerated in § 402 are not exemptions from the anti-fraud provisions ⁿ¹ "Exceptions from definitions," i.e., statutory exclusions do in fact eliminate any application of antifraud provisions. Consequently, legal proceedings involving excluded interests must be brought under some other applicable state law even if a particular transaction is tainted with fraud.ⁿ²

Exclusions from Blue Sky laws are thus mostly a function of the definition of "security" contained in each statute. A common statutory exclusion is for insurance products and annuities. Thus in California, for example, the definition of security does not include any annuity contract under which an insurance company licensed to do business in the state promises to pay a sum of money (whether or not based upon the investment performance of a segregated fund) either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period.ⁿ³ This is also the original Uniform Act model.ⁿ⁴ However, reflecting the fact that exclusions of variable insurance products from the definition of security are not provided in several states,ⁿ⁵ the 2002 Uniform Securities Act provides an option for states to include them in the exclusion that otherwise focuses only on an insurance company promise to pay a fixed sum of money. Section 102(28) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act thus provides that the definition of "security" does not include:

[A]n insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay a fixed [or variable] sum of money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or other specified period.

As part of addressing insurance products generally, some states expressly exclude viatical settlement contracts from the definition of security. Viatical settlement contracts are based upon life insurance policies and represent agreements for the purchase, sale, assignment, transfer or other disposition of the death benefit or ownership of the policy for some consideration that is less than the expected death benefit of the policy. While states more commonly today include viatical settlement contracts in the definition of security, others expressly exclude them, and thus leave regulation to the state insurance commissioner.ⁿ⁶

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act provides a further exclusion from the definition of security for "an interest in a contributory or noncontributory pension or welfare plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974."ⁿ⁷ This exclusion was not part of the original Uniform Act, and thus was not widely incorporated into Blue Sky laws as a specific statutory exclusion. It was, however, included in the Revised Uniform Securities Act. Whether such interests are securities at all is more commonly addressed as a matter of case law establishing the contours of an investment contract, as guided by the United States Supreme Court decision in International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel,ⁿ⁸ in which interests in noncontributory, compulsory pension plans were held not to be securities. In any event, states adopting the Revised Uniform Securities Act provision,ⁿ⁹ make the exclusion express in the statute. The specific exclusion is also now a part of Blue Sky laws based on the 2002 Uniform Act. More commonly, however, employee benefit plan interests have been addressed by a security or transaction exemption, rather than an exclusion. In that manner, antifraud authority under Blue Sky laws is preserved.

There are several other statutory exclusions from the definition of security found in particular state Blue Sky laws. Tennessee, for example, specifically excludes currency, checks, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness issued in a mercantile or consumer transaction, and interests in a deposit account with a bank or savings and loan association.ⁿ¹⁰ Pennsylvania and several other states provide a specific statutory exclusion from the definition of security for membership interests in limited liability companies that meet certain criteria regarding member participation in management of the company.ⁿ¹¹ A number of states expressly exclude certain mineral interests or real estate from their definitions. Other than in those states that address limited liability membership interests under statutory exemptions from the definition of security, there is no common thread for these various exclusions. Of course, in each instance an exclusion is necessarily based upon a determination that Blue Sky law protection is not necessary or appropriate, including antifraud protection.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Drafters' Commentary, Unif. Sec. Act § 402.

(n2)Footnote 2. Thus, for example, actions concerning fraudulent sales of annuities in those states which exclude these interests from the statutory definition of security may not be brought under the Blue Sky law. See, e.g., Mahaney v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 6 Mass. App. Ct. 919, 380 N.E.2d 140 (1978) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cal. Corp. Code § 25019.

See also Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. Ch. 110A, § 401(k), which provides: " 'Security' does not include any ... annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period."

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unif. Sec. Act § 401(l).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Rhode Island, G.L.R.I. § 7-11-101(22). Rhode Island, a Uniform Act state, makes the exclusion applicable only to products involving an insurance company promise to pay a fixed sum of money. Other states limiting the exclusion to fixed payment insurance products include Kentucky, the District of Columbia, and Nevada. A number of other states, Ohio and Florida for example, provide no exclusion at all.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., West Virginia: Code. W. Va. § 32-4-401(n). The treatment of viatical settlement contracts under Blue Sky laws is more fully considered in Ch. 2, supra.

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(28)(C). This exclusion was originally made a part of the Revised Uniform Securities Act, see Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(16)(ii).

(n8)Footnote 8. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Daniel, 439 U.S. 551, 99 S. Ct. 790, 58 L. Ed. 2d 808 (1979) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Washington: Rev. Code Wa. § 21.20.005(12)(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-102(16)(A)-(D).

(n11)Footnote 11. Pa. Stat. § 102(t)(v). See also Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-13(24)(b), which excludes an interest in a limited liability company formed as part of an estate plan where all the members are related by blood or marriage, there are five or few members, or when the person claiming the exclusion can demonstrate that all members are actively engaged in management of the limited liability company.

57 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.03

§ 7.03 NSMIA and State Securities Exemptions

The National Securities Markets Improvements Act (NSMIA),ⁿ¹ amended § 18 of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ² to preempt significant aspects of state regulatory authority regarding "covered" securities. Where covered securities are involved, states may not directly or indirectly impose registration or qualification requirements, prohibit the offering or sale, impose conditions or additional disclosure requirements on the use of offering documents, proxy statements and other disclosure documents prepared by an issuer, or engage in merit regulation. Federal "covered" securities under NSMIA include:

- (a) Securities listed or authorized for listing on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange, or listed on the National Market System of the NASDAQ Stock Market, or listed or authorized for listing on a national securities exchange which the Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") determines to have substantially similar listing standards;
- (b) securities equal in seniority or senior to securities described above;
- (c) securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
- (d) securities offered or sold to a "qualified purchaser" as defined by the SEC; and
- (e) several categories of exempt securities under § 3 of the Securities Act of 1933; and those offered and sold in various transactions securities exempt under § 4 of the Act, including transactions exempt under § 4(1)ⁿ³ (by persons other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer); § 4(3)ⁿ⁴ dealer transactions in securities of reporting issuers; and transactions exempt under § 4(4)ⁿ⁵ as brokers' transactions.ⁿ⁶

With only four exceptions, NSMIA classified exempt securities under section 3(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 as "covered" securities for purposes of federal preemption.ⁿ⁷ The four exceptions are for securities covered by federal exemptions in section 3(a)(4) (securities issued by charitable, educational, and other qualifying nonprofit issuers), section 3(a)(10) (securities issued in certain exchange transactions approved by a court or authorized agency) section 3(a)(11) (intrastate offerings); and municipal securities offered in their home state. The array of exempt securities contained in the Uniform Securities Act and many state Blue Sky laws includes several exempt securities in section 3(a) of the federal Act. When coupled with the NSMIA provision making exchange listed securities covered securities for purposes of federal preemption, it is clear that NSMIA impacts several securities exemptions in state laws. It is no longer necessary, for example, for states to provide an exemption from registration for "commercial paper" arising out of current transactions and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months of the date of issuance.ⁿ⁸ Section 3(a)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 establishes the same exemption at the federal level and the qualifying securities are now NSMIA federal covered securities not subject to state regulation.

In the wake of NSMIA, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act streamlined the array of Blue Sky securities exemptions to eliminate overlap with federal exemptions which after NSMIA make the securities federal covered securities.ⁿ⁹ It also includes a general securities exemption for all federal covered securities.ⁿ¹⁰ Nevertheless, in states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act, Blue Sky laws have for the most part not been amended to eliminate any preexisting securities exemptions, and in practice it is still important to examine and understand the scope of state exemptions and the limitations of federal "covered security" status that give those exemptions continued meaning. The situation is perhaps best illustrated by the major state enforcement initiatives directed at the widespread offers and sales of promissory notes and other debt securities which, by reason of terms, characteristics or controlling legal principles, do not qualify for the federal "commercial paper" exemption in section 3(a)(4) of the Securities Act of 1933, and thus are not federal covered securities. Such notes and debt securities remain subject to state registration and qualification requirements unless a state securities or transaction exemption is available. The scope of other state exemptions for particular securities can be meaningful as well when the state securities exemption is broader than a federal section 3 exemption.

Following the enactment of NSMIA, the North American Securities Administrators' Association (NASAA) developed model legislation recommended to the states to enable enactment of uniform provisions conforming state laws to NSMIA.ⁿ¹¹ To one degree or another, states adopted the NASAA recommended changes.ⁿ¹² These did not, however, address the elimination or retention of particular exemptions. Rather, "by incorporating a definition of federal covered security" into their statutes,ⁿ¹³ states simply provided that federal covered securities are excluded from the basic registration and related requirements prescribed in their Blue Sky laws.ⁿ¹⁴

As a practical matter, by various security and transaction exemptions in Blue Sky laws, most states had substantially presaged NSMIA. The conversion of what were formerly exempt securities into federal covered securities for purposes of preemption did not have significant impact except to the extent there were variations among states in qualification for particular exemptions, as, for example, with conditions for the exemption of exchange listed securities. After NSMIA, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act simply eliminated Blue Sky law securities exemptions that were no longer needed because the subject securities were after NSMIA federal covered securities. Nevertheless, states which have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act retain the array of pre-NSMIA exemptions. In particular circumstances some of those exemptions remain meaningful to the extent that in spite of ostensible overlap with a federal Securities Act section 3 exemption, a federal covered security is in fact not present. In some circumstances, the breadth of a security exemption in a Blue Sky law may exempt securities that are not subject to NSMIA preemption. For example, after NSMIA states may continue to regulate municipal securities offered or sold within the state in which the issuer is located. The government securities exemption in the applicable Blue Sky law, however, may extend to those securities.

In all cases, states may continue to investigate and bring enforcement actions with respect to "fraud or deceit" or "unlawful conduct by a broker or dealer" in connection with these securities transactions. NSMIA also permits states to require a notice filing, including a consent to service of process, a filing fee, and a sales report with regard to these securities (except for "listed" securities), and states may suspend the offer or sale of securities within state borders for failure to file or to pay such fees.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat. 3416 (1996).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77r (2000).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(1) (2000).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(3) (2000).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4) (2000).

(n6)Footnote 6. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a) (2000).

(n7)Footnote 7. Securities Act section 18(b)(4)(C), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(C) (2000), defines NSMIA covered securities as including those exempt under section 3 of the federal Securities Act:

[o]ther than the offer or sale of a security that is exempt from such registration pursuant to paragraph (4), (10) or (11) of such section, except that a municipal security that is exempt from such a registration pursuant to paragraph (2) of such section is not a covered security with respect to the offer or sale of such security in the State in which the issuer of such security is located.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Unif. Sec. Act § 402(10).

(n9)Footnote 9. A summary of the post-NSMIA security exemptions contained in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is presented in § 7.04, below .

(n10)Footnote 10. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(6).

The added security exemption for federal covered securities has also been adopted in some states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act. Utah, for example, exempts; "a federal covered security specified in the Securities Act of 1933, Section 18(b)(1), 15 U.S.C. Section 77r(b)(1), or by rule adopted under that provision." Utah Code. Ann. § 61-1-14(e).

(n11)Footnote 11. In its recommendations to states on conforming their registration and exemption schemes to NSMIA, NASAA encouraged states to modify, not repeal, existing exemptions affected by the federal legislation. See Rutledge, National Securities Markets Improvements Act ... One Year Later: The States' Response, 53 Bus. L. 563, 567 (Feb. 1998). In the event that the state exemption is broader than the federal exemption, those securities described by the state exemptions are presumably subject to state exemption practices.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Blue Sky L. Rep. P 6491 (CCH) at 2591; see also S. Miller & W. O'Brien, The National Securities Markets Improvements Act of 1996, Rev. Sec. and Comm. Reg. 21, 25 (Jan. 29, 1997); Campbell, R.B. Blue Sky Laws and Congressional Pre-emption Failure, 22 J. Corp. L. 175 (1997).

(n13)Footnote 13. In the wake of NSMIA states now include in their Blue Sky laws a specific definition of "federal covered security," as meaning: "A security that is, or upon completion of a transaction will be, a covered security under Section 18(b) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. Section 77r(b)) or rules or regulations adopted pursuant to that provision." 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 101(7).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 301, which provides in pertinent part: "It is unlawful for a person to offer or sell a security in this State [without registration] unless: (1) the security is a federal covered security"

58 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.04

§ 7.04 2002 Uniform Securities Act Exemption Summary

As discussed above, NSMIA made several classes of exempt securities into federal "covered securities" for purposes of NSMIA preemption. Drafters of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act designed the new Uniform Act to take into account those categories of exempt securities and to streamline state Blue Sky laws by eliminating certain state exemptions that are no longer needed by reason of federal preemption. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act is the definitive post-NSMIA model for state Blue Sky laws, and prescribes securities exemptions that fully reflect realigned federal and state regulatory roles going forward. The 2002 Uniform Act has been adopted in Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Vermont, Wisconsin, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. It is under active consideration in several other states. Because it sets the post-NSMIA standard for security exemptions in Blue Sky laws, understanding the modern array of exemptions is important not only in those jurisdictions in which they are now operative and under consideration, but also going forward to make sense of the application and operation of those retained schemes of exemptions in other states. The 2002 Uniform Act exemptions are summarized below. As with all Blue Sky securities exemptions, the post-NSMIA array now comprising section 201 of the 2002 Uniform Act provides no exemption from antifraud provisions, or the broker-dealer, agent, investment adviser or investment adviser representative requirements.

Domestic Government Securities. The 2002 Uniform Act¹ exempts any security, including a revenue obligation or a separate security as defined in Rule 131 under the Securities Act of 1933, issued, insured, or guaranteed by the United States or by a state; by a political subdivision of a state; by a public authority, agency or instrumentality of one or more states; or by a person controlled or supervised by and acting as an instrumentality of the United States under authority granted by Congress; or any certificate of deposit for any such security. The 2002 provision added "insured" to prior exemptions found in the original and revised Uniform Acts.

Foreign Government Securities. Securities issued, insured, or guaranteed by a foreign government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations, or any of its political subdivisions, is exempt under the 2002 Uniform Act² if the security is recognized as a valid obligation of the issuer, insurer, or guarantor. Many state exemptions focus specifically on Canada, its provinces or political subdivisions. Separate treatment of Canadian securities is eliminated in the 2002 Uniform Act.

Depository Institution and International Banking Institution Securities. The 2002 Uniform Act³ exempts securities issued by and representing, or that will represent, an interest in or a direct obligation of, or be guaranteed by, specified banking or depository institutions. The exemption includes securities of an "international banking institution" as that term is defined in the Act,ⁿ⁴ as well as U.S. banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System; FDIC or NCUSIF (credit unions) insured depository institutions; or other depository institutions that may be added by rule or order.

Insurance Company Securities. A security issued by and representing an interest in or a debit of, or which is insured or guaranteed by an insurance company authorized to do business in the state is exempt under the 2002 Uniform Act.ⁿ⁵ This exemption must be read together with the definition of "security" in section 102(28)(B) of the 2002 Uniform Act, which excludes endowment policies or annuity contracts under which an insurance company promises to pay a fixed sum from the definition, but leaves the language to include variable annuities and insurance products not promising a fixed payment as an option for adopting states. The difference is significant in terms of antifraud protection and enforcement authority of Blue Sky administrators under antifraud provisions.

Common Carrier and Public Utility Securities. The 2002 Uniform Actⁿ⁶ exempts securities issued or guaranteed by a railroad or other common carrier, a public utility, or a public utility holding company that meets certain criteria as to rate regulation and regulation regarding the issuance or guarantee of securities generally by the United States, a state, Canada or a Canadian province. A qualifying public utility holding company is one registered under the federal Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, or which has a subsidiary subject to that Act.

Federal Covered Securities. By this broad exemptionⁿ⁷ the 2002 Uniform Act exempts all federal covered securities from registration, and includes certain options and rights relating to those securities. With this exemption the 2002 Uniform Act in particular eliminated all previous Blue Sky forms of exemptions for exchange or Nasdaq listed securities that became covered securities under NSMIA. Even more broadly, the 2002 Uniform Act exemption includes specified options, warrants and rights regarding such securities that are not themselves federal covered securities under NSMIA, and it also addresses aspects of transactions in underlying securities when derivative securities are involved.

As discussed throughout the chapter, NSMIA preempted state securities laws with respect to all but three of the federal exemptions in section 3(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 by making securities covered by those federal exemptions into federal "covered securities." Thus, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act eliminated former Uniform Act exemptions for exchange listed securities, commercial paper, employee benefit plans, insurance company securities, common carrier and public utility securities, and revised prior exemptions for depository institution securities. Nevertheless, in states that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act these individual securities exemptions remain, and may in particular circumstances be broader than the federal exemption. This advantage is not available under the 2002 Uniform Act, with its simple exemption for all "federal covered securities."

Nonprofit Organization Securities. Nonprofit organization securities represent one of the particular categories of securities for which an exemption is available under section 3 of the federal Securities Act of 1933, but which are specifically not deemed to be federal covered securities under NSMIA. Thus, the 2002 Uniform Actⁿ⁸ merely updates prior versions of the exemption in Blue Sky laws, and in particular underscores the authority of state administrators to make rules and orders in regard to debt securities of non-profits that have caused such great concern for investor protection in recent years.

Cooperatives. The 2002 Uniform Actⁿ⁹ continues the exemption commonly found in Blue Sky laws for securities representing a member's or owner's interest in, or retention certificate or similar security given in lieu of a cash patronage dividend issued by a cooperative that is organized and operated as a nonprofit membership cooperative under state law. The exemption is not available for such securities that are offered or sold to the public generally.

Equipment Trust Certificates. The final securities exemption in the 2002 Uniform Actⁿ¹⁰ continues exemptions developed to address equipment lease financing devices, and simply to recognize that if the securities of a person using a particular financing device would be exempt under some other provision of the Act, or would be federal covered securities,ⁿ¹¹ an equipment trust certificate or other security used to acquire the property should also be exempt.

This is the entire array of securities exemptions in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. Noticeably absent are the exemptions for exchange listed securities, for commercial paper and for interests in certain employee benefit plans. The 2002 Uniform Act does not preclude the addition of any other securities exemption. To the contrary, section 203 of the Act expressly authorizes additional exemptions adopted by rule or order. This authority, the Official Comments make clear, is to allow new exemptions as circumstances warrant for new technologies such as the Internet.ⁿ¹² The drafters specifically recognized that there will be some exemptions that can most effectively be implemented by rule rather than statute.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(14), which defines an international banking institution as one of which the United States is a member, and whose securities are exempt under the federal Securities Act of 1933.

(n5)Footnote 5. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 210(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(5).

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(6).

(n8)Footnote 8. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(7).

(n9)Footnote 9. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(8).

(n10)Footnote 10. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(9).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, Securities Act of 1933 § 3(a)(6), 15 U.S.C. § 77c(6) (2000).

(n12)Footnote 12. Official Comments, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 203.

59 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.05

§ 7.05 The State Guides

Volumes Three and Four of this Treatise are comprised of individual State Guides which, in addition to summarizing registration, licensing, and other essential aspects of individual Blue Sky laws, present the particular array of security and transaction exemptions in each state. Security exemptions, whether pre- or post-NSMIA and the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, fall under common headings or descriptors. Yet there are nuances among exemptions from state to state, and the State Guides address such nuances as may exist in a particular jurisdiction, as well as any unique exemptions. In Ch. 7.06 below, each of the common exemptions that continue as a part of Blue Sky laws in states which have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, as well as those exemptions specifically left operationally intact at the state level by NSMIA, is examined. In all cases, however, the individual State Guides must be incorporated into full consideration of the continued meaning, relevance, and operation of a particular security exemption.

60 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.06

§ 7.06 Common Blue Sky Securities Exemptions

Except in those states which have adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the full array of pre-NSMIA security exemptions remains a part of every Blue Sky law. As discussed previously, some exemptions are simply no longer relevant, except to the extent they are broader in exempting securities than what are currently defined in SEC rules as NSMIA covered securities. Others remain significant to the extent state registration and qualification requirements continue to apply to securities which are not NSMIA covered securities. The common security exemptions in Blue Sky laws are discussed below, with particular emphasis on the extent to which they remain relevant. In every consideration of security exemptions that remain in place, it is essential to keep in mind that regardless of the exemption, and regardless of whether securities included in an exemption are today NSMIA covered securities, the antifraud provisions of state securities laws and state licensing authority as to intermediaries are not impacted.ⁿ¹ The scope of state regulatory authority under antifraud provisions may in some circumstances be unclear or subject to challenge.ⁿ² However, the sole focus of security exemptions in Blue Sky laws is on registration provisions, not the application of antifraud provisions and state enforcement authority.

[1] Government Securities

[a] Domestic Government Securities

Securities issued or guaranteed by the United States, the states and their various agencies, political subdivisions and instrumentalities are generally exempt from Blue Sky registration requirements. The provision adopted by most states is taken from section 402(a)(1) of the original Uniform Securities Act which exempts:

[A]ny security (including a revenue obligation) issued or guaranteed by the United States, any state, any political subdivision of a state or any agency or corporate or other instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing.ⁿ³

While "guaranteed" was included in the original Uniform Act exemption, the Revised Uniform Act added "insured" to the array of eligible U.S. Government securities. The terms were explained in the Revised Uniform Act as follows:

(1) Guaranteed means guaranteed as to payment of all or substantially all of principal and interest of dividends.

(2) Insured means insured as to payment of all or substantially all of principal and interest or dividend.ⁿ⁴

Both of these eligibility terms are included in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act as well. Comparable exemptions for mostⁿ⁵ domestic government securities have been enacted in all states.ⁿ⁶

As a matter of federal securities law, domestic government securities are exempt under section 3 of the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ⁷ and as such, they are NSMIA covered securities pursuant to section 18(b)(4)(C) of the Act, which was added by NSMIA. The only NSMIA exception is for municipal securities with respect to the offer or sale of such security in the State in which the issuer of such security is located. That exception assures the continued vitality of government securities exemptions in state securities laws.

There are several types of municipal securities. Among the most common is the general obligation. These are debts of the municipality which are paid by virtue of the issuer's general taxing authority.ⁿ⁸ The revenue bond is another type of municipal security. These obligations typically represent money borrowed for use in a municipal project. Closely related to the revenue bond is the special obligation bond. Repayment of such bonds is made from a fund which collects money from the people who use a specially funded project. For example, a city might issue revenue bonds to build a sewer system and in order to repay the obligation it imposes a water use charge. The only lien bondholders have in such a situation is against the special fund set up for repayment. There is no claim against general tax revenues of the city.

Somewhat different is the industrial development bond, or private activity bond. Money raised from the sale of these bonds might typically be used to build some sort of industrial facility, such as an electric power plant. The facility is then leased to a private source to be run as an independent private business enterprise. The source of cash for repayment of the bonds is the money paid by the lessee for rental of the facility.ⁿ⁹ The problem with this sort of financing from the investor's point of view is that repayment is in no way guaranteed by the municipality. The total source of funds is the commercial private enterprise, and if this should fail, the investor is precluded from looking to the municipality for further payment.

All states that have adopted the municipal security exemption apply it to general obligations. Even in the area of revenue bonds and special obligation bonds, the exemption is generally available in states having the Uniform Act provision and in other statesⁿ¹⁰ which, as with the Uniform Act, exempt revenue obligations.

The exemptions in a few states are contingent upon the taxing power of the issuer or guarantor. A filing must be made in Ohioⁿ¹¹ to obtain an exemption for revenue bonds not payable out of a general tax.ⁿ¹² Similarly, a Florida Attorney General's opinion interpreted that State's exemption as applying only where obligations were backed by the full faith and credit of the governmental issuer or guarantor.ⁿ¹³

Private activity bonds present an entirely different problem, because of perceived abuses. Section 401(b)(1) of the Revised Uniform Securities Act offered states the option of adopting language to deny the exemption to the issue of industrial development bonds by persons whose securities are not otherwise exempt under other clauses of Section 401.ⁿ¹⁴ Several states have opted for this bar,ⁿ¹⁵ but have not necessarily adopted the language of the provision.ⁿ¹⁶ Texas securities regulations provide that industrial development bonds fall within the exemption if they are fully guaranteed as to repayment of principal and interest by the United States or any governmental agency or instrumentality.ⁿ¹⁷ Ohio, on the other hand, extends its exemption to securities payable out of revenues collected or administered by the governmental issuer when securities subject to such collection or administration are permitted by the laws of the issuer's state.ⁿ¹⁸ This would seem to allow the exemption for industrial development bonds when the requirements of the issuer's state are met.

In New York,ⁿ¹⁹ industrial development bonds are exempt if such bonds meet all the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code. This is because New York has adopted by reference the exemption for such bonds set forth in the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ²⁰ A regulation under the Pennsylvania statute permits a like exemption when certification is obtained from the Internal Revenue Service and the Securities and Exchange Commission that the securities meet the requirements of those agencies.ⁿ²¹

Local governments also become involved with financing private enterprise when they organize local public corporations to issue debt securities to build industrial facilities which will be sold or leased to a private company. Once again, payment to security holders is from revenues collected from the private business.ⁿ²² Since the nature of these securities is similar to that of industrial development bonds issued directly by the municipality, it is likely that states will apply the same exemption criteria to both types of securities. Nevertheless, some states provide a specific statutory exemption for securities issued by a local development corporation.ⁿ²³

Small business investment corporations present further challenges. These are private corporations organized under state law which must first be approved by the federal Small Business Administration.ⁿ²⁴ As a rule, it would not appear that such corporations would be eligible for exemption for domestic governmental securities under most circumstances, since the securities are neither issued nor guaranteed by a governmental unit. However, the Small Business Administration has the power to guarantee certain securities of small business investment corporations.ⁿ²⁵ Some states provide an exemption for securities issued by small business investment corporations under specified conditions.ⁿ²⁶

[b] Foreign Government Securities

Blue Sky laws generally include an exemption for foreign government securities which meet certain criteria. The Uniform Securities Act exempts from registration:

[A]ny security issued or guaranteed by Canada, any Canadian province, any political subdivision of any such province, any agency or corporate or other instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing, or any other foreign government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations, if the security is recognized as a valid obligation by the issuer or guarantor.ⁿ²⁷

Special attention given to Canadian securities in the original Uniform Act is largely redundant today. Securities of all foreign governments are exempt if they are issued or guaranteed by the national government,ⁿ²⁸ but only if diplomatic relations between the United States and the foreign country are maintained and the security is recognized by that country as a valid obligation.

The specific reference to Canadian securities continues in government securities exemptions of many states which have enacted the original Uniform Act provisionⁿ²⁹ as well as a few other states having their own provisions.ⁿ³⁰ In fact, some states exempt Canadian securities, but not those of any other foreign country. Other jurisdictions with a foreign governmental security exemption treat Canadian securities no differently than those of other nations.ⁿ³¹ These states typically extend the exemption to political subdivisions of all foreign governments otherwise eligible for the exemption.

The government securities exemption in section 3(a)(2) of the federal Securities Act does not extend to foreign government securities, and accordingly these securities are not NSMIA covered securities. State exemptions thus remain fully operative with regard to qualifying foreign government securities,ⁿ³² including in many cases political subdivisions of foreign governments.ⁿ³³

[2] Depository Institutions

Securities of "depository institutions"--banks, savings institutions, trust companies, credit unions, or similar institutions³⁴--are for the most part exempt from the registration provisions of state securities laws. The original Uniform Securities Act addressed securities of banks, savings institutions and trust companies, and both Uniform and Non-Uniform Act states have since extended the exemptions to encompass credit unions and other institutions which receive federally insured deposits. NSMIA impacted the state exemption scheme for depository institutions to the extent of making securities exempt under section 3 of the federal Securities Act of 1933 into federal covered securities, thus preempting certain state regulatory authority, and rendering an overlapping exemption in Blue Sky laws unnecessary. Nevertheless, states not adopting the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which was designed to harmonize state and federal exemptions after NSMIA, largely continue their pre-NSMIA security exemption schemes. As discussed further below, however, the retention of certain elements of state depository institution exemptions remains important because the scope of the federal exemption is not so wide as to encompass the full range of depository institution securities as covered by the state exemptions.

[a] Banks

The fact that depository institutions are usually subject to close regulation by the jurisdiction in which they are organized provided the basis for the original Uniform Securities Act's exemption for securities issued or guaranteed by banks.³⁵ Section 402(3) of the Uniform Act included an exemption for:

[A]ny security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any bank organized under the laws of the United States, or any bank, savings institution, or trust company organized and supervised under the laws of any state.

States adopting the Uniform Act provision relied on their own as well as other states' banking regulations, since the Uniform Act's exemption applies to banks "organized and supervised under the laws of any state." This exemption, however, does not apply to securities of bank holding companies unless the holding company is itself a depository institution. State exemptions for bank securities are basically divided between the Uniform Act provision, allowing organization and supervision in other states, and those providing that the bank be domestic or under domestic control in the enacting state. Wyoming requires foreign banks to qualify before the exemption applies,³⁶ and Virginia, which permits exemption for foreign banks, is silent on domestic state supervision.³⁷

Prior to NSMIA, in one form or another, an exemption for bank securities was included in every state securities law. However, section 3(a)(2) of the federal Securities Act of 1933 provides an exemption for "any security issued or guaranteed by any bank."³⁸ Bank is defined for purposes of the federal section 3(a)(2) exemption as:

[A]ny national bank, or any banking institution organized under the laws of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, the business of which is substantially confined to banking and is supervised by the State or territorial banking commission or similar official ³⁹

The federal exemption is also based on the fact that banks are subject to extensive government regulation, both state and federal. However, since there are many institutions that engage in financing activities that are not so heavily regulated, the limiting language in section 3(a)(2) as to business being substantially confined to banking has been fairly strictly construed.⁴⁰ Securities of finance companies, small loan companies, investment banks, and bank holding companies are outside the definition for the reason that such institutions are not in the strict sense primarily engaged in the banking business, and in most cases cannot use the word "bank" in their names. The federal exemption for securities guaranteed by a bank has been interpreted to include irrevocable letters of credit, without regard to whether a technical guaranty relationship exists.⁴¹ Travelers Checks, which are guaranteed as to payment by a bank, are exempt securities under section 3(a)(2).⁴²

For the operation of NSMIA, the federal exemption applies to any banking institution organized under the laws of any state, the only qualifier being that the business of the institution be substantially confined to banking. The federal section

3(a)(2) exemption thus makes "bank" securities federal covered securities over which state registration authority is preempted, and renders bank security exemptions in Blue Sky laws unnecessary. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act accordingly contains no "bank" securities exemption as such, but does include an exemption for securities of an "international banking institution,"ⁿ⁴³ although that term is narrowly defined.ⁿ⁴⁴ Nevertheless, "bank" security exemptions remain in Blue Sky laws in those states which have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Act. Their continuing relevance lies in the manner in which they are stated, and the depository institutions within their scope.

State exemptions for bank securities are more broadly worded than federal section 3(a)(2) in the inclusion of other financial institutions, such as savings and loan institutions and trust companies. Not every state includes securities of savings institutionsⁿ⁴⁵ and trust companiesⁿ⁴⁶ in the continuing "bank" exemption, although the definition of "bank" may in fact extend the scope of the exemption.ⁿ⁴⁷ In any event, although the simple "bank" securities exemption in Blue Sky laws is no longer meaningful by reason of NSMIA and the federal exemption, all of those continuing provisions based on the original Uniform Act, and those in most non-Uniform Act states, also address other categories of exempt securities under the broader notion of depository institutions, such as savings, institutions savings and loan associations and credit unions. In Arizona, for example, exempt securities include:

Securities issued by a national bank, a bank or a credit or loan association organized pursuant to an act of Congress and supervised by the United States or an agency of the United States, or issued by a state bank or savings institution the business of which is supervised and regulated by an agency of this state or the United States.ⁿ⁴⁸

Arizona further exempts:

Securities issued by a savings and loan association subject to supervision by an agency of this state.ⁿ⁴⁹

Section 3(a)(2) of the federal Securities Act only addresses "banking institutions" in the definition of "bank" for purposes of the exemption. There is nothing in section 3(a)(2) addressing the broader notion of depository institutions, although another federal section three exemption, section 3(a)(5), addresses "securities of savings and loan associations and similar institutions,"ⁿ⁵⁰ making these securities federal covered securities under NSMIA as well. Still, the availability of Blue Sky exemptions for qualifying savings and loan securities, credit union securities, trust companies, and depository institutions generally, remains a consideration. The scope of Blue Sky law exemptions for these securities is addressed below.

[b] Savings and Loan Associations

Section 3(a)(5) of the federal Securities Act of 1933ⁿ⁵¹ exempts securities issued by savings and loan and similar associations, and by farm cooperatives and related organizations. In pertinent part, the exemption is for:

Any security issued ... by a savings and loan association, building and loan association, cooperative bank, homestead association, or similar institution, which is supervised and examined by State or Federal authority having supervision over any such institution ⁿ⁵²

The key requirement as it applies to savings and loan and other associations is that they be institutions that are supervised and examined by federal or state authorities appropriate for the type of organization. NSMIA makes securities covered by section 3(a)(5) of the federal Securities Act covered securities, and any remaining vitality of state securities law exemptions for like securities must be assessed in terms of any broader scope of coverage at the state level.

In Blue Sky laws, a simple exemption combining traditional depository institutions for purposes of a single exemption is common. Thus in New Jersey, for example, the exemption is for:

Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any bank, savings institution, or trust company organized and supervised under the laws of any state or under the laws of the United States.ⁿ⁵³

As further illustrated in New Jersey, in states adopting the original Uniform Act modelⁿ⁵⁴ an additional specific exemption is provided for "any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any savings institution," for which the definition keys on accounts being insured by a federal corporation or agency.ⁿ⁵⁵

Federal savings and loan associations are associations organized under the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933.ⁿ⁵⁶ Although the purposes of the federal actⁿ⁵⁷ and the various state acts permitting organization of savings and loan associations are the same, there are numerous differences in the statutes regarding the organization and operation of these entities.ⁿ⁵⁸ Basically, savings and loan associations are corporations formed for the purpose of making loans, usually for the acquisition of homes.ⁿ⁵⁹ The statutes under which organization occurs usually provide for strict regulation and control with respect to operating procedure. Generally, the terms "savings and loan association" and "building and loan association," especially when used by the states, are synonymous.

In most states the exemption for savings and loan association securities extends to those institutions organized in any states, which is the Uniform Act model.ⁿ⁶⁰ Other states offer the exemption if the qualification to do business in the state precedes the offer and sale of the securities.ⁿ⁶¹ Some states merely require the institution to be regulated in its domicile state,ⁿ⁶² while others demand that foreign associations be subject to specific regulatory requirements.ⁿ⁶³ Other states granting the exemption provide that if the association is not organized under federal law,ⁿ⁶⁴ it must be a domestic corporation.ⁿ⁶⁵

There being no qualifiers on the federal exemption for securities issued by any savings and loan association or similar institution other than the supervision and examination requirement, the overlap between the federal exemption and state exemptions is clear. State exemptions provide no broader exemption for these institutions. To the contrary, state exemptions are in fact more limited in the face of the federal "similar institution" element, which will be seen below as bearing on a federal section 3(a) exemption for credit union securities. Taking section 3(a) of the federal Securities Act into consideration after NSMIA, the remaining state savings and loan association exemptions no longer serve any useful role.

[c] Credit Unions

Credit unions are corporate organizations formed for the purpose of lending money to members.ⁿ⁶⁶ These associations are usually formed under laws strictly defining their powers and duties in addition to providing for special state supervision and control.ⁿ⁶⁷ A majority of states exempt the securities of credit unions from registration under the Blue Sky laws. The Uniform Securities Act provision exempts: "any security issued or guaranteed by any federal credit union or any credit union, industrial loan association, or similar association organized and supervised under the laws of this state ...".ⁿ⁶⁸

Section 3(a)(5) of the federal Securities Act of 1933 exempts securities of savings and loan associations and other "similar" institutions that are supervised and examined by federal or state authorities. Credit unions are supervised and examined by federal or state authorities. Federal Credit Unions are chartered under the terms of the Federal Credit Union Act and supervised by the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA). State chartered credit unions are supervised by a designated state agency, and are required to maintain federal deposit insurance administered by the National Credit Union Administration. Thus, the securities of both federal and state chartered credit unions fall under the federal Securities Act section 3(a)(5) exemption, and are NSMIA covered securities.ⁿ⁶⁹ State law security exemptions for credit unions are co-extensive with the federal exemption and, accordingly, have no further role in state securities regulation except to the extent that in unusual circumstances the federal exemption would not apply.

[3] Insurance Company Securities

State Blue Sky laws generally provide exemptions for securities of insurance companies in one of two ways. The statute may exempt:

- (1) all insurance securities unless otherwise specified,ⁿ⁷⁰ or
- (2) only those "securities" which are ordinarily considered to be issued as part of the insurance business, insurance policies themselves, endowments and annuities.ⁿ⁷¹

Most states provide statutory exclusions for insurance and endowment policies.ⁿ⁷² As a result, these interests are generally not subject to blue sky law registration regardless of whether there is an exemption provision.

Section 3(a)(8) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ⁷³ provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for:

Any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or optional annuity contract, issued by a corporation subject to the supervision of the insurance commissioner, bank commissioner, or any agency or officer performing like functions, of any State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia.

Thus, Insurance securities are federal covered securities and are preempted from state regulation (except for antifraud enforcement) under NSMIA. However, as with other categories of securities that are now federal covered securities by reason of section 3(a) exemptions under the federal Securities Act of 1933, most states have retained their insurance company securities exemption after NSMIA. In the event that the state exemption is broader than the federal exemption, those securities described by the state exemptions are presumably subject to state exemption practices.ⁿ⁷⁴

The extent, if any, of continued vitality of an exemption for insurance company securities in Blue Sky laws is best addressed with respect to variable annuities.ⁿ⁷⁵ Insurance policies are excluded from coverage of Blue Sky laws. The original Uniform Securities Act specifically excluded from the definition of "security" any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which the insurance company promises to pay a fixed sum of money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period.ⁿ⁷⁶ It was silent, however, on the treatment of variable annuities, except to include within the exemption from registration for securities issued by insurance companies the specific option to carve variable annuities out of the exemption.ⁿ⁷⁷

Most states provide an exclusion from the definition of "security" for variable annuity contracts issued by insurance companies.ⁿ⁷⁸ Several of those states supply an exemption for all insurance company securities if other statutory conditions are met.ⁿ⁷⁹

Some states have retained the alternate provision recommended by the Uniform Securities Act. This provision was designed to include variable annuity contracts in the definition of "security," and then to specifically make the exemption inapplicable to such annuity contracts.ⁿ⁸⁰

In some states the statute is silent on the security status of variable annuities.ⁿ⁸¹ Of these states, a few exempt all securities issued by insurance companies meeting other statutory requirements,ⁿ⁸² and others specifically exempt variable annuities of insurance companies subject to the state's supervision. Only a few states require registration of variable annuities under all circumstances.ⁿ⁸³

Because section 3(a)(s) of the federal Securities Act does not include variable annuities in the exemption for insurance policies, there is no NSMIA covered security and no preemption of state authority in regard to them. It is necessary, therefore, to examine the particular insurance exemption in each state securities law, as well as any statutory exclusion from the definition of "security," to determine the continuing significance of an exemption for securities issued by insurance companies.

The first part of Section 402(a)(4) of the Uniform Securities Act exempts from registration: "Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any insurance company organized under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state ...".ⁿ⁸⁴ The exemption granted by this particular phrase (absent the above discussed variable annuities exclusion) is not very troublesome and has, in fact, been substantially adopted in some states as the entire exemption for insurance company securities.

The extent of governmental control over the insurer also plays a role when determining whether or not its securities are entitled to exemption. Most states follow the recommendation of the Uniform Act and grant an exemption to securities of insurance companies authorized to do business in the state.ⁿ⁸⁵ Other Blue Sky laws require the company to be under the control of a specific state agency.ⁿ⁸⁶ Floridaⁿ⁸⁷ and Ohioⁿ⁸⁸ do not require the insurer to be supervised within their respective states, but do require the company to be regulated by some other government body. Illinoisⁿ⁸⁹ allows the exemption for any insurance company organized under the laws of any state with no further restrictions.

Texas has a different type of exemption. Although there is no exemption in the statute for securities issued by an insurance company, an exemption does exist for a non-issuer sale by an insurance company of securities which constitutes a legal investment for such a company. A further requirement of this provision is that the company be under the supervision or control of the Texas Board of Insurance Commissioners.ⁿ⁹⁰

[4] Common Carriers, Public Utilities, and Holding Companies

[a] Generally

The Uniform Securities Act exempts from registration securities issued or guaranteed by railroads, other common carriers, public utilities or holding companies if the issuer or guarantor is subject to regulation by federal or state agencies other than those administering the Blue Sky laws.ⁿ⁹¹ The exemption is granted to companies subject to one of four types of regulation:

- (1) companies subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC);ⁿ⁹²
- (2) companies that are registered holding companies regulated under the Public Utility Holding Company Act or subsidiaries of such companies; and
- (3) companies regulated in respect of their rates and charges by a governmental authority of the United States or any state; and
- (4) companies regulated in respect of the issuance or guarantee of the security by a governmental authority of the United States, any state, or Canada.

The exemption is based upon the presumption that the stringent standards of the governmental agency involved will protect the investing public, making registration unnecessary under the state securities acts.ⁿ⁹³ Most states follow the Uniform Act example, and broadly exempt railroads, other common carriers, public utilities or holding companies which are regulated as to their securities by any agency of the federal government.ⁿ⁹⁴

There is no comparable exemption in section 3(a) of the federal Securities Act. Section 3(a)(6) of the federal act exempts securities of "railroad equipment trusts," which are defined to include common carrier equipment trusts. The federal exemption covers:

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.06

Any interest in a railroad equipment trust. For purposes of this paragraph any "interest in a railroad equipment trust" means any interest in an equipment, trust, lease, conditional sales contract, or other similar arrangement entered into, issued, assumed, guaranteed by or for the benefit of, a common carrier to finance the acquisition of rolling stock, including motive power.ⁿ⁹⁵

The federal section 3(a)(6) exemption is largely meaningless today. Legislation has made the securities of common carrier subject to the full requirements of the federal securities laws. All that remains of the section 3(a)(6) exemption today is any interest in a "railroad equipment trust," which is far narrower than the broadly worded state Blue Sky exemptions. No NSMIA covered security is involved except to the narrow extent of a railroad or common carrier equipment trust, and the state law exemptions thus have continuing vitality and importance.

Under state securities laws, an exemption is granted if the company is a registered holding company under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 or is a subsidiary of such a company within the meaning of that Act.ⁿ⁹⁶ The purpose of the Public Utility Holding Company Actⁿ⁹⁷ is to protect investors in public utility holding companies.ⁿ⁹⁸ These holding companies are parent to the operating public utility.ⁿ⁹⁹ Under this federal law, the regulating agency is the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Public Utility Holding Company Act allows the states to impose their own regulation over the securities of public utility holding companies.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ Consequently, these securities are subject to registration under the blue sky laws unless the state has a statutory provision granting an exemption. The attitude of most states is to grant the exemption either by following the Uniform Securities Act example of specifically exempting companies coming under the Public Utility Holding Company Act,ⁿ¹⁰¹ or by generally granting the exemption to public utilities and their holding companies subject to federal regulation.ⁿ¹⁰²

An exemption from registration is provided if the company is regulated in respect of its rates and charges by a governmental authority of the United States or any state.ⁿ¹⁰³ Although a number of states have substantially adopted this provision as it is set out in the Uniform Act,ⁿ¹⁰⁴ a few states have broadened it slightly to allow the exemption if rates and charges are regulated by a municipality of a state.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ According to the Uniform Act commentary, the provision as originally drafted is broad enough to include municipalities,ⁿ¹⁰⁶ but apparently these few states preferred to close any possible gap. The issue remains open as to whether the comment to the Act will be accepted by the courts of those states which do not specifically include municipalities within the statute.

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act exemption is an amalgam of all approaches, and allows the exemption for:

[a] security issued or guaranteed by a railroad, or other common carrier, public utility, or public utility holding company that is:

- (A) regulated in respect to its rates and charges by the United States or a State;
- (B) regulated in respect to the issuance or guarantee of the security by the United States, a State, Canada, or a Canadian province or territory; or
- (C) a public utility holding company registered under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 or a subsidiary of such registered holding company within the meaning of that act.ⁿ¹⁰⁷

Of the non-Uniform Act states which permit a comparable exemption, some states add that the exemption is applicable when the companies' rates and charges are regulated by an agency of the Dominion of Canada or of a Canadian province. The Uniform Securities Act purposely avoids this exemption, and, instead, provides the fourth regulatory condition for exemption if the company is regulated in respect of the issuance or guarantee of the security by a governmental authority of the United States, any state, Canada or any Canadian province or territory.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

The division between the Uniform Act provisions permitting exemption when rates and charges are regulated and permitting it when securities are regulated is to avoid the application of the "rates and charges regulation exemption" when the source of such regulation is in Canada.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Nevertheless, some states grant the exemption when rates and charges are regulated by Canadian authorities.

With regard to the exemption for securities of companies subject to security regulation in other states, most states have adopted either the Uniform Act provisionⁿ¹¹⁰ or similar provision embracing the same concepts.ⁿ¹¹¹ However, there are a few jurisdictions which do not fit into broad categories. Oregonⁿ¹¹² will give exemptions only to companies subject to regulation within the state. Virginiaⁿ¹¹³ requires the company to be supervised as to rates and issuance of securities under United States law, the law of a state, Canada or Canadian province. Some states will not accept any Canadian regulation for purposes of the exemption.ⁿ¹¹⁴

Persons seeking this exemption should bear in mind that a few states require the filing of specified documents before the securities can be offered or sold as exempt.ⁿ¹¹⁵

[b] Equipment Trust Certificates

When an operating railroad or utility needs equipment, it often turns to an equipment company for its supplies. These companies, while retaining title, turn the equipment over to the railroad or utility for a stipulated profit, rental or hire. The railroad or utility issues trust certificates to protect payments for the equipment from becoming subject to liens of other trust deeds or mortgages executed by the railroad or utility.

Although it would seem that equipment trust certificates issued by railroads or utilities would be exempt if the issuer's other securities are exempt, some states have enacted specific statutory provisions covering the exemption, generally under the condition that other securities issued by the railroad or utility are exempt.ⁿ¹¹⁶ The original Uniform Securities Act contained no provision regarding equipment trusts. However, section 401(b)(6) of the Revised Uniform Act specifically exempts "equipment trust certificates in respect to equipment leased or conditionally sold to a person, if securities issued by the person would be exempt under this section."ⁿ¹¹⁷ The Revised Uniform Act provision was carried into section 201(9) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which exempts:

An equipment trust certificate with respect to equipment leased or conditionally sold to a person, if any security issued by the person would be exempt under this section or would be a federal covered security under Section 18(b)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(1)).ⁿ¹¹⁸

Other states reach substantially the same result by providing that the exemption applies if standards of given governmental jurisdictions are met.ⁿ¹¹⁹

[5] Listed Securities

[a] Listed Securities as NSMIA Federal Covered Securities

Prior to enactment of NSMIA, all state Blue Sky laws included an exemption from registration requirements for securities listed or approved for listing upon issuance on designated national securities exchanges or the National Market System (NMS) tier of the Nasdaq Stock Market, or securities of the same issuer equal in seniority or senior to those securities. State exemptions were based on the quality characteristics of securities meeting exchange and Nasdaq listing standards, and recognition that the protections of Blue Sky registration are not needed. Moreover, these listed securities trade in truly national markets, and provisions by the states for a securities exemption at least implicitly recognized the appropriately limited role of state regulatory authority regarding national securities markets. This, of course, was the essential premise of NSMIA, which excised exchange and Nasdaq NMS listed securities from state registration and qualification requirements altogether by including them as federal "covered securities" for purposes of NSMIA preemption. Thus today, section 18(b)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ¹²⁰ establishes exclusive federal authority for registration of nationally traded securities, making them covered securities when the security is:

(A) listed, or authorized for listing, on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange, or listed or authorized for listing, on the National Market System of the Nasdaq Stock Market (or any successor to such entities);

(B) listed or authorized for listing, on a national securities exchange (or tier or segment thereof) that has listing standards that the Commission determines by rule (on its own initiative or on the basis of a petition) are substantially similar to the listing standards applicable to securities described in subparagraph (A); or

(C) is a security of the same issuer that is equal in seniority or that is a senior security to a security described in subparagraph (A) or (B).

Under the authority to determine substantially similar listing standards, the SEC, by Rule 146 under the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ¹²¹ originally designated securities listed on or in the following markets as federal covered securities:

- The New York Stock Exchange (the "NYSE");
- The American Stock Exchange (the "AMEX");
- The Nasdaq Global Market of the Nasdaq Stock Market (the "NGM");
- Tier I of the Pacific Exchange;ⁿ¹²² and
- The Chicago Board Options Exchange.

Subsequently, the SEC amended Rule 146, finding that the following national securities exchanges, or segments or tiers thereof, have listing standards that are substantially similar to those of the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE"), the American Stock Exchange ("Amex"), or the National Market System of the Nasdaq Stock Market ("Nasdaq/NGM"), and that securities listed, or authorized for listing, on these exchanges are also deemed to be covered securities:

- Tier I of NYSE Arca, Inc.;
- Tier I of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, Inc.;ⁿ¹²³
- The Chicago Board Options Exchange, Incorporated;
- Options listed on the International Securities Exchange, LLC; and
- The Nasdaq Capital Market.

State Blue Sky exemptions for listed securities are commonly broader, including in most cases the Midwest Stock Exchange,ⁿ¹²⁴ and in many instances granting the administrator authority to approve any additional securities exchanges that are registered with the SEC under the federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or which the administrator may otherwise designate.ⁿ¹²⁵ The combination of NSMIA and the authority of state administrators to exempt other listed securities is now the basis for the simplified approach of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act which, be the exemption provided in section 201(6), covers:

[A] federal covered security specified in Section 18(b)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 ... or by rule adopted under that provision or a security listed or approved for listing on another securities market specified by rule under this [Act] n126

Blue Sky law exemptions for listed securities are also broader than the NSMIA "covered security" definition in regard to options, rights or warrants to purchase or subscribe to listed securities.ⁿ¹²⁷ Because state exemptions encompass but also go beyond what is provided in NSMIA, states not adopting the 2002 Uniform Act have retained their listed securities exemptions. In the wake of NSMIA the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) entered into Memoranda of Understanding with registered exchanges providing that states would exempt all listed securities.ⁿ¹²⁸ Thus, each state's listed securities exemption remains meaningful for such securities that are not federal covered securities. Particular characteristics and elements of those exemptions that remain in states not adopting the 2002 Uniform Act are discussed below.

[b] Listed Securities--Generally

The states granting a registration exemption for securities listed on stock exchanges use several types of statutory provisions to identify exchanges acceptable for the exemption.

- (1) Exchanges listed in the statute.
- (2) Exchanges (a) listed in the statute and (b) designated by the state administrator in his or her discretion.
- (3) Exchanges (a) listed in the statute and (b) additional exchanges registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 which are designated by the state administrator.
- (4) Exchanges designated by the state administrator in his or her discretion.

The provisions vary. New York, for example, exempts securities listed on all exchanges registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ¹²⁹ Virginia grants an exemption to any security quoted on an automated quotation system operated by a national securities association registered with the SEC and approved by the State Corporation Commission.ⁿ¹³⁰ Florida offers a transactional exemption for securities sold by a registered dealer when the price is reasonably related to the current market price of the securities and they appear in any list of securities dealt in on any stock exchange registered under the 1934 Act.ⁿ¹³¹ In California, the exemption is available for:

Any security listed or approved for listing upon notice of issuance on a national securities exchange or designated or approved for designation upon notice of issuance as a national market system security on an interdealer quotation system by the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., if the exchange or interdealer quotation system has been certified by rule or order of the commissioner and any warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to the security. ...ⁿ¹³²

However, California specifies in detail the criteria upon which the certification of an exchange may be made.ⁿ¹³³

The question sometimes arises as to when the exemption is effective. There is no doubt that securities, once fully listed on appropriate exchanges, are entitled to exemption; the individual state enactments are clear on this point. Most states, however, are more flexible and permit the exemption when the security is approved for listing upon notice of issuance.ⁿ¹³⁴ This language is the prescribed example of the Uniform Securities Act. Only a few states apply other standards for listings.ⁿ¹³⁵

An important feature of the listed securities exemption is that other securities of the same issuer are often exempt once a class of securities is listed on an acceptable exchange. In virtually every state, securities senior to those listed are granted an exemption.ⁿ¹³⁶ Almost as often, securities of equalⁿ¹³⁷ or substantially equalⁿ¹³⁸ rank are also exempt.ⁿ¹³⁹ Further, it is generally provided that the exemption applies to "any security called for by subscription rights or warrants so listed or approved."ⁿ¹⁴⁰ A few states provide that if any of the corporation's stock is exempt due to listing, then the exemption also applies to evidences of indebtedness of that corporation.ⁿ¹⁴¹ A common extension of the exemption is to allow warrants or rights to purchase or subscribe to any security exempt from registration through stock exchange listing to also be exempt.ⁿ¹⁴²

As already noted, many states authorize their securities administrators to approve stock exchanges for exemption purposes. On occasion, specific statutory standards for approving an exchange are set.ⁿ¹⁴³ Some states provide that an exchange seeking an exemption for its listed securities must make a formal application to the state administrator.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ Many states authorize the administrator to revoke the approval,ⁿ¹⁴⁵ although formal procedures may be required before the revocation is effective.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ The authority to revoke exchange qualification sometimes applies even to the exchanges designated by statute.ⁿ¹⁴⁷

Administrative authority also may be exercised with respect to particular securities listed on prescribed or approved exchanges. This authority is demonstrated by giving the administrator discretionary power to revoke or deny the exemption accorded to particular securities.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ In some states, filings are required before the exemption is effective with respect to particular securities.ⁿ¹⁴⁹

[c] OTC Margin Stocks

Although not exchange listed securities falling within the specific listing exemptions in Blue Sky laws, some states provide another category of exemption for securities traded in the over-the-counter that qualify as OTC Margin Stocks by the Federal Reserve Board. Thus in Illinois, for example, an exemption is provided for:

Any security appearing on the list of OTC Margin Stocks published by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System or any security incorporated by reference into the List of OTC Margin Stocks by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; any other securities of the same issuer which are of senior or substantially equal rank; any securities called for by subscription rights or warrants so listed or approved; or any warrants or rights to purchase or subscribe to any of the foregoing.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

The power to regulate margin or credit terms under which equity securities may be sold is vested in the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. The Board's authority extends to securities listed on national securities exchanges and to those not so listed. Actively traded stocks not listed on an exchange are generally said to be part of the "over-the-counter market (OTC)."ⁿ¹⁵¹

The Board's statutory authority is exercised through Regulation T.ⁿ¹⁵² Among its other provisions, Regulation T requires the Board to release, from time to time, a list of over-the-counter (OTC) margin stocks meeting specified standards.ⁿ¹⁵³ Basically, OTC margin stock is not listed on a national securities exchange, but has what the Board determines to be sufficient trading interest to subject the stock to the Board's margin requirements.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

Although the standards spelled out in Regulation T are beyond the scope of this chapter, awareness of the existence of the list of OTC margin stock is important. Various states, such as Connecticut, Illinois,ⁿ¹⁵⁵ New Hampshire,ⁿ¹⁵⁶ and Pennsylvaniaⁿ¹⁵⁷ have provisions authorizing an exemption from state registration for securities satisfying certain requirements of Regulation T.

[d] Foreign Exchange Listed Securities

Some states provide an exemption for securities listed on foreign exchanges. California, for instance, provides a transactional exemptionⁿ¹⁵⁸ from qualification when the transaction in a foreign exchange listed is not directly or indirectly for the benefit of the issuer of the security.ⁿ¹⁵⁹ The exemption has been granted under a rule of the Commissioner of Corporations when one of specified conditions have been met, such as the requirement that the issuer is currently subject to reporting requirements under section 15(d) of the 1934 Act or the security appears in the most recent Federal Reserve Board List of Foreign Margin Stocks.ⁿ¹⁶⁰

[6] The "Blue Chip" Exemption

In 1977, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) recommended the creation of a "Blue Chip" exemption from registration to replace the common exemption for securities listed on stock exchanges. NASAA reasoned that the listing of a security on one or more national exchanges was an imprecise test of whether the securities were of such quality that registration was unnecessary for the protection of investors.ⁿ¹⁶¹ Rather, an exemption should be based on those characteristics of the issuer and its securities that are valid indicators of such quality.

The characteristics of the "Blue Chip" security and its issuer, as identified by NASAA, may be summarized as follows:

- (1) A class of the issuer's securities must be and is registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 for three years preceding the offering date. This requirement is designed to demonstrate an historical availability of information concerning the issuer's securities as well as the issuer's acceptance of the responsibility for making continuous public disclosure.ⁿ¹⁶² Apparently, voluntary registration, which is permitted by § 12 of the Exchange Act, would not satisfy the "must be" requirement.
- (2) There has been no material default by the issuer or a significant subsidiary for seven years in the payment of principal, interest, dividend, sinking fund installment, or rentals with terms of three years or more. This characteristic is intended to provide convincing evidence of an issuer's financial stability. The term "material" refers to a default on indebtedness for borrowed money that exceeded 5% of the total assets of the issuer and its consolidated subsidiaries, a default on a lease under which rental obligations over the unexpired term exceed such percentage, or an arrearage in required dividend payments not cured within 30 days on a class of preferred stock. "Default" as applied to indebtedness for borrowed money refers to "a default, the effect of which is to cause the indebtedness to become due prior to its stated maturity date." Presumably, this would not include a technical default in which the due date clause has not been accelerated. As applied to rentals under leases, "default" refers to a condition which causes termination or re-entry prior to its stated expiration date.ⁿ¹⁶³
- (3) The issuer has had consolidated net income of at least $1 million during four of the last five fiscal years; if the securities are interest bearing, net income, before deduction of income taxes and depreciation, must have been at least one and one-half times the issuer's annual interest expense. The additional earnings test for debt securities is computed before the effect of income taxes and depreciation because interest is paid out of cash flow and before income taxes.ⁿ¹⁶⁴
- (4) The securities, if other than preferred stock, have voting rights. All non-preferred stock being offered must have voting rights at least equal in kind and in proportion to the number of securities of each class outstanding. An exception is provided when an applicable statute requires otherwise.ⁿ¹⁶⁵
- (5) For six months prior to the offering, the securities must have been owned by at least 1200 persons and there must have been 750,000 shares outstanding with an aggregate market value of $3,750,000. Issuers of exempt securities are required to demonstrate a breadth and depth of market involvement sufficient to indicate widespread public awareness of an interest in the issuer. The numerical tests are primarily those required by the Federal Reserve Board for marginable securities.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

The "Blue Chip" exemption was substantially adopted by a third of the states.ⁿ¹⁶⁷ In 1979 NASAA amended the exemption in two respects. First, it added an exemption for the securities of international banks of which the United States is a member.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ A few states added this section to the exemption.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ Second, it provided a special interest coverage test for debt securities of finance companies,ⁿ¹⁷⁰ which was also added by several states.ⁿ¹⁷¹ Under this section, if a finance company has liquid assets of at least 105 percent of its liabilities at the end of its last five fiscal years, the net income requirement is reduced from one and one-half times to one and one-quarter times the issuer's annual interest expense.

Prior to the amendments, securities issued by banks and financial institutions would not have been able to qualify for the exemption, because of the interest coverage test in paragraph (D), which requires net income before income taxes and depreciation of at least 1.5 times the annual interest expense. Many large, highly rated finance companies regularly maintain ratios of less than 1.5 as a result of the high level of borrowings inherent in the business.ⁿ¹⁷²

Finally, NASAA added an optional section,ⁿ¹⁷³ adopted by a few states,ⁿ¹⁷⁴ that reduces the time period during which a default must not have occurred to five years and the annual net earnings requirement to $250,000 for issuers of securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange. The reduced requirements for NYSE issuers are allowed because NYSE listing requirements provide for certain "normative" standards, such as required voting rights and credit committees composed of outside directors, that justify the lower requirements.ⁿ¹⁷⁵

Some states eschewed the complexity of the NASAA form of Blue Chip exemption. In Florida, for example, an exemption is provided for:

A security, other than common stock, providing for a fixed return, which security has been outstanding in the hands of the public for a period of not less than 5 years, and upon which security no default in payment of principal or failure to pay the fixed return has occurred for an immediately preceding period of 5 years.ⁿ¹⁷⁶

And similarly, Ohio exempts:

(1) Any securities outstanding for a period of not less than five years, on which there has occurred no default in payment of principal, interest, or dividend or distribution for the five years immediately preceding the sale, are exempt.

(2) For the purpose of division (J) of this section, the dividend, distribution, or interest rate on securities in which no such rate is specified shall be at the rate of at least four per cent annually on the aggregate of the price at which such securities are to be sold.ⁿ¹⁷⁷

More than half the states that adopted the "blue chip" exemption also retained the exemption for exchange-listed securities, which the former was intended to replace.ⁿ¹⁷⁸ These retained exemptions are, of course, today in large part rendered meaningless by NSMIA, which makes most listed into federal covered securities.

The Revised Uniform Securities Act contained a "blue chip" exemption for mutual funds and unit trusts (investment companies) conditioned on the experience of the investment advisor or sponsor. The exemption is provided when: (1) the fund's investment advisor has been registered with the SEC and has advised SEC-registered funds for at least three years; or (2) the trust's sponsor has sponsored SEC-registered trusts with assets in excess of $100 million for at least three years.ⁿ¹⁷⁹ About a quarter of the states amended their Blue Sky laws to provide this exemption.ⁿ¹⁸⁰ But here again, NSMIA operates to make securities registered under the federal Investment Company Act of 1940 into federal covered securities,ⁿ¹⁸¹ such that the state exemption extending to mutual funds is now superfluous.

There is no "Blue Chip" exemption in section 3 of the federal Securities Act, and thus no federal covered securities are involved when considering the state exemptions on a stand-alone basis. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act contains no "Blue Chip" securities exemption. It does, however, include several non-issuer exemptions that are based on "Blue Chip" criteria.ⁿ¹⁸²

[7] World Class Securities

Much as with the quality characteristics of securities qualifying for "Blue Chip" exemptions from registration under Blue Sky laws, an exemption for "world class" securities has been adopted by rule in several states. Many large, multinational corporations domiciled outside of the United States cannot take advantage of exemptions from registration under Blue Sky laws because their securities are not listed on a United States stock exchange, or they are not reporting companies to the SEC. In order to provide large multi-national corporations that do not have securities listed on a United States securities exchange with an exemption from the registration provisions of Blue Sky laws, to provide parity with securities of large United States corporations whose securities qualify for exemption under listed securities or Blue Chip exemptions, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) in September 1996 promulgated a "World Class Foreign Issuer Exemption."

Whether referenced as a "world class foreign issuer exemption," or simply as a world class securities exemption, this exemption provides an exemption from registration requirements for securities of a qualifying foreign issuer, as follows:

- (A) Equity securities except options, warrants, preferred stock, subscription rights, securities convertible into equity securities or any right to subscribe to or purchase such options, warrants, convertible securities, or preferred stock;
- (B) Units consisting of equity securities permitted by (A) and warrants to purchase the same equity security being offered in the unit;
- (C) Non-convertible debt securities that are rated in one of the four highest rating categories of Standard & Poor's, Moody's, Dominion Bond Rating Services of Canadian Bond Rating Services or such other rating organization which the Administrator by rule or order may designate. For purposes of this subparagraph, non-convertible debt securities means securities that cannot be converted for at least one year from the date of issuance and then only into equity shares of the issuer or its parent; or
- (D) American Depositary receipt representing securities described in (A), (B), or (C).ⁿ¹⁸³

The foreign issuer of such world class securities must meet certain qualifications, as follows:

- (A) The issuer must not be organized under the laws of the United States, or of any state, territory or possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia or Puerto Rico;
- (B) The issuer, at the time an offer or sale is made, has been a going concern engaged in continuous business operations for the immediate past five years, and during that period has not been the subject of a proceeding relating to insolvency, bankruptcy, involuntary administration, receivership or similar proceeding;
- (C) The issuer, at the time an offer or sale is made, has public float of at least US $1 billion or more;
- (D) The market value of the issuer's equity shares, at the time an offer or sale is made, is US $3 billion or more; and

(E) The issuer, at the time an offer or sale is made, has a class of equity securities listed for trading on or through the facilities of a foreign securities exchange or recognized foreign securities market designated by SEC rule.ⁿ¹⁸⁴

Where adopted, the world class securities exemption is self-executing. There are no filing requirements. As a practical matter, this exemption has not been widely adopted, and for that reason it has limited utility for a qualifying issuer.

[8] Securities of Nonprofit Organizations

Most states exempt the securities of nonprofit organizations from registration if two statutory conditions are met:

- (1) The organization and operation must be on a not for private profit basis, and
- (2) The organization and operation must be for the specific purposes set forth in the statute.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

Securities of nonprofit organizations, although also exempted by § 3(a) of the Securities Act of 1933, are not federal covered securities, and are not pre-empted from state regulation under NSMIA.ⁿ¹⁸⁶

The exemption is typically represented by the original Uniform Securities Act which provides the exemption for:

any security issued by any person organized and operated not for private profit but exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, charitable, fraternal, social, athletic, or reformatory purposes, or as a chamber of commerce or trade or professional association ... ⁿ¹⁸⁷

This provision has been enacted in a number of states, and is carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act in much the same form.ⁿ¹⁸⁸ Statutory provisions which differ substantially from the Uniform Act usually impose additional or alternate conditions for exemption availability.ⁿ¹⁸⁹ States may require that the nonprofit institution be a corporationⁿ¹⁹⁰ or that it be organized under the laws of the state in which the exemption is sought. The purposes of organization and operation may differ in some respects from those under the Uniform Act.ⁿ¹⁹¹ It should be noted that a few states deny the exemption to evidences of indebtednessⁿ¹⁹² and to securities made liens upon revenue producing property subject to taxation.ⁿ¹⁹³

Even though securities of eligible nonprofit corporations need not be registered, a number of states require that organizations seeking exemption make a filing disclosing the terms and risks of the offering.ⁿ¹⁹⁴ In North Dakota, for example, the exemption involves a filing and approval process in which the required submission to the administrator includes:

- The Nonprofit Organization Claim of Exemption--Form NP;
- Proof of current tax status under the Internal Revenue Code;
- An Offering disclosure document; and
- Consent to Service of Process--Form U-2.ⁿ¹⁹⁵

In most states where a filing is required, and in some in which it is not, the nonprofit exemption is a permissive exemption, meaning that the securities administrator, in his or her discretion, may deny the exemption to any particular security.ⁿ¹⁹⁶ The construct of the exemption in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act encompasses all elements of the common approach in exempting:

[A] security issued by a person organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, social, athletic, or reformatory purposes, or as a chamber of commerce, and not for pecuniary profit, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of a private stockholder or other person, or a security of a company that is excluded from the definition of an investment company ... except that with respect to the offer or sale of a note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness issued by such person, a rule may be adopted under this [Act] limiting the availability of this exemption by classifying securities, persons, and transactions, imposing different requirements for different classes, specifying with respect to paragraph (B) the scope of the exemption and the grounds for denial or suspension, and requiring an issuer:

(A) to file a notice specifying the material terms of the proposed offer or sale and copies of any proposed sales and advertising literature to be used and provide that the exemption becomes effective if the administrator does not disallow the exemption within the period established by the rule;

(B) to file a request for exemption authorization for which a rule under this [Act] may specify the scope of the exemption, the requirement of an offering statement, the filing of sales and advertising literature, the filing of consent to service of process complying with Section 611, and grounds for denial or suspension of the exemption; or

(C) to register under Section 304.

As the drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act observed, the nonprofit exemption is of particular concern to state securities administrators.ⁿ¹⁹⁷ The concern is fueled in large part by the proliferation of religious scams and the prevalence of affinity fraud. Reflecting different times, the original Uniform Securities Act made no provision for administrative review, and left the non-profit exemption as self-executing. That remains the case in a significant number of states. It is certain, however, that the exemption is intended to apply only to securities of those organizations which are exclusively organized for one of the purposes identified in the statute, and which for the most part will qualify under section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.ⁿ¹⁹⁸

[9] Commercial Paper

Prior to NSMIA, Blue Sky laws in all states contained an exemption from registration requirements for securities loosely referred to as commercial paper. NSMIA preempted state regulatory authority in the area, however, to the extent that "commercial paper" is exempt under section 3(a)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933, thus making such securities federal "covered securities."ⁿ¹⁹⁹ States that have not adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act now provide a blanket exemption from registration and qualification requirements for federal covered securities. Nevertheless, those states also retain their specific commercial paper securities exemptions. Nearly all such exemptions were based on § 402(a)(10) of the Uniform Securities Act. Thus in Maryland, for example, the exemption is available for:

Any commercial paper which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine of the date of issuance, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal of such paper which is likewise limited, or any guarantee of such paper or of any such renewal.ⁿ²⁰⁰

The Uniform Act exemption was patterned on the comparable provision contained in § 3(a)(3) of the federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ²⁰¹ The provisions of both acts contemplate an exemption for "short-term paper of the type available for discount at a Federal Reserve Bank and of a type which is rarely bought by private investors."ⁿ²⁰² In simplest terms, the federal exemption covers only "prime quality negotiable commercial paper."ⁿ²⁰³ Although the intended scope of the exemption was to be so limited, in practice there was a considerable potential for abuse given the fact that on its face the exemption applied to any commercial paper meeting the nine month maturity criterion. Moreover, on the face of the exemption there was no limitation on the scope of an offering of such securities, thus leaving open the prospect of an effective public offering of nine month promissory notes or other debt securities without any protection of blue sky registration or qualification. Many states, therefore made the intended scope of the exemption clear either by qualifying the exemption itself or by adopting a rule, order or policy statement making clear that the exemption is intended to apply only to prime quality negotiable paper not of a type ordinarily purchased by the general public, and that it is not available for offerings to the general public.ⁿ²⁰⁴

Some states opted for a different approach designed to identify more specifically the intended scope of the exemption. In 1985 the Revised Uniform Securities Act restated the exemption as applying to:

[A] promissory note, draft, bill of exchange, or banker's acceptance that evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months after the date of issuance, exclusive of days of grace, is issued in denominations at least $50,000, and receives a rating in one of the three highest rating categories from a nationally recognized statistical rating organization; or a renewal of such an obligation that is likewise limited, or a guarantee of such an obligation or of a renewal ...ⁿ²⁰⁵ Variations on this approach include a minimum aggregate amount sold to any one purchaser, and requiring that the commercial paper be sold through a registered broker-dealer or otherwise to a financial institution whose securities are exempt.

For all cases it is safe to generalize, however, that for the Blue Sky commercial paper exemption to apply:

- (1) The commercial paper must be of the type eligible for discount at a Federal Reserve Bank;ⁿ²⁰⁶ and
- (2) The offer and sale of the securities to the general public is either restricted or prohibited.

That being the case, it is at once apparent that state Blue Sky law exemptions for commercial paper based on the original Uniform Act provision, and in any iteration since, are coextensive with the federal exemption and thus no longer meaningful to the extent that NSMIA federal covered securities are involved by application of the federal exemption. Other than states that have adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, which contains no commercial paper exemption, the exemption remains in Blue Sky laws. It is meaningful to the extent that a particular state exemption is broader than the federal counterpart, such that the subject security is not a federal covered security. It is for that reason that after enactment of NSMIA states were encouraged by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) to modify, but not to repeal, their existing exemptions.ⁿ²⁰⁷ No significant modifications have been made, however.

As a practical matter, in the intended sphere of application--prime quality commercial paper eligible for discounting by Federal Reserve Banks and not of the type ordinarily purchased by the general public--there is no doubt after NSMIA that a state exemption (and any qualifications that may be attached to it) is no longer meaningful. Antifraud protections of Blue Sky laws remain fully in place in any case, but the availability of an exemption from state registration or qualification requirements is no longer in question when these federal covered securities are present.

It is also true that state commercial paper exemptions are, in practical terms, no broader than the federal section 3(a)(3) exemption. However worded, their actual applications have been limited to the same securities intended to be covered by the federal exemption. The important question going forward, then, will not be whether a state exemption will be available for a security that is deemed not to be a federal covered security, but rather whether any exemption is available in the first place. NSMIA did not alter eligibility analysis at either the state or federal level. By leaving their commercial paper exemptions and interpretive rules or positions in place states maintain the essential premises for determining whether an exemption will be available. In the exercise of their jurisdiction regarding "commercial paper" and the many variations of debt instruments for which the label is sought to be attached, state administrators must make the same determination as always whether a particular security is in fact within the scope of the exemption. The determination now is whether the security is a federal covered security; but in making it the analysis will be the same as before.

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act eliminated any commercial paper exemption, thus fully reflecting NSMIA preemption. One of the states adopting it, however, elected to retain the commercial paper exemption, and also to retain its rule limiting application of the exemption to prime quality negotiable commercial paper.ⁿ²⁰⁸ In the last decade state securities administrators have faced widespread fraud and abuse in the offer and sale of nine month promissory notes and other high risk debt securities to public investors in attempted reliance on commercial paper exemptions. Although it should be clear that these securities bear no relation to the instruments intended to be covered by state exemptions, and now to be federal covered securities by reason of applying the federal section 3(a)(3) exemption, maintaining the pre-NSMIA regulatory construct at the state level serves to anchor continuing enforcement initiatives.

[10] Employee Benefit Plan Interests

Section 402(a)(11) of the Uniform Securities Act created an exemption from registration provisions under Blue Sky laws for:

[A]ny investment contract issued in connection with an employees' stock purchase, savings, pension, profit-sharing, or similar benefit plan if the Administrator is notified in writing thirty days before the inception of the plan or, with respect to plans which are in effect on the effective date of this act, within sixty days thereafter (or within thirty days before they are reopened if they are closed on the effective date of this act).ⁿ²⁰⁹

At the federal level, section 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ²¹⁰ provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for qualifying employee benefit plan securities. It further directs the SEC to exempt, by rules, regulations or on order consistent with the protection of investors, any interest or participation issued in connection with a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan which covers employees some or all of whom are employees within the meaning of section 401(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code. Pursuant to this authority the SEC adopted Rule 701 under the Act.ⁿ²¹¹ The rule creates a transactional safe harbor for securities issued in compensatory circumstances, and is available to any issuer that is not subject to the reporting requirements of sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and is not an investment company registered or required to be registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940. The Rule 701 safe harbor exempts offers and sales of securities under a written compensatory benefit plan established by the issuer for the participation of employees, directors, partners, officers and others when several requirements and limitations are met. There are limitations on the amount of securities that may be sold, as well as requirements for disclosure.

In addition to, or in some cases instead of, providing an exemption for employee benefit plans, a number of states adopted a transaction exemption specifically incorporating SEC Rule 701.ⁿ²¹² After NSMIA, however, securities exempt under § 3(a)(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 are federal covered securities,ⁿ²¹³ and thus preempted from state registration or qualification requirements (although as with all federal covered securities state Blue Sky antifraud provisions continue to apply). The 2002 Uniform Securities Act accordingly eliminated an exemption for benefit plan securities. The 2002 Uniform Act does, however, include a transaction exemption for:

[E]mployees' stock purchase, savings, option, profit-sharing, pension, or similar employees' benefit plan, including any securities, plan interests, and guarantees issued under a compensatory benefit plan or compensation contract, contained in a record, established by the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parent for the participation of their employees including offers or sales of such securities to:

(A) directors, general partners, trustees, if the issuer is a business trust; officers, consultants; and advisors;

(B) family members who acquire such securities from those persons through gifts or domestic relations orders;

(C) former employees, directors, general partners, trustees, officers, consultants, and advisors if those individuals were employed by or providing services to the issuer when the securities were offered; and

(D) insurance agents who are exclusive insurance agents of the issuer, or the issuer's subsidiaries or parents, or who derive more than 50% of their annual income from those organizations.ⁿ²¹⁴

In one form or another, however, the exemption is still in place in the remaining states. To the extent that any state exemption is broader than the federal exemption under section 3(a)(2) of the federal act, that state exemption remains meaningful. As a practical matter, however, the scope of state exemptions for employee benefit plan securities has been uniformly coextensive with the federal exemption, and it is unlikely that a particular state exemption would be seen as offering any greater coverage.

The wording of a particular state exemption relating to employee benefit plans may have significance in determining whether the exemption encompasses securities that are not federal covered securities. For example, in one state adopting the Uniform Act provision, Delaware,ⁿ²¹⁵ the exemption was seen as exempting investment contracts, but not necessarily certificates of interest in or participation in a profit sharing agreement. To overcome this apparent conflict, the state's Securities Commissioner issued an interpretative rulingⁿ²¹⁶ declaring that a certificate of interest in or participation in a profit sharing agreement is included within the scope of an investment contract.ⁿ²¹⁷ The conclusion reached was that an employee benefit plan in the nature of a certificate of interest in or participation in a profit sharing plan was within that exemption provision.ⁿ²¹⁸ The federal section 3(a)(2) exemption is for "any security" meeting the benefit plan criteria, and the federal definition of security encompasses investment contracts as well as certificates of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement. Thus, the interpretation in Delaware or any other state adopting the Uniform Act language that the Blue Sky exemption extends beyond just "investment contracts" does not make the exemption more expansive than that provided by federal law.

Although employee benefit plan interests are federal covered securities, NSMIA preserved state authority to impose notice filing requirements for federal covered securities generally. States that previously required a filing in connection with their benefit plan securities exemption may continue to do so after NSMIA, but only to the extent of a notice filing. No precondition on the availability of the exemption may be imposed.

[11] Securities of Cooperative Associations

The original Uniform Securities Act did not contain a specific provision exempting the securities of cooperative associations. At the time the Act was written, however, at least eighteen states had some provision for exempting securities issued by cooperatives.ⁿ²¹⁹ Those provisions, as well as the statutes generally governing the organization and operation of cooperatives, were so varied that the drafters of the Uniform Act deemed it impracticable to recommend a single provision exempting cooperative securities.ⁿ²²⁰ It was the drafters' position that if such an exemption was desired, it should be included.ⁿ²²¹ However, in adopting the Revised Uniform Securities Act, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws included an exemption for such securities. Section 401(b)(13) of the Revised Uniform Act exempts "a membership or equity interest in, or a retention certificate or like security given in lieu of a cash patronage dividend issued by, a cooperative organized and operated as a nonprofit membership cooperative under the cooperative laws of any state if not traded to the public."ⁿ²²²

The fact that a uniform provision was not originally included is reflected in the divergent cooperative exemptions which have been adopted. No two provisions are alike; even similarities in drafting are rare.ⁿ²²³ If any pattern is to be found it is because a number of states apply the exemption to agricultural or similar cooperativesⁿ²²⁴ and/or require the association to be organized in the state in which the exemption is sought.ⁿ²²⁵ Filings are required for exemption availability in some states; in others, the exemption is permissive. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act adopts the most common provision regarding cooperatives, and exempts:

[A] member's or owners interest in, or a retention certificate or like security given in lieu of a cash patronage dividend issued by, a cooperative organized and operated as a nonprofit membership cooperative under the cooperative laws of a State, but not a member's or owner's interest, retention certificate, or like security sold to persons other than bona fide members of the cooperative.n226

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Securities Act section 18(c)(1), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(c)(1) (2000), provides:

Fraud Authority--Consistent with this section, the securities commission (or any agency or office performing like functions) of any State shall retain jurisdiction under the laws of such State to investigate and bring enforcement actions with respect to fraud or deceit, or unlawful conduct by a broker-dealer, in connection with securities or securities transactions.

(n2)Footnote 2. See People v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 154 Cal. App. 4th 627, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130 (2007) ; Capital Research & Management Co. v. Brown, 147 Cal. App. 4th 58, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 (2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(a):

Any security (including a revenue obligation) issued or guaranteed by the United States, any state, any city, county, city and county, public district, public authority, public corporation, public entity or political subdivision of a state or any agency or corporate or other instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing.

See also Illinois: Ill. Cons. Stat. § 5/3; Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(a)(1). Section 201(1) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act encompasses the same securities and somewhat broader categories with its exemption for:

[A] security, including a revenue obligation or a separate security as defined in Rule 131 (17 C.F.R. 230.131) adopted under the Securities Act of 1933, issued, insured, or guaranteed by the United States; by a State, by a political subdivision of a State; by a public authority, agency, or instrumentality of one or more States; by a political subdivision of one or more states; or by a person controlled or supervised by and acting as an instrumentality of the United States under authority granted by the Congress; or a certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing.

(n4)Footnote 4. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act §§ 401(a)(1)-(2).

The Official Code Comment explained:

The purpose of subsection (a) is to identify the extent of the guaranty or insurance coverage needed in order to be eligible for exempt security status under certain subparagraphs of Section 401(b). ... A partially guaranteed or insured security, e.g., of 75% of the principal, is not eligible for any of the specified exemptions

(n5)Footnote 5. Although non-Uniform Act exemptions will generally reach most of the same type of securities, a question exists with respect to revenue obligations and similar securities. Not all states specifically exempt such securities. Some states will not allow the government security exemption if the issuer or guarantor is in default or has been in default as to principal or interest with respect to an obligation issued by the issuer or its successor unless fully disclosed as required by regulation (other than general obligation bonds). See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:708, which provides an exemption for:

Any security, including a revenue obligation, issued or guaranteed by the United States or any state, any political subdivision of a state, or any agency, authority, public corporation, or other instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing including any underlying or separate security which secures any of the foregoing securities.

However, Louisiana's government exemption does not extend to securities issued pursuant to the Secondary Mortgage Market Enhancement Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-440, 98 Stat. 1689 (1984).

Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann., art. 581-5(M), provides that securities issued or guaranteed by the governmental unit are only exempt when sold by registered dealers or the issuer itself.

(n7)Footnote 7. Section 3(a)(2) of the federal Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(2) (2000), exempts:

Any security issued or guaranteed by the United States or any territory thereof, or by the District of Columbia, or by any State of the United States, or by any political subdivision of a State or territory, or by any public instrumentality of one or more States or territories, or by any person controlled or supervised by and acting as an instrumentality of the Government of the United States pursuant to authority granted by the Congress of the United States; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing (n8)Footnote 8. Investment Bankers Association of America, Fundamentals of Municipal Bonds (1965).

(n9)Footnote 9. Note, Municipal Bonds and the Federal Securities Laws: The Results of Forty Years of Indirect Regulation, 28 Vand. L. Rev. 561 (1975). See also Seamons, Q.F. and D. Sheaffer, Jr., Emerging Disclosure Issues for Municipal Securities, 24 Sec. Reg. L.J. 392 (1997); J. Funk & P. Poe, Applicability of State Securities Laws to Securities Issued by Governmental Entities, 43 Bus. Law 433, 436 (1987).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(a).

See also North Dakota's provision which allows the exemption for governmental securities "payable from assessments for improvements or revenues of publicly owned utilities" N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(B).

(n12)Footnote 12. Id. The exemption applies only:

[I]f the issuer or guarantor has the power of taxation or assessment for the purpose of paying the obligation represented by the security, or is in specific terms empowered by the laws of the state of issuance to issue securities payable as to principal or interest, or as to both, out of revenues collected or administered by such issuer

(n13)Footnote 13. Op. Att'y Gen. 062-90 (1962).

(n14)Footnote 14. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(1), as amended, provides:

[T]his exemption does not include a security payable solely from revenues to be received from a non-governmental industrial or commercial enterprise unless the payments are insured or guaranteed by a person whose securities are exempt from registration under paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), (7), (9), or (13) or the revenues from which the payments are to be made are a direct obligation of such a person

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-104(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421B:17I(a) ("but this exemption shall not include any industrial development bond or any industrial revenue bond").

(n17)Footnote 17. Tex. Admin. Code tit. 7 §§ 135.3, 135.4.

(n18)Footnote 18. The provision exempting the securities requires a filing if obligations are not payable out of general tax proceeds. See Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(B). In addition, Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(K) provides an exemption for industrial development bonds issued pursuant to Ohio law.

(n19)Footnote 19. N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5).

(n20)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(2). This provision is reproduced at Ch.8, infra.

(n21)Footnote 21. 64 Pa. Code § 202.010.

(n22)Footnote 22. The local development corporation might be formed by a municipality seeking to draw new business or industry to its jurisdiction. The money raised by the public company is actually for private use. The advantage to the industry is that the bonds will be tax free since they are issued by an arm of the municipality. This makes them easier to sell and provides a lower rate of interest to be paid by the private business.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(13), which exempts:

Any offer or sale by a domestic corporation of its own securities if (i) the corporation was organized for the purpose of promoting community, agricultural or industrial development of the area in which the principal office is located, (ii) the offer or sale has been approved by resolution of the county commissioners of the county in which its principal office is located, and, if located in a municipality or within two miles of the boundaries thereof, by resolution of the governing body of such municipality, and (iii) no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting any prospective buyer in this State

In Ohio, an exemption is provided for bonds issued by a Port Authority organized under Ohio law. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(K). In the above states, except Ohio, the exemption is for the transaction and applies only to the sale of the security by the issuer. The Ohio exemption is for the security itself and applies to all sales of such security.

(n24)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 681 (2000).

(n25)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 683 (2000). See also § 3(c) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77c (2000) (giving SEC discretion to exempt small business investment company securities).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(10).

(n27)Footnote 27. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(2).

(n28)Footnote 28. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(2). As noted below, foreign governmental securities are not federal covered securities under NSMIA. However, there may be certain transactional exemptions for these securities. See Chs. 8 and 9 infra.

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g., N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(2); Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(a)(2).

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(b):

Any security issued or guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada, any Canadian province, any political subdivision or municipality of any such province, or by any other foreign government with which the United States currently maintains diplomatic relations, if the security is recognized as a valid obligation by the issuer or guarantor; or any certificate of deposit for any of the foregoing.

See also Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(a)(2), exempting:

[A]ny security other than a revenue obligation issued or guaranteed by Canada, any Canadian province, any political subdivision of any such province, any agency or corporate or other instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing, or any other foreign government with which the United States currently maintains diplomatic relations if the security is recognized as a valid obligation by the issuer or guarantor

In Ohio, Canada is given special treatment only with respect to corporations and governmental agencies created under the laws of the Dominion. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(C).

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(2):

Any security issued or guaranteed by any foreign government with which the United States is maintaining diplomatic relations at the time of the sale or offer of sale of the security, or by any state, province or political subdivision thereof having the power of taxation or assessment, which security is recognized at the time it is offered for sale in this state as a valid obligation by such foreign government or by such state, province or political subdivision thereof issuing the security.

See also Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(B)(1):

The following securities are exempt, if the issuer or guarantor has the power of taxation or assessment for the purpose of paying the obligation represented by the security, or is in specific terms empowered by the laws of the state of issuance to issue securities payable as to principal or interest, or as to both, out of revenues collected or administered by such issuer:

* * *

Any security issued or guaranteed by, and recognized, at the time of sale, as its valid obligation by, any foreign government with which the United States is, at the time of sale, maintaining diplomatic relations;

Any security issued or guaranteed, and recognized as its valid obligation, by any political subdivision or any governmental or other public body, corporation, or agency in or of the United States, any state, territory, or possession of the United States, or any foreign government with which the United States is, at the time of sale, maintaining diplomatic relations.

(n32)Footnote 32. That is not always the case. In Arizona, for example, the state exemption for foreign government securities does not apply unless the securities are registered under the federal Securities Act. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843(9):

Securities issued or guaranteed by any foreign government with which the United States is at the time of the sale maintaining diplomatic relations, or securities issued or guaranteed by a political subdivision of such foreign government having the power of taxation, if none of the securities of the foreign government or political subdivision are in default either as to principal or interest, and which securities when offered for sale in this state are acknowledged as valid obligations by the foreign government or political subdivision and registered under the Securities Act of 1933.

(n33)Footnote 33. Section 201(2) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is representative of the full breadth of state security exemptions for foreign government securities in providing an exemption for:

[A] security issued, insured, or guaranteed by a foreign government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations, or any of its political subdivisions, if the security is recognized as a valid obligation of the issuer, insurer, or guarantor.

(n34)Footnote 34. The most useful definition of "depository institution" today is that provided in states which have adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, in which section 102(5) provides in pertinent part that "depository institution" means:

(A) a bank; or

(B) a savings institution, trust company, credit union, or similar institution that is organized or chartered under the laws of a State or of the United States, authorized to receive deposits, and supervised and examined by an official or agency of a State or the United States if its deposits or share accounts are insured to the maximum amount authorized by statute by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, or a successor authorized by federal law

2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(5).

(n35)Footnote 35. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(3); L. Loss & E. Cowett, Blue Sky Law 355 (1958).

In general, it is control over the institution issuing the securities that is the basis of the exemption, not control over the securities themselves. See State ex rel. Holloway v. First American B. & T. Co., 186 N.W.2d 573 (N.D. Supp. 1971) .

(n36)Footnote 36. Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114-(a)(iii): "[A]ny security issued by a state or national bank authorized to do business in the state. ..."

(n37)Footnote 37. Va. Code Ann. § 13-1-514(a)(3):

Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, or any national bank, or any bank or trust company organized under the laws of any state

(n38)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(2) (2000).

(n39)Footnote 39. For purposes of section 3(a)(2), a security issued or guaranteed by a bank does not include any interest or participation in any collective trust fund maintained by a bank. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(2) (2000).

A branch or agency of a foreign bank located in the United States is deemed to be a national bank or a banking institution organized under the laws of any state, territory, or the District of Columbia for purposes of the section 3(a)(2) exemption provided that there is substantially equivalent regulation. Sec. Act Rel. No. 33-6661, 1986 SEC LEXIS 729 (Sept. 23, 1986) .

(n40)Footnote 40. See, e.g., Capital Funds, Inc. v. SEC, 348 F.2d 582 (8th Cir. 1965) . The fact that a lending institution performed some banking functions and was subject to supervision by the state banking commissioner did not entitle it to the section 3(a)(2) exemption. The institution was incorporated under a state statute that created a clear distinction between industrial loan companies and banks, and prohibited the former from using the word "bank" in their names.

(n41)Footnote 41. Frontier Gas Storage Co., 1981 SEC No-Act LEXIS 2797 (Jan. 5, 1981).

(n42)Footnote 42. See American Bankers Club, Inc., 1980 SEC No-Act LEXIS 3427 (June 26, 1980).

(n43)Footnote 43. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(3)(A).

(n44)Footnote 44. As defined in section 101(14) of the 2002 Uniform Act, international banking institution means "an international financial institution of which the United States is a member and whose securities are exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933."

(n45)Footnote 45. For example, securities issued or guaranteed by savings institutions are not specifically included in the statutory exemption language in Ohio, Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(c) or Washington, Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.310(3).

(n46)Footnote 46. For instance, securities issued or guaranteed by trust companies are not specifically included in the statutory exemption language in Ohio, Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(c); see also Pennsylvania, Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 202(b); and Texas, Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-5(L) (transactional exemption).

(n47)Footnote 47. Ohio, for example, has a definition of "bank" which specifically includes trust companies and savings associations. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(O) provides:

"Bank" means any bank, trust company, savings and loan association, or savings bank, that is incorporated or organized under the laws of the United States, any state of the United States, Canada or any province of Canada, and that is subject to regulation or supervision by that country, state, or province.

(n48)Footnote 48. Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1843(2).

(n49)Footnote 49. Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1843(3).

Pennsylvania provides an exemption for "Any security issued or guaranteed by any bank or savings association ... ," and broadly defines "bank":

"Bank" means any bank, banking and trust company, savings bank, trust company or private bank ... or any savings and loan association ... or any successor statutes thereto, or any banking institution, trust company or savings and loan institution organized under the laws of the United States, or of any state, territory or the District of Columbia, or a receiver, conservator or other liquidating agent of any of the foregoing.

70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(d).

(n50)Footnote 50. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(5) (2000).

(n51)Footnote 51. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(5) (2000).

(n52)Footnote 52. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(5) (2000).

(n53)Footnote 53. 49 N.J. Stat. § 3-50(3)(a)(3).

(n54)Footnote 54. Section 402(a)(4) of the Uniform Act provides the exemption for:

[A]ny security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any federal savings and loan association, or any building and loan or similar association organized under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state.

(n55)Footnote 55. 49 N.J. Stat. § 3-50(3)(a)(4). Savings institution for purposes of the New Jersey exemption means any savings and loan association or building and loan association operating pursuant to the "Savings and Loan Act (1963)," and any federal savings and loan association and any association or credit union organized under the laws of the United States or of any state whose accounts are insured by a federal corporation or agency.

(n56)Footnote 56. 12 U.S.C. §§ 1461 et seq.

(n57)Footnote 57. See 12 U.S.C. § 1464(a) (2000):

In order to provide thrift institutions for the deposit of funds and for the extension of credit for homes and other goods and services, the Director is authorized ... to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, operation, and regulation of associations to be known as Federal savings associations

In response to the collapse of the thrift industry during the 1980s, Congress enacted The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989, Pub. L. No. 101-73, 103 Stat. 183 ("FIRREA"). Among other actions, FIRREA abolished the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC"). Accordingly, any reference to the FSLIC in Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(3) or in analogous state provisions setting forth exemptions for Federal savings associations will refer to "a successor to an applicable agency authorized by federal law." See Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(3). See also Felsenfeld, The Savings and Loan Crisis, 59 Fordham L. Rev. 87 (1991).

(n58)Footnote 58. See, e.g., Cal. Fin. L. §§ 5000 et seq.; Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 665.012 et seq.; N.Y. Bank. L. §§ 375 et seq.

(n59)Footnote 59. See Louisville Gas & E. Co. v. Coleman, 277 U.S. 32, 48 S. Ct. 423, 72 L. Ed. 770 (1928) (interpreting Kentucky law); SEC v. American International S. & L. Ass'n, 199 F. Supp. 341 (D. Md. 1961) (interpreting Maryland Law).

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-401(3); Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9 § 4203a(3).

Other states have retained the language of Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(4), exempting securities of any federal savings and loan or building and loan associations authorized to do business in that state. See, e.g., Mass. Gen. L. Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(a)(4).

(n61)Footnote 61. Blue Sky laws do not necessarily prescribe that savings and loan associations must be subject to control of specific state agencies. However, such agency control may be prescribed by other statutes before authority to do business will be granted. For states that specify state agency control in the context of the securities acts. The states listed below are representative of those which have adopted a provision similar to Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(a)(4), but which differ from the Uniform Act with respect to a provision other than the one allowing exemption for securities of a foreign state building and loan association when the association is authorized to do business in the state.

Ark. Code Ann. § 23-42-503(a)(4):

Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of any state or federal savings and loan association or any federally insured savings bank, or any building and loan or similar association organized under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state

Note that the words "or guaranteed by" used in the Uniform Act provision are omitted from the Arkansas provision.

Del. Code Ann. tit. 6 § 7309(a)(4):

Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any federal savings and loan association, or any building and loan association organized and supervised under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state

The words "or similar association," which were used in the Uniform Act, are omitted from the Delaware provision.

(n62)Footnote 62. Both Ohio and Pennsylvania include savings and loan associations within the statutory definition of "bank", and exempt the securities when the bank is organized in other states.

Pennsylvania also has a regulation on the meaning of "savings and loan institution." See 64 Pa. Code § 102.041(b):

For the purpose of § 102(d), the term "savings and loan institution" means an institution organized under the applicable State or Federal law: The business of which is substantially confined to the savings association business Examined and supervised as a savings association by the appropriate State or Federal authorities having supervision over an institution. For the purpose of this subsection, the "savings association business" is deemed to be the receipt of deposits from and the making of loans to members of the association. The term "savings and loan institution" does not include a savings and loan holding company or a savings and loan in organization.

(n63)Footnote 63. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(d), (g):

Any security issued or guaranteed by a federal savings and loan association or federal land bank or joint land bank or national farm loan association or by any savings association ... which is subject to the supervision and regulation of the Commissioner of Financial Institutions of this state.

Any mutual capital certificates or savings accounts, as defined in the Savings Association Law, issued by a savings association as defined by subdivision (a) of Section 5102 of the Financial Code, and holding a license or certificate of authority then in force from the Commissioner of Financial Institutions of this state.

New York exempts securities which are exempt under the Securities Act of 1933 (except for the intrastate offering exemption). N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5). Section 3(a)(5) [15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(5)] of the 1933 act provides that the exemption applies to:

Any security issued (A) by a savings and loan association, building and loan association, cooperative bank, homestead association, or similar institution, which is supervised and examined by State or Federal authority having supervision over any such institution; or (B) by (i) a farmer's cooperative organization exempt from tax under section 521 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, (ii) a corporation described in section 501(c)(16) of such Code and exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code, or (iii) a corporation described in section 501(c)(2) of such Code which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code and is organized for the exclusive purpose of holding title to property, collecting income therefrom, and turning over the entire amount thereof, less expenses, to an organization or corporation described in clause (i) or (ii)

See also N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(3): "Securities issued by a building and loan association subject to supervision by an agency of the state of North Dakota"

(n64)Footnote 64. Most states include the exemption for securities of federal savings and loan institutions within the same statutory subsection as the exemption for securities of similar state institutions.

A few states provide for the exemption of the two types of organizations in separate subsections of the exemption section. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843A(2): "Securities issued by a national bank or a bank or credit or loan association organized pursuant to an act of Congress and supervised by the United States or an agency thereof" See also Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.025(3): "A security which represents an interest in or a direct obligation of or is guaranteed by a national bank, federal savings and loan association, federal credit union or federal land bank or joint stock land bank or national farm loan association."

(n65)Footnote 65. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(5): "A security issued or guaranteed by any of the following which are subject to the examination, supervision, or control of this state or of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ... A building or savings and loan association."

See also Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(4) provides: "Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any federal savings and loan association, or by any savings and loan association which is organized under the laws of this Commonwealth"

(n66)Footnote 66. See, e.g., Cal. Fin. Code § 14002:

A credit union is a cooperative, organized for the purpose of promoting thrift and savings among its members and creating a source of credit for them at rates of interest set by the board of directors, and providing an opportunity for them to use and control their own money on a democratic basis in order to improve their economic and social conditions.

(n67)Footnote 67. See Cal. Fin. Code § 14002; Fla. Stat. Ann. § 657.003.

(n68)Footnote 68. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(6).

(n69)Footnote 69. See also Idaho Central Credit Union, 1977 SEC No-Act. LEXIS 286 (Feb. 14, 1977) (a credit union could rely on the section 3(a)(5) federal exemption where the supervision by a state finance department was similar to the supervision of savings and loan associations, and the general purpose and operation of the credit union was to maintain share accounts for members and to make loans to members on approved credit).

(n70)Footnote 70. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(a)(7), which exempts:

[A] security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, an insurance company organized under the laws of a state and authorized to do business in this state; but this exemption does not apply to an annuity contract, investment contract, or similar security under which the promised payments are not fixed in dollars but are substantially dependent upon the investment results of a segregated fund or account invested in securities; except that policies or annuity contracts of insurance companies admitted to do business in the state are not subject to this chapter...

See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(e) ("Any security ... the issuance of which is subject to authorization by the Insurance Commissioner ... of this state."); Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 485-4(5) ("Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any insurance company organized under the laws of any state or territory and authorized to do business in the State")

(n71)Footnote 71. See, e.g., N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(f):

This section shall not be applicable to offerings or sales of securities ... which constitutes an insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or interest or participation therein, whether payable in fixed or variable dollar amounts or both, issued by an institution subject to the supervision of the superintendent of insurance of this state.

(n72)Footnote 72. See Ch. 2, supra. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(16) provides that the definition of security does not include "an insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay a fixed sum of money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period."

For purposes of this discussion it must be assumed that insurance interests are issued by insurance companies. The Uniform Securities Act, and many state statutes, clearly indicates that exclusions and exemptions for the specified insurance interests apply only to bona fide insurance companies. If the wording of these statutes is taken literally, neither exclusions nor exemptions would apply to issuances by persons or entities other than insurance companies. For example, with this qualification in mind, insurance and endowment policies and fixed annuity contracts are excluded from the definition of "security" in the following representative statutes and/or codes:

Cal. Corp. Code § 25019:

"Security" does not include: ... (3) any ... annuity contract under which an insurance company admitted in this state promises to pay a sum of money (whether or not based upon the investment performance of a segregated fund) either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period

Mass. Gen. Laws. Ann. Ch. 110A, § 401(k): "Security does not include any ... annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period."

R.I. Gen. Laws 7-11-101(20)(i): "[Security] does not include: (i) an insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract under which an insurance company promises to pay a fixed sum of money either in a lump sum or periodically for life or some other specified period."

Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-4A:

Provided, however, that this definition shall not apply to any insurance policy, endowment policy, annuity contract, optional annuity contract ... issued by an insurance company subject to the supervision or control of the State Board of Insurance when the form of such policy or contract has been duly filed with the Board

(n73)Footnote 73. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(8).

(n74)Footnote 74. See also Berent v. Kemper Corp., 780 F. Supp. 431 (E.D. Mich. 1991) .

(n75)Footnote 75. Variable annuities differ from fixed annuities in that, rather than promising repayment in dollars upon maturity of the contract, as in a fixed annuity, they provide a liquidation in units of value which fluctuate proportionately to the value of the securities in which the combined unit of such contracts are invested. In SEC v. Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co., 359 U.S. 65, 79 S. Ct. 618, 3 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1959) , the United States Supreme Court held that variable annuities are securities under the Federal Securities Act of 1933. The Court applied investment contract analysis in reaching its conclusion, without regard to the "insurance" aspect of the product.

(n76)Footnote 76. See Unif. Sec. Act § 401(l).

(n77)Footnote 77. Section 402(5) of the Uniform Act created an exemption for any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, an insurance company organized under the laws of any state, but included the optional provision:

[B]ut this exemption does not apply to an annuity contract, investment contract, or similar security under which the promised payments are not fixed in dollars but are substantially dependent upon the investment results of a segregated fund or account invested in securities.

(n78)Footnote 78. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25019; Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-2(26); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-49(m); 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(t); Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-501A.

(n79)Footnote 79. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(e).

(n80)Footnote 80. The original intent of the Uniform Act's drafters was to include variable annuities as securities, but they did provide an alternate provision for states wishing to exclude these interests. § 402(a)(5) exempts:

Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a debt of, or guaranteed by, any insurance company organized under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state, but this exemption does not apply to any annuity contract, investment contract, or similar security under which the promised payments are not fixed in dollars but are substantially dependent upon the investment result of a segregated fund or account invested in securities

See Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(a)(7).

(n81)Footnote 81. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.021(9); N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359ff(5)(f); Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(B).

(n82)Footnote 82. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(10); Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.02(H).

(n83)Footnote 83. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 44-1801(23) and 44-1843A(4) (No exclusionary provision; exemption covers annuity contracts, but not variable annuities specifically); Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 517.021(19); 517.051(10) (No exclusion; exemption covers annuity contracts, but not variable annuities specifically); Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 8-1101(15); 8-1110 (Exclusion provision mentions annuities, but not variable annuities. Even here registration is doubtful since the wording seems to be based on the former Uniform Act provision, but with considerable rephrasing. There is no exemption provision.); Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. arts. 581-4A; 581-56(2) (Exclusion mentions annuities generally, but not specifically variable annuities.)

(n84)Footnote 84. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(4). Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(4), as redesignated and amended in 1985 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws exempts: "Any security issued by and representing an interest in or a direct obligation of, or guaranteed by, any insurance company organized under the laws of any state and authorized to do business in this state" The amendments deleted the optional provision making the exemption inapplicable to variable annuities.

The Official Code Comment provides:

A variable annuity contract ... is a security under [Section 101(b)(16)] ... but would be exempt under this subsection, as are any other securities issued by insurance companies. The result is that the latter securities are not required to be registered under this Act but are subject to the antifraud provisions of Section 501.

(n85)Footnote 85. These Blue Sky laws do not prescribe that the insurer be under control of any specific state agency. However, control by a specific agency may be mandated by other statutes before authority to do business will be granted. See Alaska Stat. § 45.44.900(a)(7); Mass. Gen. L. Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(a)(5).

In North Dakota, the exemption is granted to securities of insurers under the control of any North Dakota state agency. See N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(3).

(n86)Footnote 86. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(e); Idaho Code § 30-1434(1)(e); N.Y. Gen. Bus. § 359-ff(5)(f).

(n87)Footnote 87. State supervision of the issuer must exist. See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(10):

Any insurance or endowment policy or annuity contract or optional annuity contract or self insurance agreement issued by a corporation, insurance company, reciprocal insurer, or risk retention group subject to the supervision of the insurance commissioner or bank commissioner, or any agency or officer performing like functions, of any state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia.

(n88)Footnote 88. The insurance company and the issuance or guaranty of its securities must be regulated by "a state." Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(H).

(n89)Footnote 89. Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. ch. 815 § 5/3M.

(n90)Footnote 90. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann., art. 581-5(c)(2): Sale by or on behalf of any insurance company subject to the supervision or control of the Board of Insurance of any security owned by such company as a legal and bona fide investment, provided that in no event shall any such sale or offering be exempt from the provisions of this Act when made or intended, either directly or indirectly, for the benefit of any other company as that term is defined in this Act.

(n91)Footnote 91. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7).

(n92)Footnote 92. The ICC was abolished and its functions transferred to the Surface Transportation Board ("STB") effective January 1, 1996 by 49 U.S.C. § 702 and the ICC Termination Act of 1995, 109 Stat. 803. Any references to the ICC in federal law or regulation are deemed to refer to the STB. Former § 1130(b)(1), relating to the authority of certain carriers to issued securities, was abrogated by Pub. L. No. 104-88.

(n93)Footnote 93. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7), L. Loss & E. Cowett, Blue Sky Law 358 (1958). See also Official Code Comment to § 401(b)(5), as amended.

(n94)Footnote 94. Note that the statutory provisions of some states refer to exemption when certain state governmental agencies are in a regulatory position. Due to the fact that these provisions do not lend themselves to the type of divisional discussion allowed by states following the Uniform Act, examples of the pertinent regulatory portions of the entire section are set forth below.

Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843A(5):

Securities issued or guaranteed either as to principal, interest or dividend by a railroad or public utility if the issuance of its securities is regulated by an agency of the United States, a state, territory or insular possession thereof, or an agency of the District of Columbia, or an agency of the Dominion of Canada or any province thereof

Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(4):

A security issued or guaranteed either as to principal, interest or dividend by a corporation owning or operating a railroad or any other public service utility; provided, that such corporation is subject to regulation or supervision whether as to its rates and charges or as to the issue of its own securities by a public commission, board or officer of the government of the United States, of any state, territory, or insular possession of the United States, or of any municipality located therein, or of the District of Columbia, or of the Dominion of Canada or of any province thereof

N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. §§ 359-f(1)(d), 359-ff(5)(e). Section 359-ff(5)(e) grants an exemption to securities described in § 359-f(1)(d), which describes the following securities:

Any securities issued or guaranteed by a public service or utility corporation, including a railroad corporation, provided such corporation is subject to regulation or supervision either as to its rates and charges or as to the issue of its own securities by a public commission, board or officer of the government of the United States, or of any territory, or insular possession thereof, or of any state or municipality or other political subdivision thereof, or of the Dominion of Canada, or any province thereof

Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-6(D):

Any security issued or guaranteed either as to principal, interest, or dividend, by a corporation owning or operating a railroad or any other public service utility; provided, that such corporation is subject to regulation or supervision either as to its rates and charges or as to the issue of its own securities by the Railroad Commission of Texas, or by a public commission, agency, board or officers of the Government of the United States, or of any territory or insular possession thereof, or of any state or municipal corporation, or of the District of Columbia, or of the Dominion of Canada, or any province thereof

(n95)Footnote 95. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(6) (2000).

(n96)Footnote 96. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(5)(ii).

(n97)Footnote 97. 15 U.S.C. §§ 79 et seq.

(n98)Footnote 98. See 15 U.S.C. § 79a, which provides, in pertinent part:

(b) Protection of investors and interests of consumers. Upon the basis of facts disclosed by the reports of the Federal Trade Commission ... it is declared that the national public interest, the interest of investors in the securities of holding companies and their subsidiary companies and affiliates, and the interest of consumers of electric energy and natural and manufactured gas, are or may be adversely affected--

(1) when such investors cannot obtain the information necessary to appraise the financial position or earning power of the issuers, because of the absence of uniform standard accounts; when such securities are issued without the approval or consent of the States having jurisdiction over subsidiary public-utility companies; when such securities are issued upon the basis of fictitious or unsound asset values having no fair relation to the sums invested in or the earning capacity of the properties and upon the basis of paper profits from intercompany transactions, or in anticipation of excessive revenues from subsidiary public-utility companies; when such securities are issued by a subsidiary public-utility company under circumstances when subject such company to the burden of supporting an overcapitalized structure and tend to prevent voluntary rate reductions;

(2) when subsidiary public-utility companies are subjected to excessive charges for services, construction work equipment, and materials, or enter into transactions in which evils result from an absence of arm's-length bargaining or from restraint of free and independent competition; when service, management, construction, and other contracts involve the allocation of charges among subsidiary public-utility companies in different States so as to present problems of regulation which cannot be dealt with effectively by the States;

(3) when control of subsidiary public-utility companies affects the accounting practices and rate, dividend, and other policies of such companies so as to complicate and obstruct State regulation of such companies, or when control of such companies is exerted through disproportionately small investment;

(4) when the growth and extension of holding companies bears no relation to economy of management and operation or the integration and coordination of related operating properties; or

(5) when in any other respect there is lack of economy of management and operation of public utility-companies or lack of efficiency and adequacy of service rendered by such companies, or lack of effective public regulation, or lack of economies in the raising of capital.

(c) Declaration of policy of chapter. When abuses of the character above enumerated become persistent and wide spread the holding company becomes an agency which, unless regulated, is injurious to investors, consumers, and the general public; and it is declared to be the policy of this chapter ... to meet the problems and eliminate the evils as enumerated in this section, connected with public-utility holding companies which are engaged in interstate commerce or in activities which directly affect or burden interstate commerce; and for the purpose of effectuating such policy to compel the simplification of public-utility holding-company systems and the elimination therefrom of properties detrimental to the proper functioning of such systems

(n99)Footnote 99. 15 U.S.C. § 79b(a)(7).

(n100)Footnote 100. See 15 U.S.C. § 79u:

Nothing in this chapter shall affect (1) the jurisdiction of the Commission under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended... or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ... over any person, security, or contract, or (2) the rights, obligations, duties, or liabilities of any person under such Acts; nor shall anything in this chapter affect the jurisdiction of any other commission, board, agency, or officer of the United States or of any State or political subdivision of any State, over any person, security, or contract, insofar as such jurisdiction does not conflict with any provision of this chapter or any rule, regulation, or order thereunder.

(n101)Footnote 101. The states below are representative of those that exempt public utilities and their holding companies when the parent is regulated under the Public Utilities Holding Company Act of 1935. Unless otherwise stated, the state statutory provision, with regard to this federal Act, is substantially the same as the Uniform Securities Act provision:

See:

Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(i). California also exempts securities issued under the authorization of the State Public Utilities Commission. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(e).

See also Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. ch. 815 § 5/3E.

N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(7).

(n102)Footnote 102. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843A(5); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(4).

(n103)Footnote 103. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(5)(iii), as amended. See n.1 supra.

(n104)Footnote 104. See Alaska Stat. § 45-55-900(a)(9)(C), which exempts those securities issued or guaranteed by a railroad, other common carrier, public utility or holding company which is "regulated in respect of its rates and charges by a governmental authority of the U.S. or a state"

See also Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(a)(7)(C); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(7)(C).

(n105)Footnote 105. See e.g., Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.400(7)(C); Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.310(7)(C).

(n106)Footnote 106. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 357, 358 (1958).

(n107)Footnote 107. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(5).

(n108)Footnote 108. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(5)(iv), as amended.

(n109)Footnote 109. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(7), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law at 358 (1958):

[T]he only reason for two separate clauses is that it seems appropriate to exempt a public utility which is subject to federal or state regulation in respect to its rates or the issuance of the security, but to insist in the case of a utility which is subject only to Canadian regulation that actual issuance of the security be regulated.

(n110)Footnote 110. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 8-6-10(6)(d); Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(i). California further requires that the security be subject to registration with or authorization of issuance by the authority.

See also 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(a)(7); Iowa Code § 502.202(7)(c); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(7).

(n111)Footnote 111. See Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(1)(f).

(n112)Footnote 112. Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.025(8): "A security, the issuance of which is under supervision, regulation or control by the Public Utility Commissioner of this state, if the Public Utility Commissioner is exercising control over, or is regulating or supervising, the issuer thereof."

(n113)Footnote 113. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(A)(7): "Any security issued or guaranteed by any railroad, other common carrier or public service company supervised as to its rates and the issuance of its securities by a governmental authority of the United States, any state, Canada or any Canadian province."

(n114)Footnote 114. See, e.g., 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-202(b):

Any security issued or guaranteed by any bank or savings association and any security the offer, sale, issuance or guarantee of which (i) is subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission, or (ii) is registered under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 or ... the "Public Utility Law," or (iii) the issuer of which is regulated as to the issuance or guarantee of such security by a governmental authority of the United States.

(n115)Footnote 115. See also N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(4), (11):

(4) Securities issued or guaranteed as to principal, interest, or dividends, by a corporation or limited liability company owning or operating a railroad or other public service utility, if the corporation or limited liability company is subject to regulation or supervision either as to its rates and charges or as to the issue of its securities by a public service commission, or by a board, body, or official having like powers, of the United States or of any state, territory, or insular possession thereof, or of any municipality located therein, or of the District of Columbia, or of the Dominion of Canada, or any province thereof, provided, however, that a corporation or a limited liability company issuing securities, exempted under this subsection, and which has not filed an application for approval of such securities with the public service commission of the state of North Dakota, shall file with the commissioner a copy of the registration statement with all amendments thereto filed with the securities and exchange commission of the United States, if such a registration statement is made or filed, or a copy of the informative statement made to or filed with any commission, board, or body of the United States or of any state, territory, or insular possession thereof, or of any municipality located therein, or of the District of Columbia, or of the Dominion of Canada, or any province thereof, by which said corporation or limited liability company is subject to regulation or supervision either as to its rates and charges or as to the issue of its securities, and shall pay a filing fee of twenty-five dollars...

(n116)Footnote 116. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843(5): "[E]quipment trust certificates in respect to equipment conditionally sold or leased to a railroad or public utility, if other securities issued by such railroad or public utility would be exempt under this paragraph."

See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(g):

Any offer or sale of conditional sale agreements, equipment trust certificates, or certificates of interest or participation therein or partial assignments thereof, covering the purchase of railroad rolling stock or equipment or the purchase of motor vehicles, aircraft, or parts thereof, in a transaction not involving any public offering.

This is a transactional exemption--note the absence of a proviso that other securities be exempt.

(n117)Footnote 117. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(6), added in 1985 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. The Official Code Comment states:

[P]aragraph (b)(6) reflects the extensive development of equipment lease financing through leveraged leases, conditional sales, and other devices. The underlying premise is that if the securities of the person using such a financing device would be exempt under some other paragraph of Section 401, the equipment trust certificate or other security issued to acquire the property in question also is exempt.

See Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. ch. 815 § 5/3(F), Me. Stat. Ann. tit. 32 § 10502(G).

(n118)Footnote 118. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(9).

(n119)Footnote 119. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(4).

[E]quipment securities based on chattel mortgages, leases, or agreements for conditional sale of cars, motive power or other rolling stock mortgaged, leased or sold to or furnished for the use of or upon such railroad or other public service utility corporation or where the ownership or title of such equipment is pledged or retained in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the United States or of any state, or of the Dominion of Canada, to secure the payment of such equipment securities. ...

See also N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. §§ 359-f(1)(d), 359-ff(5)(e), which grants exemption to securities described in § 359-f(1)(d). The latter section describes:

[E]quipment and trust certificates or equipment notes or bonds based on chattel mortgages, leases, or agreements for conditional sale of cars, motive power, or other rolling stock mortgaged, leased or sold to or furnished for the use of or upon such a railroad or public-service utility corporation, or equipment trust certificates, or equipment notes or bonds where the ownership or title of such equipment is pledged or retained in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the United States, or of any state, territory or insular possession thereof, or of the District of Columbia, or of the Dominion of Canada, or of any province thereof, to secure the payment of such equipment trust certificates, bonds, or notes.

(n120)Footnote 120. 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(1).

(n121)Footnote 121. 17 C.F.R. § 230.146(b).

(n122)Footnote 122. In 2006 the Pacific Stock Exchange was acquired by the New York Stock Exchange, and is no longer operated separately under the name Pacific Exchange. Former Pacific Stock Exchange trading is today conducted as the NYSE Arca, electronic trading platform for "Arca Equities" and "Arca Options."

(n123)Footnote 123. The Philadelphia Stock Exchange is now known as NASDAQ OMX PHLX, reflecting its acquisition by NASDAQ OMX Group in 2008.

(n124)Footnote 124. The Midwest Stock Exchange is today known as the Chicago Stock Exchange, its original name to which it reverted in 1993, reflecting its roots and identity within the Chicago financial community.

(n125)Footnote 125. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat., § 36-b-21(8)(c): "[A]ny security listed or approved for listing upon notice of issuance on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board Options Exchange and such other securities exchanges as may be designated by the commissioner from time to time"

See also Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann. ch. 815, § 5/3(G):

Any security which at the time of sale is listed or approved for listing upon notice of issuance on the New York Stock Exchange, Inc., the American Stock Exchange, Inc., the Pacific Stock Exchange, Inc., the Chicago Stock Exchange, Inc., the Chicago Board of Trade, the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, Inc., the Chicago Board Options Exchange, Incorporated, the National Market System of the Nasdaq Stock Market or any other exchange, automated quotation system, or board of trade which the secretary of state, by rule or regulation deems to have substantially equivalent standards for listing or designation as required by any such exchange, automated quotation system or board of trade

See also Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.310(8). Washington Admin. Code § 460-42A-081(1) exempts securities listed on the New York, American, Chicago Board Options Exchanges, Tier I of the Pacific and Philadelphia Stock Exchanges, as well as the NASDAQ/NMS interdealer quotation system. For nonissuer transactions, § 460-42A-081(2) exempts the NASDAQ/NMS, New York, American, Midwest, Spokane, Chicago Board Options, Pacific and Philadelphia Exchanges or any other exchanges registered with the SEC and approved by the director.

In Massachusetts, Mass. Gen. L. Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(a)(8) certifies the American Stock Exchange, Boston Stock Exchange, Midwest Stock Exchange, New York Stock Exchange, Pacific Stock Exchange. The Secretary of the Commonwealth has the authority to designate additional exchanges for exemption purposes, and has added securities listed or approved for listing on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, and designated or approved for designation on the Nasdaq/NMS. Mass. Reg. Code tit. 950 § 14.402(A)(8); (B)(13)(h). The Nasdaq exemption is transactional.

In Texas, Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., art. 581-6(F) identifies the American Stock Exchange, Boston Stock Exchange, Midwest Stock Exchange, New York Stock Exchange, and NASDAQ/NMS. The Commissioner may add exchanges subject to statutory criteria, and has added the Pacific Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board Options Exchange. Tex. Admin. Code tit. 7, § 111.2(b). However, the Commissioner will only certify exchanges that are registered with the SEC. Id. § 111.2(d).

See also N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-16(8) which certifies the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange, and Midwest Stock Exchange. Rule 1201 adds the Pacific and Philadelphia Stock Exchanges, Chicago Board Options Exchange and NASDAQ/NMS with certain exceptions, to the list. Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(a)(8), (12) identifies the New York Stock Exchange, and American Stock Exchange. The State Corporation Commission has added the NASDAQ/NMS, and the Pacific and Philadelphia Stock Exchanges, Chicago Board Options Exchange subject to certain requirements. Rules 21 VAC §§ 5-40-20, 5-40-40, 5-40-60, 5-40-80, 5-40-90.

See also Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25100(o) (subject to certain listing standards as prescribed in the statute), 25101(a) (nonissuer transactions). Rule 260.101.2 certifies the following exchanges pursuant to the statute: New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange, Pacific Stock Exchange, Philadelphia Stock Exchange, NASDAQ/NMS. Rule 260.105.35 certifies the Chicago Board Options Exchange. Cal. Corp. Code § 25101(b) prescribes the conditions for exemption from registration of non-issuer transactions involving certain securities listed on a national securities exchange that is not certified by the commissioner.

(n126)Footnote 126. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(6).

An administrator's determination to designate a particular exchange in accordance with whatever authority is provided in the Blue Sky law may also be expressly made subject to revocation if the administrator finds that the listing standards have been so changed or insufficiently applied that the protection of investors contemplated by listing standards is no longer afforded. See, e.g. Code Md. Regs. Rule .06.

(n127)Footnote 127. See, e.g., Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(8).

(n128)Footnote 128. See CCH NASAA Reports P 13,047 (Aug. 22, 1997).

(n129)Footnote 129. See N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(c).

Section 6 of the Exchange Act requires national securities exchanges to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Section 12 of the Exchange Act requires that securities traded on a national securities exchange go through a formal registration procedure with the exchange in question.

(n130)Footnote 130. Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(a)(12).

(n131)Footnote 131. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(17)(a)(4).

(n132)Footnote 132. Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o).

(n133)Footnote 133. Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o). Section 25100(o) further provides:

That certification of any exchange or system shall be made by the commissioner upon the written request of the exchange or upon the written request of the exchange or system if the commissioner finds that the exchange or system: (i) in acting on applications for listing of common stock substantially applies the minimum standards set forth in either alternative (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) ...

(1) Listing standards:

(A) Shareholders equity of at least four million dollars ($4,000,000) ...

(ii) Pretax income of at least seven hundred fifty thousand dollars ($750,000) in the issuer's last fiscal year or in two of its last three fiscal years.

(iii) Minimum public distribution of 500,000 shares (exclusive of the holdings of officers, directors, controlling shareholders, and other concentrated or family holdings), together with a minimum of 800 public holders, or minimum public distribution of 1,000,000 shares together with a minimum of 400 public holders. The exchange or system may also consider the listing or designation of a company's securities if the company has a minimum of 500,000 shares publicly held, a minimum of 400 shareholders and daily trading volume in the issue has been approximately 2,000 shares or more for the six months preceding the date of application. In evaluating the suitability of an issue for listing or designation under this trading provision, the exchange or system shall review the nature and frequency of that activity and other factors as it may determine to be relevant in ascertaining whether the issue is suitable for trading. A security which trades infrequently shall not be considered for listing or designation under this paragraph even though average daily volume amounts to 2,000 shares per day or more. Companies whose securities are concentrated in a limited geographical area, or whose securities are largely held in block by institutional investors, normally may not be considered eligible for listing or designation unless the public distribution appreciably exceeds 500,000 shares.

(iv) Minimum price of three dollars ($3) per share for a reasonable period of time prior to the filing of a listing or designation application; provided, however in certain instances an exchange or system may favorably consider listing an issue selling for less than three dollars ($3) per share after considering all pertinent facts, including market conditions in general, whether historically the issue has sold above three dollars ($3) per share, the applicant's capitalization, and the number of outstanding and publicly held shares of the issue.

(v) An aggregate market value for publicly held shares of at least three million dollars (3,000,000).

(B)(i) Shareholders equity of at least four million dollars ($4,000,000).

(ii) Minimum public distribution set forth in clause (iii) of subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1).

(iii) Operating history of at least three years;

(iv) An aggregate market value for publicly held shares of at least fifteen million dollars ($15,000,000) ...

(n134)Footnote 134. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(a)(10); 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(a)(8); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(E); 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-202(f).

In Virginia, the exemption is for securities "listed or approved for listing upon notice of issuance ... " upon exchanges specifically mentioned in the statute. However, when additional exchanges are approved by the Corporation Commissioner the statute gives exemption to "any security listed on an exchange registered with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission and approved by regulations of the State Corporation Commission." Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(a)(8), (12).

(n135)Footnote 135. See, e.g., Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-6(F). Texas requires securities to be "fully listed" on prescribed or approved exchanges before the exemption is effective.

See also Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(1)(g). The Utah exemption applies to "any security listed" on a prescribed or approved exchange.

(n136)Footnote 136. For example, an exemption for senior securities is granted in Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Utah.

Note that the New York provision exempts any class of securities of the same issuer. N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(c). Virginia exempts senior securities of those listed on exchanges specifically named in the statute. However, the statute is silent on the subject when the exchange is approved by the Corporation Commission Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(8), (12).

But see Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o), which offers no exemption for senior securities.

(n137)Footnote 137. For example, exemption for securities "equal in rank" to those listed is provided for in Arizona, Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843 (A)(7) and Louisiana, La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:708(8). Texas provides an exemption for securities "on a parity with" those so listed. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-6(F).

(n138)Footnote 138. For example, exemption for securities "substantially equal in rank" to those listed is provided for in Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

(n139)Footnote 139. However, of the states providing a stock exchange exemption, some have no provision exempting securities of equal or substantially equal rank to those listed. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 516.061(17)(a)(4); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(E).

(n140)Footnote 140. This phrase, or a comparable exemption provision, is found, for example, in the statutes of Alaska, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, and Virginia.

In Virginia, the exemption applies to securities listed on exchanges specifically named in the statute. However, the statute is silent on the subject when the exchange is one approved in the discretion of the Corporation Commission. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(8), (12). Massachusetts, by regulation, exempts the offer and sale of put or call contracts when the put or call contract is endorsed and its performance guaranteed by a broker-dealer registered with the SEC or issued by the Options Clearing Corporation ("OCC") pursuant to a registration statement filed by the OCC with the SEC and the underlying security is registered under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or is exempt under the statute or the put or call contract is listed or quoted on NASDAQ. Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(b).

(n141)Footnote 141. See, e.g., Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-6(F):

[a]lso all securities senior to, or if of the same issues, upon a parity with, any securities so listed or designated or represented by subscription rights which have been so listed or designated, or evidence of indebtedness guaranteed by any company, any stock of which is so listed or designated (n142)Footnote 142. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(0); Mass. Gen. L. Ann. ch. 110A, § 402(a)(8); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(8); 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-202(f).

See also Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(9), which exempts:

[A]n option issued by a clearing agency registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, other than an off-exchange futures contract or substantially similar arrangement, if the security, currency, commodity, or other interest underlying the option: is registered under Section 302, 303, or 304; is exempt under this section; or is not otherwise required to be registered under this [Act]

The Official Comment provides:

Paragraph (b)(9) ... reflects the development of the options trading markets. As with other subsections, the premise is that the option security will be exempt from registration if the underlying security to which the option relates is either registered under this Act, exempt from registration under this section 401, or not required to be registered under this Act. A common example of the latter category would be nonissuer transactions in the underlying security, currency, commodity, or other interest exempt under Section 402(2), (3), or (4).

For states with similar provisions, see, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(16)(transactional exemption by registered dealer); Nev. Rev. Stat. § 90.520(2)(i); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-26(G).

(n143)Footnote 143. Such standards in California have already been addressed, Statutory standards for exchange approval have also been enacted in Texas. See Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-6(F).

(n144)Footnote 144. See, e.g. Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(E), reproduced at n.14 supra.

(n145)Footnote 145. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843(A)(7): "The commission may at anytime by order withdraw a designation of an exchange or association made under this paragraph."

See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(o); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(E).

(n146)Footnote 146. Usually the minimum requirement is that revocation be imposed by written order. See Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9 § 4203a(6): "Notice of such revocation shall be given in writing by mail to the exchange concerned."

In some states, formal procedures for notice and hearing are required. See, e.g., Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581(6)(F).

(n147)Footnote 147. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(E).

(n148)Footnote 148. See N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(f); N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(15); Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(g).

(n149)Footnote 149. See, e.g., Neb. Rev. Stat. § 8-1110(5)(b).

After NSMIA, states may not require a filing to obtain an exemption for listed securities that are federal covered securities.

(n150)Footnote 150. Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/3(Q).

(n151)Footnote 151. 15 U.S.C. § 78g (2000).

(n152)Footnote 152. 12 C.F.R. § 220.

(n153)Footnote 153. 12 C.F.R. § 220.2(u); 17 C.F.R. § 220.17.

(n154)Footnote 154. 12 C.F.R. § 220.2(u):

"OTC margin stock" means any equity security not traded on a national securities exchange that the Board has determined has the degree of national investor interest, the depth and breadth of market, the availability of information respecting the security and its issuer, and the character and permanence of the issuer to warrant being treated like an equity security traded on a national securities exchange.

(n155)Footnote 155. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(a)(8); Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann., Ch. 815, § 5/3(Q). Connecticut exempts all securities on the list of over-the-counter securities approved for margin by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Illinois exempts any security appearing on the Board's List of OTC Margin Stocks.

(n156)Footnote 156. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(I)(f). New Hampshire exempts securities designated by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System as "O.T.C. Margin Stocks."

(n157)Footnote 157. 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-202(f). Pennsylvania exempts any security that satisfies the margin requirements of Regulation T.

In Virginia, the foreign issuer exemption is available solely on the basis of an equity security's being on the Federal Reserve Board's List of Foreign Margin Stocks or a debt security's meeting the Reg. T margin requirements.

(n158)Footnote 158. Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25105, 25130. § 25105 gives the Commissioner of Corporations authority to exempt from qualification transactions other than those included in the statute. § 25130 requires qualification of securities offered or sold in non-issuer transactions. Regulation 260.105.11, adopted by the Commissioner pursuant to Section 25105, exempts from qualification under Section 25130 securities listed on foreign exchanges otherwise meeting the conditions of the regulation. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10 § 260.105.11. See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25101.1.

(n159)Footnote 159. Id. See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25011.

(n160)Footnote 160. Regulation 260.105.11 of the Commissioner of Corporations. The regulation in its entirety provides:

(a) There is hereby exempted from the provisions of Section 25130 of the Code as not being comprehended within the purposes of the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 and the qualification of which is not necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, any offer or sale of a security issued by any corporation organized under the laws of a foreign country or of a certificate of deposit, receipt or other evidence relating to such a security, provided one of the following conditions is met: The issuer is currently required to file with the Securities and Exchange Commissioner information and reports pursuant to Section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ... and is not delinquent in such filing.

The security appears in the most recent Federal Reserve Board List of Foreign Margin Stocks.

The issuer is not subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and all of the following conditions are met:

The issuer, including any predecessors, has been in continuous operations for at least 5 years and is a going concern actually engaged in business and neither in the organization stage nor in bankruptcy or receivership.

The number of shares outstanding is at least 2.5 million worldwide and the number of shareholders is at least 5,000 worldwide.

The market value of the outstanding shares, other than debt securities and preferred stock, is at least US $100 million worldwide.

The issuer, as of the date of its most recent financial statements, which may not be more than 18 months old and which have been audited in accordance with the generally accepted accounting principles of its country of domicile, has net tangible assets of at least US $100 million worldwide.

The issuer has net income after all charges, including taxes and extraordinary losses, and excluding extraordinary gains, of either (i) at least U.S. $50 million in total for its last 3 fiscal years or (ii) at least U.S. $20 million in each of its last 2 fiscal years.

If the security is a debt security or preferred stock, the issuer has not during the past five years, or during the period of its existence if shorter, defaulted in the payment of any dividend, principal, interest, or sinking fund installment thereon.

Regarding exemptions in other states for securities listed on foreign exchanges, see Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 44-1844; 44-1845; Ariz. Comp. Admin. R. & Regs. tit. 14 § R14-4-138 (non-issuer transactions).

Arizona provides an exemption if certain criteria are met, including:

The securities must have been outstanding in the hands of the public for at least 90 days prior to the transaction date;

Either Moody's International Manual or Standard and Poor's Corporation Records must contain information regarding the issuers of foreign securities unless certain conditions are met; or the issuer has a class of securities subject to 1934 Act reporting requirements or is exempt from registration under the Act;

The issuers, including all predecessors, must have been operating continuously for a minimum of the preceding five years;

The issuers must meet certain financial tests, including both being listed or traded on stock exchanges organized under the laws of their respective countries of domicile, and attaining a particular amount of net tangible assets; and

There are at least two market makers who are registered broker dealers under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or one market maker with a specified minimum net capital.

See also Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(a)(13); Rule 21 VAC 5-40-50, Rules of State Corp. Comm.

(n161)Footnote 161. NASAA Uniform Securities Act Revision Committee, "Resolution on Exemption from Registration for Blue Chip Securities."

(n162)Footnote 162. Comment to paragraph (B). See "NASAA Draft Proposal on Blue Sky Registration Exemptions for Exchange Listed Securities," Sec. Reg. & L. Rep. (BNA), No. 396 at H-1 (March 30, 1977).

(n163)Footnote 163. Id., paragraph (C). The term "significant subsidiary" is intended to have the same meaning as under Securities Act Rule 405.17 C.F.R. § 230.405. Id.

(n164)Footnote 164. Id., paragraph (D).

(n165)Footnote 165. Id., paragraph (E).

(n166)Footnote 166. Id., paragraph (F).

(n167)Footnote 167. See, e.g., Washington: WAC 460-42A-080.

There are variations. Texas, for example, makes the blue chip exemption into a transaction exemption, stating:

The sale of any security by the issuer itself or by a registered dealer is exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) If the issuer is not organized under the laws of the United States or a state, it has appointed a duly authorized agent in the United States for service of process, and has set forth the name and address of such agent in its prospectus, offering memorandum or similar disclosure document.

(2) The security is senior to or on a parity with a class of the issuer's securities registered under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the class of securities has been so registered for the three years immediately preceding the offering date.

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.06

(3) Neither the issuer nor a subsidiary, which accounts for more than 15% of assets or revenues on a consolidated basis, has had a default that exceeded 5.0% of total assets on a consolidated basis during the last seven years (or the issuer's existence if less than seven years) in the payment of:

(A) principal, interest, dividend, or sinking fund installment on preferred stock or indebtedness for borrowed money; or

(B) rentals under leases with terms of three years or more.

(4) The issuer has had consolidated net income after taxes (but before extraordinary items and the cumulative effect of accounting changes) of at least $1 million in each of four of its last five fiscal years including its last fiscal year. In addition, if the offering is of interest-bearing securities, the issuer must have had net income for its last fiscal year (but before deduction for income taxes and depreciation) of at least 1-1/2 times the issuer's annual interest expense, giving effect to the proposed offering and the intended use of the proceeds. "Last fiscal year" means the most recent year for which audited financial statements are available, provided that such statements cover a fiscal period ended not more than 12 months from the commencement of the offering.

(5) If the offering is of stock or shares, other than preferred stock or shares, such securities have voting rights and such rights include:

(A) the right to have at least as many votes per share; and

(B) the right to vote on at least as many general corporate decisions, as each of the issuer's outstanding classes of stock or shares, except as otherwise required by law.

(6) If the offering is of stock or shares, other than preferred stock or shares, such securities are owned beneficially or of record, on any date within six months prior to the commencement of the offering, by at least 1,200 persons, and on such date there are at least 750,000 such shares outstanding with an aggregate market value, based on the average bid price for that day, of at least $3,750,000. In connection with the determination of the number of persons who are beneficial owners of the stock or shares of an issuer, the issuer or broker dealer may rely in good faith for the purposes of this section upon written information furnished by the record owners.

(7) Any security issued or guaranteed as to both principal and interest by an international bank of which the United States is a member is exempted without regard to the conditions in this section.

(8) If the offering is of interest-bearing securities of a finance company with liquid assets of at least 105% of its liabilities (other than deferred income taxes, deferred investment tax credits, capital stock, and retained earnings) at the end of each of its last five fiscal years, the applicable net income requirements of paragraph (4) of this section, but before deduction for interest expense, shall be 1-1/4 times the issuer's annual interest expense. "Finance company" means a company engaged primarily in the business of wholesale, retail, installment, mortgage, commercial, industrial, and consumer financing, banking, or factoring. "Liquid assets" means cash, receivables payable on demand or not more than 12 years following the close of the company's last fiscal year, and readily marketable securities; in each case, less applicable reserves and unearned income.

(9) The issuer is not in bankruptcy.

Tex. Admin. Code Rule § 139.3.

(n168)Footnote 168. NASAA Exemption, paragraph (G). The World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, and the Asian Development Bank are the only international banks of which the United States is a member. The debt securities of International Banks are "blue chip," but without paragraph (G) would not qualify for the exemption because they are registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act, as exempt securities under Section 3(a)(12) of that Act. Id.

(n169)Footnote 169. See, e.g., Texas Admin. Code tit. 7 § 139.3.

(n170)Footnote 170. NASAA Exemption, paragraph (H).

(n171)Footnote 171. See, e.g., N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(6); Texas Admin. Code tit. 7 § 139.3.

(n172)Footnote 172. Comment to NASAA Exemption, paragraph (H).

(n173)Footnote 173. NASAA Exemption, paragraph (I).

(n174)Footnote 174. See, e.g., Arkansas Securities Rule 503.01(A)(9); N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(6).

(n175)Footnote 175. Comment to NASAA Exemption, paragraph (I).

(n176)Footnote 176. 23 Fla. Stat. § 517.051(6).

(n177)Footnote 177. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.02(J).

(n178)Footnote 178. See, Illinois, New Hampshire, North Dakota.

(n179)Footnote 179. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act 401(b)(14) provides:

[A] security issued by an issuer registered as an open-end management investment company or unit investment trust under Section 8 of the Investment Act of 1940 if:

(i) the issuer is advised by an investment adviser that is a depository institution exempt from registration under the Investment Adviser Act of 1940 or that is currently registered as an investment advisor, and has been registered or is affiliated with an adviser that has been registered, as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 for at least three years next preceding an offer or sale of a security claimed to be exempt under this paragraph and the issuer has acted or is affiliated with an investment adviser that has acted, as investment adviser to one or more registered investment companies or unit investment trusts for at least three years next preceding an offer or sale of a security claimed to be exempt under this paragraph; or

(ii) the issuer has a sponsor that has at all times throughout the three years before an offer or sale of a security claimed to be exempt under this paragraph sponsored one or more registered investment companies or unit investment trusts the aggregate total assets of which have exceeded [100,000,00]. For the purpose of this paragraph, an investment adviser is affiliated with another investment adviser if it controls, is controlled by or is under common control with the other investment advisor.

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.06

The rationale behind the exemption adjudges adequate the protection offered by the fact that investment companies are subject to not only the disclosure requirements of the 1933 Act but also to substantive regulation under the Investment Company Act of 1940. Official Code Comment to § 401(b)(14).

(n180)Footnote 180. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-307(k); R.I. Gen. Laws § 7-11-401(14); Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(1)(k).

See also Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10 § 260.105.39, in which California exempts resales of units in unit investment trusts when previously qualified under the statute and when meeting certain other conditions of compliance with the 1933 Act and the Investment Act of 1940.

(n181)Footnote 181. See 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(3) (2000).

(n182)Footnote 182. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act. §§ 202(2), (3), and (4).

(n183)Footnote 183. CCH NASAA Reports P 3803, at 1389 (Sept. 10, 1996).

(n184)Footnote 184. CCH NASAA Reports P 3803, at 1389 (Sept. 10, 1996).

(n185)Footnote 185. Ohio, for example, provides the exemption to all nonprofit organizations, and then gives examples of the type of nonprofit organization contemplated by the exemption. See Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(I):

Any security, except notes, bonds, debentures, or other evidences of indebtedness or of promises or agreements to pay money, which is issued by a person, corporation, or association organized not for profit, including persons, corporations, and associations organized exclusively for conducting county fairs, for co-operative marketing, or for religious, educational, social, recreational, athletic, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, or reformatory purposes, is exempt, if no part of the net earnings of such issuer inures to the benefit of any shareholder or member of such issuer or to any individual, and if the total commission, remuneration, expense, or discount in connection with the sale of such securities does not exceed two per cent of the total sale price thereof plus five hundred dollars.

In Texas, the exemption applies to securities of associations organized for specified purposes. However, the exemption is broadened to include any nonprofit corporation which is organized in Texas without capital stock. See Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-5(K), 586(E), (J). Art. 581-5(K) provides:

Any security or membership issued by a corporation or association, organized exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, or reformatory purposes and not for pecuniary profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any stockholder, shareholder, or individual members, and where no commission or remuneration is paid or given or is to be paid or given in connection with the disposition thereof.

Additionally, Art. 581-6(E) provides an exemption for: "Any security issued and sold by a domestic corporation without capital stock and not organized and not engaged in business for profit." And Art. 581-6(J) provides exemption for "Notes, bonds or other evidence of indebtedness of religious, charitable or benevolent corporations"

Note that the exemption under Article 581-5(K) constitutes an exempt transaction under the Texas statute.

In Scholarship Counselors, Inc. v. Waddle, 507 S.W.2d 138 (Ky. Ct. App. 1974), the Kentucky Court of Appeals held that in order for an organization to be within the meaning of the exemption, earnings must be for the benefit of the public generally and not for private investors or sponsors. A scholarship trust fund had been established for the benefit of the children of members. Members paid an entrance fee and individually opened a savings account which irrevocably paid interest to the trust fund. Money in the fund was used to pay college expenses of designated beneficiaries (named by the member) once the sophomore year in college was reached. The court found the memberships to be securities and not exempt as those issued by a nonprofit organization. Although the earnings of the fund were for educational expenses, they benefited private investors and sponsors and not the general public. The fact that the sponsor's children were the beneficiaries, and not any qualified student candidate, eliminated the plan as one organized and operated on a nonprofit basis.

(n186)Footnote 186. The federal exemption for non-profit organization securities is section 3(a)(4) under the federal Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(4) (2000). Section 18 of the federal act, expressly excises section 3(a)(4) from NSMIA coverage, see 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b) (4)(C). Leaving these securities fully subject to state regulation recognizes the demonstrated potential for abuse in the area which has historically been addressed by state securities regulators, as well as the fact that numerous state exemptions for non-profits require filings and the opportunity for administrative review.

(n187)Footnote 187. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(9).

(n188)Footnote 188. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(7).

(n189)Footnote 189. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(j):

Any security (except evidences of indebtedness, whether interest bearing or not) of an issuer (1) organized exclusively for educational, benevolent, fraternal, religious, charitable, social, or reformatory purposes and not for pecuniary profit, if no part of the net earnings of the issuer inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, or (2) organized as a chamber of commerce or trade or professional association. The fact that amounts received from memberships or dues or both will or may be used to construct or otherwise acquire facilities for use by members of the nonprofit organization does not disqualify the organization for this exemption. This exemption does not apply to the securities of any nonprofit organization if any promoter thereof expects or intends to make a profit directly or indirectly from any business or activity associated with the organization or operation of such nonprofit organization or from remuneration received from such nonprofit organization.

The Commissioner of Corporations in California has issued Rule 260.105.20 extending the exemption to nonprofit organizations meeting the criteria of the above quoted statute, except that if the conditions of the rule are met, certain persons involved with the organization are permitted to incur private profit.

In addition, subsection (k) of Section 25100 grants exemption to life income contracts issued by nonprofit organizations designated by the Commissioner:

Any agreement, commonly known as a "life income contract," of an issuer (1) organized exclusively for educational, benevolent, fraternal, religious, charitable, social, or reformatory purposes and not for pecuniary profit and (2) which the commissioner designates by rule or order, with a donor in consideration of a donation of property to such issuer and providing for the payment to the donor or persons designated by him or her of income or specified periodic payments from the donated property or other property for the life of the donor or those other persons.

By Rule 260.100.2, the Commissioner has defined "life income contract" as follows:

The term "life income contract" as used in subdivision (k) of Section 25100 of the Code means an agreement between the issuer and a donor in consideration of a donation of property (which must be irrevocable) to such issuer (and only to such issuer) and providing for the payment to the donor or persons designated by him, for the life of the donor or such other persons, of a variable return measured or determined by the original value of the donated property and the return on designated assets (which may be other than the donated property).

The life income contract exemption has been granted on a class basis only to "any non-profit college or university which has total endowment funds (including annuity and life income funds) according to its most recent audited financial statement of not less than $2,000,000." Rule 260.100.

See also In the Matter of Shekinah Cloister Christian Church, Inc., [1978-1981 Transfer Binder], Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,405 (Order of Fla. Comptroller, 1978). The exemption for a security issued by a religious or other nonprofit organization may be lost if the offerees are not given a written report amounting to full and fair disclosure of all material information. In this case, a permanent cease and desist order was entered because of the church's failure to disclose such material information as: unsatisfied judgments against an offeror, lack of proper zoning for the anticipated project, and insufficient revenue to cover the issue of the securities involved.

(n190)Footnote 190. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843-(A)(6); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(9).

(n191)Footnote 191. New Jersey, for example, omits the social or athletic purposes prescribed in the Uniform Act. See N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(a)(9).

(n192)Footnote 192. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(j), (k); 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-202(e), 1-203(p). Note that in Pennsylvania evidences of indebtedness may come under the transaction exemption.

(n193)Footnote 193. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1843(A)(6).

(n194)Footnote 194. See, e.g., Alaska Adm. Code, 3 AAC § 08.910(1):

(1) Not-for-private-profit issuers shall file a notice with the administrator at least 15 days before making any offers or sales of securities; the notice must contain a ruling or determination by the U.S. Internal Revenue service recognizing the issuer's exempt status under Section 501(c)(3) or 501(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 ... or other documentation the administrator may require including, but not limited to, proposed offering circular, certified financial statement, bylaws and articles of incorporation, plan of financing, plan of operation, use of proceeds, background of officers and directors (or principals if unincorporated).

See also In the Matter of Caucus Distributors, Inc. [1986-1987 Transfer Binder], Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,506 at 72,383 (Alaska Div. of Bank. and Sec. No. 86-17 1986) in which the Division held that filing of notice and supporting documents was necessary to claim the nonprofit exemption under the Alaska Securities Act; absent such a filing, the hearing officer declined to consider the issue.

California Securities Rule 260.100 requires eligible nonprofit organizations desiring to issue exempt life income contracts to file a form containing the information required in the cited rule. The form is designated a "260.100.1" See n.4 supra.

(n195)Footnote 195. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-4-5(5).

(n196)Footnote 196. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(f); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(c); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-18(a).

(n197)Footnote 197. See Official Comment 7, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act.

(n198)Footnote 198. If there is a question whether the organization falls under this exemption, it may be helpful to refer to IRS Publication #78. IRS Publication #78 is a listing of national organizations that are considered to be exempt from paying taxes, or charitable. However, this publication is not all inclusive.

(n199)Footnote 199. Section 3(a)(3) of the federal Act, 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(3) (2000), exempts:

Any note, Draft, bill of exchange, or bankers' acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which has a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding nine months, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal thereof the maturity of which is likewise limited.

(n200)Footnote 200. Ann. Code Md. § 11-601(10).

Section 402(a)(10) of the Uniform Act provides the exemption for:

[A]ny commercial paper which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months of the date of issuance, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal of such paper which is likewise limited, or any guarantee of such paper or of any such renewal

See also Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1843(8):

Commercial paper which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months of the date of issuance or sale, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal of such paper which is likewise limited, or any guarantee of such paper or of any such renewal.

There are variations. In California, for example, Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(l) provides:

Any note, draft, bill of exchange, or banker's acceptance which is freely transferable and of prime quality, arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within nine months of the date of issuance, exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal of such paper or of such renewal, provided that such paper is not offered to the public in amounts of less than twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) in the aggregate to any one purchaser

And in Illinois: Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann. ch. 815, § 5/3(L):

Any negotiable promissory note or draft, bill of exchange or bankers' acceptance which arises out of a current transaction or the proceeds of which have been or are to be used for current transactions, and which evidences an obligation to pay cash within 9 months of the date of issuance exclusive of days of grace, or any renewal of such note, draft, bill or acceptance which is likewise limited or any guarantee of such note, draft, bill or acceptance or of any such renewal. Any instrument exempted under this subsection from the requirement of section ... 5 shall bear across the face thereof the following type: "THIS INSTRUMENT IS NEITHER GUARANTEED, NOR IS THE ISSUANCE THEREOF REGULATED BY ANY AGENCY OR DEPARTMENT OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS OR THE UNITED STATES." However, the foregoing legend shall not be required with respect to any such instrument:

- (i) sold to a person described in subsection C or H of Section 4 of this Act.
- (ii) sold to a "Qualified Institutional Buyer" as that term is defined in Rule 144a adopted under the Securities Act of 1933;
- (iii) where the minimum initial subscription for the purchase of such instrument is $100,000 or more; or
- (iv) issued by an issuer that has any class of securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or has any outstanding class of indebtedness rated in one of the 3 highest categories by a rating agency designated by the Department

(n201)Footnote 201. See Drafter's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(10).

(n202)Footnote 202. The quoted phrase was originally used in the House of Representatives Report on the then proposed federal act H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 15 (1933).

(n203)Footnote 203. Sanders v. John Nuveen & Co., 463 F.2d 1075, 1079 (7th Cir. 1972) , cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1009, 93 S. Ct. 443, 34 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1972) .

(n204)Footnote 204. See, e.g., Illinois: 14 Ill. Admin. Code § 130.233 ("The phrase 'promissory note or draft, bill of exchange or bankers' acceptance' as used in Section 3(L) of the Act shall mean a negotiable security which is eligible for discounting pursuant to 12 U.S.C., Sections 24(7) and 85, by banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System")

See also 950 Mass. Regs. Code § 14.402(A)(10):

To coordinate the interpretation and administration of the act with the related federal regulations, "commercial paper" as used in ... § 402(a)(10) includes prime quality negotiable commercial paper of a type not ordinarily purchased by the general public, that is, paper used to facilitate well recognized types of current operational business requirements and of a type eligible for discounting by Federal Reserve Banks as set forth in SEC Release No. 33-4412.

Some states simply exempt commercial paper not offered for sale to the public. See, e.g., Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(g); Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.025(7).

Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.025(7) provides an exemption for: "Commercial paper issued, given or acquired in a bona fide way in the ordinary course of legitimate business, trade or commerce, where such commercial paper is not made the subject of a public offering."

See also State of Oregon v. Crooks, 84 Or. App. 440, 734 P.2d 374 (Ct. App. 1987) (promissory note given by individual engaged in business of buying and selling real estate securities interests not exempt as commercial paper under statute which includes only "unsecured short term negotiable debt instruments issued by commercial entities").

In Caucus Distributors, Inc. v. Maryland, [1988-1990 Transfer Binder], Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73006 at 73,975 (Cir. Ct. June 16, 1989), aff'd, 320 Md. 313, 577 A.2d 783 (1990) promissory notes issued by a political organization to private individual were not entitled to an exemption for prime quality commercial paper.

(n205)Footnote 205. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(11). The Official Code Comment provides:

The provision in the 1956 Act ... followed the counterpart provision in the Securities Act of 1933. The latter has been the subject of considerable, and often changing, interpretation. The approach in the present subsection is to identify certain objective criteria which must be satisfied in order for the exemption to be applicable.

(n206)Footnote 206. See 12 U.S.C.A. § 343; 12 CFR §§ 201.4, 201.5.

See also Sec. Act. Rel. No. 4412, 1 Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 2045 (1961). See also UBS Asset Management (New York) Inc. v. Wood Gundy Corp., 914 F. Supp. 66 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) .

In People v. Dempster, 396 Mich. 700, 242 N.W.2d 381(1976) , the Michigan Supreme Court rejected the argument that an instrument which fit the definition of commercial paper under the Uniform Commercial Code would be accepted as commercial paper under the blue sky laws. The court held that the U.C.C. concept was meant to "simplify, clarify and modernize the law governing commercial transactions," while the blue sky law was intended to prevent the sale of securities until the blue sky administrator could investigate the merits of the offering. 242 N.W.2d at 385 . The commercial paper exemption was found to be based on the comparable exemption under the 1933 Federal Securities Act requiring that the commercial paper be of a type not ordinarily purchased by the general public and eligible for discounting by Federal Reserve banks. 242 N.W.2d at 386 . However, the court reversed the defendant's criminal conviction for selling non-exempt, unregistered, securities on the ground that the instruments involved met an acceptable definition of "commercial paper," and it would be a denial of due process to apply a narrower definition under the blue sky law retroactively. 242 N.W.2d at 388 , 389.

(n207)Footnote 207. See Rutledge, G.P., National Securities Markets Improvements Act ... One Year Later: The States' Response, 53 Bus. L. 563, 567 (Feb. 1998).

(n208)Footnote 208. See Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1261(i); Kan. Admin. Regs., Off. of Sec. Comm'r § 81-5-11.

(n209)Footnote 209. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(11).

The drafters of this original Uniform Act exemption explained that it was designed to solve the problem arising from the position taken in some states and by the SEC that benefit plans of various kinds involve an offer of a security in the nature of an investment contract if participation is voluntary and an employee must contribute under the plan in order to participate. See Off. Code Comment, Subsec. (a)(11).

(n210)Footnote 210. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(2).

(n211)Footnote 211. 17 C.F.R. § 230.701.

(n212)Footnote 212. See, e.g., Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(a)(9) ("The offering meets the requirements of Rule 701 of the Securities Act of 1933").

(n213)Footnote 213. See Securities Act section 18(b)(4)(C), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(C).

(n214)Footnote 214. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(21).

(n215)Footnote 215. 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(a)(11).

(n216)Footnote 216. Interpretive Ruling 9(11), Delaware Securities Commissioner.

(n217)Footnote 217. Id. 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7302(1)(m), defining the term "security," includes within the meaning of that term a "certificate of interest in or participation in any profit-sharing agreement" and an "investment contract." It is the opinion of the Commissioner that the term "investment contract" is inclusive, that is, a term of wide scope which could include other classifications and in this specific instance includes a "certificate of interest in or participation in any profit-sharing agreement."

(n218)Footnote 218. Interpretive Ruling 9(11) of the Delaware Securities Commissioner. 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(a)(11) exempts from the requirements of Sections 7304 and 7312, under certain circumstances, investment contracts issued in connection with an employee's stock purchase, savings, pension, profit sharing, or similar benefit plan. While Section 7309(a)(11) exempts these investment contracts it does not mention "certificates of interest in or participation in any profit-sharing agreement" thus raising the question of whether such are also within the exemption of Section 7309(a)(11). In light of the conclusion that such instruments are investment contracts it is clear that they are subject to the exemption of Section 7309(a)(11). It should be noted that 7309(a)(11) does not exempt all certificates of interest in or participations in any profit-sharing agreement, but only those involving employees. Therefore, a certificate of interest in or participation in any employee's profit-sharing plan would be subject to the exemption granted in Section 7309(a)(11).

(n219)Footnote 219. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(a)(12), Loss and Cowett, Blue Sky Law 362 (1958).

(n220)Footnote 220. Id.

(n221)Footnote 221. Id.

(n222)Footnote 222. Revised Uniform Securities Act § 401(b)(13). The Official Comment provides no illumination regarding how, if at all, the drafters standardized the disparate state provisions, but merely states:

A number of states presently exempt securities issued by cooperatives. This paragraph proposes an exemption for such securities as long as they are not traded to the public generally.

Some states have adopted the Revised Uniform Securities Act language. See, e.g., R.I. Gen. L. § 7-11-401(13).

Cooperative securities are not federal covered securities and are not pre-empted from state regulation under NSMIA.

(n223)Footnote 223. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(m), which exempts: "Any security issued by any corporation organized and existing under the provisions of ... the Food and Agricultural Code." Section 54061 of the Food and Agricultural Code describes the purposes for which cooperatives may be established. An exemption from requirements of the Securities Law is also provided in Food and Agricultural Code Section 54201:

An association is not subject in any manner to the terms of the Corporate Securities Law, Division 1 (commencing with Section 25000), Title 4 of the Corporations Code, and any association may issue its membership certificates or stock or other securities as provided in this chapter without the necessity of any qualification under that law.

Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(q) exempts unincorporated inter-indemnity or reciprocal or inter-insurance contracts between members of cooperative corporations composed solely of licensed physicians and surgeons when the contracts indemnify solely against medical malpractice.

See also Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(7): "Securities of nonprofit agricultural cooperatives organized under the laws of this state when said securities are sold or offered for sale to persons principally engaged in agricultural production or selling agricultural products."

Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann. Ch. 815, § 5/3(R) provides an exemption for:

Any security issued by a bona fide agricultural cooperative operating in this State that is organized under the laws of this State or as a foreign cooperative association organized under the law of another state that has been duly qualified to transact business in this State.

See also Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann. Ch. 815, § 5/4(K), which covers securities for patronage, marketing agreements by cooperative associations organized exclusively for agricultural, producer, marketing, purchasing or consumer purposes, and the sale of subscriptions for stock of cooperative associations, provided no commission or remuneration is paid and no person beneficially owns more than 5% of the aggregate amount of outstanding capital stock of the cooperative association.

See also Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.02(I).

(n224)Footnote 224. See, e.g., Cal. Corp. Code 25100(m); Mass. Gen. L. Ann. ch. 110A, § 402(a)(12); N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(b); Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-5(N).

(n225)Footnote 225. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(7); Ill. Cons. Stat. Ann. Ch. 815 § 5/3(R); Iowa Code § 505.202(12).

(n226)Footnote 226. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(9).

61 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 7 Exempt Securities

1-7 Blue Sky Regulation § 7.07

§ 7.07 Administrative Authority over Security Exemptions

Although in most instances security exemptions in Blue Sky laws are self-executing, and thus do not require any filing or request procedure, state administrators may be authorized to police the use of exemptions through the power to deny, suspend, revoke, condition, or limit the use of at least certain exemptions. Section 204 of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act exemplifies such potentially far-reaching authority:

(a) [Enforcement related powers] Except with respect to a federal covered security or a transaction involving a federal covered security, an order under this [Act] may deny, suspend application of, condition, limit, or revoke an exemption created under Section 201(3)(C) [securities of "any other" depository institution], (7) [non-profit organizations] or (8) [interests in a non-profit membership cooperative] or 202 or an exemption, or waiver created under section 203 with respect to a specific security, transaction, or offer. An order under this section may be issued only pursuant to the procedures in Section 306(d) or 604 and only prospectively.ⁿ¹

This authority must be exercised in compliance with applicable due process and statutory requirements. The administrator's decision is accorded substantial deference by courts.ⁿ²

The basis upon which an administrator may exercise such power may or may not be set out in the statute. In Oregon, for example, the director may by order withdraw, condition or deny the use of any exemption by a person if the director has reason to believe that the person has engaged in or is about to engage in an act or practice constituting a violation of the Oregon Securities Law or that the use of any exemption by that person would work a fraud or imposition on purchasers.ⁿ³ Orders may in some states issue summarily, but in all cases there must be appropriate findings and follow-on administrative proceedings.ⁿ⁴

Although not a part of the original Uniform Securities Act, which made no provision for administrative enforcement authority relating to exemptions at all, the Revised Uniform Act added specific authority to revoke an exemption,ⁿ⁵ which was carried into and significantly expanded in the 2002 Uniform Act. Uniform and Non-Uniform Act states have established authority to deny or revoke, as illustrated in Pennsylvania:

The commission may by order deny or revoke any exemption specified in section 202 or 203 with respect to a specific security or transaction. The order shall be issued summarily without notice or hearing. Upon issuance of a summary order, the commission shall promptly provide the order to the person against whom it is issued. The order shall contain findings of fact and conclusions of law and include a notice affording the person an opportunity for a hearing under section 607(a). No order under this section shall operate retroactively. No person shall be considered to have violated section 201 by reason of any offer or sale effected after the entry of an order under this section if he sustains the burden of proof that he did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of the order.ⁿ⁶

Section 204 of the 2002 Uniform Act further points out the common authority of administrators under Blue Sky laws to waive, in whole or part, any conditions for an exemption set out in the statute.ⁿ⁷ This authority extends to the creation of an exemption by rule or order in particular circumstances as well as to waiving requirements for an existing exemption. Thus, for example, in California:

There shall be exempted from the provisions of Section 25110, 25120 or 25130 any other transaction which the commissioner by rule exempts as not being comprehended within the purposes of this law and the qualification of which he finds is not necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors.ⁿ⁸

Although securities exemptions in all states are for the most part self-executing, the most notable exception is the filing requirement often attached to the exemption for securities of a particular type issued by qualifying non-profit organizations. These requirements, applicable to debt securities issued by such organizations typically consist of a either a notice filing requirement, a request for an exemption authorization, or a particular form of registration. They are discussed in more detail in § 7.06[6] above, and are today included in section 201(7) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. The drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act noted that the non-profit exemption is of particular concern to state securities regulators, particularly referencing religious scams.ⁿ⁹ Other security exemptions may not be self-executing when they are of a type designed or authorized by particular statutes or for particular state purposes.ⁿ¹⁰

Whether self-executing or not, in any proceedings concerning a claimed security exemption, the burden of proving the availability of the exemption is on the person claiming it.ⁿ¹¹

As this provision indicates, only certain security exemptions are considered permissive, and thus subject to the administrator's authority to revoke, condition, or suspend. For purposes of the 2002 Uniform Act these specific securities are:

- (1) securities by certain depository institutions;
- (2) securities of nonprofit issuers; and
- (3) certain securities of cooperatives.

In some states all exempt securities are deemed permissive.ⁿ¹² In any case, adherence to administrative procedures is required. The Uniform Securities Act contains procedural safeguards that entitle interested parties to notice of denial or revocation of an exemption and the right to a hearing.ⁿ¹³ Most states have also adopted requirements for notice and hearing, though procedural aspects may differ from those of the Act.ⁿ¹⁴ Where prescribed procedures are followed, the courts give an administrator's decisions to deny or revoke exemptions substantial deference.ⁿ¹⁵ The discretion is granted with respect to a specific case and does not extend to any statutory exemption generally.ⁿ¹⁶ The scope of an administrator's authority to deny, revoke or suspend an exemption is presented on a state-by-state basis in the State Guides that comprise Volumes Three and Four of this Treatise.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 204(a). Section 204 further provides:

(b) [Knowledge of order required.] A person does not violate Section 301, 303 through 306. 504 or 510 by an offer to sell, offer to purchase, sale, or purchase effected after the entry of an order issued under this section if the person did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of the order.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Johnson-Bowles Co. v. Division of Sec. of Dep't of Commerce, 829 P.2d 101 (Utah Ct. App. 1991) .

(n3)Footnote 3. [Oregon CITE section 59.045]

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Washington, R.C.W. § 21.20325:

The director or administrator may by order deny, revoke, or condition any exemption specified in subsections (10), (11), (12), or (13) of RCW 21.20.310 or in RCW 21.20.320, as now or hereafter amended, with respect to a specific security or transaction. No such order may be entered without appropriate prior notice to all interested parties, opportunity for hearing, and written findings of fact and conclusions of law, except that the director or administrator may by order summarily deny, revoke, or condition any of the specified exemptions pending final determination of any proceeding under this section. Upon the entry of a summary order, the director or administrator shall promptly notify all interested parties that it has been entered and of the reasons therefor and that within fifteen days of the receipt of a written request the matter will be set down for hearing. If no hearing is requested and none is ordered by the director or administrator, the order will remain in effect until it is modified or vacated by the director or administrator. If a hearing is requested or ordered, the director or administrator, after notice of and opportunity for hearing to all interested persons, may modify or vacate the order or extend it until final determination. No order under this section may operate retroactively. No person may be considered to have violated RCW 21.20.140 as now or hereafter amended by reason of any offer or sale effected after the entry of an order under this section if he or she sustains the burden of proof that he or she did not know, and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known, of the order.

(n5)Footnote 5. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 404.

(n6)Footnote 6. 70 P.S. § 1-204.

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 203.

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Corp. Code § 25105; see also Virginia: Code Va. § 13.1-514.1.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Off. Comment 7, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act.

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1843.01 (certain government securities).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Montana: M.C.A § 30-10-106.

See also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 503(a) ("In a civil action or administrative proceeding under this [Act], a person claiming an exemption, exception, preemption, or exclusion has the burden to prove the availability of the claim").

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(3); 70 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 1-204(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(c); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act. § 404, Official Code Comment.

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(III), (IV).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Johnson-Bowles Co. v. Division of Sec. of Dep't of Commerce, 829 P.2d 101 (Utah App. 1991) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(c), redesignated as § 404 in the Revised Uniform Securities Act in 1985 by NCCUSL. L. Loss & E. Cowett, Blue Sky Law 380 (1958).

62 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation 8.syn

§ 8.syn Synopsis to Chapter 8: Exempt Issuer Transactions

§ 8.01 Exempt Issuer Transactions Generally

§ 8.02 Solicitation of Interest ("Test the Waters")

§ 8.03 Statutory Issuer Exemptions

[1] "Offer" and "Sale" Definition Exclusions

[a] Stock Dividends

[b] Stock Splits

[c] Acts Incident to Class Votes by Stockholders

[d] Judicially Approved Reorganizations

[2] Fairness-Approved Exchanges for Outstanding Securities, Claims or Property Interests

[3] Transactions with Underwriters

[4] Transactions in Secured Evidences of Indebtedness

[5] Bankruptcy, Receiver or Conservator Transactions

[6] Offers and Sales to Institutional or Financial Investors

[7] Transactions With Existing Security Holders

[a] Preemptive Rights

[b] Conversions, Warrants and Other Rights

[c] Debt Securities and Creditor Claims

[d] Reorganization and Reclassification Exchanges

[e] Commissions or Other Remuneration

[f] Filings

[8] Reorganizations and Business Combinations

[9] Preorganization Subscriptions

[10] Employee Stock Purchase Programs and Other Benefit Plan Transactions

[11] Transactions by Non-Profit or Charitable Issuers

[12] Coordinate Federal and State "Offer" Exemptions

[13] Coordinate "Private" Offering Exemptions

[14] Other Coordinate State and Federal Exemptions

§ 8.04 Special Purpose Statutory Exemptions

[1] Cooperatives

[2] Sale of an Enterprise

[3] Local Development and Venture Capital Enterprises

§ 8.05 Offers and Sales to Accredited Investors

§ 8.06 Limited Offering Exemptions

[1] In General

[2] The Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE")

[a] Regulation D Generally

[b] ULOE Coordination with Regulation D

[c] "Bad Boy" Disqualifications

[d] Investor Qualifications

[e] Filing Requirements

[f] Other Conditions

[3] The Federal Section 4(2) "Private Offering" Exemption

[a] Ability of Offerees to Fend for Themselves

[b] Availability of Information

[c] Manner of Offering

[d] Number of Offerees and Purchasers

[e] Absence of Redistribution

[4] State "Private Offering" Exemptions

[5] The Uniform Act Model

[6] Other Limited Offerings

[a] "Local" Issuer Limited Offerings

[b] Isolated or De Minimis Issuer Offering Exemptions

[c] California Coordinate Limited Offering Exemption: SEC Rule 1001

[7] Integration of Limited Offerings

§ 8.07 Small Business Offerings

[1] Small Business Offering Exemptions

[a] Rule 505 Coordinate Exemptions

[b] Section 4(2) Coordinate Exemptions

[c] Other "Small Business" Offering Exemptions

[2] Hybrid Exemptions: Small Business Limited Registration Procedures

[a] Uniform Limited Offering Registration (ULOR)

[b] Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR)

§ 8.08 Subject Matter Issuer Exemptions Subject Matter Issuer Exemptions

[1] Commodity Futures Contracts and Options on Commodity Futures

[2] Other Options

[3] Professional Corporation

[4] Real Estate Interests

[5] Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests

[6] Viatical Settlement Contracts

§ 8.09 Miscellaneous Issuer Exemptions

§ 8.10 General Compliance Considerations

[1] Combining Issuer Exemptions

[2] Legend Requirements for Offering Materials

§ 8.11 2002 Uniform Securities Act

63 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.01

§ 8.01 Exempt Issuer Transactions Generally

As presented in Chapter 7, particular types or categories of securities are exempt from registration or qualification requirements under state blue sky laws when their characteristics are such that there is no need for the protection afforded by these procedures. Whether because of other applicable regulation or quality assurances that are a function of listing requirements; other "blue chip" qualifications or their non-traditional elements; or the purpose for which they are used; the risk characteristics of exempt securities do not indicate the need for special investor protection afforded by registration or qualification under blue sky laws. The same holds true in certain transactional settings, and the collection of exempt transactions that is included in all blue sky laws also reflects the fundamental point that there are situations in which the protection of registration or qualification is simply not needed or is substantially diminished to the extent that the regulatory objective can be achieved by lesser or limited means, or through alternative mechanisms. This conclusion has historically driven not only the collection of statutory transaction exemptions in blue sky laws for both issuer and non-issuer transactions, but also the evolution of other significant transactional exemptions and limited offering mechanisms adopted in states by way of regulations or administrative orders. These include special provisions for small offerings by issuers intended to eliminate barriers to capital formation and promote local economic development.

This chapter explores the range of transaction exemptions for issuers of securities. Non-issuer transaction exemptions--those not involving distributions for the purpose of capital formation--are considered in depth in Chapter 9. As a prelude to considering both, however, it is essential to recognize that transactional exemptions apply only with regard to registration or qualification provisions of blue sky laws. Antifraud provisions and the administrative enforcement and civil remedies associated with them remain fully operational for exempt transactions. Equally important with regard to exempt transactions is the fact that in several instances a transactional "exemption" is in reality only a form of limited offering for which there are filing and other compliance elements. As noted above, the premise for any exemption is that there is no need for the full protections that registration or qualification procedures provide. The compensating circumstances of a transaction, however, may still involve certain mechanics of compliance that operate to assure that investor protection goals are not compromised even in those settings where full compliance with registration provisions is not required. Although significant uniformity in this process has historically been achieved through initiatives that have produced the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOE), for example, variations remain among the states in regard to some common transaction exemptions and, indeed, in the availability of some exemptions. Such variations are particularly significant for small business capital formation across state lines.

Although transaction exemptions operate to excuse compliance with registration or qualification requirements of state blue sky laws, another important consideration is that not all of them are self-executing. Some exemptions in several states have their own specific qualification requirements involving filings or a "Claim of Exemption,"ⁿ¹ for example, and fee requirements. In some cases there are affirmative administrative approval requirements. The exemption of offers and sales by non-profit or charitable issuers, for example, is frequently made subject to filing and approval requirements, as are transactions with an issuer's existing security holders under certain circumstances. These requirements are all discussed further below. In all states the burden of proving an exemption is upon the person claiming it, and administrators are commonly empowered to deny or revoke any transaction exemptions through administrative procedures that include temporary summary orders of revocationⁿ² when such action is deemed necessary or appropriate for the protection of investors.ⁿ³ The loss of a transaction exemption triggers significant enforcement authority and private civil remedies that in most instances involve rescission rights.ⁿ⁴

The Uniform Securities Act, in all of its iterations,ⁿ⁵ includes an array of issuer exemptions common to all state blue sky laws, whether or not a particular state law is based on the Uniform Act. They are likewise consistent with several of the transactional exemptions included in the federal Securities Act of 1933, and in most instances federal and state coordination of issuer transactions in reliance upon an exemption is not difficult. Also, state regulation of transactions by an issuer that are of a national character is now preempted by NSMIA, such that large scale "private" offerings conducted by an issuer in compliance with Rule 506 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933 are not subject to registration or qualification provision of state blue sky laws. The beginning premise, however, is that in all circumstances an exemption must be available for every transaction by an issuer that is conducted without compliance with the registration or qualification provisions of applicable state blue sky laws. Thus, the analysis below focuses on those specific statutory exemptions that are most commonly available in states whose laws are based upon the Uniform Act, or which otherwise have adopted common transaction exemptions in their statutes. Later in the chapter, limited offerings and other common administratively adopted forms of issuer exemptions are discussed in detail, with particular emphasis on their role today after the NSMIA redefinition of state and federal responsibility in the issuer distribution setting.

There is an important preliminary consideration for issuers, however. That is the extent to which an issuer may, without regard to the availability of any exemption, proceed to "test the waters" for proposed capital formation by soliciting indications of interest in advance of undertaking blue sky registration or qualification of certain types of offerings. "Test the waters" provisions in several states have been adopted and operate as exemptions to permit early assessment of the cost effectiveness of going forward in proposed capital formation activities. As a prelude to consideration of the array of statutory exemptions under blue sky laws these provisions are discussed immediately below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Nevada: See, e.g., Nev. Admin. Code § 90.495 (Claim of Exemption).

(n2)Footnote 2.

Indiana: See, e.g., Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(d).

(n3)Footnote 3.

New Jersey: See, e.g., N.J. Stat. § 49:3-50(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Although the authority to administratively suspend or revoke transaction exemptions exists in all states, many also provide relief from the harsh result of such an action to an issuer that engages in the offer or sale of a security in reliance on the exemption, and does not know and in the exercise of reasonable care could not have known of the administrative order suspending or revoking it, see, e.g. Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 409.2-204(b); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 204(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402; 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202.

64 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.02

§ 8.02 Solicitation of Interest ("Test the Waters")

A pilot project of NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--led in 1993 to a proposed rule addressing solicitations of interest prior to the filing of a registration statement under state blue sky laws. The NASAA Proposed Statement of Policy on Solicitation of Interest (Test the Waters) n1 has not been adopted by the NASAA membership pending a study of its effect in states that choose to adopt its use on an experimental basis. By rule, several states have adopted the procedure,n2 and in the State Guides included in Volumes Three and Four of this treatise, specific "test the waters" provisions adopted in various states are highlighted. All are patterned directly on the NASAA proposed statement, and all utilize a standard form (SOI), also developed by NASAA, to establish filing and minimum disclosure requirements for undertaking the process.

Under "testing the waters" procedures an issuer may make an offer, but not a sale, of a security for the sole purpose of soliciting an indication of interest in receiving a prospectus or similar disclosure document for the security. Conditions on testing the waters in all states that permit it are as follows:

- (1) The issuer is or will be a business entity organized under the laws of a U.S. state or possession, or a province or territory of Canada, and be engaged in or propose to engage in a business other than petroleum exploration and production, mining, or other extractive industries, and may not be a blind pool or other offering for which the specific business or properties cannot presently be described;
- (2) Indications of interest may be solicited only within a set period of time after receiving approval from the administrator;
- (3) No commission or fee may be paid to any person other than a registered dealer or agent for soliciting a potential investor;
- (4) The issuer intends to register the securities in the state, or seek approval for an exemption from registration or qualification;
- (5) The issuer files Form SOI, along with copies of any advertising or marketing materials at least ten business days before beginning any solicitation;
- (6) No money is accepted and no contract documents are signed until at least ten business days after the issuer completes registration or otherwise obtains approval to offer and sell the securities in the state, and no sale is made until three days after delivery of a prospectus or similar disclosure document;

(7) The issuer has no reason to believe that it is subject to any "bad boy" disqualification;ⁿ³ and

(8) Required legends are included on or with any published notice or materials used in the solicitation.ⁿ⁴

As addressed individually in the State Guides, the fact that a particular state has not adopted a specific testing the waters provision does not mean there is no accommodation made for the process. Other exemptions may be available to permit some limited pre-sale communications, as for example in the limited offer of preorganization subscriptions, for which a specific statutory transaction exemption is normally provided. Several states also provide de minimis or local issuer's exemptions among limited offering alternatives that are described in § 8.06 below. Designed to support small business capital formation, these provisions nevertheless typically involve significant restrictions. In states that provide specific testing the waters procedures, however, the process offers much greater flexibility and is particularly useful for small businesses and as an encouragement to small business capital formation. But for compliance with the above-described requirements, there are no limitations on solicitations of interest in terms of numbers, types of investors solicited or any other qualifying criteria.

In states with solicitation of interest procedures the process operates wholly apart from any coordinate "offer" exemption that may be available in regard to securities for which a registration statement has been filed under the federal Securities Act of 1933 but is not yet effective, or securities that are exempt from federal registration but for which a state registration has been filed and is not effective. These coordinate "offer" exemptions are discussed in section 8.03[12] below. In practice they permit mostly unrestricted offers of securities, but they are premised on the filing of a federal or state registration statement. The solicitation of interest procedure is intended to operate in advance of any such filing, in order to allow for a decision that such a filing will in fact be undertaken, or to determine whether another exemption may be available based upon indications of interest.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The NASAA Proposed Statement of Policy is reproduced in CCH NASAA Reports P 4001, at 2541.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g.,

Indiana: Ind. Admin. Code §1-13-7.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(15).

Virginia: 21 Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-70.

Wisconsin: WAC-DFI-Sec. 2-027.

(n3)Footnote 3. "Bad boy" disqualifications are those established for eligibility to use the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOEE) and other common limited offering exemptions permitted by states. They primarily involve having no prior history of criminal acts, no state enforcement proceedings based on fraud, no stop orders or other orders prohibiting the registration of securities or reliance on an exemption, and no civil injunctive orders relating to conduct or practices in connection with the purchase or sale of securities.

(n4)Footnote 4. "Legend" requirements imposed by states generally, and the standard form of legend required in testing the waters documents in particular, are discussed in § 8.10[2], infra.

65 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.03

§ 8.03 Statutory Issuer Exemptions

[1] "Offer" and "Sale" Definition Exclusionsⁿ¹ Applications of transactional exemptions for issuers under blue sky laws are premised upon the occurrence of a triggering event--an "offer" or "sale" of a security. In numerous states, however, the application of an exemption is never reached in certain circumstances in which by exclusions from key definitions there is no triggering event. For example, by definition the terms "sale," "offer," "sell" or "offer to sell" often expressly exclude:

- (a) Any stock dividend, whether the corporation distributing the dividend is the issuer of the stock or not, if nothing of value is given by stockholders for the dividend other than the surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend when each stockholder may elect to take the dividend in cash or property or in stock; or
- (b) Any stock split, reverse stock split or change in par value which involves the substitution of a security of an issuer for another security of the same issuer.ⁿ²

These transactions do not involve the essential "value" element of the definitions of offer or sale in blue sky laws, which in all cases turn on an attempt to dispose of a security "for value."ⁿ³ These transactions, by their very nature, do not evoke any need for blue sky law protection because they are essentially non-economic events and involve no investment decision. There are other transactions that are in some states also excluded from the key definitions that have different economic characteristics, but are nevertheless deemed to be outside the scope of needed protections. Thus in Delaware, for example, the terms "offer," "sale," "sell," or "offer to sell" also expressly exclude:

- (a) Any bona fide pledge or loan;
- (b) Any act incident to a vote by stockholders pursuant to the certificate of incorporation, or other provisions of law, on a merger, consolidation, reclassification of securities, dissolution or sale of corporate assets in consideration of the issuance of securities of the same or another corporation; or
- (c) Any act incident to a judicially approved reorganization in which a security is issued in exchange for one or more outstanding securities, claims, or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash.ⁿ⁴

These exclusions more commonly appear as specific transaction exemptions in blue sky laws rather than as exclusions from the key definitions of triggering events. Including them as exemptions rather than exclusions assures continued application of antifraud provisions and remedies while still excusing compliance with registration or qualification requirements. This is the approach taken in the 2002 Uniform Actⁿ⁵ and a majority of states.ⁿ⁶ Other than availability of antifraud protections, however, functionally there is no difference in blue sky treatment between definition exclusions and transaction exemptions as they relate to these particular types of transactions. Because they are more commonly treated as exemptions, however, further discussion of pledges or loans, acts incident shareholder approved corporate transactions, and acts incident to judicially approved reorganizations are separately discussed later. As for stock dividends and stock splits, certain considerations that are applicable whether they are treated as exclusions or exemptions are considered below.

[a] Stock Dividends Although stock dividends are not normally subject to blue sky registration, two questions often arise with respect to a stock dividend exclusion or exemption. The first is, does the exemption apply when the shareholder has a choice between a cash dividend and the stock dividend? Most states follow the Uniform Act provision,ⁿ⁷ and answer in the affirmative. The stock dividend is either excluded or exempt when nothing of value is given by stockholders for the dividend other than the surrender of a right to a cash or property dividend when each stockholder may elect to take the dividend in cash or property or stock. That is not the case in California, however, where a stock dividend paid on common stock must, among other qualifications, consist only of such common stock.ⁿ⁸ The distribution of the stock that is the subject of the dividend must be registered in California, unless otherwise exempt, if stockholders are given a choice between cash or shares.ⁿ⁹

The second question deals with the identity of the issuer of the securities that are the subject of the dividend. In other words, is registration required when the dividend securities are not issued by the declarer of the dividend? In the majority of states the exclusion or exemption is available regardless of the issuer's identity. This is also the Uniform Act approach. Here again, however, California, joined by several other states, requires that the distributor and the issuer be the same.ⁿ¹⁰

[b] Stock Splits When a corporation distributes additional stock to its shareholders pursuant to a stock split, the proportion of equity an individual holder has in the corporation is not changed, and there is no economic consequence for the transaction. Thus, it is logical to exclude stock splits from the scope of registration or qualification provisions in blue sky laws, and most states expressly do so.ⁿ¹¹ In states where relief is not specifically granted, it is difficult to say whether stock splits must be registered. However, an argument favoring their exemption can easily be made. As discussed above, the Uniform Securities Actⁿ¹² and the statutes of a number of states exclude stock dividends from the definition of "sale." The declaration of stock dividends affects the capital of a corporation and can conceivably detrimentally affect the status of holders of other classes of stock or other types of corporate securities.ⁿ¹³ On the other hand, a stock split has no effect on capital. Under such circumstances, it would not be unreasonable to say that there is less danger to security holders generally from a stock split than from a stock dividend, and to relieve dividends from registration requirements and not splits would seem illogical. Further, many states follow the Uniform Securities Actⁿ¹⁴ and provide an exemption for "any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer." A stock split should fall within such a provision. It would seem that a more realistic debate would center around whether stock splits are excluded from blue sky coverage because they do not constitute sales or whether they are merely exempt from registration because they are transactions with existing security holders.

Reverse stock splits present a different issue. In these situations, the corporation is decreasing the number of outstanding shares by offering, for example, one share for every ten and then buying up any fractional shares. This type of scheme could endanger stockholders of a publicly held corporation that plans to go private. This can have the effect of freezing out many shareholders and leaving them with only a fraction of their original investment.ⁿ¹⁵ Only a few states have a specific exemption for reverse stock splits, and in view of the problem facing shareholders in a reverse stock split it would be hazardous to conclude that a general exemption for a stock split would apply to reverse splits.

The statutes that exempt stock splits, or reverse stock splits, generally provide for the exemption without further ramification, but the California provision has a number of clauses designed to protect stockholders.ⁿ¹⁶ First, if there is more than one class of outstanding voting shares, neither type of split is permitted without registration.ⁿ¹⁷ Second, in the case of an ordinary stock split, registration is required if the securities are listed or admitted for trading on a national securities exchange or are the subject of two-way quotations regularly published in the National Daily Quotation Serviceⁿ¹⁸ and the market price of the stock as of the date of the split is less than two dollars per share.ⁿ¹⁹ Finally, in the case of a reverse stock split, the exemption is not available if the stock is not listed or admitted on a national securities exchange or published in the National Daily Quotation Service, if the corporation has the option of purchasing fractional shares that would result in substantial alteration of the proportionate interests of the shareholders.ⁿ²⁰

[c] Acts Incident to Class Votes by Stockholders As seen in the Delaware example quoted earlier, states may also exclude acts incident to shareholder approval of a merger or other corporate reorganization transaction of sale of corporate assets in consideration for issuance of securities from the definition of offer or sale, and thus place them entirely outside the scope of blue sky law coverage. This approach was taken in the original Uniform Securities Act,ⁿ²¹ and reflects the notion that charter documents and corporation laws control in this setting, and provide protections and remedies. As also noted above, however, the more common blue sky treatment of such transactions today is to make them the subject of a specific exemption, but which is also tied to security holder approval in accordance with controlling charter documents and laws. Exemptions for reorganizations and business transactions are discussed in section 8.03[8] below.

[d] Judicially Approved Reorganizations Business reorganizations are carried out on occasion by judicial proceedings. The common method of voluntary judicial reorganization is under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Codeⁿ²² where an insolvent business can continue operating by having the court approve an arrangement satisfactory to creditors. One of the methods that may be ordered or approved by the courts is to have the failing entity issue new securities in exchange for outstanding securities or in redemption of debt. Securities issued and exchanged pursuant to a court-ordered reorganization are excluded from the scope of the Uniform Securities Actⁿ²³ and Revised Uniform Act, Several states have adopted the approach,ⁿ²⁴ and exclude from the definition of offer or sale:

[Any] act incident to a judicially approved reorganization in which a security is issued in exchange for one or more outstanding securities, claims or property interests, or partly in exchange and partly for cash.ⁿ²⁵

Other states have opted instead to include this provision as an exemption rather than an exclusion from the offer and sale definition.ⁿ²⁶ This is the approach of the 2002 Uniform Securities Actⁿ²⁷ as well.

Various types of consideration may be given for the securities under these provisions. First, there may be an exchange for any outstanding securities. Second, there may an exchange with creditors for their claims against the organization or for any property interests outstanding. Although outright cash sales of the new securities are not permitted, the business undergoing judicial reorganization may accept a partial cash consideration, presumably when the value of the securities used for the exchange exceeds the value of the outstanding securities, claims or property interests held by an individual owner.ⁿ²⁸ A few states have general exemptions for judicial reorganizations without stipulations on acceptable consideration.ⁿ²⁹ The Illinois exemption differs from the Uniform Securities Act provision in wording alone and seems to adopt the same tests as the Uniform Act, including those bearing on consideration.ⁿ³⁰ Ohio's exemption stresses that the exchange must be strictly for outstanding securities, claims or property interests, and thus prohibits all cash sales, even those partly for outstanding interests and partly for cash.ⁿ³¹

The exemption for transactions with existing security holders, in general, is a transaction exemption and not an exemption for the securities. In other words, the exemption would not apply to any non-issuer trading in the securities. Any secondary trading in such securities would have to be registered or the subject of another exemption. As to judicially approved reorganizations, the rule is the same, but California and Massachusetts have acted to exempt all trading in securities issued pursuant to a reorganization under the Bankruptcy Act when approved by a court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ³²

[2] Fairness-Approved Exchanges for Outstanding Securities, Claims or Property Interests Section 202(9) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is a new provision added to provide a state counterpart to the exemption in section 3(a)(10) of the federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ³³ The exemption permits an issuer to distribute securities in exchange for outstanding securities or claims when the transaction is subject to a fairness determination and would be most commonly applicable to corporate reorganization or recapitalization transactions. The provision for fairness approved exchange transactions has always been a part of the federal securities laws. However, because few state counterparts existed its utility was limited. Ohio is one of the few states that included a counterpart provision in its blue sky law.ⁿ³⁴ The utility of such an exemption is apparent, however,ⁿ³⁵ and the drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act specifically added section 202(9), which provides an issuer exemption for:

[A] transaction in a security, whether or not the security or transaction is otherwise exempt, in exchange for one or more bona fide outstanding securities, claims, or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash, if the terms and conditions of the issuance and exchange or the delivery and exchange and the fairness of the terms and conditions have been approved by the administrator after a hearing.ⁿ³⁶

With the introduction or enactment of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, and with it this particular transaction exemption, in an increasing number of states,ⁿ³⁷ recognition of the utility of fairness-approved reorganization transactions pursuant to the exemption will expand. Its inclusion in the 2002 Uniform Act when there is no such provision in either the 1956 or 1985 versions of the Act clearly reflects the drafters' recognition that this formerly obscure and largely unavailable exemption has an important role to play in modern blue sky regulation.

[3] Transactions with Underwriters Under the federal Securities Act of 1933, negotiations and agreements between an issuer and an underwriter, or between underwriters, to publicly sell the issuer's securities are not considered sales for purposes of the statute.ⁿ³⁸ Because the federal provision is exclusionary, the effect is to remove such transactions from all protection offered by the Act, including the antifraud provisions.ⁿ³⁹ The Uniform Securities Act, while allowing a registration exemption for these transactions, still protects the participating parties by retaining application of the antifraud portion of the statute.ⁿ⁴⁰ The recommended Uniform Securities Act exemption (as opposed to exclusion) is for "any transaction between the issuer or other person on whose behalf the offering is made and an underwriter, or among underwriters...."ⁿ⁴¹

While most states have adopted the language of this provision,ⁿ⁴² it is probable that those jurisdictions without a comparable statutory exemption would imply a similar rule as a matter of necessity.ⁿ⁴³

California has a provision similar to the one in the Uniform Securities Act, but stipulates that the exemption is valid only if the securities are registered at the time of any distribution made in the state.ⁿ⁴⁴ Kansas has a blanket exemption for any offer or sale to an underwriter.ⁿ⁴⁵ Note also that in New York,ⁿ⁴⁶ except for the federal intrastate offering exemption,ⁿ⁴⁷ state registration is not required for any security which need not be registered under the Securities Act of 1933. The federal exclusion would, therefore, apply at least for registration purposes in these two states.

[4] Transactions in Secured Evidences of Indebtedness The investor who purchases shares of stock is risking money on the future value of equity of a company. The risk to the purchaser of priority debt securities of the same company may be somewhat less, but if the company fails, the investor will find herself in line with other creditors attempting to recover a fraction of the investment, assuming there is anything to recover at all. In both these cases, blue sky registration offers some protection to the investor willing to take the time to ascertain the company's financial position. If, however, a debt security is collateralized by a tangible asset, the risk of loss to the investor is significantly decreased.

Consider the example in which ABC Corporation holds a bond and mortgage on a warehouse owned by the XYZ Corporation. ABC, needing cash, decides to sell the bond and mortgage to investor I. The debt on the bond is now payable by XYZ to I. If XYZ defaults on its principal or interest payments, I can foreclose on the mortgage and recoup its losses at a foreclosure sale. In such a situation, the investor can as easily protect himself by examining the value and other aspects of the mortgaged property as he can by examining registration documents. Further, his position is safer than that of unsecured creditors since he can look to specific property to satisfy the debt. It is therefore logical to provide a registration exemption for transactions in secured evidences of indebtedness, such as the one in the Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ⁴⁸ However, this exemption is limited by the requirement that the entire mortgage, together with all the evidences of indebtedness which it secures, be sold as a unit.ⁿ⁴⁹ The unit limitation is an apparent attempt to keep the investor from being put in the position of competing with other creditors with similar claims against the same collateral.

There are several important considerations regarding the Uniform Securities Act exemption in the states that have adopted it.ⁿ⁵⁰ First, the provision is worded to permit public offerings of bonds and mortgages in unit transactions.ⁿ⁵¹ Nevertheless, one state adopting the Uniform Act language has, by regulation, prohibited media advertising or mass mailings soliciting offers or sales of mortgage units.ⁿ⁵² However, mailings advertising the offering may be made to registered broker-dealers and institutional investors.ⁿ⁵³ Second, the exemption is generally applicable to issuer transactions.ⁿ⁵⁴ However two states make it only a non-issuer transaction exemption.ⁿ⁵⁵

In some Uniform Act states, other restrictions have been placed on the use of the exemption. For example, one statute provides that the exemption is inapplicable if lands used to secure the indebtedness are subdivisions required to be registered under the Federal Interstate Land Sales Act.ⁿ⁵⁶ Another state bars the exemption to securities in the nature of investment contracts or profit sharing agreements.ⁿ⁵⁷

As indicated, the reasoning behind the exemption is that the purchaser is protected because identifiable tangible property secures the investment. This principle has been stressed in several states. As a result, regulations have been promulgated prohibiting, as part of a unit offering, any other property interest which would itself constitute a security.ⁿ⁵⁸ At least two non-Uniform Securities Act states have emphasized the exclusive nature of the purchaser's remedy in their statutes.ⁿ⁵⁹

A number of states not adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision have similar exemptions for unit sales of secured evidences of indebtedness.ⁿ⁶⁰ Often in these states, the statutes refer to sales to "a single purchaser at a single sale" in lieu of a "unit" sale. Interpretations comparing these terms have not yet been made, but there would seem to be little difference between them. One state requires that the property securing the indebtedness be located in the state.ⁿ⁶¹

The "unit" or "single sale to a single purchaser" requirement is not exclusive. Some states permit the sale of secured evidences of indebtedness to more than one purchaser. Some states specify the permissible number of purchasers and amount of indebtednessⁿ⁶² and may require that the pledged property be located in the state.ⁿ⁶³

Up to this point, only evidences of indebtedness secured by real property mortgages have been discussed, but the exemption provisions in most states also apply to sales of evidences of indebtedness secured by liens against tangible personal property.ⁿ⁶⁴ Illinois has a separate provision exempting evidences of indebtedness issued pursuant to conditional sales contracts.ⁿ⁶⁵ One unique provision exempts sales of evidences of indebtedness secured by the pledge of other securities.ⁿ⁶⁶ Also unique is another state's exemption for all evidences of indebtedness, secured or unsecured, when the transaction does not involve a public offering.ⁿ⁶⁷

[5] Bankruptcy, Receiver or Conservator Transactions The Uniform Act in all of its iterations, and the blue sky law in every state, exempts transactions by an executor, administrator of an estate, sheriff, marshal, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, guardian or conservator.ⁿ⁶⁸ Although the statutory exemption encompasses transactions by certain non-issuers acting in some official capacity, the provision for transactions by bankruptcy trustees, receivers or conservators permits the offer and sale of securities directly on behalf of an issuer. In most cases the sale of securities of an issuer by or at the direction of a bankruptcy trustee, receiver or conservator will be subject to approval of a court or administrative body responsible for establishing the supervised status of the issuer. Thus, as with securities issued in the context of reorganization proceedings, based on fairness determinations or judicial approval in accordance with section 3(a)(10) of the federal Securities Act of 1933, the offer and sale of securities by an issuer under the control of a bankruptcy trustee, receiver or conservator in connection with a court or agency supervised proceeding does not have the earmarks of a traditional distribution of securities for which the protection of registration or qualification under blue sky laws is necessary.

The exemption for transactions by bankruptcy trustees, receivers or conservators is nearly universally adopted in the form prescribed by the Uniform Act. There are, however, a few variations. New Hampshire, for example, makes an exemption available only for a sale, exchange or issuance of securities made pursuant to an order of a court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ⁶⁹ Maine adds the requirement, perhaps otherwise implied, that transactions made in reliance on the exemption must be made by the trustee, receiver or conservator "acting in their official capacities."ⁿ⁷⁰ Ohio makes the exemption available where the sales are subject to approval by, or are made pursuant to authority granted by a court, or are "otherwise lawfully made" by the fiduciary.ⁿ⁷¹ These variations only serve to underscore the baseline premise of the exemption that the circumstances in which securities distributed by the issuer are supervised and have characteristics different from a normal distribution.

[6] Offers and Sales to Institutional or Financial Investors With few variations, blue sky laws provide an exemption for offers and sales of securities to banks, savings institutions, trust companies, insurance companies, registered investment companies, pension or profit-sharing trusts, and, in general, to other financial or institutional buyers, or to broker-dealers.ⁿ⁷² Historically, the exemption has been loosely referred to as one for "sophisticated" investors. It does not, however, encompass "accredited investor" transactions, which are treated separately in all states, and in this treatise,ⁿ⁷³ although accredited investor definitions generally include the same entities that qualify as financial and institutional investors under this exemption with the addition of qualifying individuals.

For purposes of this exemption a "person" meeting the criteria of a particular state's definition can be a "financial or institutional investor." Indeed in Maine, for example, the definition expressly provides that a person may be a financial or institutional investor, whether acting for itself or others in a fiduciary capacity.ⁿ⁷⁴ In this context, however, "person" does not include a natural person or "individual," and indeed this is made clear in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act provision set out below.

Some states broadly define "institutional investor" to include any corporation.ⁿ⁷⁵ Because of the potential for abuse of the exemption that is inherent in such a broad definition, the scope of "institutional buyer" or "institutional investor" is often limited by rule or definition so as to make clear the exemption will not be available to cover sales of securities to an entity formed for the specific purpose of buying them, or for the purposes of avoiding compliance with the registration and qualification provisions of the blue sky law. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act defines "institutional investor" by various categories based on the federal definition contained in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ⁷⁶ and thus makes clear the intended scope of the exemption as being limited to:

1. A depository institution or international banking institution;
2. An insurance company;
3. A separate account of an insurance company;
4. An investment company as defined in the Investment Company Act of 1940;
5. A broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.03

6. An employee pension, profit-sharing, or benefit plan if the plan has total assets in excess of $10,000,000 or its investment decisions are made by a named fiduciary, as defined in ERISA, that is a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, an investment adviser registered or exempt from registration under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, an investment adviser registered under state law, a depository institution, or an insurance company;
7. A plan established and maintained by a state, political subdivision of a state, or any agency or instrumentality of a state or political subdivision of a state for the benefit of its employees, and which meets the same criteria specified in (f) above;
8. A trust, if it has total assets in excess of $10,000,000, its trustee is a depository institution, and its participants are exclusively plans of the type identified in (f) and (g) above, regardless of the size of their assets, except a trust that includes as participants self-directed individual retirement accounts or similar self-directed plans;
9. A U.S. Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3) organization, corporation, Massachusetts trust or similar business trust, limited liability company, or partnership, not formed for the specific purpose of acquiring the securities offered, with total assets in excess of $10,000,000;
- 10 A Small Business Investment Company licensed by the Small Business Administration in accordance with federal law and which has total assets in excess of $10,000,000;
11. A private business development company as defined under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, and having total assets in excess of $10,000,000;
12. A federal covered investment adviser acting for its own account;
13. A "qualified institutional buyer" as defined in Rule 144 under the Securities Act of 1933;
14. A "major U.S. Investor" as defined in Rule 15a-6(b)(4)(i) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; and
15. Any person, other than an individual, of institutional character with total assets in excess of $10,000,000 not organized for the specific purpose of evading the law.ⁿ⁷⁷

Financial and institutional purchasers of securities are deemed to be so knowledgeable with respect to their investments that they do not need the protection of blue sky registration provisions.ⁿ⁷⁸ The exemption applies to any offer or sale to a qualifying entity whether the purchaser is acting for itself or in some fiduciary capacity.ⁿ⁷⁹

Many states have enacted this specific provision,ⁿ⁸⁰ but even states that have adopted a comparable independent provision often designate the same investors as those named in the Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ⁸¹ It is at this point, however, that categorical breakdowns of financial and institutional investors begin to differ in Uniform Securities Act and non-Uniform Securities Act states. For example, while sales to broker-dealers are always exempt in many Non-Uniform Securities Act statesⁿ⁸² (as they are under the Uniform Securities Act),ⁿ⁸³ one provides that the exemption is applicable only if the broker-dealer is actively engaged in business.ⁿ⁸⁴ A more important difference among the statutes deals with the definition of sophisticated investors. As has already been pointed out, both Uniform Securities Act and Non-Uniform Securities Act states designate specific purchasers who are deemed sophisticated investors, and, of course, additional designations are often made.ⁿ⁸⁵ But there is a definite limit placed on categories by requiring the investor to be a financial institution or institutional investor. This limitation exists in Uniform Securities Act statesⁿ⁸⁶ and in a number of non-Uniform Securities Act states.ⁿ⁸⁷ It has been stated that such a provision is broad enough to include as an institutional buyer a college purchasing for an endowment fund or a labor union investing surplus fundsⁿ⁸⁸ but would exclude a corporation having no further attribute indicating sophistication.ⁿ⁸⁹ The reason for the exclusion is that incorporation alone does not necessarily imply knowledge of the investment world.ⁿ⁹⁰ Nevertheless, some statutes do include corporations as sophisticated investorsⁿ⁹¹ and allow a registration exemption whenever a security is sold to a corporation.

Provisions also exist which allow the exemption for sales to any association,ⁿ⁹² corporation,ⁿ⁹³ organization,ⁿ⁹⁴ or even personⁿ⁹⁵ with substantial business activity in purchasing securities. The effect of such a provision may be to deprive purchasers of needed protection. In one case,ⁿ⁹⁶ a family association was formed to which individual members contributed money for the purpose of purchasing securities. Although none of the persons involved had any experience in dealing in securities, the group was found to be an association with substantial business dealings in securities within the meaning of the statute.ⁿ⁹⁷

Sometimes, unexpected results are the outcome of having to look to other laws to ascertain who are qualifying investors. For example, sales to insurance companies are usually exempt,ⁿ⁹⁸ but in a case where securities were sold to a fraternal benefit society, it was held that the sale was to a sophisticated investor since fraternal benefit societies were subject to the provisions of the state's insurance law.ⁿ⁹⁹ It should also be noted that the exemption applies only where the qualifying investor is the purchaser. Thus, in a case where securities were exchanged, the portion of the transaction where securities were transferred by the qualifying investor to one not qualified was not exempt from registration.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

In some states, the exemption applies not only to offers and sales of securities, but to any transfer or delivery.ⁿ¹⁰¹ The difference was deemed important in a criminal prosecution where the defendant had delivered securities to a bank. The court overruled the state's contention that the exemption applied only to securities which are sold, and held that if the legislature did not intend mere delivery to be within the exemption, the word should have been deleted from the statute.ⁿ¹⁰² One state will not allow the exemption to apply to oil, gas and mining securities unless the purchaser is knowledgeable in dealing in these specific securities.ⁿ¹⁰³ Under the laws of the states adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision,ⁿ¹⁰⁴ the purchaser may buy the securities either for itself or as trustee. This is also true under the laws of some other states,ⁿ¹⁰⁵ but if the purchaser is buying in a fiduciary capacity, he may be required to act as trustee under specific applicable law.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ Allowing purchases as trustee, however, is not the same as permitting resales to customers. This practice is specifically prohibited in two states.ⁿ¹⁰⁷

For purposes of the New York exemption, it is necessary to look at the "private offering" exemption under the Federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ New Yorkⁿ¹⁰⁹ has a blanket exemption for any security exempt from the Act unless the exemption involved is for intrastate offerings.ⁿ¹¹⁰ Under the federal private offering exemption, one of the factors to be considered in determining whether an offering is public or private is the financial sophistication of the purchaser. Thus, it has been said: "An offering to 100 commercial banks is probably not public but an offering to 10 individuals including one old lady unversed in financial matters probably is."ⁿ¹¹¹ In view of the New York statute, it is probable that a similar outlook would be taken.ⁿ¹¹² Filings for the financial and institutional investor exemption are also required in certain states.ⁿ¹¹³

Issuer-Affiliated Investors. As a variant on the financial and institutional investor exemption, a few states extend qualification for an exemption based on association with the issuer. These are separate exemptions, but are based on the notion that the association with the issuer in some meaningful capacity negates the need for protection that registration or qualification would provide. Importantly, the exemption also encompasses individuals who meet the association requirements. Indiana, for example, exempts the offer, sale or issuance of corporate securities to persons employed by the issuer as a director, executive officer, administrator, manager or full time professional for at least one year.ⁿ¹¹⁴ The exemption also extends to offers, sales and issuances to such employees of any affiliate of the issuer.ⁿ¹¹⁵ Pennsylvania exempts offers and sales made by issuers to principals which, as defined, comprises officers, directors, beneficial owners of more than 10 percent of outstanding stock, persons engaged in a principal business function for the issuer and relatives of such persons.ⁿ¹¹⁶ Illinois exempts the offer or sale of securities to any director, executive officer, or general partner of the issuer, or any director, executive officer, or general partner of a general partner of the issuer.ⁿ¹¹⁷ Indiana exempts the same persons, in addition to certain accountants, lawyers, and affiliates of the issuer and certain persons who own at least ten percent of the issuer's outstanding stock.ⁿ¹¹⁸

Pennsylvanianⁿ¹¹⁹ and Wisconsinⁿ¹²⁰ exempt securities issued by a licensed broker-dealer to its officers, partners or employees. Under regulations in both states, filings are usually required.ⁿ¹²¹ However, Pennsylvania will not require the filing if the securities are issued to a general partner or to the broker-dealer's president, secretary, treasurer or any vice-president in charge of a principal business function of the broker-dealer.ⁿ¹²² In Wisconsin, the filing is not required if the security evidences a temporary subordinated borrowing by a broker-dealer that is a member of a national securities exchange, which is made in accordance with the rules of that exchange.ⁿ¹²³

[7] Transactions With Existing Security Holders The Uniform Securities Act has an exemption for transactions with existing security holders, and most state blue sky laws track that exemption. Note, however, that the exemption is in addition to the previously discussed exclusions of certain transactions from the definitions of "offer" and "sale."ⁿ¹²⁴ The specific exemption is for any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer, including persons who at the time of the transaction are holders of convertible securities, non-transferable warrants, or transferable warrants exercisable within not more than ninety days of their issuance, provided: (1) no commission or other remuneration (other than a standby commission) is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting any security holder; or, if there is to be solicitation; (2) the issuer first files a notice specifying the terms of the offer and the Administrator does not by order disallow the exemption within a specified time period.ⁿ¹²⁵ The latter provision, although common in blue sky laws, is no longer viable after NSMIA in connection with exchange offers. Section 3(a)(9) of the federal Securities Act of 1933ⁿ¹²⁶ exempts exchange offers with existing security holders. Under NSMIAⁿ¹²⁷ the securities involved in transactions exempt from federal registration under section 3(a)(9) are federal "covered securities."ⁿ¹²⁸ Thus, state administrators may not impose approval requirements or otherwise subject transactions to any requirement relating to registration or qualification, the result being that the state exemption for those specific transactions is conditioned only on there being no commission or remuneration paid for solicitation. However, as discussed below in regard to filing requirements generally,ⁿ¹²⁹ states are not preempted from continuing to enforce filing and associate approval requirements when no federal section 3(a)(9) transaction is involved.

The federal exemption for transactions with existing security holders is focused specifically on exchanges by an issuer with its security holders. State exemptions, on the other hand, follow the Uniform Act approach and generally encompass any transaction involving the distribution of the securities of the issuer exclusively among its own security holders.ⁿ¹³⁰ The scope of the blue sky exemption for distributions to existing security holders produces some complexity in application, and there are divergent approaches among the states. First, the subject has been touched upon before in terms of statutory inclusions and exclusions that pertain to the definition of the terms "offer" or "sale" in blue sky laws.ⁿ¹³¹ If a particular distribution has been excluded from the definition, registration, of course, is not required. Other states may in fact relieve the same type of distribution from registration requirements by means of an exemption rather than an exclusion. While the effects of an exclusion are broader than those of an exemption, the results of both types of statutes are the same as far as registration is concerned. In the same respect, some transactions with existing security holders are deliberately retained within the definition of "sale," thus implying that registration is required.ⁿ¹³² Nevertheless, the statutes often exempt from registration transactions that are specifically designated as "sales."

More substantive complexity occurs in particular situations, such as the distribution of preemptive rights, exchanges of equity securities for debt instruments, and particular aspects of transactions involving conversions, warrants and other rights. Reorganization or reclassification transactions involving exchanges with existing holders also present certain issues. All of these are discussed more particularly below, along with procedural elements.

[a] Preemptive Rights Preemptive rights give existing corporate stockholders the right to purchase newly issued stock before the shares can be offered to non-stockholders.ⁿ¹³³ The Uniform Securities Act exemption applies to "any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer,"ⁿ¹³⁴ and is intended to encompass the distribution of preemptive rights.ⁿ¹³⁵ Presumably, this is also the case with exemptions based on the Uniform Act. It is important to note that the exercise of preemptive rights involves the sale of securities for a cash consideration. This is quite different from an exchange of securities with existing security holders such as would occur in a conversion. It is also different from a distribution of securities such as would occur pursuant to a stock split.ⁿ¹³⁶ The draftsmen of the Uniform Securities Act indicated that an exemption for preemptive rights might be constitutionally mandated under the commerce clause.ⁿ¹³⁷ It is therefore important to consider that the exemption for transactions with existing security holders in some states applies only to exchanges of securities or new distributions of securities without monetary consideration.ⁿ¹³⁸

If the drafters of the Uniform Act were correct, then exemptions for sales in preemptive rights are implied in every state on constitutional grounds. But exemption provisions not directly or indirectly referring to cash sales with existing security holders would probably not exempt such transactions in other circumstances.ⁿ¹³⁹ Iowa, for example,ⁿ¹⁴⁰ has several exemptions involving transactions with existing security holders. One deals with exchanges of securities in reorganizations, mergers and similar transactions.ⁿ¹⁴¹ A second exempts judicially approved reorganizations where securities are exchanged for outstanding securities, claims or property interests.ⁿ¹⁴² A third exempts distributions of stock dividends.ⁿ¹⁴³ Except for transactions pursuant to judicial reorganizations in which partial cash consideration is permitted,ⁿ¹⁴⁴ the only transactions with existing security holders which may be for cash are those which involve preemptive rights and those which involve warrants and similar rights when exercised.ⁿ¹⁴⁵ Under such a statute an exemption would not be available where a corporation issued new shares and offered them strictly to previously existing shareholders in the absence of preemptive rights.

The particular focus on distributions involving preemptive rights--issuer sales to its security holders for cash--points up a more general consideration. There is a danger to the investing public in exempting cash sales to existing security holders. Consider, for example, the following situation: In 1992, X buys non-exempt stock in the ABC corporation not knowing that the stock is not registered. In 1995, the corporation issues additional shares which are offered to and purchased by X. In 1996, X brings suit against ABC corporation to recover the investment on the grounds that the sales were made in violation of the blue sky law. ABC defends the first sale on the ground that there is a two year statute of limitation on such actions under the securities act and X's suit is not timely. This is held a valid defense. X counters that the second sale is not so barred and seeks recovery as to that sale. However, in a case analogous to this situationⁿ¹⁴⁶ it was held that recovery could not be had since X had become an existing security holder by virtue of the first sale and the statute exempted sales by a corporation to its security holders. The judgment in this case seems harsh, however, especially in view of an almost simultaneous decision of another state holding that the exemption for sales to existing security holders did not apply where the original securities were sold in violation of a previously claimed exemption.ⁿ¹⁴⁷

[b] Conversions, Warrants and Other Rights A convertible security usually consists of preferred stock or a debt security which may be exchanged for the common stock of the issuer. At the time of the conversion, the securities are exchanged without additional consideration.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ A warrant is a transferable right, often attached to preferred stock or a debt security, which gives the owner the right to purchase other securities, usually stock, of the issuer. At the time the warrant is exercised, the owner keeps the preferred stock or debt security and pays an additional consideration for the securities purchased under the warrant.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ The term "warrant" is sometimes used interchangeably with "option." Apparently, the technical difference between the two is that options are purchased or received independently of any other security, they are usually non-transferable and generally run to corporate underwriters, promoters, executives and employees.ⁿ¹⁵⁰ They are also usually not evidenced by a document constituting a security, as a warrant is.

It has already been seen how exchanges of convertible securities and the exercise of rights to purchase other securities are generally considered sales under the various securities acts.ⁿ¹⁵¹ Nevertheless, such conversions or purchases pursuant to rights are usually exempt as transactions with existing security holders. Conversions, particularly, which involve no more than an exchange without other consideration, are exempt from registration in most states.ⁿ¹⁵² Warrants and other purchase rights, however, are exempt only when specified in the statute or when the statute generally exempts sales to, as opposed to exchanges with, existing security holders.

The Uniform Securities Act exemption treats holders of non-transferable warrants as existing security holders.ⁿ¹⁵³ If, however, the warrants are transferable, they must be exercisable not more than ninety days after their date of issuance or the holders will not be considered existing security holders within the meaning of the exemption.ⁿ¹⁵⁴ This ninety-day rule for transferable warrants is a common feature of the exemption provision in many states.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ x-ref Illinois, in fact, will deny the exemption if it involves transferable purchase rights regardless of the period in which they may be exercised.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

[c] Debt Securities and Creditor Claims When securities are issued pursuant to a judicially approved reorganization they may, in most states, be exchanged not only for outstanding debt securities, but for claims and property interests in the hands of creditors.ⁿ¹⁵⁷ A few states permit similar exchanges in statutory reorganizations conducted without court approval, even to the extent of allowing partial cash consideration.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ However, outside of reorganization situations, the question arises as to whether or not the exemption for transactions with existing security holders applies to holders of outstanding debt securities or even to exchanges with holders of claims against or property interests in the issuer.

It has already been established that exchanges of convertible securities, which are often debt securities, are exempt in most states.ⁿ¹⁵⁹ Generally, in situations where securities are exchanged with existing security holders, rather than sold for cash, the statutes exempting such exchanges ordinarily extend the exemption to issuers making the exchange with holders of debt securities.ⁿ¹⁶⁰ Under a broad exemption, such as the one in the Uniform Securities Act,ⁿ¹⁶¹ there appears to be nothing to prevent the cash sale of newly issued securities to holders of debt securities, even where the new issue is of a different type of security. This is seemingly the case under most of the state exemptions.ⁿ¹⁶² However, some statutes specify the types of securities that may be outstanding for purposes of the exemption and these provisions tend to eliminate debt securities.ⁿ¹⁶³ In all these states the statutes do not treat ordinary creditors as security holders unless the exchange is pursuant to a reorganization.

[d] Reorganization and Reclassification Exchanges Where two corporations are involved in a merger or consolidation at least one of those corporations is going to disappear, and the holders of securities in the corporation which will no longer exist, unless they are bought out, will have to receive the securities of the surviving corporation in exchange for their old securities. Similarly, if corporation ABC agrees to buy all the assets of corporation XYZ in exchange for ABC's securities, the exchange is not with security holders of the ABC corporation. The California exemption for mergers, consolidations and sales of corporate assets applies to "Any exchange incident to [such transactions]," and would therefore apply to exchanges with security holders of the other corporation when other statutory conditions are met.ⁿ¹⁶⁴ This principle is applicable in many states with exemptions more liberal than California's.

In statesⁿ¹⁶⁵ that have substantially adopted the Uniform Securities Act exemption for transactions with existing securities holders,ⁿ¹⁶⁶ exchanges with the issuer's own holders would seem to be exempt in a reorganization whether one or more entities were involved. Outside of the Uniform Securities Act provision, and sometimes in addition to it,ⁿ¹⁶⁷ exemptions exist which would apply to exchanges with existing security holders in various types of reorganizations.ⁿ¹⁶⁸

Exchanges with security holders of a non-surviving corporation through a reorganization qualify for a registration exemption rather than an exclusion in other states.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ While such exchanges would probably be exempt as transactions with existing security holders in most states, California, on the other hand, has no such blanket exemption. There are a few provisions which supply an exemption for corporate reorganizations, but only under the most stringent of conditions. First, if the restructuring involves only changes within a single corporation, negotiations or agreements prior to solicitation of shareholder approval are exempt.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ Insofar as the change itself is concerned, alternate exemptions are provided. The first allows the exemption for changes in rights, preferences, privileges or restrictions on the condition that the number of security holders of any class which will be directly or indirectly, substantially and adversely affected by the change who reside in California represent less than twenty-five percent of the total number of holders of such class or classes of outstanding securities.ⁿ¹⁷¹ The second exemption is for such changes in outstanding equity securities generally, but not if any class of shareholders is adversely affected by the change.ⁿ¹⁷² If the reorganization involves a second corporation, such as in a merger, then the exemptions which apply are only for negotiations and agreements prior to shareholder approvalⁿ¹⁷³ and for exchanges of securities where the number of security holders in California of any class adversely affected by the change is less than twenty-five percent of the total number of holders.ⁿ¹⁷⁴

[e] Commissions or Other Remuneration Commissions are generally prohibited for soliciting purchases or exchanges for a new issue of securities from among existing security holders.ⁿ¹⁷⁵ However, this prohibition is not intended to preclude compensated officers, directors and employees from selling or offering the securities. It merely prevents them from receiving additional compensation for doing so.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ The prohibition against payment of commissions also has an exception under the Uniform Securities Actⁿ¹⁷⁷ and in most states.ⁿ¹⁷⁸ When securities are sold pursuant to a rights offering in which an underwriter is working on a standby basis,ⁿ¹⁷⁹ a commission is permitted.ⁿ¹⁸⁰

[f] Filings As noted earlier, under the original Uniform Securities Act and as the exemption is currently in place in many states, a filing is required for the exemption for transactions with existing security holders if a commission, other than a standby commission, is to be paid for soliciting purchasers from among the existing security holders. However, the procedure, which also involves the opportunity for the administrator to review terms and disallow the exemption is no longer permitted after NSMIA with respect to exchange offers that are federally exempt under section 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act of 1933. For offers and sales of new or additional securities by an issuer to its existing security holders other than by way of an exchange offering, however, there is no NSMIA preemption of state authority under existing blue sky exemption requirements. States may continue to enforce advance filing and disallowance provisions for distributions to existing security holders not involving an exchange offer, and in which a commission or other remuneration is to be paid.

Other states with general exemptions for transactions with existing security holders, but which differ from the Uniform Securities Act, require filings in any case in which the exemption is claimed.ⁿ¹⁸¹ Some states require filings when securities are to be exchanged pursuant to a reorganization. Other states require the filing whenever a non-judicial reorganization will result in an exchange of securities.ⁿ¹⁸² In one state, a filing is required only in a non-corporate reorganization involving consideration of securities of another entity.ⁿ¹⁸³ Filings in a few states are required in any statutory or judicial reorganization, including stock splits,ⁿ¹⁸⁴ but in one of these states, only when commissions are paid for soliciting the transactions.ⁿ¹⁸⁵ A few states require a filing when an exemption is sought for distributing a stock dividend,ⁿ¹⁸⁶ but one state limits the requirement by requiring the filing only when the securities distributed as the dividend are of another issuer.ⁿ¹⁸⁷

[8] Reorganizations and Business Combinations In the course of a business reorganization transaction securities in the hands of existing holders are often affected. Par value of shares may be raised or lowered, voting rights may be changed, preemptive rights may be granted or extinguished or there may be any number of changes which might affect the previous investment of the holder. A reorganization of a corporation might affect the structure of only that corporation, such as through recapitalization,ⁿ¹⁸⁸ or it might affect the structure of two or more corporations, such as through merger, consolidation or sale of corporate assets. A change in the rights, preferences, privileges or restrictions of outstanding securities may be considered a sale of securities.ⁿ¹⁸⁹ Moreover, many mergers and similar transactions have since 1972 been defined as sales for purposes of the federal securities laws.ⁿ¹⁹⁰ Nearly all states provide an exemption for such transactions from blue sky registration and qualification requirements in these settings, and section 202(18) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act today reflects the substance of all such exemptions. Section 202(18) exempts:

[a] transaction involving the distribution of the securities of an issuer to the security holders of another person in connection with a merger, consolidation, exchange of securities, sale of assets, or other reorganization to which the issuer, or its parent or subsidiary and the other person, or its parent or subsidiary, are parties.ⁿ¹⁹¹

Although the 2002 Uniform Securities Act exemption and its 1985 Revised Uniform Act predecessorⁿ¹⁹² do not explicitly require that the subject transaction be the result of security holder approval, state corporation laws control in the process and generally require shareholder approval. Likewise, articles of incorporation or corporate charters, or partnership or LLC operating agreements may contain specific provisions mandating security holder approval. Most states incorporating the exemption into blue sky laws added the express security holder approval requirement. Thus in Georgia, for example, the blue sky transaction exemption is available for:

Any transaction involving the issuance or transfer of securities of the issuer by the issuer or a subsidiary of the issuer to a corporation or its shareholders, to a business or real estate investment trust, or to the holders of beneficial interest thereof, or to a partnership or limited partnership or the partners thereof in connection with merger, share exchange, consolidation, reclassification of securities or sale or transfer of corporate, trust, or partnership assets in consideration of the issuance or transfer of such securities, where the transaction must be approved by the holders of at least a majority of the voting shares, beneficial interests, or partnership interests of such corporation, trust, or partnership pursuant to its articles or certificate of incorporation, corporate charter or trust instrument, partnership agreement, or the applicable corporation, trust or partnership statute.ⁿ¹⁹³

Some states simply exclude "act[s] incident to a class vote by stockholders" pursuant to articles of incorporation or an applicable statute from the definition of "offer" or "sale" and thus exclude those transactions from blue sky law coverage altogether.ⁿ¹⁹⁴ One of the reasons for the exclusion is that in most states the corporation law or other general statutes provide an adequate remedy for defrauded or injured security holders victimized in such transactions.ⁿ¹⁹⁵

[9] Preorganization Subscriptions In most blue sky statutes, preorganization subscriptions are specifically included within the definition of security.ⁿ¹⁹⁶ However, states have long recognized the need for some level of flexibility in the earliest stage of capital formation, and thus include an exemption for limited preorganization subscription activity. These exemptions, based on the original Uniform Act provisionⁿ¹⁹⁷ permit offers or sales of a "preorganization certificate or subscription" to a small number of persons provided that no commission or other remuneration is paid for solicitation, and that no payment is made by any subscriber. It is important to bear in mind that because of the nature of preincorporation subscriptions, this exemption, at best, only postpones registration unless the securities subscribed to can be sold pursuant to a separate exemption.ⁿ¹⁹⁸ For example, if promoters of an incipient corporation are offering preincorporation subscriptions to the stock that will be issued upon incorporation, this exemption will not apply to the stock. If another exemption applicable to the stock is not available, registration is required.ⁿ¹⁹⁹

The Uniform Securities Act exemption permits up to ten subscribers, although the number varies considerably among the states.ⁿ²⁰⁰ Regardless of the number of permitted subscribers, the availability of the exemption for preincorporation subscriptions is conditioned on there being no payment made by any of the subscribers.ⁿ²⁰¹ In one state, provision is made for holding subscription payments in escrow.ⁿ²⁰² In another, subscriptions are voidable at the will of the purchaser until organization is complete and the securities subscribed to have been registered.ⁿ²⁰³ As a general rule, there is a prohibition against the payment of commissions for soliciting buyers for preorganization subscriptions,ⁿ²⁰⁴ although there is no intention to prevent compensated directors, officers and employees from selling the subscriptions on the condition that additional compensation is not paid for any of the solicitations or sales.ⁿ²⁰⁵

The Uniform Actⁿ²⁰⁶ and the blue sky laws of most statesⁿ²⁰⁷ apply the exemption to "any offer or sale of preorganization certificate or subscription. ..." At face value, this would appear to apply to a preorganization subscription for any type of security issued by any type of organization. However, in one state having this provision,ⁿ²⁰⁸ a court interpretation limited the applicability of the exemption.ⁿ²⁰⁹ In that case it was held that the exemption was only for "[s]ubscriptions for shares of the capital stock of a corporation prior to the incorporation thereof."²¹⁰ As a result, the subscriptions, which included subscriptions for debentures as well as capital stock, were held not to be eligible for the exemption.²¹¹ In an apparent reaction to this decision, the state legislature amended the statute to make the exemption applicable to "any offer or sale of a preorganization certificate or subscription for any security to be issued by any person."²¹² It would seem unlikely that such a judicial result would be reached in other states having language similar to that in the Uniform Securities Act. Where it is the intention of the exemption to limit the subscription to a particular security of a particular issuer, such stipulations are usually set forth in the statute.²¹³ Other states have individual requirements such as requiring the purchase to be for investment purposes.²¹⁴

Several states do not specifically exempt preorganization subscriptions from registration and qualification requirements.²¹⁵ Nevertheless, such subscriptions may in fact escape registration under certain conditions. One state court has ruled that preincorporation subscriptions need not be registered, at least under circumstances where all the subscribers act as promoters of the corporation and are fully informed of the nature and risks of the venture.²¹⁶ Other states have an exemption for issuance of stock to incorporators,²¹⁷ and it has been suggested that this exemption might also apply to a preincorporation subscription among such incorporators.²¹⁸ It is also likely that other limited offering exemptions would apply to preincorporation subscriptions.²¹⁹

[10] Employee Stock Purchase Programs and Other Benefit Plan Transactions Section 202(21) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is an amalgam of prior Uniform Act provisions and the common provisions made in blue sky laws throughout the country regarding the sale of employee benefit plan securities to plan participants. Although as a matter of law not all benefit plan interests are securities, many blue sky laws specifically address transactions involving the issuance of a security in connection with a stock bonus or other plan requiring no payment or consideration other than services.²²⁰ The 2002 Uniform Act broadly summarizes the area by providing an exemption for:

[e]mployees' stock purchase, savings, option, profit-sharing, pension, or similar employees' benefit plan, including any securities, plan interests, and guarantees issued under a compensatory benefit plan or compensation contract, contained in a record, established by the issuer, its parents, its majority-owned subsidiaries, or the majority-owned subsidiaries of the issuer's parent for the participation of their employees including offers or sales of such securities to:

- (A) directors; general partners; trustees, if the issuer is a business trust; officers; consultants; and advisors;
- (B) family members who acquire such securities from those persons through gifts or domestic relations orders;
- (C) former employees, directors, general partners, trustees, officers, consultants, and advisors if those individuals were employed by or providing services to the issuer when the securities were offered; and
- (D) insurance agents who are exclusive insurance agents of the issuer, or the issuer's subsidiaries or parents, or who derive more than 50% of their annual income from those organizations.²²¹

The 2002 Uniform Act exemption is modeled in part on Rule 701 under the federal Securities Act of 1933,²²² which establishes an exemption from federal registration requirements for offers and sales of securities pursuant to certain compensatory benefit plans and contracts relating to compensation. A number of states simply incorporate Rule 701 into a blue sky exemption for any transaction that is or would be exempt under the federal rule.²²³ Others treat employee benefit plans as exempt securities, rather than exempt transactions, which is the approach of both the original and revised Uniform Acts.

[11] Transactions by Non-Profit or Charitable Issuers Most states accommodate the issuance of securities by charitable or non-profit issuers²²⁴ with a specific exemption for securities of a qualifying issuer rather than a transaction exemption. This is the approach taken in the Uniform Act.²²⁵ It is also the approach under the federal securities laws, and for that reason full consideration of the exemption is undertaken in Chapter 7--Exempt Securities.

Some states, however, address sales of securities by these issuers as a transactional exemption under their blue sky laws.ⁿ²²⁶ The distinction is one of syntax, and could impact the scope of the exemption in particular settings. Whereas the more common security exemption encompasses a security "issued by" a qualifying charitable or non-profit issuer, transaction exemptions deal with the "sale of a security issued by" a qualifying issuer. However, whether treated as exempt securities or exempt transactions several states condition the availability of the exemption on advance filing, and in some cases advance approval (or failure to disallow) procedures. In some states the use of particular disclosure forms or offering materials is mandated as well.

Although not treated under the heading of non-profit or charitable issuers, a variety of blue sky transaction exemptions exist for agricultural and other cooperatives, and various types of development entities, all of which have special purposes that are significant in a particular state. In most cases particular qualifying criteria for the organization or cooperative are specified. The issuers must typically exist by reason of state law, as, for example, an agricultural cooperative organized under state law,ⁿ²²⁷ or a development corporation formed under state law for a specifically recognized economic development objective in the state. Here again, however, the availability of a transactional exemption may be subject to a claim of exemption or other specific filing and approval requirement.ⁿ²²⁸ Transaction exemptions are also increasingly being added by states to support and encourage small business and jobs creation.ⁿ²²⁹

[12] Coordinate Federal and State "Offer" Exemptions One of the early inconsistencies between federal and state securities regulation was the difference in approaches to offers during the "waiting period" under the federal Securities Act of 1933. The "waiting period" under the federal act refers to that period between the filing of a registration statement and its effective date.ⁿ²³⁰ Section 5 of the federal act, and rules adopted by the SEC under it, permit oral offers and certain types of written communications during the waiting period. State blue sky laws, on the other hand, uniformly prohibited any offer, without regard to what was permissible as a matter of federal law. As a result, so-called "red herring" prospectuses, identified by their prominent red print disclaimer of any "offer," came into use specifically for the purpose of avoiding offer prohibitions of blue sky laws that would otherwise apply. Ultimately, with the Revised Uniform Securities Act and the adoption of exemptions designed to harmonize federal and state "waiting period" procedures, the artificial "red herring" approach to dealing with blue sky laws gave way to specific exemptions in state securities laws for offers, but not sales, of securities for which a registration statement has been filed under the Securities Act of 1933, but is not yet effective. This exemption has been carried into the 2002 Uniform Act,ⁿ²³¹ evidencing the extent to which the exemption is now a part of blue sky laws.ⁿ²³² The only qualifications on the availability of the exemption for offers under these provisions are that a federal registration statement, offering statement or similar record as required by the Securities Act of 1933 has been filed; and that no stop order has been issued against the offeror by the state administrator or the federal Securities and Exchange Commission; and no audit, inspection, or proceeding that is public and that may culminate in a stop order is known by the offeror to be pending.ⁿ²³³

In effect, the exemption limits the types of offers that may be made to those permitted under the federal Securities Act. Blue sky laws do not contain any other provision allowing any other types of offers to be made prior to an effective registration. If an offer is made in violation of the types permitted by the SEC, action will be taken by federal authorities to halt the violation. Such action would affect the state offerings under the provision which bars the exemption if a federal stop or refusal order is in effect or actions toward such an order are pending. Presumably this is the case in the states that have substantially adopted the Uniform Securities Act provision,ⁿ²³⁴ and in a few other states with exemptions that seem to reach the same result through alternate language.ⁿ²³⁵

The Oregonⁿ²³⁶ and South Carolinaⁿ²³⁷ exemptions require a registration to be pending under both state and federal acts, but provide that only a state stop or refusal order, or proceedings toward such an order, may be used to halt offerings during the waiting period. Apparently, the fact that such an order or proceedings have been instigated by the SEC under the federal statute is not in and of itself sufficient to stop exempt offers in the absence of further proceedings by the respective state administrators. The exemption in Delawareⁿ²³⁸ is unusual. Under its provision, federal registration is not required. This means that the exemption for offers applies to all pending registrations under the respective state acts including intrastate offerings. Since a pending registration with the SEC is not required, there is no reliance on the manner in which offers may be made under federal law. In lieu of such reliance, the manner in which offers may be made is prescribed.

As discussed earlier,ⁿ²³⁹ the majority of states do not make any provision for solicitations of interest prior to the filing of a registration statement or proceeding with an offering in reliance upon an exemption. Nevertheless, several states do include an exemption for offers (but not sales) when a registration statement is filed but is not yet effective under just the blue sky law.ⁿ²⁴⁰ The 2002 Uniform Securities Act recognizes the extent to which states have made this accommodation, but expressly conditions availability of the exemption on use of a solicitation of interest in compliance with such rules as may be adopted by the administrator.ⁿ²⁴¹ Other than in those states that have so far adopted the 2002 Uniform Act, there is no qualification on the availability of the "offer" exemption when a registration statement has been filed under the blue sky law.ⁿ²⁴² Thus, in the absence of particular rules the nature and scope of permitted offers once a registration statement is filed is not limited. A considerable number of states do, however, impose restrictions on the type of written offers that may be made during the "waiting period," and also almost universally impose advance submission requirements for offering or sales literature generally. The State Guides describe particular requirements applicable in each state.

[13] Coordinate "Private" Offering Exemptions Prior to the adoption of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act of 1933 and widespread implementation of the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOE) by states to coordinate with it, several states adopted an exemption for transactions not involving any "public offering" within the meaning of section 4(2) of the Securities act of 1933.ⁿ²⁴³ Conditions may be imposed. In Ohio, for example, there are limitations on the amount of aggregate commissions, discounts or other remuneration for sales in the state pursuant to the exemption, as well as notice and filing fee requirements.ⁿ²⁴⁴ Although the vast majority of "private" securities offerings today are conducted in accordance with Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, and the safe harbor it affords, particularly when carried out in coordination with the ULOE at the state level for offerings that are not NSMIA preempted. Nevertheless, the federal section 4(2) private offering exemption remains available without regard to Regulation D, and in those states having a specific coordinate private offering exemption it remains a meaningful alternative in capital formation.

State offering exemptions that incorporate or specifically compliment section 4(2) of the federal act independently of Regulation D are in practical terms limited offering exemptions. Thus, more detailed consideration of these coordinate private offering exemptions is undertaken in section 8.05[3] below as part the overall scheme of limited offering exemptions in blue sky laws.ⁿ²⁴⁵

[14] Other Coordinate State and Federal Exemptions A handful of states provide a statutory registration exemption for securities registered under the federal Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ²⁴⁶ Under the federal law, registration with the SEC is required of all securities offered or sold in interstate commerceⁿ²⁴⁷ unless such offer or sale is of an exempt securityⁿ²⁴⁸ or constitutes an exempt transactionⁿ²⁴⁹ in accordance with the statute or regulations issued pursuant to it. An exemption from federal registration may also be the trigger for a state registration exemption. New York,ⁿ²⁵⁰ for instance, relieves from state registration securities that are exempt under federal law, except for securities sold strictly in intrastate commerce.ⁿ²⁵¹ Under New York law,ⁿ²⁵² dealers are required to file a "Further State Notice" with respect to any securities they sell. This is little more than a slip of paper calling for the name of the security, the name of the issuer, the issuer's address and the place of the issuer's organization. Such a filing is usually considered more a part of dealer registration than securities registration.ⁿ²⁵³

The rest of the states are more selective in their incorporation of federal exemptions into statutory blue sky exemptions. Georgia exempts securities that are exempt under Securities Act regulations.ⁿ²⁵⁴ All of the federal exemptions, except the intrastate offering exemption and those pursuant to certain regulations, are applicable in Pennsylvania but only in certain non-issuer transactions.ⁿ²⁵⁵ However, a separate provision makes eligible for exemption all transactions in securities exempt pursuant to such previously omitted regulations, but this provision does not extend to any other federal exemptions.ⁿ²⁵⁶ A third provision exempts certain exchanges of securities when such exchanges are exempt under the Securities Act.ⁿ²⁵⁷ Some states require a filing for the availability of the exemption.ⁿ²⁵⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The general subject of "offers" and "sales" of securities under blue sky laws, and more detailed consideration of statutory exclusions from the key definitions, are presented in Chapter 3, supra, and § 3.03 in particular.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Ark. Code § 23-42-102(13)(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. The key definitions in the 2002 Uniform Act reflect what is found in every state definition:

"Sale" includes every contract of sale, contract to sell, or disposition of, a security for value, and "offer to sell" includes every attempt to offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to purchase, a security or interest in a security for value. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(26).

(n4)Footnote 4. Del. Code Ann. § 7302(11)d.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act §§ 202 (18), (22).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(f)(2).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(4), (6).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(M).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(i)(8)(ii).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 401(i)(6)(B).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.801(j)(6)(B).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. §§ 80A.17(6)(ii).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.401(jm)(6).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(v)(vii)(B), 1-203(q).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art 581-5(D).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(B); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(f).

(n9)Footnote 9. See also Cal. Code Regs. § 260.017(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cal. Code Regs. § 260.017(a) ("The term 'stock dividend'... means the issuance of additional shares (including treasury shares) of the issuer to its existing shareholders...."); see also Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-102(r)(vii), (viii); Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-201(13)(h) (Terms do not include any dividend payable by an issuer only in its own securities); Ohio: Ohio. Rev. Code § 1707.03(K)(1) (The distribution by a corporation of its securities to its security holders as a share dividend is exempt).

Further nuances in the treatment of stock dividends among the sates are addressed in § 3.03[2], supra

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g.,

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(13).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(f); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.103.2.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(n).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(n).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(14).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(14).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(n).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(q).

Texas: Securities Rule 065.05.00.004.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(15).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(14).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(14).

(n12)Footnote 12. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(B).

(n13)Footnote 13. The California Corporation Commissioner has, for example, opined that a stock dividend will be deemed to be a sale of securities if there is more than one class of voting stock because it changes the rights, preferences, privileges or restrictions of or on other outstanding securities. See Cal. Code Regs. § 260.017.

(n14)Footnote 14. The states listed below all have exemption provisions substantially based on Uniform Securities Act § 402(b)(11). Some of the provisions vary as to wording but the meaning is probably the same.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(7).

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 23-42-504(a)(10).

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(l).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36b-21(b)(11).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(11).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(11).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(k).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(11).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(h).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.4101(k).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(11).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(11).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(11).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. 75-71-203(12).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(11).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(10).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(11).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Code Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(p).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(11).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(N).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(11).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(12).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(11).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(j).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(8).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(11).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(11).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(xi).

(n15)Footnote 15. According to a staff opinion of the Wisconsin Commissioner of Securities, a 1-for-3000 reverse stock split designed to squeeze out minority shareholders did not qualify as a "reclassification of securities" eligible for exemption from registration. However, the staff said the transaction might qualify for the exemption for offers to existing security holders. Monthly Bulletin, June, 1979, Wisconsin Office of Commissioner of Securities, 3 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 64,882 (1979).

An analogous problem can occur in an ordinary stock split situation. Consider the example in which X buys shares in a close corporation, the stock of which is then split ten for one. Several other share holders thereafter start selling shares in exempt transactions (i.e. an isolated transaction). It is also conceivable that some of these buyers will resell some of their shares. Before long what once was a private corporation is now, at a minimum, semi-public and X's voice in corporate management is severely watered down. The difference between this and a reverse stock split, however, is considerable. The blue sky laws are generally for the protection of the purchaser of securities. As discussed above, the terms "offer" and "sale" do not ordinarily include offers to buy. Further, unsolicited offers to purchase securities are often exempt. See ch. 9 infra. It is therefore easier for a corporation to "buy up" its securities either outright or through a reverse stock split than it is for a number of shareholders to dispose of their shares through exempt transactions. In the situation of X, it is presumed that even if the selling shareholders are required to register the securities, the administrator would examine the circumstances to see if the purpose of the split was to the detriment of X.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(f).

(n17)Footnote 17. Id.

(n18)Footnote 18. Cal. Code Regs. § 260.103.4.

(n19)Footnote 19. See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(f).

(n20)Footnote 20. Id.

(n21)Footnote 21. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(b).

(n22)Footnote 22. 11 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.

Blue sky law provisions governing the registration of securities and the registration or licensing of an issuer of, underwriter of, or broker-dealer in, securities do not apply to transactions in bankruptcy-related securities covered by Title 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. See 11 U.S.C. § 1145.

(n23)Footnote 23. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(D); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(13)(vi).

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25017(f)(3).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-1(11)(F)(iv).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(i)(8)(iii).

Maryland: Md. Code, Ann. § 11-102(a)(3).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Stat. Ann., Ch. 110A, 401(i)(6)(D).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.801(j)(6)(B).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.401(m)(6)(D).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-49(j)(6)(iv).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.015(17)(b)(C).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-20(13)(f)(iv).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-10211(F)(viii).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-13(22)(d)(vi).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-401(l)(6)(D).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-113(a)(ix)(F)(IV).

See also Pennsylvania: Interp. Op. January 19, 1988, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 48,679I, taking a no-action position on the sale of the issuer's stock out of a Chapter 11 reorganization. The requesting letter relies on 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(k), exempting "[a]ny judicial sale or any transaction by ... [a] trustee in bankruptcy."

(n25)Footnote 25.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. §90.280(6)(c).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.,

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(1).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(16).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(6).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(13).

(n27)Footnote 27. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(22)(B).

(n28)Footnote 28. "Value" elements of a transaction that bear upon whether an offer or sale of securities within the coverage of blue sky laws is actually involved are discussed in more detail in Chapter 3, supra.

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(13).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(n).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(n).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8:1111(14).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(15).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Stat. § 21-20.320(14).

See also:

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(e).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(J).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(L).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(k).

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(e). The Massachusetts exemption applies only to securities issued under a Chapter 11 proceedings.

(n30)Footnote 30. Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(J).

(n31)Footnote 31. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(L).

(n32)Footnote 32.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(k).

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(e). The Massachusetts exemption applies only to securities issued under a Chapter 11 proceedings.

(n33)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(10). Section 3(a)(10) of the federal Act exempts:

[A]ny security which is issued in exchange for one or more bona fide outstanding securities, claims or property interests, or partly in such exchange and partly for cash, where the terms and conditions of such issuance and exchange are approved, after a hearing upon the fairness of such terms and conditions at which all persons to whom it is proposed to issue securities in such exchange shall have the right to appear, by any court, or by any official or agency of the United States, or by any State or Territorial banking or insurance commission or other governmental authority expressly authorized by law to grant such approval.

Section 202(9) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, supplies the "governmental authority" for a fairness determination by a state securities administrator, upon which the federal exemption operates.

(n34)Footnote 34. See Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.04.

(n35)Footnote 35. See Rapp, "The Interface Between Securities Act 3(a)(10) and Ohio Revised Code § 1707.04: Utilitarian Considerations for Ohio Mergers and Corporate Reorganization Transactions," 27 Cleveland St.L.Rev. 1 (1978) (Discussing the "rediscovery" of the federal section 3(a)(10) exemption in states having the requisite authority to make fairness determinations in covered transactions).

(n36)Footnote 36. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(9).

(n37)Footnote 37.

Missouri: See, e.g. Mo. Rev. Stat. §409.2-202(9).

(n38)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(3).

(n39)Footnote 39. Draftmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(4), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 365, 366 (1958).

(n40)Footnote 40. Id.

(n41)Footnote 41. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(4).

(n42)Footnote 42. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(4).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(1).

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 23-42-504(a)(3).

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(d).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat., Ch. 662, § 36-b-21(b)(4).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(4).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(4).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(e).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(4).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(4).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(d).

Maine: 32 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 105022E.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(4).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(4).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(4).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80.15(2)(m).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(4).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(4).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(4).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(4).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(m).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(4).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(E).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(4).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(5).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(g).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(4).

Texas: 7 Tex. Admin. Code § 139.8.

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(b)(d).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(4).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(4).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(4).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(iv).

(n43)Footnote 43. Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 365, 366 (1958).

In a comment written prior to popular adoption of the Uniform Securities Act, the draftsmen stated:

The exemption is not spelled out as such in the present statutes, but it is usually read in as a matter of necessity. Since the terms of the offering must be disclosed in registering, it must be contemplated that the issuer or other person who proposes to make an offering may negotiate with prospective underwriters, and that the prospective underwriters may negotiate among themselves, before registration.

(n44)Footnote 44.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(d).

(n45)Footnote 45.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(f).

(n46)Footnote 46.

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(b).

(n47)Footnote 47. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11).

(n48)Footnote 48. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(5). The exemption is for:

any transaction in a bond or other evidence of indebtedness secured by a real or chattel mortgage or deed of trust, or by an agreement for the sale of real estate or chattels, if the entire mortgage, deed of trust, or agreement, together with all the bonds or other evidences of indebtedness secured thereby, is offered and sold as a unit. ...

See also 15 U.S.C. § 77d(5) for a comparable but more restrictive exemption under the Securities Act of 1933.

The Secondary Mortgage Market Enhancement Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-440, 98 Stat. 1689 (1984), preempted state securities laws dealing with registration of mortgage-backed securities. Section 106 of the Act provided that offerings of mortgage-backed securities that are exempt under federal securities laws are also exempt from the registration requirements of state blue sky laws. Also, state-chartered and state-regulated financial institutions, insurance companies, pension funds, trustees, or other regulated entities were permitted to purchase, hold, or invest in investment-grade mortgage-backed securities to the same extent that they were authorized to purchase, hold, or invest in obligations issued or guaranteed by the United States or any of its agencies or instrumentalities. The law gave states the option to override the preemption if they enacted appropriate legislation before October 3, 1991.

(n49)Footnote 49. Id.

(n50)Footnote 50.

Alabama: Ala. Code. § 8-6-11(a)(5).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(2).

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 23-42-504(a)(4)

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1844A.20.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(e).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-b-21(b)(5).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(5).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(5).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(o).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(5).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(d).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(e).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(5).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. Ch. 110A § 402(b)(5).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(5).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(5).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(5).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(5).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49-3-50(b)(5).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(E).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(5).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(6).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(j).

Cf. Securities Rule 202.092 (exempt guarantees of debt securities).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(5).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(e).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(5).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-403(b)(5).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(4).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(v).

(n51)Footnote 51. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(5), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 366 (1958) ("This exemption is severely restricted by the requirement that everything be both offered and sold as a unit. But it permits a public offering as a unit.").

(n52)Footnote 52.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 203.101.

(n53)Footnote 53. Id. See § 8.04 supra for a discussion of exempt transactions with institutional investors.

(n54)Footnote 54.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-8(10) ("Notes issued in connection with the acquisition of real or personal property or renewals thereof, if such notes are issued to the sellers of and are secured by all or part of the real or personal property so acquired.").

This provision differs from the Uniform Securities Act's, but its intent is probably similar. See the Opinion of the Georgia Attorney General, No. 74-153 (1974), where it is stated:

Since Section [10-5-8] of the Act designates "exempt securities" subsection [10-5-8(10)] exempts from registration not only the original mortgage transaction, but any subsequent transaction in the security created thereby. A mortgage thus continues to maintain its exemption from registration no matter how many times it is bought, sold or traded, and, so long as the mortgage being sold remains within the description of Section[10-5-8(10)], there is no requirement for registration.

If, however, the broker sells mortgages in such a way that they become investment contracts, the Section[10-5-8(10)] exemption is not available. Section [10-5-8(10)] exempts only the mortgage; it does not provide an exemption for an investment contract, one of the elements of which is an exempt mortgage.

In summary, it is my opinion that sales of mortgages described in Section [97-108(j)] of the Act are exempt from the registration requirement of Section 5 of the Act, but mortgage offerings which are structured or promoted in such a way that they become investment contracts must be registered pursuant to Section 5 unless they qualify for some exemption from registration other than Section [97-108(j)].

(n55)Footnote 55.

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(d).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(d).

(n56)Footnote 56.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(5).

(n57)Footnote 57.

Missouri: Mo. Code Regs. Ann. tit. 15, § 30-54.120(i).

(n58)Footnote 58.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 203.101.

(n59)Footnote 59.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(10).

Iowa: Code § 502.203.5.

(n60)Footnote 60.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102.5.

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203.5.

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:709(16).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(h).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(7)

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31-A-402(b)(5).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(J).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(4).

(n61)Footnote 61.

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(6).

(n62)Footnote 62.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 513(J).

The first section refers to not more than ten bonds or notes secured by a first mortgage if the aggregate principal amount does not exceed $500,000 and 75% of the fair market value of the property; the second section refers to not more than ten bonds or notes secured by a junior mortgage lien if the aggregate principal amount of the indebtedness does not exceed 50% of the amount of the outstanding prior lien and 90% of the fair market value of the property secured.

(n63)Footnote 63. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(12).

(n64)Footnote 64. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(5).

(n65)Footnote 65.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/3(I).

(n66)Footnote 66.

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-6(I).

(n67)Footnote 67.

California: Cal Corp. Code § 25102(e).

The exemption is available only to issuers or guarantors of the security. The exemption is unique in its wording only. The limited offering exemption in other states would probably cover this situation. Limited offerings are discussed in §8.06, infra.

Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260-102.2 describes non-public offering and sale for purposes of this exemption.

See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.3, which defines "evidence of indebtedness" for exemption purposes.

See also Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.34, which provides an exemption for any evidence of indebtedness, whether secured or unsecured, that has been rated as an "investment grade security" by Standard and Poor's or Moody's Investment Service.

(n68)Footnote 68. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(12).

(n69)Footnote 69. N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17 (II)(e).

(n70)Footnote 70. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 10502(2)(G).

(n71)Footnote 71. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(C).

(n72)Footnote 72. Michigan is typical in providing this exemption for:

An offer or sale to a bank, savings institution, trust company, insurance company, investment company as defined in the Investment Company Act of 1940, the federal national mortgage association, the federal home loan mortgage corporation, or the government national mortgage association, pension or profit-sharing trust the assets of which are managed by an institutional manager, the treasurer of this state, other financial institution, broker-dealer, whether the purchaser is acting for itself or in some fiduciary capacity, or a lender approved by the federal housing administration and who has satisfied any additional requirements established by the administrator by rule or order. Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.802(b)(8).

Some variations involve specific conditions or qualifications on the size of the permitted purchaser. Maryland, for example, qualifies availability of the exemption for sales to investment advisers with assets under management of at least $1 million, and also to employee benefit plans with assets not less than $1 million. See Ann. Code Md. § 11-602(8).

(n73)Footnote 73. See "Offers and Sales to Accredited Investors," § 8.05, infra .

(n74)Footnote 74. Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 10501(4).

(n75)Footnote 75.

Ohio: See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.01(S).

(n76)Footnote 76. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(11)(A)-(K).

(n77)Footnote 77. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(11).

States imposing a minimum financial requirements on qualifying entities vary in amounts required, see, e.g., Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-102(9) (minimum $1 million net worth requirement); Massachusetts: Code. Mass. Regs. § 14.401 ($5 million total assets unless entity meets certain other criteria); Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. § 10501(4) ($1 million or $5 million total assets depending on type of entity).

(n78)Footnote 78. Draftmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(8). ("The obvious justification for this exemption is that institutional investors and broker-dealers are 'sophisticated' buyers who do not need the protection of registration. At the same time, they do have the protection of the antifraud provisions. ...").

(n79)Footnote 79. Id.

(n80)Footnote 80. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(8).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(4).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(8).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(8).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(8).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.4101(h).

Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, § 10502.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(8).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(8).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(8).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(g).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(8).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(7).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(8).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(g).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(8).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(I).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(9).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(8).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(h).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21-20.320(8).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(8).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(viii).

(n81)Footnote 81.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(8).

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25102(i), 25104(c).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517-061(7).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815, Sec. 4[514]C.

Illinois has a specific sophisticated investor exemption for sales of oil, gas or mineral lease interests which covers, among other investors, an association that purchases this type of interest "in frequent operations, for its own account." Ill. Rev. Stat. Sec. 4 [514]O. The "frequent operations" clause, according to the Seventh Circuit, refers to operations that have actually occurred, not merely the authorization of frequent operations by the association's charter. McConnell v. Surak, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,306 (7th Cir. 1985).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(f).

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:709(7).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(8).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(5).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(4). In addition, Oregon has an exemption for transactions with accredited investors as defined in § 2(15)(i) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 or rules of the Commissioner. Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(5). See Securities Rule § 441-35-010.

Rhode Island: R.I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-402(9).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31-A-402(b)(8).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(3), § 48-2-102(6) (definition of "institutional investor").

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 58-1-5(H).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(8).

Wisconsin has excluded Keogh plans and individual retirement accounts from the sophisticated investor exemption unless they are administered by a qualifying institution that has investment control. Id. (c).

(n82)Footnote 82. Note that the term "broker-dealer" is used here broadly. Not all states apply it under their securities laws, opting instead for the single word "broker" or "dealer". General discussion of state licensing requirements for broker-dealers can be found in ch. 11 infra.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(8).

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.2.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.0761(7).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 Sec. 4[514]C.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(f).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(8).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(D).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(4).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(c).

Rhode Island: R.I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-402(9).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp L § 47-31A-402(b)(8).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(3).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(6).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(8).

(n83)Footnote 83. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(8).

(n84)Footnote 84.

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-5(H).

See also the following Texas cases holding that the main course of business requirement is crucial if the exemption is to apply: Development Investment Corporation v. Diversa, Inc., 393 S.W.2d 653 (Tex. Ct. App. 1965) ; Dunnam v. Dillingham, 345 S.W.2d 314 (Tex. Civ. App. 1961) ; Gerchsheimer v. American Heritage Bank and Trust Co., 437 F.2d 1332 (10th Cir. [Tex.] 1971).

(n85)Footnote 85. The statutes and regulations of the individual states should be consulted to determine who qualifies as a "sophisticated" or "institutional" investor.

(n86)Footnote 86. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(8).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(4).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(8).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(8).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(8).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.4101(L).

Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, § 105022I.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(8).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(8).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(8).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(g).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(8).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(7).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(8).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(g).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(8).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(I).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(9).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(8).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(h).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21-20.320(8).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(8).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(viii).

(n87)Footnote 87. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25102(i), 25104(c).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(f).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(4). In addition, Oregon has an exemption for transactions with accredited investors as defined in § 2(15)(i) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 or rules of the Commissioner. Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(5). See Securities Rule § 441-35-010.

Rhode Island: R.I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-402(9).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31-A-402(b)(8).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(8).

See also:

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(D).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(c).

(n88)Footnote 88. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 1-203(c).

The term "institutional buyer" is broad enough to cover, for example, a college purchasing for its endowment fund or perhaps a labor union investing its surplus funds on a substantial scale. The term may be either left to ad hoc interpretation or defined by an interpretative rule under § 412(a).

(n89)Footnote 89. Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 368 (1958).

Incorporation, of course, is not a badge of sophistication so far as securities are concerned. Whatever else Mr. and Mrs. John Doe achieve when they organize Doe, Inc., to run their corner grocery, it is not investment "know-how." It seems considerably more logical to make the test turn on whether the investor is a "financial institution or institutional buyer," whether or not incorporated, than on whether the investor is incorporated, whether or not a financial institution or institutional buyer.

(n90)Footnote 90. Id.

(n91)Footnote 91.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 Sec. 5/4(C).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(8). A corporation must have a net worth in excess of $1 million to qualify under the exemption.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(6).

California has an exemption which allows a corporation organized under the laws of a foreign country to sell all of its shares to another corporation. At the completion of the sale the purchaser must directly or indirectly own 100% of the common stock of the foreign corporation. See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.22.

(n92)Footnote 92.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 Sec. 5/4(C).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(5).

(n93)Footnote 93.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(5).

(n94)Footnote 94. Id.

(n95)Footnote 95.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(8).

See ch. 11 infra for the states' definitions of "person."

(n96)Footnote 96. Stein v. Twilight Motel, Inc. of Florida, 29 Ill. App. 2d 131, 172 N.E.2d 642 (1961) .

(n97)Footnote 97. 172 N.E.2d at 644 , 645. The court opined:

The history of the syndicate operations shows a series of patently sophisticated investments. It was formalized by a joint venture agreement. They were represented by able counsel. It is true that the individual members are not engaged in the securities or investment business. However, as a group they formed an association which engaged as a substantial part of its business or operation in purchasing or holding securities. To look to the principal business of each member of the syndicate to determine the nature of the syndicate's business would tell us about the business of each member, but not about the business of the syndicate...

(n98)Footnote 98. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(8).

(n99)Footnote 99. Feinberg v. Automobile Banking Corporation, 304 F. Supp. 147 (E.D. Pa. 1969) , interpreting Illinois law.

See also Maddox v. Flato, 423 S.W.2d 371 (Tex. Civ. App. 1967) (business did not constitute a trust company for exemption purposes).

(n100)Footnote 100. Baroco v. Community National Life Insurance Company, 427 F.2d 333 (5th Cir. [Fla.] 1970).

(n101)Footnote 101.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(4).

(n102)Footnote 102. State v. Hayes, 317 So. 2d. 764 (Fla. 1975) .

This statute specifically states that delivery of securities to a bank results in the transaction being exempt. It does not require, as the State urges, that the securities be sold to the bank in the bank's name for the bank's use. While the Legislature may have intended such an interpretation, the statute is criminal, and it is elementary that criminal laws are to be strictly construed.

(n103)Footnote 103.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(C), (D).

See also Cal. Code § 25102(j), which exempts the offer and sale of oil and gas securities to purchasers primarily engaged in the business of drilling, producing, or refining oil and gas.

See also:

Lambrect v. Bartlett, 656 P.2d 269, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,787 (Okla. 1982) (in sale of an interest in an oil and gas lease, all purchasers must be "sophisticated" to qualify for exemption).

(n104)Footnote 104. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(8)

(n105)Footnote 105.

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25102(i), 25104(c).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(8).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31A-402(b)(8).

Texas: Monthly Securities Bulletin, March, 1970, April, 1970.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(8).

(n106)Footnote 106.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 203.031.

(n107)Footnote 107.

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25102(i), 25104(c).

Texas: Monthly Securities Bulletin, March, 1970, April, 1970.

(n108)Footnote 108. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(2).

"The provisions of section 77e of the title [requiring registration of securities] shall not apply to "... transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering."

(n109)Footnote 109.

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(a), (b).

See also N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 13, § 80.6, which governs intrastate offerings:

In lieu of the prospectus called for by the New York Intrastate Financing Act, an issuer proposing an offering to a group of persons whose net worth, financial background and experience would be such as to enable them to evaluate a prospective investment solely on the basis of original documentation, without other offering literature, may submit to the Department of Law an application for exemption from the prospectus requirements and the Attorney General may grant said application on finding that such action is not inconsistent with the public interest or the protection on investors.

(n110)Footnote 110. See ch. 9 infra.

(n111)Footnote 111. Victor & Bedrick, Private Offering: Hazards for the Unwary, 45 Va. L. Rev. 869, 871 (1959).

(n112)Footnote 112. See note 109 supra.

(n113)Footnote 113.

Alaska: 3 AAC 08.910(5).

New York: N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 13, §§ 80.6, 80.10, 80.11. Filing fees are required as well.

(n114)Footnote 114.

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(9)(i).

(n115)Footnote 115. Id.

Under the same conditions, the exemption also extends to offers, sales, and issuances to any affiliate of the issuer. See Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(9)(ii).

(n116)Footnote 116.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 203.184, adopted pursuant to 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-203(r) (Commission may exempt additional transactions by rule).

(n117)Footnote 117.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(S).

(n118)Footnote 118.

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(9).

(n119)Footnote 119.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-202(7).

(n120)Footnote 120.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.22(7).

(n121)Footnote 121.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 202.080.

Wisconsin: Wis. Adm. Code § 2.01(6).

(n122)Footnote 122.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 202.080.

(n123)Footnote 123.

Wisconsin: Wis. Adm. Code § 2.01(7)(b).

(n124)Footnote 124. See § 8.03[1], supra.

(n125)Footnote 125. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11). The exemption is carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(15). However, in the 2002 Uniform Act exemption the prohibition on payment of commissions or other remuneration for solicitation is absolute. In light of NSMIA preemption, there is no provision for submission to and approval by the administrator.

(n126)Footnote 126. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(9).

(n127)Footnote 127. See Securities Act § 18(b)(4)(C), 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(C).

(n128)Footnote 128. The definition of "covered security" in NSMIA, Securities Act § 18(b)(4)(C) specifically provides that subject to certain exceptions, a security is a covered security with respect to a transaction that is exempt from federal registration pursuant to section 3(a) of the Act.

(n129)Footnote 129. See § 8.03[7][e], infra.

(n130)Footnote 130. See, e.g., Florida: Fla. Stat. § 517.061(6).

(n131)Footnote 131. See § 8.03[1], supra.

(n132)Footnote 132. See ch. 3 supra.

(n133)Footnote 133.

Delaware: Gottlieb v. Heyden Chemical Corp., 32 Del. Ch. 231, 83 A.2d 595 (1951) , rev'd on other grounds, 33 Del. Ch. 82, 90 A.2d 660 (1952), 33 Del. Ch. 283, 92 A.2d 594 (1952) .

Maryland: Ross Transport, Inc. v. Crothers, 185 Md. 573, 45 A.2d 267 (1946) .

Wisconsin: Ruller v. Krogh, 15 Wis.2d 412, 113 N.W.2d 25 (1962) .

(n134)Footnote 134. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n135)Footnote 135. Draftmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n136)Footnote 136. Similarly stock dividends are distributions without consideration although technically there is consideration if they are offered in lieu of cash or property dividends. However, in spite of such a choice, most states exempt or exclude stock dividends. See ch. 3 and § 8.03[1][a] supra .

(n137)Footnote 137. Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 377 (1958):

Some exemption along these lines is essential--perhaps even constitutionally so under the commerce clause--in order to accommodate corporations whose stockholders have preemptive rights. Today such a corporation is sometimes in the unenviable position of ignoring either its stockholders' preemptive rights or some of the blue sky laws which have no suitable exemption.

(n138)Footnote 138.

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.03

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(5)-(7), (9).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25103.

(n139)Footnote 139. In addition to the Uniform Securities Act states listed earlier, other states have a general exemption for transactions with existing security holders which would probably allow most cash sales.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/4(B).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(3).

In Oregon, the sale must be made pursuant to a pro rata offering to existing security holders and is further conditioned by the stipulation that the issuer has not had an effective registration in Oregon within a period of five years prior to the date of the offering or sale.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(N). In Pennsylvania, the exemption is limited to "existing equity security holders."

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(E).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(12).

In the above states, there are few limitations on the types of securities which may be in the hands of holders or sold by the issuer. As under Uniform Securities Act § 402(b)(11), there is often a provision which excludes from the exemption holders of certain transferable warrants or rights.

Other states allow cash sales but may have limitations on the nature of the entity issuing the securities, the type of securities in the hands of holders and/or the type of securities being offered to holders.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(6).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(11).

The securities held by the offeree must consist of specified rights or warrants or securities carrying preemptive rights.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(4).

The issuer must be a corporation selling or distributing additional capital stock to or among its own stockholders.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(I).

The sale must be pursuant to the exercise of subscription rights, warrants or options which at the time they were granted were registered or specifically exempt.

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.03

The issuer must be a corporation selling increased capital stock of its stockholders.

The limitations in these states are important since they will affect the availability of the exemption. In a case where the statute exempted exchanges with security holders by corporations, it was held that a trust exchanging newly issued securities to present holders of other securities did not qualify for the exemption. Maddox v. Flato, 423 S.W.2d 371 (Tex. Civ. App. 1967) . Similarly, where the statute exempted sales and exchanges with stockholders, the exemption was not available where the purchaser held debentures. See Hofer v. General Discount Corporation, 86 S.D. 133, 192 N.W.2d 718 (1971) , and Wipf v. General Discount Corporation, 86 S.D. 148, 192 N.W.2d 727 (1971) .

(n140)Footnote 140. Iowa Code § 502.203(11), (13), (15).

(n141)Footnote 141. Iowa Code § 502.203(13).

(n142)Footnote 142. Iowa Code § 502.203(14).

(n143)Footnote 143. Iowa Code § 502.203(15).

(n144)Footnote 144. See §§ 8.03[1][d] and 8.03[7][c] infra .

(n145)Footnote 145. Iowa Code § 502.203(11).

Compare this provision with Uniform Securities Act § 402(b)(11). Note the similarity in the two, but whereas the Uniform Securities Act is inclusionary in mentioning conversions and non-transferable warrants, the Iowa statute uses the situations to limit the exemption. No doubt the specific mention of preemptive rights was due to the draftmen's commentary See Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 377(1958).

(n146)Footnote 146. Livens v. William D. Witter, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 1104 (D. Mass. 1974) (applying a former Massachusetts statute).

(n147)Footnote 147. Spruce & Green Chemical Co. v. Mouer, 510 S.W.2d 620 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) .

(n148)Footnote 148. 5 Cavitch, Business Organizations with Tax Planning § 92.01[1] (Matthew Bender).

(n149)Footnote 149. Id., § 92.02[3].

(n150)Footnote 150. Id., § 92.03.

(n151)Footnote 151. See ch. 3 supra.

(n152)Footnote 152. It should be stressed that the exemption applies only to the exchange of the convertible security. The sale of the original security must be of a registered security unless a separate exemption can be found. A number of the states below provide that the exchange is not exempt unless the original sale of the convertible security was registered or exempt. Even in states having no such stipulation, it is not unreasonable to assume that the exemption would not be allowed unless the original security were sold according to law. The problem is tangentially covered in Livens v. William D. Witter, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 1104 (1974) , and Spruce & Green Chemical Co. v. Mouer, 510 S.W.2d 620 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) .

Examples of states that exempt the exchange of a convertible security are:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(9).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 815 § 5/4(B).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(11).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(11).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(h).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(11).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(11).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(n).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(E).

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(4).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(8).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(11), (14).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(11).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(12).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(xi).

(n153)Footnote 153. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n154)Footnote 154. Id.

See also Wisconsin: Sec. Bull. Dec. 1988, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) 64,957 (exemption not available to cover common stock subject to transferable warrants exercisable at incremental prices over several years if the warrant holder was not at the time of exercise a holder of the company's securities in addition to the warrants).

(n155)Footnote 155. See note 152 supra.

(n156)Footnote 156.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 815, § 5/4(B).

(n157)Footnote 157. See §§ 8.03[1][d]; 8.03[2], supra .

(n158)Footnote 158.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(1).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262.

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(5).

See also the states listed at note 152 supra which exempt "any transaction" pursuant to a number of different types of reorganizations.

(n159)Footnote 159. See note 152 supra for statutory citations.

(n160)Footnote 160.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(7).

California has a special provision applicable to changing the rights of outstanding debt securities (see Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(g)).

(n161)Footnote 161. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n162)Footnote 162. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(10).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(7).

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(l).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-b-21.

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(11).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(11).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 815 § 5/4(B).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(11).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(h).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(k).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(11).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(11).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(11).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(11).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(11).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(10).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(11).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(p).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(11).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(11).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(12).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(3).

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-320.

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(12)

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(E).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(j).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(8).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(11).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(11).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551-23(12).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-117.14(b)(xi).

(n163)Footnote 163. See, e.g. Florida, Iowa, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania supra.

(n164)Footnote 164. Id.

See also Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.15, which exempts the offer and sale of shares in exchange for shares issued by another corporation subject to certain conditions.

(n165)Footnote 165. See note 50, supra.

(n166)Footnote 166. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n167)Footnote 167. Alaska, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Virginia and Washington all have exemptions based on the Uniform Securities Act for transactions with existing security holders. However, each of these states, in addition, has exemptions specifically applicable to reorganizations. In all of these states, except Kansas, the exemption is for "Any transaction incident to a right of conversion or a statutory or judicially approved reclassification, recapitalization, reorganization, quasi-reorganization, stock split, reverse stock split, merger, consolidation or sale of assets."

Note that the scope of this exemption goes into several areas. In so far as conversions and exchanges with the issuers own security holders pursuant to one of the reorganizational methods, such transactions are already covered by the exemption based on the one in the Uniform Securities Act. Since the provision also refers to "any transaction" it would seem also to apply to securities exchanged with shareholders of another corporation in a merger, consolidation or sale of assets situation. The exemption also applies to judicially approved reorganizations which are usually separately provided for in most states. See § 8.03[1][d] supra.

The Kansas exemption is limited to stockholder approved reorganizational transactions, but here again overlaps the exemption based on the Uniform Securities Act when it comes to exchanges with the issuer's own securities holders. See Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(l).

(n168)Footnote 168. See, e.g.:

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 517.061(5), (9).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 815 § 5/4.

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(15).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(13).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(k).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(l).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(K)(2).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(n).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(F), (G).

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(5).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(15).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(14).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(12).

(n169)Footnote 169. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(13), (15).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25103.

Florida: Fla. Stat. § 517.061(9).

See also § 517.061(8). This subsection provides an exemption for the sale of securities from one corporation to another provided that the total sale price of the securities is equal to or greater than $50,000 and the buying and selling corporations each have assets equal to or greater than $500,000.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. ch. 815 § 5/4(I).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(13).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(lk).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(l).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(14).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(l), (p).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(13).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(o).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(F), (G).

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(4), (6).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(15).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21-20.320(14).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(13).

(n170)Footnote 170. Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(a).

(n171)Footnote 171. Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(b).

Section 25103(d) provides that for the purpose of determining the percentage of security holders, securities held to the knowledge of the issuer in the name of broker-dealers and those controlled by any one person who controls fifty percent or more of the affected class shall not be considered outstanding.

(n172)Footnote 172. Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(e).

Actually the statute spells out a series of results which, if put into effect as a consequence of the change, would render the exemption inapplicable. These are changes which with respect to outstanding securities would (1) authorize the levying of assessments, (2) change dividend rights, (3) change redemption provisions, (4) make the securities redeemable, (5) change the amount payable on liquidation, (6) change conversion rights, (7) change voting rights, (8) change preemptive rights, (9) change sinking fund provisions, (10) rearrange relative priorities of outstanding shares, (11) impose or change restrictions on the transfer of shares in the articles of incorporation or by-laws, (12) change the right of shareholders to call special shareholders or members of a mutual water company.

The Corporation Commissioner has ruled that neither the authorization, issuance and sale of a new class of stock nor the issuance and sale of additional shares of a previously outstanding class constitutes a change in rights, preferences, privileges or restrictions of or on previously outstanding shares even where the new shares have priority over or dilute the voting power or preferences of such outstanding shares. However, the exemption does not extend to the offer or sale of the new securities. See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.103.1.

(n173)Footnote 173. Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(a).

(n174)Footnote 174. Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(c).

The rules for determining the count of California security holders are the same as those for making such a determination when there are changes in rights, preferences, privileges or restrictions. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.103.1.

(n175)Footnote 175. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(10)(a).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(7).

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(7).

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(11).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(6).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(11).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat., Ch. 815 § 5/4(B).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(11).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(11).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(h).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(11).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(11).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(11).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(11).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(11).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(10)(a).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(11).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(p).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(11).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(11).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(k)(2).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(12).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(6).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(n).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(11).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(E).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(j).

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(4).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(8).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(11).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(11).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(12).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(xi)(A).

(n176)Footnote 176. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n177)Footnote 177. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n178)Footnote 178. See note 175, supra.

(n179)Footnote 179. See Weiss, Registration and Regulation of Brokers and Dealers 150 (1965).

Most rights offerings ... involve a "stand-by" arrangement with an underwriter under which the underwriter agrees to purchase for resale the unsubscribed portion of the issue. Moreover, even though an underwriter may not be obtained by an issuer for a standby underwriting, the issuer frequently enlists the assistance of brokers and dealers in bringing about the exercise of the rights, and on occasion, may make arrangements with a particular broker-dealer to manage such a program.

For the 'standby' underwriter, a rights offering poses the special problem that he has no idea as to the size of his commitment, and throughout the entire rights period, he is in a highly exposed position, subject to the fluctuations of the market. The standby underwriter will therefore want to purchase as many outstanding rights as possible. The more rights he purchases, the more control he has over his commitment. Accordingly, he goes into the market to acquire rights. He then exercises the rights and arranges for "layoffs" of the offered security among brokers and dealers. In turn, they will dispose of the securities to their customers.

See also the official comment to § 402(b)(11) of the Uniform Securities Act, Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 377 (1958), where it is stated that the allowance of a standby commission "is designed to permit payment to an underwriter for his risk and services in connection with his commitment to take down any portion of the offering which is not taken down by the security holders."

(n180)Footnote 180. Most of the states listed in note 175 supra simply state that standby commissions are permitted. But see the following statute, which defines the type of commission allowed:

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/4(B) ("a fee paid directly to underwriters based on their undertaking to purchase any securities not purchased by security holders in connection with such sale or exchange").

(n181)Footnote 181.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(n).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(12).

(n182)Footnote 182.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(h).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(o).

(n183)Footnote 183.

Wisconsin: Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(9)(d).

(n184)Footnote 184. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(13).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(n).

(n185)Footnote 185.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(n).

(n186)Footnote 186.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(13); Letter of Division of Banking, Securities, Small Loans & Corporations.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(q).

(n187)Footnote 187.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(q).

(n188)Footnote 188. Helvering v. Southwest Consolidated Corp., 315 U.S. 94, 62 S. Ct. 546, 86 L. Ed. 789 (1942). In this case the Supreme Court indicated that capitalization involved a "reshuffling of a capital structure within the framework of an existing corporation." While no precise definition was set down by the Court, it seems clear that recapitalization refers to action within a single corporation.

(n189)Footnote 189. Id.

(n190)Footnote 190. In 1972 the SEC adopted Rule 145 under the Securities Act of 1933, which abandoned the earlier "no sale" doctrine regarding mergers and similar transactions that involved shareholder approval procedures, and made those transactions subject to federal registration requirements.

(n191)Footnote 191. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(18).

(n192)Footnote 192. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(17). The exemption was newly added to the Revised Uniform Act. The original Uniform Securities Act contained no such exemption, reflecting the prevailing "no sale" theory in regard to mergers and corporate reorganization transactions that prevailed until 1972. The Uniform Act simply excluded any act incident to a class vote by stockholders pursuant to a certificate of incorporation or applicable statute, see Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(C).

(n193)Footnote 193. Off. Code Ga. Ann. §10-5-9(12).

(n194)Footnote 194.

Connecticut: See, e.g., Gen. Stat. Conn. § 36b-3(15)(g). Statutory exclusions are discussed in § 8.03[1], supra.

(n195)Footnote 195. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 401(j)(6)(C).

(n196)Footnote 196. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.990(12).

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1801(23).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25019.

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(k).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.102(14).

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1252(j).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.310(13).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-101(8)(1)(ix).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A § 401(k).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.801(l).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A-14(18).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.401(o).

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-103(22)(a).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-2(11).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.015(19)(a).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(t).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-4(A).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-501.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.005(12).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-401(n).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.02(13)(a)

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-113(a)(xi).

The term used in most of the above statutes is preorganization certificate or preorganization subscription. On its face, the term is not limited to use by a corporation, but some states require that preorganization subscriptions be issued by a corporation.

Maine, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Vermont do not include preorganization subscriptions in their "security" definitions. This does not necessarily mean that such interests would not be considered securities. See Chapter 2 supra, particularly § 2.08 on investment contracts and § 2.09[2] on any interest commonly known as a security.

(n197)Footnote 197. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(10).

(n198)Footnote 198. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(10).

(n199)Footnote 199. Id.

(n200)Footnote 200. See, e.g.:

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(k). Twenty-five subscribers.

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(j)(ii). Ten subscribers.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(g). There is no statutory limit on the number of subscribers.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(10). Ten subscribers.

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(10). Thirty-five subscribers.

New Hampshire: N. H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(k). Ten subscribers. The provision is for limited offerings and includes, but is not limited to, offers and sales pursuant to preorganization subscriptions.

North Carolina: N. C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(10). Ten subscribers and twenty-five offerees.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(f). Five subscribers.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(10). Ten subscribers.

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(x). Fifteen subscribers.

(n201)Footnote 201. See, e.g.:

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 67-1248(b)(10).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-490(b)(10).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(j).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(10).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(g).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(10).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(10).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(e), (f).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(10).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(9).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(x).

The official comment to § 402(b)(10) of the Uniform Securities Act indicates that payment is prohibited until such time as there is an "effective registration." This would not bar payment, however, if the securities to which the subscriptions apply come under another exemption. A few states make payment contingent on registering the securities. In South Carolina, payment is prohibited until articles of incorporation are filed with the Secretary of State. Wisconsin bars payment "until the securities subscribed for may legally be sold."

(n202)Footnote 202.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(I).

In New Mexico, escrow is required in all cases in which payment is made.

(n203)Footnote 203.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(g).

Wisconsin also provides that the subscription may not be binding. See Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(9).

(n204)Footnote 204. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-490(b)(10).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(j).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(10).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(g).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(10).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(10).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(e), (f).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(10).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(9).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(x).

(n205)Footnote 205. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(10), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 375 (1958). Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9), Loss & Cowett supra, pp. 368, 369.

(n206)Footnote 206. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(10).

(n207)Footnote 207. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-490(b)(10).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(j).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(10).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(g).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(10).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(10).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(e), (f).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(10).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(9).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(x).

Comparable language exists in a few other states.

Pennsylvania: See, e.g., 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(f) ("Any offer or sale of a preorganization subscription or securities of a newly-formed person as part of its initial capitalization. ...").

(n208)Footnote 208.

Hawaii: This was the wording of a former statute under Hawaii Rev. L. § 199.5(j).

(n209)Footnote 209.

Hawaii: Anzai v. Kawai, 50 Haw. 406, 441 P.2d 345 (1968) .

(n210)Footnote 210. 441 P.2d at 349 .

(n211)Footnote 211. Id.

(n212)Footnote 212.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(10). As enacted by Act No. 70, Laws of 1971.

(n213)Footnote 213. See, e.g.:

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(K)(3). "The sale of preorganization subscriptions for shares of stock of a corporation prior to the incorporation of the corporation. ..."

Vermont: 9 Vt. Stat. Ann. § 4204a(8). "Subscriptions for shares of the capital stock of a corporation prior to the incorporation thereof under the laws of this state. ..."

(n214)Footnote 214.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(10).

(n215)Footnote 215. Arizona, California, Georgia, Indiana, Missouri, Nevada, New York, North Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

(n216)Footnote 216. Guyann v. Shulters, 223 Miss. 232, 78 So. 2d 114 (1955) .

(n217)Footnote 217.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(10).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(11).

(n218)Footnote 218.

Arizona: Trump v. Badet, 84 Ariz. 319, 327 P.2d 1001 (1958) .

(n219)Footnote 219.

Texas: Sibley v. Horn Advertising, Inc., 505 S.W.2d 417 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) , cert. denied, 420 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1129, 43 L. Ed. 2d 400 .

California particularly has two provisions which could affect preorganization subscriptions. The exemptions are under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(a) and § 25102(c). These provisions, respectively, exempt:

(a) Any offer (but not a sale) not involving any public offering and the execution and delivery of any agreement for the sale of securities pursuant to such offer if (1) the agreement contains substantially the following provision:

The sale of the securities which are the subject of this agreement has not been qualified with the Commissioner of Corporations of the State of California and the issuance of such securities or the payment or receipt of any part of the consideration therefor prior to such qualification is unlawful...

(c) Any offer (but not a sale) and the execution and delivery of any agreement for the sale of securities pursuant to such offer as may be permitted by the commissioner upon application. Any negotiating permit under this subdivision shall be conditioned to the effect that none of the securities may be issued and none of the consideration therefor may be received or accepted until the sale of such securities is qualified under this law.

Limited offering exemptions are discussed in § 8.06 infra.

(n220)Footnote 220.

Tennessee: See, e.g., Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103.

(n221)Footnote 221. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(21).

(n222)Footnote 222. 17 C.F.R. §230.701.

(n223)Footnote 223.

Hawaii: See, e.g. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 485-6(18).

(n224)Footnote 224. As discussed in Chapter 7, supra, with only minor variations, the exemption is available for offers and sales issued by:

[a] person organized and operated exclusively for religious, educational, benevolent, fraternal, charitable, social, athletic, or reformatory purposes, or as a chamber of commerce, and not for pecuniary profit, not part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of a private stockholder or other person... . 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(7).

(n225)Footnote 225. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(a)(9); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(b)(10); 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 201(7).

(n226)Footnote 226. See, e.g., Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 551.23(15) (Offers and sales of any evidence of debt by a qualifying non-profit organization).

In a reverse application, Texas provides a transaction exemption for offers or sales to a qualifying non-profit, see Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-5(U).

(n227)Footnote 227.

North Dakota: See, e.g., N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(19).

(n228)Footnote 228.

Washington: See, e.g., Rev. Code Wa. § 21.20.320(16) (Qualifying mutual or cooperative association meeting requirements of state law and for which a claim of exemption is made).

(n229)Footnote 229. See, e.g., Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(16) (Transactions in securities of a certified "capital company" or a certified Montana small business investment company").

(n230)Footnote 230. During the waiting period, special rules with regard to the offer and sale of the securities apply. Although sales of the securities are prohibited during the waiting period, certain communications that constitute offers are allowed. Because of the apparent difficulty in regulating oral offers, all non-written offers during the waiting period are allowed. However, offers made in writing must conform to certain guidelines.

The first type of permitted written offer is commonly known as a "tombstone ad." The tombstone is a notice, circular, advertisement, letter or other type of written communication which states from whom a formal prospectus may be obtained, identifies the securities, gives their price and names by whom orders will be executed. If the ad goes beyond this point, the information included must meet the requirements of the SEC rules which allow the ad to contain, among other limited information, the name of the issuer, the title of the security and the amount being offered, a brief description of the issuer's business, the selling price, the names of the managing underwriters and the approximate date of public sale. If the expanded form of tombstone ad is used, it must be preceded or accompanied by a prospectus or summary prospectus or the ad must contain a notice announcing the pending registration and stating that the ad shall not be considered an offer to sell or a solicitation of an offer to buy.

Another form of written solicitation that may be used during the waiting period is the preliminary prospectus. This type of prospectus contains substantially the same information as that in the full prospectus, but omits items that bear on the offering price of the securities, conversion rates, call prices, and discounts and commissions to underwriters and dealers. The cover of the preliminary prospectus must state in red ink that it is a preliminary prospectus and contain a legend of notification of the pending registration.

A summary prospectus, prepared and filed as part of a registration statement, may be used during the waiting period. Generally, a summary prospectus will not be permitted unless the issuer is subject to the reporting requirements of Exchange Act Sections 13 or 15(d). The summary prospectus must not include any information not contained in the registration statement, except for information specified in Rule 134(a). Every summary prospectus must contain a statement indicating that copies of a more complete prospectus may be obtained and from whom. When used prior to the effective date of the registration statement, the summary prospectus must be captioned "Preliminary Summary Prospectus." It must also comply with the applicable requirements relating to a preliminary prospectus.

(n231)Footnote 231. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(16).

(n232)Footnote 232.

Arkansas: See, e.g., Ark. Code § 23-42-504(11); Georgia: Off. Code Ga. §10-5-9(10); Idaho: Id. Code § 30-1435(l).

(n233)Footnote 233. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(16)(A)-(B).

(n234)Footnote 234. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(11).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45-55.900(b)(8).

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 23-42-504(a)(11).

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-142(2)(1).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36-b-21(b)(12).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(12).

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(l).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(12).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(i).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(l).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 110A, § 402(b)(12).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451-802(b)(12).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(i).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(12).

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(12).

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(11).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(12).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(i). New Hampshire has adopted the Uniform Securities Act exemption, and in addition exempts "any offer of a security if the sale of such security is or would be exempt under this section." The commissioner may also by rule or order exempt other offers, but not sales, of securities for which a registration statement has been filed.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(N).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(12).

Oklahoma: 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(13).

South Carolina: S.C. Rev. Stat. § 35-1-320(12).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(k).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(12).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(12).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(16).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(xii).

(n235)Footnote 235.

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 25102(b), 25104(g).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(h).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(9).

(n236)Footnote 236.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(11).

(n237)Footnote 237.

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 35-1-320.

(n238)Footnote 238.

Delaware: 6 Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(12).

(n239)Footnote 239. See § 8.02, supra.

(n240)Footnote 240.

District of Columbia: See, e.g.: D.C. Code § 31-5604.02(16)(B).

The District of Columbia blue sky law provision typifies the modern approach of combining the coordinate exemptions into one provision, see also Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 485-6(12).

(n241)Footnote 241. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(17)(B).

(n242)Footnote 242.

Colorado: See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(n).

(n243)Footnote 243.

Connecticut: See, e.g., Gen. Stat. Conn. § 36b-21(b)(10)(A); Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(i);

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(Q);

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-4-14(n).

(n244)Footnote 244. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(Q)(1)-(5).

(n245)Footnote 245. State and federal coordination for a particular limited offering is available in California. SEC Rule 1001 under the federal Securities Act of 1933 was adopted to coordinate a federal exemption with the specific California limited offering exemption provided by § 25102(n) of the California Corporations Code. This particular state-federal coordination is discussed in § 8.06[6][c], infra.

(n246)Footnote 246. See, e.g.:

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-4(14).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat Ann. § 49:3-60(f).

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(a).

Policy Statement 102, superseding "Instructions for § 352-g Exemptions," covers requests for exemptions from state registration for real estate syndication offerings fully registered with the SEC.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(i).

(n247)Footnote 247. Securities Act of 1933 § 5, 15 U.S.C. § 77e.

(n248)Footnote 248. Securities Act of 1933 § 3, 15 U.S.C. § 77c.

(n249)Footnote 249. Securities Act of 1933 § 4, 15 U.S.C. § 77d.

(n250)Footnote 250.

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(a), (b).

(n251)Footnote 251. Securities Act of 1933 § 3(a)(11), 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11).

(n252)Footnote 252.

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff.

(n253)Footnote 253. See comment, "Blue Sky Laws in the Empire State and the Uniform Securities Act," 22 SYR. L. REV. 925 (1971) at 934. Exemptions from filing the further state notice are listed in § N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. 359-~~f~~(1).

(n254)Footnote 254.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-9(5).

(n255)Footnote 255.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(b).

Non-issuer transactions that are exempt by virtue of federal registration are discussed in ch. 9 infra.

(n256)Footnote 256.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(i), which states that "[a]ny sale of a security registered under section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 or exempt from registration under section 3(b) of such act."

(n257)Footnote 257.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(i).

(n258)Footnote 258.

Georgia: See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-9(5).

66 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.04

§ 8.04 Special Purpose Statutory Exemptions

In section 8.03 above the common array of blue sky statutory exemptions is presented. In nearly identical form these transaction exemptions are included in every state blue sky law, whether or not the law is based on the Uniform Act. Beyond the common array, states include a variety of statutory exemptions best characterized as special purpose exemptions. Some are included in one form or another in several states. Others are the product of state-specific policy objectives. While it is not possible to address each of these special purpose exemptions in detail, they are identified in each State Guide in Volumes 3 and 4. Some common special purpose exemption categories are outlined below.

[1] Cooperatives Several states provide exemptions for the offer and sale of securities of housing or agricultural cooperatives. Exemptions relating to agricultural cooperatives are understandably common in those states that are major producers of agricultural commodities. The exemptions typically allow the offer, sale or issuance of securities for patronage, or as patronage refunds or dividends, in connection with marketing agreements by cooperative associations organized exclusively for agriculture, producer, marketing or consumer purposes, and the sale of subscriptions for or shares of stock in cooperative associations organized for such purposes.ⁿ¹ In many instances the exemption is conditioned on there being no commission or other remuneration paid or given for solicitation, and in some cases limitations on the amount of issued securities that may be owned by any one purchaser. In most states the cooperative association must be organized under the particular state's law, or specifically in accordance with another state's laws, and in most cases the offer and sale of the securities may be made only to members of the co-op, or when the purchase of the securities is necessary or incidental to establishing membership.ⁿ²

[2] Sale of an Enterprise Some states exempt sales of securities to the buyer of an enterprise or business, or the assets and liabilities of a business, if the transfer of stock to the buyer is solely incidental to the sale of the enterprise.ⁿ³ These exemptions are not common, but where provided they negate, for purposes of state securities laws, the impact of federal case law rejecting the sale-of-business doctrine and applying securities law protections involving corporate "stock" regardless of the context.ⁿ⁴ Various conditions are also imposed. In Kentucky, for example, the offer or sale of 100% of the ownership interest of a corporation is exempt if 100% of the corporation is either offered or sold, and the stock is sold to one individual or pre-existing entity.ⁿ⁵

[3] Local Development and Venture Capital Enterprises Among special purpose exemptions a common category involves those aimed at specific development, redevelopment or venture capital enterprises. In Illinois, for example, the offer, sale or issuance of securities by an Illinois business corporation issuer is exempt when the purpose is to provide capital and supervision for the redevelopment of blighted urban areas located in a municipality in the state.ⁿ⁶

In Kansas the offer or sale of securities issued by "Kansas Venture Capital, Inc." or any of its successors is exempt.ⁿ⁷ And in Iowa the offer or sale of securities by a small business investment company organized under the federal Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is exempt when certain conditions are satisfied.ⁿ⁸ As with cooperative associations, some states deal with local development or venture capital enterprises as issuers of exempt securities rather than providing a transaction exemption. In either case the objective is to encourage investment in local economies or meet special needs as, for example, the construction of low income housing.ⁿ⁹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Illinois: See, e.g., 815 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 4/4(K);
Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.802(b)(16).

In several states the blue sky law exempts securities issued by cooperative associations rather than providing a transactional exemption, see, e.g., Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.202(12)-(13); Kentucky: 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. § 10:170 § 2.

(n2)Footnote 2.

Minnesota: See, e.g., Minn. Stat. § 80A.15(2)(j).

(n3)Footnote 3.

Alaska: See, e.g., Alas. Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(D); Arkansas: Sec. Comm. Rules § 504.01(l) (Any transaction pursuant to the 100% sale of securities of a business entity); (n4)Footnote 4. See Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S.Ct. 2297, 85 L.Ed.2d 692 (1985) . Landreth and the meaning of "stock" in the context of a sale of an entire business are discussed in Chapter 2, § 2.02, supra .

(n5)Footnote 5. 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. 10:240.

(n6)Footnote 6. 815 Ill. Comp. Laws § 5/4(P); see also 14 Ill. Admin. Code §§ 130.490 -130.491.

(n7)Footnote 7. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(o).

(n8)Footnote 8. Code Iowa § 502.203(17).

(n9)Footnote 9. Other states providing such transaction exemptions include:

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.802(b)(15) (Any offer or sale of securities by a qualifying Michigan non-profit development corporation);

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(16) (Transactions in securities of a certified Montana capital company or certified Montana small business investment company);

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(15) (Offer and sale of interests in North Carolina limited partnerships formed for the purpose of constructing low and moderate income housing in the state);

Virginia: Va. Code § 13-1-514(B)(12) (Any offer or sale of an interest in a partnership, corporation, association or other entity created solely to provide residential housing located in the state);

Wisconsin: Wis. Admin. Code DFI-Sec. 2.02(k) (Offers, but not sales, made by presentation at a "venture capital fair" or other investment forum designated by the administrator).

67 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.05

§ 8.05 Offers and Sales to Accredited Investors

As part of the Small Business Investment Incentive Act of 1980,ⁿ¹ Congress added the "accredited investor" concept to the federal securities laws through the enactment of section 4(6) of the Securities Act of 1933. That legislative action followed the historical evolution of case law under section 4(2) of the federal act--the "private offering" exemption--that recognized there are types of purchasers, based on criteria indicating financial sophistication and ability to fend for themselves, that do not require the protections of registration. Congress determined that companies offering and selling securities in non-public transactions solely to these investors should be exempt from Securities Act registration. Section 4(6) of the federal Securities Actⁿ² thus provides issuers an exemption for offers and sales of securities to "accredited investors" if they offer no more than $5 million of securities and do not engage in general solicitation. Congress established several categories of "accredited investors" by definition in section 2(a)(15)(i) of the Securities Act, and also authorized the SEC to adopt additional categories based on such factors as financial sophistication, net worth, knowledge, and experience in financial matters.

In Regulation D under the federal Securities Act, adopted in 1982, the SEC made accredited investors an important part of the safe harbor offering regimen in Rules 505 and 506. While limiting the number of unaccredited investors in offerings under them, these rules exclude accredited investors from the numbers limitations, and also do not require issuers to provide disclosure to accredited investors. The Regulation D definition of accredited investor is contained in Rule 501(a), which includes the statutory categories of accredited investors plus additional categories the SEC created. The definition accredits investors based on their income, net worth, and assets. Natural persons qualify as accredited investors if they meet certain income or net worth tests. As defined in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D accredited investors include natural persons with individual incomes in excess of $200,000 (or joint spousal incomes of $300,000) for the two most recent years, if they reasonably expect to earn at least the same amount in the current year. Natural persons with individual (or joint, with a spouse) net worth in excess of $1 million are also within the definition of accredited investor. Other investors are accredited if they have more than $5 million of assets. These generally include state or ERISA employee benefit plans, charitable organizations or business entities if they were not formed for the specific purpose of investing in the securities offered, and trusts if they were not formed for the purpose of acquiring the securities offered and their purchase is directed by a sophisticated person.ⁿ³

At the state level, the Uniform Securities Act made no provision for an accredited investor transaction exemption, and as discussed earlier,ⁿ⁴ transaction exemptions for offers and sales to institutional or financial investors do not encompass sales to natural persons. As part of a continuing initiative to promote uniformity not only among state blue sky laws but also to harmonize state and federal securities laws, NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--in 1997 adopted the "Model Accredited Investor Exemption."ⁿ⁵ Subject to certain qualifications, the Model Accredited Investor Exemption applies to any offer or sale of a security by an issuer to persons who are or the issuer reasonably believes are accredited investors, as the term is defined in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act of 1933. The accredited investor exemption is not available for an issuer that is in the development stage that either has no specific business plan or purpose or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in a merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies, or other entity or person. It is also not available to an issuer if the issuer, any of the issuer's predecessors, any affiliated issuer, or any of the issuer's directors, officers, general partners, beneficial owners of 10% or more of any class of its equity securities, or any of the issuer's promoters, any underwriter, or any partner, director or officer of an underwriter is subject to a "bad boy" disqualification. The same set of "bad boy" disqualifications is now common in connection with several types of limited offerings available under state laws and regulations. They focus on whether within the last five years the issuer or a covered person has been the subject of certain administrative, criminal or enforcement proceedings, or is the subject of any civil injunctive order or a judgment relating to fraud or deceit.

Most states have adopted the Model Accredited Investor Exemption, or a particular state exemption analog,ⁿ⁶ by rule or administrative order.ⁿ⁷ In operation, the exemption permits a general announcement of the proposed offering to be made by any means. However, the content of the general announcement is limited to prescribed information, and must include a statement that sales will be made only to accredited investors. No money or other consideration may be solicited or accepted by way of the general announcement. The issuer may provide information in addition to the general announcement if that information is delivered through an electronic database that is restricted to persons who have been pre-qualified as accredited investors, or it is delivered after the issuer reasonably believes that the prospective investor is an accredited investor. The same restriction is placed on telephone solicitations. Note, however, that dissemination of the permitted general announcement of the proposed offering to persons who are not accredited investors will not disqualify the issuer from claiming the exemption. States adopting the Model Accredited Investor Exemption also require a notice filing with the administrator, including filing the general announcement, and there is a filing fee.

The exemption for offers and sales to accredited investors facilitates capital formation and benefits small business issuers in particular by allowing access to electronic databases and Internet resources that operate to match issuers and accredited investors. An important limitation, however, is that all purchasers must purchase the securities for investment, and not with a view to or for sale in connection with a distribution of the securities. This requirement is expressly included in the Model Accredited Investor Exemption, which also provides that any resale of the securities within 12 months otherwise than pursuant to a registration or to another accredited investor is presumed to be with a view to distribution and not for investment. The model exemption makes clear that the issuer must reasonably believe that all purchasers take the securities with the requisite investment intent. Accordingly, issuer compliance with the exemption includes the responsibility reasonably to assure that the holding period requirement is satisfied, and to police any resales. This is typically accomplished by placing an appropriate legend on stock certificates or other instruments, and implementing transfer restrictions. Subscription or other purchase documentation should also include appropriate representations and covenants.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. 96-477 (Oct. 21, 1980).

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(6).

(n3)Footnote 3. 17 C.F.R. § 230.501(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 8.03[6], supra.

(n5)Footnote 5. The complete text of the NASAA Model Accredited Investor Exemption is included among NASAA Statements of Policy reproduced in Volume 3 of this treatise.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.

District of Columbia: D.C. Code § 31-5604.02(11A);

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. 485-6(16);

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/4(H);

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(10)(G)(i);

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(17);

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(Y);

Pennsylvania: Pa. Code § 203.201;

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(14);

Texas: Tex. Admin. Code § 109.13(a) ("Well Informed and Sophisticated Investor Offering")

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Admin Code Sec. R14-4-140;

Colorado: Sec. Div. Rules § 51-3.19;

Connecticut: Admin. Order (April 14, 1998)

Delaware: Sec. Act Regs. § 503;

Kansas: Kan. Admin. Regs. § 81-5-13;

Kentucky: 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. § 10:340;

Maine: 537 OFI Rules §§ 1-4;

Maryland: Admin. Order (Jan. 18, 2000);

Mississippi: Sec. State Rule 719;

Nevada: Nev. Admin. Code § 90.536;

New Jersey: Admin. Order (Mar. 24, 1998);

New Mexico: N.M. Admin. Code Rule 12.11.12.20;

Oregon: Ore. Admin. Code Rule 441-35-010;

Rhode Island: Sec. Div. Rule 403(c)(1);

South Carolina: Sec. Comm. Order No. 97019;

South Dakota: Admin. Regs. § 20:08:07:29;

Utah: Sec. Div. Rules R161-14-2n;

Vermont: Admin. Order No. 00-037-S;

Virginia: Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-140;

Washington: Wash. Admin. Code § 460-44A-300;

West Virginia: Admin. Order (Mar. 25, 1999);

Wisconsin: Wis. Admin. Code DFI-Sec. 2.02(n);

Wyoming: Sec. Div. Regs. Ch. 9, § 3).

68 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.06

§ 8.06 Limited Offering Exemptions

[1] In General In addition to widespread adoption of an accredited investor exemption, all states make provision for other forms of limited offerings without compliance with registration or qualification requirements. A form of limited offering exemption has been a part of the Uniform Securities Act since its inception,ⁿ¹ and the 2002 Uniform Act retains such a provision that today identifies the elements of the most common forms of limited offering. Section 202(14) of the 2002 Uniform Act exempts:

[a] sale or an offer to sell securities of an issuer, if part of a single issue in which

(A) not more than 25 purchasers are present in this State during any 12 consecutive months, other than [institutional investors];

(B) a general solicitation or general advertising is not made in connection with the offer to sell or sale of the securities;

(C) a commission or other remuneration is not paid or given, directly or indirectly, to a person other than a broker-dealer registered under this [Act] or an agent registered under this [Act] for soliciting a prospective purchaser in this State; and

(D) the issuer reasonably believes that all the purchasers in this State other than [institutional investors] are purchasing for investment.ⁿ²

There are numerous variations among basic limited offering exemptions, but all states provide for at least one form of limited offering that restricts sales to a small number of non-institutional (and in some cases non-accredited) persons during any period of 12 consecutive months, and in which commissions are paid only to licensed persons. There are several other forms of limited offering provisions, and the most common among them are discussed in this section. The most common form of limited offering exemption, however, is the widely adopted NASAA Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOE), which was developed to coordinate blue sky laws with Regulation D under the federal Securities Act of 1933. The significance of the ULOE has diminished in the wake of NSMIA, and federal preemption of state regulation of offerings carried out today in conformity with Rule 506 of Regulation D. Nevertheless, it continues to play a role in connection with certain other types of offerings, and full consideration follows in subpart [2] below.

Although not limited offering "exemptions" as such, there are also commonly adopted provisions that provide for a lesser form of registration. These procedures, available to small business issuers, are the product of another NASAA initiative in response to the Uniform Limited Offering Registration (ULOR) that produced SCOR--the Small Company Offering Registration procedure³-- for the uniform treatment of registrations of small company offerings that are exempt from federal registration requirements under Rule 504 of Regulation D or Regulation A, or which qualify as intrastate offerings under section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933. SCOR, which is based on a user-friendly Form U-7 as both a registration statement and offering document, is discussed more particularly in Chapter 10--Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation. However, because it is an important limited offering alternative to regular registration and qualification requirements under blue sky laws, SCOR is briefly introduced here along with small business offerings generally in section 8.06 below. All of the limited offering alternatives in blue sky laws or the regulatory structures under them have paramount importance today in local or regional small business capital formation initiatives for which state investor protection authority remains intact.

[2] The Uniform Limited Offering Exemption ("ULOE") The Small Business Investment Incentive Act of 1980⁴ created new Section 19(c) of the federal Securities Act,⁵ which, among other things, authorized the SEC to work with state securities administrators to achieve greater uniformity in federal and state securities regulation. Section 19(c) specifically provided for the development of a uniform exemption from registration for small issuers to be agreed on by the states and the federal government. The goal in all of this was to eliminate barriers to capital formation. At the time, state blue sky laws imposed registration and qualification requirements on capital formation activities that were increasingly national in character. Significant progress had been made on an uncoordinated basis to harmonize state requirements with SEC Rule 146, which established a safe harbor exemption for "private" offerings, but with the adoption of Regulation D under the federal Securities Act a uniform state exemption was needed more than ever to accommodate, and to balance, regulatory and economic objectives. The North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. ("NASAA") responded with the ULOE, which was adopted in final form in September 1983 to coordinate with Regulation D. With the enactment of NSMIA in 1996 federal and state regulatory roles were realigned, and the scope of state authority to regulate offerings within the ambit of federal Regulation D was also redefined, and with it the role of the ULOE. To fully understand the role of the ULOE in the post-NSMIA environment it is necessary therefore briefly to review the elements an operation of Regulation D.

[a] Regulation D Generally Regulation D was adopted by the SEC in 1982 as part of its program to assist small business capital formation and to reduce the burdens imposed by the federal securities laws on small business. Regulation D streamlined the requirements for private offers and sales of securities without registration under the federal Securities Act,⁶ replacing the limited offering and small offering exemptions previously available under Securities Act Rules 146, 240, and 242.⁷ The rules under Regulation D (other than Rule 506 after NSMIA) do not provide an exemption from any applicable state law relating to the offer and sale of securities.⁸

Rule 501 of Regulation D defines common terms used in Regulation D, as for example, the term "accredited investor" discussed earlier in connection with the accredited investor exemptions under state laws. Rule 502 sets forth the general conditions relating to integration, information requirements, limitations on manner of offering, and limitations on resale that apply to all exempt offers and sales effected pursuant to Rules 504, 505, and 506. Key conditions or elements under Regulation D include:

(a) Integration. Rule 502(a) requires integration of all sales that are part of the same Regulation D offering.⁹ A safe harbor, however, is provided for all offers and sales that take place at least six months before the start of, or six months after, the termination of the Regulation D offering, so long as during the six-month periods there are no offers or sales of securities by or for the issuer of the same or a similar class as those offered or sold under Regulation D other than under an employee benefit plan as defined in Rule 405.

(b) Information Requirements. If an issuer sells securities under Rule 504, Rule 505, or Rule 506 only to accredited investors, then Regulation D does not require any specific disclosure. If, in a Rule 505 or Rule 506 offering, securities are sold to nonaccredited purchasers, then Rule 502(b)(1)(ii) requires the information required under Rule 502(b) be delivered to nonaccredited purchasers and recommends furnishing the information to all purchasers in view of the antifraud rules.

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.06

The nonfinancial information requirements depend upon an issuer's eligibility to use a particular form of registration statement or Regulation A, rather than the dollar amount of the offering. An issuer that is not subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or Section 15(d) of the Exchange Act to furnish information to the purchaser and to the extent material to an understanding of the issuer, its business and the securities being offered. If the issuer is eligible to use Regulation A, the issuer must provide the same kind of information as would be required in Part II of Form 1-A. If the issuer is not eligible to use Regulation A, the issuer must provide the same kind of information as required in Part I of a registration form the issuer is entitled to use.

As to financial statement information for a nonreporting issuer:

(1) For offerings up to $2 million, the issuer must provide the information required in Item 310 of Regulation S-B, except that the issuer's balance sheet (which must be dated within 120 days of the offering) must be audited;

(2) For offerings up to $7.5 million, the financial statement information must be that required in Form SB-2 (which replaced old Form S-18). If the issuer (other than a limited partnership) cannot obtain audited financials without unreasonable effort and expense, then only the balance sheet (dated within 120 days of the offering) must be audited.

(3) For offerings over $7.5 million, the issuer must provide the financial statement required in a registration statement on the form the issuer would be entitled to use. The financial statement information requirement for issuers subject to reporting requirements of Section 13 or Section 15(d) of the 1934 Act is either (a) the issuer's most recent annual report (if it meets the requirements of Section 14a-3 or Section 14c-3), the proxy statement and, if requested by the purchaser in writing, Form 10-K and Form 10-KSB; or (b) the information contained on Form 10-K or Form 10-KSB or in a registration statement on Form S-1, Form SB-1, Form SB-2, or Form S-11 or on Form 10 or Form 10-SB (whichever filing is most recent).

(c) Limitations on Manner of Offering. Rule 502(c), applicable to all transactions under Regulation D except certain offers and sales made pursuant to Rule 504, prohibits the offer or sale of securities by any form of general solicitation or general advertising.

(d) Limitations on Resale. Rule 502(d), applicable to all transactions under Regulation D except certain offers and sales made pursuant to Rule 504, provides that securities acquired in a transaction under Regulation D have the status of securities acquired in a transaction under Securities Act Section 4(2) and cannot be resold without registration or an exemption from registration.

(e) Notice of Sales. Rule 503 provides one uniform notice of sales, Form D, for offerings pursuant to Regulation D. Only one filing, which is due within fifteen days after the first sale of securities under Regulation D, is required.ⁿ¹⁰

Rule 504, "Exemption for Limited Offerings and Sales of Securities Not Exceeding $1,000,000," replaced Securities Act Rule 240ⁿ¹¹ and provides an exemption for offers and sales of securities by an issuer not subject to the reporting provisions of the Exchange Act that satisfy the terms and conditions of Rules 501 through 503 and do not exceed an aggregate offering price of $1,000,000, less the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of and during the offering under Rule 504 in reliance on any exemption under Section 3(b) of the Securities Act¹² or in violation of Section 5(a) of the Securities Act.¹³ While the Rule originally provided for the purchasers to receive freely tradeable securities, it now provides that purchasers receive restricted securities under the Securities Act except for sales that satisfy certain state-accredited investor provisions.

Rule 505, "Exemption for Limited Offers and Sales of Securities Not Exceeding $5,000,000," replaced Securities Act Rule 242¹⁴ and provides an exemption for offers and sales of securities not exceeding an aggregate offering price of $5 million, less the aggregate offering price for all securities sold within the twelve months before the start of the offering and during the offering under Rule 505, in reliance on any exemption under Section 3(b) of the Securities Act or in violation of Section 5(a) of the Securities Act. In addition, offers and sales of securities must satisfy the terms and conditions of Rules 501 through 503, and the issuer must reasonably believe that there are no more than thirty-five nonaccredited purchasers of securities from the issuer in any offering, though an unlimited number of accredited purchasers is permitted.¹⁵

Rule 506, "Exemption for Limited Offers and Sales Without Regard to Dollar Amount of Offering," replaced Rule 146 under the Securities Act of 1933 and provides an exemption from registration if the terms and conditions of Rules 501 through 503 have been satisfied and the issuer reasonably believes that there are no more than thirty-five nonaccredited purchasers of securities from the issuer in any offering under Rule 506. In addition, the issuer must reasonably believe immediately prior to making any sale that each purchaser who is not an accredited investor either alone or with his or her purchaser representative has sufficient knowledge and experience in financial and business matters to be able to evaluate the merits and risks of the prospective investment. Rule 506 does not limit the aggregate dollar amount of the offering or the number of accredited investors who may purchase securities, subject, however, to the prohibition on general advertising or solicitation.

Rule 507 (added in March 1989) establishes "bad boy" disqualifications for an issuer from the use of Rule 504, Rule 505, or Rule 506 exemptions if a court has enjoined the issuer or its predecessors or affiliates from reliance on the exemptions because of a failure to comply with Rule 503 filing requirements. The issuer may seek to have the disqualification waived by the SEC upon a showing of good cause that is not necessary.

Rule 508 (added in March 1989) is a substantial compliance provision. The exemption will not be lost if, with respect to a particular offer or sale, the issuer can show that (1) the provision violated was not intended to protect that particular person, and (2) the failure was insignificant in the context of the total offering (note that any violation relating to the dollar ceilings, number of purchasers or general advertising is, by definition, not significant), and (3) a good faith attempt was made to comply.

[b] ULOE Coordination with Regulation D The ULOE consists of a statute section, three preliminary notes, a rule, and footnotes, which in some cases represent alternative applications. The statute section authorizes the state securities administrator to create by rule a limited offering transactional exemption which shall further the objectives of compatibility with federal exemptions and uniformity among the states.¹⁶

The three notes provide that:

- (1) nothing in the ULOE relieves issuers or persons acting on behalf of issuers from complying with state antifraud requirements;
- (2) the exemption is not available for transactions in technical compliance with it which are part of a plan or scheme to evade registration or the conditions of the exemption; and

(3) nothing in the ULOE is intended to relieve broker-dealers or agents from due diligence, suitability, or know your customer standards or other requirements applicable to such registered persons.

The exemption in the rule applies to offerings that satisfy Rule 505 under Securities Act Regulation D (offerings not exceeding $5,000,000 to accredited investors¹⁷ and up to 35 nonaccredited investors) where the requirements of Rules 501-503 under Regulation D are satisfied, subject to certain additional conditions relating to the registration of persons receiving compensation, the absence of disqualifying factors, the filing of a notice on Form D, and a suitability or a sophistication standard for nonaccredited investors.

The ULOE includes Rule 506 offerings as an alternative in footnote 1. That footnote states the concerns of state securities administrators that private placements under the rule, which are not subject to a dollar limit or a limit on the number of accredited investors, comply with Rule 506. That concern was particularly acute with respect to abusive tax shelters. However, the adoption of NSMIA preempted state regulation of Rule 506 offerings, making them subject only to the states' rights to require notice filings and collect fees.

Rule 504, which exempts offerings of not more than $1,000,000 from federal registration requirements, represents a delegation of federal regulation to the states and is not part of the ULOE. Rule 504 offerings remain subject to registration and qualification requirements of blue sky laws, although a few states have brought Rule 504 offerings expressly within the coverage of the ULOE. In Indiana, for example, any offer or sale of securities made in compliance with Rules 504, 505 or 506 of Regulation D is exempt.¹⁸ As applied to Rule 504 and Rule 505 offerings, ULOE and Regulation D conditions are imposed. Thus, among other things, a suitability requirement applies to all sales to nonaccredited purchasers, and commissions may be paid only to intermediaries who are licensed in the state.

In the majority of states that continue to require compliance with registration or qualification provisions for Rule 504 offerings the utility of the ULOE today is limited to offerings conducted in accordance with Rule 505 under Regulation D which, although meaningful, is not practically significant because many issuers would elect to proceed in compliance with Rule 506 of Regulation D for which state regulation is preempted. The advantage in proceeding under Rule 505, however, is that there are no qualifications on the "nature" of the 35 non-accredited purchasers permitted by the rule. Rule 506, which allows for 35 non-accredited purchasers, nevertheless requires that each purchaser who is not an accredited investor must either alone or with a purchaser representative have such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters as to be capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment.¹⁹

[c] "Bad Boy" Disqualifications Availability of the ULOE is conditioned upon the issuer having no "bad boy" disqualification. The disqualifications were imported from SEC rules applicable to Regulation A under the Securities Act of 1933, and which were then incorporated into Regulation D. The disqualifications apply to securities of an issuer if the issuer, its officers, underwriters or related persons:

1. Has filed a registration statement that is the subject of a currently effective registration stop order entered pursuant to any state's securities law within five years prior to the filing of the notice required under this exemption;
2. Has been convicted within five years prior to the filing of the notice required under this exemption of any felony or misdemeanor in connection with the offer, purchase or sale of any security or any felony involving fraud or deceit, including but not limited to forgery, embezzlement, obtaining money under false pretenses, larceny or conspiracy to defraud;
3. Is currently subject to any state administrative enforcement order or judgment entered by that state's securities administrator within five years prior to the filing of the notice required under this exemption or is subject to any state's administrative enforcement order or judgment in which fraud or deceit, including but not limited to making untrue statements of material facts and omitting to state material facts, was found and the order or judgment was entered within five years prior to the filing of the notice required under this exemption;

4. Is subject to any state's administrative enforcement order or judgment which prohibits, denies or revokes the use of any exemption from registration in connection with the offer, purchase or sale of securities; or

5. Is currently subject to any order, judgment, or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction temporarily or preliminarily restraining or enjoining, or is subject to any order, judgment or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction, permanently restraining or enjoining, such party from engaging in or continuing any conduct or practice in connection with the purchase or sale of any security or involving the making of any false filing with the state entered within five years prior to the filing of the notice required under this exemption.

The disqualifications generally apply to events occurring within the five years preceding the filing of the ULOE notice, except for enforcement orders or judgments under item 4. The disqualifications do not apply (except for item 4) if the person subject to the disqualification is licensed to conduct securities-related business in the state that took the action or if the broker-dealer employing the person is licensed in the offering state and the basis of the disqualification is disclosed in Form BD, the broker dealer registration form. Any disqualification can also be waived by the state which took the action, or, under section 3 of ULOE, the administrator of the offering state may waive a disqualification. There is also a "no reasonable belief defense" for the disqualification provisions.

[d] Investor Qualifications The ULOE does not impose any qualification requirements on accredited investors beyond the accreditation criteria. Non-accredited investors, however, must meet either a suitability or a sophistication standard. Suitability can be presumed if the investment does not exceed 10% of an investor's net worth. The suitability test is relevant only in the case of Rule 505 offerings, since non-accredited investors must meet sophistication standards under Rule 506 in any event. The 10% of net worth presumption would be applicable only to sales to a non-accredited investor up to $100,000 since, above that amount, the investor would need a net worth in excess of $1 million to be qualified as an accredited investor.

The sophistication test for non-accredited investors requires that the purchaser alone or with a purchaser representative has the knowledge and experience to evaluate the merits and risks of the investment. This is the same test applied under Rule 506. A reasonable belief test applies to the issuer and anyone acting on its behalf.

[e] Filing Requirements The ULOE requires the filing of a notice on Form D ten days prior to the receipt of consideration or the delivery of a subscription agreement from an investor. Footnote 4 provides an alternative post-sale notice patterned after the notice requirements of Rule 503 of Regulation D as then in effect. While Regulation D required a notice to be filed within ten days after the first sale,ⁿ²⁰ this requirement has been interpreted by the Commission in a way consistent with the ULOE requirement.ⁿ²¹ Rule 503 presently requires the filing of a Form D not later than 15 days after the first sale of securities. The notice is required to contain an undertaking by the issuer to furnish to the state securities administrator, upon written request, the information furnished by the issuer to offerees, except where the state administrator pursuant to regulation requires that the information be filed at the same time with the filing of the notice. Footnote 5 to the ULOE states that the pre-sale notice or the filing of offering material is not intended to form the basis for a fairness review of the offering.

[f] Other Conditions The ULOE exempts offers and sales if offered and sold in compliance with Regulation D Rules 505 and/or 506 and which satisfy the following further conditions and limitations. First, no commission or other remuneration is to be paid, directly or indirectly, to any person for soliciting any prospective purchaser in the state in connection with the offer or sale in reliance on the regulation unless such person is appropriately registered in the state. The states also have the option of allowing such persons to register as a broker-dealer or agent, pursuant to a simplified registration procedure that as a minimum would be sufficient to grant the state jurisdiction and the ability to police the persons offering and selling within the state.

The ULOE adds to the disqualification provisions of Rule 505, pertaining to the issuer, underwriter, and certain persons affiliated with them, currently effective stop orders relating to the registration of securities entered pursuant to any state's law within the past five years; the conviction within the past five years for any felony involving fraud or deceit, including forgery, embezzlement, and larceny; being subject to state administrative order or judgment entered within the past five years by the state's securities administrator; being subject to a restraining order (in addition to those set forth in Rule 505) involving the making of any false filing with any state. The state administrator can on showing of good cause waive any ground for disqualification by finding that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the exemption be denied.

The issuer must file a Form D with the state generally within the time frames of Regulation D, except that the state has the option to require it to be filed ten days before receipt of any consideration by the issuer or delivery of subscription agreement by an investor. The ULOE also requires the filing of a consent to service of process, payment of a filing fee, and an undertaking by the issuer to furnish the administrator, upon request, with a copy of the information furnished to offerees.

[3] The Federal Section 4(2) "Private Offering" Exemption Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ²² exempts "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering." In one form or another many states have a section 4(2) coordinate or tracking exemption in their blue sky laws. These exemptions may explicitly refer to Section 4(2) of the Securities Actⁿ²³ or may simply exempt non-public offerings.ⁿ²⁴

In the application and enforcement of "private offering" exemptions states have looked to federal administrative and judicial interpretations of section 4(2) for guidance. Historically, five factors have been used to determine availability of the exemption:

1. Ability of offerees to fend for themselves,
2. Availability of information,
3. Manner of offering,
4. Number of offerees and purchasers, and
5. Absence of redistribution.

Each of these factors that continue to control availability of the exemption is discussed further below. When the "private offering" exemption is available it operates wholly apart from restrictions or conditions applicable to other forms of limited offering exemptions. There is no "safe harbor" however, and these criteria remain fully exposed to challenge in administrative or enforcement actions, or in litigation brought under the civil liability provisions of blue sky laws.

[a] Ability of Offerees to Fend for Themselves The legislative history of the federal section 4(2) exemption referred, among other things, to circumstances "where there is no practical need for [the bill's] application."ⁿ²⁵ The absence of the need for the protections provided by registration under the Securities Act, i.e., the ability of offerees to fend for themselves, has been a touchstone of judicial interpretation of the exemption. The seminal case of SEC v. Ralston Purina Co. ⁿ²⁶ focused on the ability of the offerees to fend for themselves, i.e., whether they needed the protection of the Act. The Supreme Court also referred to "access" to the "kind of information which registration would disclose."ⁿ²⁷ Access was not defined, however. Ralston Purina involved a sale of securities under a key executive stock option plan with several hundred eligible participants. Since many of the participants appeared to have neither economic bargaining power nor a relationship to the company that would give them the ability to obtain necessary information, the Court held that the exemption was unavailable.

The cases since Ralston Purina have not definitively outlined the required access. Some courts have found the requirement satisfied where the offeree has a close personal family or employment relationship to the issuer.ⁿ²⁸ In Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC,ⁿ²⁹ the Second Circuit held that a sale to three purchasers did not qualify as a private offering because the purchasers lacked the required relationship to the issuer and the knowledge needed to evaluate the offering. The Securities and Exchange Commission's litigating position in its appellate brief in the infamous Continental Tobacco caseⁿ³⁰ maintained that economic bargaining power was not enough to convey access, and that a permitted private placee had to be virtually an insider with respect to the issuer. In such circumstances where the offerees have a close relationship to the issuer, the public benefits of requiring registration would be viewed as too remote.ⁿ³¹

In 1974, the SEC promulgated Securities Act Rule 146ⁿ³² to provide more objective standards for the application of the limited offering (or "private placement") exemption. Since the adoption of former Rule 146, "ability to fend for themselves" has sometimes been divided into two components: ability to bear the risk (which the SEC may construe as the investor's ability to afford the loss of an entire investment, although commentators urge that the probability of loss also be considered)ⁿ³³ and "sophistication." The precise definition of sophistication is not clear, but it has been generally interpreted to mean the ability to understand the risks of the particular investment.ⁿ³⁴

Rule 506 under Regulation D eliminated the economic risk test of Rule 146 but maintains the requirement of a subjective sophistication determination for nonaccredited investors as to whether such a purchaser, either alone or with a purchaser representative, is able to evaluate the merits and risks of the investment.ⁿ³⁵ This notion will continue to guide applications of section 4(2) independently of Rule 506, and likewise guide state administrators.

[b] Availability of Information Establishing the federal section 4(2) exemption requires proof that the offerees had access to registration-type information through economic bargaining position, family or personal relationship, employment, or by some other means.ⁿ³⁶ Former Rule 146(e) required information or access.ⁿ³⁷ Regulation D requires the delivery of information rather than access to information for investors other than accredited investors.ⁿ³⁸

Despite judicial suggestions to the contrary,ⁿ³⁹ the better view is that the information provided need not be the same as registration would provide but should be the same kind of information, i.e., basic information concerning the issuer's financial condition, results of operations, business, property, and management.ⁿ⁴⁰ Information should also be given as to the use of proceeds and, to the extent material, tax considerations and risk factors. In Livens v. William D. Witter, Inc.,ⁿ⁴¹ the exemption was held available, although the purchaser did not receive financial statements because the issuer lacked records from which such statements could be prepared. The court concluded that, since the purchaser was informed of the deficiency in the information available (although no one appreciated the significance of such unavailability) and was willing to proceed with the transaction, the material information had been given and, under the circumstances, the omission was not material.

[c] Manner of Offering The manner of offering is an important element in determining the availability of the statutory exemption. Generally, the issuer should offer its securities through direct communications to offerees or their representatives. No general solicitation or advertising is permitted. In addition, the number of offers should be limited as discussed below.

A few courts have deemphasized the manner of offering element and replaced it with requirements that focus on the type of offeree being solicited. For example, in SEC v. Universal Major Industries Corp.,ⁿ⁴² the court stated that it was not the manner of offering but the class of offerees to whom the offering was made that determined the availability of the exemption.ⁿ⁴³ It has been suggested that the issue of the class of offeree (i.e., a person who has the ability to fend for herself) should be a separate requirement in addition to that prescribing the manner of offering.ⁿ⁴⁴

[d] Number of Offerees and Purchasers The number of offerees and purchasers has always been another significant factor affecting the availability of the federal section 4(2) exemption and it is no less significant at the state level for any non-public offering exemption. The section 4(2) exemption, unlike Rule 506, is tested against both the number and qualifications of offerees rather than the number and qualifications of purchasers. However, the existence of a large number of purchasers in fact (excluding, however, large institutional investors) makes it less likely that each offeree met the qualification criteria and may also be indicative of a general solicitation.

The Ralston Purina n45 decision states that there is no absolute maximum number of offerees which would, if exceeded, result in the loss of the exemption. It is also clear that no permissible minimum number of offerees exists; an offering to even one person, if that person lacks the requisite qualifications, may result in a public offering.ⁿ⁴⁶ Nevertheless, securities practitioners long followed, at least until the advent of former Rule 146, the "Rule of 25" derived from an early opinion of the SEC's General Counsel,ⁿ⁴⁷ which viewed 25 qualified offerees as the appropriate ceiling for a statutory private placement. Former Rule 146 focused attention more on the manner of offering, to which the numbers of offerees and purchasers may be relevant. The manner of offering continues to be relevant under Rule 506, although the elimination of offeree qualification requirements makes the nature of the offerees less significant. Outside of the institutional private placement situation,ⁿ⁴⁸ most experienced counsel find their comfort level diminishing as the number of offerees and purchasers increases, since the likelihood of all offerees and purchasers meeting the qualification criteria decreases as their numbers grow.

[e] Absence of Redistribution If the purchaser in an offering immediately resells the securities in a manner that would transform the overall transaction into a public offering (i.e., if such purchaser effects a public distribution of the securities), the federal section 4(2) exemption is lost.ⁿ⁴⁹ Normally, issuers should obtain an investment letter from private purchasers of their securities. That letter should state that the securities are being acquired for the purchaser's own account and should also state the purchaser's intention and agreement not to effect a distribution or public resale of the securities except as permitted by law, e.g., under Securities Act Rule 144.ⁿ⁵⁰ Some consideration of the subjective intent of the purchaser is unavoidable because of the category of statutory underwriter created by section 2(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ⁵¹ which makes someone who purchases from an issuer with "a view to distribution" an underwriter. However, the section 4(2) exemption does not preclude a private resale of privately placed securities.

The section 4(2) exemption does not require any particular enforcement devices to prevent distributions, such as the placement of restrictive legends on certificates or the issuance of stop transfer instructions to transfer agents.ⁿ⁵² However, those procedures and receipt of an investment letter buttress the claim that the transaction was exempt in the view of both the SEC and the courts.ⁿ⁵³

[4] State "Private Offering" Exemptions As noted above, states that do not simply incorporate federal section 4(2) by reference may nonetheless provide a statutory "private" or "non-public" offering counterpart, although more commonly a generalized limited offering exemption fashioned in accordance with the Uniform Act model discussed in subpart [5][a] below is provided as the basic "private offering" counterpart. In any case, state private or limited offerings typically focus on the common elements described below.

The Number of Sales. In most states, the availability of the limited offering exemption depends upon the number of purchasers during a specific time period. As with states counting the number of offers, the designated count of permitted sales varies from state to state.ⁿ⁵⁴ In addition, since a few of these jurisdictions define "sale" to include "offers to sell,"ⁿ⁵⁵ it would appear that the number of offers would also be considered when determining the number of sales. The states that consider the number of sales as the basis of their limited offering exemption recognize that, for the public to receive the protection otherwise available through registration, limitations must be placed on the offering itself and on the manner in which the offering is made.ⁿ⁵⁶ Most states, for instance, require that the issuer or seller reasonably believe that the purchaser is buying for investment,ⁿ⁵⁷ and not with a view to resale or distribution.

In Colorado, North Dakota and Pennsylvania, limits are placed on the number of offerees that may be solicited in the twelve-month period.ⁿ⁵⁸ Several states prohibit commissions or other remuneration to be paid or to be given in connection with any solicitations or sales for which the limited offering exemption is available,ⁿ⁵⁹ and most states preclude the use of all public advertising or other public solicitation.ⁿ⁶⁰

The Number of Securities Holders. An exemption based on the number of security holders differs from an exemption based on the number of offers or sales. An exemption based on the number of offerees or purchasers may be used repeatedly in different time periods. Thus, if the limited offering exemption permits twenty sales in twelve months and the offeror makes twenty sales in twelve months, the count begins again when the next twelve-month period commences. A limited offering exemption based on the number of security holders, however, precludes use of the exemption once the maximum number of security holders is reached. The states are not uniform in the number of final security holders permitted for the exemption to be available.ⁿ⁶¹

General Restrictions on Limited Offerings. Consistent with the basic regulatory format of blue sky law, states have imposed restrictions on the use of the limited offering exemption so that investors in offerings made in reliance on such exemption will not need the protection otherwise offered by securities registration. Such restrictions on the limited offering exemption have been established by the states regardless of whether a particular jurisdiction counts offerees, purchasers, or security holders for the availability of the exemption.

The Offeror. The limited offering exemption is generally considered an exemption to assist issuers, such as a small corporation with a few shareholders who all have a personal relationship with the issuer and all are owners of the issuer's securities.ⁿ⁶² The Uniform Securities Act does not bar non-issuers from using the exemption.ⁿ⁶³ Many states, however, prescribe that only issuers may use the exemption,ⁿ⁶⁴ and some states require that the issuer be a particular type of entity, such as a corporation or partnership.ⁿ⁶⁵ The issuer exemption is sometimes made available to affiliatesⁿ⁶⁶ or to controlling personsⁿ⁶⁷ of the issuer.

The Offeree. Few states restrict the nature of the offeree. While the Uniform Securities Act provisionⁿ⁶⁸ has no specific requirements regarding the investor, regulations have been promulgated in several states delineating the character of the offeree. The general limited offering exemption in California places conditions on who may be a purchaser,ⁿ⁶⁹ and a regulation places similar limits on offerees whose transactions may be subject to two of the state's other limited offering exemptions.ⁿ⁷⁰ A few states permit the limited offering exemption only if the sale is made to incorporators.ⁿ⁷¹

Persons Included and Excluded from the Count of Offerees or Purchasers. Regardless of whether a limited offering exemption is based on the number of offers, sales, or security holders, there are some general rules governing who is counted as an offeree or purchaser under the exemption. The Uniform Securities Act excludes financial and institutional investors from the count of offerees,ⁿ⁷² and a similar exclusion has been adopted in most states whether or not the balance of the Uniform Securities Act exemption has been followed.ⁿ⁷³ Some states go further than the Uniform Securities Act exclusion and also except from the count persons who acquire securities that are exempt from registration or persons who acquire registered securities.ⁿ⁷⁴

The Uniform Securities Act exemption applies to offers made in the state whether or not the offeror or any of the offerees are then present in the state. This "in the state" provision is intended to cover not only the situation where both offeror and offeree are in the state but also when the offeror is in one state and the offeree in another.ⁿ⁷⁵ In a case litigating this point under the Uniform Securities Act exemption, it was held that offers made by a domestic corporation from the state of organization or incorporation to residents of another state located in the other state would not be counted as offers for exemption purposes in the state where the offeror is organized.ⁿ⁷⁶ However, a different result would probably be reached if the offeree were domiciled in the same state as the offeror and received the offer while temporarily out of state.ⁿ⁷⁷ Similarly, if the offeror were domiciled in State X and the offeree in State Y, but temporarily in State Z when he received the offer, the offer would probably count for State Y's exemption.ⁿ⁷⁸ Whether State Z would also use the offer as part of its count is uncertain.

Many states include the Uniform Securities Act requirement that offers be made in the state.ⁿ⁷⁹ Similarly, states measuring sales within a time period for their limited offering exemption refer to sales to persons or purchasers in the state.ⁿ⁸⁰ Several states that count the number of sales made in a twelve-month period require that the sales occur in the state whether or not any of the purchasers are then present in the state at the time of sale.ⁿ⁸¹

Most states that have exemptions based on the final number of security holders are silent on whether all security holders are counted or only security holders present in the state. Husbands and wives are generally counted as one person,ⁿ⁸² regardless of whether the count is of offerees, purchasers, or security holders. Corporations and other organizational entities are also counted as one person unless the purpose of organizing was to acquire the securities of the issuer claiming the exemption.ⁿ⁸³ In California, if the purchaser is a corporation that has already claimed the exemption for a limited number of security holders in issuing its own securities, each security holder of the purchasing corporation is separately counted.ⁿ⁸⁴

Virginia and Wisconsin exclude from the count of security holders the security holders of any other corporation, partnership, unincorporated association or trust unless that entity was organized to raise capital for the issuer.ⁿ⁸⁵

The Securities. It is unusual for states to prescribe the type of securities that may be the subject of a limited offering. Even when there is a requirement that the offering consist of securities issued by a particular entity, a corporation, for example, there is usually no restriction on the type of securities to be offered. A close corporation, for instance, would typically offer stock pursuant to the limited offering exemption. However, the offering of other securities, such as general or limited partnership interests, may also be permitted.ⁿ⁸⁶ Nevertheless, a few states impose restrictions on the securities subject to the exemption. Limitations necessarily exist on the kind of securities involved when the nature of the issuer is specified. And California applies one of its exemptions strictly to offers or sales of voting common stock.ⁿ⁸⁷

Restrictions on securities that may be part of a limited offering are usually exceptions to the general limited offering exemption. For example, securities consisting of oil, gas, or mining interests cannot be sold pursuant to the limited offering exemption in Iowa.ⁿ⁸⁸ A few states, however, permit the sale of these interests under a limited offering exemption, or a specific subject matter exemption, if certain requirements are met.ⁿ⁸⁹

Interests in foreign partnerships cannot be offered or sold pursuant to the limited offering exemption in Iowa.ⁿ⁹⁰

Investment Intent. Almost every state that has a limited offering exemption requires that the purchaser's purpose in buying the securities be for investment and not for resale.ⁿ⁹¹ There are a number of ways to show investment intent. Under the Uniform Securities Act, for example, the only requirement for showing that the buyer has no present intention of reselling the securities is a showing that the seller reasonably believes the buyer is purchasing for investment,ⁿ⁹² although it is suggested that the seller obtain an investment letter from the buyer.ⁿ⁹³ This investment letter serves as protection for the seller's claim of exemption. The letter, however, is not meant to protect the buyer, and the seller's failure to obtain the letter is not sufficient grounds for the buyer to void the sale.ⁿ⁹⁴ Even if the seller obtains an investment letter, however, the purchaser is still not prevented from reconsidering and reselling the securities, on the claim that his or her intent at the time of purchase was for investment.ⁿ⁹⁵ Of course, the shorter the time period between purchase and resale, the harder for the seller to prove investment intent.ⁿ⁹⁶

Under the Uniform Securities Act provision, if the buyer is a "sophisticated investor," the investment intent requirement is not applicable.ⁿ⁹⁷ At the time the Uniform Securities Act was originally drafted, the exception for sophisticated investors from the investment intent requirement was omitted. The drafters stated that this omission was an inadvertence and recommended that the exception be inserted at the time technical amendments were added.ⁿ⁹⁸ The "technical amendment" excepting sophisticated investors from the investment intent requirement was made, and subsequently, many states, including non-Uniform Securities Act states, adopted the exception.ⁿ⁹⁹

While many states require, for a showing of investment intent, that the seller have no more than a reasonable belief in the buyer's investment purpose, some states have specific requirements in their statutes and regulations that expressly provide how the seller can protect itself regarding a buyer's investment purpose. These provisions include investment letters, restrictive transfer legends placed on the securities, and time restrictions imposed on the period for which the securities must be held before resale.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

Payment of Commissions. The payment of commissions or other remuneration in connection with the solicitation of buyers in a limited offering is often prohibited,ⁿ¹⁰¹ unless administrative permission is obtained.ⁿ¹⁰² The prohibition of the payment of commissions is not intended to bar directors, officers, and employees who are paid for other services from selling securities, but it is intended to preclude the payment of additional compensation for any transactions initiated by directors, officers, or employees.ⁿ¹⁰³ The prohibition encompasses the payment "directly or indirectly" of any commissions.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

Under the Uniform Securities Act, the payment of commissions is prohibited unless the commissions are paid for solicitation of financial and institutional investors.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ Similarly, a number of states that otherwise disallow the payment of commissions without administrative approval do permit the payment of remuneration for the solicitation of financial and investors.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

A few states allow commissions to be paid to registered broker-dealers for the solicitation of buyers in a limited offering. Alaska, Florida, and Nebraska place no further restrictions on the commissions than can be paid registered broker-dealers,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ while Michigan requires that the broker-dealer not be affiliated with the issuer or the issuer's affiliates.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ Minnesota, New Hampshire and South Dakota require that the commission paid be "reasonable and customary."ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Montana permits a commission to be paid to a registered broker-dealer only if the securities are registered under the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ¹¹⁰ Pennsylvania prohibits the payment of commissions only to a promoter.ⁿ¹¹¹ Illinois and Ohio allow the payment of commissions that do not exceed a statutory percentage of the amount of the offering.ⁿ¹¹²

Advertising. Many states prohibit advertising and/or general solicitation of prospective purchasers in connection with an exempt limited offering.ⁿ¹¹³ However, many state limited offering exemptions do not define either the term "advertising" or the term "general solicitation" and leave such definitions to decisional law.ⁿ¹¹⁴ In determining what constitutes "public solicitation or advertisements," the courts of one state have developed a test that requires "public distribution" of a communication in order for it to be considered an "advertisement;"ⁿ¹¹⁵ and, while distribution of a four-page "confidential memorandum" to no more than twenty selected acquaintances has been held not to constitute an "advertisement,"ⁿ¹¹⁶ a brochure, to aid in the selling of the securities, exhibited to two hundred and fifty "prospects" not previously known to the salesman was held to constitute an "advertisement."ⁿ¹¹⁷ Presently, it is not possible to describe any useful or concise definition of advertising or general solicitation which would apply in all jurisdictions.

Filings. The availability of the limited offering exemption is often contingent upon a filing requirement. Many jurisdictions require that a document be filed with the securities commissioner whenever securities are to be sold pursuant to the limited offering exemption.ⁿ¹¹⁸ For example, Massachusetts requires a filing only when commissions are paid,ⁿ¹¹⁹ Missouri when there is an increase in the number of permitted transactions or a waiver of other statutory conditions,ⁿ¹²⁰ Mississippi when there are ten or more purchasers,ⁿ¹²¹ and Ohio when an exemption is claimed under Securities Act Section 4(2) or any rule promulgated thereunder.ⁿ¹²² Delaware and Maryland look to the amount of the offering and do not require a filing if the aggregate price of the securities offered does not exceed $50,000.ⁿ¹²³

When filings are required, specific forms are sometimes prescribed or the contents of the filing or notice are set forth in the state's statutory exemption or regulationⁿ¹²⁴ and fees may be required to accompany the filing. NSMIA specifically preserves the rights of states to require notice filings and to collect fees in Rule 506 transactions.

Even though a state does not have a formal filing requirement, or does not limit the filing requirement to certain conditions, it does not necessarily mean that the exemption is automatically available. State administrative opinion on the eligibility of the offering for exemption should be considered before effecting transactions under the exemption.ⁿ¹²⁵

[5] The Uniform Act Model The limited offering exemption provided in Section 402(b)(9) of the Uniform Securities Act covers:

[a]ny transaction pursuant to an offer directed by the offeror to not more than ten persons [other than financial or institutional investors] in this state during any period of twelve consecutive months, whether or not the offeror or any of the offerees is then present in this state, if (A) the seller reasonably believes that all the buyers in this state [other than financial or institutional investors] are purchasing for investment, and (B) no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting any prospective buyer in this state [other than financial or institutional investors]; but the [Administrator] may by rule or order as to any security or transaction or any type of security or transaction, withdraw or further condition this exemption, increase or decrease the number of offerees permitted, or waive the conditions in Clauses (A) and (B) with or without the substitution of a limitation on remuneration.ⁿ¹²⁶

The 2002 Uniform Act retains the basic limited offering exemption, modifying the original Uniform Act provision to provide for a 25 rather than 10 purchaser limit, and without restriction on the number of offerees except to prohibit any general solicitation or advertising.ⁿ¹²⁷

Uniform Act and non-Uniform Act states alike have almost universally adopted a limited offering exemption based on the Uniform Act model, providing for at least a 10 purchaser limitation, although sometimes modifying the provision further to require a notice filing.ⁿ¹²⁸ The 2002 Uniform Act expansion also reflects the fact that many states have significantly increased the maximum number of purchasers, in some cases to as many as 35 purchasers,ⁿ¹²⁹ although particular conditions or restrictions may vary from the Uniform Act model. The most common limited or "non-public" offering exemption based upon the Uniform Act model(s) permits up to 25 purchasers during any 12 consecutive months.ⁿ¹³⁰ As seen above, section 402(b)(9) of the Uniform Securities Act is complemented by Section 402(b)(8) of the Act, which recognizes that the protection offered by securities registration is unnecessary for sales to sophisticated institutional investors.

The buyer's intent to redistribute the purchased securities is a factor that must be considered in determining the availability of limited offering exemption based on the Uniform Act model. The seller must reasonably believe that the buyer is purchasing for investment and not resale.ⁿ¹³¹ Moreover, the selling effort permitted by the exemption is limited since the exemption is not available if any commission or other remuneration is paid for soliciting prospective buyers.ⁿ¹³²

Substantial flexibility is provided in the Uniform Securities Act provision by allowing the state administrator, by rule or order, regarding any security, any transaction, any type of security, or any type of transaction to:

- (1) withdraw or further condition the limited offering exemption,
- (2) increase or decrease the number of permitted offerees, or
- (3) waive any of the conditions regarding investment intent or payment of commissions or other remuneration.ⁿ¹³³

Additionally, the availability of the exemption is always subject to the authority of the administrator to suspend or revoke it in particular circumstances through administrative proceedings, or summarily for a limited period of time pending administrative proceedings.

Note that the Uniform Securities Act does not restrict the limited offering exemption to particular offerors. On its face the exemption may be used by issuers and non-issuers alike. Nevertheless, since non-issuers may take advantage of the isolated transaction exemption,ⁿ¹³⁴ the limited offering exemption is usually thought of as an issuer's exemption,ⁿ¹³⁵ and the 2002 Uniform Act makes specific reference to sales or offers to sell securities "of an issuer." Most states make this clear as well, without regard to what Uniform Act model is involved.ⁿ¹³⁶

[6] Other Limited Offerings

[a] "Local" Issuer Limited Offerings Several states, either by statute or rule, have crafted issuer exemptions for the offer and sale of securities by any corporation or limited liability company, or any offer and sale of limited partnership interests by an issuer organized or to be organized under the law of that state, and which satisfies certain other conditions. New Mexicoⁿ¹³⁷ is typical of these states in providing an exemption when the total offering does not exceed $1.5 million and the following conditions are satisfied:

- (1) The issuer has its principal office and a majority of its full time employees in the state or, if the issuer is a limited partnership or limited liability company, its principal place of business and 80% of its assets are located in the state;
- (2) No commission or other remuneration is paid to any person other than a licensed broker-dealer or sales representative;
- (3) An offering document is delivered to each purchaser or prospective purchaser prior to a sale; and
- (4) The issuer claiming the exemption makes a filing with the administrator, pays a filing fee and complies with such other reporting or information requirements that the administrator may impose.

Variations among states having a local issuer exemption include a limitation on the number of beneficial holders of securities of the issuer before and after the offering, and limits on the number of purchasers. In Maryland, for example, a qualifying local issuer must have 50 or fewer beneficial owners of its securities immediately before and immediately after the offering, and no more than 10 purchasers are permitted during any 12 month period.ⁿ¹³⁸ Missouri requires the use of an offering document meeting the form and content requirements of Form U-7, and imposes advertising restrictions.ⁿ¹³⁹ In some instances there is no requirement that sales of the securities be made solely to residents of the state, but in others that restriction is included.ⁿ¹⁴⁰ Pennsylvania makes the exemption available to an issuer that is organized under Pennsylvania law or which has its principal place of business in the state, when the issuer has not sold securities in or outside the state to more than 10 persons, and has not made offers to sell to more than 90 persons in the state in a period of 12 consecutive months.ⁿ¹⁴¹ Tennessee places no limitation on the number of purchasers, but limits the amount of any offering by the Tennessee issuer to $250,000 to non-institutional purchasers during any 12 month period.ⁿ¹⁴² In addition to other requirements Vermont requires that at least 40% of the proceeds of the offering must be used by the issuer for operations in the state.ⁿ¹⁴³ Many of the states with local issuer exemptions also impose "bad boy" disqualifications on its availability.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ But subject to this limitation some local issuer exemptions are extremely broad. The Texas Intrastate Limited Offering Exemption, for example, requires only that all offers and sales must be made and entirely completed in the state, although there can be no public solicitation or advertising, and there may be no more than 35 new security holders of the issuer who are not "well informed and sophisticated investors" or accredited investors.ⁿ¹⁴⁵

Some state exemptions which are functionally local issuer exemptions are expressly aimed at "small business" issuers.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ The offering size limits typically placed on these exempt offerings suggest that their greatest utility is in fact in small business capital formation. Further consideration of these specific small business offering exemptions is undertaken in § 8.05[1][c] below.

[b] Isolated or De Minimis Issuer Offering Exemptions Blue sky laws contain a variety of issuer exemptions premised on very small offerings that are isolated or otherwise marked by de minimis characteristics that eliminate concern for investor protection beyond basic antifraud provisions. There is no model or common approach to such exemptions, and all states do not have one. Washington, however, offers an example of one approach in those states that do have a provision. Under the Washington blue sky law up to three sales of an outstanding by or on behalf of an issuer inside or outside the state during the prior 24 month period are exempt. There are no other restrictions or limitations on the exemption.ⁿ¹⁴⁷ Pennsylvania exempts sales made to no more than two persons in the state during a period of 12 months, but imposes a number of other conditions including a limit on the number of offers and control over the manner of offering.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ Several states simply permit sales by an issuer to no more than 10 purchasers other than financial and institutional investors during a 12 month period.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ These provisions are in most cases based directly on section 402(b)(9) of the original Uniform Securities Act discussed above. In Wisconsin, any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer and to no more than 10 other persons in the state during a 12 month period is exempt.ⁿ¹⁵⁰ In many cases the isolated or de minimis offering exemptions are self-executing, although notice filing or other filing requirements are prescribed in some states.

A common approach to de minimis offering exemptions is to provide the exemption for total offerings up to $500,000, including sales both within and outside the state, within a particular period of time. Although there is often no limitation on the number of purchasers,ⁿ¹⁵¹ other conditions may be imposed. In Alabama, for example, availability of the exemption is conditioned on no person other than an accredited investor purchasing more than $15,000 of the securities offered. Additionally, a disclosure document containing prescribed information must be used.ⁿ¹⁵² The State Guides contained in Volumes 3 and 4 describe particular variants and aspects of these offering exemptions in each state.

Some states have taken the further step to provide a specific issuer exemption for offers and sales of securities that a part of organizational or pre-incorporation activities. North Dakota, for example, allows for the issuance of common stock, limited liability company membership interests or limited partnership interests to as many as 10 subscribers when the offer and sale of the securities is for the sole purpose of organization of the entity in the state.ⁿ¹⁵³ In Arizona the issuance of securities by a corporation to 10 or less persons who are the original incorporators is exempt, if the securities are not acquired for the purposes of resale, and there is no direct or indirect resale to a third party within 24 months in the absence of a bona fide change in financial circumstances.ⁿ¹⁵⁴ In Virginia the issuance of not more than three shares of common stock to one or more incorporators of a corporation is exempt.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ In most instances one form or another of a de minimis or limited offering exemption would apply to the issuance of securities to incorporators or organizing members of a business organization. In the states with particular provisions, however, there is added flexibility and a level of assurance that is helpful to small business organization and capital formation.

[c] California Coordinate Limited Offering Exemption: SEC Rule 1001 SEC Rule 1001 under the federal Securities Act of 1933 provides a federal exemption for transactions which are exempt from qualification in California under section 25102(n) of the California Corporations Code. This exemption is adopted under the statutory authority of section 3(b) of the 1933 Act, and is applicable only in coordination with the California limited offering exemption.

The California exemption's chief differences from the Regulation D framework are that it permits distribution of a summary term sheet in the proposed offering, and it requires securities to be sold only to "qualified purchasers". The exemption permits offers and sales of up to $5 million, which is the federal section 3(b) statutory limit. This limit is not calculated on an annual basis, but rather on a case-by-case basis. Only issuers that are organized in California, or those organized outside, but which meet certain requirements, can use the exemption. The exemption is available when more than 50% of property, payroll and sales can be attributed to California and more than 50% of the issuer's outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having California addresses. The exemption may not be used for rollup transactions, blind pool offerings or investment companies subject to the Investment Company Act of 1940.

Sales may be made only to the following qualified purchasers who purchase for investment:

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.06

1. Designated professional or institutional purchasers or persons affiliated with the issuer. (This includes officers and directors, general partners, trustees, entities comprised of accredited investors, banks, savings and loans, non-issuer pension or profit-sharing trusts, non-profit organizations with more than $5 million in assets, and individuals with a net worth of $1 million or annual income of more than $200,000.);
2. Certain relatives residing with qualified purchasers;
3. Promoters;
4. Any person purchasing more than $150,000 of securities in the offering, provided each alone, or together with the assistance of an adviser, has the capacity to protect his own interest; each has the ability to bear the economic risk of the investment; or the investment does not exceed 10 percent of each person's net worth of over $1 million or annual income exceeding $200,000;
5. Entities whose equity owners are limited to officers, directors and any affiliate of the issuer;
6. Reporting companies under the 1934 Act if the transaction involves the acquisition of all an issuer's capital stock for investment;
7. A natural person whose net worth exceeds $500,000, or a natural person whose net worth exceeds $250,000, if such purchaser's annual income exceeds $100,000--provided, that in either case, (1) the transaction involves only one class of voting stock (or preferred stock establishing the same voting rights), (2) the amount purchased represents no more than 10% of the purchaser's net worth, and (3) a purchaser is able to protect his or her interests (alone, or together with an adviser). (The adviser must be unaffiliated with the issuer. California interprets this to mean that a qualified investor must have business or financial experience or rely on a professional adviser.);
8. Pension and profit-sharing trusts, 401(k) plans and IRAs of individual qualified purchasers.

A disclosure document complying with Regulation D information requirements (Rule 502) must be provided to natural persons five days prior to sale or a commitment to purchase. Oral or written offers must be limited to qualified purchasers. However, general announcements of a proposed offering may be widely published and circulated so long as the announcement is limited to: the issuer's identity; the full title of the securities offered; the suitability standards for prospective investors; a statement that no money is being sought or will be accepted and that an indication of interest involves no commitment to purchase; and the name, address, and telephone number of a person who can provide further information. At its option, an issuer may also briefly describe its business, its geographical location and the offering price method of determination.

A notice of the offering must be provided to the California Corporations Commissioner at the time of the initial offer, or with the publication of a general announcement of the proposed offering, together with a filing fee. An additional filing is required within ten business days after the close or abandonment of the offering, and in no case later than 210 days after the filing of the initial notice. No SEC filing is required.

Securities acquired in a Rule 1001 transaction are "restricted securities" for purposes of Rule 144, and may be resold only in a registered offering or if an exemption is available.

[7] Integration of Limited Offerings As seen above, many limited offering exemption alternatives include specific temporal limitations, allowing for a maximum range of transactions that is defined in terms of 12 or 24 month time periods. Limited offering exemptions are in all cases intended to cover transactions that are part of a single issue.

Indeed in several instances particular blue sky law exemptions expressly make the point. There is, however, no definition of a single issue or single offering. The "single issue" concept simply means that a distribution of securities that would otherwise be subject to registration or qualification requirements may not be carried out by means of a series of exempt transactions. A series of transactions that are in fact part of a single issue or plan of financing may be integrated, such that no valid exemption applies to any of the separate transactions undertaken to carry it out. By imposing specific consecutive month time limitations on transactions that are carried out in reliance on a particular exemption blue sky law provisions or rules establish certainty as to the scope of integration. Integration is a broader concept, however, and does not always involve a simple timing determination for issuers that engage in multiple transactions. In the context of the federal securities laws the SEC has identified particular factors to be taken into consideration in determining whether offers and sales should be integrated for purposes of exemptions. Those factors are:

- (1) Whether the sales are part of a single plan of financing;
- (2) Whether the sales involve issuance of the same class of securities;
- (3) Whether the sales have been made at or about the same time;
- (4) Whether the same type of consideration is received; and
- (5) Whether the sales are made for the same general purpose.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

Integration impacts limitations contained in limited offering exemptions both as to the size of a permitted offering and the maximum number of purchasers. Offerings made in reliance on separate, independent transaction exemptions may be integrated into a single transaction without regard to the independent availability of separate exemptions for the transactions as undertaken. Integration operates prospectively and retrospectively. Transactions carried out both before and after an offering or transaction carried out in reliance on a limited offering exemption may be integrated with that limited offering if any of the above factors are present. The limited offering exemptions in blue sky laws that deal specifically with time limitations do so only with respect to utilization of the particular exemption involved. The allowable ranges in a particular exemption do not protect an issuer against integration of transactions carried out in reliance on another exemption. It is essential, therefore, that the integration factors be carefully considered in connection with any intended series of transactions, or what turns out to be a series of transactions carried out over a relatively short period of time with the same capital formation objective.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9). The Uniform Act limited offering exemption covers:

[a]ny transaction pursuant to an offer directed by the offeror to not more than ten persons (other than those designated in paragraph (8)) in this state during any period of twelve consecutive months, whether or not the offeror or any of the offerees is then present in this state, if (A) the seller reasonably believes that all the buyers in this state (other than those designated in paragraph (8)) are purchasing for investment, and (B) no commission or other remuneration is paid or given directly or indirectly for soliciting any prospective buyer in this state (other than those designated in paragraph (8)); but the Administrator may by rule or order, as to any security or transactions or any type of security or transactions, withdraw or further condition this exemption, or increase or decrease the number of offerees permitted, or waive the conditions in Clauses (A) or (B) with or without the substitution of a limitation on remuneration.

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(14).

(n3)Footnote 3. SCOR is actually the product itself of a prior initiative of a committee of the American Bar Association that produced the "Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOR)" as a specific response to coordinate with Rule 504 under Regulation D. NASAA formalized adoption of the ULOR and SCOR procedures with its Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations, on April 28, 1996.

(n4)Footnote 4. Pub. L. No. 96-477, 94 Stat. 2275 (codified in scattered sections of 15 U.S.C.).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 77s(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6389 (Mar. 8, 1982).

(n7)Footnote 7. Securities Act Rules 146, 240, and 242 were rescinded effective June 30, 1982.

(n8)Footnote 8. Preliminary Note 2, Regulation D.

(n9)Footnote 9. Integration and the factors that determine its application to limited offerings generally are discussed in § 8.06[6], infra.

(n10)Footnote 10. The SEC has continued the obligation to file under Rule 503 but no longer makes this a condition of the availability of a Regulation D exemption. Instead, the failure to timely file a Form D serves as the basis for disqualifying the issuer from future use of Regulation D. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6825, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,404 (1989).

(n11)Footnote 11. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6389 (1982). Securities Act Rule 240 was rescinded effective June 30, 1982.

(n12)Footnote 12. Securities Act § 3(b) gives the Commission the authority to exempt from registration a securities offering with an aggregate offering price not exceeding $5 million.

(n13)Footnote 13. Securities Act § 5(a) prohibits the sale of securities unless a registration statement is in effect.

(n14)Footnote 14. Rule 242 was rescinded effective June 30, 1982. Sec. Act Rel. No. 6389 (1982).

(n15)Footnote 15. For the definition of "accredited investor," see the discussion of Rule 501 supra.

(n16)Footnote 16. In the interest of furthering compatibility with the federal exemptions, on April 22, 1988 NASAA adopted for the ULOE the SEC amendments to Regulation D contained in Securities Act Rels. Nos. 6437, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,407 (1982); 6663, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,032 (1986); and 6758, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 84,221 (1988). NASAA further directed its Small Business Capital Formation Committee to formulate ULOE changes conforming with the 1989 SEC amendments to Regulation D, see NASAA Reports (CCH) P 7024 at 7027 (Oct. 12, 1988), and states have responded by incorporating the changes into their respective versions of the ULOE, see, e.g., Minnesota: Minn. R. 2875.0145; New Mexico: 12 N.M. Admin. Code § 11.4.7.2.11; Texas: 7 Tex. Admin. Code § 109.13(k).

(n17)Footnote 17. In Massachusetts, unlike the recommended ULOE provision, officers, directors and general partners are not within the definition of accredited investors for the state's ULOE, and so must be counted as nonaccredited investors. Interp. Rel., Mass. Securities Quarterly, Spring 1987. Cf. Statement of Policy, Mass. Sec. Div. (6-1-97) (coordinating with NSMIA).

(n18)Footnote 18. 710 Ind. Admin. Code §1-13-6.

(n19)Footnote 19. Rule 506(b)(ii), 17 C.F.R. §230.506(b)(2)(ii) ("Nature of Purchasers").

(n20)Footnote 20. Iowa allows fifteen days following the first sale in the state for filing the notice. Regulation 191-50.16(2)c.(1). A filing fee of $100 is charged. Id.

Texas also allows fifteen days after first sale in the state for filing the notice. 7 Tex. Admin. Code § 109.13(k)(5)(A). The filing fee is 1.10 of 1% of the aggregate amount of securities being offered, but not more than $500. Id. § 109.13(k)(5)(D).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Sec. Act Rel. No. 6455 (1983), Question and Answer No. 82.

(n22)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Conn. Agencies Regs. § 36b-31-21b-9a.

Louisiana: La. Admin. Code tit. 64, § 705.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(Q).

(n24)Footnote 24.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(19).

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(n).

(n25)Footnote 25. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 5-7, 15-16 (1933).

(n26)Footnote 26. 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n27)Footnote 27. 346 U.S. at 127 .

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Garfield v. Strain, 320 F.2d 116 (10th Cir. 1963) ; Woodward v. Wright, 266 F.2d 108 (10th Cir. 1959) .

(n29)Footnote 29. 9267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir. 1959) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896 (1959) .

(n30)Footnote 30. SEC v. Continental Tobacco Co., 463 F.2d 137 (5th Cir. 1972) .

(n31)Footnote 31. H.R. Rep. No. 85, 73d Cong., 1st Sess. 5-7, 15-16 (1933).

(n32)Footnote 32. 39 Fed. Reg. 15,261 . Rule 146 was rescinded in 1982 and replaced by Securities Act Rule 506.

(n33)Footnote 33. See, e.g., Schneider, The Statutory Law of Private Placements, 14 Rev. Sec. Reg. 869, 873 (Aug. 26, 1981).

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Swenson v. Engelstad, 626 F.2d 421 (5th Cir. 1980) ; SEC v. Asset Management Corp., Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) P 97,278, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8080 (S.D. Ind. 1979) .

(n35)Footnote 35. Rule 506(b)(2)(ii), 17 C.F.R. § 230.506(b)(2)(ii).

(n36)Footnote 36. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n37)Footnote 37. Rule 146(c), (d).

(n38)Footnote 38. Rule 502(b)(1), 17 C.F.R. § 230.502(b)(1). Rule 502 is discussed in § 8.06[2][a] supra.

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Doran v. Petroleum Management Corp., 545 F.2d 893 (5th Cir. 1977) ; Gilligan, Will & Co. v. SEC, 267 F.2d 461 (2d Cir.) , cert. denied, 361 U.S. 896, 80 S. Ct. 200, 4 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1959) .

(n40)Footnote 40. See SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n41)Footnote 41. 374 F. Supp. 1104 (D. Mass. 1974) .

(n42)Footnote 42. 546 F.2d 1044 (2d Cir. 1976) .

(n43)Footnote 43.

Nebraska: Cf. Neb. Rev. Stat. § 8-1111(16)(b) (amendment permitting payment of commissions in nonpublic offerings to registered agents of registered broker-dealers).

(n44)Footnote 44. Section 4(2) and Statutory Law, 31 Bus. Law. 483, 497 (1975).

(n45)Footnote 45. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n46)Footnote 46. See, e.g., SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) ; Sec. Act Rel. No. 5487 (1974).

(n47)Footnote 47. Sec. Act Rel. No. 285 (1935).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Institutional Private Placements Under the Section 4(2) Exemption of the Securities Act of 1933, 31 Bus. Law. 515 (1975).

(n49)Footnote 49. See, e.g., Swenson v. Engelstad, 626 F.2d 421 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n50)Footnote 50. 17 C.F.R. § 230.144. For discussion of Securities Act Rule 144, see Federal Securities Act of 1933, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, § 6.05 (Matthew Bender).

(n51)Footnote 51. 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(11). For discussion of Securities Act Section 2(a)(11), see Federal Securities Act of 1933, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, §§ 4.02[2], 6.02 (Matthew Bender).

(n52)Footnote 52. See, e.g., Livens v. William D. Witter, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 1104, 1110-11 (D. Mass. 1974) .

(n53)Footnote 53. See, e.g., SEC v. Management Dynamics Ltd., 515 F.2d 801 (2d Cir. 1975) ; Sec. Act Rel. No. 5121 (1970).

(n54)Footnote 54. Statutory time period of twelve consecutive months:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A), (B). The first exemption applies to sales by an issuer to no more than ten persons whether or not the seller or buyer is present in the state. The second exemption applies to sales by an issuer to no more than twenty-five persons provided the sales are made solely in the state.

Florida: Fla. Stat. § 517.061(11). Thirty-five purchasers. Any purchaser who invests $100,000 or more is excluded from the count if he is provided with or has access to full disclosure of all material information in connection with the offering.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G). Thirty-five purchasers. Alternatively, the exemption is also available if the aggregate sales price of all sales does not exceed $1,000,000. Sales may be to non-residents or residents alike.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(9).

The number of permitted purchasers varies depending on the circumstances. The number of sales ordinarily permitted to purchasers in the state is fifteen. Only ten sales, however, can be made to promoters, individuals actively (or expected to be actively) engaged in the management of the issuer, those acting in a professional capacity to the issuer, or those directly related by blood or marriage to the promoter or those engaged in the management of the issuer. Likewise, ten sales pursuant to offers to not more than fifteen persons may be made by a person other than the issuer if the offering is not part of a distribution of the issuer's securities. Sales to thirty-five purchasers are permitted under specific conditions: the filing of an application and offering circular and the payment of a filing fee; the delivery of the offering circular to each purchaser; and the administrator's order and declaration that the exemption is effective.

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(9). Ten purchasers in the state.

No time period indicated:

California: Cal. Code Ann. § 25102(f). Thirty-five purchasers.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(15). Ten purchasers.

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(10). Thirty-five purchasers, including those outside the state, or twenty purchasers in the state.

(n55)Footnote 55.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(C)(1).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-4(E).

(n56)Footnote 56. See State v. Garrette, 699 S.W.2d 468 (Mo. App. 1985) (upholding conviction of manager for associated companies selling unregistered investment contracts where the companies were allegedly structured to avoid the sales limitation of the limited offering exemption).

(n57)Footnote 57. See § 8.06[3][c] supra for discussion of investment intent generally.

(n58)Footnote 58.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 11-51-308(1)(j). Twenty offers are permitted.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(.9.a). Note that North Dakota has two limited offering exemptions, this provision (limited offeree exemption--35 offers permitted) and N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(.9.b) (limited sales exemption).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(e). Fifty offers are permitted.

Ninety offers are allowed under Pennsylvania's "small issuer exemption." See 64 Pa. Code § 203.187.

(n59)Footnote 59.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(14).

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(l).

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(10).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(A).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(12)(a)(C).

(n60)Footnote 60.

Iowa: Iowa Code Ann. § 502.203(9)(e).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(9).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06.9.b(4).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d).

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws Ann. §§ 47-31A-402(b)(9).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-5(I), (Q).

(n61)Footnote 61.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(A)(10). Ten security holders who must be incorporators.

California: Cal. Code Ann. § 25102(f), (h). Thirty-five security holders.

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(9). Twenty-five security holders.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(K). Twenty-five security holders.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(O). Ten security holders.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(7), (10). The first exemption permits thirty-five security holders. The second exemption applies to the issuance of not more than three shares of common stock to one or more of the incorporators of a corporation.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(10). Fifteen security holders.

(n62)Footnote 62. Draftmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9):

It seems quite clear that some exemption along these lines is essential in any well-ordered blue sky law, if for no other reason than to permit the incorporated corner grocery store or gasoline station to raise additional capital from a few relatives and friends without going through registration or--as is more likely today--violating the statute in complete oblivion of the possibility that anything like a blue sky law might be applicable. This situation is one of the sources of the innocently assumed contingent civil liabilities which is one of the purposes of this Act to remove or minimize.

(n63)Footnote 63. See, e.g.:

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 11-51-308(1)(j).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(i).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

In a Massachusetts private placement offering where the minimum number of shares are not sold prior to the firm closing date, the Securities Division usually will permit a reoffering subject to specified conditions including return of the escrowed funds. Mass. Sec. Bull. No. 2, January 1988, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 31,622.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code Ann. § 10-04-06(9).

(n64)Footnote 64.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f), (h).

The first exemption does not specify that it is for the use of issuers, but a release commenting on the exemption states that it is available only to issuers. See Release No. 67-C, Commissioner of Corporations, issued October 20, 1981, 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 12,558. The second exemption is available only to corporations.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 36b-21(b)(14).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-602(9).

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(9), (10).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(O).

(n65)Footnote 65. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(A)(10).

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f), (h).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(10).

(n66)Footnote 66.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-9(13).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(4).

See ch. 9 infra for a discussion of "affiliates".

(n67)Footnote 67.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G).

See ch. 9 infra for a discussion of "control persons".

(n68)Footnote 68. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n69)Footnote 69.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f)(2).

Purchasers must either have a preexisting personal or business relationship with the offeror or by reason of their business or financial experience could be reasonably assumed to have the capacity to protect their own interests.

(n70)Footnote 70.

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.2. The rule applies to Section 25102(e) (the exemption for non public offerings of evidence of indebtedness) and (g) (the exemption for non-public offerings of equipment trust certificates).

(n71)Footnote 71. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(A)(10).

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws § 47-31A-402(b)(10). The exemption allows offerings to original incorporators or subscribers.

(n72)Footnote 72. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

For discussion of the exemption for financial and institutional investors, see § 8.03[6] supra.

(n73)Footnote 73.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.2. The rule applies the exclusion of sophisticated investors from the count of purchasers to the exemptions in § 25102(e) (non-public offerings of evidences of indebtedness), (g) (non-public offerings of equipment trust certificates), and § 25104(a) (transactions by a bona fide owner for his own account in a non-public offering).

Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.13 excludes certain sophisticated investors from the count of purchasers for the purpose of the limited offering exemption claimed under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f)(1) (sales made to not more than 35 persons).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen Stat. Ann. § 78A-17(9).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(9).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(ix).

(n74)Footnote 74. See, e.g.:

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G)(2).

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(10)(A).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-5(I)(c).

(n75)Footnote 75. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act §§ 402(b)(9), 414(a)-(f).

(n76)Footnote 76. In re Information Resources Corp., 126 N.J. Super. 42, 312 A.2d 671 (1973) .

An interpretation of the statutory provision that was at issue in Information Resources Corp. (N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(9)) released by the Securities Bureau on May 20, 1974, states, as amended:

Only offers made to persons in the State of New Jersey need be included in determining the number of offers allowable under section 50(b)(9). Offers made to New Jersey residents no matter where located may be counted in determining the number of offers allowable if such offers were made as part of a scheme to avoid the ten person limit contained in section 50(b)(9).

Offers to "persons in this State" should not be confused with "offers made in this State" or other terms defined in section 51.

(n77)Footnote 77. See Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act §§ 402(b)(9), 414(a)-(f).

(n78)Footnote 78. Id.

(n79)Footnote 79.

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 7309(b)(9).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(9).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(8).

(n80)Footnote 80.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(11).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats. ch. 815, § 5/4(G)(1)(a). The provision requires that all sales be made to "residents of this State".

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(O), (P).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d).

(n81)Footnote 81.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 11-51-308(1)(j).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann., Corps. & Ass'ns § 11-602(9).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(A). The statute provides that the number of sales permitted by the exemption includes sales whether or not the seller as well as the purchaser is then present in the state at the time of sale.

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws Ann. §§ 47-31A-402(b)(9).

(n82)Footnote 82.

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.1(a)(3) (applies to exemptions claimed under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(a)); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.2 (applies to exemptions claimed under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(e), (g)).

Any relative, spouse, or relative of the spouse of the purchaser who shares the same principal residence as the purchaser is excluded from the count of purchasers from exemption claimed under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f)(1) (sales made to not more than 35 persons). Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.13(c)(1).

Florida: Fla. Securities Rule 3E-500.004(1)(a). Any relative, spouse, or relative of the spouse of the purchaser who shares the same principal residence as the purchaser is excluded from the count of purchasers for exemptions claimed under Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(11) (offers or sales made to not more than 35 purchasers).

Massachusetts: Interp. Rel. Mass. Securities Quarterly Spring 1987, 2 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 31,612A. For purposes of the ULOE provision, a joint purchase by a husband and wife living in the same home is counted as only one sale.

(n83)Footnote 83.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f). Any corporation or other organization of which the purchaser and any relative, spouse, or relative of the spouse of the purchaser sharing the same principal residence as the purchaser who collectively are beneficial owners of more than 50 percent of the equity shares (excluding director's qualifying shares) or equity interests is excluded from the count of purchasers for exemptions claimed under Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(f)(1) (sales made to not more than 35 persons). Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.13(c).

Under Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.102.13(d), any person who is a promoter of the issuer is excluded from the count of purchasers for exemptions claimed under § 25102(f)(1).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(O).

(n84)Footnote 84.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(h).

(n85)Footnote 85.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(7)(b).

Wisconsin: Wis. Admin. Code § [SEC] 2.02(5)(a).

(n86)Footnote 86.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(K). The provision exempts the offer or sale of limited partnership interests.

(n87)Footnote 87.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(h).

(n88)Footnote 88.

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(9).

(n89)Footnote 89.

Minnesota: Minn. R.2875.0180 subpar. 3(A). The rule provides that the limited offering exemption is not applicable to the sale of interests in oil or gas for investment or exploration unless the security is sold in compliance with Securities Act Rule 506. For discussion of Rule 506, see § 8.06[2][a] supra.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(T). The exemption applies to limited offerings involving not more than twenty-five sales and includes requirements relating to suitability standards, disclosure documents, advertisements, and registration of agents.

For discussion of subject matter exemptions generally, and oil, gas and mineral interests specifically, see § 8.08[5], infra.

(n90)Footnote 90.

Iowa: Iowa Code Ann. § 502.203(9).

(n91)Footnote 91. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(9).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A), (B).

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 7309(b)(9).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(9).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(9).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(A).

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws Ann. §§ 47-31A-402(b)(9).

(n92)Footnote 92. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n93)Footnote 93. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n94)Footnote 94. James v. Thurn, 265 Md. 501, 290 A.2d 490, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,047 (1972).

However, in states such as Indiana, which require the buyer to submit an investment letter (Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(10)(C)), the exemption is not valid unless the seller obtains the written document. The seller's failure to obtain the letter, under ordinary circumstances, would permit the buyer to rescind the sale. Theye v. Bates, 337 N.E.2d 837, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,262 (Ind. App. 1975).

(n95)Footnote 95. See Official Comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n96)Footnote 96. Id.

(n97)Footnote 97. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9). See § 8.03[6] supra for discussion of the exemption for financial and institutional investors.

(n98)Footnote 98. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n99)Footnote 99. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(9).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A), (B).

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 7309(b)(9).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(9).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(9).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(A).

South Dakota: S.D. Codified Laws Ann. §§ 47-31A-402(b)(9).

(n100)Footnote 100. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(h); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, §§ 260.102.6, 260.141.11.

Delaware: Delaware Sec. Div. Rules Section 502.

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(10)(C).

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9)(A).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d)(i).

See, however, Pa. Sec. Reg. tit. 64, § 204.011, providing for instances of waiver of the 12-month restriction on resale under the state's limited offering exemption.

(n101)Footnote 101. Mofsky, Blue Sky Restrictions on New Business Promotions 22 (1971):

The prohibition against commissions or other remuneration in connection with a limited offering is intended to prevent the dilution of investor's funds. If promoters and investment bankers were permitted to take commissions in effecting private placements of securities, the equity of capital-contributing shareholders would be diminished in direct relation to the size of such commissions.

See, e.g.:

Arizona: Ariz. Corp. Comm'n Regs. § R14-4-102(A)(2).

The provision prohibiting the payment of commissions or other remuneration applies to offerings with an aggregate amount not exceeding $100,000.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(14).

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(l).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(9), (10).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(9).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(10), (11). But see Wis. Admin. Code § [SEC] 2.02(5)(c) where reasonable commissions are permitted to be paid to licensed broker-dealers.

See also Wis. Admin. Code § [SEC] 2.02(9)(c), which provides for the exemption of any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer and to not more than ten other persons in the state less the number of persons in the state with whom the issuer has effected transactions during the previous twelve months, provided no commission or other remuneration other than a standby commission is paid for soliciting any security holder in the state.

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(ix).

(n102)Footnote 102. Uniform Securities Act § 402(b)(9) and those states following the Uniform Securities Act provision empower the administrator to waive the no commission requirement. Several other states grant similar discretion to their administrators. See, e.g.:

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(9)(d).

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(10).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10).

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 4204a(a)(9).

In any event, before securities are sold under conditions not completely in accord with the statute, administrative permission regarding the eligibility for use of the exemption should be sought. The regulations in some states have filing procedures for requesting this permission.

(n103)Footnote 103. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n104)Footnote 104. In Upton v. Trinidad Petroleum Corp., 652 F.2d 424, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,645 (5th Cir. 1981), a corporation that offered interests in an oil well and collected funds from investors in excess of the drilling costs was held to have received prohibited remuneration that barred use of the limited offering exemption.

In Petroleum Resources Development Corp. v. State of Oklahoma, 585 P.2d 346, 3 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 71,467 (Okla. 1978), even though oil and gas well unit sales were made without the payment of commissions, the retention by an issuer of a "supervisory fee" from the money invested constituted an indirect remuneration that precluded the application of the exemption.

In Schultz v. Rector-Phillips-Morse, Inc., 552 S.W.2d 4, 3 CCH Blue Sky L. Rep. P 71,357 (Ark. 1977), the receipt by a corporation of "consulting fees" as part of the purchase price of joint venture investment units in an apartment complex constituted both direct and indirect remuneration and barred qualification for exemption.

In Caldwell v. Trans-Gulf Petroleum Corp., 322 So. 2d 171, 176 (La. Sup. 1975), defendants argued that the statute prohibited commissions paid for solicitation of investors and that since they paid commissions for consummation of sales, the exemption should not be denied. However, the court reasoned, "at a very minimum, the commission paid on a sale is an indirect remuneration for the solicitation of a prospective buyer."

(n105)Footnote 105. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(9).

See § 8.03[6] supra for discussion of the exemption for financial and institutional investors.

(n106)Footnote 106. See, e.g.:

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., ch. 110A, § 402(b)(9).

West Virginia: W. Va. Code Ann. § 32-4-402(b)(9).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(10),(11).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 17-4-114(b)(ix).

The original draft of the Uniform Securities Act exemption did not permit the payment of commissions for soliciting sophisticated investors. The draftsmen recommended that the omission be cured with a "technical amendment." See Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 374 (1958). The amendment was made to the Uniform Securities Act but a number of states with exemptions based on the Uniform Securities Act's exemption did not enact the amendment permitting the commissions. Whether the failure to adopt the amendment was also an inadvertence or a deliberate move not to allow the payment of commissions is not clear.

(n107)Footnote 107.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. Ann. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(B).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(11).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 8-1111(9), (16).

(n108)Footnote 108.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9)(C).

(n109)Footnote 109.

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(a)(2).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h)(2).

Commissions paid for soliciting sophisticated investors are not subject to any limitation.

South Dakota: S.D. Codified L. Ann. § 47-31A-402(b)(9); (13); S.D. Admin. R. 20:08:06:13.

(n110)Footnote 110.

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(8)(b).

(n111)Footnote 111.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d)(iii); Securities Rule § 203.041(g).

(n112)Footnote 112.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G).

All discounts, commissions, or other remuneration may not exceed 20% of the initial offering price.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(O)(1)(e), (P)(3). In the first exemption, all discounts, commissions, and other remuneration may not exceed 10% of the initial offering price. In the second exemption covering oil and gas interests, the total of all commissions, compensation, costs, and expenses may not exceed 25% of the aggregate oil and gas interests.

(n113)Footnote 113. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. Ann. §§ 45.55.900(b)(5)(A), 45.55.900(b)(5)(B).

Arkansas: Securities Rule 504.01(A)(9)(a)(x).

But cf. J&C Investments v. Mid-South Drilling, Inc., 286 Ark. 320, 691 S.W.2d 853 (1985) (giving letters endorsing the offering only to prospective offerees who specifically asked to see them did not contravene the Arkansas prohibition against advertising).

California: Cal. Code Ann. §§ 25102(f)(4), 25102(h)(2).

(n114)Footnote 114.

Arkansas: See, e.g., Securities Rule 504.01(A)(9)(a)(x).

(n115)Footnote 115. Sibley v. Horn Advertising, Inc., 505 S.W.2d 417 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) , cert. denied, 420 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1129, 43 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1975) .

(n116)Footnote 116. Sibley v. Horn Advertising, Inc., 505 S.W.2d 417, 420 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) , cert. denied, 420 U.S. 929, 95 S. Ct. 1129, 43 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1975) .

(n117)Footnote 117. Tumblewood Bowling Corp. v. Matise, 388 S.W.2d 479 (Tex. Ct. App. 1965) .

(n118)Footnote 118. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(c).

Alaska: Alaska Stat. Ann. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A),(B), Securities Rule § 3 AAC 08.910(5).

Arkansas: Ark. Code Ann. § 23-42-504(b).

California: Cal Code Reg. tit. 10, §§ 260.102.8, 260.102.14. The first rule applies to the filing required for the exemption under § 25102(h); the second rule applies to the filing required under § 25102(f).

Under either § 25102(f) or (h), however, the failure to file the required notice of transactions will not affect the availability of the exemption. Within 15 days after demand by the Commissioner, the issuer may file the notice and pay the qualification fee.

Illinois: Ill. Rev. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G).

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(10).

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. 10:210.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9)(C).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(h).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(9).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 8-1111(9), (16).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(I)(h).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(0)(7); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(Q)(4) if the exemption is claimed under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 or any rule promulgated thereunder.

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(B), Securities Rule Sec. 660:10-11-43.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d); 64 Pa. Code § 203.041.

However, an issuer filing SEC Form D with the Securities and Exchange Commission, may file that form and a brief supplementary statement under Pennsylvania's limited offering exemption. 64 Pa. Code § 203.041(a).

(n119)Footnote 119.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. § 402(b)(9).

(n120)Footnote 120.

Missouri: Mo. Code Regs. Ann. tit. 15, § 30-54.210.

(n121)Footnote 121.

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 75-71-203(9).

(n122)Footnote 122.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(Q)(4).

(n123)Footnote 123.

Delaware: Del. Sec. Div. Rules Section 502.

Maryland: Md. Securities Rule .10.

See also Wisconsin Securities Rule 2.02(5)(d)(1), which requires a filing for exemptions claimed under Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(11) regarding interest in limited partnerships, investment contracts, or certificates of interest or participation in an oil, gas, or mining title or lease if the aggregate offering price exceeds $100,000.

(n124)Footnote 124. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Stat. Ann. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A),(B), Securities Rule § 3 AAC08.910(5).

Arkansas: Ark. Code Ann. § 23-42-504.

California: Cal Code Reg. tit. 10, §§ 260.102.8, 260.102.14. The first rule applies to the filing required for the exemption under § 25102(h); the second rule applies to the filing required under § 25102(f).

Under either § 25102(f) or (h), however, the failure to file the required notice of transactions will not affect the availability of the exemption. Within 15 days after demand by the Commissioner, the issuer may file the notice and pay the qualification fee.

Illinois: Ill. Rev. Stats., ch. 815, § 5/4(G).

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 23-2-1-2(b)(10).

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. 10:210.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 451.802(b)(9)(C).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(h).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(I)(h).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(0)(7); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(Q)(4) if the exemption is claimed under Section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 or any rule promulgated thereunder.

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 71, § 401(b)(10)(B), Securities Rule Sec. 660:10-11-43.

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-203(d); 64 Pa. Code § 203.041.

However, an issuer filing SEC Form D with the Securities and Exchange Commission, may file that form and a brief supplementary statement under Pennsylvania's limited offering exemption. 64 Pa. Code § 203.041(a).

(n125)Footnote 125. In states that have formal filing requirements, the exemption can be lost if there is noncompliance with the statutory requirements. See Getter v. R.G. Dickinson & Co., 366 F. Supp. 559, 577 (S.D. Iowa 1973) .

(n126)Footnote 126. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(9).

(n127)Footnote 127. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(14).

(n128)Footnote 128.

Alaska: See, e.g., Alas. Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A), (C).

(n129)Footnote 129.

Florida: See, e.g., Fla Stat. § 517.061 (11);

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(10);

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(9);

Mississippi: Miss. Code § 75-71-203(9),(13);

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. § 49:3-50(b)(12).

(n130)Footnote 130. See, e.g.,

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. L. § 7-11-402(10);

South Carolina: C.L. So. Car. § 35-1-320(9);

Vermont: Ver. Code Ann. § 4204a(9).

(n131)Footnote 131. All the states substantially adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision have included this provision concerning investment intent.

For discussion of "investment intent" generally, see § 8.06[3][e] supra..

(n132)Footnote 132. All the states substantially adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision have included a similar provision concerning the payment of a commission or other remuneration.

(n133)Footnote 133. All the states substantially adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision have included a similar provision concerning the administrator's rulemaking authority with respect to the limited offering exemption.

(n134)Footnote 134. See ch. 9 infra for discussion of the isolated transaction exemption as applicable to non-issuers.

The isolated transaction exemption may also be used by issuers in some states. See § 8.06[6][b] infra.

.

(n135)Footnote 135. For discussion of the characteristics of an offeror in a limited offering exemption, see § 8.03[9][a] infra.

(n136)Footnote 136.

Minnesota: See, e.g., Minn. Stat. § 80A.15(2)(a).

(n137)Footnote 137. N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(J).

(n138)Footnote 138. 04 Md. Div. Sec. Rules.11; see also Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 551.23(10).

(n139)Footnote 139. Mo. Code. State Regs. § 30.54.240.

(n140)Footnote 140.

Nebraska: See, e.g., Bur. Sec. Rules Ch. 18.

(n141)Footnote 141. Pa. Code § 203.187.

South Dakota limits sales to no more than 5 persons in the state during any consecutive 12 month period, see S.D. Con. Laws § 47-31A-402(b)(9)..

(n142)Footnote 142. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(B)(6).

(n143)Footnote 143. Vt. Admin. Order No. 96-4-SE (May 13, 1996).

(n144)Footnote 144.

Virginia: See, e.g., 21 Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-100.

(n145)Footnote 145. Tex. Admin. Code § 109.13(l).

(n146)Footnote 146.

Vermont: See, e.g. Vt. Admin. Order No. 96-4-SE (May 13, 1996).

(n147)Footnote 147. Rev. Code Wash. § 20.21.20(1); Wash. Admin. Code § 460-44A050(1)(d).

South Dakota: See also S.D. Cod. Laws § 47-31A-402(b)(9) (Sales to no more than 5 persons in the state during a 12 month period).

(n148)Footnote 148. Pa. Code § 203.189; see also New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h).

(n149)Footnote 149. See, e.g.

Alaska: Alas. Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(5)(A).

Arizona: Ariz. Admin. Code Sec. R14-4-102. In Arizona, however, the aggregate amount of the offering may not exceed $100,000.00, and there are other qualifying conditions.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 11-51-308(1)(j).

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(14)(B).

Maine: 32 Me. Rev. Stat. § 10502(P).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 80A.15(2)(a).

Mississippi: Miss. Code § 75-71-203(9).

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(8)(a).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. § 49:3-50(b)(9).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(U).

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(O).

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(12)(a)(A).

Puerto Rico: Laws. P.R. Ann. § 882(b)(9).

South Carolina: Con. Laws. S.C. § 35-1-320(9).

West Virginia: W.V. Code § 402(b)(9).

(n150)Footnote 150. Wis. Admin. Code DFI-Sec.2.02(9)(c).

(n151)Footnote 151.

Utah: But see Utah Code Ann. § 61-1-14(2)(q) (including a limitation of 15 non-financial or institutional purchasers).

(n152)Footnote 152. Code Ala. § 8-6-11(a)(14).; see also Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(10)(G)(ii).; Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.410(i); Missouri: Mo. Code State Regs. § 30-54.240.

(n153)Footnote 153. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(16).

(n154)Footnote 154. Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1844 A 10.

South Dakota: See also S.D.Cod. Laws §47-31A-402(b)(10).

(n155)Footnote 155. Va. Code § 13.1-514(10).

(n156)Footnote 156. Securities Act Rel. No. 33-4552, 27 F.R. 11316 (Nov. 6, 1962) .

69 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.07

§ 8.07 Small Business Offerings

State legislatures and securities administrators have made significant strides in the elimination of unnecessary burdens on small business capital formation. Many of the limited offerings discussed in the previous section are products of that commitment. There remain for consideration, however, certain specific issuer exemptions in blue sky laws that are designed for the particular benefit of small business. There are two approaches in evidence among the states. The first is to provide a specific small business issuer exemption that is in many cases specifically designed to coordinate with the federal exemption under Rule 505 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933 to permit offerings up to $5 million. The second, and more common, approach is to establish a special mechanism for small business issuers to comply with registration requirements for offerings up to $1 million that are exempt from federal registration under Rule 504 of Regulation D. This approach is based upon the Uniform Limited Offering Registration (ULOR) procedure, and has produced SCOR--the Small Company Offering Registration--process that is now adopted in most states. SCOR is not an exemption, but rather a lesser form of registration requirement. Because they are considered in more detail in Chapter 10, the ULOR and SCOR are only briefly introduced here along with consideration of small business offering provisions generally.

[1] Small Business Offering Exemptions

[a] Rule 505 Coordinate Exemptions Rule 505 of Regulation D¹ under the federal Securities Act of 1933 provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for offers and sales of securities not exceeding an aggregate offering price of $5 million during a 12 month period, the calculation of which is prescribed in the rule. Only 35 non-accredited purchasers are permitted, and the issuer must not be subject to any "bad boy" disqualification. The application of state registration and qualification requirements to Rule 505 offerings was not preempted by NSMIA, and unless an exemption is available in blue sky laws they remain fully applicable. As discussed at length earlier, however,² most states have, through adoption of the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption or its equivalent, provided a coordinate exemption such that Rule 505 federally exempt offerings will also be exempt at the state level. Other conditions, such as a prohibition on the payment of commissions, finders fees or other remuneration for soliciting prospective investors may be included, and there is generally a notice filing requirement utilizing SEC Form D.³ For the most part, states have adopted the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOEE), which specifically encompasses SEC Rule 505 offerings, and which imposes these conditions. In addition, the ULOEE imposes a suitability requirement for sales to non-accredited investors.⁴

[b] Section 4(2) Coordinate Exemptions In an earlier discussion⁵ statutory exemptions in blue sky laws specifically tailored to encompass transactions exempt from federal registration requirements by section 4(2) of the Securities Act of 1933 were considered. Later the elements of section 4(2) itself as applied through these blue sky exemptions were outlined in the general context of limited offering exemptions.ⁿ⁶ The availability of section 4(2) outside of SEC Rule 506 under Regulation D can be an important consideration for small business issuers. Rule 506 operates as a safe harbor for reliance on the section 4(2) "private offering" exemption, it does not, however, foreclose reliance on the exemption in any circumstances in which for one reason or another a particular element of Rule 506 could not be met but the requirements of the exemption as established through case law and administrative interpretations can nevertheless be satisfied. Some states have retained statutory exemptions to coordinate specifically with offerings exempt under federal section 4(2) and exempt any transaction not involving a "public offering" within the meaning of section 4(2),ⁿ⁷ although in many instances there are notice filing or other qualification requirements attached. In Louisiana, for example, the blue sky law specifically exempts offers and sales of securities in transactions carried out in compliance with section 4(2) of the federal Securities Act of 1933, but also imposes conditions such as the prohibition on payment of commissions, fees or remuneration for solicitation, and against general advertising, as well as requiring adequate disclosure.ⁿ⁸ Limitations on the payment of commissions, discounts or fees are common, as well as providing for a notice filing.ⁿ⁹

Particular "private" or "nonpublic" offering exemptions in state blue sky laws may afford the greatest utility to small business issuers without the uncertainties of compliance with the more generalized federal section 4(2) criteria. Nevertheless, in those states which do provide a general exemption to coordinate with federal section 4(2) where greater flexibility is needed as, for example, when a state private offering exemption limits the amount of securities that may be sold, the alternative is meaningful.

[c] Other "Small Business" Offering Exemptions In some states a specific "small business" offering exemption has been adopted to permit offerings of securities in varying and relatively small amounts without compliance with registration or qualification provisions. The Vermont Small Business Offering Exemption, for example, permits an aggregate offering up to $500,000 by an in-state issuer that uses at least 40% of the proceeds of the offering in the state.ⁿ¹⁰ There are reasonable limits on the number of purchasers and other basic qualifications apply. It presents a particularly useful mechanism for small business issuers to raise seed capital necessary to undertake or support early operations, and the state is a clear beneficiary of the economic contribution that is locked-in to qualifications for the exemption. Arkansas provides an exemption from its blue sky law for small business offerings in an aggregate amount not exceeding $1 million during a 12 month period. There are, however, specific disclosure requirements, and in some states the exemption is conditioned on approval by the administrator under a claim of exemption procedure. Arkansas, for example, exempts a single offering of securities not exceeding $1 million, or in separate offerings aggregating $1 million during any 12 month period, whichever comes first. Transactions must satisfy requirements addressing, among other things, the use of a prospectus or offering circular, financial disclosures, and certain undertakings by executive officers, directors and controlling persons of the issuer. The availability of the exemption is conditioned upon approval of the administrator through a prescribed "proof of exemption" procedure.ⁿ¹¹

These examples are true exemptions from registration requirements rather than lesser forms of registration such as the SCOR offering process that is discussed below. However, it is also apparent that qualifying conditions, as in the case of the proof of exemption procedure in Arkansas for example, may functionally amount to a registration procedure. A special small issuer registration procedure rather than an outright exemption is the more common approach to meeting the needs of small business and to facilitate small business capital formation. As a practical matter it is also apparent from consideration of the various local issuer and de minimis exemption alternatives, there are several possibilities for a small business exemption from blue sky registration and qualification requirements regardless of whether a blue sky law contains a specific "small business" exemption.

[2] Hybrid Exemptions: Small Business Limited Registration Procedures

[a] Uniform Limited Offering Registration (ULOR) Although, as discussed above, some states provide specific exemptions for small business issuers to support capital formation activities, the most common initiative to accomplish both investor protection and capital formation objectives has been through adoption of either the Uniform Limited Offering Registration (ULOR) or, more commonly, SCOR--the Small Company Offering Registration. Where adopted, the ULOR establishes a lesser registration procedure when the aggregate amount of the offering does not exceed $5 million in any 12 month period, although in many cases the ULOR specifically encompasses state registrations of offerings eligible for federal exemption under Rule 504 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, but subject to the lower amount limit on such an offering. ULOR is a procedure for registration by qualification in those states providing for such registration. The difference between ULOR and normal registration is mechanical. Offerings eligible for the ULOR procedure are registered on Form U-7--the Uniform Small Corporate Offering Registration Form. Form U-7 is a simplified registration statement that also serves as a disclosure document.

ULOR is not available for certain offerings, and there are issuer qualification requirements. As adopted in Vermont, for example, ULOR requirements include:

- 1) The issuer must be a corporation organized under the laws of a U.S. state or possession, and may not be an investment company, a "blind pool" or engaged in petroleum exploration or mining or any other extractive industry;
- 2) The aggregate offering price of securities covered by the ULOR procedure must conform to the limits imposed by Rule 504 or Regulation A under the Securities Act of 1933, whichever is greater, less the aggregate offering price of all securities sold within 12 months before the start of, and during the offering of, the securities in reliance on any exemption under the Securities Act of 1933;
- 3) The offering price must be at least $5.00 per share, except that the Commissioner may waive the minimum price requirement unless it is determined to be necessary for the protection of investors;
- 4) The issuer may not split its common stock or declare a stock dividend for a period of two years from the date of effectiveness; and
- (5) The issuer is not disqualified by "bad boy" criteria.¹²

The incorporation of either Rule 504 or the SEC Regulation A (now Rule 505) amount limitation, whichever is greater, in Vermont allows for application of the ULOR to an offering up to $5 million. In that aspect of its application ULOR is more flexible than SCOR which, as will be seen below, is limited to offerings not exceeding $1 million. ULOR itself, however, was not widely adopted,¹³ as states instead implemented the NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations adopted in 1996 to provide for the uniform treatment of registrations of small company offerings of securities exempt under Regulation D, but still subject to state registration and qualification,¹⁴ SCOR is a product of the ULOR initiative, but today stands alone as the almost universally adopted procedure for registration of small company offerings.

[b] Small Company Offering Registrations (SCOR) SCOR is not an exemption from blue sky registration and qualification requirements. It is, however, a simplified registration procedure based on a question and answer registration form (U-7) that companies also use as the disclosure document for investors. SCOR is in effect a hybrid exemption. SCOR is a form of registration by qualification, but in most instances merit standards used by administrators in those states that engage in merit review are more relaxed than those applied to larger public offerings. Overall, SCOR allows qualifying issuers to raise up to $1 million at a considerable cost savings over otherwise applicable registration procedures. Any type of investor, and any number of investors, may purchase the securities and SCOR imposes no limitations on the manner of offering securities. Unless otherwise proscribed, as with Rule 504 offerings, general solicitation and advertising is permitted. As discussed further below, this is a particularly useful consideration for small business issuers that elect to proceed in reliance on the federal section 3(a)(11) intrastate offering exemption.

SCOR is available in most states for an issuer that:

- (1) Is a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company organized under the laws of the United States or Canada or any state, territory, or province thereof, or the District of Columbia, and which has its principal place of business in one of the foregoing;
- (2) Is not subject to the reporting requirements of section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;
- (3) Is not an investment company registered or required to be registered under the federal Investment Company Act of 1940;
- (4) Is not engaged in and does not propose to engage in petroleum exploration and production, mining or other extractive industries;
- (5) Is not a development stage company that either has no specific business plan or purpose, or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in a merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies or other entity or person; and
- (6) Is not disqualified by "bad boy" criteria.ⁿ¹⁵

Other conditions include a minimum share price and, like the ULOR requirement, issuers are typically required to agree that there will be no stock split or stock dividend for a specific period following the effective date of the registration. Commissions, fees or other remuneration paid for soliciting any prospective purchaser may be paid only to licensed broker-dealers or agents in the state, and there are specific financial statement requirements. Offerings pursuant to SCOR must be made in compliance with Rule 504 of Regulation D, Regulation A, or section 3(a)(11)--the intrastate offering exemption--under the federal Securities Act of 1933.

SCOR is today primarily utilized by issuers for offerings exempt under federal law pursuant to Rule 504 of Regulation D. In February 1999, the SEC adopted amendments to Rule 504 intended to prevent microcap fraud. The rule as amended makes exempted securities restricted securities and prohibits general solicitation and general advertising, unless the conditions for a public Rule 504 offering are met. These conditions are: 1) the transactions are registered under a state law requiring filing and delivery of a disclosure document to investors before sale. For sales in states without these provisions, the transactions must be registered in a state with such a requirement and the disclosure documents must be delivered to all purchasers before sale in both states; or 2) the securities are issued under a state law exemption that permits general solicitation and advertising, so long as sales are made only to accredited investors as defined in Regulation D.ⁿ¹⁶ The 1999 amendment assures that the Rule 504 federal exemption will not be available for an offering carried out solely in reliance on a single coordinate state exemption. Rule 504 offerings must be subject to registration requirements in one or more states, and those requirements must make provision for use of a disclosure document.

Although much of the attention with SCOR is focused on offerings carried out pursuant to federal Rule 504, its utility for small business issuers electing to rely on the federal section 3(a)(11) exemption --the Intrastate Offering Exemptionⁿ¹⁷-- and SEC Rule 147 under the Actⁿ¹⁸ cannot be overlooked. The section 3(a)(11) federal exemption is a securities exemption rather than a transaction exemption, and imposes no limitations on the numbers or types of investors to whom the securities are offered and sold. SCOR was specifically designed to encompass federally exempt intrastate offerings as well as Rule 504 exempt offerings. Although the maximum offering size remains limited, use of SCOR for an offering exempt from federal registration by reason of the intrastate offering exemption means that none of the limitations applicable to Rule 504 as to manner of offering, limitations on resale and the specific integration provision apply. To be sure, compliance with section 3(a)(11) entails its own residency limitations and is subject to general integration criteria. However, the ability to engage in general solicitation and general advertising, and to utilize the Form U-7 registration statement and disclosure document, presents a clear advantage to small business issuers who engage in capital formation in a localized setting. Here again, it is possible in some states that a $1 million offering carried out locally would qualify for one or more local issuer or other forms of exemption from any registration or qualification requirement. In many other cases, however, the need for greater flexibility and the ability to reach out to greater numbers of potential investors makes SCOR and the federal section 3(a)(11) combination clearly superior.

To further encourage and facilitate the use of SCOR, the North American Securities Administrators Association adopted the NASAA Small Company Offering Registration Manual, n19 which contains extensive instructions and guidance for completing the items in Form U-7.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 17 C.F.R. § 230.505.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 8.06[2], supra.

(n3)Footnote 3.

District of Columbia: See, e.g., D.C. Mun. Regs. § 1944. Other states including a specific exemption for SEC Rule 505 compliant offerings include:

Delaware: Del. Sec. Act Regs. § 502(a).

Hawaii: Haw. Admin. Rules § 16-38-23.

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 80A.15(2)(h).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. § 203(s).

(n4)Footnote 4.

Illinois: See, e.g., 14 Ill. Admin. Code §130.420.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 8.03[13], supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 8.06[3], supra.

(n7)Footnote 7.

Connecticut: See, e.g., Conn. Banking Comm. Regs. § 36b-31-21b-9a;
Maine: 32 Me. Rev. Stat. § 10502(2)(R).

(n8)Footnote 8. 10 La. Admin. Code § 705.

(n9)Footnote 9.

Ohio: See, e.g. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(Q).

(n10)Footnote 10. Vt. Admin. Order No. 96-4-SE (May 13, 1996).

(n11)Footnote 11. Ark. Code § 23-42-503(b); Sec. Comm. Rules § 503.01(B).

(n12)Footnote 12. Vt. Sec. Reg. S-92-1; see also Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1902; Ariz. Admin. Code Sec. R14-4-134.

(n13)Footnote 13. ULOR requirements in those states that did adopt it, and which retain it, are summarized in the applicable State Guide section --Forms of Registration-- for each state that are contained in Vols. 3 and 4.

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Admin. Code tit. 3, § 08.600.

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.113.1.

Colorado: Colo. Div. Sec. Rule § 51-3.2.

Connecticut: Conn. Unif. Sec. Act Reg. Rule § 368-31-18b.

Delaware: Del. Sec. Div. Rules § 402.

Florida: Fla. Div. Sec. Rule 3E-301.002.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-5.

Idaho: Idaho Dep't Fin. Rule 161.

Illinois: Ill. Admin. Code § 130.525.

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-5.5.

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.207A.

Kansas: Kan. Admin Regs. § 81-4-2.

Kentucky: 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. 10:010.

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. § 51:705.

Maine: Revised Me. Sec. Act § 10404; Sec. Div. Rule ch. 525 Sec. 1-8.

Maryland: Md. Regs. Code tit. 03, § 12.

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 13.303.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.704a.

Mississippi: Miss. Sec. Rule 703.

Missouri: Mo. Code Regs. Ann. tit. 15, § 30-5.2.271.

Montana: Mont. Securities Act § 30-10-205.

Nevada: Nev. Admin. Code § 90.403.

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:15-a.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 40.604.

New Mexico: N.M. Admin. Code tit. 12, § 11.4.6.1.

North Carolina: N.C. Admin. Code tit. 18, r. 6.1303.

North Dakota: N.D. Sec. Comm. Reg. § 73-02-01-01.

Ohio: Ohio Admin. Code § 1301:6-.3-09.

Oklahoma: Okla. Sec. Comm. Sec 660:10-9-12.

Oregon: Oredmin. R. 441-65-170.

Pennsylvania: Rel. 48,685G Pa. Sec. Comm'n.

Rhode Island: R.I. Sec. Div. Rule 304(c)-1.

South Carolina: S.C. Code § 35-1-870.

South Dakota: S.D. Cod. Laws § 47-31A-304.

Tennessee: Tenn. Div. Sec. Rule 0780-4-1.04.

Texas: 7 Tex. Admin. Code § 133.33.

Utah: Utah Sec. Comm. R 164-10-2.

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. V4208.

Virginia: Va. Code § 13.1-510.

Washington: Wash. Admin. Code § 460-17A-010.

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 32-3-304.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 551.26.

Wyoming: Wyo. Sec. Div. § 26.

Washington: See, e.g., Wash. Admin. Code Ch. 460-17A.

(n16)Footnote 16. Release 33-7644 (February 25, 1999).

(n17)Footnote 17. Although it is not a transaction exemption, section 3(a)(11) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77c(11), exempts:

Any security which is part of an issue offered and sold only to persons resident within a single State or Territory, where the issuer of such security is a person resident and doing business within, or, if a corporation, incorporated by and doing business within, such State or Territory.

(n18)Footnote 18. 17 C.F.R. § 230.147.

(n19)Footnote 19. The NASAA Manual is published in CCH NASAA Reports at P 416, and is also available through the NASAA web site at www.nasaa.org.

70 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.08

§ 8.08 Subject Matter Issuer Exemptions Subject Matter Issuer Exemptions

Although there is no Uniform Act guidance, and no uniformity in availability among state blue sky laws, numerous states have singled-out certain specific subject matters or areas as deserving specific transactional exemptions. Several, for example, devote specific attention to transactions in commodities futures contracts or commodity-related options, to make clear, for example, that transactions falling within the exclusive jurisdiction of the U.S. Commodities Futures Trading Commission, as determined as a matter of federal law, are exempt from registration and qualification requirements of blue sky laws. Other particular areas of focus in some states involve professional corporations, real estate interests, or oil, gas and mineral interests. Although all of these areas may involve interests within the scope of blue sky "security" definitions, particular policy or other considerations have led to the creation of transaction exemptions to remove them from coverage of registration or qualification requirements. These and other particular areas are discussed further below.

[1] Commodity Futures Contracts and Options on Commodity Futures The scope of state securities regulation in the area of commodity futures contracts and options in such contracts is discussed in more detail in Chapter 2.ⁿ¹ The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has exclusive regulatory jurisdiction over interstate trading in commodity futures. Some areas related to commodities transactions are unclear, however, as, for example, state authority in regard to commodity investment contracts between persons engaged in producing, processing, using or commercially handling as merchants each commodity that is subject to such a contract. Transactions involving the purchase of precious metals or other commodities for future delivery might in some circumstances fall within the ambit of blue sky laws. Other forms of commodity investment contracts could likewise be subject to state securities regulation, and thus, the states retain some authority in the area, at least in the case of intrastate trading. A few states provide specific transaction exemptions from registration for these commodity-related interests.

The states with exemptions in this category generally apply them to the commodity futures contract.ⁿ² Hawaii, however, has a security exemption applicable to "any option on a commodity futures contract subject to regulation under the Commodity Exchange Act."ⁿ³

[2] Other Options Options to purchase securities are, of course, separate securities from the securities themselves.ⁿ⁴ In the absence of an exemption applicable to the options, they must be registered whether or not the underlying security is registered or exempt. Very few states have general exemptions for options, and even when such exemptions do exist they are usually narrow in scope.

California has an exemption for any offer or sale of an option on the condition that the vendor is not the issuer of the underlying securities and that if the offer or sale had been of the underlying securities, such offer or sale would not be in violation of the registration provisions for non-issuer sales.ⁿ⁵ Note that this exemption, on its face, does not prohibit the vendor from being the issuer of the options, but only from being the issuer of the underlying securities.

In Florida, the exemption for transactions in options is elaborate. First, the sale must be by a broker/dealer registered under the Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the terms of the option must be guaranteed by such broker-dealer. Second, the transaction must be cleared through a clearing house recognized by the state. Third, the underlying security may be purchased or sold on a recognized securities exchange or is quoted on the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotations System. Fourth, the sale of the option cannot be by or for the benefit of the issuer of the underlying security. Fifth, the sale may not be for the purpose of providing or furthering any scheme to violate or evade the Florida Securities Act.ⁿ⁶

Under the Massachusetts exemption, no cash payment may be required to obtain the option or right and the issuer, its parent corporation, or its subsidiaries must grant the option or right to an employee pursuant to a plan approved by the stockholders of the entity whose securities are offered.ⁿ⁷

The most general exemption for offers or sales of options is in effect in Wisconsin. Here there are two exemptions applicable to rights to purchase securities. The first is available to offers or sales of options where transactions in the underlying security are eligible for a non-issuer exemption under one of the following circumstances.

- (1) The issuer of the underlying security has any securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.
- (2) The issuer is an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940.
- (3) Securities of the same class have been registered under the Wisconsin blue sky law within the preceding two years and such registration has been revoked or suspended.
- (4) Securities of the same class have been registered under the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ⁸
- (5) The underlying securities are exempt in non-issuer transactions pursuant to an exemption allowed by the administrator based on documents filed with him.

A second Wisconsin exemption is applicable to the offer or sale of warrants or other rights to subscribe to any security on the condition that at the time the warrant or right is exercised the deliverable security is in compliance with the Wisconsin blue sky law.ⁿ⁹

Finally, Texas has an exemption for sales of options sold by dealers registered in the state.ⁿ¹⁰ To be eligible for exemption the option must meet the following standards:

- (1) Its performance must be guaranteed by a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.
- (2) The sale of the option may not be by or for the benefit of the issuer of the underlying security.
- (3) The underlying security must be (a) exempt from registration in Texas due to the fact that it is registered on national securities exchange recognized by the State for purposes of the state's security exchange exemption, or (b) quoted on the NASDAQ and (i) the vending dealer is not participant in the issuer's distribution, (ii) the right to sell the securities has not been enjoined by a court nor revoked or suspended by the administrator and (iii) the issuer is a going concern.

(4) The sale of the option is not part of a scheme to violate or evade the Texas blue sky law.

[3] Professional Corporation Most states have statutes allowing doctors, lawyers and other licensed professionals to form corporations for purposes of practicing their craft. One of the characteristics of the professional corporation is that, with limited exceptions,ⁿ¹¹ stockholders must be licensed by the state to render the specific professional service for which the corporation was formed.ⁿ¹² The effect of such a rule immediately and substantially limits the number of persons eligible to hold corporate shares, and because a professional buying an interest in such a corporation is also likely to be investing in a relatively small operation in which he will be participating on a day to day basis, it would seem logical to provide a registration exemption for shares in such corporations.

Interestingly, however, very few states provide for such an exemption.ⁿ¹³ These states are divided as to whether the exemption should be for the security itself,ⁿ¹⁴ or for the transaction.ⁿ¹⁵ But, as a practical matter, there is no difference since, in any case, the persons to whom the securities may be sold are limited by the professional corporation law.

A further requirement for the exemption is that the corporation be domestically organized in the state in which the exemption is claimed.ⁿ¹⁶ Several of the states specify that the securities involved in the exemption be capitalⁿ¹⁷ or common stockⁿ¹⁸ of the corporation. Only Kentucky applies this exemption to any security issued by a professional service corporation, but there is a concomitant requirement that the securities be sold to professional persons.ⁿ¹⁹

[4] Real Estate Interests As previously discussed, sales of real estate can take on aspects of securities transactions,ⁿ²⁰ and particular emphasis has been placed on interests in residential cooperativesⁿ²¹ and condominiums.ⁿ²² A few states, while retaining blue sky jurisdiction over these interests, provide registration exemptions for them, although this may be due to the fact that regulation is imposed under other laws.ⁿ²³ In most cases where the exemption is granted, the residential, rather than the commercial, purposes of the enterprise are stressed.ⁿ²⁴

In Florida, for example, the major requirement for exemption of sales of shares in a cooperative is that they represent residential units.ⁿ²⁵ The Massachusetts exemption is similar,ⁿ²⁶ but Massachusetts also requires that the cooperative housing corporation meets the criteria of such organizations described in Section 216(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code.ⁿ²⁷ Hawaii has a number of additional requirements for its cooperative housing exemption. The corporation issuing the interests must be organized in Hawaii and only real estate brokers or real estate salesmen licensed in Hawaii are permitted to offer or sell the securities.ⁿ²⁸ Further, the issuer is required to file an application with the Commissioner of Securities and may not use the exemption until a permit is issued by the Commissioner.ⁿ²⁹

Hawaii and Massachusetts also have exemptions for selling interests in condominiums. As with cooperative interests, Hawaii requires all offers and sales to be made by state licensed real estate brokers and salesmen, and requires that any rental management contract be offered simultaneously with the real estate interest.ⁿ³⁰

Massachusetts imposes different standards.ⁿ³¹ First, the seller of the condominium unit or units must reasonably believe that the purchaser intends to occupy the unit and that it will not be occupied by another as a tenant. Second, the seller must be either the developer of the project, a licensed real estate broker or a prior owner of the unit who actually occupied it. In any case, a seller may not act as a broker-dealer in connection with the sale of any units. Finally, activities of the developer with respect to the condominium as a whole, must be limited to ownership, sale of units, management and construction of properties for the holders of units and activities incidental to these functions.

California has a different type of exemption for real estate security interests in general. If the issuance of the security is subject to the authorization of the California Real Estate Commissioner, it is exempt, unless it is an interest in subdivided land or a real estate development.ⁿ³² However, such interests are exempt in any event if they are not offered or sold with or as part of an investment contract or offered or sold to a domestic use or irrigation use water supply company unless such company is a public utility.ⁿ³³

Louisiana also has a different type of transactional exemption for real estate security interests in general. The exemption covers bonds or notes secured by a mortgage on real estate if the entire mortgage and all of the secured bonds or notes are sold to a single purchaser at a single sale.ⁿ³⁴

The North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc.(NASAA) has adopted a Statement of Policy Regarding Real Estate Programs (Real Estate Guidelines) in the form of limited partnerships.ⁿ³⁵ While the standards contained in the Real Estate Guidelines are primarily meant to apply to public real estate syndications, they are also applied to private syndications and may be applied by state securities commissioners in processing exemption requests. The NASAA Real Estate Programs Guidelines have been adopted in whole or in substantial part in several jurisdictions.ⁿ³⁶

The Real Estate Guidelines impose substantive requirements on the sponsor and the terms of the offering, including the following:

- (1) The sponsor or general partner must have at least two years' relevant real estate or other experience demonstrating the knowledge and experience to acquire and manage the type of properties being acquired and any such person or affiliate (as defined) must have four years' relevant experience.ⁿ³⁷
- (2) The sponsor liable for the debts of the program must have an aggregate minimum net worth, exclusive of home, automobiles, and home furnishings, of the greater of at least $50,000 or an amount equal to at least five percent of the gross amount of all offerings sold within the preceding twelve months plus five percent of the gross amount of the current offering, but the sponsor need not have a net worth of more than $1,000,000.ⁿ³⁸
- (3) Investors must meet suitability standards determined by the state securities administrator. An investor must be able to bear the economic risk of the investment. For purposes of determining ability to bear economic risk, unless the state securities administrator approves a lower suitability standard, investors must have a minimum annual gross income of $45,000 and a net worth of $45,000, or in the alternative, a net worth of $150,000.ⁿ³⁹
- (4) The sponsor must make certain minimum investments of the proceeds of the offering in properties. In general, the sponsor must commit a percentage of capital contributions to investment in properties which is equal to the greater of
 - (a) 80 percent of the capital contributions reduced by .1625 percent for each 1 percent of financing of program properties; or
 - (b) 67 percent of the capital contributions.ⁿ⁴⁰
- (5) Program management fees may not exceed specified standards. A general partner of a program owning unimproved land is entitled to annual compensation not exceeding one-quarter of one percent of the cost of such unimproved land for operating the program until such time as the land is sold or improvement of the land by the limited partnership commences. In no event may this fee exceed a cumulative total of two percent of the original cost of the land regardless of the number of years held. A general partner of a program holding property in government-subsidized projects is entitled to annual compensation not exceeding one-half of one percent of the cost of such property for operating the program until such time as the property is sold. Program management fees other than these are prohibited.ⁿ⁴¹

(6) Limitations exist concerning the amount of any promotional interest received by the sponsor, general partner, or affiliates.ⁿ⁴²

(7) The Real Estate Guidelines also contain conflict of interest and investment restrictions.ⁿ⁴³

(8) The guidelines include special provisions relating to nonspecified property programs (blind pools), which require that the minimum gross proceeds of the offering be at least $1 million and that the sponsor or one of its principals generally have had not less than five years' experience in the real estate business in an executive capacity and two years' experience in the management and acquisition of the type of properties to be acquired in the program.ⁿ⁴⁴

(9) The guidelines specify certain rights and obligations of participants in the programs, including the right to receive certain reports.ⁿ⁴⁵

(10) The guidelines regulate advertising and disclosure documents and the use of forecasts.ⁿ⁴⁶

(11) The guidelines require that an application for qualification and registration include a favorable opinion of the Internal Revenue Service or an opinion of counsel that the issuer will be taxed as a partnership and not as an association. The opinion of counsel must be unqualified except as permitted by the state securities administrator, but may be based on reasonable assumptions, such as

(a) facts or proposed operations as set forth in the offering circular or prospectus and organizational documents;

(b) the absence of future changes in applicable laws;

(c) the securities offered are paid for;

(d) compliance with certain procedures, such as the execution and delivery of certain documents and the filing of a certificate of limited partnership or an amended certificate; and

(e) continued maintenance of or compliance with certain financial ownership of other requirements by the issuer or sponsor.ⁿ⁴⁷

[5] Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests What constitutes an oil, gas or mineral interest security varies from state to state.ⁿ⁴⁸ For purposes of this section, it is presumed that such interests are in fact securities in the states under discussion.

Two special exemptions for oil, gas, and mineral securities have been discussed previously. In one state, the financial and institutional investor exemptionⁿ⁴⁹ may apply where the purchaser is engaged in the frequent buying and selling of such securities.ⁿ⁵⁰ In a second state, the same exemption may be applicable where the purchaser is engaged in or familiar with the actual business of drilling, producing or refining oil or gas.ⁿ⁵¹ Exemptions specifically applicable to oil, gas or mineral securities have also been noted where such interests are the subject of a limited offering.

Other states have a variety of specific exemptions applicable to various oil, gas, and mineral interestsⁿ⁵².

The North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. adopted the Statement of Policy for Registration of Oil and Gas Programsⁿ⁵³ ("Oil and Gas Guidelines") in 1976. The Guidelines relate to the registration and qualification of oil and gas programs in the form of limited partnerships and apply to oil and gas programs in other forms by analogy.

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.08

Some states apply the Guidelines to private placements in connection with issuing an exemption from registration or granting a permit. The Oil and Gas Guidelines are applied entirely or in substantial part in several states.ⁿ⁵⁴

The guidelines regulate the substantive terms of oil and gas offerings as well as disclosure documents with respect to them. Among the requirements of the Oil and Gas Guidelines are the following:

(1) The general partner or its chief operating officers must have at least three years of relevant oil and gas experience, demonstrating the knowledge and experience to carry out and manage the program. Additionally, the general partner or any affiliate rendering services to the program must possess at least four years of relevant experience in rendering that kind of service.

(2) The general partner must have a minimum aggregate net worth at all times equal to five percent of participants' (limited partners') capital in all existing programs organized by the general partner plus five percent of the subscriptions in the program being offered, with a minimum required net worth of $200,000 and a maximum required net worth of $2,000,000.

(3) The sponsor must obtain a ruling from the Internal Revenue Service or an opinion of qualified tax counsel concerning flow-through tax consequences and other tax consequences to the investor.

(4) Indemnification permitted the sponsors is limited.

(5) Compensation to broker-dealers is limited to a cash commission. Indeterminate compensation to broker-dealers, such as overriding interests and net profit interests, is prohibited, although this prohibition may be eliminated.

(6) Suitability standards are required for investors, including standards for sophistication, the ability to bear the risk of the program, and the ability to benefit from the program on the basis of net worth and taxable income. For purposes of determining ability to bear the economic risk and to reasonably benefit from the program, unless circumstances warrant and the state securities administrator allows another standard, a participant must have

(a) a net worth of $225,000 or more (exclusive of home, furnishings, and automobiles), or

(b) a net worth of $60,000 or more (exclusive of home, furnishings, and automobiles) and have had during the last tax year, or must expect to have during the current tax year, taxable income as defined in § 63 of the Internal Revenue Code of $60,000 or more, without regard to the investment in the program. Lower suitability standards are allowed for production purchase programs of $60,000 or more without regard to investment in the program.

(7) For a drilling program, the minimum purchase may not be less than $5,000 and the initial investment by a participant may not be less than $5,000; for an income or production purchase program, the minimum purchase may not be less than $2,500 and the initial investment may not be less than $2,500, which minimums must be paid within 12 months from the date the program commences.

(8) Organization and offering expenses incurred to sell program units must be reasonable, and those expenses, plus any management fee to the sponsor, may not exceed 15 percent of the initial subscriptions.

(9) Participation in program revenues by the sponsor and any affiliate must be reasonable, taking into account all relevant factors. Overriding royalty interests are looked upon with disfavor. Sponsors' interests in revenues will be considered reasonable if they meet numerical standards. Any other combination of fees, working or net profits, interests, or interests subordinated to payout to the investors, which are justified in light of the entire offering, may be considered reasonable by the state securities administrator.

(10) Transactions with affiliates and transactions involving conflicts of interest are limited.

(11) Rights of participants to vote at meetings and to receive annual and periodic reports are specified.

[6] Viatical Settlement Contracts Viatical settlements are transactions or arrangements whereby one or more persons acquire an interest in the future death benefit of the life insurance policy of a terminally ill person in exchange for current payment of some discounted percentage of the future benefit. Emergent variations on traditional viatical settlements, such as "senior settlements" are all based upon the same concept. In Chapter 2 the widespread treatment of viaticals as investment contract securities under blue sky laws is explored.ⁿ⁵⁵ Notwithstanding the fact that viatical settlements are today expressly included within the definition of security in several state blue sky laws, and treated as such by administrators in many other states, some state provide a transaction exemption for them when they are subject to regulation under state insurance laws, or when they are subject to a specific viatical settlement law enacted in the state. Arkansas is typical in administratively providing a transaction exemption under the blue sky law for the offer and sale of viatical settlement contracts when the underlying transaction is in compliance with the state Viatical Settlements Act, and certain other requirements are met.ⁿ⁵⁶ There are specific disclosure requirements, and the exemption is subject to a "claim of exemption" procedure.ⁿ⁵⁷ Where available, this particular subject matter exemption is always subject to conditions and required procedures that assure regulatory scrutiny.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 2.06 supra.

(n2)Footnote 2.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(13).

The exemption, which applies to the security, specifies that the contracts must be traded on a commodities exchange recognized by the Arizona Corporation Commission. See Securities Regulation Sec. R14-4-125 for recognized commodities exchanges.

Transactions within the jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and transactions involving the purchase of one or more precious metals or involving a commodity investment contract are also designated as exempt transactions. Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(15)-(17).

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(14).

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(g).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.22(15).

(n3)Footnote 3.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-4(12).

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 2.06 supra.

(n5)Footnote 5.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(1).

(n6)Footnote 6.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(16).

(n7)Footnote 7.

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(a).

(n8)Footnote 8.

Wisconsin: Wis Stat. Ann. § 551.22(13). The exemption refers to the transaction under Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(3) applicable to certain non-issuer transactions.

(n9)Footnote 9.

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.23(17).

(n10)Footnote 10.

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. art. 581-5(S).

(n11)Footnote 11. It is generally provided that "ancillary employees" may be shareholders. These are employees who do not render a professional service, such as clerks, secretaries, etc. or who perform all services under direct supervision and control of a person licensed to practice the profession. Provisions also exist which allow a non-professional to hold the shares for a limited time when he has obtained them by operation of law, such as through the death of the professional-owner.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g.:

California: Cal. Corp. Code §§ 13406, 13407.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 621.03(2).

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 805 § 10/3.4.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 274.035.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann., Ch. 156A, §§ 7, 8.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1785.05.

(n13)Footnote 13.

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.6.

Kentucky: Securities Rule 808 Ky. Admin. Regs. 10.150(2).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(14).

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 202.091(b)(1)(ii).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 551.22(11).

(n14)Footnote 14. Id.

(n15)Footnote 15. Id.

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.:

California: The corporation must be organized pursuant to Cal. Corp. Code §§ 13400-13410.

Kentucky: Professional service corporations must be organized under Ky. Rev. Stat. Ch. 274 or substantially similar legislation of another state.

Michigan: Organization under Mich. Comp. L. §§ 450.221-450.235 is required.

North Carolina: Professional corporations are required to be organized pursuant to N.C. Gen. Stat., Ch. 55B.

Oregon: Oregon professional corporations are organized under Or. Rev. Stat., Ch. 58.

Pennsylvania: 64 Pa. Code § 202.091(b)(1)(ii).

(n17)Footnote 17. See note 13 supra for citations in California and Oregon.

(n18)Footnote 18. See note 13 supra for the Wisconsin citation.

(n19)Footnote 19. See note 13 supra for the Kentucky citation.

In Pennsylvania, the "shares" of the professional corporation are exempt. "Shares" are defined to include "the interest of an associate in a professional association." See 64 Pa. Code § 202.091(b)(1)(ii).

(n20)Footnote 20. See § 2.08[2][b] supra.

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 2.08[2][b][i] supra.

(n22)Footnote 22. See § 2.08[2][b][ii] supra.

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.:

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. chs. 718, 719 et seq.

(n24)Footnote 24.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(10), (14).

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(13).

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(c)(iii).

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(B)(12).

(n25)Footnote 25.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(14).

(n26)Footnote 26.

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code tit. 950, § 14.402(B)(13)(c).

(n27)Footnote 27. The Internal Revenue Code provision states:

COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATON.--The term "cooperative housing corporation" means a corporation--

(A) having one and only one class of stock outstanding,

(B) each of the stockholders of which is entitled, solely by reason of his ownership of stock in the corporation, to occupy for dwelling purposes a house, or an apartment in a building, owned or leased by such corporation,

(C) no stockholder of which is entitled (either conditionally or unconditionally) to receive any distribution not out of earnings and profits of the corporation except on a complete or partial liquidation of the corporation, and

(D) 80 percent or more of the gross income of which for the taxable year in which the taxes and interest described in subsection (a) are paid or incurred is derived from tenant-stockholders.

(n28)Footnote 28.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(13).

(n29)Footnote 29.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-7.

(n30)Footnote 30.

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 485-6(14).

(n31)Footnote 31.

Massachusetts: Mass. Regs. Code, § 14.402(B)(13)(d).

(n32)Footnote 32.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(e).

(n33)Footnote 33.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25100(f).

(n34)Footnote 34.

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. § 51:709(16).

(n35)Footnote 35. Reprinted in Volume 4 infra; see also 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) (beginning at P 6211) and NASAA Reports (CCH) P 3601 at 2001.

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g.:

Arizona: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 9605.

Iowa: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 25,457 (modified).

Michigan: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 32,569, 32,585 (modified).

Missouri: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 35,468.

Nebraska: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 37,420 (modified).

New Mexico: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 41,530 (modified).

New York: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 41,521J (modified).

See also Blue Sky Policy Statement 105, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 42,580 (instructions for issuers of real estate syndication offerings requesting "no filing" letter).

Ohio: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 45,603.

Oklahoma: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 46,500, 46,635.

Pennsylvania: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 48,663, 48,667 (modified).

Tennessee: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 54,426.

Texas: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 55,601 (modified).

Utah: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 57,406A (modified).

Virginia: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 60,435B (modified).

Washington: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 61,582B (modified).

West Virginia: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 63,476.

Wisconsin: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 64,543.

Wyoming: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) at P 66,435.

(n37)Footnote 37. See NASAA Reports (CCH) P 3601 at 2001.

(n38)Footnote 38. Id.

(n39)Footnote 39. Id.

(n40)Footnote 40. Id.

(n41)Footnote 41. Id.

(n42)Footnote 42. Id.

(n43)Footnote 43. Id.

(n44)Footnote 44. Id.

(n45)Footnote 45. Id.

(n46)Footnote 46. Id.

(n47)Footnote 47. Id.

(n48)Footnote 48. See ch. 2 supra.

(n49)Footnote 49. See § 8.03[6], supra.

(n50)Footnote 50.

Illinois: Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/4(O).

(n51)Footnote 51.

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(j).

(n52)Footnote 52. See, e.g.:

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262n.

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 71-75-203(13).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31A-402(b)(13).

(n53)Footnote 53. Reprinted in Volume 4 infra; See also 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) (beginning at P 6211).

(n54)Footnote 54.

Arizona: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 9605.

Michigan: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 32,589.

Mississippi: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 34,429F.

Missouri: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 35,468, P 35,566 (modified).

New Mexico: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 41,531 (modified).

Oklahoma: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 46,500, P 46,638.

Pennsylvania: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 48,667 (modified).

Tennessee: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 54,426.

Texas: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 55,631 (modified).

Virginia: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 60,4435B.

Washington: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 61,582B (modified).

West Virginia: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 63,477.

Wisconsin: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 64,543 (modified).

Wyoming: 1 Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 66,435.

(n55)Footnote 55. See §. 2.082, supra.

(n56)Footnote 56. Ark, Sec. Comm. Rules §504.01(m).

(n57)Footnote 57. Arizona provides a general statutory exemption for viatical or life settlement contracts meeting specific conditions, see Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1850. Conditions include filing requirements, disclosure, and advertising approval. The Arizona provision establishes a specific private remedy for purchaser, and the exemption is subject to denial or revocation.

71 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.09

§ 8.09 Miscellaneous Issuer Exemptions

A number of exemptions exist that are best described as "miscellaneous." These are exemptions that, at best, have been enacted in only a few states. Some of them are highly specialized and will be available only in very limited circumstances. It is probably because these exemptions are not often used that interpretations of the provisions are scarce.

One of the more interesting aspects of these miscellaneous exemptions is that it is possible for an exemption to be available in a state lacking a statutory provision. Indiana, for example, is the only state providing a statutory exemption for the deposit of shares pursuant to a voting trust agreement and the issuance of voting trust certificates in exchange therefor.ⁿ¹ However, it is possible for an exemption similar to this one to arise in the absence of a statutory provision. In a North Dakota case,ⁿ² the problem was of a slightly different nature, but the effect of the decision raises an interesting question. In that case, the corporate issuer set up a voting trust. Trust certificates issued in exchange for the voting stock were duly registered under the state's blue sky law. The trust agreement provided that the trust would be extended after termination of the original period by mutual consent of the trustees and any certificate holders who wished to remain in the trust. Toward the end of the original period, certificate holders were solicited to extend the trust. A number of them agreed, and the trust was extended for an additional ten years. The renewal trust certificates were not registered under the North Dakota securities law and the renewal agreement came under attack for failure to comply with the statute. The court, however, looked at the North Dakota provision which exempted exchanges with existing security holders pursuant to a right of conversionⁿ³ and held that the holders of the original trust certificates were existing security holders who could be solicited for the exchange of securities without the need of registration.ⁿ⁴

It will be recalled that the Uniform Securities Act not only exempts exchanges pursuant to a right of conversion, but exempts "any transaction pursuant to an offer to existing security holders of the issuer. ..." ⁿ⁵ If this provision were applied to the above set of facts, would it not mean that exchange under the renewal agreement would similarly be exempt?

In a similar respect, Ohio exempts any interim certificate if the securities ultimately to be delivered are themselves exempt, are the subject of an exempt transaction or are appropriately registered under Ohio law.ⁿ⁶ Although a comparable provision is not contained in the Uniform Securities Act, it would seem likely that such an exemption would be implied, at least in a number of cases. For example, if a debt security issued by a bank is exempt, surely an interim certificate for such security issued by the bank would also be exempt under the provision making registration inapplicable to "any security issued by ... any bank."ⁿ⁷ Similarly, if an interim certificate is given to an existing security holder, the transaction remains one with an existing security holder and would probably be exempt under the Uniform

Securities Act.ⁿ⁸

To be sure, some problems in this area can arise. If, for example, an exemption is claimed for a non-issuer isolated transaction under the Uniform Securities Act,ⁿ⁹ it would appear unlikely that an interim certificate issued by the seller would also be eligible for the exemption even though the underlying security is not so issued. But the situation can be stretched even further. Suppose the seller is not yet in possession of the underlying security, and obtains an interim certificate for such security from the issuer. This, in turn, is turned over to the seller's vendee. The vendee returns to the seller, demands security, and the seller takes the interim certificate, exchanges it with the issuer for the underlying security and gives the latter to the vendee. There is still a non-issuer transaction, but interim certificates are defined as separate securities under the Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ¹⁰

So the question arises whether one or two sales have been made pursuant to the isolated transaction exemption.ⁿ¹¹ This situation, of course, is a bit farfetched, because it would be easier for the person who purchases the interim certificate from the non-issuer to demand the underlying security directly from the issuer. This transaction might even be exempt as a transaction with an existing security holder.ⁿ¹² Further, if the underlying security is, in fact, registered, wouldn't the interim certificate, being a separate security, also have to be registered under the Uniform Securities Act?

There are, of course, a number of miscellaneous exemptions. Many have been previously discussed in other sections,ⁿ¹³ and there is no pretense that all of the other exemptions are covered here. Nevertheless, there are a few that are of particular interest.

In Californiaⁿ¹⁴ and Ohio,ⁿ¹⁵ negotiable instruments such as checks, drafts and money orders may be sold without registration on the condition that the seller is properly licensed to engage in the business of selling such instruments.

Florida provides an exemption for transactions involving certificates of interest or participation in pooled income funds maintained and controlled by and for the ultimate benefit of charitable corporations.ⁿ¹⁶

Illinois allows an exemption for domestic corporations which issue securities for redevelopment of blighted urban areas.ⁿ¹⁷ The state also exempts securities sales to a government body.ⁿ¹⁸

Georgia exempts transactions involving the issuance of securities in connection with pooled income funds under certain conditions.ⁿ¹⁹

North Dakota has established a public venture capital corporation, whose securities enjoy both a transactional exemption and a securities exemption.ⁿ²⁰

The Pennsylvania Securities Commission deems no sale to have occurred for blue sky law purposes where a person (or persons) in connection with governmental filings for incorporation becomes an incorporating shareholder (or shareholders) with the intent to transfer all the shares to a promoter or principal of the issuer upon incorporation.ⁿ²¹ However, resale to the promoter or principal would involve a sale by the issuer. The staff would take the same position towards a "straw" limited partner being used in the context of a limited partnership formation.ⁿ²²

Texas provides an exemption from registration for the offer and sale of securities by an issuer or its selling agent to a non-Texas resident not present in Texas when the offer is made.ⁿ²³

Wisconsin exempts the offer or sale of debt securities by an issuer to its employees or agents provided a notice is filed with the state commissioner and the commissioner by order exempts the offering.ⁿ²⁴

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act includes two transaction exemptions that are new, and which reflect certain realities in the modern enforcement of blue sky laws. Section 202(19) of the Act exempts a rescission offer, sale, or purchase that is made under section 510 of the Act--a specific rescission offer provision. Section 510 controls the civil liability provision in section 509 of the Act to the extent that no private civil remedy is permitted if a purchaser, seller or recipient of investment advice receives a rescission offer in accordance with section 510. Section 202(19) of the Act thus exempts the rescission offer made in accordance with section 510 from registration requirements. The specific treatment of rescission offers in the 2002 Uniform Act reflects the fact that rescission offers are commonly ordered as part of administrative enforcement actions based on violation of registration provisions (as well as licensing provisions for intermediaries). It also reflects the fact that whether ordered or not, issuers may undertake to make rescission offers voluntarily to address actual or potential violations of a blue sky law. A few states have previously incorporated an analog of the new Uniform Act provision for rescission offers into their blue sky laws, and also include a corresponding transaction exemption from registration requirements for the rescission offer.

The second new transaction exemption in the 2002 Uniform Act is section 202(20), which exempts:

[a]n offer or sale of a security to a person not a resident of this State and not present in this State if the offer or sale does not constitute a violation of the laws of the State or foreign jurisdiction in which the offeree or purchaser is present and is not part of an unlawful plan or scheme to evade this [Act].ⁿ²⁵

In Chapters 3 and 4 the scope of state investor protection authority was examined in detail, with particular focus on the meaning of "offer" or "sale" as key triggering events for application of a particular state's blue sky law, and the scope of individual state jurisdiction generally. The extent to which an issuer may be subjected to compliance requirements, and enforcement, under a state blue sky law for activity that is wholly directed outside the state is a matter of some uncertainty. The 2002 Uniform Act provision recognizes that a state does not have legitimate concern for investor protection when an offer and sale is not made to any person in the state, and is lawful in the jurisdiction where the offeree or purchaser is present. States have in fact exercised jurisdiction over issuers in those circumstances based on the simple activity of making an offer in the state, regardless of where the offer is directed outside of the state and without regard to whether the offer to a resident in another state or jurisdiction is impacted by the law in that other jurisdiction having the most direct interest in the transaction and the protection of the persons involved. The 2002 Uniform Act exemption signals a need for uniformity and a return to recognition of the fundamental investor protection objectives of blue sky laws.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(13).

California, by regulation, exempts the offer or sale of beneficial interests in an inter vivos voting trust if the offer or sale is the result of a stock split or reverse stock split of underlying securities exempt from registration. See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.9. Stock splits and reverse stock splits are exempt under Cal. Corp. Code § 25103(f).

(n2)Footnote 2. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Provident Life Ins. Co., 499 F.2d 715 (8th Cir. [N.D.] 1974) , applying North Dakota law.

(n3)Footnote 3.

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(7).

(n4)Footnote 4. 499 F.2d at 723 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(11).

(n6)Footnote 6.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(D).

(n7)Footnote 7. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(a)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(11).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. Unif. Sec. Act. § 401(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. The question of whether one or two sales have been made is important in a few states where two successive sales are no longer deemed isolated. See § 8.05 supra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 8.03[7] supra.

(n13)Footnote 13. Exempt issuances of industrial development corporations, for example, are discussed as part of the section of exempt domestic governmental securities. See ch. 7 supra.

(n14)Footnote 14.

California: Cal. Code Regs. tit. 10, § 260.105.16.

(n15)Footnote 15.

Ohio: Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(R).

(n16)Footnote 16.

Florida: Securities Rule 3E-500.012.

(n17)Footnote 17.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815 § 5/4(P).

(n18)Footnote 18. Id. (C).

(n19)Footnote 19.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-9(15).

(n20)Footnote 20. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(13) (transactional exemption) and § 10-04-05(12) (securities exemption).

(n21)Footnote 21. Pa. Sec. Bull. July/August 1988.

(n22)Footnote 22. Id.

(n23)Footnote 23.

Texas: 7 Tex. Admin. Code § 139.7.

(n24)Footnote 24.

Wisconsin: Wis. Admin. Code § [SEC] 2.02(9)(f).

(n25)Footnote 25. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(20).

72 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.10

§ 8.10 General Compliance Considerations

[1] Combining Issuer Exemptions In states that have both an isolated transaction exemption available to issuersⁿ¹ and a limited offering exemption,ⁿ² the question arises whether issuers can rely on both exemptions to increase the size of their unregistered offering through the combination of the permitted number of offers or sales in the limited offering exemptions with those made under the isolated transaction exemption.ⁿ³

Kansas and New Hampshire have statutory provisions that require any sales made under the isolated transaction exemption to be included in the count for determining the availability of the limited offering exemption.ⁿ⁴ In Idaho, Nebraska and Vermont, however, where both exemptions are available, since the limited offering exemption excludes sophisticated investors from the count of permitted offerees, it can be argued that these states have provided a similar exclusion from the permitted number of offerees for the limited offering exemption for isolated transactions if it had been their intent to do so.ⁿ⁵ Oregon contains no restrictions on reliance upon both exemptions.ⁿ⁶ Michigan expressly permits offers and sales which are exempt under most transaction exemptions in its blue sky law to be combined so as to exempt an entire transaction or series of transactions.ⁿ⁷

In general, combining issuer exemptions is problematic by reason of integration principles. Implicit in every transaction exemption is the notion that it is applied to a single, discreet transaction or set of transactions that are all part of an issue. In previous analyses of private and limited offerings by issuers the importance of integration and the factors determining whether separate offerings are to be integrated has been addressed.ⁿ⁸ By reason of integration, attempts to combine exemptions would have the result of destroying the applicability of each exemption if the combined transactions would exceed allowable limits or violate other requirements applicable to any one of the exemptions. However, there is nothing in blue sky laws that precludes reliance on multiple exemptions for a series of transactions that are not part of a single issue and the separate elements of which are not subject to integration. In states that provide a mechanism for an administrative determination that a proposed sale or transaction is entitled to an exemptionⁿ⁹ an issuer may clarify whether reliance on separate exemptions for a series of transactions would escape integration, or whether a combination of exemptions would be permitted. Absent such a procedure, however, an issuer is clearly at risk of violating registration or qualification requirements if transactions are deemed to be part of a single issue.

In those states that by rule permit solicitations of interest ("testing the waters") procedures, by which an issuer may make an offer of a security for the sole purpose of soliciting an indication of interest in receiving a disclosure document,ⁿ¹⁰ offers made in reliance on that rule will not be integrated under the blue sky law with subsequent offers and sales. However, the state procedure expressly does not preclude integration under federal securities laws.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Legend Requirements for Offering Materials As discussed throughout this chapter, the various issuer transaction exemptions, limited offerings or forms of limited registration procedures established under blue sky laws often require that a disclosure document be provided to prospective purchasers in an offering. So it is clear to prospective investors that stated reliance on an exemption or form of limited offering does not involve any administrative "approval" or endorsement of the offering. NASAA--the North American Securities Administrators Association--adopted a Statement of Policy prescribing uniform guidelines for cover page legends, requiring that a prominent legend and regulatory disclaimer in one of the specified forms appear on the face of an offering memorandum or subscription document for an exempt offering.ⁿ¹² NASAA prescribed legends for offering documents vary according to the circumstances of an offering. For example, if an offering is exempt from federal registration requirements, but subject to state registration or qualification, the following legend which, to the extent appropriate, must appear on the cover page:

IN MAKING AN INVESTMENT DECISION INVESTORS MUST RELY ON THEIR OWN EXAMINATION OF THE ISSUER AND THE TERMS OF THE OFFERING, INCLUDING THE MERITS AND RISKS INVOLVED. THESE SECURITIES HAVE NOT BEEN RECOMMENDED BY ANY FEDERAL OR STATE SECURITIES COMMISSION OR REGULATORY AUTHORITY. FURTHERMORE, THE FOREGOING AUTHORITIES HAVE NOT CONFIRMED THE ACCURACY OR DETERMINED THE ADEQUACY OF THIS DOCUMENT. ANY REPRESENTATION TO THE CONTRARY IS A CRIMINAL OFFENSE.

If securities are offered or sold pursuant to the federal section 4(2) exemption, or under the provisions of Regulation D, the following statement, in addition to any other required legend must also appear on the cover page of any offering document utilized in connection with the offer and sale of the securities:

THESE SECURITIES ARE SUBJECT TO RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSFERABILITY AND RESALE AND MAY NOT BE TRANSFERRED OR RESOLD EXCEPT AS PERMITTED UNDER THE SECURITIES ACT OF 1933, AS AMENDED, AND THE APPLICABLE STATE SECURITIES LAWS, PURSUANT TO REGISTRATION OR EXEMPTION THEREFROM. INVESTORS SHOULD BE AWARE THAT THEY MAY BE REQUIRED TO BEAR THE FINANCIAL RISKS OF THIS INVESTMENT FOR AN INDEFINITE PERIOD OF TIME.ⁿ¹³

NASAA does not prescribe a standardized legend for use in offerings made subject to state exemptions generally. Individual states prescribe their own particular legends, often with specific reference to the issuer exemption involved.

Alaska

FOR ALASKA RESIDENTS:

THE SECURITIES OFFERED HAVE BEEN REGISTERED WITH THE ADMINISTRATOR OF SECURITIES OF THE STATE OF ALASKA UNDER PROVISIONS OF 3 AAC 08.500-3 AAC 08.506. THE INVESTOR IS ADVISED THAT THE ADMINISTRATOR HAS MADE ONLY A CURSORY REVIEW OF THE REGISTRATION STATEMENT AND HAS NOT REVIEWED THIS DOCUMENT SINCE THE DOCUMENT IS NOT REQUIRED TO BE FILED WITH THE ADMINISTRATOR. THE FACT OF REGISTRATION DOES NOT MEAN THAT THE ADMINISTRATOR HAS PASSED IN ANY WAY UPON THE MERITS, RECOMMENDED, OR APPROVED THE SECURITIES. ANY REPRESENTATION TO THE CONTRARY IS A VIOLATION OF AS 45.55.170. THE INVESTOR MUST RELY ON THE INVESTOR'S OWN EXAMINATION OF THE PERSON OR ENTITY CREATING THE SECURITIES AND THE TERMS OF THE OFFERING, INCLUDING THE MERITS AND RISKS INVOLVED, IN MAKING AN INVESTMENT DECISION ON THESE SECURITIES.

Florida

Investors are entitled to a three day right of rescission, triggered by the latest of the date on which he/she delivers a subscription, makes payment, or is informed of the statutory right. The legend need only be included in the front portion of the Confidential Memorandum.

FOR FLORIDA RESIDENTS

THE UNITS REFERRED TO HEREIN WILL BE SOLD TO, AND ACQUIRED BY, THE HOLDER IN A TRANSACTION EXEMPT UNDER § 517.061 OF THE FLORIDA SECURITIES ACT. THE UNITS HAVE NOT BEEN REGISTERED UNDER SAID ACT IN THE STATE OF FLORIDA. IN ADDITION, ALL FLORIDA RESIDENTS SHALL HAVE THE PRIVILEGE OF VOIDING THE PURCHASE WITHIN THREE (3) DAYS AFTER THE FIRST TENDER OF CONSIDERATION IS MADE BY SUCH PURCHASER TO THE ISSUER. AN AGENT OF THE ISSUER, OR AN ESCROW AGENT OR WITHIN THREE DAYS AFTER THE AVAILABILITY OF THAT PRIVILEGE IS COMMUNICATED TO SUCH PURCHASER, WHICHEVER OCCURS LATER.

New Hampshire

The following legend should be placed in the Confidential Memorandum.

NEW HAMPSHIRE RESIDENTS:

NEITHER THE FACT THAT A REGISTRATION STATEMENT OR AN APPLICATION FOR A LICENSE HAS BEEN FILED WITH THE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE NOR THE FACT THAT A SECURITY IS EFFECTIVELY REGISTERED OR A PERSON IS LICENSED IN THE STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE CONSTITUTES A FINDING BY THE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF SECURITIES REGULATION THAT ANY DOCUMENT FILED UNDER RSA 421-b IS TRUE, COMPLETE AND NOT MISLEADING. NEITHER ANY SUCH FACT NOR THE FACT THAT AN EXEMPTION OR EXCEPTION IS AVAILABLE FOR A SECURITY OR A TRANSACTION MEANS THAT THE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF SECURITIES REGULATION HAS PASSED IN ANY WAY UPON THE MERITS OR QUALIFICATIONS OF, OR RECOMMENDED, OR GIVEN APPROVAL TO, ANY PERSON, SECURITY, OR TRANSACTION. IT IS UNLAWFUL TO MAKE OR CAUSE TO BE MADE, TO ANY PROSPECTIVE PURCHASER, CUSTOMER OR CLIENT ANY REPRESENTATION INCONSISTENT WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THIS PARAGRAPH.

New York

The Attorney General's office reviews only offerings involving interests in real estate, and in that connection, requires the following.

(1) A legend at the beginning of the Confidential Memorandum as follows:

THIS PRIVATE PLACEMENT MEMORANDUM HAS NOT BEEN REVIEWED BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL PRIOR TO ITS ISSUANCE AND USE. THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK HAS NOT PASSED ON OR ENDORSED THE MERITS OF THIS OFFERING. ANY REPRESENTATION TO THE CONTRARY IS UNLAWFUL.

THIS PRIVATE OFFERING MEMORANDUM DOES NOT CONTAIN AN UNTRUE STATEMENT OF A MATERIAL FACT OR OMIT TO STATE A MATERIAL FACT NECESSARY TO MAKE THE STATEMENTS MADE IN LIGHT OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH THEY WERE MADE, NOT MISLEADING. IT CONTAINS A FAIR SUMMARY OF THE MATERIAL TERMS AND DOCUMENTS PURPORTED TO BE SUMMARIZED HEREIN.

(2) At the beginning of the Confidential Memorandum and in the Use of Proceeds section, a representation must be made that the proceeds of the offering will be received and held in trust for the benefit of the investors and will be retained in trust after closing to be used only for the purposes set forth in the Use of Proceeds section. In addition, state the name and location of the bank(s) where the proceeds will be deposited in trust.

(3) Purchasers who are offered the securities within or from the State of New York will be required to sign and submit the following statement before monies are received from them.

I UNDERSTAND THAT THIS OFFERING OF INTERESTS HAS NOT BEEN REVIEWED BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK BECAUSE OF THE OFFEROR'S REPRESENTATION THAT THIS IS INTENDED TO BE A NON-PUBLIC OFFERING PURSUANT TO SEC REGULATION D, AND THAT IF ALL OF THE CONDITIONS AND LIMITATIONS OF SEC REGULATION D ARE NOT COMPLIED WITH, THE OFFERING WILL BE RESUBMITTED TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR AMENDED EXEMPTION. I UNDERSTAND THAT ANY OFFERING LITERATURE USED IN CONNECTION WITH THIS OFFERING HAS NOT BEEN PRE-FILED WITH THE ATTORNEY GENERAL AND HAS NOT BEEN REVIEWED BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL. THIS INTEREST IS BEING PURCHASED FOR MY OWN ACCOUNT FOR INVESTMENT, AND NOT FOR DISTRIBUTION OR RESALE TO OTHERS. I AGREE THAT I WILL NOT SELL OR OTHERWISE TRANSFER THESE SECURITIES UNLESS THEY ARE REGISTERED UNDER THE FEDERAL SECURITIES ACT OF 1933 OR UNLESS AN EXEMPTION FROM SUCH REGISTRATION IS AVAILABLE. I REPRESENT THAT I HAVE ADEQUATE MEANS OF PROVIDING FOR MY CURRENT NEEDS AND POSSIBLE PERSONAL CONTINGENCIES, AND THAT I HAVE NO NEED FOR LIQUIDITY OF THIS INVESTMENT.

The above statement may be placed in the subscription agreement.

Oregon

The following legend should appear in the Confidential Memorandum.

FOR OREGON RESIDENTS:

THE SECURITIES OFFERED HAVE BEEN REGISTERED WITH THE CORPORATION COMMISSIONER OF THE STATE OF OREGON UNDER PROVISIONS OF OAR 441-65-060 THROUGH 441-65-240. THE INVESTOR IS ADVISED THAT THE COMMISSIONER HAS MADE ONLY A CURSORY REVIEW OF THE REGISTRATION STATEMENT AND HAS NOT REVIEWED THIS DOCUMENT SINCE THE DOCUMENT IS NOT REQUIRED TO BE FILED WITH THE COMMISSIONER. THE INVESTOR MUST RELY ON THE INVESTOR'S OWN EXAMINATION OF THE COMPANY CREATING THE SECURITIES, AND THE TERMS OF THE OFFERING INCLUDING THE MERITS AND RISKS INVOLVED IN MAKING AN INVESTMENT DECISION ON THESE SECURITIES.

Pennsylvania

Investors are entitled to a two-day right of rescission for transactions which are exempt from registration under § 203(d) of the Pennsylvania Securities Act. Thus, the following legend should appear in the Confidential Memorandum.

FOR PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENTS:

UNDER PROVISIONS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA SECURITIES ACT OF 1972, EACH PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENT SHALL HAVE THE RIGHT TO WITHDRAW HIS ACCEPTANCE WITHOUT INCURRING ANY LIABILITY TO THE SELLER, UNDERWRITER (IF ANY) OR ANY PERSON, WITHIN TWO (2) BUSINESS DAYS FROM THE DATE OF RECEIPT BY THE ISSUER OF HIS WRITTEN BINDING CONTRACT OF PURCHASE OR IN THE CASE OF A TRANSACTION IN WHICH THERE IS NO WRITTEN BINDING CONTRACT OF PURCHASE, WITHIN TWO BUSINESS DAYS AFTER HE MAKES THE INITIAL PAYMENT FOR THE SECURITIES BEING OFFERED.

In addition, each Pennsylvania investor is required to undertake to hold their investment for a twelve-month period. Accordingly, the following legend should appear in the Subscription Agreement:

FOR PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENTS:

EACH PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENT WHO SUBSCRIBES FOR THE SECURITIES BEING OFFERED HEREBY AGREES NOT TO SELL THESE SECURITIES FOR A PERIOD OF TWELVE MONTHS AFTER THE DATE OF PURCHASE.

UNDER PROVISION OF THE PENNSYLVANIA SECURITIES ACT OF 1972 (THE 1972 ACT), EACH PENNSYLVANIA RESIDENT SHALL HAVE THE RIGHT TO WITHDRAW HIS ACCEPTANCE WITHOUT INCURRING ANY LIABILITY TO THE SELLER, UNDERWRITER (IF ANY) OR ANY OTHER PERSON, WITHIN TWO BUSINESS DAYS FROM THE DATE OF RECEIPT BY THE ISSUER OF HIS WRITTEN BINDING CONTRACT OF PURCHASE OR IN THE CASE OF A TRANSACTION IN WHICH THERE IS NO WRITTEN BINDING CONTRACT OF PURCHASE, WITHIN TWO BUSINESS DAYS AFTER HE MAKES THE INITIAL PAYMENT FOR THE SECURITIES BEING OFFERED. TO ACCOMPLISH THIS WITHDRAWAL, A SUBSCRIBER NEED ONLY SEND A LETTER OR TELEGRAM TO THE SELLING AGENT AT THE ADDRESS SET FORTH IN THE TEXT OF THIS MEMORANDUM, INDICATING HIS OR HER INTENTION TO WITHDRAW. SUCH AFOREMENTIONED SECOND BUSINESS DAY. IT IS PRUDENT TO SEND SUCH LETTER BY CERTIFIED MAIL, RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED, TO ENSURE THAT IT IS RECEIVED AND ALSO TO EVIDENCE THE TIME WHEN IT WAS MAILED. IF THE REQUEST IS MADE ORALLY (IN PERSON OR BY TELEPHONE, TO THE SELLING AGENT AT THE NUMBER LISTED IN THE TEXT OF THE MEMORANDUM), A WRITTEN CONFIRMATION THAT THE REQUEST HAS BEEN RECEIVED SHOULD BE REQUESTED.

Solicitations of Interest. As discussed at the outset of this chapter,ⁿ¹⁴ several states permit a "testing the waters" procedure in accordance with the NASAA Proposed Statement of Policy on Solicitation of Interest (Test the Waters).ⁿ¹⁵ That process includes a requirement for a legend to appear on or be provided with any published notice or materials used in the solicitation. The prescribed legend is as follows:

1. NO MONEY OR OTHER CONSIDERATION IS BEING SOLICITED AND NONE WILL BE ACCEPTED;
2. NO SALES OF THE SECURITIES WILL BE MADE OR COMMITMENT TO PURCHASE ACCEPTED UNTIL DELIVERY OF AN OFFERING CIRCULAR THAT INCLUDES COMPLETE INFORMATION ABOUT THE ISSUER AND THE OFFERING;
3. THIS OFFER IS BEING MADE PURSUANT TO AN EXEMPTION FROM REGISTRATION UNDER FEDERAL AND STATE SECURITIES LAWS. NO SALE MAY BE MADE UNTIL THE OFFERING STATEMENT IS QUALIFIED BY THE SEC AND IS REGISTERED IN THIS STATE.ⁿ¹⁵

The legend requirement for solicitations of interest is part of the general requirements for content of any published note or broadcast script.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(a).

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 8-1111(1).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(a).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 59.035(2).

(n2)Footnote 2.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 8-1111(9).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(h).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 59.035(12).

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 4204a(a)(9).

(n3)Footnote 3. For discussion of the isolated transaction exemption, see § 8.06[6][b] supra.

(n4)Footnote 4.

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(l).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17.

(n5)Footnote 5.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 8-1111(9).

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 4204a(a)(9).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 59.035(12).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Mich. Com. Laws § 451.802(21)(d). Combination of exemptions to include a transaction exempt under the Michigan ULOE is not permitted.

(n8)Footnote 8. See § 8.06[7], supra.

(n9)Footnote 9.

Indiana: See, e.g., Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 8.02, supra.

(n11)Footnote 11.

Virginia: See, e.g. Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-70.

(n12)Footnote 12. A NASAA legend requirement likewise applies for prospectuses used in the offer and sale of securities subject to registration under the federal Securities Act of 1933 and the blue sky law of one or more state in which the securities will be offered and sold. For these registered distribution settings the familiar appearing in bold-face capital letters is:

THESE SECURITIES HAVE NOT BEEN APPROVED OR DISAPPROVED BY THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION OR ANY STATE SECURITIES COMMISSION NOR HAS THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION OR ANY STATE SECURITIES COMMISSION PASSED UPON THE ACCURACY OR ADEQUACY OF THIS PROSPECTUS. ANY REPRESENTATION TO THE CONTRARY IS A CRIMINAL OFFENSE.

This particular language coordinates with an almost identical legend requirement specified by the SEC in Item 501(c)(5) of Regulation SK under the Securities Act of 1933 as applicable to federal registration statements, the only difference being the added reference to state securities commissions.

(n13)Footnote 13. NASAA Reports (CCH) P 1352 at 851.

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 8.02, supra.

(n15)Footnote 15. CCH NASAA Guide P 4001, at 2543. Individual states may expand the required legend. Virginia, for example, adds a fourth paragraph as follows:

REGISTRATION OF THE SECURITIES FOR SALE IN THIS STATE IS DEPENDENT ON COMPLIANCE WITH THE SECURITIES LAWS OF VIRGINIA. THEREFORE, THERE CAN BE NO ASSURANCE THAT THE SECURITIES WILL BE REGISTERED FOR SALE IN VIRGINIA.

See Va. Admin. Code § 5-40-70 C. 1(e).

73 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 8 Exempt Issuer Transactions

1-8 Blue Sky Regulation § 8.11

§ 8.11 2002 Uniform Securities Act

As referenced throughout this chapter, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws has adopted the 2002 Act to modernize the prior 1956 and 1985 versions of the Uniform Act to reflect federal preemption under NSMIA, as well as significant changes in the technology of securities trading and regulation and the increasingly interstate and international aspects of securities transactions.ⁿ¹ The 2002 Uniform Act does not replace any version of the Uniform Act already in place in any state, but will increasingly be considered by state legislatures for adoption to replace existing blue sky laws. References to the issuer exemption provisions in section 202 of the 2002 Uniform Act are particularly useful because they are an amalgam of the common transaction exemptions in place, in their current forms, and reflecting their current scope. Specific issuer exemptions in the 2002 Act are also broadened, and whether or not the Act is ever widely adopted en toto, the particular changes to exemptions will guide ad hoc initiatives to modernize existing state provisions.

Perhaps most significantly, in section 202(13) of the 2002 Uniform Act the transaction exemption for offers or sales to institutional investors now incorporates a definition of institutional investor that is based on the federal definition contained in Rule 501(a) of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, but with $10 million rather than $5 million thresholds for employee pension, profit-sharing plans, other plans, trusts, and other organizations.ⁿ² Likewise, the definition of institutional investor under the Act includes any other person (other than an individual) with total assets in excess of $10 million that is not organized for the specific purpose of evading the Act.ⁿ³ The definition of institutional investor also is broadened to reach "qualified institutional buyers" under Rule 144A of the Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ⁴ and "major U.S. Institutional Investors" as defined in Rule 15a-6(b)(4)(i) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ⁵ These additions modernize state institutional investor exemptions by aligning them with federal exemptions that are particularly significant for international capital markets and cross border capital formation.

As discussed in detail earlier,ⁿ⁶ the basic limited offering exemption in the 2002 Uniform Act was broadened to permit sales to 25 persons in addition to those exempted by the institutional investor exemption. Here again, the new Uniform Act provision enhances the utility of a basic issuer exemption that is subject to considerable variation among the states. Because the emphasis today regarding state exemptions is on flexibility, the 2002 Uniform Act also assures that administrators have broad authority both to exempt other transactions, and to deny, suspend, condition or limit specific exemptions.ⁿ⁷

Federal preemption under NSMIA had a number of implications for blue sky transaction exemptions, and the 2002 Uniform Act harmonizes state exemption requirements with NSMIA preempted regulation. As a prime example, many states today retain an exemption for a transaction under an offer to existing security holders of the issuer that on its face includes an advance notice procedure and opportunity for the administrator to disallow the exemption in some circumstances. NSMIA made the securities involved in such transactions that are within the scope of the federal exemption in section 3(a)(9) of the Securities Act of 1933 "covered securities" for purposes of NSMIA preemption. Section 202(15) thus eliminates the provision for state administrative review, although antifraud enforcement authority is preserved as to all exempt transactions.

For practitioners the 2002 Uniform Act is an exceptional resource because its provisions, particularly its exemptions, fully reflect the status of dual federal-state securities regulation after NSMIA, and supply guidance in the application of current provisions in blue sky laws.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Prefatory Note, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act §§ 102(11)(F)-(K).

(n3)Footnote 3. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(11)(O).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(11)(M).

(n5)Footnote 5. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(11)(N).

(n6)Footnote 6. See § 8.06[5], supra.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unif. Sec. Act § 204.

74 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation 9.syn

§ 9.syn Synopsis to Chapter 9: Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

§ 9.01 Exempt Non-Issuer Transactions Generally

§ 9.02 "Non-Issuer" Status: Transactions by Affiliates and Others

[1] Affiliates and Control Persons

[2] Insiders

§ 9.03 Isolated Transactions

[1] The Meaning of "Transaction"

[2] Identifying "Isolated" Transactions

[3] Issuer "Benefit"

§ 9.04 The Manual Exemption

[1] Recognized Securities Manual

[2] Alternatives to "Manual" Qualification

§ 9.05 The Quality Exemption

[1] Fixed Income or Fixed Maturity Securities

[2] Previously Sold and Distributed Securities

[3] Related Securities Exemptions

§ 9.06 Unsolicited Brokerage Transactions

§ 9.07 Transactions by Fiduciaries and In Judicial Sales

§ 9.08 Pledge Transactions

§ 9.09 Outstanding Securities of Federal Reporting Issuers

§ 9.10 Other Non-Issuer Exemptions

[1] Transactions In Certain Foreign Securities

[2] Transactions By Federal Covered Investment Advisers

75 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.01

§ 9.01 Exempt Non-Issuer Transactions Generally

The registration and qualification provisions in Blue Sky laws are intended to afford investor protection in the context of a distribution of securities, that is, in the process by which a security is created and ends up in the hands of the investing public. The role of the states in that process is today focused on distributions of securities that are not "federal covered" securities as defined by the National Securities Market Improvements Act of 1996 (NSMIA), the impact of which, in all areas of state securities regulation, is discussed throughout this treatise. Many localized, intrastate or regional distributions nevertheless remain subject to state registration or qualification authority, and in Chapter 8 the array of issuer exemptions in Blue Sky laws designed to permit capital formation activities without the intervention of registration requirements is considered in depth. Issuer exemptions from registration and qualification requirements are premised upon the absence of any need for Blue Sky law protections in particular circumstances, or as necessary to eliminate unreasonable burdens on small business capital formation.

Registration and qualification provisions in Blue Sky laws are not limited in their application to offers and sales of securities that are undertaken by issuers. To the contrary, all Blue Sky laws make it unlawful for any person to offer or sell a security in the state unless:

- (1) the security is a federal covered security;
- (2) the security, transaction, or offer is exempted from registration; or
- (3) the security is registered.ⁿ¹

Offers and sales by issuers or non-issuers are treated no differently. In the absence of an available exemption, both are subject to registration and qualification requirements.

In many circumstances non-issuer transactions do not evidence characteristics of a distribution of securities. They are typically resales of securities acquired previously from an issuer, the sales of which are not undertaken systematically as part of a capital formation process. These are secondary market, or trading, transactions involving securities that are already issued and outstanding in investor hands. To be sure, in some circumstances sales of securities by a non-issuer may evidence all the characteristics of an issuer distribution as, for example, when the sale of a large amount of securities is undertaken by a controlling person of the issuer and involves a systematic process or series of transactions.

In these circumstances such "secondary distributions" produce the same concerns for investor protection as any issuer, or "primary" distribution. But for simple, occasional resale transactions by true owners of securities who have no special relationship to the issuer and who are not effectively acting on behalf of or for the benefit of the issuer in making a sale, there is no reason to apply registration and qualification requirements, or indeed, to mandate compliance with private offering or other particular exemptions typically relied on by issuers. The consequences of not having a simple non-issuer exemption are, however, significant given blue sky law provisions affecting the validity of contracts and establishing civil liabilities. For buyers and sellers in non-issuer transactions these are far more important practical considerations than whether registration provisions should or should not apply.ⁿ²

The Federal Securities Act of 1933 includes a broad exemption from registration under that Act for transactions by any person who is not "an issuer, underwriter or dealer."ⁿ³ However, the definition of "underwriter" in the federal act expressly includes controlling persons or affiliates of an issuer who purchase securities from an issuer with a view to distribution.ⁿ⁴ The presence of a statutory "underwriter" is critical to identifying a distribution of securities under the federal act, and thus controls the availability of the federal section 4(1) non-issuer exemption. The federal exemption is intended to exempt only "trading" transactions between individual investors with relation to securities already issued, and not to exempt distributions by issuers.ⁿ⁵ It does not protect persons who by their transactions are engaged in steps necessary to the distribution of securities.

State Blue Sky laws do not have a counterpart broad-form non-issuer exemption from registration or qualification provisions, and thus do not have any comparable focus on "underwriter" status for determining the availability of an exemption for non-issuer transactions. Instead, a series of particular non-issuer exemptions is included among the entire array of exempt transactions. In most cases the non-issuer transaction exemptions follow those established by the original Uniform Securities Act,ⁿ⁶ all of which have been carried into and augmented by the 2002 Uniform Act, reflecting the expansion of non-issuer exemptions that has evolved through the years since introduction of the original Uniform Act.ⁿ⁷ The common non-issuer Blue Sky exemptions are: (1) for "isolated" transactions; (2) for sales of securities that are outstanding and which meet certain quality or performance criteria; and (3) for sales of securities by non-issuers in unsolicited brokerage transactions. There is no general non-issuer transaction exemption in any version of the Uniform Act. However, a few states do provide a broad form non-issuer exemption. California, for example, exempts:

"Any offer or sale of a security by the bona fide owner thereof for his or her own account if the sale (1) is not accompanied by the publication of any advertisement and (2) is not effected by or through a broker-dealer in a public offering."ⁿ⁸

With these exemptions it is clear that, like section 4(1) of the federal act, the focus is on continuing transactions in securities that are already issued and outstanding. As discussed in more detail below, the array of specific non-issuer exemptions in Blue Sky laws is premised entirely on the absence of a distribution of securities, regardless of whatever specific criteria are attached to a particular exemption. In that connection the first, and most fundamental, consideration is that the seller of the securities must actually be a "non-issuer." The Uniform Securities Act defines a "non-issuer transaction" as meaning one "not directly or indirectly for the benefit of the issuer."ⁿ⁹ A majority of states have substantially adopted the Uniform Act definition of "non-issuer."ⁿ¹⁰ Experience with section 4(1) of the Securities Act of 1933, with its critical emphasis on the term "underwriter," however, teaches that "non-issuer" status for purposes of state securities law exemptions may not be an entirely simple notion. Looking to California again, for example, a non-issuer transaction means any transaction not directly or indirectly for the benefit of the issuer. However, the definition further provides: "A transaction is indirectly for the benefit of the issuer if any portion of the purchase price of any securities involved in the transaction will be received indirectly by the issuer."ⁿ¹¹

Other state provisions expand the "non-issuer" transaction definition to encompass those directly or indirectly for the benefit of an affiliate of the issuer as well as the issuer itself. "Affiliate" in this context means any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the issuer.ⁿ¹²

Indirect benefit to an issuer is not limited to monetary benefit. Any meaningful "value" to the issuer in a transaction or series of transactions is sufficient to create a distribution of securities that is subject to registration or qualification provisions of Blue Sky laws.ⁿ¹³ More importantly here, finding a distribution for the "benefit" of the issuer means that secondary or non-issuer exemptions will not be available to those persons who resell the securities. In Capital General Corp. v. Utah Securities Division,ⁿ¹⁴ the court affirmed the Utah state securities advisory board's suspension of all secondary trading exemptions in shares of stock that had been distributed as a "good faith gift" by a firm to hundreds of its clients, business associates and other contacts. The firm claimed that the distribution was done to create and maintain goodwill, and that it received no monetary or other direct financial consideration from those receiving the stock. Finding that the distribution was "for value" because it transformed the corporation into a publicly held company, the securities advisory board concluded that the firm should have registered the stock under the Utah Blue Sky law. Affirming that determination, the court of appeals concluded that the economic benefits to the company rendered the disposition "for value," even though those benefits flowed indirectly from the marketplace rather than directly from the transferees. In these circumstances, said the court, the securities advisory board acted properly and in accordance with its authority to suspend secondary trading exemptions as being consistent with the power to remedy violations of the registration provisions in the distribution.ⁿ¹⁵

Where a distribution of securities is in fact taking place the persons who resell the securities in ostensible secondary or trading transactions are in reality participants with the issuer in the distribution. Thus, those persons do not qualify as "non-issuers" and may not claim the benefit of non-issuer exemptions in Blue Sky laws. In a similar fashion, transactions by officers, directors, promoters and other insiders of an issuer may benefit the issuer, and may not qualify as non-issuer transactions. In these circumstances the insiders may be the functional equivalent of statutory underwriters as used in the federal regulatory scheme, and their control or affiliate relationship with the issuer coupled with the size and other characteristics of a particular transaction or series of transactions may produce the same concerns for investor protection as with the issuer itself undertaking the distribution.

The various non-issuer exemptions provided in Blue Sky laws are available only for non-issuer transactions. An issuer selling securities may not rely on any non-issuer exemption, although, as explored in Chapter 8, some states have established one or more issuer exemptions in applicable in similar circumstances as, for example, an isolated issuer transaction. On the other hand, although issuers may not rely on non-issuer exemptions, non-issuers may take advantage of an issuer exemption to the extent that it has general application. Section 202(13) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, for example, is a transaction exemption for any offer or sale to an institutional investor, a federal covered investment adviser, or to any other person exempted by rule.ⁿ¹⁶ This is a common provision in Blue Sky laws, and it is available to issuers and non-issuers alike.

The scope and application of non-issuer exemptions in Blue Sky laws was impacted by NSMIA and the preemption of state securities regulatory authority where federal "covered" securities are involved.ⁿ¹⁷ For example, NSMIA brought non-issuer transactions made in reliance upon section 4(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 ("transactions by persons other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer") within the definition of federal covered securities if the issuer is a reporting public company under sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ¹⁸ Although states had widely adopted non-issuer transaction exemptions to accommodate secondary trading in outstanding securities of 1934 Act reporting companies, the exemptions included a minimum period during which the securities had been issued and outstanding, and also during which issuer had been subject to and was in compliance with the Exchange Act reporting requirements.ⁿ¹⁹ With NSMIA these kinds of restrictions were preempted because the federal definition of "covered security" to include non-issuer transactions in outstanding securities of a reporting company contains no such waiting period or compliance limitation. Thus, if the issuer of the security is a reporting company under sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the federal non-issuer exemption in section 4(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 applies, the transaction is preempted from state Blue Sky law provisions. The preemption extends only to non-issuer transactions in securities of issuers that are reporting companies. In the universe of non-issuer transactions in outstanding securities there continue to be circumstances in which the justification for an exemption based upon compliance with federal securities law reporting mechanisms is presented despite an ineligible issuer. Thus in section 202(4) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act a specific non-issuer transaction exemption is included for:

"a nonissuer transaction by or through a broker-dealer registered or exempt from registration under this [Act] in an outstanding security if the guarantor of the security files reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934."²⁰

As discussed in more detail throughout this chapter, a number of other nonissuer transaction exemptions focused specifically on trading in outstanding securities remain, and are meaningful in, state Blue Sky laws. These exemptions do not key on an issuer's compliance with federal reporting requirements, and thus provide added flexibility to non-issuers and intermediaries working with them.

The harmonizing approach is taken as well to non-issuer "brokerage" transactions. Under NSMIA transactions qualifying for exemption from federal registration by section 4(4) of the Securities Act of 1933,²¹ which exempts unsolicited brokerage transactions executed on an agency basis, are also now federal covered securities. Prior to NSMIA all states, and the Uniform Act, provided an exemption for unsolicited nonissuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer.²² With qualifying agency transactions now defined as federal covered securities under NSMIA, state brokerage transaction exemptions now address non-agency transactions by broker-dealers that are not within the scope of federal Securities Act section 4(4).

After NSMIA all states expressly exclude federal covered securities from Blue Sky registration or qualification requirements, and other regulatory requirements that would directly or indirectly subject such securities to prohibitions, limitations or conditions regarding the use of certain offering documents and other disclosure documents. Nevertheless, non-issuer transaction exemptions remain important for secondary trading and transactions in the universe of settings and situations that remain within the ambit of state Blue Sky registration or qualification provisions. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act presents the non-issuer and resale transaction exemptions that continue as central elements of state securities laws. They are:

(1) Isolated non-issuer transactions;²³

(2) Non-issuer transactions in certain securities of a class that has been outstanding in the hands of the public for at least 90 days, and which satisfies certain specific conditions regarding the business and business history of the issuer; when the sale price is reasonably related to the current market price; the security does not constitute part of an unsold allotment; and certain company and financial information is published in a nationally recognized securities manual or its electronic equivalent; or the issuer has a class of securities listed on a national securities exchange or the Nasdaq Stock Market and meets certain business history and asset requirements;²⁴

(3) Non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer in a security of a foreign issuer that is a margin security under regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, or non-issuer transactions in certain foreign issuer securities that are traded on designated securities exchanges and are subject to certain reporting requirements;²⁵

(4) Non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer in an outstanding security if the guarantor of the securities files reports with the SEC under the reporting requirements of sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;²⁶

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.01

(5) Non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer in a security that meets certain rating criteria, or has a fixed maturity, interest or dividend and which meets certain business criteria;n27

(6) Non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer effecting an unsolicited order or offer to purchase;n28

(7) Non-issuer transactions by a bona fide pledgee without any purpose of evading the Blue Sky law;n29 and

(8) Non-issuer transactions by a federal covered investment adviser with investments under management in excess of $100,000,000 acting in the exercise of discretionary authority in a signed record for the account of others.n30

The principal non-issuer transaction or resale exemptions are discussed further below. As a preliminary consideration, however, the essential "non-issuer" premise for the exemptions is examined in greater detail.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. § 301.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Watson v. Schaffner, 893 F.2d 1336 (6th Cir. 1990) , in which the buyer alleged that a stock purchase agreement was void and unenforceable because the Kentucky Blue Sky Law non-issuer transaction exemption did not apply. The buyer was not successful, as the court found that the sale would qualify as an exempt non-issuer transaction in the absence of evidence of sufficient issuer benefit in the transaction. However, the Kentucky law, like all state blue sky laws, provides that a contract made in violation of the blue sky law is unenforceable. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 509(k).

The availability of a non-issuer transaction exemption may also impact licensing requirements for intermediaries; see, e.g., State v. Weissner, 161 N.W.2d 360, 1968 N.D. LEXIS 84 (N.D. 1968) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Securities Act of 1933, section 4(1), 15 U.S.C. § 77d(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. Section 2(a)(11) of the federal act, 15 U.S.C. § 77b(a)(11), provides:

"The term 'underwriter' means any person who has purchased from an issuer with a view to, or offers or sells for an issuer in connection with, the distribution of any security, or participates or has a direct or indirect participation in any such undertaking, or participates or has a participation in the direct or indirect underwriting of any such undertaking... As used in this paragraph the term 'issuer' shall include, in addition to an issuer, any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by the issuer, or any person under direct or indirect common control with the issuer.

(n5)Footnote 5. SEC v. Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, Inc., 120 F.2d 738 (2d Cir. 1941) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(1)-(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(1)-(8).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cal. Corp. Code § 25104(a).

These exemptions are typically limited to transactions not effected through a broker-dealer. See, e.g., People v. Eddy, 85 N.W. 2d (Mich. 1957); Parrish v. Ben-Jon Oil Co., 1983 OK CIV APP 39, 666 P.2d 1308 (Okla. 1983) ; see also Ill. Comp. Stat., Ch. 815 §5/4(A); 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-203(a), which covers sales not directly or indirectly for the benefit of an affiliate of an issuer. However, as discussed further below, the broker-dealer limitation is more commonly stated in terms of solicited transactions rather than non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer on an unsolicited order or offer to purchase.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unif. Sec. Act § 401(h); 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102 (18).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g.,

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(1).

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. § 11-101(j).

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. L. Ann. Chap. 110A, § 401(g).

(n11)Footnote 11. Cal. Corp. Code § 25011.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g.,

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.14(14).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. § 421-B:2(XIV).

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. § 49:3-49(o) ("Non-issuer" means secondary trading not involving the issuer of the securities nor any person in a control relationship with the issuer).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. § 58-13B-2(p).

Virginia: Va. Code. § 13.1-501

(n13)Footnote 13. "Value" determinations for purposes of applying registration or qualification requirements to transfers of securities; that is, what constitutes an "offer" or sale" of securities under Blue Sky laws generally, are considered in depth in Chapter 3, supra . Traditional value assessments involved in identifying a sale for purposes of state securities law protections are given a different meaning through emphasis placed on value obtained by an issuer in a distribution process rather than a transaction supported by particular consideration.

(n14)Footnote 14. 1989 Utah App. LEXIS 118, 777 P.2d 494 (Utah App. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See also Technomedical Labs, Inc. v. Utah Securities Division, 1987 Utah App. LEXIS 562, 744 P.2d 320 (Utah App. 1987) The approaches to "value" by these Utah courts is consistent with federal case authority examining the economic consequences to corporate "spin-off" transactions, see SEC v. Datronics Engineers, Inc., 490 F.2d 250 (4th Cir. 1973) ; SEC v. Harwyn Industrial Corp., 326 F.Supp. 943 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(13).

(n17)Footnote 17. NSMIA, the National Securities Markets Improvements Act, Pub. L. No. 104-290, 110 Stat.

3416 (1996), effective October 11, 1996, amended § 18 of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77r, to preempt most state authority to regulate the distribution of federal covered securities through registration or qualification requirements. NSMIA and its impact are discussed throughout this treatise. "Covered securities" under NSMIA include: (1) securities listed or authorized to be listed on a qualifying national securities exchange or the Nasdaq Stock market, or which are equal or senior to such securities; (2) securities issued by an investment company that is registered or has filed a registration statement under the Investment Company Act of 1940; (3) securities sold to "qualified purchasers" as that term may be defined by the SEC; and (4) securities sold in transactions exempt from federal registration under certain provisions of the federal securities laws and rules thereunder, most particularly securities offered and sold in compliance with Rule 506 of SEC Regulation D under the Act.

(n18)Footnote 18. To become subject to Exchange Act reporting requirements an issuer must have an outstanding class of securities registered under section 12 of the Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1, thus meeting certain criteria. Exchange Act reporting involves the filing and dissemination of annual, quarterly and current reports by the issuer.

(n19)Footnote 19. Section 402(2) of the Revised Uniform Securities Act is representative of such provisions, in providing an exemption for:

"a nonissuer transaction in an outstanding security if the issuer has a class of securities subject to registration under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and has been subject to the reporting requirements of Sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 for not less than 90 days next preceding the transaction; or has filed and maintained with the [Administrator] for not less than 90 days next preceding the transaction information, in such form as the [Administrator] by rule specifies, substantially comparable to the information the issuer would be required to file under Section 12(b) or 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act were the issuer to have a class of its securities registered under Section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and paid a fee with the filing of [$150]" Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(2).

Some states also imposed a "waiting period," requiring that the securities be issued and outstanding in the hands of the public for 90 days prior to the transaction. Arizona, Florida, Maine, North Dakota and Rhode Island, for example, imposed such restrictions.

(n20)Footnote 20. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(4) (Emphasis added).

(n21)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § d(4).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(3). The Uniform Act exemption, like the one adopted in many states, empowered the administrator to impose upon the broker-dealer a written customer acknowledgment and record-keeping requirement.

(n23)Footnote 23. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(1).

(n24)Footnote 24. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act. § 202(2).

(n25)Footnote 25. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act §§ 202(3), 292(23).

(n26)Footnote 26. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(4).

(n27)Footnote 27. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(5).

(n28)Footnote 28. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(6).

(n29)Footnote 29. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(7).

(n30)Footnote 30. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(8).

76 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.02

§ 9.02 "Non-Issuer" Status: Transactions by Affiliates and Others

As noted earlier, non-issuer transaction exemptions are intended for bona fide non-issuer owners of the securities, and not to permit transactions that benefit the issuer by constituting or facilitating a distribution of its securities. If the issuer is in fact making a distribution through ostensible "secondary" transactions by individuals, non-issuer exemptions should not be available.ⁿ¹ Issuer "gifts" and "spin-off" transactions referenced in section 9.01 above illustrate the point where the intent of the issuer is in fact to distribute its securities into the hands of the investing public without complying with registration requirements. In other situations the question whether the issuer is in fact engaged in a distribution in connection with transactions by others is often presented when the person engaging in a transaction has a close relationship to the issuer and the transaction involves a significant amount of securities. Transactions by controlling persons and affiliates of the issuer, as well as the notion of "insider" as it relates to non-issuer exemptions are examined below as a prelude to closer consideration of particular non-issuer exemptions and applications. In all of this, however, it is essential to bear in mind that the application of Blue Sky law registration and qualification provisions to non-issuer transactions has historically been described as one of the most ambiguous aspects of state securities regulation.ⁿ²

[1] Affiliates and Control Persons When a non-issuer seller is in a close relationship to the issuer the circumstances of the sale may manifest the same characteristics and produce the same concerns as if the issuer itself engaged in the sale. This is the premise underlying application of registration and qualification provisions to "secondary" distributions of securities that is most often applied to controlling persons of an issuer. Such persons may be deemed to be in control of the issuer simply by reason of the size of the seller's holdings. A major shareholder might also be an officer or director of the issuer, and even absent large share holdings an executive officer or director is typically deemed to be a "controlling person." At least one state statutorily prohibits any controlling persons from relying on non-issuer exemptions.ⁿ³ However, a sale by a controlling person does not automatically equate with one by the issuer. Circumstances may well support a conclusion that a sale should qualify as a non-issuer isolated transaction.ⁿ⁴

"Affiliate" is a broader term applied in some states and which is derived from SEC Rule 405 under the Securities Act of 1933. It includes a person controlling, controlled by or under common control with the issuer.ⁿ⁵ Affiliate relationships arise in parent-subsidiary and other corporate situations, and also involve the basic control relationship that is central to determining non-issuer status for purposes of blue sky law exemptions. Some states expressly deny non-issuer exemptions to affiliates.ⁿ⁶

The notion of "controlling person" for determining non-issuer status is not as straightforward as it may seem. For example, is a sole stockholder selling 100% of the shares of a corporation a controlling person and thus not entitled to rely on a non-issuer exemption to effect the transaction? A California court held that the sale of a business and all outstanding shares by the sole shareholder was not for the benefit of the issuer and was therefore exempt from registration.ⁿ⁷ The sale of the stock, said the court, was only incidental to the sale of the business.ⁿ⁸ On the other hand, the Eighth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, applying the Arkansas securities law, opined that an exemption for isolated non-issuer transactions is not intended to apply to persons holding 100% of the outstanding stock of the issuing corporation who sells those shares.ⁿ⁹ The Court relied on legislative history of the federal securities laws to conclude that the sale of stock by holders who are in control of the issuer should be treated no differently than if the original issuer was seeking to dispose of the shares. In these circumstances, said the Court:

"[t]o hold that a sale of 100% of the stock of a corporation by its parent to another is exempt from registration as an "isolated, non-issuer transaction" would, we think, be completely contrary to the remedial purposes of the [Arkansas] Act. The General Assembly has adopted the doctrine of caveat venditor for sellers of securities, and it was not the intent of the Act to allow sophisticated sellers of securities to unfairly benefit from such sales without fully complying with the Act's requirements."ⁿ¹⁰

Suffice it to say that there is a presumption that significant sales of securities by controlling persons or affiliates of the issuer will be deemed the equivalent of an issuer transaction, and thus outside the ambit of non-issuer exemptions. The "control" determination itself is more problematic. Several states have deemed persons owning as little as ten percent of any class of shares of the issuer to be in control as the issuer.ⁿ¹¹ In some other states the percentage owned can rise as high as twenty-five percent before a presumption of control arises.ⁿ¹² But the most common approach is that guided by SEC Rule 405 under the Securities Act of 1933, which looks to all factors to determine whether there is control in fact.ⁿ¹³

Federal courts have refused to limit how far the concept of control might extend, and have left the door open to go beyond substantial shareholders.ⁿ¹⁴ As a result, whenever the issuer is subject to the "management and policies" of a given person or group of persons a control relationship exists. The concept can extend to directors, officers, managers, and beyond.ⁿ¹⁵

Of the states adopting the Uniform Act isolated transaction exemption,ⁿ¹⁶ a few exclude or limit the availability of the exemption as to controlling persons. Massachusetts allows controlling persons to take advantage of the exemption within well defined limits.ⁿ¹⁷ The Tennessee exemption, however, goes further than the Uniform Act exemption by excluding underwriters as well as an issuer's affiliates, defined in the Tennessee Blue Sky law to include controlling persons.ⁿ¹⁸

The most complex regulation dealing with controlling persons and the isolated transaction exemption is in effect in Wisconsin.ⁿ¹⁹ If a controlling person seeks to use the exemption, the transaction must be in accordance with the brokers transaction provisions of Section 4(4) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ²⁰ and Rule 144 thereunder. This section of the federal law provides a registration exemption for "brokers' transactions executed on customers orders on any exchange or in the over-the-counter market but not solicitation of such orders."ⁿ²¹ In the alternative, isolated transactions by controlling persons, to be eligible for the Wisconsin exemption, must not be made through a broker-dealer and the total sales during the prior twelve months must not exceed one percent of the outstanding shares or units of the class sold.ⁿ²² Other regulatory provisions apply if the transaction is made by one who is not a controlling person.ⁿ²³

The statutory exemption in many non-Uniform Act states places particular emphasis in denying the non-issuer transactional exemption to underwriters.ⁿ²⁴ A few states also make dealers owning the securities ineligible for the exemption, although the exemption is available when the securities are sold by a dealer for a bona fide owner.ⁿ²⁵

Precluding availability of the isolated transaction exemption to underwriters and, in some circumstances dealers, is understood simply by the fact that an underwriter is presumed to be engaged in a distribution on behalf an issuer. Dealers selling for their own account are viewed in a similar light depending upon the circumstances of the dealer's original acquisition of the securities. With these intermediaries as seller the essential question is always whether distribution of the securities is in fact occurring. Intermediaries are generally not presumed to be bona fide owners/holders of securities, and either act for or with an issuer in making transactions, or themselves functionally become issuers in making resales. Their conduct is well outside the intended ambit of isolated sales exemptions in blue sky laws.

[2] Insiders In the application of non-issuer transaction exemptions one's status as an "insider" is sometimes addressed in the same context as controlling persons and affiliates. As a practical matter the terms are equivalent, but "insider" status may also extend to promoters who resell securities within a relatively short period of time following the organization of a company. Indeed some states specifically include a definition of "insider" as:

Every controlling person of another, including every officer, director, partner or trustee, or individual occupying similar status or performing similar functions, and every promoter if the organization took place within three years from date of application.ⁿ²⁶

The presumption involved in sales by promoters is the same as for controlling persons and affiliates. Simply by reason of the seller's close association with the issuer, the transaction has the same characteristics as if the issuer itself were distributing securities. With promoters the concern is amplified by the presumed intent of the promoter to redistribute shares acquired in the organization of the issuer that is evidenced by the timing of the sale in relation to the organization of the issuer. In these circumstances it is also much easier to find that transactions by insiders confer some meaningful benefit on the issuer, thus converting them into issuer transactions for purposes of precluding application of a non-issuer exemption. On the other hand, particular circumstances may lead to a different conclusion, such that a non-issuer transaction exemption would legitimately cover the sale of securities by a promoter who is not a controlling person at the time of the transaction. The key consideration is whether the "insider" acquired and held the securities for investment, and is thus a bona fide owner. Non-issuer status for purposes of transaction exemptions is reserved for persons who are not presumed to be engaged in a distribution as if an issuer.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Hild v. Woodcrest Ass'n, 59 Ohio Misc. 13, 391 N.E.2d 1047, 1977 Ohio Misc. LEXIS 121 (Montgomery Co. Common Pleas, 1977) (Control person who purchased, and several weeks later sold, securities to meet minimum requirement for the release of funds held in escrow, held to have purchased for the benefit of the issuer in order to permit the issuer's distribution to be completed rather than as a bona fide owner of a security held for investment purposes).

(n2)Footnote 2. "In many statutes it is difficult or impossible to say with any certainty when registration is required in such a case [secondary distributions or other non-issuer transactions]; who must register; how many units of the security should be registered; who may sell once a registration becomes effective; and, as a result, who is civilly liable and when a contract to sell is enforceable." 1 Loss "Securities Regulation," 62 (2d ed. 1961, Supp. 1969).

(n3)Footnote 3.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 49:3-49(o). The statute, however, does not define "control" or "controlling persons."

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fox v. Ehrmantraut, 28 Cal. 3d 127, 167 Cal. Rptr. 595, 615 P.2d 1383 (Cal. Sup. Ct. 1980)

; Cain v. Solomon, 213 So.2d 35 (Fla. App. 1968) . In both of these cases the fact that sellers had a control relationship with the issuer did not preclude reliance on non-issuer transaction exemptions.

(n5)Footnote 5. 17 C.F.R. § 230.405. Under Rule 405 the focus is on control in fact rather than specific indicia. Rule 405 provides:

"The term 'control' (including the terms 'controlling,' 'controlled by,' and, 'under common control with') means the possession, direct or indirect, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of a person, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract or otherwise."

(n6)Footnote 6.

New Hampshire: See, e.g., N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:2(XIV); Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.14(14). However, Minnesota provides an exemption for offers or sales by the issuer's affiliate if a registration statement is in effect with respect to securities of the same class of the issuer and the offer or sale is approved by rule or order of the Commissioner; See Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(o).

Another state exempts transactions by an affiliate (defined to include a controlling person) not acting as an underwriter, provided the securities are sold through a broker-dealer in "brokers' transactions" as defined by Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 144 under the Securities Act of 1933, see Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(5); § 48-2-102(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. Fox v. Ehrmantraut, 28 Cal. 3d 127, 167 Cal. Rptr. 595, 615 P.2d 1383 (Cal. Sup. Ct. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See also White v. Solomon, 105 N.M. 366, 732 P.2d 1389 , Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,494 (N.M. App. 1986) (Sale of all the stock of a company by its four shareholders to three individual purchasers qualified for the isolated transaction exemption).

(n9)Footnote 9. Cole v. PPG Industries, Inc., 680 F.2d 549 (8th Cir. 1982) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 680 F.2d at 555 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Adm. Code 3 AAC 08.950(7).

Kansas: Securities Rule § 81-1-1.

Missouri: Code of State Regulations, § 30-50.010(1)(G).

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.015(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g.:

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-1.

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. Ch. 815, § 512.4.

(n13)Footnote 13. The SEC definition has been substantially adopted in several states. See, e.g.:

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.02

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.021(5).

Massachusetts: Securities Regulation 950 CMR § 14.401(f).

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. Ann. § 1-102(g).

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-102(5).

Texas: TAC Securities Rule §107.2(11).

(n14)Footnote 14. Securities & Exch. Com'n. v. International Development Corp., 469 F.2d 20 (10th Cir. 1972) ; Pennaluna & Company v. Securities & Exch. Com'n., 410 F.2d 861 (9th Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1007, 90 S. Ct. 562, 24 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1970) ; Klapmeier v. Telechech International, Inc., 315 F. Supp. 1360 (D. Minn. 1970) , rev'd on other grounds, 482 F.2d 247 (8th Cir. 1973) ; SEC v. American Beryllium & Oil Corp., 303 F. Supp. 912 (S.D.N.Y. 1969) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Pennaluna & Company v. Securities & Exch. Com'n., 410 F.2d 861 (9th Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1007, 90 S. Ct. 562, 24 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1970) .

"Control" is not to be determined by artificial tests, but is an issue to be determined from the particular circumstances of the case ... Under Rule 405 ... it is not necessary that one be an officer, director, manager, or even shareholder to be a controlling person. Further, control may exist although not continuously and actively exercised. ...

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.,

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(1).

Iowa: Iowa Code § 502.203(1).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(a).

Kentucky's non-issuer isolated transaction exemption is not available for separate sales by a large number of individual customers of an issuer who each received their stock from the issuer as a gift to create good will. Ky. Interp. Op. May 19, 1988, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 27,578.

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(1).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. § 58-13B-27(A).

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. Mass. Sec. Rule § 14.402(b)(3)(B).

(n18)Footnote 18. Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(8); § 48-2-102(1) (definition of "affiliate").

(n19)Footnote 19. Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4).

(n21)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4).

(n22)Footnote 22. Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(1)(b).

(n23)Footnote 23. Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(1)(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. §517.061(3).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(3).

Rhode Island: R.I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-402(1).

(n25)Footnote 25.

Ohio: See Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(B).

In State v. Allen, 107 Ariz. 538, 490 P.2d 10 (1971) , it was held that the owner of securities is not considered a dealer by virtue of sales in an isolated transaction.

Note that a number of statutes require the transaction to be by or on behalf of the "owner" of the securities. This was the requirement under a former Iowa statute. The term "owner" for purposes of the exemption was deemed to mean non-issuer. Getter v. R. G. Dickinson & Co., 366 F. Supp. 559 (S.D. Iowa 1973) (Applying Iowa law).

See also Prokop v. Krennek, 374 S.W.2d 265 (Tex. Civ. App. 1964) , for a discussion of the Texas provision which disallows the sale to be for the benefit of any other company or corporation.

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.,

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-1.

Kansas: Securities Regulation § 81-1-1(m).

The Indiana definition is similarly worded with a few significant differences. See Rules and Regulations of the Securities Division § 710 IAC 1-8-1(9).

77 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.03

§ 9.03 Isolated Transactions

The exemption for isolated transactions is intended to allow a holder of securities to make occasional sales without registration. As discussed earlier, with few exceptions the exemption is available only to non-issuers.ⁿ¹ The most common form of isolated transaction exemption is that contained in the Uniform Securities Act for "any isolated non-issuer transaction, whether effected through a broker-dealer or not."ⁿ² Other forms of the exemption make clear that the covered transaction must not be one made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a similar character. Ohio, for example, declares:

"A sale of securities made by or on behalf of a bona fide owner, neither the issuer nor a dealer is exempt, if such sale is made in good faith and not for the purpose of avoiding [the registration and qualification provisions] and is not made in the course of repeated and successive transactions of a similar character."ⁿ³

In stating the exemption more generally, Florida identifies the key considerations in its provision addressing:

"The isolated sale or offer for sale of securities when made by or on behalf of a vendor not the issuer or underwriter of the securities, who, being the bona fide owner of such securities, disposes of her or his own property for her or his own account, and such sale is not made directly or indirectly for the benefit of the issuer or an underwriter of such securities or for the direct or indirect promotion of any scheme or enterprise with the intent of violating or evading any provision of this chapter."ⁿ⁴

However the exemption is worded, application of the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption involves two key elements. The first is a "transaction" within the intended scope of coverage. Although typically thought of in terms of non-issuer resale transactions, the range of triggering events for registration or qualification provisions of state securities laws is such that offers and any attempt to dispose of a security for value must also fall within an available exemption. It is not always clear that "transaction" for purposes of the isolated transaction exemption includes the broad notions of offer as well as sale and to what extent, for example, repeated offers ultimately resulting in a single sale would qualify as an isolated transaction. This possibility also highlights the second critical element in the application of the isolated transaction exemption; namely, the meaning of "isolated." Each of these elements is examined more closely below.

[1] The Meaning of "Transaction" All states broadly define the terms "sale," "offer," or "offer to sell" so as to maximize the scope of investor protection under blue sky laws. An "offer to sell" includes every attempt or offer to dispose of, or solicitation of an offer to purchase, a security for value. "Sale" is separately defined to include every contract of sale, contract to sell, or disposition of a security for value.ⁿ⁵ Generally speaking, states do not, however, separately define "transaction." This leaves an open question whether the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption encompasses offers to sell in addition to actual isolated sales. The Indiana isolated transaction exemption is stated in terms of "any isolated non-issuer offer or sale,"ⁿ⁶ thus making clear that in assessing the availability of the exemption an offer is to be considered an eligible transaction addition to actual sales that may result. Indiana also provides a specific definition of "transaction" that incorporates the statutory definitions of "sale," "offer" and "offer to sell."ⁿ⁷ Given this construct, numerous solicitations or offers leading to an otherwise isolated sale may prove fatal to reliance on the isolated transaction exemption. In some cases it is made explicit. In Hawaii, for example, the number of persons solicited is by rule established as a determining factor for availability of the isolated transaction exemption.

ⁿ⁸ In Uniform Act states such emphasis on the extent of solicitations or offers is problematic because the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption is so simply stated, and "transaction" at least implies that a completed transaction, i.e., a sale, is all that matters.

In states where the exemption is not based on the Uniform Act, the problem takes on a different aspect. One state makes it clear that the exemption applies to both offers and sales, provided there are no more than five sales by the seller or an affiliate of the seller in a twelve month period in which the date of sale can be included.ⁿ⁹ But some states apply the exemption to "isolated sales"ⁿ¹⁰ or "sales of securities in isolated transactions."ⁿ¹¹ Whether or not these isolated sales include offers to sell is therefore dependent on how each state defines "sale."ⁿ¹² In three states the "sale" definition is based on the Uniform Act and does not include "offers" or "attempts to sell."ⁿ¹³ Two other states have comparable definitions, which would seem to eliminate the issue.ⁿ¹⁴ However, even in these states the problem may not be solved.ⁿ¹⁵ Other non-Uniform Act states include "an attempt to sell" securities as part of the definition of "sale,"ⁿ¹⁶ and it would appear that any offer of a security would be considered in determining whether or not transactions are isolated.ⁿ¹⁷

In all of this, however, it is well to consider an Oregon caseⁿ¹⁸ involving two actual sales of securities and one offer to sell. The court, over dissent, held that two sales of stock to two different individuals fell within the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption. The dissent objected on the ground that the majority did not take into consideration the "attempted sale" which constituted a sale of securities under the Oregon statute.ⁿ¹⁹

In sum, case law and administrative treatments of "transaction" for purposes of the non-issuer isolated sales transaction produce some degree of uncertainty from state to state. For the most part, however, the differences are in nuances only, and they are resolved by applying a common sense notion of isolated transaction, as a whole, consistent with the intent of the exemption. Occasional sales by a true non-issuer holder of securities may well involve the solicitation of purchasers before a sale is consummated. In context, multiple solicitations by a non-issuer holder leading to an otherwise isolated sale is entirely consistent with the objective of the exemption. Multiple solicitations carried out in a concerted effort intended to produce one or more sales to dispose of security holdings present a different picture. The context determines whether any transaction is in fact "isolated."ⁿ²⁰ States that define "transaction" to include offers as well as sales merely codify the essential notion that what amounts to a public solicitation of offers to buy is not the intended focus of the exemption. In context, the notion of an "isolated" transaction takes on the greatest meaning, and that essential element is discussed in greater detail below.

[2] Identifying "Isolated" Transactions Although the Uniform Act exemption is worded simply in terms of any "isolated" non-issuer transaction, as seen earlier several non-Uniform Act states expressly address the exemption to transactions that are not made in the course of "repeated and successive transactions of a similar character."ⁿ²¹ Prior to the advent of the Uniform Securities Act, the reference to "repeated and successive" was an integral part of the isolated transaction exemption in many states. It was explained in an early Massachusetts case:

The words "repeated and successive" are used by way of contrast to the word "isolated" employed earlier in the same sentence. In such context an "isolated" sale means one standing alone, disconnected from any other, and "repeated and successive" mean transactions undertaken and performed one after the other. We think that two sales of securities, made one after the other within a period of such reasonable time as to indicate that one general purpose actuates the vendor and that the sales promote the same aim and are not so detached and separated as to form no part of a single plan, would be "repeated and successive transactions."ⁿ²²

This is a useful explanation that remains meaningful today. However, even where the statute describes isolated as not being repeated and successive does not necessarily mean that the description of these terms will be adhered to. As previously discussed, Hawaii, for example, specifies how many transactions may be solicited or sold and within what period of time.ⁿ²³ Arizona has solved its problem uniquely through an interpretation of its statute which, in effect, does away with the isolated nature of non-issuer transactions. In Arizona, the number of transactions engaged in is immaterial as long as they are not in any way made for the benefit of the issuer or the underwriter.ⁿ²⁴

Most states, and most notably those having the Uniform Act exemption provision, do not base their statutes on the repeated and successive test. However, it is uncertain to what extent the courts of Uniform Act states will look to the "repeated and successive" criterion in interpreting the isolated transaction exemption. One Uniform Act state contrasts "isolated sales" with "repeated and successive sales" to prescribe a less rigid formula than one earlier prescribed in Massachusetts.ⁿ²⁵ Missouri, which also has the Uniform Act's isolated transaction exemption,ⁿ²⁶ defines "isolated" by regulationⁿ²⁷ as "standing alone, disconnected from any other transactions." According to the regulation, the definition is based on a caseⁿ²⁸ decided under a prior exemption provision which described an isolated transaction as "not being made in the course of repeated and successive transactions." Similarly, Massachusetts' regulation is based on the previously mentioned case decided under prior law.ⁿ²⁹ Nevertheless, another Uniform Act state has stated that it would be inappropriate to look to interpretations in states whose statutes refer to repeated and successive sales of securities since the variance in language "necessitates that we look and rely upon the interpretation of such an exemption under statutes similar to that in the Uniform Act as adopted by Indiana."ⁿ³⁰ Interestingly, the court then looked to an Oklahoma case which had adopted a liberal interpretation of "repeated successive sales."ⁿ³¹

The problem of judicial interpretation of "isolated" and "repeated and successive" has been avoidedⁿ³² in a number of states that prescribe the number of transactions in a given security that will be deemed isolated and the time period during which such transactions may be made. In two states, this has been accomplished by statute.ⁿ³³ In other states, regulations have been issued delineating the rule.ⁿ³⁴ In some states, the rules and regulations serve as more of a general guideline rather than setting hard and fast rules.ⁿ³⁵ This latter approach has also been taken by courts, which usually decline to state a maximum number of permissible transactions, and prefer instead to decide in the particular circumstances whether transactions are isolated or not.ⁿ³⁶

It should also be noted that in determining the number of transactions, there is authority to the effect that only those transactions made within a given state are considered,ⁿ³⁷ and the count includes only securities of the same issuer.ⁿ³⁸

Although the meaning of "isolated transaction" has largely been left developing through case law,ⁿ³⁹ some states have by rule imposed objective criteria. In Kansas, for example, a transaction will be deemed to be isolated if: "no twelve month period in which the date of the sale can be included contains more than five sales of the securities in Kansas by the seller or affiliates, or by or for the benefit of the issuer," although certain other conditions regarding the manner of sale must also be met.ⁿ⁴⁰ In the main, however, the number of transactions is not itself dispositive. Relevant factors include the type of offer made, the number of units offered, the manner of offering, the relationship of the seller to the offerees, and the length of time for which securities have been held prior to the resale transaction.ⁿ⁴¹

[3] Issuer "Benefit" Apart from examining particular relationships between sellers and issuers, courts have also examined use of the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption in terms of issuer benefit. As introduced in section 9.01

above, if a meaningful direct or indirect benefit inures to the issuer in the circumstances of an ostensible "non-issuer" sale, the transaction may be transformed into a non-exempted issuer transaction. For example, shares of stock sold by a holder for the purpose of channeling cash into a failing corporation is a transaction for the benefit of the issuer.ⁿ⁴²

"Benefit" in these circumstances means something more than incidental benefit. A Florida appellate court, for example, concluded that a sale of stock by a holder with the stipulation that the buyer would lend money to the issuing corporation in addition to the purchase price to be paid to the seller was not such a benefit as to preclude reliance on the isolated sales exemption by the seller.ⁿ⁴³ The court reasoned that the availability of a non-issuer exemption does not mean that the issuer cannot receive any benefit whatsoever. It means, said the Court:

"[t]hat a sale shall not be exempt when an individual makes the sale apparently for his own benefit but in reality for the benefit of the corporation. It does not follow that because a corporation receives some benefit (in this instance a loan of money) from a sale of stock by an individual that the corporation is the real party in interest.

We hold that the provision in the contract that the purchaser make a loan to the corporation is a factor to be considered in determining whether the sale is for the benefit of the corporation. We also hold that the provision for the loan does not as a matter of law make the present sale a sale for the benefit of the corporation.ⁿ⁴⁴

A federal appeals court applying Kentucky law similarly concluded that two holders' sale of securities to an individual as part of an agreement that included a provision that the purchaser would become employed by the issuer corporation did not represent a benefit to the issuer sufficient to transform the sales into issuer transactions.ⁿ⁴⁵

An Arizona appellate court examined a situation in which the corporation's president instigated a transfer of stock held by another shareholder. The transferee was to receive the stock in exchange for partnership assets to be turned over to the corporation. The corporation issued a promissory note to the selling shareholder and took the stock to act as conduit in the final transfer. The shares were then re-transferred by the corporation in exchange for the partnership assets. The court concluded that the transaction was undertaken as a whole for the benefit of the issuer and disallowed the exemption.ⁿ⁴⁶ These are conduit transactions structured to benefit the issuer. In most instances in which the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption is disallowed the intent to benefit the issuer will be apparent in light of all the circumstances.ⁿ⁴⁷

Here again, the availability of the non-issuer isolated transaction exemption where there is some "benefit" to the issuer from the non-issuer transaction is a case by case assessment guided by common sense and the objective of blue sky laws. Non-issuer transactions that are plainly structured and undertaken in order to benefit or facilitate a benefit to the issuer will not be eligible. There are no objective "benefit" criteria, but the purposes for a non-issuer transaction, particularly one by a non-issuer in a control person or affiliate relationship with the issuer, may be inferred from the evidence, and will ultimately control.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Isolated transactions as an issuer exemption are discussed in ch. 8, § 8.06[6][b], supra .

A few states specifically make the exemption applicable to issuers and non-issuers. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(a).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(a).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Unif. Sec. Act. § 402(b)(1); see also 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(B),

(n4)Footnote 4. Fla. Stat. § 517.061(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 102(26).

(n6)Footnote 6. Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(l).

(n7)Footnote 7. Ind. Code § 23-2-1-1(i)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. Haw. Sec. Rules § 16-38-1.

(n9)Footnote 9. Kan. Sec. Regs. § 81-5-3.

(n10)Footnote 10. See n.24 supra for statutory provisions in Florida, North Dakota and Rhode Island.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44- 844(4). See n.25 supra for a comparable citation in Ohio.

(n12)Footnote 12. The discussion here is only an outline of the basic provisions of the states involved. Reference should be made to ch. 3 supra for statutory provisions and discussion of what constitutes "offers" and "sales" of securities generally.

(n13)Footnote 13.

Maine: See 32 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 1050(15).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.14(m)(17).

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:2(XIX)(a).

(n14)Footnote 14.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1801(9).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-02(13).

(n15)Footnote 15. See n.8 supra and text applicable thereto regarding regulations in Hawaii.

(n16)Footnote 16.

Ohio: See Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.01(C)(1).

Rhode Island: R.I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-101(17).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-2(E).

(n17)Footnote 17. In fact, one Ohio court counted the number of persons "solicited." See Bronaugh v. R. & E. Dredging Co., 16 Ohio St. 2d 35, 242 N.E.2d 572 (1968) .

(n18)Footnote 18. Tarsia v. Nick's Laundry & Lines Supply Co., 239 Ore. 562, 399 P.2d 28 (1965) .

(n19)Footnote 19. 399 P.2d at 30 .

See also Redhouse v. Preferred Properties, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,669 (Ore. App. 1987), in which a single purchase of securities was not an exempt isolated transaction where two other solicitations of an offer that were not acted on were made on behalf of the issuer at about the same time as the purchase. (At the time of the purchase and the solicitations, solicitations of offers were statutorily deemed sales.) Summary judgment for the purchaser was affirmed since the three transactions as a matter of law evidenced a "general purpose" to sell the securities. The Oregon statute has since been amended to remove solicitations or attempts from the definition of "sale." See Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.015(15)(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Commonwealth v. Allen, 441 S.W.2d 424 , a969 Ky. LEXIS 319 (Ky. App. 1969). In Allen the defendant contacted at least 30 prospective purchasers and actually sold stock to about 10 of them. As a matter of law, the sales could not be considered isolated sales. Evidence of all sales was admissible to rebut the inference that the transactions in question were isolated and to establish a course of dealing.

(n21)Footnote 21. See n.24 supra for statutory provisions in North Dakota, and Rhode Island. See n.25 supra for statutory provision in Ohio.

(n22)Footnote 22. Kneeland v. Emerton, 280 Mass. 371, 183 N.E. 155, 163(1932) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Haw. Sec. Rules § 16-38-1.

In Bronaugh v. R. & E. Dredging Co., 16 Ohio St. 2d 35, 242 N.E.2d 572 (1968) , nine solicitations were found to be "repeated and successive transactions of a similar character."

(n24)Footnote 24. State v. Allen, 107 Ariz. 538, 490 P.2d 10 (1971) . See also Riffle v. Robert L. Parker Co., 19 Ariz. App. 100, 505 P.2d 268 (1973) and Kalav v. Pitt, 18 Ariz. App. 478, 503 P.2d 833 (1972) .

The application of the Arizona rule as laid down in Allen, Riffle and Kalav would seem to have the effect of exempting all non-issuer transactions. A comparable result may come out of the Connecticut statute which incorporates by reference the exemption under § 4(6) of the Securities Act of 1933 which exempts "transactions by any person other than an issuer, underwriter or dealer." Conn. Gen. Stat., Ch. 662 § 36-490(b)(13). For a discussion of the federal exemption, see Federal Securities Act of 1933, A.A. Sommer, Jr., General Editor, § 4.01 (Matthew Bender).

In Butler v. American Asphalt & Contracting Co., 25 Ariz. App. 26, 540 P.2d 757 (Ariz. App. 1975) , the plaintiff purchased 51% of a corporation in a single sale from the individual owner of the corporation. The court found the transaction to be within the isolated transaction exemption available to non-issuers on the grounds that the seller was the owner of the securities and the plaintiff, an experienced stockbroker, did not need the protection of the blue sky law.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Nelson v. State, 1960 OK CR 65, 355 P.2d 413, 420 (Okla. Crim. App. 1960) :

An "isolated sale" means one standing alone, disconnected from any other; "repeated successive sales" means transactions undertaken and performed one after the other, and sales made within a period of such reasonable time as to indicate that one general purpose actuates the vendor and that such sales promote the same aim and are not so detached and separated as to form no part of a single plan. ... Stated differently, "isolated sales" are those of a non-recurring nature engaged in by persons not engaged in the security business. ... The word isolated is not a word of art or technical meaning, but is a term the application of which must depend upon the facts of each case.

(n26)Footnote 26. Mo. Ann. Stat. § 409.402(b)(1).

(n27)Footnote 27. 15 CSR § 30-50.010(1)(J).

(n28)Footnote 28. Gales v. Weldon, 282 S.W.2d 522 (Mo. Sup. 1955) .

(n29)Footnote 29. Massachusetts Securities Rules § 14.402(B)(1)(a).

(n30)Footnote 30. Hippensteel v. Karol, 159 Ind. App. 146, 304 N.E.2d 796 (Ind. App. 1973) , footnote 4 at p. 801 .

(n31)Footnote 31. See n.25 supra.

(n32)Footnote 32. Two states have indicated a preference for reliance on administrative regulations, at least with respect to isolated transactions. In Allen v. Schauf, 202 Kan. 348, 449 P.2d 1010 (1969) , it was said:

[W]here statutory enactments create a situation where official duties which must be performed which are not clearly defined or prescribed in detail, the operative interpretation given thereto by the officers and official boards whose duties are to carry the legislative policy into effect is helpful, and may be entitled to controlling significance. ... The general rule is sound and in this case the securities commissioner was directed by the Legislature to adopt regulations to carry the Act into effect. As indicated, the Act expressly provides that none of its provisions imposing any liability applies to any act done or omitted on good faith in reliance upon the commissioner's regulations notwithstanding they may later be determined to be invalid. We do not pass upon the wisdom of Regulation 81-1-1, but if it is applicable to the transactions in question, we are of the opinion the defendants were entitled to rely upon its provisions defining an "isolated transaction."

See 449 P.2d at 1017 , 1018. See Kan. Sec. Rel. § 81-5-3.

In Hippensteel v. Karol, 159 Ind. App. 146, 304 N.E.2d 796 (Ind. App. 1973) , the court noted that there was no regulation such as the one relied on in Allen supra , and said that it would return to interpretations of other states since it did not have "the aid of such a definitive regulation." 304 N.E.2d at 801 .

(n33)Footnote 33. See, e.g.,

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(a). Five sales in twelve consecutive months.

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31A-402(b)(1). One sale in twelve consecutive months.

See also Mont. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(1) (creating a presumption that a transaction is isolated if it is one of no more than three transactions during the prior 12 months; a transaction is defined to include the meanings of the terms sale, sell and offer. Id., § 30-10-103(21).

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g.,

Hawaii: Securities Rule § 16-38-1. Twenty-five persons solicited in twelve month period.

Kansas: Securities Regulation § 81-5-3. Five sales during twelve months.

Wisconsin: Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(1)(a). Five transactions in twelve months.

(n35)Footnote 35. See, e.g., Massachusetts Securities Rules § 14.402(B)(1)(a).

"The term 'isolated' for the purposes of Section 402(b)(1), means not in the course of repeated and successive transactions of like character. Two sales of securities made one after the other within such a period of time and in such circumstances as to indicate that they involve the same plan of financing are not isolated from one another."

See also Michigan Securities Bulletin, October, 1968.

"[W]e wish to point out that if a broker-dealer acts as agent for a seller, and then sells the stock in a number of transactions close in point of time insofar as any one owner is concerned, the transactions are no longer isolated."

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Rucker v. La-Co., Inc., 496 F.2d 850 (8th Cir. [Ark.] 1974), (decided under Arkansas law, five transactions in six months).

See also Creager v. Berger, 97 Ore. App. 338, 775 P.2d 918, Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 73,000 (Ore. App. 1989)(remanded for further evidence on the number of solicitations the defendant made).

See also Hippensteel v. Karol, 159 Ind. App. 146, 304 N.E.2d 796 (Ind. App. 1973) (Nine sales within six months); Commonwealth v. Allen, 441 S.W.2d 424 (Ky. App. 1969) (Thirty offers and ten actual sales within two months); Commonwealth v. David, 365 Mass. 47, 309 N.E.2d 484 (Mass. Sup. 1974) (Five transactions in several months).

A few cases have been decided on the basis of only a single transaction. See Shepherd v. State, 246 Ark. 744, 439 S.W.2d 627 (1969). Dohhen v. Minnesota-Ohio Oil Corp., 232 So. 2d 200 (1970), cert. denied 240 So.2d 638; Cain v. Solomon, 213 So. 2d 35 (Fla. App. 1968).

(n37)Footnote 37. Dohhen v. Minnesota-Ohio Oil Corp., 232 So. 2d 200 (Fla. App. 1970), cert. denied, 240 So. 2d 638. See n.34 supra for regulations in Hawaii and Kansas.

(n38)Footnote 38. See S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31A-402(b)(1).

(n39)Footnote 39. See, e.g., Nelson v. State, 1960 OK CR 65, 355 P.2d 413 (Okla. Crim. App. 1960) ("[a]n isolated sale means one standing alone, disconnected from any other"); Allen v. Schauf, 202 Kan. 348, 449 P.2d 1010 (Kan. 1969).

(n40)Footnote 40. Kan. Admin. Regs., Office of the Sec. Comm'r § 81-5-3.

See also:

New Mexico: N.M. Admin. Code Rule 12.11.12.8 (A transaction is isolated if it does not occur more frequently, with respect to the same offeror or seller, more than three times during any 12 month period, and satisfies certain other requirements).

Washington: Wash. Admin. Code § 460-44A-050 (A sale by one who is neither a controlling person nor affiliate will qualify for the exemption if it is effected through a broker-dealer and is one of not more than three such transactions effected in the state during the prior twelve months).

Wisconsin: Wis. Admin Code, DFI-Sec. 2.02(1) ("Isolated non-issuer transaction" is limited to one of not more than five transactions effected through a broker-dealer during the prior twelve months).

(n41)Footnote 41. The significance of a holding period is evidenced in the Florida isolated transaction exemption which provides, as to promoters or affiliates, that one who has beneficially owned the securities for at least one year will not be deemed to be an underwriter, issuer or person acting for the direct or indirect benefit of an issuer or underwriter; see Fla. Stat. § 517.061(3).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Strom v. Black, 22 Ariz. App. 102, 523 P.2d 1339 (1974) .

See also Arkansas Real Estate Co. v. Fullerton, 232 Ark. 713, 339 S.W.2d 947 (1960) (The sale of securities by a holder for the purpose of promoting the issuer's warehousing business were held to be for the benefit of the issuer and thus nonexempt); Bronaugh v. R. & E. Dredging Co., 16 Ohio St.2d 35, 242 N.E.2d 572 (1968) (Sale was in fact made by the issuer, even though the issuer acted only as a conduit in repurchasing securities from existing holders for resale to others).

(n43)Footnote 43. Cain v. Solomon, 213 So.2d 35 (Fla. App. 1968) .

(n44)Footnote 44. Cain v. Solomon, 213 So.2d 35 (Fla. App. 1968) , at n.38.

But see Bellerue v. Business Files Institute, Inc., 61 Cal.2d 488, 39 Cal. Rptr. 201, 393 P.2d 401 (1964) .

(n45)Footnote 45. Watson v. Shaffner, 893 F.2d 1336 (6th Cir. 1990) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Riffle v. Robert L. Parker Co., 19 Ariz. App. 100, 505 P.2d 268 (1973) .

In Rucker v. La-Co., Inc., 496 F.2d 850 (8th Cir. 1974) , decided under Arkansas law, the court held that a sale of its own stock to an insider by a corporation would not be deemed a sale for the benefit of the issuer where the insider was the "knowledgeable comptroller" of the corporation and "was well acquainted with the financial operations of [the company]." 496 F.2d at 853 .

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Hild v. Woodcrest Association, 59 Ohio Misc. 13, 391 N.E.2d 1047 (Ohio Com. Pleas 1977) (General partner of the issuer who purchased remaining unsold securities in order to permit the issuer to break escrow, and soon thereafter sold the securities was not entitled to non-issuer isolated transaction exemption because his actions overall were clearly intended to benefit the issuer in accessing proceeds of the offering).

78 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.04

§ 9.04 The Manual Exemption

The "Manual" exemption in Blue Sky laws for non-issuer transactions is designed to permit sales of securities of a class that has been outstanding in the hands of the public for a requisite period of time, and as to which certain qualifying criteria are met, including the requirement that a nationally recognized securities manual (or today its electronic equivalent) that is publicly available contains certain business and financial information of the issuer. As originally designed in the Uniform Securities Act and Revised Uniform Securities Act the manual exemption provided for otherwise unrestricted sales by a non-issuer.ⁿ¹ In 1996, however, the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) amended the Uniform Act provisions to add, among other things, a provision that the non-issuer transaction must be made by a registered agent of a registered broker-dealer, or be a resale transaction by a sponsor of a unit investment trust registered under the federal Investment Company Act of 1940.ⁿ² Most states adopted the NASAA amendment to make the exemption applicable to non-issuer trades through a broker-dealer, and that provision was carried into section 202(2) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act.ⁿ³ Some, however, continue to make the manual exemption available for any non-issuer transaction, whether or not effected through a broker-dealer.ⁿ⁴

In most states today the requirements for the manual exemption now include, in addition to securities being outstanding in the hands of the public for at least 90 days, the issuer must actually be engaged in business. The issuer may not be in the organizational stage, or in bankruptcy or receivership. It may not be a "blank check", blind pool or shell company that has no specific business plan or purpose.ⁿ⁵ Nor may it be a company that has indicated that its [primary business purpose is to engage in a merger or combination of the business with, or an acquisition of, an unidentified person. There are essential transaction criteria as well, including that the security must be sold at a price "reasonably related to its current market price,"ⁿ⁶ and the security does not constitute the whole or part of an unsold allotment to, or a subscription or participation by, the broker-dealer as an underwriter of the security or a redistribution.

Any variations among the states involve primarily the minimum period of time in which the issuer has been engaged in business, or in which the subject securities have been outstanding in the hands of the public.ⁿ⁷ Otherwise, if these criteria are met, and requisite information is contained in a qualifying "nationally recognized securities manual," the non-issuer transaction (either directly or through a broker-dealer, as the case may be) exemption will be allowed. But as also reflected in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the manual exemption has been considerably modernized since its first introduction. Today in many states there are alternatives to the "manual" requirement available. The non-issuer exemption may also be available, for example, if the issuer has a class of equity securities listed on a national securities exchange or designated for trading in the Nasdaq Stock Market, or if the issuer meets certain other business history or total asset requirements.ⁿ⁸ Where the issuer files publicly available records or reports with the SEC containing the same prescribed information as would be contained in a qualifying securities manual the exemption is also available in some states. Provisions for alternative eligibility for this non-issuer transaction exemption have in some states effectively merged the "manual" exemption with the "quality" exemption that is discussed in section 9.05 below.ⁿ⁹

The key to the manual exemption is the availability in the marketplace of adequate information without the need for a registration statement. The modern versions of the manual exemption now in place go further to recognize certain qualitative criteria that would otherwise be addressed by blue sky qualification requirements, and those criteria significantly broaden the scope of the exemption from that created by the original Uniform Securities Act. As a practical matter, the alternative qualifying criteria supplant the original "manual" listing as a basis for the exemption. Nevertheless, a recognized manual listing remains meaningful and continues as an element in all Blue Sky laws.

[1] Recognized Securities Manual Manual exemptions in Blue Sky laws refer to listing in a publicly available "recognized," or more commonly today, a "nationally recognized" securities manual. Although the essential information that must be included in the manual listing is provided, the statutes generally do not identify particular qualifying manuals.ⁿ¹⁰ The specification of any particular qualifying manual is left to administrative rules or orders.ⁿ¹¹ Almost without exception today, administrators have designated any Mergent's securities manuals, Standard and Poor's securities manuals, and Fitch's securities manuals that contain, in whatever format, the information specified in the exemption as qualifying the exemption. As specified today in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the information required to be included in an issuer's manual listing consists of:

- (a) a description of the business and operations of the issuer;
- (b) the names of the issuer's executive officers and the names of the issuer's directors, if any;
- (c) an audited balance sheet of the issuer as of a date within 18 months before the date of the transaction or, in the case of a reorganization or merger when the parties to the reorganization or merger each had an audited balance sheet, a pro forma balance sheet for the combined organization; and
- (d) an audited income statement for each of the issuer's two immediately previous fiscal years or for the period of existence of the issuer, whichever is shorter, or, in the case of a reorganization or merger when each party to the reorganization or merger had audited income statements, a pro forma income statement.ⁿ¹²

Importantly, today designations of recognized manuals for purposes of the exemption also typically provide that "manual" includes all commonly recognized formats of publications, including CD-ROM and electronic dissemination over the Internet.ⁿ¹³

There are some variations in the manual information content requirement. For example, a few states have different requirements for the date of the profit and loss statementⁿ¹⁴ In all cases, of course, there are additional requirements that the selling price of the security bear a reasonable relationship to the current market price.ⁿ¹⁵ Some states also specify that any commission collected by a broker-dealer must not be in excess of usual and customary commissions collected with respect to securities and transactions having comparable characteristics.ⁿ¹⁶ One state specifies certain securities which are not eligible for the manual exemption under any circumstances.ⁿ¹⁷

Some variations also exist in regard to assuring "non-issuer" status for the manual exemption. All states deny the exemption to a broker-dealer when the securities constitute an unsold allotment to or subscription by the dealer as a participant in the distribution of the securities by the issuer or by or through an underwriter.ⁿ¹⁸ However, in two states an underwriter of the securities may use the exemption if it is no longer acting as the underwriter.ⁿ¹⁹ Other states specifically deny the exemption to controlling persons, or at least limit the extent to which such persons may use the exemption.ⁿ²⁰ One stateⁿ²¹ has a separate exemption for securities maintaining a rating approved by the securities administrator in a recognized securities manual. This exemption is available to issuers and non-issuers alike.

[2] Alternatives to "Manual" Qualification Modernization of the manual exemption has produced practical, meaningful alternatives to a securities manual listing as the basis for a non-issuer transaction exemption where outstanding securities are involved. Although baseline qualifications regarding length of time securities are outstanding and issuer business requirements are not changed, states have recognized that today there other publicly available information resources that provide the same, indeed much more, information as any securities manual. Thus in New Jersey, for example, the "manual" exemption for non-issuer transactions by a registered broker-dealer is available when:

"[t]he securities are of an issuer for which all reports required to be filed by section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. Section 78m or Section 78o(d) have been filed."ⁿ²²

Another modern approach, illustrated in Delaware, is to provide that requisite information be contained in a nationally recognized securities manual or be contained in a document filed with the SEC that is publicly available through the SEC's Electronic Data Gathering and Retrieval System (EDGAR).ⁿ²³ This approach implemented the 1996 NASAA amendment to section 402(2) of the original Uniform Securities Act, and is today a part of many state exemptions. Still another approach, taken wholly outside the "manual" exemption but based on the same rational, is to provide a separate exemption for non-issuer transactions by a broker-dealer in securities of an issuer that is subject to reporting requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and has filed required reports during the ninety day period immediately preceding the sale, and the broker-dealer reasonably believes the issuer is current in all of its filings.ⁿ²⁴ The exemption based on an issuer's compliance with 1934 Act reporting requirements is meaningful today only in those states which make the exemption specifically applicable to secondary trading transactions by a broker-dealer. Individual transactions by a non-issuer in securities of a qualifying issuer pursuant to section 4(1) of the federal Securities Act of 1933 are now "covered securities" under NSMIA and are not subject to state registration requirements at all.

The alternative to manual listing contained in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is actually an amalgam of two modernized approaches in Blue Sky laws. Section 202(2)(E) of the 2002 Uniform Act first recognizes that the listing of a class of securities on a national securities exchange, or designation for trading in the Nasdaq Stock Market, involves meeting listing standards and criteria, including the generation and dissemination of current information by an issuer. The 2002 Uniform Act manual alternative thus allows the exemption for non-issuer transactions by a registered broker-dealer in a security of an issuer that has a class of equity securities listed. With the focus being on the issuer qualification for listing, the actual securities involved in the transaction need not be listed so long as the issuer has a class of equity securities that is listed.

The second manual alternative for qualification reflected in the 2002 Uniform Securities Act is that the issuer of the security, including its predecessors, has been engaged in continuous business for at least three years, or the issuer has total assets of at least $2,000,000 based on an audited balance sheet as of a date within eighteen months before the date of the transaction. This provision in the 2002 Uniform Act is also a product of the 1996 NASAA amendment to section 402(b)(2) of the original Uniform Securities Act, and is aimed at addressing the problem of "penny stock" fraud.ⁿ²⁵ This provision was generally not adopted by states as part of their "manual" exemptions, but so-called "blue chip" or quality exemptions are functionally equivalent. However, in those states that have now enacted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act the provision is included in its entirety.ⁿ²⁶

Several states provide still another alternative to listing in a recognized manual when specified information concerning the issuer, including financial information, is filed with the administrator. In Indiana, for example, information filed with the Commissioner consisting of the names of the issuer's officers and directors, a balance sheet of the issuer as of a date not more than sixteen months prior to the date of the sale, and a profit and loss statement for either the fiscal year preceding that date or the most recent year of operations will qualify the exemption. A specific form for filing the information is prescribed, and there is a fee.ⁿ²⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(2); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(20), NASAA Amendments (1996), CCH NASAA Reports P 4882.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g.,

Arkansas: Ark. Code § 23-42-504(2);

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36b-21(b)(2);

District of Columbia: D.C. Code § 31-5604.02(2);

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(3);

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 90.530(3).

(n4)Footnote 4.

North Carolina: See, e.g., Gen. Stat. N.C. § 78A-17(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Official Comments to section 202(2) explain the meaning of the terms:

"Rule 419 issued under the Securities Act of 1933 defines 'blank check company' to be a company that 'is a development stage company that has no specific business plan or purpose or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in a merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies, or other entity or person.' A 'blind pool' is similar and would involve an investment in a blank check or other entity with no identified business plan or purpose. A 'shell company' is also similar and would involve an entity which, to date, has no significant business assets, plan, or purpose." Off. Comments, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(2)(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. In Michigan, for example, the exemption is available for the non-issuer distribution of an outstanding security whose issuer and any predecessors have been in continuous operation for at least five years, see Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.802(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. As stated in section 202(2)(E) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the exemption is available without regard to any "manual" listing if:

"the issuer of the security has a class of equity securities listed on a national securities exchange registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or designated for trading on the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation System, unless the issuer of the security is a unit investment trust registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940; or the issuer of the security, including its predecessors, has been engaged in continuous business for at least three years; or the issuer of the security has total assets of at least $2,000,000 based on an audited balance sheet as of a date within

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.04

18 months before the date of the transaction or, in the case of a reorganization or merger when the parties to the reorganization or merger each had the audited balance sheet, a pro forma balance sheet for the combined organization."

Alternatives to manual listing are discussed in section 9.04[2] below, and also include, in some states, publicly available information in records filed with the SEC

(n9)Footnote 9. In some states the "manual" and quality exemptions have actually been combined, see, e.g., Miss. Code § 75-71-203(2).

(n10)Footnote 10.

Hawaii: But see Haw. Rev. Stat. § 485-6(2) (Specifically identifying the manual of Hawaiian securities in addition to any other recognized securities manual).

New Hampshire: See also N.H. Rev. Stat. § 421-B-17(II)(b) (Specifying Moody's, Fitch's or Standard and Poor's securities manuals). Moody's manuals were commonly specified as well in administrative rules or orders, but are today known under the Mergent's name, which most states have substituted for Moody's references.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(2)(D).

(n12)Footnote 12. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(2)(D)(i)-(iv).

See Roger v. Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, Inc., Blue Sky L. Rep. (CCH) P 72,300 (S.D. Ohio 1985) (adopting a strict compliance posture, the court held that manual listed securities, otherwise within the exemption, did not satisfy the information requirements where no profit and loss statement was included in the listing, even though the issuer was a developmental company without operating profits or losses.

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Del. Sec. Rules Sec. 508(b).

(n14)Footnote 14. Florida, for example, requires that the profit and loss statement be dated not less than two years next prior to the date of the balance sheet. If the issuer is in existence for less than two years, the statement is to be for the period as of the date of the balance sheet, see Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(20)(a)(5)(b). In Texas, the profit and loss statement must be dated not more than three years prior to the date of the published balance sheet. If the period of existence is less than three years, the statement must cover the period of existence, see Tex Rev. Stat. Art. 581-5(O)(9)(b). Minnesota requires that, in all cases, the profit and loss statement be for the fiscal year preceding the date of the balance sheet, see Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(b)(1).

In all the above states, the balance sheet is to be as of a date not more than eighteen months prior to the date of sale of the security.

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g.,

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(3).

Kansas: Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1262(b).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(8)(a).

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(10)(a).

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. L. § 47-31A-402(b)(2).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(O)(3).

(n16)Footnote 16. This is the case in Indiana, North Dakota, and Oregon.

(n17)Footnote 17. See N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(8)(d), (e). Securities of issuers not organized under the laws of a state, territory or insular possession of the United States. Securities of open-end management companies, mutual funds, unit investment trusts, contractual plans and face amount certificate companies.

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g.,

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(A)(11).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(20). The Florida provision has the same general purpose but states that the exemption does not apply to a dealer acting as underwriter of the securities.

North Dakota: N. D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(8)(b).

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(10)(b).

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat., Art. 581-5(O)(1). The Texas provision does not refer to distributions made by or through an underwriter.

The statutes in Arizona and North Dakota also deny the exemption to dealers distributing unsold allotments in participation with the issuer's officers and directors.

(n19)Footnote 19. See n.18 supra for statutory citation in Arizona.

(n20)Footnote 20. Alaska, for example, provides by rule:

"The distribution of large blocks of securities by controlling persons in firmly underwritten offerings will ordinarily be presumed to be for the direct or indirect benefit of the issuer, and not within the provisions of the manual exemption." Alaska Adm. Code, 3A.A.C.08.910(3)(B).

See also Massachusetts: Securities Rules § 14.402(B)(1)(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(10).

(n22)Footnote 22. N.J. Stat. § 49:3-50(b)(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. Del. Code § 7309(b)(2)(d).

(n24)Footnote 24.

New Mexico: See, e.g., N.M. Stat. § 58-13B-27(B).

(n25)Footnote 25. See NASAA Comments to § 402(b)(2), CCH NASAA Reports P 4882, at 3594.

(n26)Footnote 26. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act is now in place in Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

(n27)Footnote 27. Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(3)(C)(iii).

79 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.05

§ 9.05 The Quality Exemption

[1] Fixed Income or Fixed Maturity Securities Many states provide a non-issuer transaction exemption where fixed income securities are involved and the issuers have a proven record of paying interest or dividends. The exemption is rooted in section 402(b)(2)(B) of the original Uniform Securities Act, and is today contained in section 202(5) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. Baseline requirements for exempt non-issuer transactions in these "quality" securities are that:

- The security has a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision, and
- There has been no default in the payment of principal, interest, or dividends on the security during the current fiscal year or within the three preceding fiscal years. (If the issuer has been in existence less than three years, there must be no default at any time during the period of existence of the issuer and any predecessors.)ⁿ¹

As a practical matter, "fixed maturity" and "fixed income" are equivalent terms, as the key characteristic of any security that is eligible for the transaction exemption is the provision for fixed interest or dividends. Transactions involving common stock are not eligible for the exemption, although a broader form of quality exemption discussed in section 9.05[2] below may be available.ⁿ²

As noted earlier in section 9.04, the common approach is to combine the "quality" exemption with the "manual" exemption, so as to make a non-issuer transaction exempt if either specified information about the issuer is currently contained in a recognized securities manual, or the security has a fixed maturity or fixed interest or dividend provision and there has been default within the prescribed period of time.ⁿ³

Some states address quality in terms of a security that is senior in rank to the common stock of the issuer both as to payment of dividends and interest and upon liquidation or dissolution, in addition to being outstanding for a requisite period of time with no history of default.ⁿ⁴ As carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, the quality exemption reflects the fact that some states also alternatively allow the exemption for non-issuer transactions through a broker-dealer in a security that is highly rated by a nationally recognized statistical rating organization.ⁿ⁵

A few of the states adopting this exemption have included the stipulation that it is applicable only to transactions made by registered broker-dealers.ⁿ⁶ An additional condition in one state is that the issuer and any predecessors be in continuous operation for at least five years preceding the date of sale.ⁿ⁷ Regarding business history, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act reflects the modern approach to this and a number of transaction exemptions in Blue Sky laws by conditioning the exemption on the issuer of the quality fixed maturity or fixed income security not being a blank check, blind pool or shell company with no specific business plan or purpose.ⁿ⁸

The rationale underlying the exemption is that the absence of default, together with the dividend or liquidation preference of the securities, provides the investor with a modicum of protection. This modicum of investor protection is increased by the permissive nature of the exemption in most states.ⁿ⁹ In some cases a filing may be required before the exemption can be used.

Requirements for the quality exemption for non-issuer transactions vary in some states. In Virginia, for example, the exemption applies to transactions by registered broker-dealers trading in securities that have been outstanding for at least five years if the issuer, in each of its last three fiscal years, has lawfully paid dividends on its common stock aggregating at least 4 percent of its current market price.

In sum, the "quality" exemption, as such, for non-issuer transactions is available only for fixed income securities, and may or may not be limited further to transactions effected by a broker-dealer. Moreover, the exemption is not available at all in some states. Vermont and Wisconsin, for example, have no quality exemption for non-issuer transactions. The most common modern approach for those states that do, however, is to combine a simplified quality exemption with the manual exemption, allowing for a non-issuer distribution if either criterion is met, and without further restrictions. Thus, as exemplified by the Maryland exemption, any non-issuer distribution of an outstanding security is exempt if:

"(i) A recognized securities manual contains the names of the officers and directors of the issuer, a balance sheet of the issuer as of a date within 18 months, and a profit and loss statement for either the fiscal year preceding that date or the most recent year of operations; or

(ii) the security has a fixed maturity or a fixed interest or dividend provision and there has been no default during the current fiscal year or within the three preceding fiscal years, in the payment of principal, interest or dividends on the security."ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Previously Sold and Distributed Securities A few states provide a separate, broader, non-issuer "quality" exemption for transactions in any securities previously issued in compliance with state Blue Sky laws, and which are outstanding in the hands of the public. These exemptions are available for sales of any security when qualifying criteria are met. In Washington, for example, the offer or sale by a registered broker-dealer, or a person exempt from broker-dealer registration requirements, of securities previously sold and distributed to the public is exempt if:

(a) The securities are sold at prices reasonably related to the current market price at the time of the sale, and, if the broker-dealer is acting as agent, the commission collected by the broker-dealer is not in excess of usual and customary commissions collected with respect to securities and transactions having comparable characteristics;

The securities do not constitute part of an unsold allotment to or subscription or participation by the broker-dealer in the distribution of the securities; and

(c) The security has been lawfully sold and distributed in this or any other state under an act regulating the sale of such securities.ⁿ¹¹

In most cases this non-issuer transaction exemption is stated as one covering an offer or sale by a licensed broker-dealer, without specific reference to a non-issuer.ⁿ¹² The key consideration in applications of this exemption is the prior Blue Sky law compliant distribution of the securities. The historical assumption is that securities which have already demonstrated their marketability and have passed administrative scrutiny at the time of original issue do not require further scrutiny provided the baseline resale criteria are met.ⁿ¹³ Oregon thus provides that the offer or sale by a licensed broker-dealer of any security acquired in the ordinary and usual course of business is exempt when the security is part of an issuer which has previously been registered in whole or in part, provided the registration has not been revoked and that the continued sale of the security has not been enjoined.ⁿ¹⁴

There is little uniformity among those states providing the exemption. In fact, the only uniform requirement in all the states offering the exemption is that the transaction be a non-issuer transaction.ⁿ¹⁵ Thus, the exemption is usually unavailable to controlling persons,ⁿ¹⁶ and is not available at all to broker-dealers selling any part of an unsold allotment or otherwise participating in a distribution by the issuer.ⁿ¹⁷ Although the exemption is commonly denied to underwriters,ⁿ¹⁸ one state allows an underwriter of the securities no longer acting as an underwriter to take advantage of the exemption.ⁿ¹⁹

Insistence that the transaction be by or through a broker-dealer is a usual requirement.ⁿ²⁰ On occasion there is also a requirement that commissions paid to the broker-dealer for the transaction not be in excess of usual and customary amounts paid for transactions in securities having comparable characteristics.ⁿ²¹ A further requirement in some states is that the price charged for the securities must be reasonably related to the current market price.ⁿ²²

As noted above, a rationale for this exemption is previous administrative scrutiny of the securities.ⁿ²³ The question then arises as to what criteria must be met with regard to registration at the time the securities were originally issued. Many of the statutes are silent on the question.ⁿ²⁴ A few states, however, provide that the non-issuer exemption applies if the securities have been previously sold and distributed in accordance with the securities act of any state.ⁿ²⁵ More commonly, previous registration is required in the state in which the exemption is sought.ⁿ²⁶

The lack of uniformity in the provisions for this exemption necessitates (1) reference to specific statutory provisions and (2) requests for administrators' opinions with respect to particular issues. Some states have unique provisions. For example, Alabama requires that before the exemption applies, the securities must be outstanding for at least three years;ⁿ²⁷ Virginia requires that they be outstanding for five years;ⁿ²⁸ and Indiana requires the issuer to designate a qualified transfer agent.ⁿ²⁹

Because the potential effect of this exemption is so broad, tight administrative control is imposed. Most of the states having the exemption make it possible for the administrator to deny or revoke it.ⁿ³⁰ In some states a filing, approved by the administrator is required before the exemption can become effective.ⁿ³¹

[3] Related Securities Exemptions The "quality" exemptions discussed above are all transaction exemptions either provided for or available to non-issuers. In several states there are quality analogs establishing securities exemptions in addition to or instead of transaction exemptions. Securities exemptions are comprehensively addressed in Chapter 7 of this Treatise. It is important to note here, however, that some states treat "quality" characteristics of the security itself as justifying an exemption from registration and qualification requirements without regard to any particular transactional criteria or characteristics. Thus in North Dakota, for example, an exemption is provided for:

"Securities, other than common stock, providing for a fixed return, which have been outstanding and in the hands of the public for not less than five years and upon which no default has occurred during the five years next preceding the date of sale."ⁿ³²

While the language of these securities exemptions varies, the common criteria are:

- The security may not be common stock;

- The security must provide a fixed return on the investment;
- The security must be outstanding and in the hands of the public for not less than five years; and
- There must have been no default in payment of principal or interest for the immediately preceding five years.

Variations include Louisiana, which exempts securities not having a fixed return if they have been publicly held for at least three years and the issuer can show an after tax net income for the immediately preceding three year period.ⁿ³³ The Ohio exemption is couched in considerably broader terms in two respects. First, the exemption does not specify the exclusion of common stock. Second, the security need not have a fixed return, but if no amount of return is stated, the annual dividend or interest rate for the five year period preceding the sale must have been at least four percent of the aggregate selling price of the securities.ⁿ³⁴ In Kansas, all securities that have been sold and distributed to the public are eligible for exemption on resale, and there is no statutory minimum period during which the securities must have been outstanding. However, the resale must not directly or indirectly benefit the issuer and specific statutory conditions must be met including the filing of an offering prospectus by a registered broker-dealer.ⁿ³⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For representative states that have adopted these requirements for the quality securities exemption, see, e.g.,

Deleware: Del. Code § 7309(b)(2);

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 292.410(b);

Massachussets: Mass. Gen. L. § 402(b)(2)(B);

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(2)(c);

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 32-4-402(b)(2)(B).

(n2)Footnote 2. See "Previously Sold and Distributed Securities," § 9.05[2], infra .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Utah Code § 61-1-14(2)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Rev. Stat. Neb. § 8-1111(2)(b); Gen. Stat. N.C. § 78A-17(2).

See also Wash. Admin. Code § 460-44A-110.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(5)(A) (Non-issuer transactions in a security that "is rated at the time of the transaction by a nationally recognized statistical rating organization in one of its four highest rating categories").

Drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act point out that the concept of a fixed income security rated by a nationally recognized statistical rating organization in one of its four highest rating categories is well established in the federal securities laws. Nationally recognized rating organizations have been identified by the SEC and include such organizations as Moody's and Standard and Poor's. Rating categories typically begin with AAA and would under the Uniform Act criteria include BBB as the fourth highest rating category. Official Comments, 2002 Unif. Sec. Act §

202(5).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.,

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(2)(b);

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(c);

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292-410(1)(b);

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Code § 8-1111(2)(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(2)(B).

Note that in Minnesota and New Hampshire, which also have a five year operational requirement, the quality standard is part of the manual exemption. The exemptions in Minnesota (Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(b)) and New Hampshire (N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(b)), apply to: (1) non-issuer distributions; (2) when specified information about the issuer is contained in a recognized securities manual; (3) providing the issuer or its predecessor has been in active, continuous business operation for five years preceding the date of sale; and (4) if the security has a fixed maturity or fixed interest or dividend provision, the issuer has not defaulted in payment of principal, interest or dividends within the preceding three fiscal years.

(n8)Footnote 8. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(5)(B)(ii).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Md. Code § 11-603; S.C. Code § 35-1-330.

(n10)Footnote 10. Code Md. § 11-602(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. Rev. Code Wash. § § 21.20.320(15).

There is no corresponding Uniform Securities Act non-issuer exemption for previously sold and distributed securities.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(M).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 319 (1958):

"These exemptions are apparently based not on a quality standard but on the dual theory that previous distribution is likely to connote marketability and that the administrator has at one time or another passed upon the security."

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(9).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g.,

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 1844(12);

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(18);

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(M);

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(b)(3).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.,

Maryland: Md. Ann. Code § 11-602(13);

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451.802(b)(17).

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g.,

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. § 7309(b)(13);

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(3)(B);

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-5(O)(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g.,

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.900(b)(16)(B);

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(M)(1);

Oregon: Ore. Rev. Stat. § 59.035(9).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-1844(12).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-2844(12); Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(18); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(2)(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Ind. Code § 23-2-2(b)(3)(A); Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(15)(A).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 292.410(1)(o); Mo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 409.402(b)(15); Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-5(O)(3).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Loss & Cowett, n.13 supra.

(n24)Footnote 24. See n.15 supra for representative statutory citations in Florida and Virginia.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Alaska Stat. § 45.55.140(b)(16)(C).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 21.20.320(15)(c).

(n26)Footnote 26. In New Mexico, Texas, and Wisconsin, if the securities have not been previously registered in the state, the exemption may still be available by application to the state securities administrator. See N.M. Stat. Ann. § 58-13B-27(B). Ohio provides that the non-issuer exemption does not apply to securities which were purchased outside the State within one year of the date of sale or which were brought into the State within one year of date of sale unless the securities were registered in Ohio in that period or are eligible for registration by description. See Ohio Rev. Code §

1707.03(M)(3)(b), (c). See ch. 5 supra for discussion of registration by description. It should be noted that, even if the securities were purchased outside of Ohio or transported into Ohio within one year of the date of sale, the transaction might still be exempt if it meets the criteria of the manual exemption, the isolated transaction exemption, the exemption for certain offers and distributions to existing security holders, or exempt transactions in preorganization subscriptions.

(n27)Footnote 27. Ala. Code § 8-6-11(a)(2)(c).

(n28)Footnote 28. Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(b)(3).

(n29)Footnote 29. Ind. Code §§ 23-2-1-2(b)(3)(D), 23-2-1-6(k).

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g.,

Alabama: Ala. Code § 8-6-11(b);

Delaware: Del. Code § 7209(c);

Pennsylvania: 70 Pa. Stat. § 1-204(b);

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 551.24.

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g., Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(3)(C)(iii). Required information includes the names of the issuer's officers and directors, a balance sheet of the issuer as of a date not more than sixteen months prior to the date of sale and a profit and loss statement for the fiscal year preceding that date or the most recent fiscal year. The filing is valid for one year. Annual renewals may be applied for and are to be accompanied by a fee.

See also N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(2)(b). The filing is to be made by a registered dealer and to contain such information relating to the issuer as the Secretary of State may require by rule or order.

See also Wis. Stat. § 551.23(3)(d). Under Securities Regulation § 2.02(3)(b), a notice of the proposed sale is required that includes, inter alia, the prospectus, other information not contained in the prospectus, the trust indenture, if any, a balance sheet, and certain specified undertakings.

Note that the filing is not required if securities of the same class have been registered in Wisconsin under a registration statement becoming effective within two years preceding the sale and registration has not been revoked or suspended. Wis. Stat. § 551.23(3)(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-05(7); see also Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.051(6).

(n33)Footnote 33. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 51:7048(11).

(n34)Footnote 34. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.02(J).

(n35)Footnote 35. Kan. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 17-1261(m).

80 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.06

§ 9.06 Unsolicited Brokerage Transactions

Nearly all Blue Sky laws contain a specific non-issuer exemption for unsolicited brokerage transactions. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act reflects state provisions in its exemption for:

"[a] non-issuer transaction by or through a broker-dealer registered or exempt from registration under this [Act] effecting an unsolicited order or offer to purchase."¹

There is almost no variation among the states in the basic exemption. However, many states added a specific qualification, either in the statute or by rule, that there be a written confirmation or acknowledgment delivered to the customer stating that the transaction was unsolicited. Record-keeping requirements for broker-dealers relating to such confirmations are also imposed.²

"Unsolicited" for purposes of the exemption is not a defined term in Blue Sky laws. However, by rule, California has established a presumption that an offer to buy a security is presumed not to be unsolicited if the broker-dealer knows or has reason to know that the order or offer to buy is in response to any of several identified activities in which the selling broker-dealer has engaged within the prior sixty days. These activities provide solid guidance for identifying a solicited transaction that will not qualify for the exemption generally, and involve the following:

- (a) Publicly quoting a bid or asked price for the security by a means other than an interdealer quotation system that is intended for broker-dealer use only;
- (b) Making a direct solicitation that customers purchase the security;
- (c) Recommending the purchase of the security to customers, either directly or in a manner which would bring the recommendation to the attention of customers;
- (d) Volunteering information about the issuer of the security either to a particular customer who then purchases the security or to customers generally; or
- (e) Executing a transaction to purchase or sell a security pursuant to discretionary authority for a customer in a customer account.³

There are two types of transactions effected by broker-dealers for their customers. "Principal" (or non-agency) transactions involve the broker-dealer acting as dealer, purchasing from or selling to the customer as principal, for its own account. "Agency" trades or transactions are strictly brokerage transactions in this the broker-dealer acts as intermediary but is not itself a party to the transaction. As a matter of federal securities law, transactions effected by a broker-dealer on an agency basis are exempt from registration requirements by section 4(4) of the Securities Act of 1933ⁿ⁴ as brokerage transactions executed upon customer orders. In 1996 NSMIA amended the Federal Securities Act to provide in section 18(b)(4)(B) that "federal covered securities" include those that are subject to the federal section 4(4) exemption for brokerage transactions executed on customers' orders on any national securities exchange or in the over-the-counter market, but not the solicitation of such orders.ⁿ⁵ Thus, section 4(4) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 preempts state brokerage exemptions that would impose any limitations or conditions where pure brokerage, or "agency," transactions are executed. However, non-agency, principal, transactions are not within the coverage of either the federal section 4(4) or state law brokerage transaction exemptions. A separate federal exemption is available,ⁿ⁶ but there is no corresponding separate Blue Sky law exemption for dealer transactions. Non-issuer unsolicited brokerage transaction exemptions therefore remain applicable for non-agency transactions effected for a customer, provided the transaction is unsolicited. Blue Sky exemptions, as illustrated by the 2002 Uniform Securities Act provision quoted above, encompass broker-dealer transactions without differentiating between agency and non-agency roles. Unsolicited non-issuer transactions effected by or through a licensed broker-dealer on a principal basis will thus qualify for the Blue Sky exemption.

There are a number of nuances in the application of the unsolicited brokerage transaction exemption. The exemptions do not, for example, specifically exempt the ultimate sale which may result pursuant to the unsolicited purchase offer, although a court has held that when a broker-dealer acts on an unsolicited order to buy securities, it acting as the purchaser's agent, and there cannot be a sale, as such, between principal and agent.ⁿ⁷ The fact that the transaction may be "by or through" a broker-dealer is significant. If a broker-dealer receives an unsolicited purchase order and does not have the requested securities, it must look for them elsewhere. Since the statute allows the exemption for transactions made through a broker-dealer, the exemption is available to the broker-dealer's vendor. If the exemption covered only transactions by the broker-dealer, the vendor would have to be sure that either the securities were registered or seek its own exemption.ⁿ⁸ This Uniform Act principle is incorporated by a handful of states that do not require non-issuer status for availability of the exemption.ⁿ⁹ Other state provisions grant the exemption only for a transaction by a broker-dealer, which would seem to deprive the vendor of the exemption.ⁿ¹⁰ The Georgia provision is unusual in that the exemption applies only to an affiliate of the issuer making a sale through a registered dealer where neither the affiliate nor the dealer has solicited the purchase order.ⁿ¹¹

Some states insist that the broker-dealer be acting as the purchaser's agent in order for the exemption to be available.ⁿ¹² The agency test is often coupled with requirements that the broker-dealer have no direct or indirect interest in the sale and receive no compensation other than normal commissions involved in the purchase and sale of the securities.ⁿ¹³ The principal-agent test is also relied upon in two states which exempt unsolicited purchases and sales of securities.ⁿ¹⁴ In these states, the statutory language would seem to offer the exemption only to the broker-dealer and not to the vendor.ⁿ¹⁵

Dealing with the question whether a non-issuer transaction is "unsolicited" is often a challenge. Although as discussed above, California has by rule established the elements of a presumption that a transaction is in fact solicited, and thus non-exempt, only a few states have any guidelines on "solicitation." The drafters of the original Uniform Securities Act suggested that such things as a broker-dealer hanging out its shingle, or advertising generally for business, or soliciting discretionary accounts from customers, should not be included as "solicitation" within the meaning of the exemption.ⁿ¹⁶ However, with regard to discretionary accounts, one state, while not ruling on the general solicitation of such accounts, has taken the position that transactions actually executed for existing accounts are not eligible for exemptions as unsolicited offers to buy.ⁿ¹⁷ Another state, by statute, defines "solicitation," for purpose of the exemption, as the soliciting of orders for specific securities, and not general solicitations or general advertising.ⁿ¹⁸

Drafters of the original Uniform Act expressed the further view that "solicitation" should not include the selling of securities by a broker-dealer on the floor of a stock exchange pursuant to a sell order when the transaction is executed in the normal manner on the exchange. A similar situation may arise with respect to over the counter securities. If a broker-dealer with a sell order learns through a quotation service that another broker-dealer is interested in purchasing the same securities, may the first broker-dealer respond to such interest without being considered as soliciting an order to buy? Under a rule of the SEC,ⁿ¹⁹ issued pursuant to the Securities Act of 1933, the answer is yes, if the inquiry into buyer interest is made within sixty days of the date interest is expressed. An interpretation similar to this would seem to be acceptable to the Uniform Act's draftsmen.ⁿ²⁰ One state has, in fact, basically adopted the SEC view by statute.ⁿ²¹ There is, however, a difference of opinion in at least two states as to whether or not publishing quotations on the security is considered the solicitation of an offer to buy.ⁿ²²

In a situation where a customer calls his broker and places an order to buy without prior recommendation by the broker, there is little question of solicitation. However, the more usual circumstance is that the customer's call will initially request more information on the stock. How far a broker-dealer may go before the information is considered a solicitation is a question of fact that will have to be decided on a case by case basis,ⁿ²³ but a large number of claimed unsolicited transactions by any one broker-dealer may give rise to the presumption that the transactions were, in fact, solicited. The general activities of a broker-dealer surrounding the sale will be the determinative factor. One court has held that solicitation is based on active encouragement and that in an unsolicited transaction the seller does no more than take the order and act as the purchaser's agent.ⁿ²⁴ In a case where the broker-dealer originally solicited the purchase and subsequently cautioned his client not to buy any more of the stock, all sales made after the cautioning remark were deemed to be at the instigation of the purchaser and were transactions made pursuant to an unsolicited purchase order.ⁿ²⁵ As the court put it, "a solicitation may cease when the broker strongly and emphatically advises his customer not to make any further purchases of the particular stock."ⁿ²⁶

The unsolicited offer exemption is usually available only in non-issuer transactions,ⁿ²⁷ although a few states have no such limitation in their statutes.ⁿ²⁸ In Texas, the exemption may not be used until the entire initial offering of the securities has been completed,ⁿ²⁹ and it is incumbent on any broker-dealer accepting an unsolicited purchase order to ascertain that the initial offering has been sold.ⁿ³⁰

Although few states require any filing for the exemption,ⁿ³¹ records of the transaction may be required to be kept and made available to administrators in most states. The original Uniform Securities Act exemption provides that "the Administrator may by rule require that the customer acknowledge upon a specified form that the sale was unsolicited, and that a signed copy of each form be preserved by the broker-dealer for a specified period."ⁿ³² While most states substantially adopted this provision,ⁿ³³ none actually requires an affirmative written acknowledgment by the customer. Rather, in lieu of a customer acknowledgment, the broker-dealer may deliver to the purchaser a confirmation of sale which states that the transaction was executed pursuant to an unsolicited order. In some states the confirmation must also clearly identify all commissions and compensation paid to the broker-dealer in the transaction.ⁿ³⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(6); see also Unif Sec. Act § 402(b)(3); Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(5).

(n2)Footnote 2. In Colorado, for example, the exemption is provided for:

"Any nonissuer transaction effected by or through a licensed broker-dealer pursuant to an unsolicited order or offer to buy, if either the confirmation of the transaction delivered to the customer clearly states that the transaction was unsolicited or the broker-dealer obtains a written acknowledgment signed by the customer that the transaction was unsolicited and a copy of the confirmation or the acknowledgment is preserved by the broker-dealer for such period as the securities commissioner may, by rule, require."
Colo. Sec. Act § 11-51-308(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 10 Cal. Code. Regs., Rule 260.104.

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. See section 4(3) of the Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77d(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lane v. Griswold, 273 N.C. 1, 159 S.E.2d 338 (1968) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Official comment to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(3), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 363 (1958).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(b)(13).

The statute is substantially the same as the Uniform Securities Act provision except that the term "non-issuer" is omitted.

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g.,

New York: N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. § 359-ff(5)(b);

Texas: Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581-5(P).

(n11)Footnote 11. Ga. Code Ann. § 10-5-9(4).

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g.,

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(c);

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(T).

See also Alaska Adm. Code, 3A.A.C.08.910(4). But note the draftsmen's commentary to § 402(b)(3) of the Uniform Securities Act, Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 364 (1958), where it is stated that the anticipated under the Uniform Act exemption is lack of solicitation. The exemption "applies on that condition regardless of whether the broker-dealer acts as an agent (in the common-law sense) or as principal." Id.

(n13)Footnote 13. The Ohio statute does not have the commission requirement. In Alaska and Arkansas only the purchaser may be the source of compensation.

(n14)Footnote 14. See e.g.,

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(13);

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(c).

But see also n.10 supra for provisions in New York. The federal exemption upon which these state exemptions are based applies to both unsolicited offers and sales.

(n15)Footnote 15. See n.14 supra.

(n16)Footnote 16. Draftsmen's commentary to Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(3), Loss & Cowett, Blue Sky Law 364 (1958).

(n17)Footnote 17. Cal. Commissioner of Corporations, Release No. 18-C, May 15, 1970. This is now an express element of the California presumption adopted by rule.

(n18)Footnote 18. Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(T).

(n19)Footnote 19. 17 C.F.R § 230.144(g)(2).

(n20)Footnote 20. Loss & Cowett, n.16 supra, at 364 , 365.

(n21)Footnote 21. See Cal. Corp. Code § 25104(b).

"[A]n inquiry regarding a written bid for a security or a written solicitation of an offer to sell a security made by another broker-dealer within the previous 60 days, shall not be considered the solicitation of an order or offer to buy."

See California Securities Rule 260.104.

See also Massachusetts Securities Rule § 14.402(b)(3)(A).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Massachusetts Securities Rule § 14.402(b)(93)(A); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 1707.03(T).

(n23)Footnote 23. In Schmid v. Langenberg, 526 S.W.2d 940 (Mo. App. 1975) , the transaction arose when plaintiff asked his broker about the latter's personal investments. The broker responded that he had invested in a stock which was not registered in the State and could therefore not discuss it but could answer specific questions about the investment. Plaintiff subsequently called the broker with a purchase order for the stock. The court, saying that the word "unsolicited" should be defined in a non-technical sense, held that a jury verdict finding the transaction to be pursuant to an unsolicited offer to buy would not be disturbed, especially in view of the fact that plaintiff testified that he would have signed a non-solicitation letter had one been presented to him.

(n24)Footnote 24. Home Indemnity Co. v. Reynolds & Co., 38 Ill. App. 2d 358, 187 N.E.2d 274, 279 (1963) :

A solicited sale is one in which the salesman "actively encourages the purchase or sale of a security by a client." Unsolicited sales, in which a customer requests that a security be purchased for him and the salesman just takes the order and acts as agent for the purchaser, are not prohibited.

See also Schmid v. Langenberg, 526 S.W.2d 940 (Mo. App. 1975) , discussed at n.23 supra.

(n25)Footnote 25. Martin v. Orvis Brothers & Co., 25 Ill. App. 3d 238, 323 N.E.2d 73 (1975) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Id., 323 N.E.2d at 82 .

(n27)Footnote 27. All states adopting the Uniform Securities Act provision specify that this is a non-issuer exemption.

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g.,

Oregon: Ore Rev. Stat. § 59.035(8);

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(b)(4).

See also Wis. Adm. Code § 2.02(2). The Wisconsin regulation exempts an isolated sale for the benefit of an issuer of redeemable securities of an investment company registered under the Investment Companies Act of 1940. The transaction must be effected through a broker-dealer pursuant to an unsolicited purchase order. The broker-dealer is required to obtain a written acknowledgement from the buyer that the purchase was unsolicited or supply the buyer with a confirmation or memorandum confirming the unsolicited nature of the transaction.

(n29)Footnote 29. See Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. § 581(5)(P).

(n30)Footnote 30. In Texas, the initial offering is deemed complete when the "non-exempt public distribution of such securities has been completely sold to the public." See Securities Rule § 109.8.

(n31)Footnote 31. See Iowa Securities Rule 50.10(502). The administrator requires written notice whenever a broker-dealer is executing more than six unsolicited orders or offers to buy which have been received during any three consecutive days. Notice need not be given if some other exemption may be relied upon.

(n32)Footnote 32. Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(3).

(n33)Footnote 33. See, e.g.,

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 45.55.140(b)(11);

Conneticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ch. 662 § 36b-21(b)(4);

New Jersey: N.J. Stat Ann. § 49:3-50(b)(3).

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(T).

81 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.07

§ 9.07 Transactions by Fiduciaries and In Judicial Sales

When securities are sold under the supervision of a court of competent jurisdiction, the seller is held accountable to the court, and the court effectively policies the transactions. An executor, for example, may be required by the testator to liquidate all securities which are part of the estate. Before the executor may act as such, his appointment must be approved by an appropriate court, and, should the executor misuse his authority, he is subject to such penalties as the court may lawfully issue.ⁿ¹ Other court appointed or supervised persons who dispose of securities are likewise permitted to sell securities without restrictions. As summarized by the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, registration exemptions are provided for: "[a] transaction by an executor, administrator of an estate, sheriff, marshal, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, guardian, or conservator."ⁿ²

Of the states adopting the Uniform Act provision,ⁿ³ two of them added the requirement that the person making the sale be acting in the performance of his official duties.ⁿ⁴ This stipulation is probably superfluous, for it is unlikely that the exemption would be allowed in any state under conditions where the seller is not acting in an official capacity. The lists of persons eligible for the exemption in non-Uniform Act states varies in some respects from the list in the states following the Uniform Act.ⁿ⁵ However, these states, in addition to naming eligible persons, apply the exemption to judicial sales generally.ⁿ⁶ Two states exempt judicial sales without further specification of eligible persons.ⁿ⁷

The exemption is not labeled specifically as a "non-issuer" exemption in Blue Sky laws, and would be available for dispositions of securities in circumstances that might otherwise be considered an issuer distribution, or one on behalf of the issuer but for the judicial process involved. As presented in Chapter 8, however, there are specific issuer transaction exemptions for judicially approved or supervised reorganizations.ⁿ⁸ The transaction exemption for fiduciaries and others acting in a judicially supervised capacity, however, is focused specifically on permitting the activities of those persons in their official capacities.

The fact that transactions by fiduciaries and other judicially supervised persons are exempt from registration requirements does not mean that the seller is relieved from responsibility under the antifraud provisions of Blue Sky laws.ⁿ⁹ A person making a fraudulent offer or sale of securities under these circumstances is subject to penalties of the court empowering him to make the sale and the Blue Sky law.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.: N.Y. Sur. Ct. Proc. Act §§ 711, 1414.

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(12). This provision is identical to section 402(b)(6) of the original Uniform Securities Act, and to section 402(8) of the Revised Uniform Securities Act.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g.,

California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25104(f);

Michigan: Mich. Comp. L. § 451-802(b)(6);

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(6);

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 48-2-103(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g.,

Idaho: Idaho Code § 30-1435(1)(f);

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 30-10-105(5).

(n5)Footnote 5. In some states, sheriffs and marshals, for example, are not on the itemized list of eligible persons. See Fla. Stat. Ann. § 517.061(1); N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. §§ 359-f(1)(L): 359ff-(5)(e).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.,

Indiana: Ind. Code § 23-2-1-2(b)(6);

Rhode Island: R. I. Rev. L. Ann. § 7-11-402(7);

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 13.1-514(b)(5).

(n7)Footnote 7. Minn. Stat. Ann. § 80A.15(2)(e); N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 421-B:17(II)(e).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Chap. 8.03[1][d], supra .

(n9)Footnote 9. See ch. 7 supra.

82 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.08

§ 9.08 Pledge Transactions

Securities pledged as collateral to secure a loan may be sold by the non-issuer pledgee pursuant to an exemption in all Blue Sky laws provided the underlying pledge and the transaction are bona fide. The 2002 Uniform Securities Act is representative in its provision exempting "a non-issuer transaction executed by a bona fide pledgee without the purpose of evading this [Act]."n1 The 2002 Uniform Act exemption is identical to the original Uniform Act provision,n2 and is substantially identical to that contained in the Revised Uniform Securities Act. It has been adopted in most states.n3 Similar, albeit somewhat more complex, provisions adopted in other statesn4 have the same result.

Most exemptions for pledge transactions do not prohibit the issuer from benefiting from the pledgee sale.n5 As a result, an issuer may pledge its own securities and have them sold, without registration, upon default. Note, however, that states require the transaction to be by a bona fide pledgeen6 or for recovery of a bona fide debt.n7 A further condition is that the transaction must be without any purpose of evading the securities act.n8 These provisions would obviously have the effect of denying the exemption where the issuer and the pledgee are in collusion to have the issuer default on the loan so that the securities could be sold to the public without registration.n9 In states where the pledgee exemption is limited to non-issuer transactions,n10 the exemption would, of course, not be applicable. Other conditions may apply. One state, for example, allows pledgee sales only if the amount of securities sold does not exceed two percent of the entire issue, and then only if the pledgee files a notice of exemption with the administrator and obtains his permission for the sale.n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(7).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unif. Sec. Act § 402(b)(7).

(n3)Footnote 3. See e.g.,

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. L. § 485-6(7);

Pennsylvania: Pa. Stat. § 1-203(m);

Utah: Utah Code § 61-1-14(2)(g).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ga. Code § 10-5-9(2); Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 90.530(9).

(n5)Footnote 5. Only California, Georgia, Nevada and Virginia limit the pledgee exemption to non-issuer transactions. In addition, Virginia allows the exemption only when the pledgee sale constitutes an isolated transaction. See § 9.03 supra.

For a discussion of non-issuer exemptions generally and the relationship of control person to issuer for exemption purposes, see § 9.02[1] supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. See statutory citations at n.2 supra. See also Cal. Corp. Code § 25104(e); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 78A-17(7).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-1844(3); Vt. Stat. § 42049(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. See statutory citations at n.2 supra. See also Fla. Stat. § 517.061(2); La. Rev. Stat. § 51:709(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. See California Securities Regulations, Reg. 260.104.2.

"The phrase 'bona fide secured party,' as used in Subdivision (e) of Section 25104 of the Code, does not include a secured party who takes securities in pledge without any intention or expectation that they will be redeemed but merely as a step in the distribution thereof to the public."

See also Pennsylvania Securities Regulations § 203.131.

"The phrase 'bona fide pledgee' as used in subsection (m) of § 203 shall include a secured party who takes securities in pledge to secure a bona fide debt. Such phrase shall not include a secured party who takes securities in pledge either: (i) without any intention or expectation that they will be redeemed but merely as a step in the distribution thereof to the public, or, (ii) without having secured knowledge, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, prior to the consummation of the pledge that the securities taken in pledge are lawfully owned by the party making the pledge."

(n10)Footnote 10. See n.5 supra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See N.D. Cent. Code § 10-04-06(2).

83 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.09

§ 9.09 Outstanding Securities of Federal Reporting Issuers

Although they were directly impacted by the enactment of NSMIA in 1996, many state Blue Sky laws contain a non-issuer exemption for transactions in an outstanding security if the issuer has a class of securities subject to registration under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934ⁿ¹ and has been subject to the reporting requirements of section 13 or 15(d) thereunder for some specified period of time before the transaction. These exemptions alternatively provide for the submission of information to the state administrator that is substantially comparable to the information which the issuer would be required to file under the federal securities laws if it had a class of securities registered.ⁿ²

As noted earlier in § 9.01, the creation of "federal covered securities" by NSMIA in 1996, and the related preemption of state securities laws in regard to them, directly impacted applications of certain non-issuer transaction exemptions in Blue Sky laws. After NSMIA, non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer in outstanding securities of an issuer that files reports with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission under the reporting requirements of sections 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934ⁿ³ are "covered securities" for which registration or qualification-related state regulation is preempted. Under the federal securities laws a transaction by one who is not an issuer, underwriter or dealer is exempt from federal registration by section 4(1) of the Securities Act of 1933.ⁿ⁴ There is, however, no specific counterpart exemption from state Blue Sky laws, although non-issuer isolated sales and unsolicited brokerage transaction exemptions would often apply. Where the issuer of the securities is a reporting company under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 the states with a specific non-issuer transaction exemption based on that qualification permitted a broader range of transactions. NSMIA, however, removed non-issuer transactions in securities of federal reporting issuers from state registration or qualification requirements altogether.

While a state exemption for non-issuer transactions in securities of a federal reporting issuer is no longer necessary --providing the non-issuer is in fact not an issuer and is not deemed to be an underwriter or dealer in the particular circumstances-- some issuers eligible to become reporting issuers by registering a class of securities under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 may elect not to do so. Moreover, an issuer with a class of securities registered under section 12 and previously in compliance with reporting requirements may become eligible to de-register, and thus no longer be subject to reporting requirements. In either scenario a Blue Sky law exemption covering non-issuer transactions in securities of an issuer that is "eligible" for federal reporting is meaningful if that issuer, in order to trigger the exemption, elects the procedure to submit comparable information to the state administrator.

The common form of Blue Sky exemption for non-issuer transactions in securities of a reporting issuer refers only to the issuer having a class of securities registered under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and not the specific security that is the subject of the transaction.ⁿ⁵ Others simply refer to an "issuer that is required to file reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission" pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ⁶ Thus, the Blue Sky exemption extends to non-issuer transactions in all securities of the qualifying issuer.

In recognition of the fact that after NSMIA transactions in securities of federal reporting issuers that are exempt under section 4(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 are now federal covered securities, the 2002 Uniform Securities Act does not include a non-issuer transaction exemption based on a federal reporting issuer. It does, however, include an exemption for non-issuer transactions by or through a broker-dealer in an outstanding security when a guarantor of the security files reports under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.ⁿ⁷ This provision has to date only been adopted in those states, and the U.S. Virgin Islands, that have enacted the 2002 Uniform Act. "Guarantor" involvement may be meaningful in regard to some types of debt securities for which non-issuer transactions and resales might occur. In the end, however, the 2002 Uniform Act provision simply illustrates that after NSMIA preexisting state law non-issuer transaction exemptions based upon a federal reporting issuer are no longer a significant consideration in practice under Blue Sky laws.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 78l.

(n2)Footnote 2. Rhode Island is typical in providing an exemption for:

"[a] non-issuer transaction in an outstanding security if the issuer of the security has a class of securities subject to registration under § 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934... and has been subject to the reporting requirements of § 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934... for not less than ninety (90) days before the transaction; or has filed and maintained with the director for not less than ninety (90) days before the transaction information, in such form as the director, by rule, specifies, substantially comparable to the information which the issuer would be required to file under § 12(b) or § 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934... were the issuer to have a class of its securities registered under § 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and paid a fee with the filing of three hundred dollars ($300). Gen. Laws R.I. § 7-11-402(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. §§ 78m, 78o(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Gen. Laws R.I. § 7-11-402(2), n.2, supra.

(n6)Footnote 6. see, e.g., Tenn. Code § 48-2-103(b)(7).

(n7)Footnote 7. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(4).

84 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 9 Exempt Non-Issuer and Resale Transactions

1-9 Blue Sky Regulation § 9.10

§ 9.10 Other Non-Issuer Exemptions

The 2002 Uniform Securities Act contains three additional non-issuer transaction exemptions that have no prior Uniform Act roots and are not yet common provisions in Blue Sky laws. Sections 202(3) and 203(23) of the 2002 Uniform Act exempt non-issuer transactions in certain foreign securities. Section 202(8) addresses transactions by non-issuers who are federal covered investment advisers and who effect transactions in the exercise of discretionary trading authority. All three provisions, and the extent to which they are a part of the current Blue Sky exemption landscape are discussed below.

[1] Transactions In Certain Foreign Securities The 2002 Uniform Securities Act contains two non-issuer transaction exemptions where specified foreign securities are involved. Section 202(3) of the 2002 Uniform Act establishes an exemption for:

"[a] non-issuer transaction by or through a broker-dealer registered or exempt from registration under this [Act] in a security of a foreign issuer that is a margin security defined in regulations or rules adopted by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System."n1

Section 202(23) likewise establishes an exemption for:

"[A] non-issuer transaction in an outstanding security by or through a broker-dealer registered or exempt from registration under this [Act], if the issuer is a reporting issuer in a foreign jurisdiction designated by this paragraph or by a rule adopted or order issued under this [Act]; has been subject to continuous reporting requirements in the foreign jurisdiction for not less than 180 days before the transaction; and the security is listed on the foreign jurisdiction's securities exchange that has been designated by this paragraph or by rule adopted or order issued under this [Act], or is a security of the same issuer that is of senior or substantially equal rank to the listed security or is a warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to any of the foregoing...."n2

As noted above, there is no original Uniform Act antecedent for these provisions. The drafters of the 2002 Uniform Act point out that NASAA had recommended that specified foreign non-issuer transactions be exempt pursuant to a "manual" exemption when there was disclosure of certain information about the issuer in the issuer's country of domicile.n3 Two states, Arizona and New Mexico, had in fact crafted such non-issuer transaction exemptions. The Arizona exemption applies if the class of foreign securities has been outstanding in the hands of the public for at least 90 days preceding the transaction, and the foreign issuer meets specified business operation, listing, tangible asset and net income requirements, as well as either being listed in a specified manual containing requisite information or, alternatively, being subject to U.S. reporting requirements.ⁿ⁴ New Mexico, also by rule, provides a "world class" exemption for transactions by a broker-dealer in securities of a qualifying foreign issuer. Qualifications include listing in a designated securities manual and an exchange listing.ⁿ⁵ New Mexico also includes as a qualifying criterion securities that are approved for margin under Regulation T of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and which appear in the Federal Reserve Board's most recent List of Foreign Margin Stocks as an alternative to a manual listing.ⁿ⁶ This qualification is the basis for the separate non-issuer transaction exemption in section 202(3) of the 2002 Uniform Act, quoted above, which uses margin securities to identify sufficiently seasoned foreign securities to justify the transaction exemption.ⁿ⁷

In 2002 NASAA recommended an amendment to section 402 of the original Uniform Securities Act to add a transaction exemption for:

"[A] non-issuer transaction in an outstanding security by a registered agent of a registered broker-dealer, provided that:

1. The issuer is a reporting issuer in a foreign country or jurisdiction designated in [the Act] or by rule [or order] of the Administrator, and has been subject to continuous reporting requirements in such foreign country for not less than 180 days before the transaction; and
2. The security is listed on such foreign country's securities exchange which has been designated in [the Act] or by rule [or order] of the Administrator, or is a security of the same issuer which is of senior or substantially equal rank to such listed security or is a warrant or right to purchase or subscribe to any of the foregoing."ⁿ⁸ ⁿ⁹ The NASAA addition to the Uniform Act was carried into the 2002 Uniform Securities Act as section 202(23), and the non-issuer exemption in this form is now available in Idaho,ⁿ¹⁰ Missouri,ⁿ¹¹ Oklahoma,ⁿ¹² South Dakota,ⁿ¹³ Utah,ⁿ¹⁴ and the U.S. Virgin Islands.ⁿ¹⁵ All but one of these states, and the U.S. Virgin Islands, have adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act. The 2002 Uniform Act specifically identifies Canada, together with its provinces and territories as a "designated foreign jurisdiction," and the Toronto Stock Exchange as a designated securities exchange for qualification under the exemption. These designations are also a part of the exemption as adopted in those states and the U.S.V.I. that have adopted the 2002 Uniform Act. The exemption separately provides authority for the administrator to designate by rule or order other specific foreign jurisdictions and their securities exchanges upon an adequate showing.ⁿ¹⁶ The exemption also provides authority for the administrator to revoke any designation if necessary or appropriate in the public interest and for the protection of investors.

[2] Transactions By Federal Covered Investment Advisers Section 202(8) of the 2002 Uniform Securities Actⁿ¹⁷ creates a new exemption for non-issuer transactions:

"[b]y a federal covered investment adviser with investments under management in excess of $100,000,000 acting in the exercise of discretionary authority in a signed record for the account of others."

This exemption reflects the 1996 NSMIA division of state and federal regulatory authority as between investment advisers registered with the SEC pursuant to the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 and those advisers no longer eligible for federal registration who are now regulated under state Blue Sky laws. Thus, there is no prior Uniform Act antecedent.

The drafters of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act added the exemption in recognition that federal covered investment advisers are sophisticated financial professionals capable of determining the merits of a security and do not require the protections provided by registration and qualification provisions in a particular state.ⁿ¹⁸ There is a wide range of investment advisers eligible to become federal covered advisers, however, and the $100,000,000 assets under management requirement operates to separate those advisers for whom the drafters' presumption is more confidently applied from the larger adviser community. The exemption is now a part of Blue Sky laws in those states that have adopted the 2002 Uniform Act. There is no specific counterpart or similar exemption in other states.

As a non-issuer transaction exemption intended to cover transactions by an intermediary, the investment adviser exemption remains open to the same scrutiny applicable to any other non-issuer transaction to assure that it not be used to facilitate an issuer distribution or in some other manner to subvert the objectives of Blue Sky laws. Transactions effected by an investment adviser/manager of a control person or affiliate of an issuer in securities of the issuer may not be eligible despite the adviser's discretionary authority to effect the transactions.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(3).

(n2)Footnote 2. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § § 202(23).

(n3)Footnote 3. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act, Official Comments, § 202(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ariz. Admin. Code Sec. R14-4-138.

(n5)Footnote 5. See N.M. Admin. Code Rule 12.11.12.19.

The reference to "world class" in connection with this non-issuer transaction exemption should not be confused with the World Class Foreign Issuer Exemption" adopted by NASAA in 1996 as a securities exemption. This exemption for qualifying foreign issuers is now a part of several Blue Sky laws, and is founded on the same premise as the non-issuer transaction exemptions discussed above, namely, that the manifest quality of and disclosure of information available in connection with such issuers and their securities eliminates the need for protections of state Blue Sky registration and qualification provisions.

(n6)Footnote 6. N.M. Admin. Code § 12.11.12.19(A)(1)(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 2002 Unif. Sec. Act, Official Comments, § 202(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. The 2002 NASSA amendment to section 402(b) of the Uniform Act, to create section 402(b)(13), is reproduced in CCH NASAA Reports P 4882, at 3597.

(n9)Footnote 9. The NASAA amendment adds a specific non-issuer transaction exemption. It should not be confused with the NASAA "World Class Foreign Issuer Exemption," adopted by NASAA in 1996 as a securities exemption, and which has also made its way into several Blue Sky laws.

(n10)Footnote 10. Id. Code § 30-14-202(23).

(n11)Footnote 11. Rev. Stat. Mo. § 2-202(23).

(n12)Footnote 12. 71 Okla. Stat. § 1-202(24).

(n13)Footnote 13. S.D. Cod. Laws § 47-31B-202(23).

(n14)Footnote 14. Utah Sec. Div. R. R164-14-22s.

(n15)Footnote 15. 23 V.I. Code § 612(23).

(n16)Footnote 16. As the drafters of the 2002 Uniform Securities Act note, this authority is established in conformity with the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS), see 2002 Unif. Sec. Act, Official Comments § 202(23).

(n17)Footnote 17. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(8).

(n18)Footnote 18. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act, Official Comments, § 202(8).

85 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

1-10 Blue Sky Regulation 10.syn

§ 10.syn Synopsis to Chapter 10: Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

§ 10.01 Regulatory Challenges

§ 10.02 Threshold Regulatory Considerations

[1] The Creation of a "Security."

[2] Federal Securities Law Implications

[3] Intermediary Activities

§ 10.03 Federal and State Exemptions

[1] Intrastate Offerings

[2] "Private" Offerings

[3] Accredited Investor Offerings

§ 10.04 Limited Offering Alternatives

[1] Federal Regulation D and the ULOE

[2] Small Corporate Offering Registration (SCOR)

[3] Other Limited Offerings

[a] Regulation A Offerings

[b] Other State Alternatives

§ 10.05 SEC Rule 504 Offerings Under Blue Sky Laws.

§ 10.06 Integration and Continuing Capital Formation

86 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

1-10 Blue Sky Regulation § 10.01

§ 10.01 Regulatory Challenges

The United States enjoys the strongest capital markets in the world. In no small measure the strength of those markets lies in their depth and breadth. Backyard entrepreneurs and the largest "world class" companies alike share access to capital markets and the opportunities for success they make possible. To be sure, the scope and manner of capital formation may be drastically different as between the small businessperson and the world class company, but the object is the same, and the opportunities afforded to both are what drive the economy. The neighborhood capital market in which the individual entrepreneur is able to find and access the financial resources of family and friends to exploit a simple idea is no less significant than the ability of General Motors to access a consortium of money center banks and financial institutions in support of a billion dollar business expansion.

Financial market regulators do not desire to stand in the way of capital formation in either of the two extreme settings described above. Indeed, as to small business capital formation, since the passage of the federal Small Business Incentive Act of 1980,ⁿ¹ which is now contained in section 19 of the Federal Securities Act of 1933,ⁿ² federal and state securities regulators have worked together to find ways to help small business raise capital. The statutory mandate is clear, as section 19(d)(2) of the federal act prescribes as national policy:

It is the declared policy of this subsection that there should be greater Federal and State cooperation in securities matters, including--

- (A) maximum effectiveness of regulation,
- (B) maximum uniformity in Federal and State regulatory standards,
- (C) minimum interference with the business of capital formation, and

(D) a substantial reduction in costs and paperwork to diminish the burdens of raising investment capital (particularly by small business) and to diminish the costs of administration of the Government programs involved.ⁿ³

A further mandate of the 1980 legislation was for the development of a uniform exemption from securities law registration requirements for small issuers, which could be agreed upon among several states or between the states and the federal government.ⁿ⁴ Out of this mandate there later emerged Form U-7 and the Small Corporate Offering Registration (SCOR) process that is today widely in place among the states.ⁿ⁵ Although not a federal exemption, as such, the SCOR design has effectively been implemented through SEC Regulation D under the 1933 Act, which provides for various limited offering exemptions from federal registration requirements, as well as Regulation A under the Act, and leaves to the states the ultimate authority to address requirements for small local and regional offerings that are eligible for SCOR and the use of Form U-7.

The focus of the 1980 federal legislation on elimination of barriers to small business capital formation reflected the challenges to small business and entrepreneurial capital formation that are presented not only by dual federal and state securities regulatory systems themselves, but by the costs and complexity of compliance within both systems. Just as important, both federal and state securities laws and regulations seriously limited access to sources of capital through restrictions on the extent to which small businesses could reach out to potential investors without running afoul of prohibitions on "offers" of securities, or the extent to which third-party networks or systems designed to match those in need of capital with providers could operate consistent with intermediary regulation by the states.

Efforts since 1980 to address such concerns have resulted in such progress as the widespread adoption of the NASAA Model Accredited Investor Exemption, and its interface with networks such as ACE-Net, a system sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration. Several states have followed the lead of NASAA to ease capital formation by small businesses by adopting "testing the waters" provisions. These states have made statutory or rule changes to permit offers, but not sales, of a security made by or on behalf of an issuer for the purpose of soliciting an indication of interest in receiving a prospectus for the security. Testing the waters permits an issuer to find out whether there is interest in investing in its business prior to expending resources in structuring and launching an offering.

States have also adopted varied forms of limited offering exemptions, most with the design of enabling greater access to capital and capital markets by those enterprises that create jobs and contribute to the state economy. The State Guides that are a part of this Treatise each present the array of limited offering exemptions or SCOR-related accommodations that are now an important element of state Blue Sky laws. The State Guides also disclose whether and to what extent "testing the waters" or other accommodations to small business capital formation are available in each state.

All of this is not to say that there remain no significant challenges in small business capital formation. To the contrary, state securities regulators continue to confront the need to balance investor protection against the need for easier access to capital. Capital formation for legitimate enterprises and entrepreneurial undertakings must be encouraged and accommodated; yet at the same time the potential for fraud and other prohibited practices in these settings must also remain a paramount concern. Promissory notes of highly risky or failing enterprises offered to elderly persons as a safe alternative for the investment of retirement assets may appear on the surface little different than a legitimate undertaking to obtain debt financing for a business enterprise through the issuance of promissory notes or other forms of debt instruments, and both sets of circumstances must be subject to scrutiny under registration and antifraud provisions of Blue Sky laws. The challenge in legitimate small business capital formation is to carefully plan and put in place a process for raising money that is consistent with the purpose and operation of Blue Sky laws, and which assures that either Blue Sky protections are not needed, or that one of the numerous opportunities to limit the burdens of compliance is properly utilized.

This chapter addresses the elements of planning and process that are necessary for efficient small business capital formation in the state regulatory environment. Whether debt or equity is the focus makes no difference; nor does the particular type of "security" or instrument that may be involved in the process. In small business capital formation the focus is on circumstances that either present the need for "investor" protection, in which some form of compliance with Blue Sky laws is necessary, or in which there is no purpose in applying those laws. In this analysis an exemption from compliance with registration provisions of a state Blue Sky law is in reality a form of compliance. The availability of an exemption, either for the security involved or for the particular transaction, may require some affirmative action on the part of the person relying on it, or it may be self-executing. In either case, however, reliance on an exemption from Blue Sky laws in capital formation is a process requiring planning and careful execution. Moreover, the antifraud provisions of Blue Sky laws will almost invariably apply in that process, regardless of any exemption from registration requirements.

It is thus essential to understand fully the fundamental point in small business capital formation that to be "exempt" under Blue Sky laws is not to be "excluded" from coverage of those laws. Small business capital formation may in fact be carried out in circumstances that are free from securities law concerns, and in § 10.2 below such threshold considerations are addressed. Meaningful opportunities to be excluded entirely from securities law coverage do exist, but they are wholly dependent upon the absence of a "security" in the relationship between the provider of capital and the small business user in need of it. Chapter 2 of this Treatise examines the fundamental notion of what is a "security" in great detail, and its importance cannot be overstated. In this chapter, however, only the threshold consideration for small business capital formation is considered, as it must be, as a challenge to those who seek "investors." Once past that threshold analysis the array of opportunities for compliance with Blue Sky laws in small business capital formation is examined, not as challenges or barriers to the process, but in fact as opportunities.

The challenge in small business capital formation presented by Blue Sky laws and regulations is only the challenge of the unknown and the fear of regulatory consequences when no attention is paid to planning and process at the outset. Great progress has been made in making Blue Sky laws into engines of small business capital formation rather than barriers. In the sections that follow, an amalgam of the mechanisms by which small business capital formation is favored in the application of Blue Sky laws is addressed. In their broader applications these mechanisms are addressed in great detail throughout the Treatise, and their particular availability in any state is a matter for the individual State Guides. What follows in this chapter, however, is a specialized focus on the practical role of Blue Sky regulation in small business capital formation.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Omnibus Small Business Capital Formation Act of 1980, § 505, Pub. Law. 96-477.

(n2)Footnote 2. 15 U.S.C. § 77s.

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 77s(d)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 77s(d)(3)(C).

(n5)Footnote 5. Form U-7, the Small Corporate Offering Registration Form, was initially adopted by the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) on April 29, 1989, and has since been amended on two occasions. Interstate use of the SCOR registration process and Form U-7 is coordinated through regions of the country.

87 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

1-10 Blue Sky Regulation § 10.02

§ 10.02 Threshold Regulatory Considerations

[1] The Creation of a "Security." For small businesses and entrepreneurs, capital formation is most commonly spoken about in terms of finding "investors." As a practical matter, all of those persons or entities that contribute capital in the formation or financing of a business enterprise are investors. Yet as thoroughly explored in Chapter 2, an "investor" within the intended protection of state and federal securities laws involves a much more refined notion than one who simply provides capital. Banks and other commercial lenders provide capital to start-up businesses, but in most circumstances are not viewed as investors for purposes of securities law protections despite the fact that a promissory "note" is identified as a security in all statutory definitions of the term. Likewise, true general partners and joint venturers who come together to pool financial resources and talents in the creation and operation of a business enterprise invest capital, but cannot claim the protection of securities laws when the nature of their relationship does not involve a separation between their capital contribution and the determinants of risk of the enterprise in which they are direct participants.

Small business capital formation may take place entirely outside the scope of state or federal securities laws. The single most important threshold consideration in the process is to determine whether there are securities law concerns at all. Blue Sky laws will have no impact on capital formation accomplished, initially and on a continuing basis, through these methods or mechanisms:

(1) Bona fide loans or financing. Debtor-creditor relationships that involve negotiated terms, adequate security, protective covenants and no equity conversion feature generally do not involve the critical element of investment risk that is essential to the creation of a security. The conclusion is not dependent on a "commercial" lender being involved. In small business capital formation a true debtor-creditor relationship may be established without regard to the characteristics of the lender. The focus is on the nature of the relationship between the debtor and creditor and the extent of protections afforded in the transaction that are the product of the creditor's ability to act directly for its own protection or to have information and secure protections in a negotiated transaction setting. Small businesses and entrepreneurs may raise capital by borrowing money, and unless the nature of the transaction and relationship between the parties is such as to make the lender a true "investor," Blue Sky laws have no role in the process.

To be sure, there is ample authority under Blue Sky laws for the examination of promissory notes and other debt instruments involved in ostensible debtor-creditor relationships to determine whether in fact a security is involved.ⁿ⁶ Indeed, first in the array of instruments and things defined as securities in the Blue Sky laws of all states is "any note."

As thoroughly discussed in Chapter 2, however, it is just as clear that not all notes or evidences of indebtedness are intended to be covered. In small business capital formation the legitimate use of private debt financing is a meaningful opportunity that remains available.

(2) True partnership and joint venture owner relationships. Consider the situation in which A, B, and C pool their funds to purchase an apartment building. By mutual agreement the three individuals delegate day-to-day management responsibilities to C, who will receive a somewhat larger share of net profits for her efforts. Otherwise the individuals intend to share equally in profits and losses of what they hope will be a successful enterprise.

In this scenario each of the participants has acquired an ownership interest in tangible property. It is not direct ownership, but rather an undivided, indirect interest to which the right to possess is curtailed and control is apportioned. Though something less than absolute, it is ownership nonetheless, and the dominant attribute among the three participants is the ultimate control each of them is presumed to possess and exercise. Despite the delegation of day-to-day management duties to one among them, the ultimate ability of each participant to exercise control over the enterprise is presumed. This empowerment, the opportunity to exercise control, creates a relationship of general partnership or as joint venturers.ⁿ⁷ They are in practical terms owners of the property and its value as an enterprise.

A security is not created in these relationships. A true general partnership or joint venture relationship does not create a security because it is premised upon the ability of participants to control the enterprise. Agreements negotiated one-on-one, creating enterprises in which "investors" are actively involved, have access to or have the power to obtain information, and are able to protect their own interests, are not within the protective reach of securities laws. Many things could be done to alter the relationship between participants in such a manner that the extent of risk they face in contributing to the capital of the enterprise is also altered. The existence of a true partnership or joint venture can be nullified or made impossible, and a different set of concerns arises in the capital formation process in which the protection of securities laws for "investors" is invited. The critical point, however, is that in planning for capital formation true partnership and joint venture relationships among participants will not trigger securities law compliance requirements.

(3) Certain "corporate" relationships. The nature of the relationship described above in terms of a true partnership or joint venture can also have application in certain relationships established through a corporate structure. As discussed in Chapter 2, some state courts have evidenced willingness to treat corporate relationships of "stockholders" that fairly approximate partnership or joint venture relationships as beyond the purview of Blue Sky laws.ⁿ⁸ An Illinois appellate court, for example, declined to extend coverage of that state's Blue Sky law remedies to the sale of corporate stock in a transaction that, according to the court, involved only the creation of a partnership in corporate form.ⁿ⁹ Forms of "corporate" relationships that are strictly defined by an agreement among the participants, for example, and which empower participants in the same manner as true partners may be seen as not requiring the application of securities laws.

From a planning perspective, however, any reliance on such a notion to support capital formation activities via the sale of "stock" would be a dangerous undertaking. Corporate stock possessing all the attributes and characteristics of traditional corporate stock will almost invariably be deemed to be a security for purposes of application of at least the antifraud provisions of Blue Sky and federal securities laws. It is only when the corporate "stock" in a business relationship is insignificant in relation to the direct contributions to the success of the enterprise by the holder that securities laws may not apply. Case law and administrative enforcement actions illustrate that those instances will be few. Nevertheless, in particular states it may be meaningful in the capital formation process.

[2] Federal Securities Law Implications The dual system of federal and state securities regulation in the United States means that planning for small business capital formation must take into account regulation at both levels. The creation of a "security" and its offer and sale through the use of any means of interstate commerce or communication must either be registered under the Federal Securities Act of 1933 or have an available exemption. For the most part the exemptions available under the Federal Securities Act of 1933, in combination with SEC Regulations A and D, will easily encompass small business capital formation initiatives, and in most cases work in tandem with Blue Sky law exemptions or limited offering provisions. Nevertheless, in each instance of capital formation activity it must be clear that an available federal exemption applies in addition to any state exemption or mechanism that is relied upon.

[3] Intermediary Activities Small business capital formation initiatives and activities are most often undertaken directly by the person or business entity seeking financing. To the extent any security is created, that person or entity is the "issuer" of the security. An issuer may engage directly in the offer or sale of its securities or act through intermediaries, such as finders, brokers or other agents in those initiatives. However undertaken, an important threshold regulatory consideration is the extent to which Blue Sky licensing requirements apply to the activities of the issuer or any such intermediary.

Most states accommodate direct issuer capital formation activities by specifically excluding them from the definition of "broker" or "dealer" in their Blue Sky laws. The Revised Uniform Securities Act, for example, provides that the term "broker-dealer" means a person engaged in the business of effecting transactions in securities for the account of others or for its own account, but does not include: "[a]n issuer, except when effecting transactions other than with respect to its own securities."¹⁰ States without an express exclusion of issuers from the key definition incorporate one into an exemption or exclusion from the broker-dealer registration requirement itself. Some others, however, impose notice requirements on issuers who engage in the offer and sale of their own securities. The State Guides that are a part of this Treatise individually summarize all such exclusions or requirements. For planning in capital formation it is essential to be aware of any requirement relating to issuer activities in seeking out sources of capital as much as exemptions applicable to the transactions themselves.

The use of intermediaries in the process of capital formation is directly impacted by Blue Sky licensing requirements. "Issuer agents," for example, may be subject to special licensing or registration requirements.¹¹ Some "finders" may be covered by broker-dealer, agent or investment adviser licensing provisions,¹² and in any case planning in small business capital formation activities must include attention to the proper registration or licensing status of intermediaries engaged to assist in the process. The rescission remedies that are a part of nearly all Blue Sky laws are triggered in most instances by any violation associated with a transaction. Intermediary activities that produce a violation of registration or licensing requirements thus present a significant risk in capital formation initiatives that must be managed by thorough planning and careful attention to the involvement of unregistered intermediaries whose services may be essential, but for whom the potential for unlicensed broker-dealer, agent or investment adviser activity is an essential consideration.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 6. See Chapter 2 ("Definition of a Security"- 'Notes and Other Forms of Indebtedness')), supra.

(n2)Footnote 7. A "joint venture" is defined as a partnership for a single project. It is distinguished from a partnership only in scope and duration. The essential characteristics of a joint venture are: the community of interest among the participants; the agreement to share in gains and losses; and the mutual right of control, see Sparks v. Baxter, 854 F.2d 110 (5th Cir. 1988) .

(n3)Footnote 8. See Chapter 2, supra, and cases cited therein.

(n4)Footnote 9. Doherty v. Kahn, 289 Ill. App.3d 544, 224 Ill. Dec. 602, 682 N.E.2d 163 (Ill. App. 1997) .

(n5)Footnote 10. Rev. Unif. Sec. Act § 101(2).

(n6)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Massachusetts, Code Mass. Regs. §§ 12.203(6)-(9); Arizona, Ariz. Admin. Code Sec. R. 14-4-104.

(n7)Footnote 12. In Michigan, "finder" is specifically defined in the Blue Sky law as: "a person who, for consideration participates in the offer to sell, sale, or purchase of securities or commodities by locating, introducing, or referring potential purchasers or seller." Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.801(i). The definition of "investment adviser" in Michigan specifically includes a "finder," see Mich. Comp. Laws § 451.801(l).

The involvement of "finders" in small business capital formation has dramatically increased with the shrinkage in the number of broker-dealers and investment bankers serving the middle and small issuer market, and the increasing difficulty in finding alternatives. Although there are exceptions such as Michigan, "finder" activity takes place in a largely unregulated environment, in which there is generally little, if any information available regarding the finder.

88 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

1-10 Blue Sky Regulation § 10.03

§ 10.03 n13 Federal and State Exemptions

Exemptions from state Blue Sky laws are analyzed in depth in Chapters 7-9 of this Treatise. The array of securities and transactions that are exempt from registration requirements is considerable, and this Chapter will not repeat any of the prior analyses of exemptions. However, small business capital formation is typified by reliance on certain combinations of state and federal securities law exemptions, or limited offering provisions, for which a complete and practical understanding requires more focused attention on certain critical contextual points. The discussion below thus addresses three particular perspectives in which "exempt" or limited offerings are undertaken by small business issuers and entrepreneurs in a dual state and federal regulatory environment. Those perspectives involve: (1) Intrastate Offerings; (2) "Private" Offerings; and (3) Accredited Investor Offerings.

[1] Intrastate Offerings As a matter of federal securities regulation Congress recognized in the Federal Securities Act of 1933 that offerings that are entirely local in character should be left to regulation, if at all, only at the state level. Section 3(a)(11) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 thus provides an exemption from federal registration provisions for:

Any security which is part of an issue offered and sold only to persons resident within a single State or Territory, where the issuer of such security is a person resident and doing business within, or, if a corporation, incorporated by and doing business within, such State or Territory.ⁿ¹⁴

In many instances small business capital formation initiatives are undertaken in an entirely local setting, and the federal intrastate offering exemption is an important consideration because it is a complete exemption from federal registration requirements, subject only to the "part of an issue," "person resident," and "doing business within" qualifications. SEC Rule 147 under the 1933 Actⁿ¹⁵ establishes a safe harbor in regard to each of these qualifications, but it does not establish exclusive standards for complying with the section 3(a)(11) exemption.ⁿ¹⁶ The exemption is also self-executing; no notice or other filing is required.

As seen throughout the State Guides that are a part of this Treatise, several state Blue Sky laws contain exemptions for offers and sales of securities in transaction circumstances that might only be described as "small," or de minimis, that is to say, offerings to a few people who are not required to satisfy any particular criteria or qualifications. In Maine, for example, any offer or sale of securities by a corporation, limited partnership or limited liability company organized under Maine law, or any issuer determined by the administrator to have its principal place of business in the state is permitted without registration if the number of non-institutional holders of securities of the entity does not at the time of the sale (and will not as a consequence of the sale) exceed ten.ⁿ¹⁷ And in Missouri, which has adopted the 2002 Uniform Securities Act, a sale or offer to sell securities of an issuer is exempt from registration requirements if it is part of a single issue involving no more than 25 non-institutional purchasers in the state.ⁿ¹⁸

There is considerable flexibility in small business capital formation where such de minimis offering exemptions are available. This is so because there are no restrictions on offerees and purchasers other than the residential requirement. There is no federal de minimis exemption, as such, for an issuer.ⁿ¹⁹ It is only in reliance on the federal intrastate offering exemption that such an offering could be effected without meeting further federal requirements applicable to private offerings generally, or rules comprising Regulation D of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 specifically, if no other exemption is available. As noted above, there are key elements involved in the intrastate offering exemption, but in a great many small business and entrepreneurial financing situations, they will likely pose no challenge to accessing and obtaining needed capital from a close group of local investors or funding sources. The federal intrastate offering exemption may well be overlooked in planning for capital formation initiatives, as the more common focus is on "private" offering transactions that are discussed in section [2] below. Yet the efficient combination of federal and state exemptions in many cases of small business capital formation may well be the federal intrastate offering exemption and a de minimis exemption under state law.

Some states have also made provision for limited offerings of securities by an issuer incorporated or organized under the laws of the state and having its principal place of business and the majority of its employees there. Missouri, for example, exempts offers and sales of stock, limited partnership interests or debt securities of such an issuer in an aggregate amount up to $500,000 during a 12 month period, without significant restrictions, provided at least 80% of the net proceeds of the offering are used in connection with operations of the issuer in the state.ⁿ²⁰ Where available, such issuer exemptions interact directly with the federal section 3(a)(11) intrastate offering exemption and may present a superior opportunity in small business capital formation when a state de minimis exemption is too restrictive.

[2] "Private" Offerings Section 4(2) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933ⁿ²¹ provides that the registration provisions of the federal Act do not apply to "transactions by an issuer not involving any public offering." This is the federal "private offering" exemption that has evolved historically as the primary exemption from registration under the federal securities laws relied upon by issuers for the offer and sale of securities to persons and in circumstances that satisfy limitations and criteria in case law and rules. Offers and sales pursuant to SEC Rule 506 of Regulation D under the federal Act are deemed to be transactions within the ambit of section 4(2), but the availability of the exemption is conditioned on meeting the specific requirements of the Rule and Regulation D limitations generally. Securities offered and sold pursuant to Rule 506 are federal "covered securities" under NSMIA,ⁿ²² and thus are not subject to state registration requirements, without regard to the availability of any state exemption.

Although Rule 506 of Regulation D is available for small business capital formation initiatives, the manner of offering limitations, nature of purchaser limitations and particular information requirements may present either cost or practical barriers in some circumstances. Rule 506 is a non-exclusive "safe harbor" provision.ⁿ²³ Issuers may also claim the section 4(2) private offering exemption in reliance upon case law and other principles that have guided its historic application.ⁿ²⁴ However, securities offered and sold directly in reliance on section 4(2) rather than Rule 506 are not federal covered securities. A corresponding state exemption must, therefore, be available. Moreover, the principles that have guided application of section 4(2) generally are not unlike the specific conditions or criteria of Rule 506, in that issuers have always been required to address the number of offerees, their qualifications to fend for themselves, and the extent and manner of access to information concerning the issuer and the offering.

Unlike the federal Act, the Uniform Securities Act does not, in any of its versions, contain a "private offering" exemption, although some states do include a provision matching the federal exemption. In Idaho, for example, there is a broad limited offering exemption for sales "not involving a public offering."ⁿ²⁵ Offers and sales may be made under this exemption if they satisfy all criteria set forth in Idaho court decisions interpreting exemptions in effect at the time the exemption is claimed.ⁿ²⁶

The 2002 Uniform Act (as with the Revised Uniform Act) reflects the evolution of exemptions for private transactions at the state level through a form of de minimis exemption, which provides in section 202(14) for an exemption from registration requirements for a sale or offer to sell securities by an issuer, if part of a single issue in which:

- (A) not more than 25 non-institutional purchasers are present in the State during any 12 consecutive months;
- (B) no general solicitation or advertising is made in connection with the offer to sell or the sale of the securities;
- (C) no commission or other remuneration is paid or given, directly or indirectly, to any person other than a registered broker-dealer or agent for soliciting a prospective purchaser in the state; and
- (D) the issuer reasonably believes that all non-institutional purchasers in the state are purchasing for investment.ⁿ²⁷

The 2002 Uniform Act exemption is realistic for small business capital formation in allowing up to 25 non-institutional purchasers. On the other hand, the de minimis exemption available in some states may be unattractive simply in terms of the permitted number of purchasers. Several, for example are limited to no more than 10 non-institutional purchasers, and impose other issuer requirements.ⁿ²⁸

For "private" offerings in states without a useful de minimis exemption from registration provisions, and for which Rule 506 under federal Regulation D is not a realistic undertaking, the NASAA Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOE), or analog, as adopted in the state presents an alternative for offerings of securities in an amount up to $5 million through its interaction with SEC Rule 505 under Regulation D.

The ULOE was designed to work in conjunction with the federal exemptions available in Rules 505 and 506 of Regulation D under the federal Act, and remains applicable for Rule 505 offerings, which do not involve federal covered securities. The key practical consideration in small business capital formation is minimizing compliance costs associated with the process, and Rule 505, as implemented through ULOE or its analog at the state level may present a desirable "private" offering alternative when another combination of exemptions is not available. Under Rule 505, for example, qualifying conditions as to "non-accredited" purchasers are more easily addressed.ⁿ²⁹

However approached, any "private" offering is subject to state and federal registration requirements in the absence of an exemption. While small business typically involves "private" undertakings and transactions, the characterization does not excuse compliance with state and federal securities laws, and the absolute need for capital formation activity to take place in accord with coordinate exemptions if a security is being offered and sold.

[3] Accredited Investor Offerings The discussions above relating to intrastate and "private" offerings in support of small business capital formation is oriented to minimizing transaction costs using an assumption that easy access to a small number of "non-accredited" investors is the goal. In each of the "private" settings discussed, however, the notion of "accredited" investors is mentioned, if only in terms of establishing numerical limitations on non-accredited investors that may be involved. Small business capital formation can just as meaningfully be focused on accessing only accredited investors.

"Accredited" investors are most often thought of in terms of institutions and high net worth individuals. However, in small business capital formation settings they also comprise venture capitalists, Small Business Investment Companies (SBIC) and participants in "Angel" networks that present opportunities for accessing capital and financing. Federal and many state securities laws deal specifically with accredited investors as part of their exemption structures, and in the coordination of exemptions that is so important to small business capital formation initiatives the flexibility offered through attention to accredited investor provisions should not be overlooked.

Section 4(6) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933ⁿ³⁰ provides an exemption from federal registration requirements for:

[T]ransactions involving offers or sales by an issuer solely to one or more accredited investors, if the aggregate offering price of an issue of securities offered in reliance on this paragraph does not exceed the amount allowed under section 3(b) of this title, if there is no advertising or public solicitation in connection with the transaction by the issuer or anyone acting on the issuer's behalf, and if the issuer files such notice with the Commission as the Commission shall prescribe.

The federal exemption was adopted as part of the Small Business Incentive Act of 1980. For purposes of the section 4(6) exemption, accredited investor is defined in section 2(15) of the Federal Securities Act as:

(i) a bank, as defined in section 3(a)(2) whether acting in its individual or fiduciary capacity; an insurance company as defined in paragraph (13) of this subsection; an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 or a business development company as defined in section 2(a)(48) of that Act; a Small Business Investment Company licensed by the Small Business Administration; or an employee benefit plan, including an individual retirement account, which is subject to the provisions of [ERISA], if the investment decision is made by a plan fiduciary, as defined in section 3(21) of such Act, which is either a bank, insurance company or registered investment adviser; or

(ii) any person who, on the basis of such factors as financial sophistication, net worth, knowledge, and experience in financial matters, or amount of assets under management qualifies as an accredited investor under rules and regulations which the Commission shall prescribe.ⁿ³¹

Accredited investor status is today also defined by the Commission in Rule 501 under Regulation D to include:

(a) As to natural persons,

(1) A director, executive officer or general partner (or its director, executive officer or general partner) of the issuer of the securities; or

(2) A person whose net worth (together with spouse) is at least $1 million; or

(3) A person whose net income is greater than $200,000 ($300,000 with spouse) in each of the two most recent years, with a reasonable expectation of reaching the same income level in the current year.

(b) Certain financial institutions, institutional investors meeting prescribed asset requirements, or entities all of the owners of which are accredited investors.ⁿ³²

The amount limitation for the federal exemption under section 4(6) references section 3(b) of the Act,ⁿ³³ which empowers the SEC to act by rule to exempt securities from the federal registration requirements by reason of the small amount involved or the limited character of the offering. The maximum offering eligible for exemption under section 3(b), however, is $5 million, which thus sets the maximum limit on offerings to accredited investors under section 4(6). There is no requirement that information be furnished by the issuer to accredited investors. However, section 4(6) itself prescribes, no advertising or "public solicitation" is permitted. Although this restriction might in some cases operate to impede access to potential accredited investors through the use of means such as the Internet, it is more likely that with care attention communications can be appropriately restricted through pre-qualification measures or by utilizing networks established for that purpose. A notice filing with the SEC utilizing Form D is also required.

At the state level, the NASAA Model Accredited Investor Exemption,ⁿ³⁴ has been adopted in several states,ⁿ³⁵ and incorporates by reference the Regulation D Rule 501 federal definition of accredited investor. In numerous other states there is a functional equivalent of the Model exemption.ⁿ³⁶ State accredited investor exemptions, in most cases, do not place limitations on the manner or means of making a general announcement of the offering, although with the Model exemption there are limitations on the content of those announcements. Beyond the general announcement restrictions, there are no restrictions on dissemination of additional information provided it is delivered only to persons the issuer reasonably believes to be accredited investors. There is no maximum dollar limitation on an offering made to accredited investors, although there are procedural requirements and certain disqualifying criteria. States adopting the Model exemption also impose a notice filing and fee requirement.

In transactions carried out in reliance upon state accredited investor exemptions, resales of securities are typically limited to other accredited investors, or the securities must be registered. Sales of the securities may be made directly by the issuer, provided no commissions or other compensation is paid. When compensated intermediaries are involved, there is no limit on the amount of commissions that may be paid. However, commissions or other transaction-based remuneration may be paid only to licensed broker-dealers and agents.

Federal and state accredited investor exemptions can thus provide essential coordinate exemptions in small business capital formation, subject only to somewhat stricter limits in application of the federal exemption regarding the scope of permitted communications and the amount limitation. The objective of both Securities Act section 4(6) and the NASAA Model Accredited Investor Exemption is to enhance capital formation by small business and to ensure that qualified investors are not impeded from purchasing the securities of small businesses. The two exemptions work together well in providing the opportunity for issuers to seek out and directly access a broad spectrum of investors. As a caveat, however, these federal and state exemptions do not work in combination with other exemptions as part of a single plan of financing. Their application may be precluded by other activity carried out in intended reliance on another exemption. The concept of integration of offerings would, for example, prevent a small business issuer from attempting to undertake sales to non-accredited investors at the state level under a de minimis or other exemption when those transactions are deemed to be part of the same financing activity as sales of securities to accredited investors in reliance on the section 4(6) exemption under federal law and its state law analog. On the other hand, even in a state with no accredited investor exemption, an offer and sale of securities solely to accredited investors in conformity with the federal exemption would not preclude reliance on another available state exemption when there are no non-accredited investors involved and the maximum offering limitation is not exceeded. Integration is an extremely important consideration for small business capital formation activities, and is considered in more detail later in this Chapter.ⁿ³⁷ These kinds of circumstances also suggest advantages for small business issuer utilization of Rules 505 or 506 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933, and other limited offering mechanisms, where both accredited and non-accredited investors are contemplated. That discussion follows below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 13. The complete range of exempt transactions is presented in detail in Chapter 8 ("Exempt Issuer Transactions"), infra. Here, however, the focus is solely upon those exemptions that bear directly upon small business capital formation, and how they operate in that context.

(n2)Footnote 14. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(a)(11).

(n3)Footnote 15. 17 C.F.R. § 230.147.

(n4)Footnote 16. A Preliminary Note (3) to Rule 147 states in part:

Persons claiming the availability of the rule have the burden of proving that they have satisfied all of its provisions. However, the rule does not establish exclusive standards for complying with the Section 3(a)(11) exemption. The exemption would also be available if the issuer satisfied the standards set forth in relevant administrative and judicial interpretations at the time of the offering but the issuer would have the burden of proving the availability of the exemption.

(n5)Footnote 17. 32 Me. Rev. Stat. § 10502(P)

(n6)Footnote 18. Rev. Stat. Mo. § 2-202(14).

(n7)Footnote 19. SEC Rule 504 of Regulation D under the Securities Act of 1933 offers an exemption from federal registration requirements for offerings under $1 million, but imposes certain conditions and restrictions, including information requirements and a notice filing requirement. Rule 504 offerings in the small business capital formation setting are discussed further in § 10.05, infra .

(n8)Footnote 20. Mo. Code. State Regs. § 30-54.240.

(n9)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 77(d)(2).

(n10)Footnote 22. See 15 U.S.C. § 77r(b)(4)(D).

(n11)Footnote 23. Rule 506 in the context of small business capital formation is discussed further in section 10.4[1], infra.

(n12)Footnote 24. In the seminal case addressing the application of section 4(2) of the federal Act the U.S. Supreme Court observed:

The natural way to interpret the private offering exemption is in light of the statutory purpose... .
[T]he applicability of the exemption turns on whether the particular class of persons affected needs the protection of the Act. An offering to those persons who are shown to be able to fend for themselves is a transaction not involving any public offering. SEC v. Ralston Purina Co., 346 U.S. 119, 125, 73 S. Ct. 981, 97 L. Ed. 1494 (1953) .

(n13)Footnote 25. Dept. Fin. Rule 270.01.

(n14)Footnote 26. See also, Ohio Rev. Code § 1707.03(Q), which creates an exemption from registration requirements when "[t]he provisions of section 5 of the Federal Securities Act of 1933 do not apply to the sale by reason of an exemption under section 4(2) of that act." There are, however, certain other conditions, including a notice filing requirement.

(n15)Footnote 27. 2002 Unif. Sec. Act § 202(14); see also 71 Okla. Stat. § 401(b)(10).

(n16)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Alabama: Code. Ala. § 8-6-11(9).

(n17)Footnote 29. Rule 505 and its interface with the ULOE and ULOE variations at the state level in small business capital formation are considered further in § 10.04[1], infra .

(n18)Footnote 30. 15 U.S.C. § 77d(6).

(n19)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 77b (a)(15).

By Rule 215 under the Act, 17 C.F.R. § 230.215, the SEC defined accredited investors to include certain financial institutions, trusts meeting asset criteria, officers and directors of the issuer, and other persons who meet stated net worth and income criteria. The Rule 215 definition is now largely incorporated into Rule 501 of Regulation D.

(n20)Footnote 32. 17 C.F.R. § 240.501(a).

(n21)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 77c(b).

(n22)Footnote 34. NASAA Reports (CCH) P 361 (Adopted Apr. 27, 1997)

(n23)Footnote 35. See, e.g., Alaska: A.S. § 45.55.900(b)(18); Delaware, Del. Sec. Act Regs. § 503; Kansas: Kan. Admin. Regs. § 81-5-13.

The Model Accredited Investor Offering Exemption is not available to an issuer that is in the development stage that either has no specific business plan or purposes, or has indicated that its business plan is to engage in a merger or acquisition with an unidentified company or companies, or other entity or person.

(n24)Footnote 36. See, e.g., California: Cal. Corp. Code § 25102(N).

(n25)Footnote 37. Integration, or the "single issue" concept as particularly applied in the small business capital formation setting, is discussed in § 10.06, infra.

89 of 172 DOCUMENTS

Blue Sky Regulation

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

CHAPTER 10 Regulation of Small Business Capital Formation

1-10 Blue Sky Regulation § 10.04

§ 10.04 Limited Offering Alternatives

Among the states there is a wide spectrum of offering alternatives that are aptly characterized as "limited" offerings. Some states provides several alternatives, while others focus only on implementation of federal Regulation D through the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption or its functional equivalent. Some make specific provision for small corporate offerings through adoption of SCOR and Form U-7 procedures, either as a limited offering exemption, a special form of registration,ⁿ³⁸ or simply as an accommodation for registrations by qualification.ⁿ³⁹ Various of these limited offering alternatives in the regulation of small business capital formation are considered further below.

[1] Federal Regulation D and the ULOE The distinction between "limited" and exempt offerings is generally though of in terms of whether the filing of some form of registration requirement either at the federal or state level is required. Thus, the available offerings under Regulation D of the federal Securities Act of 1933 are in practical terms exempt offerings because qualification results in an exemption from federal registration provisions, and at most a notice filing with the SEC on Form D is required. Nevertheless, for small business capital formation, utilization of federal Regulation D is most often undertaken in conjunction with the Uniform Limited Offering Exemption (ULOE), or its equivalent, in place at the state level. Thus, it is easiest to consider that combined, coordinate process in terms of a "limited" offering, particularly since one of the available "exempt" offerings under Regulation D is in fact generally subject to full registration procedures in the states.ⁿ⁴⁰

For small business capital formation, compliance with Regulation D under the Federal Securities Act of 1933, and thus the availability of an exemption from federal registration requirements, presents three alternatives:

(1) Rule 504, which provides an exemption for offerings not exceeding $1 million, and which meet certain conditions.ⁿ⁴¹ There are, however, no purchaser limitations. As noted above, although Rule 504 offerings are exempt from federal registration requirements, they are not exempt under state Blue Sky laws, and there is no interface with the ULOE or its analog at the state level. Because utilization of SEC Rule 504 of Regulation D at the federal level generally requires compliance with registration procedures at the state level, its impact on small business capital formation is separately considered in § 10.05.

(2) Rule 505, which provides an exemption for limited offers and sales of securities not exceeding $5 million, and which meet certain conditions, including information requirements.ⁿ⁴² Only 35 or fewer non-accredited investors are permitted; there is no limit on the number of accredited investors. Other than the numerical limit, there are no limitations or qualifications for non-accredited investors. There is interface with ULOE at the state level.

(3) Rule 506, which provides an exemption for offers and sales, without any amount limitation, but which meet certain conditions, including "sophistication" qualifications placed on non-accredited investors, the permitted number of which is 35.ⁿ⁴³ After NSMIA, securities offered and sold pursuant to Rule 506 are federal "covered securities," and thus are not subject to state registration requirements, although antifraud provisions and notice filing requirements apply.

A fourth Regulation D alternative, Rule 508,ⁿ⁴⁴ derives entirely from Rule 504, 505 and 506, and provides that any one of those federal exemptions will not be lost if there is a good faith insignificant deviation or failure to comply with a particular requirement. Under Rule 508 the burden is on the issuer to show that the failure to comply did not pertain to a term, condition or requirement intended to protect a particular individual or entity, and that the failure to comply was insignificant in relation to the offering taken as a whole.

For small business capital formation in the context of Regulation D, only Rule 505 assures the availability of a state exemption through the ULOE or its equivalent and presents a practical alternative. Rule 504 offerings are subject to registration by qualification under state Blue Sky laws. Rule 506 offerings, although not subject to state registration requirements, present a meaningful challenge, and cost, associated with qualification of non-accredited investors who may purchase the securities. Indeed, Rule 506 includes this specific condition as to the nature of purchasers:

Each purchaser who is not an accredited investor either alone or with his purchaser representative(s) has such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters that he is capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment, or the issuer reasonably believe immediately prior to making any sale that such purchaser comes within this description.ⁿ⁴⁵

In contrast, Rule 505 of Regulation D, while also limiting the number of non-accredited purchasers to no more than 35, does not impose any sophistication requirements on those non-accredited purchasers.ⁿ⁴⁶ And although the securities offered and sold under the rule are not federal covered securities, the ULOE and its individual state analogs are available to interface and provide the needed state exemption.

The ULOE, however, has its own set of conditions. For example, while non-accredited investors are not required to meet a sophistication standard, there is a suitability requirement on the part of the issuer if the non-accredited investor lacks sufficient knowledge and experience. Thus in Massachusetts, for example, in all sales to non-accredited investors made in reliance upon the Massachusetts Uniform Limited Offering Exemption,ⁿ⁴⁷ one of the following conditions must be satisfied, or the issuer and any person acting on behalf of the issuer shall have grounds to believe and after making reasonable inquiry shall believe that one of the conditions is satisfied:

a. The investment is suitable for the purchaser based on the other security holdings, financial situation and needs of the purchaser. It may be presumed that if the investment does not exceed 10% of the sum of the purchaser's net worth (excluding principal residence and its furnishings) and the net worth of the purchaser's spouse, if any, the investment is suitable; or

b. The purchaser either alone or with a purchaser representative as defined in § 501(h) of SEC Regulation D... has such knowledge and experience in financial and business matters as to be capable of evaluating the merits and risks of the prospective investment.ⁿ⁴⁸

The Massachusetts ULOE has the further provision:

5. In all sales made in the Commonwealth to investors who are not accredited investors, or accredited investors who are natural persons, the issuer and any person acting on its behalf shall have reasonable grounds to believe that the investment does not exceed 24% of the purchaser's net worth

(excluding principal residence and its furnishings. For purposes of this condition the purchaser's net worth shall include the net worth of his or her spouse.n49

The interface with Rule 505 of Regulation D also means that ULOE qualified offerings must meet the information requirements of SEC Rule 502(b) for sales to non-accredited investors. For small business issuers who are not subject to the reporting requirements of sections 13 or 15(d) of the Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934, this means supplying to non-accredited investors the non-financial information equivalent to that which would be contained in Part II of Form 1-A under the Federal Securities Act of 1933 for those issuers that would qualify for use of Regulation A under the Act.n50 For issuers that would not qualify under Regulation A, the same kind of non-financial information that would be required in Part I of any other form of federal registration statement for which the issuer would be qualified is required.n51 Financial statement information is required as well. For offerings up to $2 million, the information required by Item 310 of SEC Regulation S-B is required, except that only the issuer's balance sheet must be audited. For offerings in excess of $2 million up to the $5 million limit, the financial information contained in SEC Form SB-2 is required,n52 although the requirement is relaxed for issuers, other than limited partnerships, that cannot obtain audited financial statements without unreasonable effort or expense. In those situations only a balance sheet must be audited.

Compliance with the information requirements of Regulation D means that invariably, small business issuers will generate and utilize an offering memorandum or form of structured disclosure document. The Regulation D prohibition against general solicitation and advertising also applies.n53 The Regulation D prohibition extends to any seminar or meeting whose attendees have been invited by any general solicitation or general advertising.n54

Under the ULOE, as with many variations of state limited offering provisions, there are "bad boy" disqualifications from eligibility to use the procedure. These procedures are not available for offerings in which issuers or key intermediaries have certain disciplinary or criminal histories, or are subject to other enforcement or administrative orders or judgments. The disqualifications may, however, be waived if the state administrator or agency of the state which created the basis for the disqualification determines that it is not necessary under the circumstances that the exemption be denied.

Finally, as with SEC Regulation D, ULOE procedures at the state level generally require a notice filing with the administrator on Form D or an equivalent form as may be designated. That is also the case for Rule 506 offerings.

As noted earlier, securities offered and sold in compliance with SEC Rule 506 of Regulation D are federal "covered securities," and thus are not subject to state registration requirements regardless of the availability of any exemption. For small business capital formation the barrier to effective use of Rule 506 is the qualification requirements applicable to non-accredited investors. Internet solicitations by issuers are also generally prohibited under Rule 506,n55 although password protected pages operated by intermediary networks that are accessible only to accredited or pre-qualified sophisticated investors may be permitted.n56 In small business capital formation the costs of seeking out and accessing sources of capital is lessened by the emergence of such networks, and the absence of any limitation on the amount of capital that may be raised. As a practical matter, however, these opportunities may not be available to smaller issuers in start-up and other early capital formation in local or regional settings. The fact that Rule 506 offerings involve NSMIA federal covered securities indicates the extent to which utilization has evolved on a substantial, national scale, and with the participation of large financial institutions. Rule 506 simply may not be a realistic undertaking in early stage small business capital formation. Indeed, even Rule 505, with its greater flexibility in regard to involvement of non-accredited investors may present no advantage in small business capital formation when compared to a coordinated undertaking utilizing an available state de minimis exemption in conjunction with the federal intrastate offering exemption discussed earlier in § 10.03[1].

[2] Small Corporate Offering Registration (SCOR) Each of the State Guides made a part of this Treatise includes a reference to how, if at all, the state incorporates or accommodates SCORn57 into its regulatory structure for capital formation. The great majority of states do make provision for SCOR procedures, which are based on the

NASAA Statement of Policy Regarding Small Company Offering Registrations adopted in April, 1996. In a preamble to the State of Washington SCOR registration proceduresⁿ⁵⁸ the objective is made clear:

[T]he administrator recognizes that small issuers raising small amounts of money face special problems not faced by issuers raising larger amounts, and that standards appropriate to registrations of larger offerings may become unduly burdensome when applied to registrations of small offerings. The optional [SCOR] registration method offered by these rules is intended to reduce the costs and burdens of raising capital for small business without sacrificing investor protection, and to maximize the amount of offering proceeds available to the issuer for investment in the business.ⁿ⁵⁹

The NASAA Policy, and SCOR, address offerings by qualifying small business issuers that are exempt from federal registration requirements under Rule 504 of Regulation D, or section 3(a)(11) of the Federal Securities Act of 1933-the intrastate offering exemption. Although there is no maximum limit on the amount of securities that may be sold pursuant to the federal intrastate offering exemption, the amount under Rule 504 of Regulation D is limited to $1 million. That is also the maximum limit for SCOR, whether the federal exemption is Rule 504 or the intrastate offering exemption. In either case the assumption is that the offering would be subject to state registration in spite of the federal exemption. SCOR is meant to ease that burden.

SCOR is a form of limited registration based upon Form U-7, a uniform form of registration statement that also serves as the main disclosure document for use in the offering. However, the procedure is not available for use in connection with every type of securities offering, and is limited to companies that satisfy certain criteria. The issuer must:

1. Be a corporation or centrally managed limited liability company organized under U.S. or Canadian law, or any state, province or territory thereof, or the District of Columbia, and have its principal place of business in one of those jurisdictions;
2. Not be subject to the reporting requirements of Section 13 or 15(d) of the Federal Securities Exchange Act of 1934;
3. Not be an investment company registered or required to be registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;
